John withdrew at the end of nine months, and after the paper had lived two years, Julius sold to Robert B. Wentworth. He continued a year longer in Portage, out of business and then went to Friendship and started the Adams County Independent, which he published till the war broke out, when enlisted in the Second Regiment. In the first battle of Bull Run, he was disabled so that he was discharged from the service. He then returned to Friendship, and continued the Independent irregularly till May, 1864, when he again enlisted, this time in the Fortieth, a 100-day regiment, serving till October. In December of the same year, he entered the service of his brother, William W., as traveling agent of the Star Freight Line, and so continued for about two years and a half, in the mean time selling his office at Friendship. In 1867, he removed to Baraboo, after which his career was still more erratic and unsteady than before. There he published for awhile the Baraboo Independent, and again the Sauk County Herald. Still later, he made newspaper ventures at Augusta, Eau Claire and Elroy, and, in 1877, he edited a paper called Frontier Business, at Morris, Minn. In the intervals between these many ventures were times when he was wholly out of business or employment.

The sobriquet, "Shanghai," was given to him by the local Democratic politicians, as the representative of the Republican or "Shanghai" party, as it was called by the Democracy in 1854-55. The new species of Shanghai poultry was introduced into the State about the time the Republican party was in the period of incubation. When it finally made its appearance, it was dubbed the "Shanghai party," because it was a new species of fowl in the political barn-yard. Mr. Chandler's ardent advocacy of the principles of the new party, as well as his personal appearance, obtained for him the cognomen of "the Shanghai;" he accepted it and used it as his nom de plume in some of his correspondence, and by it he ever after was generally known. He died at Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis., August 28, 1878, aged forty-five years and five days.

SAMUEL K. VAUGHAN

was born in South Adams, Mass., April 20, 1824. In 1841 the family moved to West Troy, N. Y., where his father and he engaged in the boot and shoe business. He was married on the 10th of June, 1844, to Miss Lavinna W. Wandell, of West Troy. He came West in 1848, and opened a boot and shoe establishment at Waupun, where he remained nearly four years. Meanwhile he studied law, and was admitted to the bar in Fond du Lac in 1852, and the same year he moved to Wyocena, which was then the county seat of Columbia County. He was elected Clerk of the Court, in 1852, and when the county seat was changed he removed to Portage; he was re-elected and served acceptably. He then re-established himself in the boot and shoe business in Portage. When Fort Sumter was fired on, he promptly organized a company in Portage, of which he was commissioned Second Lieutenant, to rank from April 25, 1861. His company was mustered in as "three months' men," in the Second Regiment of Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry. He was in the first battle of Bull Run, soon after which he was taken sick and was discharged. He came home, recovered, raised a company and was commissioned a Captain in the Nineteenth Regiment, to rank from December 19, 1861. On the 3d of December, 1863, he was promoted to the rank of Major. His commission as Lieutenant Colonel ranks from April 28, 1865. His commission as Colonel, by brevet, dates August 9, 1865, and his colonelcy ranks from August 31, 1865. On the 22d of May, 1866, he was honored with the commission of Brigadier General, by brevet, in recognition of his "efficient and zealous services," and he was to rank as such from August 9, 1865, which was the date of his discharge at Richmond, Va. He was elected Sheriff of Columbia County, in the fall of 1866, and served during the years 1867 and 1868. At the expiration of his office, he engaged in the manufacture of fanning-mills. The Colonel's health was never good after the war; his final illness was brief but severe; the leading cause of his death was rheumatism of the heart. He died on the 27th of September, 1872. Few men excelled him in attractive social qualities; he was public-spirited and deservedly popular. While a resident of Fond du Lac County, he served several terms on the Board of Supervisors. His home was the abode of generous hospitality.

He was domestic in his tastes and devotedly attached to his family. While in the service, he was a faithful home correspondent. In his early life he was an active Good Templar, and was always a consistent temperance man. He was a prominent member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows; a man of strong convictions, a positive character, but his sound sense and good nature prevented his making enemies. He was a kind friend and a valued citizen. His widow still lives in Portage, on the homestead. He was the father of four children.

JOSEPH KERR.

Mr. Kerr was one of the first settlers of Columbia County. Scarcely any man in it had been more intimately connected with its history, or had taken a livelier interest in its growth and prosperity, for the ten years preceding his death, than Mr. Kerr. In his own town, Randolph, he was rapidly called by the suffrages of his townsmen to fill offices of trust and importance. He was for years Chairman of its Board of Supervisors, and three times elected Chairman of the County Board. He represented Columbia County in the Legislature for two terms—1848 and 1849—with honor and ability; and, at the time of his death, he was a Director in the La Crosse & Milwaukee Railroad Company.

Possessing fair ability, with good business talents, in whatever station he was placed, he acquitted himself honorably and to the satisfaction of all. A devoted and affectionate husband, a kind and indulgent parent, a good neighbor and obliging friend, and honest man and a sincere Christian, Mr. Kerr lived beloved and respected, and died January 22, 1855, in Randolph, mourned by all who knew him.

JOHN PARDEE.

Mr. Pardee was born in Norfolk, Litchfield Co., Conn., February 15, 1796. He removed with his parents, when quite young, to Marcellus (now Skaneateles), Onondaga Co., N. Y. At the age of sixteen, he was left, by the death of his father, in charge of a family of six younger brothers and sisters, of whom he had charge until they were grown. He served in the war of 1812. In 1824, he removed with his mother to Wadsworth, Medina Co., Ohio, where he engaged in merchandising for thirty years. He removed to Wisconsin in 1859, settling at Pardeeville, remaining there until his death, which occurred on the 26th of June, 1873, after a lingering illness of more than three years' duration. Mr. Pardee was always affable and courteous in his manner, and impressed all with whom he came in contact as being a gentleman at all times and under all circumstances.

ANDREW SWEANY

was born in the town of Luny, county of Derry, Ireland, October 29, 1829. He came to Quebec, Canada, in July, 1842; thence he removed directly to the State of Vermont. After a few weeks he went to Schuyler Falls, N. Y., and attended a high school at that place, taking a very high rank as a scholar, in the class of which he was a member. After remaining there a few years, he went to St. John's, Canada. From this place he moved to New Hampshire. On the 4th of October, 1849, he, with the rest of the family, came to the town of Fort Winnebago. He was elected Superintendent of Schools for the town, in 1852; in 1855 was chosen Town Clerk; he was elected Chairman of the town for the years 1857 and 1858. During the sessions of the County Board in these years, he was an active and prominent member. As Chairman of the Committee on the Poor, he recommended and strenuously advocated the "County System" for their maintenance. Through his efforts, with those of some other members, he had the satisfaction of seeing the present Poor system for the county adopted, at the session in 1858. He remained in the vicinity until he entered a seminary some years previous to his death. He considered he had a call for the ministry of the Catholic Church. Had he commenced his studies sooner, he would undoubtedly have become an able, learned and zealous clergyman. It should, however, be remarked that he had commenced to study for the same end, when sixteen years of age; but his parents, fearing for his health, advised him to discontinue, which, in obedience to their wishes, he did; but the desire still remained.

He was of remarkable depth of mind, gifted with a clear, well-poised intellect and good natural endowments. His apprehension was quick and judgment accurate. No one could more nicely or justly discriminate the defects or excellencies of a performance, or the exhibition of talent or genius, but his good sense and self-diffidence generally suppressed the declaration of his sentiments. He valued and appreciated erudition in all its branches and for all its legitimate purposes, and strove patiently and laboriously to acquire an extensive knowledge of sound literature. He was a rapid, correct and instructive writer; he could speak, too, and when he did so, it told with effect—it was always to the point. He was a firm, consistent and conscientious Catholic, but his homage was a reasonable one. He was not fanatic or visionary. His veneration for religion and its ministers was not servile or forced; not springing from ignorance or superstition, but voluntary and enlightened. For those who differed with him in his religious convictions, he retained neither hatred nor prejudice. His nature was to show respect and proper appreciation for the honest opinions and convictions of his fellow-creatures; he did not display aggressiveness, even when convinced of the justness of his cause; hence the respect in which his opinions were held, even by those who did not agree or coincide with them. He died in the town of Fort Winnebago March 20, 1873.

CHAPTER IX.

THE COLUMBIA COUNTY PRESS—COMMON SCHOOLS—COUNTY BOARD OF SUPERVISORS—AUTHORS AND ARTISTS—PRESIDENT HAYES AND PARTY—COLUMBIA COUNTY'S WAR RECORD—COLUMBIA COUNTY OF TO-DAY.

THE COLUMBIA COUNTY PRESS.

Thirty years ago, John Delaney settled in Portage, and commenced practicing law. He had pursued the duties of his profession but a short time when he was induced to take advantage of an opportunity then offering to establish a newspaper in what, even at that early date, promised to be a leading city of the Badger State. Procuring a few cases of type and an ancient printing-press, he commenced business, having his brother James for a partner. "Delaney Brothers" was the style and title of the firm, and the first number of their paper bore date of July 4, 1850, being issued from a small wooden building which stood on the northwest side of the canal, in the vicinity of Lewis' lumber-yard. It was called the River Times, was a six-column folio, Democratic in politics, and thoroughly en rapport with the spirit of improvement then existing.

The editor, in his salutatory, said: "We this day publish the first number of the Fox and Wisconsin River Times. If it is not a curiosity now, it will be hereafter, as the first paper published in the city of Fort Winnebago." Truly, the transfer of a printing-office to Fort Winnebago (as Portage was then called) and the setting it in motion must have been no light task, and the first issue implies the exercise of much energy and enterprise. Evidently, the men who accomplished the work were not then deterred by trifles. "That government is best which governs least" was the motto of the River Times, and above the editorial columns appeared the unqualified assertion, "The world is governed too much."

The initial number was a well-printed, creditable sheet, full of vigor and vigilance for those days. Its contents were: A beautiful poetic selection from the Louisville Journal; "London at Night;" "England and the United States;" "The Lady;" "A New Orleans Mazzaroni"—a story wherein was told how a New Orleans burglar had stolen the jewelry of a young husband and wife, from beneath their pillow while they were asleep, and, with cool impudence, had kissed the bride on departing; "Advice to Unmarried Ladies" is followed by a spirited and hopeful editorial on Northern Wisconsin, in which the writer cites the causes of immigration, and tells why it has hitherto settled chiefly in the eastern portion of the State. But he declares that the era for the opening-up of the prairies, the forests, the streams and the lakes of Northern and Western Wisconsin, is at hand. And succeeding years have told how truly he prophesied. Even then, he speaks of the feasibility of the Fox and Wisconsin Improvement—a direct inland water communication between New York and New Orleans, via Portage—as placed beyond question, with the means at hand for its completion. He declares that the short canal to connect the streams will be finished that summer, and states that the Wisconsin is traversed regularly by steamers throughout the whole route, and that the navigable portions of the Fox have each its steamboat, plying between towns and cities. He has much else to say in support of this scheme, and reprints, in its favor, large extracts from the Green Bay Advocate and Oshkosh Democrat.

But the advertisements of that number will give something of an idea of who were doing business in Portage that summer, thirty years ago. T. Dean & Co. continued to hold out inducements to the trading public, in dry goods, groceries, boots and shoes, ready-made clothing, stoves and tin and hardware; John Strong, of the Banner Store, was a wholesale and retail dealer much in the same line of goods. Keegan & Moore had the prices of these commodities at an enticingly low ebb, at Fort Winnebago, and handled also lumber, square timber and shingles, in Wauona, which was Gov. Doty's Indian for the Portage. Walter W. Kellogg was an attorney and counselor at law and Justice of the Peace. M. D. Ingraham did business also as an attorney, counselor and land and collecting agent, and was a Notary. William R. De Witt and J. A. Johnson, too, were attorneys and counselors and solicitors in chancery. L. Van Slyck was a Justice; and G. T. Getty, as Postmaster, advertised an extensive list of unclaimed letters remaining in the post office at Fort Winnebago.

Editor Delaney, in a supplemental greeting to the public, apologizes for not describing the town and adjacent localities. He is willing, moreover, to receive advertising patronage. His establishment cost him $1,000, and current expenses were heavy; but he hopes that he has not commenced prematurely, and that he will be reimbursed and do a good business, the newspaper having become necessary to civilization. He is not quite sure of his subscription list, however, and for the purpose of ascertaining who his patrons are, will postpone the next issue for three or four weeks. The next paper, in fact, was not published until August 5.

This initial number contains also some sharp comments on the action of the Legislature, the conduct of which is pronounced disgraceful to the State; in this connection appears a long communication from Abram Vanderpool in regard to a law on taxation, of which he is the reputed father. There is also a two-column editorial on general politics, and another long article on the balance of trade. Resolutions of the Legislature are printed, instructing the Senators and Representatives of Wisconsin to oppose the admission of any more Slave States, and to exert their influence against slavery and the slave trade in the District of Columbia. The editor says that the resolution against the admission of new Slave States would be an infamous violation of national faith, pledged to Texas on her annexation. He admires the truly national spirit of Webster, Clay, Cass and Dickenson, and prints a summary of the remarks of the former on the bill to admit California.

There was bad blood in these borders then concerning the action of the "Potters' Emigration Society," in England, of which various residents of this locality were members. A meeting was held here, June 3, 1850, to consider misrepresentations against certain individuals of the society. Walter Kellogg was Chairman, and L. A. Bliss, Secretary. Thomas Bliss, agent of the society, invited to attend and answer, did not appear. It was the sense of the meeting that the "Potters' Emigration Society" was a direct deception on the working classes of the British empire; and L. A. Bliss, John S. Campbell, James Henman and William Ward, were appointed to draft a memorial to Thomas Duncombe, Esq., member of Parliament for Marylebone, to obtain his influence to prevent the people of Great Britain from emigrating under the auspices of such society.

A communication from a spectator tells how a two-year old daughter of one Marion, an Irish laborer on the canal, fell into the Fox River near the bathing-house: how Catherine Rolland leaped after the child into the water fourteen feet deep; how the two were finally rescued by John Kennedy, and how Dr. Prentice restored the child in about twenty minutes. The editor that week received the Sauk County Standard, printed at Baraboo, by McFaden & McLaughlin; a sheet firmly Whig, and full of epithet against Democracy.

There is other reading in this first issue of the River Times, among which is the full text of a treaty between the United States, by Commissioner William Medill, and the chiefs of the Menomonee Indians, made at Lake Powaw-hay-kon-nay, October 18, 1848, James K. Polk being President, and James Buchanan, Secretary of State.

Volume III, No. 21 (June 6, 1853), mourns with turned column rules the death of James Delaney, Jr., one of the proprietors of the River Times. The unfortunate journalist was drowned in the Wisconsin River May 31. At the time of his death, he was City Clerk of Portage, and but twenty-seven years of age. The August following, John A. Brown became associated with Joseph Delaney, brother of John and James, in the publication of the paper. About the same time John Delaney's name appears as associate editor. The office was removed to the second story of Moore & Gorman's Building, opposite the Pettibone Block, where the paper continued to be published under the new management until its suspension, as the River Times, September 17, 1853. This event was announced in an able editorial signed by John, Joseph and Arthur W. Delaney, closing as follows: "We have labored to maintain the Democratic party in its integrity, and to employ the best intellect of that party in the offices of the State and nation. In the result, so far, our highest hopes are realized, and we feel that we can with propriety leave the editorial field with others, having done our part in days of trial and depression. Gen. John A. Brown is now sole proprietor and editor of the River Times. In his capacity and integrity we have the fullest confidence. We ask the Democracy to sustain him as a man every way worthy." An idea of the growth of Portage and the prosperity of the Times is had in a comparison of the first number of the paper with the last. During its three years' existence the advertising patronage grew from half a column to ten columns, while the circulation was all that could be asked, and augured well for the intelligence of the people.

John Delaney, while living in Portage, was regarded as a man of unusual brilliancy. He served his apprenticeship in the office of the Green Bay Intelligencer, the first newspaper published in Wisconsin, setting his first type in 1834. He was the Nestor of the press in Columbia County.

The Badger State.—The termination of the existence of the River Times was not all that is implied by the use of the word suspension; it was simply a change of name and owners. On the 1st of October, 1853, Mr. Brown commenced the publication of the Badger State, with the following modest announcement: "Under the new arrangement, we have taken a new name for the paper; not because we had any objection to that of the River Times, but we have a decided partiality for our old name of Badger State.* It was endeared to us in earlier times—during the old constitution fight, when we joined to raise the chorus,

"We are a band of brothers
In the new Badger State."

"The name is distinctive and appropriate for a newspaper published at the geographical center, a point by natural laws destined to be the business center of the State, at no remote period. As the Badger State now shines as a bright particular star in the galaxy of the Union, it shall be our pride and ambition to make our paper worthy of that name in the journalistic firmament, associated as it is with liberality, intelligence, enterprise and the progressive spirit of the age."

There was no change in political principles or public patronage; the Badger State opposed Whigs and Whiggery with the same earnestness and ability that had characterized the course of its predecessor, while its patronage showed no lack of confidence on the part of the citizens, as to the ability of the new management. Mr. Brown seemed to be not of the opinion that "the world is governed too much," but he had lived long enough to discover that "power is always stealing from the many to the few;" at least such was the motto chosen for the Badger State, and, with the somewhat democratic idea that such a condition of things was diametrically opposed to the principles of the old Democratic party, the editor, with a trenchant pen, strove to prevent the concentration of political power—outside the Democratic party. Fortune seems to have smiled upon his efforts to make a good local paper, however, and at the close of the first volume the Badger State was enlarged to twenty-eight columns, though the circulation, it appears, was not all Mr. Brown had reason to expect, as will be inferred from the following characteristically modest item: "Those who from personal friendship, for love of the principles we advocate, or for their own general interest, may use their exertions to extend our circulation, will confer upon us a favor."

On the 14th of April, 1855, Chauncey C. Britt took an equal partnership with Mr. Brown in the Badger State, the event being announced in an article reiterating the political convictions of the senior proprietor, which, of course, were in accord with the ideas of the new proprietary acquisition. Both gentlemen were practical printers of some twenty years' experience. "We are," continues the article, "the exclusive owners of all the materials of the office, as well as the consciences of the editors, and believe in and shall practice upon the principle that the amenities which obtain in social life should govern the editorial profession, and that a man should be held as strictly to account for what he publishes in his paper as for what he utters with his tongue. There is no more excuse for palliating official and public wrongs than for pandering to private vice and individual crimes. We love the old Democratic party, and will fight for it to the last extremity—provided the party bears itself as becomes a great national party. But the party must purge itself of the piratical crew led by the Pierces, the Douglasses and some lesser lights nearer home, to make it worthy the hearts and hands of true men."

* Mr. Brown formerly published a paper by this name at Janesville.

June 6, 1856, saw the enlargement of the Badger State to thirty-two columns, and other marked typographical changes, among them a new heading of patriotic design, the letters being dotted and streaked with stars and stripes. Power seems to have ceased to steal "from the many to the few," and the editors had arrived at the conclusion that "the world is governed too much"—the latter sentiment, in big letters, being substituted for the former motto. "The position of the Democratic party" was the caption of what may be termed a "heavy editorial" in this enlarged number of the Badger. "It is very evident," the article begins, "that a union of the elements opposed to the Democratic party will take the field in the present campaign, without making any issue of general principles, but depending for success upon exciting a political phrenzy similar to the 'hard-cider' excitement of 1840." The "elements" referred to were the Know-Nothing and Republican parties. The national political issues at that time were concentrated in the destiny of that monstrosity, slavery; the Missouri Compromise and Kansas Repeal were concomitant parts.

On the 15th of August, 1856, the Badger State office was removed to the new Badger Block, and the editors invited their friends to "call and make themselves comfortable in the prettiest printing office in the State." On the 27th of February, 1857, Chauncey C. Britt's name appears in the Badger State indicating that gentleman as the sole publisher. Mr. Britt conducted the paper until December 11, of the same year, when William K. McHugh & Co. became the proprietors, and Joseph M. Doty, who had been editorially connected with the paper for a year previous, was announced as the responsible editor, with all the glory and emoluments of the position. Brother Britt's valedictory re-assures us that the Badger's Democracy had been preserved in all its original purity, and, in his usual graceful style, confidently hoped that it would remain untainted. Mr. Doty's name disappears from the editorial mast-head September 18, 1858, but his contributions did not cease. On the 4th of December, John A. Brown again became the proprietor, and the paper was reduced in size to twenty-eight columns. But, as had been evident for some time, "misfortune was upon them." The frequent changes in the management of the paper, the reduction in size, and various other unhealthy signs, gave evidence of the early and inevitable dissolution that must soon follow. And when on the 10th of February, 1859, death stilled the throbbing heart of the proprietor of the Badger State, there was but little left to cling to. The paper survived the demise of its original publisher about ten months, the widow assuming the management. J. M. Doty was in editorial charge until the date of its suspension, December 10, 1859.

The Independent.—This paper was established in Portage in 1855, by John A. and Julius C. Chandler, the first number being issued the 3d day of February, of that year. It was the outgrowth of a political necessity, and is numbered among the thousand other newspapers that espoused the cause of the Republican party early in its remarkable history. The Independent took uncompromising ground against slavery, and advocated the enactment by the Legislature of a prohibitory liquor law, as the best means of educating the people to a moral sense of their social and political welfare. John A. Chandler's name appears at the head of the editorial column, indicating that gentleman as the responsible scribe, and across the title page appears the following inscription: "A weekly newspaper, devoted to literature, temperance, morality, news, general intelligence, and the dissemination of Republican principles." The first number contained, among other choice and readable things, a caustic criticism of the proceedings of the United States officials against Sherman M. Booth. One particularly pointed paragraph in the article reads: "There is not a slave trader in the land, or a slave pirate on the high seas, who would have any reason to find fault with the proceedings in Miller's court against Mr. Booth." There is also an article from the Vermont Freeman, giving the number of slaveholders in the United States at that date. It may be interesting to know that there were then 347,525 persons in the Union who subsisted, as individual owners, upon the bondage of the now emancipated blacks. The advertising patronage of the Independent, for the first few weeks, was conspicuous for its absence, but the necessary support from this direction was soon forthcoming, and the Independent is believed to have become a paying institution.

On the 22d of March, John A. Chandler's name disappears from the customary position indicating editorial responsibility, though, until February 7, 1856, he retained a proprietary interest in the paper, and continued to furnish political pabulum for its columns. Julius C. Chandler then became sole proprietor, and it is noticeable that about this time the Independent's previous hostility to the extension of slavery grew into the most outspoken opposition to the existence of the "peculiar institution" in any part of the Union. The editor's arguments in this regard were clear, concise and convincing.

The Independent indorsed the nominations of the Philadelphia Convention in the following language: "We place this week* at the head of our columns the names of John C. Fremont, of California, and William L. Dayton, of New Jersey, and invite every freeman—all who love free institutions and equal rights—to unite in elevating these men, respectively, to the offices of President and Vice President of the United States. Never, since the first organization of the Government, has there been a Presidential election involving principles of such magnitude. * * * * On one side go forth Douglas, Pierce, Atchison, Stringfellow, Brooks and their followers, with Buchanan for a standard-bearer, champions for the extension of slavery; on the other stands arrayed the hosts of freedom, with such leaders as Seward, Chase and the glorious, gallant John C. Fremont at the head, fighting manfully, earnestly, for the extension of liberty. Can freemen hesitate and doubt with which party to unite? Is not the path of duty, of interest, of patriotism perfectly plain?"

On the 14th of April, 1857, the Independent ceased to exist in name, but not in form, and Mr. Chandler bade adieu to his friends and patrons in a few well-chosen words, assuring them that his journalistic relations with them had been a source of pleasure as well as of profit to him. In his valedictory appears the following concerning the Republican party: "Only two years ago, the now great, mighty and glorious Republican party was in its infancy, scarcely organized, in sooth, in Columbia County. What advance has the party made? The 1,709 majority for Fremont and liberty answers the question. Proud, indeed, are we that have been an advocate of a righteous party whose principles of truth have so triumphed. Columbia has assumed the proudest political position of any county of the commonwealth."

Julius C. Chandler, more familiarly known as "Shanghai" Chandler, was a man of recognized ability. A vein of eccentric humor pervaded his writings, revealing his possession of a rare genius, in comparison with which the reputations of our greatest American humorists would not suffer. Soon after disposing of the Independent, Mr. Chandler purchased the material that had been used in the office of the Columbia County Reporter, a Democratic paper published by Carr Huntington, and, removing it to Adams County, established a paper at Friendship. He died a few years ago in Baraboo.

Portage City Record.—Upon the fortunes of the Independent was founded the Portage City Record, a newspaper more within the meaning of the term; for the Independent was noted less for its local news than for its National and State political articles. The Record, however, was the recognized party organ, the official paper of the county, Republicanism being the accepted faith of its manager and proprietor, Robert B. Wentworth. The first number was issued April 29, 1857. The names of M. M. Davis and A. J. Turner appear as editors. Mr. Davis' editorial contributions had been attracting some attention from the readers of the Independent, and his acknowledged ability was a material aid in sustaining the enterprise. Mr. Turner was younger then than now by nearly a quarter of a century. He has grown some in stature, and become more generally known, having passed through the various grades of journalism and been honored, as all journalists should be, with office. "Perhaps it is hardly necessary," says Mr. Davis in his salutatory, "for us to say that while this paper is under our control, editorially, it will be untiring in its opposition to the nationalization of slavery. The General Government, being one of delegated powers only, we hold that all exercise of assumed powers, either by its executive, legislative or judicial departments, is a dangerous usurpation, and should not be peaceably acquiesced in by the States or the people, in whom all sovereignty lies. Since the passage of the Fugitive Slave Act, the Kansas-Nebraska Bill, and more recently the decision of the Dred Scott case, the whole question of the legitimacy of the slave power in this nation is fairly open for full and free discussion, and, for one, we intend to write about it and talk about it at our will."

* June 26, 1856.

Mr. Wentworth, the proprietor of the Record, was an experienced journalist, in so far as the general management of the newspaper was concerned. He had formerly been associated with Charles Billingshurst, of the Dodge County Gazette, at Juneau. The first thirteen numbers of the Record were the same size (twenty-eight columns) of its predecessor, the Independent, but on the 29th of July it was enlarged, another column being added to each of its four pages. There were other marked and favorable changes. The Record, moreover, adopted a motto at this date: "Resistance to Tyrants is Obedience to God."

On the 11th of November, Mr. Davis severed his connection with the Record as editorial writer, leaving that duty to devolve upon his associate, Mr. Turner, who remained but a short time in that capacity, going to Friendship, Adams County, with "Shanghai" Chandler, with whom he was engaged in the publication of a paper. Returning to Portage in March, 1859, he resumed his former relations with the Record, and was thereafter during the existence of the paper known as the "heavy man" of the institution. At the head of the editorial column of the first number of Volume III (April 27, 1859) appear the names of Messrs. Wentworth and Turner as editors, the former continuing as sole proprietor. The Record, at that date, was, perhaps, the most prosperous paper in Central Wisconsin. It was and had for some time been in the enjoyment of the Republican patronage of the county, with liberal profits to its publisher. This, of course, was in accordance with the "eternal fitness of things," for the county was largely Republican, and, there being no competing organ, the Record, as the successor of the first Republican paper in the county, was clearly entitled to consideration as the party organ. But many changes are wrought in the furnace of time. When the Record had attained its fourth year of prosperity, a difference of opinion arose among the Republican managers as to the propriety of sustaining it further. There was no fault to be found with its Republicanism; that was sufficiently sound; but the personal interest of a few of the party leaders seemed to demand a division of patronage, and on the 17th of April, 1861, the publisher announced the sale of the Record to A. J. Turner, one of the conditions being that the purchaser was to supply the paper to all subscribers who had paid to that date. In the same issue were announced the commencement of hostilities at Charleston, and the subsequent surrender of Fort Sumter. In retiring from journalism Mr. Wentworth bade an affectionate adieu to his readers, thanking them for their liberal patronage. As illustrating his characteristic candor, the following paragraph from his valedictory is given: "We have attended to the affairs of the office very closely, so much so that our health is impaired: and have succeeded pecuniarily, as well or better, perhaps, than the majority of publishers of country papers, and in that particular retire from the establishment perfectly satisfied with the result of our four years' labor."

The Wisconsin State Register.—Of the numerous journals founded in Portage at an early day, the Wisconsin State Register is now the only one in existence. It was established by Samuel S. Brannan on the 16th of March, 1861, nearly twenty years ago, upon the ruins of the Badger State; the latter, as has already been shown, having supplanted the River Times, the first paper published in Columbia County. The material used in its publication was that from which the Badger State was formerly printed, and typographically, the Register closely resembled the defunct Democratic organ. The editor, in saluting his friends, said: "Having long been convinced of the necessity for a representative organ in this city, one which will fully and fairly reflect the views of the Republican party, and having received such assurances as will justify the enterprise, we have concluded to commence the publication of the Wisconsin State Register. * * * To enable us more fully to complete our arrangements for the publication of the paper, no sheet will be issued for the next week or two from this office. We shall, early in April, enlarge and otherwise improve our paper."

Following this was an article announcing John T. Clark as the Republican nominee for County Judge. Mr. Clark's name also appeared in the "candidate's corner," almost in the identical place it is now to be seen as editor of the Register. In the same column was an article on the prospective evacuation of Fort Sumter. In it were reflected the war sentiments of the Register as follows: "The Government may see fit to occupy or evacuate any one of the fortresses of the country as a measure of strategy merely, and the people will be willing to submit to the judgment of the military commanders who direct the steps: but they will not consent to the abandonment of the public property to traitors as a stroke of policy to placate them."

President Lincoln's inaugural address appears in full on the first page, and is reviewed at length editorially, receiving high indorsement and full approval. On the local page, among other interesting items, we find a notice of the Portage City Light Guards, giving an account of their organization, description of the uniforms, etc., and concluding as follows: "When civil war shall have been declared (we are getting chilly) and re-enforcements are wanted, and the Portage Light Guards are drafted and on their way to South Carolina (Bohag,* hand us that bottle). * * * For Sale—A very cheap, but somewhat flashy, suit of clothes, with brass buttons, designed for military service. The owner† is seriously indisposed, and his physician recommends his immediate withdrawal from the army. This suit will probably last the purchaser as long as he lives. Apply at this office."

On the 27th of April, soon after the suspension of the Record, the Register appeared enlarged from a seven to an eight column folio; Brannan, Turner & Co., proprietors; Israel Holmes and A. J. Turner, editors, and S. S. Brannan, local editor. The change is announced in the following brief card, signed by Mr. Turner: "In the last Portage City Record, announcement was made of the fact that the office had been sold to the undersigned. This week, I have the further announcement to make that I have united my interest in the office with those of S. S. Brannan, of the State Register, and that henceforth both papers will be published unitedly, under the name of the Wisconsin State Register, by Brannan, Turner & Co., and will be conducted by I. Holmes and A. J. Turner as principal editors, and S. S. Brannan as local editor. No further number of the Record will be issued, except a small edition to close up some legal advertisements. Advertisers in the Record, residing out of the city, will have their contracts completed in the State Register. All accounts with the Record will be adjusted by R. B. Wentworth. All subscribers who overpaid for the Record will be furnished with the State Register to the close of their subscriptions."

Mr. Holmes, the leading editorial writer for the Register, was a lawyer by profession, and a very able man. His articles were thoroughly in accord with all the measures of the Republican party, save, perhaps, those which many other staunch Union men then regarded as extremely radical, but which have since been acknowledged to have been paramount in crushing the rebellion. In April, 1864, Mr. Holmes disposed of his interest in the Register to Messrs. Brannan & Turner, and retired from journalism. Mr. Turner then became the responsible writer, being ably assisted in his labors by his partner, Mr. Brannan. Both were practical men, having passed through the various grades of the newspaper business, and, this being true, it is not strange that the paper grew in influence and circulation.

*Bohag was the satanic imp of the printing office.

†Mr. Brannan was a member of the Light Guards.

In July, 1864, the price of the Register was increased from $1.50 to $2 per year. The proprietors placed a large part of their profits from the business in improvements about the office, calculated to increase the value of their paper. Among other mechanical accessories was a large power press, of the Taylor make, purchased in 1869. It is still in use, and is one of the largest and best of the kind in the Northwest. Messrs. Brannan & Turner continued the publication of the Register until the 23d day of February, 1878, when the establishment was sold to John T. Clark and B. F. Goodell, the present owners. In bidding farewell to their friends, the veteran publishers gave some very interesting reminiscences of their newspaperial careers in Portage. Extracts from the joint valedictory are herewith given: "In severing our connection with the paper, it seems fitting that we should indulge in a brief retrospect of our connection with the press of this city. On the 4th day of July, 1850, the River Times, the first paper ever published in this city, made its appearance. It was printed at the little hamlet over near the fort, and it was before the Portage of to-day had any existence. Engaged in the mechanical department as roller-boy, or 'devil' in printing office nomenclature, was Mr. Brannan; so his connection with the press of this city dates from its very incipency, nearly twenty-eight years ago.

"In 1855," continues Mr. Turner, "we arrived in this city with a capital of just ten cents, without friends and a total stranger to nearly every person in the county. We found employment as compositor in the Independent office, of which 'Shanghai' Chandler was the proprietor, and in the columns of this paper, in that year, appeared our first articles for the press. In 1856 and '57, we were employed in the composing room of the State Journal, at Madison, and for a few months served as legislative reporter and local editor of that paper. In the spring of 1857, we returned to Portage and were associated with Dr. M. M. Davis, as one of the editors of the Portage City Record, published by the Hon. R. B. Wentworth. Mr. Wentworth had purchased the Independent office of Mr. Chandler, and given it the name above mentioned, and Mr. Brannan, who had about this time returned from California, held a case in the Badger State office, published by John A. Brown and C. C. Britt. In the spring of 1861, Mr. Brannan purchased the Badger State office and commenced the publication of the Wisconsin State Register. About a month later, A. J. Turner purchased the Record office, and the papers were consolidated with I. Holmes as one of the partners. In April, 1864, Mr. Holmes disposed of his interest in the office to his partners, since which time the paper has been published continuously by Brannan & Turner. At the end of seventeen years, the whirligig of time has brought a new revolution, and henceforth the readers of the State Register will receive their news pabulum from other hands. * * * We have paid to our compositors, for paper bills and other incidental expenses of the office, more than $60,000. We have, with unflinching regularity, paid our employes every Saturday. We have never suffered a paper bill or any other bill to go past due; we have held tax receipt No. 1 for many years; we generally stand recorded as No. 1 on the poll list at each election, and we have paid our pew rent promptly and cheerfully, and have most unselfishly permitted other people to occupy that pew more than we have ourselves, if we are not mistaken."

Mr. Brannan, when the transfer of the Register was concluded, was absent in Colorado for his health, but the sale was made with his entire approval, he having left the matter in the hands of his partner. When he received information of the change, he wrote from Denver as follows: * * * "I trust I may be pardoned for a word of allusion to the services which I think we have rendered in graduating from our office so many young men who have taken high rank and honorable positions among their fellows. Robert Campbell, R. J. Flint, E. H. Weber, B. F. Goodell, W. R. Finch, F. O. Wisner, Henry Marvin and Rody Keegan are but a few of the goodly number of good boys whose remembrances come to me now, who have gone forth rising men, due to good tuition, and, may I not say, the excellent example set before them. Poor Jimmy Dempsey, ever glorious and true, sleeps in Dixie's land, a martyr to the slaveholders' rebellion, while faithful and true-hearted W. F. Ward reposes in Silver Lake Cemetery, a victim of disease engendered in the tented field. May green ever grow the graves on the little mounds which rise over them.

“ In looking over the past, I do so without desecrating here and there little paragraphs which I would gladly blot out, but I may truthfully say, never a line which has been written was ever inspired by malice toward a fellow mortal. * * *

“ Farewell, my friends, farewell, my foes;
My peace with these—my love with those.”

The new proprietors of the State Register entered upon their duties with that spirit of determination which is generally rewarded with success. Mr. Clark took his position at the editorial helm, while Mr. Goodell assumed charge of the mechanical departments. The editor, in his salutatory, after briefly reviewing his pioneer experiences in Columbia County, says: “ I have been a subscriber to this journal from the beginning, and feel the same attachment as such patron to it that you feel. It is one of the established institutions of Columbia County. Indeed, the county would hardly be itself without it. I do not propose to change the name, for the reason that it must still have a name, and I am satisfied with the old one. I do not propose to change its politics, for with them I have been generally in hearty accord. It will still advocate the principles of the Republican party, and endeavor to secure and maintain the supremacy of that party. At the same time it will be unsparing in its efforts to keep that party pure and worthy of support. * * * Great inconvenience and losses result from changing one's business, but there are some compensations. You know how it is in your neighbor's calling when you have been there yourself. If you have been a lawyer, you know how to sympathize with them, how things appear from his standpoint. If you have been a lender of money, you know how to sympathize with him. If you have been obliged to be a borrower, paying high interest, you can feel for him. If you have been a farmer, working hard to compel Mother Earth to bring forth her increase, and just as you have been upon the point of securing it, some vile bug has snatched it from your hand, making all your labor vain, you can appreciate the condition of the farmer during these few past years. You have learned that when the orator at the fair says: ‘ Tickle Mother Earth with a hoe, and she will laugh with a harvest,’ he is reciting poetry. * * * I cannot expect to agree on every subject which will be discussed in these columns with all my patrons, because I know too many of them are independent thinkers, and such can never entirely concur; but I will endeavor to treat every topic introduced, candidly, and truly represent the position of the opposite side. * * * I fully realize that this paper has been a power in this county and State, and hope it will remain such. Encouraged by the large list of subscribers already on the Register's list, and hoping the old ones will stand by it still, the time has come when the ‘ I ’ must be exchanged for a ‘ we,’ and ‘ we ’ must take off ‘ our ’ coat and go at the work.”

Just how far the efforts of the present publishers to make an acceptable newspaper have been seconded by the intelligent citizens of Columbia County is illustrated in the extent of patronage they have received; and the measure of patronage is shown by the recent enlargement of the paper from thirty-two to thirty-six columns and the purchase of a handsome outfit of new type. The Register wore its new dress for the first time on the morning of the 10th of April, 1880. Most of the old material composing its former habiliments had been in use for a quarter of a century.

Politically, the Register still adheres to its original faith, and is as soundly Republican in all its teachings and aspirations as any organ of the party in the State. Locally, the Register is singularly complete and reliable. It also claims the somewhat unusual distinction of being a purely home-made paper, which means that both sides are printed at home.

Portage Democrat.—In March, 1877, at the solicitation of Democratic friends in Portage, Henry D. Bath, editor of the Columbus Democrat, and his brother, W. E. Bath,* established the Portage Democrat, a seven-column folio. “ To-day,” said the editors in their salutatory, “ for the first time in almost twenty years, a Democratic newspaper in the English language is issued in this city. We are here for the establishment of a legitimate business, and to meet a need which has long and repeatedly been represented to us as existing in this community. We are not here to encroach upon the province of any other journal, but to do work in an open field. The Register is an old and ably conducted newspaper, which has done very much to advance the material interests of Portage. Its editors are our personal friends, and we hope they will remain so, however divergent the line of our political operations may be. The Advance is not at all in our way, having its own great work to accomplish; and the Wecker is our ally. We propose, in the interests of Reform-Democracy, and not in subserviency to any ring or clique of it, to make as good a newspaper as we can. To this end, we invoke the co-operation of every member of the party, and will devote our utmost endeavors to render it the most efficient aid within our power. But the political work of a local journal is, after all, but a small part of the labor which it has to do. It should be ever busy in furtherance of the business interests and social welfare of the community where it is published. It is a record of the life of the people in its vicinity; the chronicler of their joys and sorrows, their successes and reverses, and its general purpose is to do good to those within the circle of its influence, and to be of value to them in the accomplishment of worthy subjects. Such are the aims of the Portage Democrat."

* Died in June, 1879.

* Early in 1878, the health of W. E. Bath failing, Irving Bath, formerly a clerk in the Land Office at Madison, took an interest in the paper, and it is now conducted in his name. In March, 1878, at the close of the first volume, the size and form of the paper were changed to a six-column quarto. Early in April, the publisher purchased an improved Cottrell & Babcock press and a three-horse power Bookwalter engine, making it the only steam printing-office in the county. The Democrat has performed its part well toward giving accounts of local occurrences, and is being rewarded in the measure of its merit.

Columbia County Wecker was published by Gustavus A. Selbach, the first number being issued September 1, 1874. The Wecker is a German newspaper, the only one in Columbia County, and was established in Portage at the request of the leading German citizens. It was originally a seven-column folio, but was enlarged a year ago to eight columns. It has a circulation of 500 copies, but is probably read by from 2,000 to 5,000 people, owing to an economical custom among its patrons, by which a single copy is perused by several families. Mr. Selbach is a veteran journalist, having established a paper in Appleton, the Volksfreund, in February, 1870, and one at Mansfield, Ohio, the Mansfield Courier, in 1872. Politically, the Wecker is Democratic. The name, translated to English, means "wake up," and the editor loses no opportunity to disturb the mental lethargy of his readers.

The Northern Republic was a Whig paper, established in 1851, the first number being issued December 20, by W. W. Noyes, brother of Col. Noyes, of Baraboo. The Republic was well received by the River Times, the Democratic organ, and a period of nearly three full weeks elapsed before the rival editors "locked horns" on political questions. The Republic seems to have met with inferior patronage, as its suspension was soon announced, the material being taken to Baraboo, where it was used in the publication of the Baraboo Republic.

The Columbia County Reporter was established by Carr Huntington, in 1857, as a Democratic paper. Misfortune seems to have frowned upon the enterprise, as the paper suspended in the fall of 1857, the material being sold under Sheriff's execution, on a chattel mortgage. "Shanghai" Chandler purchased the entire outfit, and removed it to Friendship, in Adams County, where he established a paper. Mr. Huntington went to Beaver Dam, where, in 1858, he commenced the publication of the Beaver Dam Democrat, which is also defunct.

The Rara Avis was a literary and musical monthly, the first number of which was issued January 30, 1857, Horace Norton, editor and proprietor. The Rara Avis was a sixteen-page quarto, very creditable in appearance and very ably edited. Had it been established in a larger city, its success might have been permanent. A year or more of unprofitable labor taught Mr. Norton this, and, in July, 1858, he advertised the entire outfit for sale. A suspension soon followed.

S. M. Smith

PORTAGE, CITY.

The Columbus Reporter.—This was the name of the first paper published in Columbus, but diligent search and inquiry have failed us in ascertaining the date of the first number. From all that can be learned in regard to it, it is safe to say it did not exist prior to 1853. Gov. Lewis holds a receipt for subscription, dated June 20, 1854, signed by Carr Huntington, editor and proprietor of the Reporter, as follows: “Received of James T. Lewis four dollars in full for publishing notices, and in full for the Columbia Reporter, for the years A. D. 1853, 1854, and up to the 15th of June, 1855.” The Reporter was of the Democratic persuasion in politics. The office of the Reporter was located on Broadway, near the present site of Erhart’s harness-shop. The date of its suspension is also unknown. That it did suspend, however, before it had attained any great age or influence, is undoubted, for the editor betook himself to Portage early in 1857, and there re-established his paper, continuing to publish it until the latter part of that year, when the office was sold out under a sheriff’s execution. Mr. Huntington is now inculcating Democracy at Blue Earth, Minn.

The Columbus Journal.—On the 22d day of January, 1855, Daniel Mallo, and his son-in-law, Delancy L. Thayer, issued the first number of the Columbus Weekly Journal, a seven-column folio, devoted to the interests of the then newly fledged Republican party. The editor promised, in his salutatory, to “studiously avoid at all times intentionally wounding the feelings of those who do not think as we do. It is a well-known fact,” continues the editor, “that it is not in the scope of human nature to please everybody, and of the whole human race the conductor of a public journal has the hardest and most difficult task of all.” On the 30th of December, 1856, Mr. Thayer retired from the Journal, leaving Mr. Mallo sole editor and proprietor. On the 10th of March, 1859, Marcus A. Mallo, a practical printer and a ready writer, became associated with the paper as junior editor, the firm becoming Mallo & Son. This copartnership was severed on the 4th day of February, 1860, through the death of the son, at the age of twenty-two years and four months. The elder Mallo continued the publication of the Journal until June 6, 1861, when D. H. Pulcifer and J. F. Hazelton, the latter as editor, took charge. In their first issue they mourned the death of Stephen A. Douglas with turned column rules. In April, 1862, Mr. Pulcifer withdrew from the management, and a few months later, Mr. Hazelton did likewise, the old veteran, Daniel Mallo, again assuming charge, and continuing in the capacity of editor until the 30th of October, 1864, when death put an end to his toils, his trials and his tribulations. Mr. Mallo was one of the oldest publishers in the Northwest. He was born in York, Penn., November 20, 1799, and commenced his career as a printer upon the York Gazette at the age of seventeen years, coming to Wisconsin in 1842, and taking a position on the Madison Gazette. But one number of the Journal was issued after the death of Mr. Mallo. In it was printed, among other things, the obituary of the deceased journalist, written by E. E. Chapin, whose contributions had enlivened the Journal throughout most of its existence. Henry D. Bath, editor of the Democrat, then a law student in Mr. Chapin’s office, put the article in type.

The Columbus Transcript.—Some time in the winter of 1864–65, Valentine Baltuff, who, with his brother John, had been publishing the Lodi Weekly Herald, which suspended November 9, 1864, came to Columbus with the material of the defunct journal, and established the Columbus Transcript, unfolding the Republican banner, and pledging himself, beneath its folds, to support the great national party in all that was consistent with the wants of a large constituency. Mr. Baltuff possessed but little literary ability, but wielded a composing-stick with great fluency. There was sufficient local genius abroad, however, to supply the Transcript with editorial pabulum, and the paper flourished.

In August, 1868, in the heat of summer and a memorable political campaign, a somewhat sudden, but not altogether unexpected, change took place in the office of the Transcript. Mr. Baltuff disposed of the concern, and, soon afterward, went to Floyd County, Iowa, where he re-established in the same line of business.

The Columbus Democrat.—Henry D. Bath was the purchaser of the effects of the Transcript, and, on the 10th of September, 1868, he ushered into the journalistic world a seven-column folio newspaper—the Columbus Democrat—with marked political inclinations, strongly the reverse of those of its predecessor, as was indicated in the names of presidential preferences that floated from the mast-head, and their emphatic indorsement editorially. Mr. Bath, in his “To the Public,” said:

“It is already known by many that the Columbus Transcript, which was formerly issued from this office, has changed hands, and to-day, for the first time, we believe, in ten years, the colors of the Democratic party are hoisted by a newspaper in Columbia County.”

The editor seems to have been conversant with the difficulties that usually beset interior publishers, and wide awake to the requirements of the important position he had chosen to occupy. “The progress of the times,” he says, “has changed, to a great degree, the province of a paper published in the interior. The locomotive and the lightning now labor for men. The daily metropolitan newspapers are dropped in our midst with each revolution of the earth, and from them we learn what Europe was doing only yesterday. They tell us of the status of parties, and to a much greater extent than a country newspaper. But who chronicles our local events—those occurrences which most intimately concern us? Who makes public the ravages of death and the inroads of matrimony in our midst? Who speaks of our crops and our markets, our home improvements and questions relating to matters immediately surrounding us? Who tells us of the good fortune or disaster to our neighbors? Who does all this and a hundred other services? It is done through the agency of the local press; and any town of the size and enterprise of Columbus, which does not possess a good local paper, loses a powerful auxiliary to its prosperity. We are here for this purpose, and here we propose to remain.”

Considering the adverse political circumstances under which the Democrat was established, the editor and his friends have cause for congratulation in the growth and influence of the paper. There has been but one change in its management, and that was only temporary. From October, 1870, to March, 1871, the father of Mr. Bath was associated with the Democrat as publisher. In 1872, the form of the paper was changed to a six-column quarto.

Mr. Bath was, for two years prior to 1868, city editor of the Milwaukee News, resigning his position on account of ill health, and has, therefore, had some of the experience calculated to test one's journalistic qualifications. His views concerning the province of interior journals have been carried out to the extent of making the Democrat a valuable narrator of local happenings. Mr. Bath has been especially industrious in the work of perpetuating the early history of Columbus.

The Columbus Republican.—In the Presidential campaign of 1868, by an adroit maneuver of the Democracy, the material of the Transcript changed hands, and with it a Democratic sheet was started. This was less than eight weeks before election, and the political cauldron was boiling fiercely. There was a strong Republican majority in town and county, and a Democratic paper would not go down, and set well on a Republican stomach. J. R. Decker was at the time publishing the Waupun Times, but such inducements were offered that he sold out that paper and came to Columbus, his route being by way of Chicago, where he bought an entire new printing office, including a job press, something novel in Columbus. The office was established on the second floor of Shaffer's Block, in the room that for many years has been Squire Farnham's Justice office. The room was soon found to be too small, and after various removals the office is now located on Ludington street, occupying a spacious first floor.

The first issue of the Republican was on October 7, 1868. It was a seven-column folio, ably edited and handsomely printed, several pithy local writers contributing, and giving the new paper a “boost” through the few weeks before election. In the first years of the Republican, Mr. Le Roy Irons, a young man recently arrived from the East, contributed liberally to its local and literary departments. In December of 1869, the local was printed on the first page, as the prominent feature of the paper, and commencing with January of 1870, Mr. Irons' name appears as one of the editors, an arrangement continuing three months. He was a vigorous writer of prose, and a poet of acknowledged merit, but physically he was weak, and he has since passed over the river. In December of 1871, the Republican was enlarged to nine columns to a page, the increase of advertising patronage making a larger sheet necessary. These proportions were maintained until July of 1873, when an increase in the price of paper and a shrinkage in advertising brought down the paper to eight columns. In 1878, the style was changed to the popular six-column quarto. Finer type was adopted for city and county news, a corps of correspondents were secured throughout the county, and new vigor awakened in the paper. It now ranks among the best of the country papers in the West, especially in point of home news.

Mr. Decker, the editor and proprietor, is a thorough practical printer, having acquired the art when boys had to learn a trade. He has a reputation for fine work that extends throughout the West, and specimens of jobs done at the office have been solicited by artistic printers from as far East as New York, as far South as Georgia, and as far West as San Francisco.

Having received instructions in stereotyping in Chicago, and procured a fair outfit for doing the work, this useful adjunct to a printing office is made to contribute to the completeness of the establishment. The Republican and the Republican job printing office, are institutions of which Columbia County is, and should be, proud.

The Lodi Flag, published quarterly, was first issued in July, 1856, by J. O. & A. Eaton, a small quarto of three columns, only three numbers of which (for July and November of 1856, and for May, 1857) were issued.

The Lodi Weekly Herald, established February 25, 1863, by Baltuff Bros.,* publishers and proprietors. "We commence," say the editors, in their salutatory, "the publication of a paper, under the above title, in this town; and, believing the wants of the people to be more for a strictly local journal than a political one, we design the publication of an independent paper." It was a six-column paper, of a very respectable appearance. The first business cards were those of "Richard Lindsay, attorney and counselor at law;" "G. H. Irwin, M. D.," and "J. O. Eaton, Notary Public." On the 2d of March, 1864, the copartnership in the establishment of the paper was dissolved, and Valentine Baltuff appears alone as editor and proprietor. This event occurred at the beginning of the second volume, but the paper was discontinued after the issuing of the thirty-fifth number, November 9, 1864, which was issued on a half-sheet only.

The Lodi Journal.—In October, 1870, was issued the first number of the Lodi Journal, by Charles H. Fullerton, editor and publisher. It was a five-column quarto, and was edited with ability until April 16, 1873, when the editor said "Good-bye," and the Journal ceased to exist.

The Lodi Valley News was established by Peter Richards, in the spring of 1874, the first issue being on the 22d of April of that year. It has had a circulation, since the close of its first year, of about four hundred copies weekly, and has been published regularly each week, without a single omission, from the start. In its first issue, the announcement was made that the paper would be, in its political complexion, an Independent Republican paper, and it has been the aim of its proprietor to hold it to that character as closely as possible. Its circulation has been very uniform from the start, seldom varying in any two years more than half a quire. The News is well printed, and edited with ability.

The Wisconsin Mirror.—In the fall of 1855, the Wisconsin River Hydraulic Company decided upon founding a new village—Kilbourn City—upon Section 3, Township 13 north, Range 6 east. Alanson Holly, of Warsaw, N. Y., was then West looking for a location, and, visiting the site of the proposed village, he decided at once to settle. A dwelling was hastily erected for his family, and a small building for a printing office (the first houses in the prospective village), and, on the 1st day of January, 1856, the first issue of the Wisconsin Mirror was struck from the press. This issue was gotten up under difficulties. On the 22d day of December previous, the building was inclosed, and, while the plasterers were at work, the hands of the office unboxed the type and set up the press. It was so cold the compositors had to bathe their fingers in warm water every ten minutes to make them limber. As the paper was being made ready for the press, a number of friends gathered in the office, and it was proposed to sell the first copy at auction, which was accordingly done, it bringing the handsome sum of $65. The second and third copies were also put up, bringing $10 and $5, respectively. Another instance of the kind is probably not on record. The question might naturally arise, where the patrons of the paper were to come from—a paper published in the woods, with owls, squirrels and rabbits for neighbors. The editor had faith in the future of the village, and, until it should become a large and prosperous village, it was expected to be printed at pecuniary loss, though many copies would be taken by parties interested in the welfare of the place, and sent away to those who were likely to be attracted thither. For many months, mails were only received once, twice or three times a week, at the village of Newport, two miles distant, and to this place the editor was compelled to go for his postal matter. Notwithstanding all these difficulties, the Mirror was always a readable paper. It continued to exist for nearly three years, when a suspension took place for a time, and it was then revived by H. A. Holly, with Alanson Holly as editor. In due course of time, it was sold to T. O. Thompson, who in turn sold to Davis, Wright & Davis, Mr. Wright remaining with it but a short time, when D. L. & E. B. Davis became proprietors. In January, 1872, it passed into the hands of Frank O. Wesner, who continued it until July, 1876. Mr. Wesner was in a measure successful, devoting attention principally to local matters. When he retired, W. M. Cole became proprietor, and continued to publish until October, 1876, when the office was destroyed by fire. No attempt was made to revive it.

* Valentine and John.

The Kibbourn City Guard was issued by Wesley Moran, for the first time, November 15, 1876; it was continued with varying success until April 30, 1879, when it was suspended. The size was a seven-column folio; price, $2; politics, Republican. It was edited with ability during its brief existence.

The Reporter.—On the 3d of June, 1875, F. A. Brown, a Columbia County pioneer, issued the first number of the Poynette Reporter, a six-column folio, neutral in politics. The "home side" was printed at the office of the Western Advance, a small temperance weekly, published for a time at Portage by E. W. Stevens. The Reporter survived one year. Mr. Brown came to Columbia County in 1849, and lived here about twenty-seven years. He is now publishing the Monroe County Democrat, at Sparta, Wis.

COMMON SCHOOLS.

The educational system of the State embraces common schools, normal schools and the State University.

Towns are generally divided into a number of school districts, in each of which the school affairs are in charge of a district school board, consisting of three members, each holding office for three years, one being elected at each annual school meeting. The officers of this board are Director, Treasurer and Clerk. The Clerk reports to the Town Clerk, and the Town Clerk to the County Superintendent. Some towns have what is called the township system, with one school board for the whole town.

The schools in cities are generally under the control of a Board of Education, and in charge of a city Superintendent of schools.

In most of the cities and in some of the villages, the schools are graded, the highest grade being called the high school.

The schools of the State are principally supported by local taxation, district and county. The remainder of their support, about one-thirteenth, comes from the income of the State school fund, which amounts at present to about 40 cents for each child of school age. Some of the high schools under certain regulations receive special aid from the State.

From lack of normal schools, academies and colleges within her boundaries or near them, Columbia County has no reason to boast of her educational advantages, except such as are furnished by her high, graded and common schools. Of the latter she has good reason to be proud. The ample provision made by the State for common schools has been liberally supplemented by the tax-payers of this county. The need of the influence and inspiration derived from institutions of higher culture is greatly felt, but the want is being rapidly outgrown by reason of the increased facilities for getting to and from places of higher learning.

The early schools of Columbia County were, like all others in a new country, small in their beginnings. Previous to 1850, Eliza Haight taught a private school at "the portage," as did also Delos Brown in the year just mentioned. The first district formed in the vicinity of Cambria was in 1848; a schoolhouse was built in the same year, and a public school taught by Miss Betsy Griffin. In 1852, Julia Landt taught in the town of Newport, near Kilbourn, for $1.25 per week, and "board around;" and Frances Howard taught the same school for $2.50 per week, and boarded herself.

The first year of public schools reported was in 1849, when the average wages paid male teachers were $11.75 a month; female, $5.39. The average value of the schoolhouses for each town in the State was $575, which for the eleven towns reported of Columbia County, would give an aggregate of $6,223.25; and, if the forty-one districts in these towns that reported had each a schoolhouse, the average value would be about $150.

Just thirty years after this, in 1879, the county contained 146 "regular" school districts, with schoolhouses valued on the average at over $500 each. There were also seventy-three "parts" of districts, and forty "joint" districts. The average wages paid male teachers were $37.07 per month, and female teachers, $20.87. The whole number of children of school age in the county is 8,550, of whom 6,370 have attended school. Outside of school age, which is from four to twenty years, eighty-three have also attended public schools. To teach all these, 272 different teachers have been employed during the year 1879, only 163 of whom could be teaching during the same term. The total amount of money received by the county for school purposes, from all sources, was very nearly $46,000, of which there has been paid out for teachers' wages alone the sum of $32,167. The total expense of the common schools of Columbia County for 1879 was very nearly $58,000, or about $9 for each one of those attending school.

Through the agency of teachers' associations and institutes, the more advanced ideas and methods of modern teaching are disseminated throughout the county, and many good teachers are found in the common schools even at the present low rate of wages. This year (1880) is also witnessing an increased activity in the building of new schoolhouses, and the repairing of old ones, and the introducing of modern and improved styles of school furniture and apparatus.

Exclusive of the high schools in the cities of Portage and Columbus, there is a free high school at Lodi. This was established as a graded school in September, 1864, with A. J. Riley as Principal at a salary of $850. In 1869, a high-school building was built, and for five years Mr. Yocum was Principal. He was followed in 1874 by A. A. Miller, and subsequently, in 1877, by W. E. Todd, who is still Principal and has done much to give the school its present excellent reputation. On the 29th of March, 1878, the building was burned down and a new one afterward erected at a cost of about $8,000. There are six departments, employing as many teachers, with an attendance of 275 pupils, seventy-five of whom are in the high-school department.

In the village of Kilbourn there is a graded school of five departments, employing six teachers, with an attendance of 384 pupils. The schoolhouse was built in 1869 at a cost of $16,000, and the annual running expenses for 1879 were about $2,750.

At Cambria, a school of two departments was organized in 1859, and enlarged to three departments in 1869. In 1867, the total enrollment of scholars was 311, and again in 1879 the number was 253. The total expense yearly of running the school is $1,125. In the list of Principals are the names of Henry Rust, J. J. Lloyd, Orson Kellogg, D. A. Strong, Kennedy Scott and Zed. Merrill. There is also a school of two departments and three teachers at Poynette, which was first organized in the fall of 1862, with Miles T. Alverson as Principal. The total expense that year was $400. The number of children enrolled in the district was 127, and the attendance in both departments 103. The total attendance in 1880 is about 140, and the annual expense of running the school over $1,000. To within a year two teachers only have been employed. Besides these there are schools of two departments at Wyocena, Pardeeville, Rio, Fall River and Randolph, all of which tend to draw in the larger scholars from the surrounding country districts.

The supervision of schools was in the care of town Superintendents until the close of 1861, when the county superintendency was adopted. The first to fill the office of County Superintendent of Schools of Columbia County was D. W. Rosenkrans, of Columbus, six years, 1862-67; then Levi Bath, of Columbus, two years, 1868-69; J. J. Lloyd, of Cambria, two years, 1870-71; L. J. Burlingame, of West Point, three years, 1872-74; Kennedy Scott, five years, 1875-79, and the incumbent, Henry Neill, of Caledonia, elected for the term of 1880-81.

COUNTY BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

The following are the towns, cities and villages in Columbia County entitled each to one representative upon the County Board:

Towns.—Arlington, Caledonia, Columbus, Courtland, Dekorra, Fort Winnebago, Fountain Prairie, Hampden, Leeds, Lewiston, Lodi, Lowville, Marcellon, Newport, Otsego, Pacific, Randolph, Scott, Springvale, West Point and Wyocena—21.

Cities.—Columbus, First Ward, Second Ward, Third Ward; Portage, First Ward, Second Ward, Third Ward, Fourth Ward, Fifth Ward—8.

Villages.—Cambria, Kilbourn City, Lodi, Randolph (West Ward)—4.

The following are the names of the members of the Board of County Commissioners and Board of Supervisors for the years mentioned:

*County Commissioners.—1846—Solomon Leach, J. Q. Adams, John Langdon.†

1847—R. F. Veeder, N. Griffin, J. D. McCall.

1848—J. Q. Adams, J. J. Guppey, G. M. Bartholomew.

1849—J. C. Carr, LaFayette Hill, John O. Jones.

Board of Supervisors.—1849—A. A. Brayton, S. Brayton, O. Kincaid, J. O. Jones, W. T. Whirry, W. K. Custar, L. Warner, J. Williams, W. W. Patton, Linus Blair, Edwin Sylvester, M. C. Bartholomew, Bishop Johnson—13.

1850—Jeremiah Drake, J. Kerr, J. Hewett, J. Seavey, J. Whitney, E. Cook, B. Johnson, D. Bisbee, J. O. Jones, J. Williams, A. A. Brayton, O. Kincaid, O. C. Howe, I. Polley, T. Dalziel, E. Lee—16.

1851—Joseph Kerr, J. Q. Adams, D. S. Bushnell, G. M. Bartholomew, F. C. Curtis, Thomas Dalziel, J. H. Guptil, J. O. Jones, A. C. Ketchum, O. Kincaid, Elijah Lee, J. W. Rhoades, J. Rood, T. C. Smith, R. H. Mead, Jesse Van Ness, J. Whitney—17.

1852—Joseph Kerr, J. Q. Adams, G. M. Bartholomew, M. F. Cass, William W. Drake, J. M. Forrest, F. Folsom, Elijah Lee, R. H. Mead, John Pate, M. W. Patton, D. Vandercook, Jesse Van Ness, D. White, C. J. Chapin, R. Closs, F. C. Curtis, F. E. Whiton—18.

1853—Jesse Van Ness, W. G. Simons, W. H. Young, W. W. Drake, J. C. Carr, G. D. Mead, J. F. Hand, D. White, J. S. Richmond, C. H. Moore, H. Converse, J. O. Jones, R. H. Mead, Benjamin Williams, W. Wiley, E. Williams, Abram Dates, Samuel Reeder, J. Christy, E. Lee—20.

1854—F. C. Curtis, M. Barden, John Hagan, E. A. Tolles, George Wall, H. Converse, J. O. Jones, R. H. Mead, F. Folsom, D. White, J. S. Richmond, Peter Van Ness, M. C. Bartholomew, John Derr, J. A. Bowen, E. F. Lewis, J. C. Carr, E. A. McDowell, Benjamin Dow, W. T. Whirry, W. H. Young—21.

1855—M. W. Patton, Nathan Hazen, Thomas Robertson, N. Griffin, J. Drake, S. Cook, John Hagan, J. Walton, J. Montgomery, I. C. Sargent, F. C. Curtis, M. C. Bartholomew, Jacob Jacobia, J. Seavey, Ed. Dawes, F. Folsom, Benjamin Dow, Andrew Dunn, J. N. Hardy, John O. Jones, S. W. Walker, S. H. Briggs—22.

1856—F. C. Curtis, A. N. Smith, Thomas Robertson, W. W. Drake, F. G. Randall, Daniel White, J. C. Carr, J. Devlin, Ed. Fairbanks, J. Ewing, Jr., S. Dutton, M. F. Cass, E. E.

* The first officer named in each year, in this Board, and in the Board of Supervisors, was Chairman.

† Did not qualify.

Dawes, C. S. Tompkins, William Weir, G. G. Marvin, M. W. Patton, N. White, W. M. Blair, T. Tirrill, N. Goodall, Josiah Arnold—22.

1857—Peter Van Ness, J. Anstin, Alexander McDonald, W. W. Drake, R. H. Mead, Daniel White, S. M. Smith, A. Sweany, E. Fairbanks, S. A. Wheeler, W. G. Simons, W. T. Bradley, Samuel Dunn, J. H. Bonney, Ed. Dawes, Frank Folsom, J. P. McGregor, William Weir, R. T. Graves, M. Barden, J. O. Jones, H. Converse—22.

1858—J. C. Carr, J. Austin, J. Williams, Thomas Robertson, W. M. Griswold, D. White, A. Sweany, Henry Lull, S. Dunn, W. T. Bradley, J. B. Dwinnell, J. Devine, J. H. Bonney, S. Blood, F. G. Smythe, Francis Wood, L. G. Bever, S. E. Dana, G. N. Richmond, R. S. Stoyell, R. T. Graves, M. Barden, Evan Meredith, J. Pound, H. W. Roblier—25.

1859—J. C. Carr, J. T. Hillyer, Thomas Robertson, J. D. Jones, William M. Griswold, W. Waugh, L. Sweany, W. K. Custar, W. N. Baker, James Devine, J. F. Hand, C. L. Brown, M. M. Williams, J. Bowman, J. L. Burk, F. Wood, P. Sheehan, John Graham, A. M. Craig, J. Collins, A. Warren, M. Barden, E. Meredith, Ira Polley, N. B. Ellis—25.

1860—W. N. Baker, J. T. Hillyer, W. Stevenson, W. Bump, Thomas Silsbee, D. White, J. Q. Adams, O. S. Smith, Ed. Fairbanks, James Devine, Delos Bundy, C. L. Brown, S. A. Knapp, J. W. King, C. S. Tompkins, Henry Emdler, S. E. Dana, A. P. Bennett, H. W. Emery, A. Weir, Abram Warren, M. Barden, R. B. Sanderson, N. Coapman, Ira Polley—25.

1861—W. N. Baker, H. J. Sill, W. Stevenson, S. Harvey, A. G. Cook, Hugh Jamieson, O. S. Smith, E. H. Wood, J. H. Sutton, L. A. Squire, L. D. Dean, J. F. Hand, S. A. Knapp, J. W. King, J. L. Burk, Andrew Weir, Ed. O'Keeffe, John Graham, S. S. Brannan, G. H. Osborn, G. G. Marvin, J. O. Jones, M. Barden, George Yule, E. B. Blaisdell—25.

1862—Levi W. Barden, C. L. Brown, Marcus Barden.

1863—Levi W. Barden, C. L. Brown, Marcus Barden.

1864—W. W. Drake, G. M. Bartholomew, M. Barden.

1865—W. W. Drake, G. M. Bartholomew, M. Barden.

1866—W. W. Drake, E. F. Lewis, M. Barden.

1867—Marcus Barden, E. F. Lewis, W. W. Drake.

1868—E. F. Lewis, W. W. Drake, M. Barden.

1869—G. M. Bartholomew, Ira H. Ford, J. Meredith.

1870—A. J. Turner, H. McFarlane, Alexander Prentice, A. G. Cook, A. W. Ingalsbe, H. B. Rust, E. O. Jones, H. Jamieson, Abram Dates, W. H. Proctor, S. Hasey, L. A. Squire, E. F. Lewis, Joel Pruyn, W. H. Young, Hiram Albee, George Smith, D. B. Kuney, J. L. Burk, B. F. Flower, Thomas Dalton, S. S. Brannan, E. Arthur, W. W. Corning, S. S. Torbert, S. M. Smith, M. Barden, J. R. Rowlands, Jr., F. O. Sisson, E. B. Blaisdell—30.

1871—William M. Griswold, H. McFarlane, J. G. Staudenmayer, E. O. Jones, W. W. Drake, G. M. Bennett, John McKenzie, Charles Sweany, H. C. Field, Samuel Hasey, D. B. Kuney, L. A. Squire, E. B. Craig, Joel Pruyn, Samuel Dunn, H. Albee, George Smith, J. L. Burk, Stephen Calverly, L. G. Bever, John Gates, Daniel Wells, W. W. Corning, C. Wheeler, G. G. Marvin, M. Barden, J. R. Rowlands, J. L. Farr, E. B. Blaisdell, S. M. Smith—30.

1872—A. J. Turner, H. McFarlane, J. G. Staudenmayer, E. O. Jones, I. Smith, E. E. Chapin, G. M. Bennett, J. McKenzie, Charles Sweany, H. C. Field, C. S. Tompkins, D. B. Kuney, L. A. Squire, Albert Sharf, A. Eaton, John Foote, Samuel Dunn, Hiram Albee, George Smith, J. Boutwell, J. L. Porter, L. Prehn, James Fyfe, B. Doherty, W. W. Corning, John Chamberlin, M. Barden, J. R. Rowlands, J. L. Farr, C. J. Pardee, S. M. Smith—31.

1873—A. J. Turner, H. McFarlane, J. G. Staudenmayer, E. O. Jones, J. J. Sutton, E. E. Chapin, G. M. Bennett, J. McKenzie, Abram Dates, H. C. Field, Samuel Hasey, P. G. Stroud, W. C. Kleinert, Albert Sharf, A. Eaton, J. Foote, Samuel Dunn, Hiram Albee, I. W. York, J. Boutwell, S. Calverly, Louis Prehn, S. S. Brannan, B. Doherty, J. Collins, W. T. Whirry, M. Barden, J. R. Rowlands, J. L. Farr, Charles Spear, J. Stolker—31.

1874—A. J. Turner, H. McFarlane, J. G. Staudenmayer, R. J. Rowlands, Paul Miller, W. M. Griswold, C. L. Dering, H. A. Whitney, G. M. Bennett, J. McKenzie, Charles Sweany, H. C. Field, John Derr, M. Griffin, W. C. Kleinert, Albert Sharf, A. Eaton, John Foote, Samuel Dunn, Hiram Albee, A. Chamberlin, J. Boutwell, Edward Smith, Peter Mahon, William Meacher, Evan Arthur, W. W. Corning,* Samuel Clark, Marcus Barden, J. R. Rowlands, J. A. Parr, C. J. Pardee, W. T. Whirry†—33.

1875—A. J. Turner, Hiram Albee, Evan Arthur, Alan Bogue, Stephen Calverly, Samuel Clark, John Derr, John Foote, Michael Griffin, Alfred Hasey, J. C. Hoppin, D. M. Hall, Evan O. Jones, Hugh Jamieson, J. R. Jones, W. C. Kleinert, Matthew Lowth, John W. Lee, I. G. Loomis, Peter Mahon, William Meacher, W. H. Proctor, Charles J. Pardee, F. G. Randall, J. G. Staudenmayer, Charles Sweany, Albert Sharf, John Sawyer, Joseph Stalker, Mathias Traut, James Wilson, Jr., I. W. York, George Yule—33.

1876—A. J. Turner, Alan Bogue, William Black, M. W. Patton, Matthew Lowth, J. R. Decker, A. Hasey, N. C. Bissell, John W. Lee, A. Hastie, Charles Sweany, O. W. Field, John Derr, P. G. Stroud, W. C. Kleinert, Peter Tension, James Wilson, A. Eaton, F. C. Curtis, O. D. Coleman, I. W. York, T. Thompson, Edward Smith, Peter Mahon, S. S. Brannan, S. S. Johnson, I. G. Loomis, John Sanderson, John Sawyer, John R. Jones, John Evans, C. J. Pardee, Joseph Stalker—33.

1877—J. R. Decker, Alan Bogue, Charles McLeish, John Davis, Matthew Lowth, A. Hasey, A. G. Cook, John W. Lee, A. Hastie, Charles Sweany, W. H. Proctor, Thomas Sanderson, P. G. Stroud, W. C. Kleinert, Albert Sharf, James Wilson, Addison Eaton, F. C. Curtis, O. D. Coleman, I. W. York, Thornton Thompson, J. L. Porter, Jacob Bauer, Ll. Breese, M. Waterhouse, C. C. Britt, N. H. Wood, John Sanderson, D. C. Merrill, John D. Jones, A. Vanderpoel, Stephen Calverly, Joseph Stalker—33.

1878—J. R. Decker, Alan Bogue, Robert Whitelaw, J. J. Edwards, J. W. Leffingwell, A. Hasey, C. L. Dering, John J. Lloyd, A. Hastie, Charles Sweany, M. C. Hobart, J. Montgomery, P. G. Stroud, L. L. Phinney, John H. Clark, Charles Goodall, Addison Eaton, F. C. Curtis, Asa Smith, I. W. York, Samuel Sampson, Henry Jennings, Jacob Bauer, William Meacher, E. C. Maine, C. C. Britt, N. H. Wood, J. B. Smith, D. C. Merrill, John D. Jones, J. A. Parr, Stephen Calverly, G. C. Foster—33.

1879—J. R. Decker, Alan Bogue, Robert Whitelaw, E. W. Lloyd, J. W. Leffingwell, A. Hasey, Hobart R. Cook, D. D. Morris, J. R. Hastie, Charles Sweany, M. C. Hobart, Edward Fairbanks, P. G. Stroud, L. L. Phinney, John H. Clark, Charles Goodall, Addison Eaton, John W. Palmer, Asa Smith, I. W. York, Hans H. Tongen, Edward Smith, Jacob Bauer, George Shackell, Sr., Evan Arthur, R. C. Rockwood, C. Collipp, J. B. Smith, John Sawyer, John Leatherman, Julius A. Parr, M. G. Tucker, G. C. Foster—33.

1880—Alan Bogue, C. F. Mohr, Evan W. Loyd, J. W. Leffingwell, M. Burnham, Alfred Hasey, H. A. Whitney, D. D. Morris, J. R. Hastie, Charles Sweaney, Spencer Randall, H. R. Clark, William C. Kleinert, John H. Clark, James Wilson, Addison Eaton, James Price, P. G. Stroud, Asa Smith, I. W. York, H. Phillips, Andrew Weir, John Brickwell, George Shackell, Evan Arthur, M. T. Alverson, C. C. Collipp, Thomas Williams, Marcus Barden, John Leatherman, William H. Cook, R. C. Falkner, G. C. Foster,—33. Chairman not yet elected for 1880.

AUTHORS AND ARTISTS.

HATTIE TYNG GRISWOLD

was born in Boston on the 26th of January, 1842. She is the daughter of the Rev. Dudley Tyng, a Universalist divine, now deceased. At the age of eleven years she came with her parents to Wisconsin, and when fourteen years old began to attract attention as one marked with literary ability by her short stories and poems in the Madison State Journal. She also wrote for the Knickerbocker Magazine and the Home Journal, New York publications of note, and the Louisville Courier-Journal. In 1878, Mrs. Griswold collected many of her poems and published them, with others not before given in printer's ink, in a neat little volume entitled "Apple Blossoms."

* Resigned and Charles C. Dow appointed.

† W. T. Whirry, deceased, and J. Stalker appointed.

"These poems illustrate this fact, that a born singer must sing, no matter how or where; no matter what coveted boons of culture fortune may withhold, or how niggardly fate may be of outward advantage. Mrs. Griswold is a student of nature and sings the emotions of common humanity. Hers is a healthful, hopeful, songful book for everybody who has soul enough to love a singing bird and sense to appreciate truth. The sun is called the sun, not Phœbus, in this book, and home here is home, and heart, simply heart. The author seems to love the unpretending household phrase of the land, and she knows no disdain for any soul of humanity, who is sincere and earnest and truth-seeking."

One of the Apple Blossoms is

" UNACHIEVED.

" I am sad for the poems which have been but dreamed,
For the books which have never been writ,
For the pictures which never on canvas have gleamed,
For the thought which no language would fit.

" I am sad for the songs that have burdened the brain
Of the singer, but could not find birth :
For the melodies struggling, and struggling in vain,
To break on the world with their worth.

" I am sad for the work which has never been wrought
By the hands which were pinioned and pent ;
I lament that the deed could not equal the thought,
Nor the action the spirit's intent.

" Alas ! for the deeds which have never been done,
So heroic, and grand, and sublime ;
Alas ! for the battles which have not been won,
In this contest with life and with time.

" Alas ! for the possible loves in the heart
Of the man who loves never at all ;
For the sadness and sorrow of lives set apart,
Who might have found joy in love's thrall.

" Ah, me ! for the idols we make to our souls,
And who live not, save in our ideal ;
Alas ! for the sorrow that over us rolls,
When our dreams are dispersed by the real.

" Every life has two strands : the life that we see,
And the other, that which might have been ;
The being we are, and the one we might be—
Who shall say where they end or begin ?

" And who, that there is not success in defeat,
And a failure in every success ;
That the battle-field held may not be a retreat,
And the wrong that we suffer, redress ?"

An intelligent critic pronounced Mrs. Griswold's book one of rare merit. He says an undertone of sadness, a refrain of grief and pathos, runs through all her poems; but their lesson is always of patience and resignation and hope, rather than despondency or despair. Their sadness is that of life and of a woman's heart, when it has known "a sorrow's crown of sorrows," such as is portrayed in

" THREE KISSES.

" I have three kisses in my life
So sweet and sacred unto me,
That now, till death-dews on them rest,
My lips shall ever kissless be.

" One kiss was given in childhood's hour,
By one who never gave another ;
Through life and death, I still shall feel
That last kiss of my mother.

- “The next kiss burned by lips for years;
For years my wild heart reeled in bliss
At every memory of that hour,
When my lips felt young love's first kiss.
- “The last kiss of the sacred three
Had all the woe which e'er can move
The heart of woman; it was pressed
Upon the dead lips of my love.
- “When lips have felt the dying kiss,
And felt the kiss of burning love,
And kissed the dead, then nevermore
In kissing should they think to move.”

One of this poet's gifted friends truly says of her: “She writes out of the fullness of a rich nature. She has thrilled at the heroism and self-sacrifice of Father Marquette, and has told tenderly a mother's sorrow over ‘A little one quietly sleeping.’” “Apple Blossoms” has reached its second volume.

SARAH DYER HOBART

is the daughter of Wayne B. Dyer, and was born at Otsego, in Columbia County, in 1846. She commenced her literary career at the age of eighteen, writing for the local newspapers. She has written a number of poems of acknowledged merit, among them, “The Record of Company B,” “The Legend of St. Freda” and “Hector's Recompense.” As a regular prose contributor to the Toledo Blade she wrote over the nom de plume of “Floyd Bentley.” Her superior talents as a musician have won for her a reputation reaching beyond local confines, and of late years she has turned her attention almost exclusively to the divine art of melody. The following is

“THE RECORD OF COMPANY B.

- “At the open door of the cottage,
With a book upon her knee,
A fair-haired child sat reading
The record of Company B.
- “‘Father, the names are many,
And the lists are long,’ she said;
‘But tell me, who are the living,
And who were the wounded and dead.’
- “Then he took the ancient record
And laid it on his knee,
And he told, in the purple twilight,
The story of Company B.
- “They came from the heart of the prairie,
These men so brave and true,
Who left their homes and dear ones,
To march in the army-blue.
- “One hundred stalwart yeomen,
Plowing in springtime sweet,
Gathering the sheaves in autumn,
Reaping the ripened wheat.
- “They marched in storm and sunshine,
They fought in the battle-rain;
Ah me! 'twas different labor
From gathering golden grain.
- “In the wild Virginia mountains
Some rendered up their lives,
With prayers for the stricken country,
With prayers for mothers and wives.

“ On the plains of sunny Georgia
Others were laid to rest,
With traitor-soil around them,
And its clods upon their breast.

“ Some died on the dreary marches —
Hungry, weary and worn—
And some in Southern prisons,
From friends and comrades torn.

“ And when the crippled remnant
Came back, and peace was given,
Of the hundred who enlisted,
The veterans were but seven.

“ By many a blue-waved river,
And where old ocean's surge
Wakes through the solemn ages
An anthem and a dirge—

“ Unmoved by bugle's summons
Or drum's deep reveille,
While angels guard above,
Sleep the men of Company B.

“ Ah me!’ she sighed, ‘the record
Is sad, and full of pain;
Praise God, the war is over,
And the land's at rest again!

“ But I'm proud that, when the country
Was torn from sea to sea,
My father fought to save her
In the ranks of Company B.’”

The following brief extract clearly shows the remarkable power of Mrs. Hobart as a poet. It is from a poem entitled “ UNREQUITED.

“ I gave my all, with a lavish hand,
With a holy love, with a purpose grand;
I robbed my life of its rarest flowers,
To brighten another's lonely hours.

“ I crushed my pride with an iron will,
To shield another from pain and ill;
For I said, ‘When the night of gloom shall cease,
Above me shall dawn the morn of peace.’

“ In vain! In vain! The years roll on,
And the joy of youth is forever gone;
And the happy bird on the wind-tossed tree
Singeth no song of bliss for me.

“ O mother earth, on thy bosom brown
Let the child in painless rest lie down;
Hope's bark lies wrecked on the rocks of time,
And the boon I crave shall never be mine.”

LE ROY IRONS.

In his former home at Winfield, N. Y., the early days of Le Roy Irons were full of the brightest promise of a fine literary career. He was the life of society, the ready writer of prose or verse. But with failing health, commenced the struggle against fate. He came to Columbus about the year 1867. He contributed largely to the Republican, of that city, and, for about three months, had editorial control of the paper. He was, also, for a few months, local editor of the Duluth Morning Call. He at one time contributed largely to the columns of the New York Ledger, and was almost always writing for the local papers where he might be living.

Some of the best of his poems were collected in 1876, and published under the title of "Centennial Columbia." From this work is selected a short poem, as illustrative of his facility of versification, entitled

"NESTLING.

"Come, darling, fair darling, creep into the fold,
The winters are long, and the frosts are cold,
And the snows for your feet are many-fold.

"Come, darling, bright darling, the nest is so warm,
And the world is so sorrowful under the storm :
Creep to thy nesting-place, happy and warm.

"And darling, oh! darling, sweet daisy of ours,
Half life is toilsome, half golden with flowers,
Half tempest and shadow, half sunshine and showers.

"Then come while you may, darling, unto your rest,
The moon breaks the clouds, ragged edged, in the west,
Creep in while you may to your warm, warm nest."

He was married, in the spring of 1872, to Miss Frank Langworthy, of Clarksville, N. Y. He died in April, 1877, leaving his wife and little daughter to mourn his loss.

MRS. A. C. KELLOGG.

The maiden name of Mrs. A. C. Kellogg was Harriet R. Ackerman. She was born in the town of Brownville, Jefferson Co., N. Y. When quite young, she was put in boarding-school (at Fairfield Seminary, Fairfield, Herkimer Co., N. Y.), where she remained several years. She evinced a decided taste for the study of nature. Her parents, thinking this merely a childish freak, compelled her to fill up her spare time with music, which she considered of minor value. Leaving this branch, she commenced the study of art, and soon drew and painted in a very creditable manner for the time and advantage she had in her course at Fairfield.

At the age of eighteen, she assumed the responsibilities of teacher of the art department in the same institution, which position she filled three years. She afterward taught nearly two years in Hungerford Collegiate Institute, until the building was destroyed by fire. While in these institutions, she did much for the cultivation of art. She then made preparations to continue the study of art in New York City and Philadelphia, when she was urged to accept the vocation of art teaching in the Wesleyan Female College at Wilmington, Del., where she remained two years, teaching a class of young ladies and zealously pursuing her art studies. She visited Philadelphia two and three times a week, having access to Mr. Earl's gallery, meanwhile receiving several complimentary notices through the press.

Miss Ackerman came to Wisconsin, in the summer of 1870, with the intention of returning when the fall term commenced at Hungerford Collegiate Institute, which was then rebuilt. Her health being delicate, she concluded to remain in this State. She has since instructed a large number of pupils in oil painting, and has done much for the cultivation of art in Portage.

She was married to Dr. A. C. Kellogg September 27, 1871.

"The Valley in Autumn," Wisconsin scenery, is a painting on which Mrs. Kellogg has lavished much wealth of coloring. Its title is suggestive; a widespread and faithful landscape, with perspective handsomely displayed, and a general effect whose beauty is marred by no hasty finish of details. The water, transparent and yielding, reflects with soft luster what the bank presents. Still beyond the scenes already noted, there stretch away the Baraboo hill-tops, their summits tipped with the radiance of the sun. It possesses a freshness of color that charms, an atmosphere elastic, yet subdued and mellowed by the genial rays of an autumn sun.

"The Brook Trout" is a painting also worthy of special mention. It is much smaller than the one already spoken of. Its harmony of color is excellent, and the trout, that seem to have just been taken from the crystal brook, are very life-like.

PRESIDENT HAYES AND PARTY.

Tuesday, September 10, 1878, was a gala day in Portage. Attached to the regular 8 o'clock train from St. Paul, was a special car, containing President Hayes and party, consisting in all of forty-six gentlemen and ladies. The distinguished visitors were received at the depot by the Guppy Guard, with the Schulze Band, and a large number of prominent citizens of Portage; also by a committee of gentlemen—Horace Rublee, L. B. Caswell, George W. Burchard, Sat. Clark and H. M. Lewis—who came up from Madison the evening before to escort the party to the State capital. Amid the commingling of cheers and music, the guests were escorted to the dining-hall of the Fox House, where an excellent breakfast awaited them. After partaking of the morning repast, the President was introduced by Mr. Caswell. He expressed himself pleased to meet and become acquainted with people of the Northwest, spoke of his recent visit to Dakota and the Red River country, and said that what had been regarded in years past as the "Great American Desert" was in fact a region of almost unlimited agricultural and mineral resources. He said he had become a convert to the advice of Horace Greeley—"Go West, young man."

The President then introduced Attorney General Devens, who was pleased to meet everybody, especially those with whom he had been associated during the war. "The material evidences of the war are sinking out of sight every day; the fortifications and entrenchments, which have been the scenes of conflict, are gradually vanishing from sight. So every other evidence of the war should sink out of sight except the grand result—freedom for all men."

Mrs. Hayes, being introduced, smiled pleasantly and bowed gracefully to the assemblage. The distinguished party then arose, and, escorted by the Guppy Guard, the Schulze Band and the committee from Madison as escort, boarded the train and took their departure.

COLUMBIA COUNTY'S WAR RECORD.

Treason, always despicable, even unto the eyes of traitors, never became more intensely odious than in 1861, when the climax of a conspiracy, long brewing, was reached, and the best government under the sun found itself face to face with an unholy and unrighteous civil war. The object of the South in attempting a separation of the Union was the erection of a great slave empire, encircling the Mexican Gulf; the duty of the North was clearly to prevent the success of a scheme so monstrous and inhuman. The first movements of the Confederates were made under very favorable circumstances. They were in possession of many of the chief national offices, and they very largely controlled the army and the navy. Their military plan embraced three principal objects—the seizure of the forts and coast defenses, the capture of the national capital and the possession of the Mississippi River. The South was, nevertheless, thrown upon the defensive from the beginning of the struggle, and very soon effectually beleaguered. It was the unflinching aim of the North to bring the war to a close, with as little bloodshed as possible, by the capture of Richmond, the rebel capital; but the first forward movement terminated almost disastrously at Bull Run on the 21st of July, 1861. This battle, however, was without military significance, since it did not secure the seizure of Washington by the rebels. It taught the North the real nature of the terrific struggle in which they were engaged. On the day after the battle, Congress voted $500,000,000 and called for 500,000 volunteers. From that moment the rebellion was doomed. This act of President Lincoln and his patriotic Congress increased the nation's confidence in them to deal the righteous blow, and, at the same time, struck terror to the hearts of the Secessionists.

The responses to the call were immediate and of the most encouraging character. Already a previous call for three-months' volunteers had been filled. No State in the Union was more prompt in sending forward volunteers than was Wisconsin, and no part of Wisconsin responded with greater vigor than did Columbia County. When the first call for troops was made, the Portage Light Guard immediately offered its services to the Governor. Simultaneous action on the part of other military organizations throughout the State, more favorably situated, for a time delayed the Governor's acceptance, and the Light Guard was compelled to take a place as Company G in the Second Regiment of Infantry, being mustered in at Camp Randall, on the 11th of June, 1861. With it went the heartfelt sympathies of the citizens of Columbia County for the integrity of the Government. It was the substantial result of their first patriotic efforts toward maintaining that Government. But they did not pause. Volunteers continued to go forward until the serpent-twined palmetto had ceased to wave, and the "peculiar institution," slavery, was entombed, never again to exist in a free and enlightened country.

From the descriptive book of Company G, now in the possession of Capt. C. C. Dow, of Portage, the following correct list of the names of those who joined its ranks is obtained. It is an authentic roll of Columbia County's first contribution to the grand army that preserved the Union:

Capt. John Mansfield, First Lieut. A. S. Hill, Second Lieut. S. K. Vaughan, Sergeants—W. S. M. Abbott, *G. W. Marsh, Charles D. Ettinger, John G. Kent. Corporals—Julius C. Chandler, Hervey G. Clark, *Charles C. Dow, Horace E. Emerson, J. C. Allen, E. S. Fletcher, O. F. Winnie and *Charles P. Austin. Musicians—*Anson Linscott and J. A. Stanton.

Privates—M. C. Alfred, Henry Acker, A. O. Adams, E. S. Best, R. O. Batson, G. W. Briffett, G. W. Blanchard, C. Bloom, P. V. Brisbois, A. R. Clement, H. R. Coffin, D. F. Crane, T. F. Cowing, J. M. Carr, O. W. Davis, J. B. Divin, W. Dean, T. H. Dolan, E. H. Dorsey, J. Chapman, G. Elterman, T. Fletcher, G. Folinsbee, E. Fout, F. J. Gilmore, J. H. Grace, S. H. Hammond, F. D. Helmes, G. Hill, *W. Holden, C. P. Heath, J. House, G. H. Irwin, P. C. Irvine, J. Jacobsen, I. Jordan, F. Kanzenbeck, G. Leclair, F. M. Lewis, *Archa Linscott, J. Lynch, J. T. Metcalf, J. P. McDermott, S. McHugh, G. H. Miles, S. H. Morrison, W. H. Matthewson, G. W. Mack, J. Noonan, P. Maloney, F. Noble, H. Neally, S. A. Nichols, D. O'Brien, A. F. Pardee, W. L. Plumsted, M. S. Phillips, C. Rice, E. Rice, C. E. Reynolds, J. Russell, H. Rensimer, J. P. Schildgen, G. Sherwood, F. Smith, H. Smith, J. A. Snyder, J. Stone, H. Sweetman, M. Sweeney, A. P. Tiffany, J. Twycross, J. M. Vantassell, W. H. Williams, G. Williams, J. A. Wisor, R. V. Dey, M. McMahon, W. Whitney and J. Chrystie.

The following enlisted October 7, 1861, at Fort Tillinghast, Va.: Van R. Bentley, C. Blackman, J. Castly, A. B. Cole, W. H. Church, *Charles Delaney, S. R. Eggleston, E. Jackson, J. H. Langdon, G. F. Leeds, J. Lester, J. T. Loomer, C. Mooter, R. C. McDonald, E. H. H. May, C. R. Mosher, W. L. Pratt, O. Parker, J. B. Rowell, C. E. Reiley, J. H. Sharpe, J. T. Sines, G. Stalker, H. C. Tupper and L. Wilkins.

Subsequent enlistments were as follows: T. J. Staley, November 1, 1861; H. S. Cave, March 19, 1862; W. T. Davis, December 10, 1863; B. Cooper, January 6, 1864; C. B. Allen, J. Ford, W. Wilds, F. O'Neil, G. A. Lupient, M. Kane and D. Bracey, January 16, 1864; I. S. Allen, *M. W. Hartman and A. Keebaugh, January 26, 1864; R. K. Chrystie, February 6, 1864; T. W. Jones, W. N. Sheeks, E. Van Horn and H. Williams, February 17, 1864.

A brief account of the wonderful experience of Company G is herewith given: The Second Regiment was originally enrolled under the President's call for 75,000 three-months volunteers. Under orders to rendezvous at Camp Randall, the various companies were organized early in May, 1861. Meanwhile, the General Government had decided to accept no more troops for this short term of service, and accordingly, on the 16th of May, the regiment was called upon to re-enlist "for three years or during the war." With the exception of one company, the entire regiment complied enthusiastically. On the 11th of June, the Second Regiment, thus organized, was mustered into the United States service, being the first Wisconsin organization so mustered. On the 20th of the same month, the regiment left for Washington, and was the first body of three-years men to appear at the capital. On the 2d of July, they were ordered to Fort Corcoran, on the Fairfax road, where they were brigaded with three New York regiments, under Col. (now Gen.), Sherman, and, on the 16th, when the movement on Manassas was made, were attached to Gen. Tyler's Division, by whom the enemy was engaged at Blackburn's Ford, on Bull Run. On the 21st, the Second Regiment was ordered to assault one of the enemy's batteries. They moved up, under a terrific enfilading fire of shell and canister from other batteries, formed in line at the foot of a hill and charged up, driving back the rebel infantry which had emerged from cover in pursuit of a body of our troops just repulsed in a similar assault. Here they fought against enormous odds for over an hour, but, the enemy being reinforced, were compelled to fall back, having suffered a loss of 30 killed, 105 wounded and 60 prisoners.

* At present residing in Columbia County.

On the 23d, the regiment went into camp near Fort Corcoran, where they remained until August 27, when they were transferred from Col. Sherman's command to that of Brig. Gen. Rufus King, which then consisted of the Fifth and Sixth Wisconsin and the Nineteenth Indiana, composing what afterward became known as the "Iron Brigade." Thus organized, they crossed the Potomac on the 5th of September, and, after assisting in the construction of Fort Marcy, recrossed the river, and, October 5, went into winter quarters at Fort Tillinghast, on Arlington Heights, Va. Here they remained until March 10, 1862, when they took part in the advance upon Manassas. Nothing of startling importance occurred until the forenoon of the 28th of August. The brigade having been assigned a position in the advance line of the Army of Virginia, they proceeded slowly on the left of the army, via Gainesville, to Groveton, where they turned to the right on the Bethlehem Church road, and lay under arms until 5 in the afternoon, when they returned to the Warrenton pike, marching toward Centerville. While moving by the flank, the Second Regiment was attacked by a battery posted on a wooded eminence to the left. The regiment promptly advanced upon the battery, and soon encountered the enemy's infantry. While awaiting the arrival of the rest of the brigade, this regiment sustained and checked for nearly twenty minutes the onset of "Stonewall" Jackson's entire division, under a murderous concentric fire of musketry. When the brigade arrived, the battle was continued until 9 in the evening, when the enemy was repulsed.

August 30, the Second, having been temporarily consolidated with the Seventh Wisconsin, moved with the brigade in the second line of battle, to assault the enemy's left, posted in a thick wood. While engaged in assaulting this position, the success of the rebel attack upon the left flank of our army made it necessary to fall back. The "Iron Brigade" formed in line of battle, retained the position until the entire army had passed on the road to Centerville.

The Second Regiment also participated in the movements of the army under the command of Gen. McClellan, and, on the 14th of September, with the rest of the brigade, was assigned the duty of storming Turner's Pass, of South Mountain, where the rebels were strongly posted in a gorge. The enemy was routed and driven from the pass with heavy loss. This movement led them to take a prominent part in the battle of Antietam, and afterward in the memorable battle of Fredericksburg, December 13. During that winter, the Second engaged in several very profitable expeditions in Virginia, under Col. Fairchild, and, in April following, under command of Gen. Hooker, forced a passage of the Rappahannock at Fitz Hugh's Crossing, driving the rebels from their rifle-pits, and capturing several hundred prisoners.

June 1, they found themselves near Gettysburg, and the Second, having that day the lead of the marching column, first met the enemy, under an order to support Gen. Buford's cavalry. The regiment came into line, on the double-quick, behind a slight elevation, and, without waiting for the rest of the brigade to form, advanced over the crest, and received a volley which cut down over 30 per cent of the rank and file. But they dashed upon the enemy's center and crushed it, thus checking the rebel advance. At that date, the loss of the Second Regiment since its re-enlistment, in killed, wounded and missing, amounted to 652.

In December, 1863, forty members of the Second Regiment re-enlisted, and, on the 28th of January, 1864, arrived at Madison, received their furloughs and dispersed to their homes to enjoy a short respite from duty. During the absence of the re-enlisted men, the remainder of the Second, with the non-veterans of the brigade, participated in a reconnaissance to the Rapidan River. About the 1st of March, the veterans returned to the front, and their regiment was soon after assigned to position in the First Brigade, Fourth Division, Fifth Army Corps. Accompanying the grand forward movement of the Army of the Potomac, under Gens. Grant and Meade, the Iron Brigade participated in the battles of the Wilderness and Spottsylvania Court House, after which, the Second Regiment, having been reduced to less than one hundred men present for duty, and having lost both field officers, was detailed as provost guard to the Fourth Division, Fifth Army Corps, thus severing its connection with the "Iron Brigade." The battle-scarred members of the regiment followed the destinies of that division in the grand movement to the left, arriving June 6 at Bottom's Bridge, on the Chickahominy, where they remained until the expiration of their term of service. Those absent on detached duty were recalled, and on June 11 the remnant of the regiment took its departure for home, arriving in Madison on the 18th, being enthusiastically welcomed.

By order of the division commander, those who had joined the regiment at various times after its original organization were formed into an independent battalion of two companies under Capt. D. B. Dailey, and assigned to duty as provost guard of the Fourth Division, Fifth Army Corps. Crossing the James River, on the 16th of June, they took part in the battle before Petersburg. They participated in various unimportant engagements until November 30, when they were transferred, as Companies G, and H, to the Sixth Wisconsin, with which they were thereafter connected until mustered out. The names of those of the original Company G who were killed in battle, or died from the effects of wounds or disease, are as follows :

Bull Run, July 21, 1861 : Killed—Privates Henry R. Coffin, John Christie, John Nooman and William H. Williams.

Gainesville, August 28, 1862 : Killed—Sergt. John G. Kent ; Corps. Owen W. Davis and Gustav Leclair ; Privates Charles Bloom, William Dean, Edwin Jackson, John Lester, Randall McDonald, George W. Mack, Andrew F. Pardee, Walter C. Plumstead, Monroe L. Phillips, Orson Parker, John P. Schildgen, Guy Sherwood, James D. Snyder, and Trevyllian J. Staley.

Antietam, September 17, 1862 : Killed—Gustav Etterman.

Gettysburg, July 1, 1863 : Killed—Patrick Moloney and Hanford Tupper.

Died of wounds—Van R. Bentley and Theodore Fletcher.

Died of disease—C. B. Allen, Joseph Castley, J. Chapman, John Ford, Stephen McHugh, H. Ransaler, James T. Sines, J. H. Sharpe, Alonzo P. Tiffany.

Capt. Mansfield was made a Major in February, 1863. He is now Lieutenant Governor of California. Lieut. Hill was wounded at the first Bull Run, and also at Antietam ; was promoted to captaincy in March, 1863 ; discharged in July of the same year. Second Lieut. Vaughan resigned in September, 1861. Sergt. Dow was wounded in the neck at Gainesville, August 28, 1862 ; made a Second Lieutenant in September, 1862 ; promoted to First Lieutenant in March, 1863, and to a captaincy in August following. The Second Regiment was under fire the first time at Blackburn's Ford, July 18, 1861. Company G went into the battle of Gainesville (the second Bull Run) with 54 men and lost in killed and wounded 43—13 being killed outright.

Anson Linscott, now a resident of Portage, went out with Company G as a musician at the age of fifteen years, and afterward became drum major of the regiment. After the battle of Gainesville, young Linscott penned the following brief but graphic letter to his parents in Portage :

CAMP NEAR MUNSON HILL, Va., Sept. 3, 1862.

Dear Father and Mother: I thought I would write you a few lines about the awful battles we have had. We have been under heavy caannon and musket fire and in battles for the last two weeks. Our regiment is about all gone, killed and wounded. There are only about ten men left in our company. The last battle we fought was on the old Bull Run battle-field, where we were engaged more than a year ago. I will try and give you a list of the killed. *Archa was shot through the neck. I was in the rear of the regiment, with the ambulances, taking care of the wounded, and saw him fall, but we could not save him : he died in a few minutes. Poor brother, it is hard, but it is true. Snyder, Billy Dean, Staley, Kent, Owen Davis, Plumstead and some others fell dead, and a great many of our company are wounded. The regiment has about two hundred and fifty men left. I suppose they will put us in some place to stay awhile and recruit ; if they do, I will have a better chance to write to you. I have a poor chance now to write. We are marching and fighting all the time. I got out all safe, but I had many narrow escapes. All of our musicians had to go with the ambulances right up into the fight. I tell you, the bombshells and bullets whistled for miles around. Several shells hit close to me. Every time I could hear them coming I would drop flat on the grass. It was awful. Our regiment stood up and fought like tigers. Some New York troops threw down their arms and ran like sheep. Poor Archa was shot through the windpipe and lived only a few minutes. It is hard, father, but it cannot be helped. Archa took care of me when I was sick. There have been a great many men killed in these battles. I will write to you again in a few days and give you more particulars.

* Recovered and still living.

A Bryce

PORTAGE CITY.

ANSON LINSCOTT,

Drum Major Second Regiment Wisconsin Volunteers—what there is left of them.

Company D, Fourth Regiment.—This Company was recruited at Kilbourn City, and went into camp at Racine, June 6, 1861, with the following commissioned officers: Joseph Bailey, Captain; Walter S. Payn, First Lieutenant; Edwin R. Herren, Second Lieutenant. On the 15th of July they left for Baltimore; remained in Maryland acquiring discipline and drill until November 4, when they embarked on an expedition to the eastern shore of Virginia. The regiment returned to Baltimore and remained until February 19, 1862, when they embarked on transports to join the Army of the Gulf, arriving at Ship Island, Miss., on the 12th of March. The hardships of the voyage engendered much disease, and many of the soldiers found a grave in the sandy bosom of this ocean solitude. Were present at the bombardment and capture, by Porter and Farragut, of the forts in the Southwest Pass, and formed a part of the army of occupation. In May, they embarked in captured transports for an expedition which extended to Vicksburg, near which place they engaged some rebel cavalry. Upon the return, they occupied Baton Rouge, and in June again moved upon Vicksburg, taking part in the thirty-day siege which followed. On the 5th of August, they found themselves once more in Baton Rouge, defending the place against an attack by rebels under Breckinridge. The evacuation of Baton Rouge, becoming necessary, the Fourth Regiment reached Carrollton, near New Orleans, the latter part of the same month, remaining there until December, when they moved against Baton Rouge under Gen. Banks, and the New Year found them encamped in the suburbs of that city. Some very successful reconnaissances were made and one battle fought—Bayou Teche—during the succeeding four months. On the 22d of April, the Fourth was mounted and sent in pursuit of a battalion of Texas cavalry. May 7, the army occupied Alexandria, the Fourth being constantly engaged in expeditions, during one of which they captured “Dick” Taylor’s rear guard. On the 26th they reached Port Hudson, where, two days later, they led the advance in driving the enemy within his works, gaining a commanding position within 100 yards of his fortifications, which they held for six days before being relieved. In that fearful carnage the regiment lost 5 officers and 55 men killed and wounded. Returning to the siege, they led a charge against the works on the 14th of June, from which, out of 220 men, but 80 returned, having lost 12 killed, 75 wounded, and 53 missing, the latter having been taken prisoners inside the fort.

On the 25th of July the regiment returned to Baton Rouge, and in September, 1863, were completely equipped as cavalry. Thus mounted, they continued to do excellent service in repelling guerrilla raids and preventing rebel communication. The details of their daring exploits would make a good-sized volume. On the 2d of August, 1864, they were at San Antonio, Tex., and were the first Union troops to penetrate the territory west of that place, engaging in frequent expeditions against the Indians. In May, 1866, they encountered a party of Mexican marauders, near Brownsville, and killed 6 of them. The Fourth Regiment was mustered out of service on the 28th of May, 1866, and reached Madison on the 16th of June.

The following members of Company D were killed in action: Privates Michael Brown, Peter Beaumont, Frank Dawes, Horace Dike, F. C. Ferris, John Kerr, W. P. Stillick and C. W. Shaffer. Died of wounds: First Lieut. I. N. Earl, Sergt. G. M. Martin, Privates J. W. Baldwin, S. C. Grinnols and E. O. White. Died of disease: Second Lieut W. J. Duffield, Sergts. R. S. Chase and A. P. Niles, Corporals Milo Wood and W. McKinstry, Privates D. Brewster, J. W. Earl, D. W. Early, O. S. Foster, H. Garthwait, J. M. Jones, M. M. McCune, M. McCarthy, T. Meredith, M. Newell, C. S. Pickard, C. A. Rue, A. Stivers, G. W. Underwood, L. Weiss and S. W. S. West. Died of accidents: J. J. Geer, R. Lyons, W. Manes, J. H. Needham and G. Turner.

Capt. Bailey, in May, 1864, had reached the rank of Brigadier General, by promotion. The company, during its existence, had the following Captains, in the order as they appear: Joseph Bailey, E. R. Herron, G. C. Pierce and A. C. Ketchum. First Lieutenants: W. S. Payn, E. R. Herron, G. C. Pierce, I. N. Earl, A. C. Ketchum, A. Boynton and D. C. Freeland. Second Lieutenants: E. R. Herron, G. C. Pierce, I. N. Earl, W. J. Duffield, A. C. Ketchum, A. Boynton, D. C. Freeland and M. Skinner.

The Seventh Regiment.—Companies A and B, of the Seventh, were from Columbia County; the former from Lodi, and the latter from Portage, known as the Columbia County Cadets. Co. A was commanded by Capt. George Bill; with Hollon Richardson as First, and Richard Lindsay as Second, Lieutenant; Co. B, by Capt. James H. Huntington, with John Walton as First, and S. L. Bachelder as Second, Lieutenant. The Seventh regiment rendezvoused at Camp Randall in August, 1861, and mustered into service in September, leaving for Washington on the 21st of that month. They joined Gen. King's command in October, and thereafter, till mustered out, formed one important part of the "Iron Brigade," the history of which has been briefly related. The principal losses to A and B occurred at the two Bull Runs, South Mountain, the Wilderness, Gettysburg and Fredericksburg. The casualties sustained were as follows:

Company A.—Killed in action: First Lieut. James Holmes, Sergts. M. Shehan and L. Porter Holmes, Corps. M. Chase, I. H. Meed, A. T. McCalvey and R. Phillips, Privates J. M. Bartholemew, M. Burke, J. Brown, J. Clelland, William Collins, A. F. Douglass, O. B. Hobart, C. Hort, S. Johnson, W. Kurst, J. Kalb, A. Le Barr, C. E. Mills, J. Moor, S. Riopel, P. Rafferty, J. D. Sawyer, D. E. Steers, J. W. Sanderson and J. Zinger. Died of wounds: Sergt. Lewis Bascom, Corps. W. Hinton and H. M. Buck, Privates J. N. Charles, P. Clune, J. Carrow, G. W. Evans, J. Faith, W. F. Lasky, T. McCalvey, H. Pierce, T. H. Stilson, J. Simmers, and A. Van Walker. Died of disease: Corp. E. P. Sayre, Privates J. Agan, J. Bascom, F. H. Beauregard, H. Ball, W. P. Carter, B. Carter, O. N. Cole, P. Frazer, F. A. Fowler, A. Hall, E. M. Hicks, P. Lock, S. J. Osborne and A. Stone.

Company B.—Killed: Capt. George H. Brayton, Sergts. J. H. Miller and T. Helm, Corps. C. E. Plummer, O. H. Hulbert, W. Richardson and P. A. Batteau, Privates E. Bronson, S. Frost, B. F. Graham, C. Kippen, J. Lewis, W. Myers, J. H. Maxfield, L. Provost and E. Wheeler. Died of wounds: Sergt. M. C. Monroe, Corp. E. R. Hancock, Privates R. Cole, G. H. H. Hawes and S. Hatfield. Died of disease: Sergts. W. D. Acres and M. P. Bronson, Corp. J. A. Petts, Privates J. Brown, O. B. Cromwell, P. Carney, P. Caseney, A. Casson, D. Dustin, A. Frost, J. T. Hillicker, A. Miller, H. Newell and C. Wenel.

Capt. Bill and Lieut. Richardson, of Company A, and Lieut. Hobart, of Company B, were promoted to the rank of Major. Company A's Captains were: George Bill, H. Richardson, James Johnson and Oley Grasley. Company B's: J. H. Huntington, G. H. Boynton, M. C. Hobart and C. E. Weeks.

Company D, Tenth Regiment.—This company was formed in August, 1861, and was known as the Fremont Rifles. James L. Coffin was the Captain, Thomas L. Kennan, First Lieutenant, and George W. Marsh, Second Lieutenant. Joshua J. Guppy went out as Lieutenant Colonel of the Tenth, and was promoted to the colonelcy of the Twenty-third Regiment, July 25, 1862. The Tenth was mustered into service October 14, 1861, at Camp Hutton, Milwaukee, leaving that place under orders of November 9, for Kentucky, where it took its place in Colonel Sill's brigade, which was assigned to position on the right of the Third Division, under Gen. Mitchell. In February, 1862, they marched toward Bowling Green, which was evacuated by the rebels on their approach. March 19 found the regiment at Murfreesboro, acting as provost guard. The 5th of September brought them to Nashville, Tenn., after having captured Huntsville, Stevenson, Decatur and Tusculumbia. On the 8th of October, they met the enemy under Gen. Bragg, and took part in the battle of Chaplin Hills, where, out of 276 men they lost 36 killed, 110 wounded, and 1 missing. The next important engagement was at Chickamauga, where the Tenth was twice assigned the first line of battle. By an awkward movement on the second day of the battle, they ran directly into the lines of the enemy, who captured a large number of officers and men. During the two-days conflict the regiment, lost 18 killed, 56 wounded, and 132 prisoners, leaving 3 officers and 26 men. In February, 1864, this small handful of men led the advance against Tunnel Hill and Buzzard Roost, going into camp nine miles from Chattanooga, where they remained until May, about which time they took position in the army, under Gen. Sherman, then advancing toward Atlanta. With the Fourteenth Corps, they participated in the operations at Dallas, Kenesaw Mountain, and Peach Tree Creek. The recruits who had joined the regiment since its organization having been transferred to the Twenty-first Wisconsin, the Tenth Regiment, having completed its term of service, left for home, arriving in Milwaukee October 25, 1864.

The fatalities in Company D were: Killed in action—Sergt. C. Forsyth, Corp. James Dixon; Privates Irwin Clark, M. Conlon, A. Farnham, E. Hunt, H. C. Luther, H. Morey, A. H. Parmenter, J. Rosebaugh and G. W. Rouse. Died of wounds—Privates A. H. Bull, and A. Jones. Died of disease—Corps. A. Crouch and E. Sweet; Privates F. Beach, J. D. Bannister, C. Ellis, G. Hand, G. W. Moore, C. C. Merrill, P. Morties, M. M. Parmenter, O. M. Smoke and A. Wiltse.

The commissioned officers of the company from time to time were: Captains—James L. Coffin, Orestes B. Twogood and William A. Collins; First Lieutenants—Thomas L. Kennan, Charles H. Ford and August E. Patchin; Second—George W. Marsh, A. E. Patchin and Elisha P. Stowell.

Company H, Eleventh Regiment.—Organized in September, 1861, and accepted at Camp Randall, for service, October 18, with Alexander Christie as Captain; Eli H. Mix was First, and Isaac J. Wright was Second, Lieutenant. The Eleventh Regiment was attached to the Second Brigade, under Col. Hovey, in Gen. Steele's command, and under orders to proceed South, passed through Missouri into Arkansas. The first engagement of any note was at Bayou Cache, on the 7th of July, when Companies D, G, H and I held in check a vastly superior force of rebels until re-enforcements arrived. The Eleventh's losses were four killed and twenty wounded. They arrived at Helena on the 13th. In October, they returned to Pilot Knob, Mo., and remained in that State during the winter. On the 15th of March, 1863, they embarked at St. Genevieve for Memphis. From there they proceeded to Milliken's Bend, La., and took position in the Second Brigade, Fourteenth Division of the Thirteenth Army Corps. The 1st of April dawned upon the Eleventh Regiment leading the advance at Anderson Hill, near Port Gibson, Miss., where the rebels were driven back in confusion. May 15, the brigade took part in the battle of Champion Hills, and the next day cut off the retreat of the enemy at Black River Bridge, the Eleventh Regiment taking upward of 1,000 prisoners, with a regimental stand of colors. On the 19th they were in the trenches before Vicksburg, and participated in the terrible charge of the 22d. They were actively employed in the siege that followed, and were there when the place surrendered. Immediately after that event the Eleventh joined the expedition to Jackson, and took part in the "Second Teche Campaign," going as far as Opelousas. Returning over almost impassable roads, they embarked at Algiers on the 19th of November for Brazos Santiago, Tex. There they received orders to re-enforce Gen. Banks at Aransas Pass, and afterward to proceed to Fort Esperanza, where they arrived too late to assist Gen. Washburn in reducing the enemy at that place. Three-fourths of the regiment having re-enlisted, they were relieved from duty on the 11th of February, and mustered in as veterans on the 13th. The non-veterans were temporarily transferred to Col. Guppy's regiment (the Thirty-third). The re-enlisted portion reached Madison March 21, and were received in splendid style by the State authorities and citizens. They again left the State on the 25th of April, and proceeded to Memphis. They afterward participated in the various expeditions in Northern Mississippi and Alabama, doing good service for which they were highly commended by the commanding officers. The regiment was mustered out in Mobile September 4, 1865, and reached home on the 18th.

Following are the death losses of Company H: Killed in action—Sergts. A. C. Bacon and C. Brunaller, and Private F. M. Hartson. Died of wounds—Sergt. W. H. Jacobus:

Corps. B. P. Benson, W. N. Tay, J. Hubanks, and Privates R. Bacon, W. Kent, W. H. Powderly and O. S. Robinson. Died of disease—First Lieut. C. A. Johnson; Serjts. George Parsons and Rufus C. Phillips; Corp. D. I. Washburn; Privates E. Ackerman, S. Almy, H. Almy, E. W. Bidwell, A. Colborn, W. A. Delap, G. W. Faith, John Faith, R. Hornby, J. E. Jones, F. Langdon, A. C. Miller, W. Mather, W. McElroy, W. P. Newman, D. H. Olmstead, H. Porter, G. Richardson, P. Richardson, H. Sheldon, R. G. Sawyer, O. Washburn and E. C. Wheelock.

The regiment suffered a death loss of 348—262 of whom died of disease. Captain Christie resigned January, 1864, and was succeeded by Lieut. James O'Neal.

Company D, Nineteenth Regiment.—Recruited in December, 1861, with Samuel K. Vaughan as Captain, William H. Spain as First Lieutenant, and Edward O. Emmerson as Second Lieutenant. They were mustered into service April 30, 1862, and left for the Potomac on the 2d of June. Going to Norfolk, Va., soon afterward, they remained there until April, 1863, and thereafter did outpost and picket duty in Virginia and North Carolina. They were engaged for the first time at Newbern, N. C., on the 1st of February, 1864. On the 12th of May, a portion of the regiment, including Company D, participated in the movement upon Fort Darling, and on the 16th, in attempting to dislodge a party of rebel skirmishers, lost twenty-five men killed and wounded. In June, they accompanied the advance of Gen. Grant's army upon Petersburg, and participated in the celebrated assault upon the enemy's works. In August, the re-enlisted men of the regiment, 250 in number, received veteran furloughs, and reached Madison on the 22d of that month, returning in October, and proceeding at once to the trenches before Richmond. On the 21st of October, they took part in the battle of Fair Oaks, leaving on the field seven officers and 136 enlisted men, most of whom were wounded and captured. The regiment returned to Camp Chapin, before Richmond, with eighty men, where they were joined by the non-veteran portion, who had been on duty at Norfolk. On the 3d of April, 1865, they were ordered to assault the enemy's works, and, meeting with but little opposition, marched into the city and planted the regimental colors upon the city hall. Their subsequent movements were unimportant, save that which brought them home. They were mustered out of service on the 9th of August, in the rebel capital, and reached Madison on the 15th.

The fatalities in Company D were: Killed in action. Corps. Sylvester Richmond and Albert Waldref; Privates C. Allen, B. Sherwin and N. Shandt. Died of disease—Corp. B. S. Daniels; Privates W. Alverson, J. Congor, G. Dey, C. Gilson, D. Hall, A. Kline, J. Lord, P. Redmond and G. R. Smith.

Capt. Vaughan, through various promotions, was Colonel of the regiment when mustered out, Lieut. Spain succeeding him as Captain.

Twenty-third Regiment, Companies C, G and H.—Fully one-third of this regiment went from Columbia County. Company C was organized in Portage, with Edgar P. Hill as Captain; Oliver H. Sorrenson, First Lieutenant, and John Shoemaker, Second Lieutenant. Company G was from Columbus, James F. Hazelton, Captain; Chester W. Tuttle, First Lieutenant, and William H. Dunham, Second Lieutenant. Company H was from Lodi, with E. Howard Irwin as Captain; D. Cyrus Holdridge, First Lieutenant, and Robert Steele, Second Lieutenant. J. J. Guppy, promoted from the Tenth, was Colonel of the Twenty-third during its entire service. He was wounded and taken prisoner at Carrion Crow Bayou, La., November 3, 1863, and exchanged in December, 1864. Captain Hill, of Company C, became Lieutenant Colonel of the regiment in August, 1863.

The regimental organization was perfected at Camp Randall, under the superintendence of Col. Guppy, and left for active service September 15, 1862, under orders to proceed to Cincinnati, then menaced by Kirby Smith's forces. Passing through Cincinnati, they crossed into Kentucky, and were assigned to position in Gen. Green Clay Smith's Division. After marching through various parts of the Blue Grass State, they proceeded to Memphis, Tenn., by water, arriving on the 27th of November. The regiment was there assigned to the First Brigade, Tenth Division, and at once took position in the army destined for the reduction of Vicksburg. Their first engagement of any note occurred at Fort Hindman, on the Arkansas River, January 11, 1863. While moving forward, the Twenty-third was assailed by an unexpected enfilading fire from the enemy's rifle-pits. Companies B, G and K were thrown out as skirmishers, the remaining companies attacking the rifle-pits. The conflict continued with great fury for three hours, when the rebels, anticipating the charge which had been ordered, raised the white flag and surrendered unconditionally. The regiment received many congratulations for their conduct from the division and brigade commanders. Their loss was 4 killed and 34 wounded. The regiment then returned to Young's Point, near Vicksburg, but the malaria of the Yazoo swamps came near accomplishing what the rebels had failed to do, and of 700 men in line of battle, three-fourths were under the surgeon's care. The health of the regiment improving, their next active work was at Cypress Bend, Ark., on the 18th of February, when a body of rebels were driven through the native swamp, some prisoners and munitions of war being taken. March 30 found them on the battle-field at Fort Gibson, Miss., and on the 2d of May, were the first to enter that village. On the 15th, the line of march was resumed, and the 16th witnessed the battle of Champion Hills, in which the Twenty-third participated with such ardor and effect as to receive the congratulations of the commanding General. The next day, they pushed forward to Black River Bridge, capturing the Sixtieth Tennessee, with its colors. The 18th brought them to within three miles of Vicksburg, and on the 22d they took part in the general assault on the enemy's works, pushing forward to the base of one of the forts. At the close of the siege that followed, the Twenty-third numbered but 150 men for duty. August 24, they proceeded south, in transports, to Algiers, opposite New Orleans. After an extended expedition through Mississippi, the brigade was attacked, at Carrion Crow Bayou, on the 3d of November, by a vastly superior force. The Twenty-third stood firm, doing effective work, until flanked on both sides, when the order was given to fall back. This movement was executed without panic, and upon the arrival of re-enforcements, they again advanced in line, forcing the enemy back and gaining possession of the field. The regiment, at the beginning of the action, numbered 220 officers and men, of whom 128 were killed, wounded or taken prisoners, the latter including Col. Guppy and Capt. Sorrenson, who were severely wounded. The regiment thereafter engaged in the Texas and Red River expedition. On the 8th of April, 1864, occurred the battle of Sabine Cross Roads, in which the Twenty-third lost 7 killed, 14 wounded and 43 prisoners. The last general engagement in which they participated was at Mobile, Ala. In the mean time, they had performed some wonderful marches and engaged in numerous skirmishes. They were mustered out of service July 4, 1865, reached Madison on the 16th, and were disbanded on the 24th.

The losses of the three companies from Columbia County, were: Killed—Sergt. J. A. Lewis and Private Martin Cook, Company C; Corp. J. G. Jones, Privates N. Dedish and J. Williams, Company G; Privates John Bates, C. L. Brown and J. D. Stroud, Company H. Died of wounds—Corp. L. Cobb, Company C; Privates M. L. Johnson and C. E. Quinn, Company G; Sergt. W. T. Shurtliff, Corp. J. F. Stahl, Privates E. Brownfield and J. W. Shaw, Company H. Died of disease: Company C—Sergts. T. E. Halsey, S. E. Van Zandt and J. Dempsey, Corp. P. Glasgow, Privates R. Anderson, G. W. Becker, J. Crosley, J. L. Edgerton, W. Eastman, J. F. Fitts, C. B. Flower, J. W. Hosford, J. Hewett, Jr., W. E. Jones, N. Morrison, S. D. Northrup, G. G. Parmenter, J. H. Pulver, W. M. Roberts, F. Rosecrans, J. Smith, C. Townley, N. D. Wilson and J. D. Williams. Company G—Sergt. E. E. Eason, Corps. J. Kelley, J. M. Moore, and E. Parry, Privates E. Bentley, F. S. Cowes, A. E. Fuller, W. H. Grindall, L. Kehler, F. F. Keifer, N. H. Nickerson, F. Nelson, L. Plumb, Q. A. Page (drowned), M. Rogers, S. Trask, R. R. Williams, D. C. Warner and W. J. Whiting. Company H—Sergt. C. F. Stacker, Privates T. Bunker, T. J. Dowden, A. F. Duel, O. Ellingson, F. A. G. Eaton, O. E. Holcomb, J. Harmley, W. J. Jones, G. W. Kingsley, J. Kenworthy, L. Oleson (accidentally killed), J. Petit, W. H. H. Rood, W. Ring, E. C. Riddle, G. H. Varrinder and L. C. Warriner. The total deaths in the regiment were 287, of whom 249 died of disease.

Companies A and E, Twenty-ninth Regiment.—Company A was composed almost entirely of citizens of Columbia County. Bradford Hancock, who, in April, 1865, became Colonel of the regiment, was its first Captain, being succeeded by Lieut. O. F. Mattice, in April, 1863. Capt. Mattice was succeeded, upon his death in June, 1864, by Lieut. O. D. Ray, promoted from the ranks. Company E recruited along the border between Dodge and Columbia Counties. Its Captains were Hezekiah Dunham, Darius J. Wells and Joshua A. Stark, the two latter by promotion from lieutenantcies.

The Twenty-ninth was mustered into service at Camp Randall September 27, 1862, and left to join the army in the Southwest November 2, arriving opposite Helena, Ark., on the 7th. Their first active duty was the routing of guerrilla bands in that vicinity. During February, 1863, they made an expedition to the Yazoo country, returning to Helena March 1. The regiment was soon afterward assigned position in the Thirteenth Army Corps. Their first battle was at Port Gibson. In this connection the brigade commander said of them: "I cannot refrain from special mention of the Twenty-ninth Wisconsin. It is a new regiment, but they fought like veterans, suffering severely, as their list of casualties will show." Their loss was 75 killed and wounded. They marched through the village the day after the battle, and, on the 15th of May, while going in the direction of Vicksburg, fell in with the enemy near Balton. On the 16th, the battle of Champion Hills was fought, the Twenty-ninth making one of the most brilliant bayonet charges on record, capturing over 300 prisoners, a stand of colors, and a brass battery. Their loss was 19 killed and 95 wounded. Six days later, they were before Vicksburg, engaged in the general assault upon the enemy's works, and during the remainder of the celebrated siege were employed in the rifle-pits before the rebel stronghold, losing 6 men killed and wounded. When Vicksburg surrendered they took part in the siege of Jackson, losing 5 men killed and wounded, returning to Vicksburg July 22. November 3 found them supporting a Missouri battery at the battle of Carrion Crow Bayou. January 5, 1864, they embarked at Algiers to take part in the Texas expedition, returning to New Orleans February 23. On the 8th of April, they took part in the battle at Sabine Cross Roads, and out of 183 men engaged 63 were reported killed, wounded and missing. After aiding in the construction of the famous Red River dam, they took part in the battle of Simmsport on the 18th of May. The remainder of their service was devoted to those worse forms of warfare, forced marches and guard and picket duty, concluding with the battle of Mobile, at which place 2 members of the regiment were killed by the explosion of a magazine. The Twenty-ninth was mustered out of service June 22, 1865, and reached Madison July 5, receiving their pay and being disbanded on the 17th.

The death losses in Company A were: Killed in action—Corp. C. F. Matthews; Privates N. H. Carter, R. Coughlan, J. King and W. Peschock. Died of wounds—Sergt. L. E. Robbins; Privates C. B. Andrews, J. S. Bridges and W. J. Blecker. Died of disease—Capt. Oscar F. Mattice; Privates John Agnew, G. Balcom, N. Butler, J. Cruger, T. Draugerson, G. K. Gaskins, F. D. Griffin, L. B. Gregg, C. B. Lintner, T. Levere, J. Nelson, W. H. Parks, F. Smith, J. Spooner, H. Thompson, A. Wilsey, W. Wetmore, L. Yerges.

Company E: Killed in action—Sergts. D. S. Ketchum and G. W. Alexander; Privates J. Jackson and A. Sawistaskie. Died of wounds—Privates R. D. Fendon, A. J. Floyd, C. Grosse, W. R. Herrick, G. Hugget, H. J. Spring and G. Van Arnum. Died of disease—Corps. J. W. Bennett, N. Powers and R. Seckerson; Privates C. Bryant, S. Barrett, N. Carlisle, H. H. Evans, W. Follet, A. D. Gary, S. Mead, S. B. Oliver, J. O'Riley, G. Ragow, B. W. Wilbur and P. Derivan (suicide.) The total deaths in the regiment were 296, all but 86 of this number dying of disease.

Company K, Thirty-second Regiment.—Recruited in August, 1862, and mustered into service September 25, 1862, at Camp Bragg, Oshkosh, with John E. Grant as Captain, Lewis Low, First Lieutenant, and John Walton as Second Lieutenant. The regiment joined Gen. Sherman's command at Memphis, Tenn., on the 3d of November, taking a place in the army that advanced toward Jackson, Miss., on the 26th of the same month. The surrender of Holly Springs having caused an abandonment of the movement southward, the Thirty-second was the first to enter the town after its capture. Returning by way of Jackson, Tenn., they arrived at Memphis toward the latter part of January, 1863, where they remained until the following November. Moscow being threatened by Gen. Lee, the Second Brigade, to which the Thirty-second belonged, arrived just in time to repulse the attack. They subsequently moved to Vicksburg, where they joined Sherman's Meridian expedition, marching over two hundred miles into rebeldom, and returning to Vicksburg March 4, 1864. From there they went to Cairo, Ill.; thence into Tennessee and Alabama, arriving at Decatur on the 10th of April, where they were employed in guard duty and building fortifications with the Third Brigade, to which they had been transferred. While stationed at Decatur, they made three effective reconnaissances, returning each time with rebel prisoners and other worthless trophies. On one occasion, they met a largely superior force, and lost eight men, who were taken prisoners. On the 7th of August, they joined the Union forces in front of Atlanta, where they remained in the trenches until the 26th. On that day, they accompanied the Army of the Tennessee in its movement to the right, and when twenty-two miles from Atlanta, were attacked by the rebels. In the two-days engagement that followed, they lost six killed, fifteen prisoners and six wounded. Re-joining Sherman's forces, they set out on the march to Savannah, November 15, encountering the rebels on several occasions, and putting them to flight quite as often. On the 3d of January, 1865, they embarked at Savannah for Beaufort, S. C., arriving there on the 5th. On the 1st of February, they encountered the enemy at Rivers' Bridge on the Salkehatchie. On the 3d, after a hard day's fight, the enemy having retreated, the regiment moved into his abandoned works, having worked from six in the morning until four in the afternoon, in water from one to four feet deep, sustaining a loss during the day of eight killed and forty-three wounded. On the 9th, they again came upon the rebel hosts, strongly fortified, on the South Edisto River. The stream being crossed by means of pontoons, the enemy's works were carried by assault at 9 o'clock in the evening. In this gallant affair, the regiment lost one killed and five wounded. Similar encounters with the rebels were experienced until the 21st of March, when they came upon the enemy in full force near Bentonville. Charging through a swamp, two miles wide, they captured his works, driving him from the field in confusion. The Thirty-second held the captured ground until all support had fallen back, when they received orders to withdraw. In this action they sustained a loss of two killed, twenty-three wounded and two missing. On the 14th of April, they arrived at Raleigh, N. C., and reached Richmond, Va., May 9. On the 24th of that month, they took part in the grand review of troops at Washington, and were mustered out June 12, 1865.

Company K's losses were: Killed in action—Privates J. Bissett, S. Taunt and A. White. Died of wounds—Privates M. Gunderson and D. Mason. Died of disease—Corp. J. Hunting, Jr., Privates T. C. Babcock, A. Baker, I. Bissett, J. Carman, R. F. Davis, C. Eichele, C. Esterbrook, B. J. Fromdol, T. Gillson, N. W. Hunting, E. W. Morgan, A. Oleson, D. Prevot, A. Simmonson, P. Thompson, E. E. Warner, A. W. Wright, I. N. Watson, A. Whitehead and S. Dumbleton (drowned). There were 274 deaths in the regiment, 243 being from natural causes.

Companies C and E, Forty-second Regiment.—These companies recruited in the summer and fall of 1864, only a portion of the latter being raised in Columbia County. They were mustered in at Camp Randall, as a part of the Forty-second Regiment, on the 7th of September. George McHumphrey was Captain; Robert Steele, First Lieutenant, and Cassius M. Bush, Second Lieutenant of Company C. Augustus Haight, B. M. Low and Joseph Curtis held corresponding positions in Company E. They reached Cairo, Ill., under orders, on the 22d of September, where they were employed in post and garrison duty. On the 25th of October, Companies B, E, G, H and K were ordered to Springfield, Ill., where they remained until April, 1865, returning to Cairo. In June following, they were mustered out of the service, reaching Madison on the 20th of that month, without having participated in any engagements. Nearly all their death losses were from disease, Company C losing two men

—U. S. West and Henry Koch, the latter having been drowned at Cairo. Company E did not fare so well. Its losses were as follows: Privates L. W. Benson, C. Cherwick, J. B. Howlett, B. Hampton, I. M. Lewis, W. Moore, I. Outland, H. Smith, F. A. Saddoris and R. H. Baker. The latter was drowned at Paducah, Ky.

Company D, Forty-sixth Regiment.—Recruited in the two first months in 1865, and mustered out on the 27th of September of the same year. Company D's officers were: John E. Grout (promoted from Second Lieutenant), Captain; Gilson Hinton, First Lieutenant. The regiment left Camp Randall on the 5th of March, under orders to report at Louisville, Ky., arriving on the 10th, and proceeding, the following day, to Athens, Ala., on the Nashville & Decatur Railroad, along which they were stationed at various points. In September, they proceeded to Nashville, Tenn., and were mustered out as above stated, arriving in Madison October 2. During their service, three of the members of Company D—Corp. C. P. Henton, and Privates W. A. Brown and T. O'Connor—died of disease.

Cavalry—Company E, Second Regiment.—This company was known as Columbia County Cavalry. It recruited in the fall of 1861, and was accepted for service at various dates between December 3, 1861, and March 12, 1862. The commissioned officers of Company E were: George N. Richmond, Captain; Wallace Smith, First Lieutenant, and Joseph T. Dean, Second Lieutenant. Captain Richmond, in April, 1863, was promoted Major of the Third Battalion—C. W. Beach, who had in the mean time succeeded Lieut. Smith, becoming Captain. Stephen Woodward was Captain when the company was mustered out, in November, 1865.

The regiment left Camp Washburn, Milwaukee, March 24, 1862. Proceeding to Benton Barracks, near St. Louis, they were thoroughly equipped. Marching south through Missouri, they joined Gen. Curtis' forces at Augusta, Ark., June 14, and a month later arrived at Helena. Here they remained until the latter part of January, 1863, when they moved up the Mississippi to Memphis. In June, they proceeded south and took part in the operations against Vicksburg. Upon the surrender of that place, they joined Gen. Sherman's Jackson (Miss.) expedition, returning to Redbone Church, near Vicksburg, soon afterward. Here the second and third battalions remained until April 1864, when they moved to Vicksburg. The first battalion, comprising Companies A, D, G and K, during all this time, had been on duty in Missouri. In September, 1864, they joined the main body of the regiment at Vicksburg, where they continued to remain until November 23, when they joined an expedition into Mississippi, during which they destroyed large quantities of rebel property, and, on the 1st of December, engaged the enemy near Yazoo City, in considerable force. A brisk encounter followed, in which the Second lost five killed, nine wounded, and twenty-five missing. The return to Vicksburg was made by the fifth, and, after three days' stay, they embarked for Memphis. On the 25th, they joined an expedition under Gen. Grierson, and marching in a southeasterly direction, destroying rebel stores, railroads and bridges, engaged and defeated the enemy on the 28th, at Egypt Station, capturing a large number of prisoners. After marching over four hundred miles, the expedition arrived at Vicksburg on the 5th of January, 1865. January 13, they again embarked for Memphis, and, on the 26th, descended the Mississippi to Gaines' Landing, Ark., returning to Memphis February 17.

In March, a short expedition was made into Mississippi, and, on the 9th of May, 330 men of the Second set out from Memphis for Grenada, Miss., arriving there on the 14th. The regiment came together again at Alexandria, La., July 6. Here they were assigned to the Second Brigade, Second Cavalry Division, Military Division of the Gulf. Leaving Alexandria on the 8th of August, they arrived at Hempstead, Tex., 310 miles distant, on the 26th. From there they went to Austin, Tex., where they were mustered out November 15, 1865.

The casualties to Company E during their service were: Killed in action—Private Will Payne; died of disease—Sergt. M. Z. Riblett; Corp. E. H. Moore; Privates W. Atkinson, J. Chandler, J. Cook, J. Carr, T. Day, E. Evans, T. Ferguson, C. C. Fuller, J. Ferguson, E. W. Hale, C. C. Heath, E. Herriman, W. H. Lee, H. Mills, R. Murray, J. McCarroll, E.

Mathewson, W. Parker, G. W. Ross, W. Stollman, W. Sholes, R. Singleton, L. Taylor and R. Whiting. Total deaths in the regiment 293, 265 being from natural causes.

Company F, First Heavy Artillery.—Organized in Portage, in September, 1864, with Erastus Cook as Captain; Herman Fenner, Senior First Lieutenant; Asa P. Peck, Junior First Lieutenant; Jared S. W. Pardee, Senior Second Lieutenant, and Thomas Graham, Junior Second Lieutenant. The company left Camp Randall on the 3d of October, 1864, and was assigned to duty in the defenses of Washington, as part of the Fourth Brigade, De Russey's Division of the Twenty-second Army Corps, where it remained until June 26, 1865, being mustered out of service at that date. It is the only company of troops going from Columbia County which returned without loss of life.

The Draft.—The first official steps taken in Columbia County toward conscription occurred in May, 1863. For many months previous, rumors of an impending draft had been rife; the local press teemed with appeals to the loyal citizens to volunteer their services in defense of the Union in sufficient numbers to remove the necessity for such an alternative. And although they responded with alacrity, and notwithstanding the fact that the county's representation in the army was equal to any other section of the State, in proportion to population, the inevitable finally came. In June, Provost Marshal S. J. M. Putnam, of Janesville, under orders, appointed the following enrolling officers to take the names of those liable to military duty in Columbia County: Perry G. Stroud, Newport; E. F. Lewis, Lewiston; J. B. Wood, Fort Winnebago; Hiram Albee, Marcellon; David H. Langdon, Scott; John M. Bay, Randolph; Jeremiah Williams, Courtland; John R. Rowlands, Springvale; Henry Converse, Wyocena; Wells M. Butler, Portage and Pacific; J. C. Mohr, Caledonia; Jacob Cosad, Dekorra, Jesse F. Hand, Lowville; E. W. McNett, Otsego; E. T. Kerney, Fountain Prairie; G. W. Campbell, Columbus; William K. Custer, Hampden; Ammond Christophers, Leeds; A. G. Dunning, Arlington; Thomas Yule, Lodi; Cyrus Hill, West Point.

Toward the latter part of July, the enrolling officers having completed their work, it was shown that the number of persons in Columbia County liable to military duty, was 2,045 of the first class, and 1,609 of the second. Under the President's call for 300,000 men in 1863, the quota to be filled in the county was about two hundred and seventy. In this connection, the following table, compiled by Adj. Gen. Gaylord, showing the quotas of towns in Columbia County, under the calls for volunteers made in 1861-62, will be interesting:

Towns.	Quota.	Vols.	Towns.	Quota.	Vols.
Arlington	53	53	Lowville	54	78
Caledonia	40	34	Marcellon	43	49
Columbus	134	166	Newport	59	66
Courtland	63	58	Otsego	57	48
Dekorra	67	90	Pacific	10	17
Fort Winnebago	32	33	Portage	171	242
Fountain Prairie	54	93	Randolph	67	77
Hampden	50	47	Scott	47	38
Leeds	59	36	Springvale	41	34
Lewiston	42	42	West Point	52	68
Lodi	83	142	Wyocena	64	86
Total				1342	1599

After the first enrollment, three persons enlisted—one each from the towns of Columbus, Marcellon and Randolph—making the total number of volunteers from the county up to August 20, 1863, 1,602, or 260 in excess of the quotas under the calls of 1861-62.

Notice of the draft of 1863, under the President's call for 300,000 men, given by S. J. M. Putnam, Captain and Provost Marshal for the Second District, was dated Janesville, November 11, 1863. Accompanying the notification, was a statement of the number to be drafted in each of the towns of Columbia County, with "the 50 per cent added," as follows: West Point, 12; Lodi, 20; Arlington, 13; Leeds, 14; Hampden, 16; Columbus, 32; Fountain Prairie, 11; Otsego, 14; Lowville, 14; Dekorra, 21; Caledonia, 12; Portage and Pacific, 46; Wyo-cena, 11; Springvale, 15; Courtland, 23; Randolph, 17; Scott, 13; Marcellon, 12; Fort Winnebago, 8; Lewiston, 11; Newport, 18. Total, 353. The excess of 260 on the quotas under the 1861-62 calls being deducted, there remained but 93 to be supplied under the call of January, 1863.

Under the calls of the President for 500,000 and 200,000, the quota in the latter call not having been filled, Columbia County's quota in April, 1864, stood as follows: Total number of men to be furnished, 871; total credits since date of first call, 731, leaving a deficit of 140 men.

On the 18th of July, another call was issued for 500,000 more, and after a deal of figuring among those interested in the prospective drawing, it was discovered that Columbia County's quota of men to be furnished was 806. This included the deficiency under previous calls, amounting to ninety-eight men in the county at large. Numerous credits subsequently made a deduction of almost one-third in this number. But the inevitable came at last, and the 21st of September was an interesting day to those whose names went into the box at Janesville. The quota of Portage was eighty-six. Prominent among those who drew prizes were E. C. Maine, D. G. Muir, H. O. Lewis, V. Helmann, William Armstrong, J. P. McGregor, F. H. Ellsworth, W. W. Corning, Ll. Breese, John T. Clark, James Collins, Carl Haertel, A. J. Turner, Alva Stewart, Israel Holmes and many others. Most of those mentioned belonged to the "Draft Insurance Club," and were entitled to draw $380 each from a citizens' fund to pay substitutes. Supplemental drafts soon followed in a few of the towns in the county.

Another call for 300,000 volunteers having been made on the 19th of December, 1864, it was ascertained that Columbia County's quota would amount to about 540 men, according to the number of votes polled at the last preceding election, but it afterward transpired that the actual number to be raised was 423, including all deficiencies and deducting all credits. The quota of Portage by wards was fifty-one. There was some lively volunteering about this time, under the patriotic influence of nearly $500 bounty, $200 wages for a year, with board and clothes, and very little prospect for a fight.

A draft took place in the towns of Marcellon and Lewiston on the 27th of February, 1865, but by the time the drawing was announced, nearly every man in those towns liable to be drafted had enlisted.

Following is a statement of the bounty money raised in the various towns mentioned:

Arlington.....	$17,453 00	Lodi.....	$23,000 00
Courtland.....	25,576 00	Newport.....	14,300 00
Columbus.....	30,204 89	Otsego.....	18,384 00
Caledonia.....	10,912 90	Pacific.....	1,595 00
Dekorrra.....	13,304 00	Randolph.....	17,160 00
Fort Winnebago.....	7,182 00	Scott.....	11,430 00
Fountain Prairie.....	15,200 00	Springvale.....	18,303 00
Hampden.....	14,638 00	West Point.....	10,814 11
Leeds.....	18,712 35	Wyo-cena.....	6,500 00

Certain historical events occurring in the spring and summer of 1865, made further drafts unnecessary. The Union had been preserved. Old veterans and new volunteers returned to their homes. Peace reigned again. Above the smoke of battles well-fought, floated the starry emblem of liberty, humanity and equality. A million lives had been sacrificed beneath its folds, but it still waved aloft, brighter and more brilliant, bathed in the life-fluid of patriots dead.

" But what shall be the fate of those Who designed that sea of blood?
It cannot be that they shall die
To grace the throne of God!"

The Roll of Honor.—Following is a list of the names of soldiers occupying patriots' graves in Columbia County: Silver Lake Cemetery, Portage—Col. S. K. Vaughan, Company D, Nineteenth Regiment; Herman W. Kind, Company C, Twenty-third Regiment; Corp.

John A. Harmon, Company A, Twenty-fifth Regiment; Henry Junge, Second Cavalry; Andrew J. McFarlane, Company K, Thirty-third Regiment; Melvin Merrill, Company G, Twentieth Regiment; William F. Ward, Company C, Twenty-third Regiment; John Crosby, Jr., Company C, Twenty-third Regiment; Martin Bellinghauser, Company D, Nineteenth Regiment; Judson A. Lewis, Company C, Twenty-third Regiment; George Parmenter, Company C, Twenty-third Regiment; Walter Plumstead, Company G, Second Regiment; Francis H. Snow, Company K, Third Cavalry; Capt. Erastus Cook, Battery F, First Artillery; Col. Frank A. Haskell, Thirty-sixth Regiment.

Columbus—Dr. Charles C. Axtel; Sabins J. Bennett; Sergt. Benjamin Campbell, Sixth Regiment, died of disease; Bissell Carter, Company A, Seventh Regiment, died of disease; Walter P. Carter, Company A, Seventh Regiment, died in Andersonville; Francis Foulter, Company A, Seventh Regiment, died in Andersonville; Alfred Fuller; Walter Houton, Company A, Seventh Regiment, died of wounds; Sergt. L. P. Holmes, Company A, Seventh Regiment, killed at the battle of the Wilderness; Lieut. James Holmes, Company A, Seventh Regiment, killed at the battle of the Wilderness; A. T. Hopkins; W. H. Horton; Dr. James; William Kurst, Company A, Seventh Regiment, killed at the battle of the Wilderness; Uri F. Laskey, Company A, Seventh Regiment, killed at Gainesville; Albert McCalvey, Company A, Seventh Regiment, killed at Petersburg; Charles E. Mills, Company A, Seventh Regiment, killed at Gainesville; Edwin E. Polly, Company A, Seventh Regiment, killed at Cedar Mountain; William Richards, Third Regiment, killed at Five Forks; Seymour A. Sawyer, Company B, Forty-first Wisconsin Regiment; Jacob D. Sawyer, Company A, Seventh Regiment, killed at Antietam; Eli P. Sawyer, Company A, Seventh Regiment, died of disease; E. Silsbee; M. Silsbee; Asher M. Starkweather, Company D, Fortieth Wisconsin Regiment; Stutson; C. Tuttle; Allen Vanwalker, Company A, Seventh Regiment, died of wounds; Milo Waterhouse, Company A, Seventh Regiment, killed at Antietam; Warren J. Wheeling.

Fall River—George Adams, Company I, Eighteenth Regiment, killed at Pittsburg Landing; Israel Bissett, Thirty-second Regiment, killed in action; Joseph Bissett, Thirty-second Regiment, died; John Bissett, Company B, Thirty-second Regiment, killed at the battle of the Wilderness; Capt. George H. Brayton, Company B, Seventh Regiment, killed at the battle of Gainesville; Eli Bronsen, Company B, Seventh Regiment, killed at Antietam; Lorin Bronsen, Company I, Eighteenth Regiment, killed at Pittsburg Landing; Manly Bronson, Company B, Seventh Regiment, killed at Belle Plain; George Brossard, Eleventh Regiment, died; Alpheus Cassen, Company B, Seventh Regiment, died at Madison; Nathan Chase, died at Cumberland Gap, Tenn.; Jerome Comar, Thirty-second Regiment, died; George C. Farrand, Fifty-first Regiment; Brainard Graves, Company B, Seventh Regiment, died; Aldro A. Grant, Company B, Seventh Regiment, died; Edwin Hancock, Company B, Seventh Regiment, killed at South Mountain; Perry Henton, Forty-first Regiment, died; A. D. Hicks, Company C, Fifty-first Regiment, died at Milwaukee; James O. Hellaker, died in Andersonville Prison; Wright Hunburg, Thirty-second Regiment, died of disease; Jabey Hunburg, Thirty-second Regiment, died of wounds; Rufus Kendall, Government employe, killed by bushwhackers; Charles Machen, Thirty-second Regiment, returned at close of war and was killed in a flouring-mill at Beaver Dam; Augustus Martin, Third Cavalry, killed by bushwhackers; Charles Plummer, Company B, Seventh Regiment, killed at Gainesville, Va.; Dennis Prevot, Company B, Seventh Regiment, killed by bushwhackers; Lewis Prevot, Company B, Thirty-second Regiment, died at Oshkosh; William Rumsey, a patriot of Florida and Mexican wars; Felix Sainlong, Government employe, killed by bushwhackers; Benjamin Schaeffer, Company I, Eighteenth Regiment, killed at Pittsburg Landing; Charles Sickles, died in hospital; Frank Smith, died at Sulphur Springs; Francis A. Smith, Forty-ninth Regiment, died since discharged; Seth Thurber, killed by bushwhackers; Seneca Warner, a patriot of the war of 1812; Newton Watson, Thirty-second Regiment, died; John Wood, Company I, Eighteenth Regiment, died after he was discharged; Joseph Zeeman, Company B, Seventh Regiment, died of disease contracted in the army.

Wyocena—Bull Alansen, Company D, Tenth Regiment, killed at Perryville; Volney Carpenter, Company C, Nineteenth Regiment, killed at the battle of the Wilderness; Henry Coffin, killed at the first battle of Bull Run; Michael Conlon, Company —, Tenth Regiment, killed at Stone River; Girard Dey, Thirty-second Regiment, died on the Potomac; James Dixon, Company D, Tenth Regiment, killed at Perryville; John Grover, Company G, Twenty-fifth Regiment, killed at Kenesaw Mountain, the only man wounded in Company G, and he had nine bullets in him; George Hand, Company D, Tenth Regiment, died at Andersonville; Alonzo Jones, Company D, Tenth Regiment, buried at Wyocena; Hobart Parmenter, Company D, Tenth Regiment, shot at Perryville; Marcus Parmenter, Company D, Tenth Regiment, died in Nashville; Alexander Wilsey, Company D, Tenth Regiment, died in Nashville; Harlon Wiltham, Company D, Tenth Regiment, killed at Chickamauga.

Scraps of War History.—It would be almost impossible to generalize, so far as local history is concerned, in a description or statement of occurrences during the war. Of course, there was intense excitement following the news that Fort Sumter had been assaulted. Citizens of all classes, no matter what may have been their sympathies, were deeply interested throughout the momentous struggle that culminated with the fall of Richmond and the capture of the traitor President of the Southern Confederacy. We herewith present a compilation of local events, chronologically arranged, pertaining to a history of the "war at home:"

1861, March—S. E. Dana, of Portage, appointed Colonel, and H. S. Haskell, also of Portage, appointed Lieutenant Colonel of the Twenty-first Regiment of Wisconsin Militia by Gov. Randall. Portage Light Guard vote unanimously to offer their services to Gov. Randall.

April—Flag-raising in Wyocena; enthusiastic Union meeting. Yates Ashley, Pardeeville, commissioned to raise a company. Large number of volunteers from Lodi and vicinity enrolled themselves in Madison companies. Portage Light Guard accepted by the Governor, and assigned to the Second Regiment. Meeting of citizens in Portage, at which strong Union resolutions were passed. City Council of Portage resolved to provide for the needy families of those who volunteered, the credit of the city being pledged to the extent of $1,000. Grand military supper at the Ellsworth House to Portage Light Guard.

May—Enthusiastic meeting in Portage, and presentation of Stars and Stripes, made by ladies, to Light Guard; patriotic speeches by Emmons Taylor, Alva Stewart and others. Departure of the Guard for Camp Randall. The Stars and Stripes unfurled from Bank Block, amid the singing of national airs by the various church choirs of Portage, the firing of rockets, burning of bonfires, etc. A complete company formed at Lodi. Meeting of citizens at Verandah Hall, Portage, for the purpose of organizing another military company; officers elected as follows: Captain, H. W. Emery; First Lieutenant, A. Stewart; Ensign, C. Schneider; First Sergeant, A. Blockwitz; Second, S. V. Redford; Third, J. Jolley; Fourth, T. E. Best; First Corporal, C. Brunhaeter; Second, P. Shehan; Third, H. Bolting; Fourth, T. Dalton; to be called the Portage Rifles. A large number of the members of the Portage Light Guard return from Camp Randall, having reached that point too late to be accepted as a part of the first quota of Wisconsin under the President's call for 75,000 three-months' volunteers; most of them re-enlist, however, for three years. The Columbia Rifles, of Kilbourn City, having offered their services under the first call too late for acceptance, re-enlist for "three years or during the war;" flag presentation to the Rifles, and patriotic speeches.

June—The Rifles go into camp at Racine. Flag raising in Marcellon, and enthusiastic gathering of the citizens.

July—Capt. Christie organizes a company in Portage. Battle of Bull Run; the first blood of Portage patriots shed on the field of battle; the casualties in Company G, Capt. Mansfield, Second Regiment, were: Killed—W. H. Williams, shot through the heart; H. R. Coffin, son of Dr. Coffin, of Wyocena, shot through the head; John Noonan. Wounded—Lieut. A. S. Hill, R. O. Batson, A. R. Clement, H. Neally, M. L. Phillips, C. C. Dow, J. A. Wiser and John Lynch. Missing—E. S. Best, J. P. Christie, John House, D. F. Crane, D. O'Brien, Peter Irvine and G. W. Briffett. It afterward transpired that O'Brien and Christie were taken prisoners.

August—George W. Marsh, of Company G, returned, discharged, on account of injuries received at Bull Run. Funeral of H. R. Coffin, at Wyocena. Capt. Christie tenders the services of his "Dixon Guard," which are accepted by the Governor. Erastus Cook, City Marshal of Portage, commissioned to enroll men for an artillery company. Mayor Richmond, of Portage, appointed Captain, with authority to raise a company of cavalry. Commissions issued to Dr. J. L. Coffin, of Wyocena, as Captain, and T. L. Kennan, of Portage, as First Lieutenant, to raise a company of infantry. J. J. Guppy appointed Lieutenant Colonel of the Tenth Regiment. The ladies of Portage engaged in making clothing for the Light Guard.

September—Lieut. Hill, of the Portage Light Guard, while at home nursing wounds received at Bull Run, enrolled the following recruits to fill the depleted ranks of his company: Van R. Bentley, C. Blackman, J. Castley, A. Carter, W. H. Church, C. Delaney, S. K. Eggleston, E. Hathaway, E. Jackson, T. H. Kennedy, G. F. Leeds, J. H. Langdon, C. Morter, R. C. McDonald, E. H. A. May, C. H. Mosher, W. L. Pratt, O. Parker, C. C. Reiley, J. B. Rowell, J. T. Lines, J. Sharp, H. C. Tupper and L. Wilkins. Departure of the Seventh Wisconsin from Madison for the seat of war, Company A being the Lodi Guards (Capt. George Bill), and Company B the Columbia County Cadets (Capt. J. H. Huntington). The Fremont Rifles (Capt. Coffin) assigned to the Tenth Regiment, and ordered into camp. Dr. Robert Mitchell, of Portage, appointed Assistant Surgeon of the Tenth. Departure of Lieut. Hill and his recruits to join the Light Guard.

October—George W. Marsh ("Agawam") recovers from his disabilities, re-enlists and is appointed Second Lieutenant of the Fremont Rifles. Lieut. S. K. Vaughan, of the Light Guard, resigns, and is succeeded by W. S. M. Abbott. Capt. Christie's Dixon Guards assigned to the Eleventh Regiment, as Company H, and go into camp at Madison. Letter from Swift Best, who was wounded and taken prisoner at Bull Run, announcing his incarceration in the Richmond Prison Hospital; also announcing the death of John P. Christie, who, seriously wounded, fell into the hands of the rebels in the same battle.

November—Return of Capt. Mansfield, of the Portage Light Guard, to enlist recruits for the Second Regiment. Capt. Christie, of the Dixon Guards, presented with an elegant sword by L. S. Dixon, in honor of whom the company was named. Dr. G. F. Huntington, of Portage, appointed Surgeon of the Eighteenth Regiment. Capt. Coffin, of the Fremont Rifles, appointed Chaplain of the Tenth Regiment. W. A. Coleman, Ira Ford and O. A. Southmayd, of Columbus, granted commissions to raise a company of infantry. Return of J. C. Chandler ("Shanghai") of the Portage Light Guard, honorably discharged from service. Capt. Richmond's cavalry company go into camp in Milwaukee.

December—Death of John D. Bannister, of Company D (Fremont Rifles), Tenth Regiment, at Shepherdsville, Ky. A recruiting rendezvous for the Thirteenth Infantry, regular army, opened at the City Hotel, Portage. John Delaney received a Captain's commission to recruit a company for the Eighteenth Regiment. S. K. Vaughan commissioned as Captain, with authority to raise a company for the Nineteenth Regiment.

1862, January.—Return of Capt. Richmond, George Race and Surgeon Huntington, on a flying visit from "Dixie."

February.—Lieut. Hill presented with a $100-sword by the Portage Light Guard. Lieut. H. B. Converse opens a recruiting office in Portage, to fill the depleted ranks of the Second Regiment. The fall of Donelson. Great rejoicing throughout the county. In Portage, the "big gun" boomed, church bells rang and locomotives screamed. Uncle Sherwood declared that the man who failed to get drunk on such an occasion would be declared a secessionist; the test of loyalty said to have been a complete success.

April—Battle of Pittsburg Landing; large number of Columbia County patriots engaged; members of the Lewis Rangers write: "Those known to have been killed are R. Cronk, Maurice Cook, George Hillman, Benjamin Shorer, and one other, name unknown, torn to shreds by a cannon ball; among the missing are Allen Church and John Sines, of Dekorra; William Miller, of Caledonia, was wounded in the mouth by a ball, and the last seen of him he was down at the river washing his wound; Peter Mead, John Cook, John Delaney and Ole Severson are among the missing; we lost everything except what we had on when the fight commenced; Lieuts. Ford and Southmayd were taken prisoners.

May—Anson Linscott, the petite drummer of the Light Guard, promoted to the post of Drum Major of the Second Regiment. George Carnes and Wells M. Butler receive commissions as Captain and Lieutenant, respectively, to raise a company of infantry, and open a recruiting office in Verandah Block.

June—Swift Best, of the Portage Light Guard, taken prisoner at the battle of Bull Run; released after a year's sojourn in rebel prison-pens.

July—Thomas H. Dolan, Portage Light Guard, discharged on account of sickness. Capt. Mansfield, Portage Light Guard, in the capacity of Military Governor of Fredericksburg, Va., stirs up the "secesh" citizens. Death of Fred Langdon, William H. Powers and P. Newman, Capt. Christie's company, in Arkansas. Return of Capt. Christie on account of wounds received at the battle of Bayou Cache. Edgar P. Mills commissioned to raise a company for the Twenty-third Regiment; Lieut. Col. Guppy, of the Tenth Regiment, appointed Colonel of the Twenty-Third.

August—Resignation of Lieut. Kennan, of the Fremont Rifles (Company D, Tenth Regiment), on account of ill health. Capt. Mansfield arrested and taken to Washington, charged with favoring the rebels, by allowing contraband trade through the Federal lines. Intense war feeling throughout the county owing to the call for 300,000 men and the prospective draft; enthusiastic war meeting at Pettibone's Hall, addressed by Alva Stewart, Col. Guppy, Capt. Hill, M. M. Davis and others; committee of thirteen appointed to canvass the city and obtain subscriptions to a bounty fund; $3,200 subscribed within two days. War meeting at Kilbourn City; $1,000 subscribed and eight men enlisted. War meeting in Caledonia; $1,000 subscribed and seven men enlisted. W. H. Bennett, J. P. Corbin, D. C. Holdridge, A. M. Kent, W. A. Dunham and O. H. Sorrenson, Portage veterans, promoted to lieutenantancies in Col. Guppy's regiment (the Twenty-third). M. M. Davis appointed Commissioner to superintend the draft in the county, and Robert W. Earle, of Columbus, Examining Surgeon. One thousand dollars subscribed to the war fund and seventeen men enlisted in the town of Lowville; town of Scott contributes $1,200; Lodi, $1,500 and fifty-two men; the town of Arlington offers $100 and a cow to each recruit. Dr. James Prentice appointed Surgeon of the Twenty-third Regiment. War meeting at West Point; $760 subscribed, eight men enlisted and $50 voted for each married and $25 for each unmarried volunteer. Departure of Capt. Hill's company for Camp Randall.

October—Lieuts. Ford, Southmayd and their associates of the Eighteenth Regiment taken prisoners at Corinth, released on parole, and return of Capt. Chrystie, taken prisoner near Helena, Ark. Death of Dr. Axtell, of Columbus, Assistant Surgeon of the Twenty-third Regiment. Death of Col. Emory of the Fifth Regiment.

November—A court of inquiry vindicates Capt. Mansfield of the crime of "disloyal conduct" while Provost Marshal of Fredericksburg, Va.

December—C. C. Dow, of Portage, promoted to Second Lieutenant of Company G (Light Guard), Second Regiment. D. P. Sherwood, of the Eighteenth Regiment returns, honorably discharged. Capt. Hill appointed Brigade Quartermaster of the Twenty-third.

1863, January—Return of Lieut. Hill, Company G, of the immortal Second, for the purpose of raising recruits. Capt. Irwin, Company H, Twenty-third Regiment resigns; Lieut. Holdridge promoted to fill vacancy; E. F. Fletcher promoted to Captain of Company K, same regiment, vice Frost, deceased. James Dempsey, Company C, Twenty-third, killed by one of his own company, while on picket duty, near Vicksburg.

February—Capt. Mansfield promoted to the rank of Major of the Second. Death of James F. Fitts, Company C, Twenty-third Regiment, from typhoid fever, in the hospital at Memphis, Tenn. Death of John W. Hosford and S. E. Van Zandt, Company C, Twenty-third Regiment, in the hospital at St. Louis. Resignation of Dr. Prentice, as Surgeon of the Twenty-third. Bohag, of the Second Cavalry, and ex-devil of the State Register, chases a "secesh" Lieutenant two miles, and takes him prisoner.

March—Death of Chester B. Flower, Nelson Morrison and John Smith, Company C, Twenty-third, First Lieut. A. S. Hill, appointed Captain Company G, Second Regiment, vice Mansfield, promoted; Second Lieut. C. C. Dow, appointed First Lieutenant, vice Hill, promoted. Accidental death of Adelbert Staley, Company F, Seventh Regiment, near Belle Plain, Va.

April—Capt. E. P. Hill promoted to the majorship of the Twenty-third Regiment; Capt. J. Bailey promoted to a similar rank in the Fourth Regiment. Acknowledgment by Company G, Second Regiment, of the receipt of "various and divers bottles, and cans of fruit, pickles and other luxuries," from Mrs. F. H. Ellsworth, Mrs. A. P. Bennett and Mrs. McGregor.

May—Promotions of Portage Soldiers: George N. Richmond, as Major of the Third Battalion vice Luxton, resigned; First Lieut. O. H. Sorrenson as Captain of Company C, Twenty-third Regiment, vice Hill, promoted; Second Lieut. Schoemaker, as First Lieutenant, vice Sorrenson, promoted; J. W. Richardson, as Second Lieutenant, vice Schoemaker, promoted.

June—Organization of a Home League in Poynette. E. F. Lewis, of Lewiston, appointed Deputy Provost Marshal for Columbia County. Enthusiastic Union meeting at Poynette, addressed by Gov. Solomon, Rev. Henry Drew, W. C. Webb, Rev. D. Y. Kilgour and N. H. Wood.

July—Lieut. Chas Allen, Company H., Eleventh Regiment, returns to Portage, having suffered the loss of a foot in the assault upon Vicksburg. Capt. A. S. Hill, Company G, Second Regiment, discharged from service on account of wounds received at South Mountain. Death, in Portage, of Lieut. A. J. McFarlane, Company K, Twenty-third Regiment, from wounds received at Vicksburg. Fall of Vicksburg! Great rejoicing. Return of Col. Guppy from Vicksburg, on a twenty-day furlough; an ovation, including a serenade by the Bohemian band. Joseph Bailey, who went into the service as Captain of Company D, Fourth Regiment, promoted to a colonelcy by Gen. Banks, for gallant and meritorious conduct before Port Hudson.

August—Lieut. J. L. Jolly, Major E. P. Hill, Capt. O. H. Sorrenson and Lieut. John Schoemaker, of the Twenty-third Regiment, home on short furloughs. Maj. John Mansfield promoted to Lieutenant Colonel of the Second Regiment; Lieut. C. C. Dow made Captain of Company G, and S. H. Morrison First Lieutenant. Return of Maj. Richardson, of the Second Cavalry, on furlough, after an absence of two years in Secessia.

October—Maj. E. P. Hill, Twenty-third Regiment, appointed Lieutenant Colonel in place of Vilas, resigned. Capt. M. A. Leahy, Thirty-fifth Regiment, opens a recruiting office in Portage, offering $402 bounty to nine-month veterans, and $200 to novices in the art of war. Resolutions of respect by the pupils of the Portage High School, to the memories of Melvin E. Merrell, Richard Williams, Judson A. Lewis, Edward Owen, Trevyllian J. Staley and Edward C. Andrews, killed in the war against rebellion.

November—Grand ball at Pettibone's hall, Portage, by the ladies of the Soldier's Aid Society. E. H. Bronson, First Sergeant, Company K, Thirty-second Regiment, detailed to recruit in the towns of Fountain Prairie, Columbus, Otsego, Lowville, Leeds and Dekorra.

December—Special town meetings held in Fountain Prairie and Marcellon, at which it was voted to pay $200 bounty, to volunteers. Resignation of Lieut. Wanner, Twenty-third Regiment.

1864, January—Col. Guppy and Capt. O. H. Sorrenson, of the Twenty-third Regiment, released by the rebels. War meeting at Vandercook Hall, Portage, at which over $600 was subscribed as bounty money. Town of Scott votes $250 bounty to volunteers; Fort Winnebago votes $200; Dekorra raises $1,950 cash as a fund to supply her quota of thirteen. Capt. Vaughan, Nineteenth Regiment, promoted to the rank of Major. Sergt. Joseph Twycross, Company G, Second Regiment, receives a first lieutenant's commission.

February—First Lieut. W. F. D. Bailey appointed Captain of Company G, Thirty-second Regiment. Death of W. F. Ward, one of the trio of Register printers who enlisted in the Twenty-third Regiment, in 1862. Lieut. Lewis Low, of Lowville, promoted to the captaincy of Company K, Thirty-second Regiment.

March—The citizens of Portage vote to appropriate $3,500 for a volunteer fund; 276 votes were cast, of which number 27 were against the proposition.

April—Portage offers a bounty of $150 each for volunteers to avoid the impending draft.

June—Grand reception to the returned remnants of the valorous Second Regiment, to which the Portage Light Guard belonged as Company G; but ten of this company's members were spared to reach home, as follows: Capt. C. C. Dow, Sergt. Joseph Twycross, George Hill, Freeman Smith, Fritz Kanzenbach, Henry J. Acker, Simon Jordan, C. P. Austin, J. A. Stanton and Anson Linscott.

July—John A. Jolly made Second Lieutenant Company C, Twenty-third Regiment. Lieut. John Schoemaker, Company C, Twenty-third Regiment, made Captain of Company I, same regiment. Speaking of the impending draft, a local newspaper said: "The thing is now reduced to a single allspice, and every man must make arrangements for a fight or skedaddle to Canada."

September—Erastus Cook reports sixty men enlisted for his artillery company. Maj. Vaughan, Nineteenth Regiment, home on furlough. Vigorous volunteering under the stimulus of high-bounty patriotism. Col. Mansfield and Lieut. Newton, paroled from Libby Prison, return home. Capt. Cook's company of heavy artillery leave for Madison; in the ranks were five brothers, the Douglas boys of Lewiston. Formation of a "draft insurance club" in Portage. John Jolly opens a recruiting office in Portage for the Fifth Regiment.

November—Col. Guppy appointed Post Commandant at Paducah, Ky. Columbia County gives 1,178 majority for Lincoln. Rev. J. B. Bachman, of Portage, appointed Chaplain of the Thirty-second Regiment. Death in a Southern prison hospital of Paul V. Brisbois, Company G, Second Regiment, from wounds received at the Wilderness.

1865, January—Dr. T. E. Best, of Portage, appointed Assistant Surgeon of the Fourteenth Regiment. Arthur W. Delaney, of Portage, appointed Adjutant of the Forty-seventh Regiment. Town of Newport votes a tax of $6,000, and raises a subscription of $2,000, for the purpose of filling the quota under the last call. Portage City votes almost unanimously in favor of a bounty tax. Organization of the Portage Relief Association.

February—Another special (bounty) election in Portage; 205 for to 5 against appropriating $200 each for volunteers to fill quota; volunteering becomes brisk. Lodi fills her quota from the ranks of her own citizens. Great rejoicing throughout the county over the occupation of Charleston, the capture of Fort Anderson, etc., by Federal troops. James T. Hulihane, a three-years Portage veteran, appointed Second Lieutenant of Company C, Forty-seventh Regiment.

April—Capture of Richmond! Great rejoicing throughout the county; the "big gun" brought out in Portage and fired at short intervals throughout the day and ensuing evening; church bells rung, schools dismissed, and a general suspension of business. But alas! joy turned to grief; assassination of President Lincoln; imposing obsequies; services in all the churches.

May—Return of veterans mustered out under orders for a reduction of the army. Capture of Mother Davis. Secession scotched!

A Reminiscence.—The adventures of the brave boys who fought our country's battles would make a volume of massive size, but the following narrative of love and danger should no longer remain hidden in the mass of good things that still remain to be told: About three miles from the little village of Fall River, in Columbia County, is a successful and highly respected farmer, whose history during the four years of war was full of interest. He tried to enter the service under the call for 75,000 men, but was a little too late. Very soon after the the second call issued, he enlisted as a member of Company B, Seventh Regiment, and was made Third Sergeant. The spring of 1862, when Capt. Huntington resigned, George H. Brayton, of whom I shall speak hereafter, was made Captain, and Sergt. M. C. Hobart, the farmer to whom reference is made, was commissioned First Lieutenant, at the battle of Gainesville, August 28, 1862, the first general engagement the Iron Brigade, of which the Seventh Regiment was a part, participated in, and in which battle the brigade fought, for more than two hours, Ewell's whole division of Stonewall Jackson's famous fighting corps, losing between 800 and 900 men in killed and wounded. Capt. Brayton was shot in the head and immediately expired. Hobart succeeded him as Captain, at the battle of Gettysburg, where Hobart was conspicuous for coolness, bravery and good management; the brigade lost heavily in prisoners as well as killed and wounded. He was among the prisoners. On their second day's journeying toward Richmond and Libby Prison, while crossing the mountains, Capt. Hobart stealthily dodged in the friendly thicket and in a short time was a free man. The next day he joined his regiment, and participated in the chase after Lee's broken, defeated and demoralized army. At the battle of the Wilderness, in May, 1864, Capt. Hobart was again made prisoner; though making several attempts to escape the vigilance of his captors, they all failed, until after he had been a prisoner some time. It was while at Columbia, S. C., if we mistake not, Hobart, in company with others, made his escape; after many days and nights of fatigue and hardship, that in these times of peace and general comfort would seem unbearable, he was re-captured near the Union lines at Knoxville, East Tennessee, and taken to Danville, N. C.; thence to Libby Prison, Richmond; was paroled February 22, 1865, and exchanged and returned to his regiment in April of the same year. Not long after that he was made Major of the Seventh, and in the spring of 1865, he was commissioned Lieutenant Colonel, Gen. Hallon Richardson, of Chippewa Falls, being Colonel, and Lieut. George S. Hoyt, now of the regular army, being Major. Col. Hobart was severely wounded in one of the many battles he participated in, two or three inches of one of the bones of his arm being removed. Hobart is as modest and unassuming in his role of a successful farmer, as he was brave, modest and unassuming as a soldier. The history of Company B, of the Seventh, would make entertaining reading; counting its original members and the recruits forwarded at various times, it had 140 men; a great many of these were killed, and nearly every one of those who came home bore a bullet, bayonet or shell mark. Some of them were shot a half a dozen times; a majority of the survivors are, very properly, drawing pensions. Spencer H. Bronson, Fall River's Postmaster, a gentleman highly esteemed both as an official and as a citizen, was one of its members. He was first shot at Gainesville, then at Fitzhugh's Crossing, below Fredricksburg, in May, 1863, and again seriously at the Wilderness, in 1864. Capt. G. H. Brayton, who was killed at Gainesville, entered the army as Orderly Sergeant. He was educated at Lawrence University, and one of the most promising young men in Columbia County when the war broke out. His men about idolized him, and no young officer in the regiment stood higher; he had a bright future. Speaking of the Seventh, it may be well to mention an incident in connection with the early history of the regiment. While in winter quarters on Arlington Heights, opposite Washington, the winter of 1861-62, the family of Col. W. W. Robinson joined him. In the family was a bright and handsome daughter; Lieut. Richardson, of Company A, met and loved her, and wanted to marry her. She was willing, but Col. Robinson did not want his daughter to marry a man who was liable at almost any moment, when hostilities commenced, to be killed, and he lost no time in making this fact known to the daughter and the Lieutenant. But what was the use, the young people had made up their minds to marry, and marry they did, the ceremony taking place in Washington, unknown to the Colonel and his family. It was some weeks before he learned he had a disobedient daughter and son-in-law, and it was years before he became reconciled. Having been an officer in the Mexican war, and being a regimental commander in the war of the rebellion, he had imbibed the notion, quite naturally too, that his orders must be obeyed. It proved a happy marriage. The Lieutenant became a Captain, then Major, Lieutenant Colonel and Colonel, and left the army Brevet Brigadier General. Col. Robinson is United States Consul at Madagascar.

James M. Cloud

LODI

ROSTER.

THE CITY OF PORTAGE—FIRST WARD.

Second Infantry—Co. G—Alfred Stanton, I. T. Staley, John G. Vieg, M. C. Alfred, I. C. Allen, John Jacobson, Co. K—S. H. Morrison, James Bates, John K. Bates.

Fifth Infantry—Co. A—Hugh O. Neil. Co. G—Charles Bohag.

Seventh Infantry—Co. E—Oliver H. Sorensen, W. F. Worcester. Co. F—Adelot Staley.

Ninth Infantry—Co. I—Wexzel Wackerhausen.

Tenth Infantry—Co. H—James T. Hulehan.

Eleventh Infantry—Co. H—Charles George, William Kent, William Anderson, Willibald Gneedig.

Fifteenth Infantry—Co. D—Halver V. Halverson, Elias Peterson, Lars Tologen.

Seventeenth Infantry—Co. B—Daniel Iearden.

Eighteenth Infantry—Co. I—Dudley Bracy, M. W. Springer, Duncan McClurg, George W. Hillman, W. B. Kenyon, William Mills, John Martin, Jacob Pratt, James M. Brown, Friederick Everson, Charles Everson, W. H. C. Ferguson, William W. Alvey, C. C. Andrus. Co. K—Thomas Madden.

Nineteenth Infantry—Co. B—James G. Lowery, William Weir, Bishop Johnson, Baron S. Daniels, John M. Hagan. Co. D—Martin Billingham, David Ferguson, Ira Schoemaker.

Twenty-third Infantry—Co. C—Herman H. Kent, Fred Ford, Patrick Farmer, David Culbert, James F. Fitts, Charles Sorenson. Co. C—Andrew Mesch, Francis Boesler, Isaac Sorenson, Louis Heduck.

Second Cavalry—Co. E—O. C. Bellude, Washington Parker, Alfred Bohag, Horace Carpenter, William Stahlman, George Ross, William McCormick.

Sixteenth U. S. Regulars—Company unknown—Timothy Hulehan.

Regiment unknown—William Bohag.

CITY OF PORTAGE—SECOND WARD.

Second Infantry—Co. G—Capt. John Mansfield, First Lieut. A. S. Hill, Walter L. Plumbstead, John F. Metcalf, Joseph Tiv, Swift E. Best, Charles P. Austin, William A. Williams, W. S. M. Abbot.

Seventh Infantry—Co. E—Joseph Harrington.

Fourteenth Infantry—Co. K—James Dolan.

Eighteenth Infantry—Co. G—John Delaney. Co. I—Daniel Sherwood.

Nineteenth Infantry—Co. A—Oliver E. Tilliston. Co. B—G. W. Morris, Louis Cavana, Joseph Rein, Patrick Redmond, Friedlieb Kienlieb. Co. D—Capt. S. K. Vaughn, M. D. Vaughn.

Twentieth Infantry—Company unknown—Wm. O'Neil, Birney Ackerman, Melvin E. Merrill, Philemon Cross, Judson Packard, Anthony Rogers, Joseph Vermilyen, Thomas Warren, James Whitehead, George Green, Ira Allen, John Hamilton, George Bohag, John Holden.

Twenty-third Infantry—Co. C—Second Lieut. John Shomaker, John Crosby, James Dempsey, H. L. Asher, Edmund Vanzant, Rockwell J. Flint, William F. Bailey, James T. Graham. Co. H—Leonard F. Warner.

CITY OF PORTAGE—THIRD WARD.

Second Infantry—Co. G—Oscar F. Winne, Owen Davis, Gay Sherwood, Fritz Kauzenbach, Paul V. Brisbois, James A. Snider.

Seventh Infantry—Co. E—Thomas E. Best, Alexander Stephens.

Eleventh Infantry—Co. H—Capt. Alexander Chrystie, Thomas R. Edmonds, I. W. Brisbois, John L. Lavin

Nineteenth Infantry—Co. B—S. Klloe, E. O. Emerson, John Jones, D. D. Burdick, Ludwig Booth, Charles Bracey, Adam Brickford, John Brooks, A. S. Cooper, B. D. Carpenter, George N. Dempsey, John Funk, O. L. Gilson, John I. Holden, Alexander Kline, Edward McGrath.

Twenty-third Infantry—Co. C—Newton Wilson, John W. Hosford, Marcellus Blanchard, George G. Parmiter, O. P. Weston, A. S. Warren.

Twenty-seventh Infantry—Co. H—George C. Snider.

Second Cavalry—Co. E—Capt. George N. Richmond, I. H. Walter, Henry Young, D. M. Hunter.

CITY OF PORTAGE—FOURTH WARD.

Second Infantry—Co. G—Archy Linscott, Anson Linscott, Charles Ettinger, I. A. Wiser, William A. Williams, George Miles, Gustav Eltermann, E. S. Fletcher, James Grace, Thomas Dolan, Gustave La Claire, Horace Emerson, Cornelius Riley, William T. Dean, S. A. Stanton, J. M. Carr, Francis Gillmore, A. Parker, C. C. Dow, J. T. Metcalf, Henry H. Williams.

Fifth Infantry—Lieut. Col. Harvey W. Emmerly, Chaplain Bev. Robert Langley.

Seventh Infantry—Co. E—James Briggs.

Ninth Infantry—Co. E—Casper Frohlich. Co. K—Henry Voight.

Tenth Infantry—Co. D—First Lieut. Thomas L. Kennan, Asst. Surg. Robert Mitchell, T. L. Vennan, E. P. Stogell, George Bell, William Thompson, I. E. Webster, B. F. Woodard. Co. E—Dennis Marsh.

Eleventh Infantry—Co. H—Silas W. Green, Charles Brunohler, Frank V. Douglass, Charles Allen, Harvey Alma.

Sixteenth Infantry—Co. F—Duncan Forbes, Company unknown—Thomas Donohue, Samuel Reed, Benjamin F. Douglas, Daniel Howard.

Seventeenth Infantry—Co. A—Michael Sanders.

Eighteenth Infantry—Surg. George F. Huntington.

Nineteenth Infantry—Co. B—James Hunter. Co. C—Charles Case. Co. D—Michael Kane, Frederick Langdon. Co. K—Barney Britt.

Twentieth Infantry—Company unknown—John Hamilton.

Twenty-third Infantry—Col. Joshua J. Guppey, Surg. James Prentice. Co. C—H. F. Merrill, Henry G. Luther, George Carpenter, William F. Ward, Thomas Murray, Peter Ball, T. E. Halsey, Franklin A. Blood, Joseph W. Richardson, Wenzel Roessler, John L. Jolly, Cassius P. Edwards, James McDonough, Henry Watley, Charles Slater, James Whitney, Capt. Edgar P. Hill. Co. H—Robert Giller, Vincuz Weber, Julius Weiner.

Twenty-fourth Infantry—Co. F—John W. Sargent, Patrick Cleary, James S. Anderson, George T. Thompson.

First Cavalry—Co. E—Ira Suffan.

Second Cavalry—Co. E—Robert Murray, W. W. Potter, George S. Race, Earl Race, Samuel Slifer, George Hewitt, August Wagenhecht, A. H. Brown, William Clark, David Mitchell, Charles Orville, Wallace Smith.

Second Artillery—James S. Dudley.
Sixth Battery—Frederick Melish, Alfred Bield.
Seventh Battery—Charles H. Green.
Tenth Battery—Charles Robinson.

TOWN OF ARLINGTON.

Second Infantry—Co. A—Henry H. Grant, George Farnsworth, Co. G—Warren L. Pratt, Co. H—Orville J. Hurlburt, Orville S. Hurlburt, Thomas Malone, P. C. Fryer, Seeman Allen, Co. I—Joseph Webber, Hiland H. Harlocker. Company not known—

Third Infantry—Co. F—Moses Rose, Amos Petteys. Company unknown—Joseph Verber.

Fifth Infantry—Co. D—Charles A. Drown, Co. F—John Blondell.

Seventh Infantry—Co. A—Isaac Clapp, William Wood, Co. G—Harrison L. Wiard, F. D. Best, H. C. Jesse, George Syle.

Twelfth Infantry—Company unknown—William Van Hoosen.

Sixteenth Infantry—Co. B—Patrick Collins, Edward Paul, C. H. Smith.

Nineteenth Infantry—Co. A—Edward Leonard, Franklin Winchester.

Twenty-third Infantry—Co. C—Wesley Richardson, John W. Stearns, James Collins, Co. H—D. W. Knappeer, Milo N. Blood, Harlow J. Youmans, Allen Johnson, W. D. Edgbert, A. J. McFarlan, Stephen W. Green, Oliver D. Holcomb, John Maneka, Lewis Oleson.

First Cavalry—Co. G—James M. Wheeler, Richard Singleton.

Second Cavalry—Co. E—Charles C. Lee, William Clark, Thomas Cartright, Thomas Havercroft, Prosper L. Knappen, Oliver Saterlee.

Sixth Battery—Company not known—Harlan P. Dunning.

TOWN OF CALEDONIA.

Second Infantry—Co. G—Paul V. Brisbois.

Eleventh Infantry—Co. H—Robert Murray, Jr., James O'Neil, B. Johnson, John L. Lavine, H. Alina, W. Grudig.

Fourteenth Infantry—Co. K—William O'Neil.

Seventeenth Infantry—Co. H—Thomas Harper, Hugh Harper.

Eighteenth Infantry—Co. I—William Miller, John Morton.

Nineteenth Infantry—Co. D—William H. Hill.

Twenty-third Infantry—Co. C—William M. Roberts, Hugh T. Williams, Harris Tuttle, William E. Jones, Howell T. Phillips, William Anacker, William Donald, Hugh Lindsay, Edward Owen, John D. Williams, William Edwards, Peter Henderson, James T. Graham, James Lee, Jr., William Sempole, Co. F—E. L. Stoner, Co. H—J. Jennings.

Second Cavalry—Co. E—Robert Murray.

Third Cavalry—Co. E—William Stoner.

Unknown—Company unknown—James Roberts, William Williams, Joseph Robertson, John Bricker.

TOWN OF COLUMBUS.

First Infantry—Co. G—Lansing Williams, Harvey K. Dodge, Charles A. Searls (Lieutenant on Gen. Starkweather's staff), Adison S. Gardiner, Oscar Bordman.

Second Infantry—Co. A—Thomas Downs, William Kuhl, John Foley, Thomas Greene, William Dutcher, James McDonald, Reuben H. Clark, Rufus N. Clark.

Third Infantry—Co. K—Edwin E. Polly (died), Milo I. Waterhouse (died in service), G. Dailey.

Fourth Infantry—Co. D—Albert W. James, Co. E—Walan W. Mallo.

Fifth Infantry—Co. B—D. McLarty, Arch. McFadden, C. W. Skinner (Second Lieutenant), James Conlan

Sixth Infantry—Co. D—Benjamin Campbell (died in service), William Flanagan.

Seventh Infantry—Co. A—M. B. Misner (Captain Fourth Cavalry, Co. M), James Johnson, James Holmes (killed), Eli P. Sayers (died in service), Alfred Miller, William B. Paige, James McCabe, Charles Browning, William Cummings, George P. Dix, Francis A. Fowler (died at Andersonville), Rufus Hodgeman, Milo Hawks, Edward I. Hurd, Lewis P. Holmes (killed), Simeon B. Kendall, Edward G. Perry, Henry Leyman, Albert McAlvey, Jacob D. Swanger, Harlo A. Safield, William I. Townlee, Co. B—William A. McAlvey, William H. Dunham (Second Lieutenant) Co. G—William Richards.

Eighth Infantry—Co. A—Alvin D. Gano.

Eleventh Infantry—Co. B—William P. Williams, Co. C—M. V. Thompson.

Twelfth Infantry—Co. C—George W. Breese.

Fifteenth Infantry—Co. B—Jems O. Mol, Jems Larson.

Sixteenth Infantry—Co. D—John I. Downey, Joseph Edwards, Louis Flashbine, William Hamilton, Thomas I. Winston, Frederick Wolfe.

Seventeenth Infantry—Co. B—Emanuel Moyer.

Eighteenth Infantry—Co. I—Michael Corigan, Morris E. Cook, Thomas I. Chapell, Hugh Carey, Theodore Dickerson, Samuel C. Dale, John A. Ehrtger, Nelson Everson, Samuel B. Ellithorp (died in service), Jacob Flack, George W. Fossnach, Delansen Griffin, Cilas E. Greene, Herbert Gilpin, Philomson Haskins, W. I. Hughes, William Jones, George Kurth, Harrison Loomis, Sylvanus Langdon, Morrow E. Loveless, James Scitch, John South, Charles McLevey, Daniel E. Newton, Allen D. Randall, John Topp, James Flynn, William A. Coleman (Captain), First Lieut. O. A. Southmayde, Peter McIntyre, Hiram L. Randall, Andrew I. Hewing, Benjamin W. Shaver, Elias M. Haight, John M. James, John Wood, George Banker, Hiram H. Brown, Ferdinand Banta, George D. Bellows.

Twenty-third Infantry—Co. G—George S. Campbell, John H. Hughes, George H. Harrington, Lewis Kehler, John I. Morey, Abel H. Silsbee, Charles E. Quinn, Joseph S. Edwards, Daniel C. Cooper, Seth Trask, Chester W. Tuttle, John Mahl, Warren I. Whiting, Garritt Halverson, Robert Swanger, Michael Karney, Alfred E. Fuller, Edward Grey, John W. Jones, James M. Tibbets, Elijah Walrod, Theophilus Perry, Henry Weis, James Nolan, Herman Klug, Nicholas Didesh, George W. Gibson, Ira Trobridge, Allen D. Thomas, Edward Parry, Henry Beaver, Henry Russell, Alfred W. Fuller, Benjamin Dayton, E. E. Eason, William H. Grindell, Francis W. Wright, Quincy A. Page, August Hein, Charles W. Allen, John Krouse, Joshua Tompkins, James Downey, John Wagoner, John F. Kent, Mathew Louth, Daniel O'Rourke, John Rohan, Nathan W. Mead, Capt. J. F. Hazelton, J. C. Axtell (Second Assistant Surgeon), James McConnell (Fife Major).

Twenty-fourth Infantry—Co. A—C. J. Woodward.

Third Cavalry—Co. E—Imman C. Haines, James Kelsey, John Williams, Simeon Crampton, I. W. Haines, P. W. Wright, Co. L—Almond S. Trumbull.

Battery No. 9—Frederick Page.

Marshal Guards (Bradford Hancock, Captain)—Melvin Harrington, George Kenney.

Thirty-second Infantry—Co. K—Benjamin F. Watson.

Thirty-sixth Infantry—Jeremiah Morton.

TOWN OF COURTLAND.

Second Infantry—Co. A—Daniel Bennett, Silas Bennett, Henry Bennett, Milo Bennett, Harmon Buog, Samuel Cook, Solomon Cuddeback, John Enos, J. H. Gould, George L. Hubbs, David C. Jones, James H. Lewis, Lewis Norton, Stephen Yarrut, James Walters, Alexander Ogden, George Williams.

Sixth Infantry—Co. C—Henry Rust.

Seventh Infantry—Co. E—William Jones.

Eighth Infantry—Co. D—Daniel D. Morris, R. T. Pugh, Earnest Adams.

Eleventh Infantry—Co. A—Festus Hartson. Co. D—Joseph Dickerson. Co. I—Thomas Dixon, Joseph Kerr.

Eighteenth Infantry—Co. I—George Banker.

Nineteenth Infantry—Co. D—J. H. Wheelock.

Twenty-first Infantry—Co. A—John W. Hughes.

Enlisted at East Randolph, in Capt. Dunham's company, E. Gaylord, J. N. Olin, J. W. Bennett, Thomas Dixon, Jr., Anton Frehing, Henry Funnell, J. Burrell Ireland, D. Ketchum, N. Palmer, George Smith, Joshua A. Stark.

Enlisted at Cambria, in the "Prairie Tigers" Co.—Joseph Burnby, Henry T. Williams, J. C. Griffiths, Evan R. Jones, Richard Andrews, Thomas H. Hughes, George W. Lewis, Joseph Letellier, David G. Williams, David R. Davies, Lewis E. Evans, Griffith Evans, Richard Williams, D. W. Williams.

Joined a Racine company, Capt. O. Griffiths'—Owen R. Jones, Evan G. Roberts, Rowland Edwards.

Enlisted at Trenton, Dodge County—B. W. Brown.

Second Cavalry—Co. H—Francis Hughes.

TOWN OF DEKORRA.

Second Infantry—Co. G—Charles Rice, William Fletcher, Charles Massee, A. Cole, J. T. Loomer, Jeremiah Allen, John Sharp, E. Bently, Lucian Wilkins, Van H. Bently, James Sines, W. H. Church, C. Blackman, Henry Cave. Co. H—George H. Wilbur, Henry McCollum, Frank Wilkins, O. Tillotson, Roscoe Brown, Charles Erickson, Isaac Kenuteson, Thomas Kenuteson, Thomas Murphy, Arch. McCollum, Henry Brayton.

Fifth Infantry—Co. F—John Blundell.

Seventh Infantry—Co. A—A. Georgison, James Bates, John Bates, Daniel Ackaman, Burnet Ackerman, Henry M. Buck, J. Ryan, Kenute Kenuteson, John Kenuteson. Co. B—Joseph Thomas.

Eighth Infantry—Co. I—Victor Perham. Company unknown, Wesley Richardson.

Tenth Infantry—Co. D—John Woodard, Elmore Hathaway.

Eleventh Infantry—Co. H—William Newman.

Thirteenth Infantry—Co. G—W. S. Leitch.

Seventeenth Infantry—Co. A—W. Blundel. Co. F—Henry Bostic.

Eighteenth Infantry—Co. I—John Sines, Jacob Pratt, D. Bracy, Charles Everson, Frederick Everson, Nelson Everson, G. Nancarron, Nathan Springer, A. Blackman, George W. Hillman, Marom Holden, Duncan McCloud, Allen Church, Wallace Kenyon.

Nineteenth Infantry—Co. A—Harlo Sheldon. Co. D—Bishop Johnson, O. Tillotson, Andrew Bickford, James Everson.

Twentieth Infantry—Co. B—Judson Packard, Burnett Ackaman. Company unknown—Ira Allen, Plilemon Cross, R. Bartlett.

Twenty-third Infantry—Co. C—Charles Carman, John Carman, I. P. Blood, Greenleaf Ackaman, C. P. Edmunds, Dabolt Pfenner, G. Hartman, Tillman H. Hartman.

James McCollum, Wesley Richardson. Co. H—Jacob Stroud. Company unknown—Stoner Hassel, Frederick Wait, D. Frazier, Silas Packard.

Twenty-fourth Infantry—Co. A—William McDonald.

Second Cavalry—Co. H.—T. Howard Charles C. Lee, Charles L. Lee, W. R. Streeter, David Quackinhush.

Regiment unknown—Peter Post.

Artillery—Timothy Kennedy.

TOWN OF FORT WINNEBAGO.

First Infantry—Co. H—Franklin Ross, Clark Ross.

Second Infantry—Co. G—A. P. Tiffany.

Seventh Infantry—Co. E—James A. Briggs.

Tenth Infantry—Co. D—Samuel Cronch. Co. E—Darius Marsh.

Eleventh Infantry—Co. H—William McAlrong, Patrick Downey, Thomas Singleton, Sylvester Eastman.

Seventeenth Infantry—Co. H—Thomas Obeir.

Nineteenth Infantry—Co. D—Charles W. Bradley, William Gambel, John Gambel.

Twentieth Infantry—Company unknown—Melvin E. Merrill.

Twenty-third Infantry—Co. C—John Robins, Isaac D. Pasco, Amos R. Spiser, John H. Pulver, Louis R. Graves, Samuel D. Eastman, William Potter, Charles F. Cooley.

Fifty-seventh Infantry—Co. C (Illinois)—R. O. Nelson, Jacob C. Becker, James Clithero, Adelbert Eastman.

Second Cavalry—Co. E—Henry Clithero, Alexander Gamble, John Scott, John Fink, James Gamble, Robert Whiting, David Gamble, William W. French.

Sixteenth Regulars—George B. Smith, John W. Clark.

TOWN OF FOUNTAIN PRAIRIE.

Second Infantry—Co. A—J. H. Smith, Charles Brooks, Cas. Neaymer, — Payson.

Seventh Infantry—Co. A—Gilson Henton. Co. B—Capt. James H. Huntington, Lieut. S. L. Bachelder, George H. Brayton, Capt. Martin C. Hobart, William H. Morgan, Manley T. Bronsen (died in service), Edwin R. Hancock, Milton C. Monroe, Cas. E. Plummer, Amos Bissett, John Bissett, Eli Bronson, Spencer H. Bronson, Alfred Casson, Elisha A. Dean, Herbert D. Dyer, Chas. Foster, Frank Graham, James O. Hilaker, Harrison Lamson, William Myers, William Sickles, Charles Sickles, George P. Stanton, David Snow, Henry Jaunt, Dexter Titcomb, Joseph Zeman, Julius Englekee, Lyman Farrand, Orian C. Crandall, John Hughes.

Tenth Infantry—Co. E—James E. Judd.

Eleventh Infantry—Co. B—A. A. Grout, John Hicks, Enos Grout, William P. Williams (died in service), Frank Livermore, George W. Brossard.

Sixteenth Infantry—Co. D—Silas B. Loyd, James Santong, William McConell.

Eighteenth Infantry—Co. I—Albert Turck, Loren Bronson, George L. Adams, John S. Field, Stephen Crossman, Theodore Dickerson, Stephen Jaunt, John Payson.

Nineteenth Infantry—Co. D—John Brooks.

Thirty-second Infantry—Co. K—Capt. John E. Grout, Sanford L. Batchelder, Second Lieut. E. H. Bronson, William V. Little, James Corne, Patrick Burk, Theodore Wood, Alfred Wright, Lieut. James S. Babcock, Augustus Hoofman, Lewis P. Horton, E. T. Kerney, Henry Funnell, Thomas Gilson, Israel Bissett, Theodore Jenkins, H. W. Hancock, Thomas Tasker, Jr., Abram Woodhead, Michael Foley, George Allen, Samuel King, William Grout, Frederick Virgil, John Walton, James Houghton, Horace O'Brien, A. S. Sizer.

Third Cavalry—Co. E—Wayne B. Dyer, Milo W. Martin, Leonard Sage, Judson Brown, Nelson Brayton, Hiram Barber, Alvin Hastings, George Bliss, D. K. Potter, Charles Green.

TOWN OF HAMDEN.

Fourth Infantry—Co. D—Albert W. James. Co. H—Andrew Weitzart.

Sixth Infantry—Co. D—William Flanagan.

Seventh Infantry—Co. A—Herbert K. Lull, Isaac H. Mead, Wallace Hinton, Uri Lakey.

Fifteenth Infantry—Co. D—Thoma Thomas, John Beaver. Co. H—John L. Johnson, Amphon Thomson.

Sixteenth Infantry—Co. D—Frederick Wolf, Darwin B. Sowards, James Digon, Capt. Edwin B. Royes, Daniel Kalahan, Henry Riggie.

Eighteenth Infantry—Co. I—Capt. Ira H. Ford, Gerden G. Beckwith, Almon R. Root, William Smith, Peter Mead, Frederick A. Brewer, James Flynn, William Yarns, Thomas Laskey.

Nineteenth Infantry—Company unknown—John Miller.

Twenty-third Infantry—Co. A—Frederick Hine. Co. B—Daniel Warner, Herbert D. James, Elijah Hoteling, Frank Lull, Chancey N. Elithorp, John Wagoner, Preston Sowards, William Holshettle, August Hine, Joseph Edwards, Ira Durban, Ole J. Oleson, Matthias L. Johnson, Charles McDonald, G. W. McDonald, T. G. Oleson, Marius Anderson.

Third Cavalry—Co. E—Hiram R. Tripp.

TOWN OF LEEDS.

First Infantry—Co. B—James Durkee, Joseph Durkee.

Second Infantry—Co. G—David Brown, Sylvester Foster.

Third Infantry—Co. K—Milo J. Waterhouse.

Eighth Infantry—Co. I—Eugene Perham, John O'Keiff.

Thirteenth Infantry—Co. A—Ole Anderson, Ole Amundson.

Fifteenth Infantry—Co. B—John S. Opatell, Angle Johnson, John Starkson. Co. F—Knute Iverson. Co. H—Stephen Lewis, Marcus Johnson, Knute Larson, Knute Nelson. Co. I—Nels Beanson, Arma Turtleston. Company unknown—Thomas Thomas, Nels Albert.

Seventeenth Infantry—Co. D—William Yarns.

Eighteenth Infantry—Co. I—George Murray Dexter.

Thirty-second Infantry—Co. K—Samuel Dumbottom, Cuyler Green, William Kinehart, George Simmons, Chauncey Estabrook, George Kuby, Hiram H. Freeman, Krants Harenburg, Martin Wolfley, Conrad Bonnerman, Casper Eichle, Hendrick Casper, Andrew Oleson, William Blake, Andrew Anderson, Lars Larson Hans, Charles Bulow, Neil Beryonson.

Third Cavalry—Company unknown—George Retting.

Cavalry unknown—O. C. Belroide.

Regiment unknown—Surg. Henry M. Mixer, S. L. Lass, John O'Keith.

TOWN OF LEWISTON.

Second Infantry—Co. A—Thomas McFarlin. Co. G—Simon Jordan, Theodore Fletcher, — Stampbor.

Ninth Infantry—Co. I—William Seifert, Wencel Waker-schauser, Mathias Wagner.

Tenth Infantry—Co. D—John Gaffany, William Carel, Michael Callahan, John B. Banister, Oliver Fellows. Co. K—Anton Clement.

Twelfth Infantry—Co. E—Henry Dyre.

Fifteenth Infantry—Co. D—Elias Peterson, Ole M. Bendickson, Andrew A. Dahl, Andrew Mickleson, Lars G. Tobackson, Elias P. Lewis.

Sixteenth Infantry—Co. H—Lepold Bach.

Seventeenth Infantry—Company unknown—Patrick McMahon, Thomas McMahon. Co. D—Charles Bach, Rodolf Mulish.

Eighteenth Infantry—Co. G—John Anderson, Peter Tenison.

Nineteenth Infantry—Co. D—George Dempsay.

Twenty-third Infantry—Co. C—Orrin Hay, John McMahon, Carl Hussenfus, Judson A. Lewis, John A. Petersen, O. A. Tolackson, Elias Ereckson, Tomas Dolivar, Daniel Devine, William C. Hanson.

First Cavalry—Company unknown—Scot Wossen.

Second Cavalry—Company unknown—Asa Brown.

Sixth Battery—Frederick Mulish.

Twelfth Battery—Louis Hieckether, Herman Kune.

Regiment unknown—Henry Mudley, Michael Jordon, — Stumpt.

TOWN OF LODI.

Second Infantry—Co. G—George H. Irwin. Co. H—George M. Humphrey, Theodore D. Bahn, William L. Black, D. Syrus Holdridge, Thomas Knuteson, John Kisk, Charles Erickson, Jerry Grover, Sidney Wells, Jonathan R. Bryan, F. J. Burnett, Ole Omensen, William McIntosh, Thomas Murphy, Wilbur F. Turner, William H. Kibby, H. C. Hyatt, Thomas W. Canning, James E. Northrop, Benjamin F. Stahl, David C. Edwards, Joseph Wall, — Titus, Edward Loney, Roscoe Browne, Charles Moore, Orlando S. Hawkins, S. Faup, John Joryson. Co. I—James Osborn.

Third Infantry—Co. K—I. Q. Lyman.

Fifth Infantry—Co. H—A. Armor.

Seventh Infantry—Co. A—William Chalfant, Philander Phinney, Lucius Phinney, George D. Phinney, Joseph Ring, Samuel Osborn, Alexander Hull, S. Morrow, John Grant, Thomas Sweet, John Small, Eben B. Dunlap, Elijah B. Hinds, Henry F. Turner, Thomas Buchanan, E. Brown, Capt. George Bill, M. C. Bartholomew, Joseph Merryman Bartholomew, John Bartholomew, Samuel Bachman, Edward Chalfant, Michael Burek, C. B. Fumey, J. W. Sanderson. Co. G—R. J. Varnuilu.

Tenth Infantry—Co. H—Stephen D. Duel.

Eleventh Infantry—Co. K—W. W. Rood.

Fourteenth Infantry—Co. K—S. Casper, Henry Wolf, Stephen Wood, Horace Foster.

Fifteenth Infantry—Co. H—Ole Amfrison.

Seventeenth Infantry—Co. A—Michael Landres. Co. H, Edwin Chapman.

Eighteenth Infantry—Co. H—Hiram Brown, Daniel Leitch.

Twenty-third Infantry—Co. G—Samuel Holdridge. Co. H—Simon Cleland, Andrew J. Ryle, Thomas Bunker, William Ring, Alpheus W. Baker, Thomas Yule, Isaac Ring, Leander Wells, John F. Stahl, John Lawrence, Franklin A. G. Eaton, John Cavenaugh, James Pettit, Ransom P. Ray, John Sweet, Joseph Church, Patrick Farrell, Anthony Phillips, Charles Ring, Lyman Williams, Adolphus Graves, Joseph Michael Bartholomew, Thomas Furber, George W. Kingsley, John R. Scott, Joseph C. Brown, Cornelius Dever, Ansen S. Burlingame, Henry A. Shaw, Henry Bates, Thomas Dowden, Leonard F. Warner, Joseph Eells, Jr., George Phinney, Thomas C. Armor, Henry L. Bancroft, Christian Stacker, Joseph R. Collin, H. C. Lockwood, James Quinn, Seth B. Lannehill, G. E. Reynolds, Thomas Townsend, Capt. E. Howard Irwin, Charles L. Brown.

Twenty-third Infantry—Co. K—George Van Loan.
First Cavalry—Company unknown—William Travis, Robert Travis, Thomas Anferson.
Second Cavalry—Co. E—E. Morse.
Sixth Battery—George W. Barney.
U. S. Regulars—William Leach.

TOWN OF LOWVILLE.

First Infantry—Co. E—R. McDonald. Co. G—A. Gardner, Homer Brintnall, A. D. Bundy.
Second Infantry—Co. G—Randall McDonald, Charles Delaney, John Rowell, Joseph Costley, George W. Stalker, John Lynch, John Lester, Charles Inex. Co. H—C. H. Brayton.
Third Infantry—Co. K—Charles Curtis, Alva Newell.
Ninth Infantry—Co. B—George H. H. Hawes, Edwin Dye, Theodore Fletcher.
Tenth Infantry—Co. D—Peter Montier, George Hand, Michael Coulon, John Borabangh, Leonard Frinton, Lewis Green, Thomas Darrow, Lyman Burleson, John Brady.
Eleventh Infantry—Co. I—Cyrus Benjamin.
Eighteenth Infantry—Co. I—Oliver Gunderson, James Mettler, Ole Severson, A. J. Herring.
Twentieth Infantry—Co. K—Albert Morse, Joseph D. Vermilyer.
Thirty-second Infantry—Co. K—Lewis Low, Jac. G. Herring, Henry Caff Theodore Northrop, Calvin Andrews, Anson White, Elias H. Webb, Jonathan Gilbert, Ambrose Oleson, Andrew Arenson, Andrew Simonson, Michael Gunderson, Ever Sampson, John McCann, David Chase, Horace Stalker, Charles Carman, John Carman, James Gilson, Levi Reeves, Ole Kittleson.
First Cavalry—Company unknown—John Midberry, Alfred C. Wait.
Second Cavalry—Co. E—James Price, Willis Leasure.

TOWN OF MARCELLON.

Second Infantry—Co. G—Homer Smith, George Mills, George Leeds, Freeman Smith, William Powderly, Chas. P. Heath, Homer Sweetman.
Third Infantry—Co. C—Edward Vining, Harrison Vining.
Fourth Infantry—Co. D—Alfred Kinney.
Ninth Infantry—Co. B—Edwin Dye.
Tenth Infantry—Co. D—Harlow Wittam, Winfield Wittam.
Sixteenth Infantry—Company unknown—Wisley Clark.
Twenty-third Infantry—W. H. Austin, John L. Edger-ton, Daniel Jerome, Leonard Cobb, Clinton Hoyt, Eugene Williams, John Smith, Mathew Reardon, George W. Henick, Martin Cook, Oscar Hill, Martin Briggs, Duwayne McQueen, Patrick Glasgow, William Fairfield, Benjamin Pace, Ira Kinney, Nelson Morrison, James Atkinson, Samuel Quinn.
Second Cavalry—Co. E—J. C. Blodgett, Robert Van Steinburg, William Albee, William Comstock, Carmi Beach, George Ames, Albert Stedman. Co. H—Emmet West, Gilman Smith, Henry Cook, Hiram Miles, William French, S. B. Roberts, T. J. A. Fletcher.
Regiment unknown—William Ketchum, William Williams

TOWN OF NEWPORT.

First Infantry—Company unknown—I. Sternburg.
Fourth Infantry—Co. D—Capt. Joseph Bailey, R. E. Herren, Charles Mueller, George W. Porter, J. W. Porter, W. S. Payne, Myron Skinner, Virgil Thayer, Enos Vliet, E. P. Wooruff.

Seventh Infantry—Co. A—J. M. Perry. Co. B—Geo. Gayman.

Tenth Infantry—Co. D—Halver Halverson, Freman Buder. Co. H—P. Edmundson.
Twelfth Infantry—Co. E—H. Bennett, E. F. Bennett, F. M. Canfield, William Fisher, James M. Gulick, J. Hawes, John Soman, L. Woodworth, William Watson.
Fifteenth Infantry—Company unknown—H. Oleson.
Seventeenth Infantry—Co. H—J. H. Colbourn, John Guger, Joel Hamlin, T. Morrison.
Eighteenth Infantry—Co. G—J. H. Shield, C. Shield, Co. H—Heman Bradley, Co. K—William Buck, R. O. Crunst, Andrew Hooker, Jefferson Kingsley, John O'Connor, David Prothers, James N. Shield, J. A. Whipple, S. W. Jerard Pardee.
Nineteenth Infantry—Co. G—H. W. Kingsbury, Elmer Hathaway, Jacob Guger.
Thirty-first Infantry—Co. I—Milton Armstrong, M. C. Armstrong, Rason Bonnell, J. K. Conner, Osmund Christoferson, C. H. Gould, Ole Kuttleson, J. W. Kertzart, Henry Shinks, William Sweet, W. A. York.
First Cavalry—Company unknown—A. Blood. Co. C—W. H. Caswell, George A. Caswell, F. M. Compton. Co. F—Harvey E. Wety.
Third Cavalry—Co. H—Willis A. Hawes. Co. F—J. H. Clerk. Company unknown—H. R. Smith.

TOWN OF OTSEGO.

First Infantry—Co. G—George N. Lawton.
Second Infantry—Co. A—Henry M. Hunting, Brainard D. Graves, Philo Pason.
Sixth Infantry—Co. C—Henry M. Botten.
Seventh Infantry—Co. A—Wallace Henton, Cyrus Henton. Co. B—David B. Pulver, Richard Westly, John H. Smith, John Hughes, Alexander Hughes, Azel Stoddard, Azel S. Miller, John E. McMahon, Henry Sickels, Daniel Sickels, C. C. Spalding, D. B. Porner, George Bush. Co. E—Tolly Ogden. Co. G—Nathaniel Jones.
Tenth Infantry—Co. D—Lyman M. Burleson, Thomas P. Darre, Alson Bush.
Sixteenth Infantry—Co. B—Alphanso Herrington. Co. D—Lewis Pettis.
Eighteenth Infantry—Co. I—Hiram H. Brown, Lewis Anderson.
Twenty-third Infantry—Co. G—Hugh Halb.
Thirty-second Infantry—Co. K—Newton Ackerman, Ansel Starr, James Pulver, Charles Lee, B. J. Fromdall, James A. Gano, Lewis H. Stickney, George M. Stickney, Jabez Hunting, Jr., Dennis Blenis, Edwin Merrin, C. C. Holly, George S. Harring, Hiram Pittis, William Andrews.
First Cavalry—Co. L—Joseph R. Lee.
Third Cavalry—Co. L—James McMahon.
Regiment unknown—Silas B. Roat.

TOWN OF PACIFIC.

Second Infantry—Co. G—Francis Gilmore.
Tenth Infantry—Co. D—Hiram Mason, Samuel Murray, Alfred Holmes, George W. Marsh, William Dow, Lorenzo Dow.
Fourteenth Infantry—Co. E—David Quackinbush.
Sixteenth Infantry—Co. I—John Sines.
Eighteenth Infantry—Co. I—Francis Everson, Nathan Everson, James Everson. Company unknown—Owen Carrol.
Nineteenth Infantry—Co. D—Ludwick Booth, William Mar.

Twenty-third Infantry—Co. C—Chester B. Flowers, James Holmes.

TOWN OF RANOLPH.

Second Infantry—Co. A—George E. Maynard, Jasper Daniels, Charles Fletcher, William H. Thomas, Chester B. Thomas, Charles C. Thomas, Martin V. Bloodgood, Lewis Norton, Frederick Martin, Amasa Ketcham, Daniel Williams, William Lewis, Robert Welch.

Eighth Infantry—Co. D—Samuel Fanstenod, J. C. Voteman, G. B. Finney, Carlos F. Mansor, Avery Robinson, George H. Whirry, Thomas Collins, William Fitts, Henry Hockmer, George S. Holsie, Elisha Fletcher, John Wilson, Francis Gale, John Carlisle, George Plank, David L. L. D. Jones.

Tenth Infantry—Company unknown—Jos. G. Thomas.
Eleventh Infantry—Co. H—Jonson Anderson, Frederick Langdon.

Sixteenth Infantry—Co. B—Lorenzo Ford. Co. D—Josiah Fields, James Sims. Co. H—Isaac Vanorum, John Vanorum. Company unknown—George Herrick.

Nineteenth Infantry—Co. B—William W. Griffith. Co. D—Edward McGrath, Byron Daniels, John Jones, John Griffith. Company unknown—Thomas Jones.

Twenty-third Infantry—Co. C—Porter Langdon, Byron Anderson.

Twenty-ninth Infantry—Co. E—Patrick Rada, Scott Carlisle, Jerome Gordon, John W. Phillips, James Dibble, Oliver Walch, Joseph Thomas, Job W. Perry, Samuel Mead, Lucius Cole.

TOWN OF RANDOLPH.

Twenty-ninth Infantry—Co. E—John Egan, Alfred Gary, John Jackson, John Riley, William Jackson, John Dutton, Alphonzo Dibble, Cornelius Palmitier, Frederick Hawky, Andrew Onto, Richard Perrott, Samuel Daward.

Regiment unknown—Perry Thompson, Richard H. Jones, David Griffith, Lewis Evans, E. H. Pritchard.

Second Cavalry—Co. H—Even Evens.

Third Cavalry—Co. I—Edward Rice.

TOWN OF SCOTT.

First Infantry—Co. A—Melvin L. Fuller.

Second Infantry—Co. A—Samuel Cook, James Lewis. Co. G—Horner Sweetman, John H. Langdon.

Tenth Infantry—Co. K—Horace Fuller.

Eleventh Infantry—Co. G—James Lee. Co. H—James O'Neil.

Eighteenth Infantry—Co. G—Theodore Thomas. Co. I—Morris Cook, Hilard Taylor, George Garsuch, S. Langdon, Adrastus Cook.

Nineteenth Infantry—Co. G—Charles Odey.

Twenty-third Infantry—Co. C—John D. Parish, Freeman Bentley, Israel Cannon, Joseph Hewitt, Jr.

Regiment unknown—John Marshall, John J. Edwards, Thomas T. Roberts, John Luther Dutton, Reynold Nemitz, Mark Mead, Edward Wight, Erwin Grover, Charles Chapman.

Light Artillery—Co. B—George Stancer (Mich.).

First Cavalry—Co. F—Martin Mayhew, Robert Wright.

Second Cavalry—Co. E—Stephen Woodard, Charles Heath, Herbert Heath, Frank Hughes, — Stallman. Company unknown—William Stallman.

Third Cavalry—Co. C—Martyr Judge.

TOWN OF SPRINGVALE.

Second Infantry—Co. G—John Hause, Francis Gilmore, Horace Neely.

Eighth Infantry—Co. D—Daniel L. Morris.

Tenth Infantry—Co. D—Alexander Wiltsy, Allen Grow.
Eleventh Infantry—Co. C—Hugh Kelley.

Fourteenth Infantry—Co. K—Peller Palmitier, Kneelious Palmitier.

Sixteenth Infantry—Co. A—Joseph C. Kelley.

Eighteenth Infantry—Co. I—Evan H. Williams, William Furgurson, John Giance.

Nineteenth Infantry—Company unknown—Hendry Funk.

Twenty-second Infantry—Co. I—Evan Roberts, Robert Williams.

Regiment unknown—Failo Brower, Joe Carrter, Hugh W. Hughes, Rowland Morris, Thomas Babcock, Edward Hartt, George Morgan, Edward Morgan, David Jones, John Williams, John Roberts, Edward Williams, David Williams, Owen Hughes.

Second Cavalry—Co. E—Austin Camian, Faiett Cannon.

Third Cavalry—Co. C—Hendrey Brower, James Palmer.

TOWN OF WEST POINT.

Second Infantry—Co. A—William Kibby, James E. Northrop. Co. G—Charles Morter, Jr. Co. H—Thomas Kannon.

Sixth Infantry—Co. A—Marshal Keyes.

Seventh Infantry—Co. A—Albert O'Conner, John O'Conner. Co. D—P. T. Battan. Co. G—James H. Rodgers. Co. H—Oscar Parry, Edward Fenton, Hiram Wyatt, John Yule.

Eleventh Infantry—Co. A—William Madison, James Henderson, Michael Donahoe, Frederick Raymond, John Story. Co. H—Horace Polley, William Haassor, Harvey S. Barnes, Ed. Pinton.

Fourteenth Infantry—Co. K—Lewis Lyman, Horace D. Lyman, Hiram Burroughs, Richard Jennepe, Hiram T. Johnson, Samuel B. Johnson, Horace A. Foster, Azro Abbott, Harmon Tiffany.

Seventeenth Infantry—Co. H—Ansil J. Bugby.

Twenty-third Infantry—Co. H—Edgar Richmond, Alonzo Duel, Byron Waffle, H. P. Waffle, Charles Passage, Earnest Danger, Robert Maynard, A. B. Avery, Rufus Morrell, Lorenzo C. Warrenner, Edward Streeter. Co. K—William Ballard, Martin Delaney, Henry H. Avery, Patrick Morrisy, Patrick Ryou, John Kehoe, William T. Shirliff.

Second Cavalry—Company unknown—Edward H. Moore, Myron Z. Ribbet.

Third Cavalry—Arnold Pratt.

Sixth Battery—Alonzo B. Avery, Samuel Clark, Charles Hutchinson, Thomas C. Jackson, Edwin Barberia, Andy Herren, Augustus Dilly, William Dowden, Frank Baker, W. W. Wyman, George A. Bigford.

Twelfth Battery—David Kyes.

Sixth Regiment—Webster Kyes, Orin Kyes.

TOWN OF WYOCENA.

Second Infantry—Co. G—S. A. Nichols, Peter Irwin, Edward Rice, George Briffett, Richard V. Dey, James Holden, Charles Johnson, George Mack, Henry Rensimore, John Chapman, Stephen Egglestou, Charles Reynolds, George Williams, George Blanchard, Andron F. Pardee, H. K. Coffin, John House, W. H. Mathewson, Yates Ashley, Charles P. Bloom, Charles Rice, Richard Batson, John M. Carr, Charles Heath, Theodore Fletcher, George Hodgedon.

Fifth Infantry—Co. D—John Brady.

Sixth Infantry—Co. A—W. W. Spear.

Seventh Infantry—Co. B—James K. Salisbury. Co. E—Edward Bowen, Ira D. Grow, Charles H. Johnson.

Eighth Infantry—Regimental Band—Samuel W. Jones, Norman Coopman, Henry H. Blair, Samuel O. Leonard, Charles Cook, D. H. Cummings, Jr.

Tenth Infantry—Co. D—H. C. Luther, Henry Thrall, Daniel Babcock, Rollin Nichols, F. M. Spear, A. E. Patchin, Henry Oviatt, James Dickson, David H. Cummings, Sr., Charles W. Hill, Alfonso Jones, Frank Cummings, Thomas Knowles, N. D. Cone, Charles Cone, Alanson A. Bull, Royal Hawkins, George Rouse, Hobert Parmenter, Marcus Parmenter, C. C. Merrill, James

Hayes, Chap. James L. Coffin, O. M. Smoke, Alson Bush, Wescott Austin, James Forrister, Martin Gerry, Thomas R. Powers, Charles Rockwood, John Purves.

Eighteenth Infantry—Co. F—Henry Cooledge.

Nineteenth Infantry—Co. D—Volney D. Carpenter, Gerard Dey, Peter McGuire, Augustus Lobdell, Highland Wheelock, John Pallister, John Ballard.

Twenty-third Infantry—Co. C—Albert L. Bonnell, John Hunt, William Boothe. Co. F—Henry C. Stanley.

Second Cavalry—John Brown, Jacob Luzeler, George Mack, Albert Steadman, Allen Grow.

Regiment unknown—Richard Williams.

COLUMBIA COUNTY OF TO-DAY.

The general surface of Columbia County is gently rolling prairie and openings, with some level marsh. There is about 40 per cent of the land that is styled openings, where the timber is mainly white, burr and black oak, and the balance is nearly equally divided into prairie, timber and marsh land. The timber is principally oak, maple, basswood and elm. The county contains 492,500 acres; 485,580 acres of these are owned by actual settlers, which are assessed at an average value of $12.83 per acre. Nearly two-thirds of the land are now cultivated. There are a number of excellent water-powers. Numerous quarries of lime and sandstone, and beds of clay, furnish first-class material for building purposes. The railroad communications are excellent; there is no point in the county more than twelve miles from a line of road, and it will also have, at no distant day, it is believed, uninterrupted water communication with the Mississippi and Lake Michigan. On the Wisconsin River, where it passes through the county, some of the grandest scenery is to be found in the West. It has already been shown how celebrated are the Dells of the Wisconsin. They are much visited by tourists, the number annually increasing. Two good boats make their regular trips daily, in the summer, and objects of interest are shown and fully explained to visitors.

The State census of 1875 showed a population of 28,803; of these, 19,653 are natives of the States, and 9,150 are foreigners, including 2,774 from Germany; 2,681 from England and Scotland; 1,564 from Sweden and Norway; 1,332 from Ireland, and 511 from Canada. There are twenty-one towns, and two cities, containing an area of 800 square miles. The city of Portage has a total assessed value of real estate of $647,110, and personal property to the amount of $335,000. Her public buildings, business blocks and private dwelling houses are a credit to the place. The city of Columbus has real estate to the amount of $445,040, and personal property amounting to $330,000. The principal villages in the county are Lodi, Kilbourn City, and Cambria. The other villages of the county are Wyocena, Rio, Otsego, Doylestown, Fall River, Pardeeville, Okee, Poynette, Arlington, and a part of Randolph. Besides the post offices in Portage and Columbus and in these villages, there are those in the county named Randolph Center, Leeds Center, Leeds, North Leeds, Keyeser, Lowville, Marcellon, Bellefontain, Midland, Port Hope, Hampden, West Point, Farr's Corners, Rocky Run, Dekorra, Alloa, Colburn, Lewiston, Pacific and Hartman.

All parts of the county are well supplied with water, and the various streams afford complete drainage. The Fox River and its tributaries drain the northern part; Rock River the eastern part, emptying into the Mississippi at Rock Island, Ill.; the Wisconsin the remainder, pouring its waters into the Mississippi at Prairie du Chien. Many of the streams afford good water privileges, which are utilized at several points in the driving of flouring-mills. Spring Creek has now six; Duck Creek, four; Rowan Creek, two; Rocky Run, one; Crawfish, two; Fox Run, one. The majority are custom mills and do only local work.

Stock raising is now recognized as quite an industry among the farmers. As the land becomes less adapted for the cereals, pasture lands take their place, and the hills and valleys are now seen dotted with herds of cattle and flocks of sheep; of the latter the finer breeds are being introduced. As an outgrowth of the cattle feeding and grazing, together with the low price of wheat, the dairy business was begun. A number of cheese factories are distributed at different points, the export during the season of 1878 amounting to about 1,000,000 pounds.

Three lines of railroad enter the county and afford easy exit in all directions. These are the Wisconsin Central, which has Portage City for its southern terminus, and connects with points to the northward; the Madison, Northern and La Crosse Divisions of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul; and the Chicago & North-Western. In all there are about one hundred and twenty miles of road within the limits of the county.

The educational facilities in the county are excellent. There are 149 schoolhouses, a large proportion being in good condition. Instruction is spurred on by Institutes, by the County Teachers' Association, and by the visits to the schools of the County Superintendent.

There are seven newspapers in the county. These, in mechanical appearance and editorial ability, take high rank in the State. The State Register, Democrat and Columbia County Wecker are published in Portage; the Democrat and Republican, at Columbus; the Valley News, at Lodi; and the Dells Reporter, at Kilbourn City.

In the internal improvements of the county are found abundant indications of the enterprise, good taste and prosperity of its citizens. A large number of first-class farm houses and private residences is seen. Church edifices are numerous, and are respectable in size and appearance. The county buildings are large, convenient and well adapted to the purposes for which they are designed, and no more faithful, intelligent and accommodating county officers are anywhere to be found.

Considering its geographical position, its physical features, its agricultural, social and financial advantages, and the intelligence and enterprise of its inhabitants, Columbia County may be regarded as a model county.

CHAPTER X.

THE CITY OF PORTAGE.

EARLY SETTLEMENT—GROWTH OF PORTAGE—PORTAGE THIRTY YEARS AGO—PORTAGE IN 1860—“CLAIM TWENTY-ONE”—RICHARD FREEMAN VEEDER—THE GUPPEY PLAT AND VEEDER CLAIM—ORGANIZATION AND GOVERNMENT OF PORTAGE—THE CANAL—THE SCHOOLS—RELIGIOUS INSTITUTIONS—MANUFACTORIES—FERRIES AND BRIDGES—THE FIRE DEPARTMENT AND FIRE RECORD—BANKS—WISCONSIN EDITORIAL ASSOCIATION—EARLY JUSTICE IN PORTAGE—THE SCHULZE BAND—THE POST OFFICE—HOTELS—PUBLIC HALLS—LOCAL MILITIA—ORDERS AND SOCIETIES—CEMETERIES—PORTAGE OF TO-DAY.

EARLY SETTLEMENT.

Henry Carpenter, now residing at Coloma, Waushara County, was the first white man to make, within the present city limits of Portage, improvements of a permanent and progressive character, though preceded, as a resident, by Silas Walsworth. Mr. Carpenter says:

“I landed in Portage in July, 1837—my wife and I and a man and wife by the name of Hart. Henry Merrell was keeping a sutler’s store when I came, in a building close by the fort.* He afterward built and moved to the west side of Fox River. The first white woman who came to the portage, and permanently settled there, was Sarah Carpenter, my wife; the first white child born at the portage was George Carpenter, my son. Silas Walsworth kept a small grocery on the Wisconsin River, near the place where I built my hotel. Gideon Low (an army officer), then living at the fort, was building the Franklin House when I came, and afterward moved into it.”

Neither Carpenter nor Low came to Portage to settle there, although they finally became residents. The same may be said of Henry Merrell, who was a sutler at Fort Winnebago, and came to the portage in 1834. He built a store on the west side of the Fox River, opposite the fort, in the summer or fall of 1837, about the same time that Carpenter erected the old original United States Hotel. Both Merrell and Low lived and died in Portage. Silas Walsworth, whom Carpenter found living on the portage in July, 1837, came the same year. He afterward married the Widow Pervonsal, more familiarly known as Madame Pauquette, and, in 1846, when Columbia County was organized, was chosen to fill the responsible office of County Judge, though he failed to qualify and assume its duties. He came to the portage as a trader who might at any time leave for another place.

The year 1838 witnessed the advent of Andrew Dunn, Hugh McFarlane, Clark Whitney, J. Garrison, Archibald Barker, Jonathan Cole and others. Dunn, McFarlane and Whitney, it seems, were the only ones who “came to stay.” The full tide of immigration set in during 1839–40, and continued unabated for nearly twenty years.

GROWTH OF PORTAGE.

The development of Portage, during the first fifteen years of its existence, was rapid. Unlike most Wisconsin cities and villages, dependent upon the local water-power site for their earlier greatness, Portage commanded a large share of the trade of all those portions of the State lying between Green Bay and Prairie du Chien; that is to say, the products of the region of country extending along the Fox and Wisconsin Rivers found their way to Portage, where exchanges and sales were made, and thus the place became, and, in fact, has since remained the entrepot of Central Wisconsin. Under these circumstances, its growth has been rapid, though of a less substantial nature in the earlier part of its history than now. In fact, from 1849 to

* East of Fox River, and therefore outside the present city limits.

1860 may be denominated the speculative period in its development; while the era of permanent progress occupies the time from the latter date to the present. The canal, of course, was the improvement toward which every one looked and the thoughts of all reverted. When it was finally decided that there should be a canal, before the survey had been made, great excitement prevailed among the people owning and occupying the little cluster of houses along Wisconsin street. It was generally believed that the two rivers would be connected through Bronson avenue, inasmuch as the two streams approached nearest together at this point, and a demand for property along the avenue was necessarily soon manifested. But, as some experience has long since taught, there is no telling where canals and railroads are going until they get there; the Portage Canal was no exception to the rule. Bronson avenue property owners were seriously disappointed when the fiat went forth that the canal, with a perplexing elbow in it, should be located some distance northwest of them. This announcement created confusion, and real estate values were sadly effected. Immigrants were constantly pouring in, but very few of them chose to locate upon "the flat;" they preferred high ground. And then it was that the first settlements were made along the brow of the semi-circular hill, then so clearly discernible, in what are now the Second and Third Wards. The population of this new settlement was composed almost entirely of former residents of Fremont, Ohio. A very brisk rivalry soon sprang up between the old residents of "Lower Town" and the new comers of "Upper Town;" and when the latter became influential enough to secure the removal of the post-office to the north side of the canal, the name "Gougeville" was immediately substituted for "Upper Town" by the chagrined denizens of "The Flat." The energy and industry of all classes, however, soon united in the common cause of progress. The two settlements became one, and local differences of a character to retard development were thereafter seldom indulged in.

In the fall of 1853, there were ten dry goods stores in Portage, with an aggregate stock worth nearly a quarter of a million of dollars. Of other mercantile establishments, such as grocery, drug, clothing, hardware, jewelry and tin stores, there were sixteen. This number did not include the "grocery stores" where liquor was the chief commodity dealt in. In several of the establishments mentioned, the daily receipts were from $100 to $150, and it was generally conceded that more business was transacted in Portage (then but three or four years of age) than in Jamesville, the latter having the advantage of three times the population and twenty years' experience.

"Three years ago," says a writer of 1854, "it was but a bare frontier settlement around the old Fort Winnebago; now it numbers 3,000 inhabitants, and is the center of trade for a large tract of the best country in the State. Two freight and passenger steamers are running to this place weekly from the Mississippi River, thereby connecting Portage with St. Louis and New Orleans. There is but one check to its growth, and that I regard as only temporary; I mean the Veeder claim dispute, just decided by the Supreme Court in favor of Veeder."

During 1854, manufacturing institutions, schools and churches sprang up on every hand. The very atmosphere appeared to throb with the pulsations of progress. McNeal & Burgher completed their four-story stone flouring-mill on the canal in this year; Smith & Blair established a furnace on Dodge street; work was commenced on the La Crosse & Milwaukee Railroad depot buildings; a classical institute was placed upon a sound footing; a daily mail was established between Madison and Portage; H. Orton organized a circus, and gave a performance for the benefit of the poor; while numerous other progressive movements were made.

In 1855, D. Vandercook built and finished his substantial brick block, 46x65, three stories high; B. F. Pixley erected a steam planing-mill, on the north bank of the river, near the ferry. Arnold, Fargo, Mappa, Dunn and McFarlane broke ground for an extensive brick structure (now the Corning House), on the northwest corner of Cook and Wisconsin streets; Mr. Sexton completed a block of stores on Cook street; six brick buildings, the property of Mr. McTighe, were in course of construction; the Methodist Church was completed; the Presbyterian Church was commenced; the Episcopal Church was finished, and numerous private residences were occupied for the first time. A local editor sums up the work of two years as follows: "Two years ago this month (August), we took possession of the room we now occupy as a printing office—which was hurriedly finished for the purpose—in an isolated building, with a few temporary cabins in the immediate neighborhood. The corner opposite was cultivated as a vegetable garden, and one unfinished building on DeWitt street stood alone between us and the corner above. Now, the space, from street to street, is covered with handsome business blocks—one banking house, twelve new stores, offices, saloons and shops—and the busy hum of trade rises from the spot then covered with cabbages and potatoes. On the next corner, where the grass-plot spread so invitingly for the circus folks to pitch their tents, now stands a block of fire-proof buildings, fifty-four feet high from cellar to battlement, with a front of one hundred and thirty feet, and built in a style unexcelled by any in the State. Alongside of this, fronting on Wisconsin and Cook streets, masons are actively engaged in raising the walls of a block of still larger size; and still another store and brick building is being erected on the northwest corner of Wisconsin and Cook streets, by Mr. Haertel. Three handsome church edifices are being finished with all the dispatch that circumstances will admit." At this date, the population of Portage, officially ascertained, was 2,062, as follows: First Ward, 612; Second Ward, 443; Third Ward, 464; Fourth Ward, 543. This did not include the residents in the vicinity of the Fort, those in Pacific or that portion of Lewiston embraced in the business of the city. In September, Prospect Hill was surveyed and laid out in city building lots by Dr. McCulloch, and in the early part of October, Milo H. Pettibone purchased of Thomas Christopher the lots corner of DeWitt and Cook streets, paying therefor $4,000. One of the conditions of the sale required Mr. Pettibone to erect within one year a brick block, not less than three stories high, and to occupy the entire front on DeWitt street (114 feet). C. J. Pettibone was then at work on a similar structure on the opposite side of the street. As showing the normal condition of things at that date, it is stated that during three months of the summer and fall of 1855, more than ten thousand persons, with their teams, stock, etc., crossed the Wisconsin River in the neighborhood of Portage, en route for homes in the great Northwest.

At the beginning of the year 1856, contracts had been let for the completion of 100 buildings the then coming season. Among other institutions in successful operation at that date, there were five hotels, one iron foundry and machine-shop, one steam saw-mill, one planing-mill, one flouring-mill and three brick-yards. Besides the numerous mercantile institutions already established, eleven brick structures, to be filled with new goods when completed, were then in process of construction; five churches and three printing-offices helped to make up the list of important things.

In the fall of 1856, Ketchum's Second Addition to Portage was laid out, and became a part of the city; the Portage Bridge Company was organized, and preparations made for the construction of the great bridge over the Wisconsin River. About the middle of November, on a damp, still morning, the heavy atmosphere vibrated to notes never before heard in the vicinity, Whence came they? The "thing" screamed again. The oldest settlers' knees trembled, and women are said to have fainted. The citizens assembled in little knots on the street corners, and, finally, a Committee of Safety having been appointed, it was ascertained that a railway construction train, somewhere between Ponds ville and Cambria, had run out to the end of the road to wake up the natives with its little whistle. Fear and sorrow was soon afterward turned to joy when the iron horse came puffing into the city.

A local newspaper, announcing some of the principal business changes within the month, tells us that "Mr. Van Winter's Block, on Cook street, is now in working order, Mr. Van Winter having removed his stock round the corner into No. 1, and Messrs. Emerson & McGrath having taken possession of No. 2. Messrs. B. & S. Schwartz, finding their three stores, on the east side of the canal, too small for their stock, have taken the one recently vacated by Mr. Van Winter. J. Servis & Co. (newcomers in town) have taken the store formerly occupied by G. W. Babcock, in Pettibone's Block, which they have filled with ready-made clothing. Mr. Babcock has changed his quarters to Verandah Block, in the store heretofore occupied by J. B. Miller. O. Case still offers bargains at the 'People's Store,' formerly known as Anderson's." At that date, the population of Portage was 4,364. It is not surprising that new additions to the city and new stores and manufactories were so frequently announced. Building did not cease through the entire winter (and it was a cold one). A public sale of real estate took place the day after Christmas, at which $13,000 changed hands for city lots, most of the purchasers proceeding immediately to rear houses thereon.

The panicky condition of affairs in 1857 had its effect upon the progress of Portage. There was noticeably less activity in all kind of business. Real estate ceased to advance in price, there was less demand for building material, money became scarce, cash customers were in greater demand and the people moved cautiously. The end of the speculative era had arrived. Then commenced the substantial and permanent period of the young city's growth. The completion of the La Crosse & Milwaukee Railroad and the spanning of the Wisconsin River with the great bridge in this year are important items in the history of Portage. It was cause for congratulation that the citizens had never voted the credit of the city, except to aid in the building of the bridge, and, while other cities and villages were struggling to meet their bonded obligations, Portage occupied the enviable position of a brilliant exception in the matter of indebtedness. Private capital was no less plenty than in years past, but there was less of it in sight.

In the spring of 1858, in spite of the hard times, there were from fifty to eighty buildings being erected, many of them of brick, of the most substantial character. Labor, lumber and lots had become as good a circulating medium as coin itself. Lumber men bought lots, built houses and paid in lumber; laborers obtained lumber and building lots in exchange for work, while land-owners contracted for work, lumber and other material, and gave an equivalent in lots.

In 1859, the assessed real and personal property, in the city of Portage, was valued at $588,169. A correspondent draws the following picture: "Seven years ago, I entered Portage on a lumber-wagon, after a tedious four days journey from Milwaukee. What is now a large, well-built city, with an enterprising population, was then an unreclaimed waste, dotted by a few straggling houses. Its growth has been almost magical. It contains many structures that would do honor to a much larger city. The churches, especially, are unusually fine edifices, and speak well for the intelligence and morality of the inhabitants. There are also several large blocks built in a substantial and tasteful manner. The color of the brick made here is the same as that of the far-famed Milwaukee brick, and gives to the place a cheerful and pleasing appearance."

The war of the rebellion came, and the unparelled progress that has always characterized the history of Portage was again temporarily checked. The implements of industry were laid aside, and the destructive weapons of war taken up. Hundreds of the best men composing the thriving population gave up their pursuits of peace and joined the grand army to aid in obliterating treason. Many of them never returned. A new generation has grown up. Confidence in the integrity of the Government has been fully restored. The rays of a new industrial era are just beginning to shed their welcome splendor over the battlements of progress. Portage, through all the tribulations that resulted disastrously to other cities, has not receded. Her commercial supremacy has been steadily maintained. Her reverses have simply checked, not diminished, her prosperity. She boasts of shrewd and enterprising merchants. All that is now lacking is the development of the manufacturing advantages she naturally possesses, she being, as it were, the "half-way house" of Wisconsin.

PORTAGE THIRTY YEARS AGO.

Fort Winnebago, in 1850, claimed a population of 300 or 400 inhabitants, but had, by actual count, probably 200; and no small share of these were merely transient stoppers in the place. There were three villages then—the little collection of houses under the hill this side of the Fox River at the fort, the little hamlet down the plank road at the United States Hotel, and what is now the site of the city. A Detroit firm, Webb & Bronson, had bought and platted a large tract, including a portion of what is now the Second Ward, and extending nearly to the fort; and for a long time the proprietors did not give up the idea that over near the fort was to be the future city; for none of the inhabitants even then doubted that Portage was to be an important point. In that little burg were to be found Henry and G. H. Merrell, in the dry-goods and grocery business; L. Berry, in the same line; A. Sheret, we believe, Bully O'Neil, the tinker, in the tin business, and somebody running a blacksmith-shop. The post office for this whole section of country, with a semi-weekly mail, was also over there, and was kept by G. T. Getty, and John Graham was the first clerk. M. R. Keegan and C. H. Moore held forth in the old Government building at the left of the bridge, on the opposite side of the river, and ran a grocery and provision store; F. Steber occupying one corner of the store as a watchmaker and jeweler. Mr. Moore afterward conducted a store on his own account on Canal street, just in the rear of the building afterward occupied by N. M. Henry. Later, he pulled up stakes and went West. Mr. Steber also soon after removed over and continued in the jewelry business until his death in 1872. Dr. Prentice lived at the fort, in one of the officers' buildings, at the right of the road, and practiced his profession. He also, a few years later, removed "into town," where he still resides. C. D. Hottenstein, also physician and surgeon, resided in that locality as well; but in 1856 or 1857, removed to Columbia, Penn. William Spain resided at the fort, and occupied his time in civil engineering. James Chancellor, now of St. Louis, taught school there during the week, and preached on Sundays. Erastus Cook lived in a little house on the avenue in front of the Franklin House. He and a Mr. Burnham kept a little store near the Franklin House. Capt. Low lived in the old agency building.

The Franklin House was a somewhat noted hotel, and for a short time was kept by Mr. Ahlum, who removed to California the same year. He was succeeded by Burnham & Armsby as proprietors, and, a little later in the year, Aaron Thompson, afterward Marshal of the city, assumed control. John Graham acted as clerk for Ahlum, and Charlie Thompson officiated for his father as clerk, hostler and "bar keep."

The post office was, late that year or early the following year, removed over to "Gougeville," as Uncle Henry Carpenter delighted to call this portion of the town, and was kept in the store of T. Dean & Co.—N. W. Dean, of Madison, being the Co.—and John H. Clark was the post office clerk. L. Berry succeeded Mr. Dean as Postmaster. Thad. Dean, in 1852, went over the Plains to California, but in a few years returned.

The little burg at the fort was not entirely abandoned for a number of years after, but no traces of a town are now left, the buildings having either rotted down or been removed.

Uncle Carpenter's town down the plank road, consisted of a dry-goods store, kept by himself, with O. P. Williams, as clerk; the Wisconsin House, kept by M. Van Winter; the old United States Hotel, with mine host Carpenter as proprietor; one or two private houses; and a first-class steamboat landing. Mr. Van Winter continued there for a time, but yielding gradually to the onward march of progress in this direction, he first removed half-way up and located a store about where the channel of the Wisconsin River now is, and afterward abandoned the flat entirely, came into town and erected the handsome brick block now occupied by Loomis, Gallett & Breese, as a dry-goods store.

On the morning of the 2d of February, 1852, the old United States Hotel, located a few rods south of the present building, was destroyed by fire. In the hall of this building, Langrische & Atwater and the elder Adams' theatrical troupes used to delight the natives in the rendition of tragedies that would make a saint weep and a Winnebago Indian lay his tomahawk down at the foot-lights. It is related that Moses M. Strong, being present at one of these entertainments, was called out by the boys and responded by "You'd scarce expect one of my age to speak in public on the stage, etc.," which called forth rounds of applause. And here, too, the young folks, together with the festive old devotees of Terpsichore, occasionally assembled and "hoed it down" with great animation and delight. It may be mentioned, also, that in this building historic tradition hath it that the first white child was born in the city—George Carpenter.

Portage proper was confined, principally, to a limit east of De Witt street and south of Pleasant, with a few scattering houses to Ketchum's Point, and about an equal number south of the canal. That year, Edwin Sylvester erected the Washington House on the corner south of where now stands the First Ward Schoolhouse, John Graham officiating as clerk. Perry Lee afterward became proprietor, and ran the hotel till it was burned in 1859 or 1860. Theophilus Muelhause (old Louis) acted as hostler for him for a number of years. R. Twentyman erected a building in the opposite block, and opened a store. He soon left for England, and died in two hours after reaching his home. Stewart & Anderson, with Hoppock & Greenwood, of New York, opened a store in the building opposite Hank James' old ball alley. The firm never got rich there, but were always happy, and Harve would always be in fashion if he never laid up a cent. A steam mill by Campbell, Buchanan & Murison was in contemplation, and partially constructed that fall. These, together with a few isolated buildings, constituted nearly all south of the canal.

That which has become so beautiful and thickly settled a residence, as well as business portion of the town, was then straggling enough; and its residents were exceedingly sensitive as to any intimation that north of the canal, on the ridge, was not the center of Portage, and, possibly of the State. The feeling between the different localities was oftentimes bitter, and men's interests in one or the other little hamlet had entirely too much to do with the opinions of each other. It is strange now to remember that such strong jealousies ever existed. The main institutions on the present site of the city were Uncle Dick Veeder's tavern, C. B. Smith's store and a liberty pole. The town was then, however, as now, rich in saloons, for the population. Main street was the principal business street. Veeder's tavern stood opposite the old barn, and in 1860, together with the new and commodious structure of that name, was consumed by fire. In the old "tavern," for "Uncle Dick" never allowed any one to speak of it as an "hotel" without a rebuke, there were many incidents, and much of interest which would repay a recital, but would fill a volume. The old house was known far and wide, and was the favorite stopping place of lumbermen in their weary return from Galena and other points below, long before emigration set this way. E. B. Treadwell was the faithful and obliging clerk. C. B. Smith's store was the store of the place. Smith was a rollicking genius, and exactly suited to work up a lively trade with the equally rollicking and devil-may-care community. During the summer months, his goods were transported by river, from Galena, by the old steamer Enterprise, a stern-wheeler of no mean pretensions at that early day. She made regular weekly trips, was well patronized and did a thrifty and profitable business. In the fall, Elias Thomas inaugurated the system of hauling goods by team, from Milwaukee, for Smith, and the succeeding years witnessed an immense business in that line, which was continued until superseded by the iron horse in the winter of 1856. Lorenzo Burger clerked for him and afterward went to California. Riley Moulton also clerked for Smith, and afterward married his widow. They removed to New Lisbon, where Mrs. Moulton died. A little later, the store of Smith was occupied by Isaac Brill, a dry-goods and clothing store, and in the winter of 1851 or 1852, was destroyed by fire.

The spring and summer of 1850 witnessed the coming, from Ohio, of C. J. Pettibone, C. G. McCulloch, George Wall, John A. Johnson, E. L. Jæger and perhaps others. Mr. Pettibone opened a store in an old building. He brought on a large stock of dry goods, groceries, etc., and opened for awhile, without, however, very flattering success. He finally, with a portion of his goods, started for Madison. On his way down he became mud-bound, and, while absent, his wise disposed of barrels of sugar, and other goods in proportion, to customers 80 and 100 miles north. On his return, with this flattering evidence of business, he concluded to remain. He succeeded beyond expectation, and he here laid the foundation for a large fortune. Mr. E. L. Jæger was the head clerk for him at that time, and remained with him for a number of years thereafter. McCulloch soon became the leading druggist and was located at the head of Main street and on the north side of Conant, and Dr. Best ran a smaller establishment of the kind further down the street, and also practiced at his profession. Fred. A. Peabody, a wide-awake Yankee, ran a grocery on Main street. Mr. Brewer run a butcher-shop on the opposite side, while Dave Morgan and a curly-headed mulatto ran a barber-shop a door or two below Dr. Best's. Frank Winnie was shoeing horses on Conant street. John Gates came in the fall of 1850, and opened the "Janesville store," in a building opposite the City Hotel, on Cook street. Mr. Older came with him. Mr. Gates "organized" the first dray in town. George and Robert Norris run a tin-shop next door to Mr. Gates. The Times office was opened in a building which then stood on Cook street. It was afterward removed to Canal street.

The legal fraternity was represented then by John Delaney, M. D. Ingraham, D. J. M. Loop, L. Van Slyck, Alvah Hand, Judge Kellogg, W. R. De Witt, A. C. Ketchum, J. A. Johnson and L. S. Dixon. John Delaney was eminent in his profession, and was widely known as a politician. M. D. Ingraham was another gifted and brilliant young man, whom all old settlers remember well, and his death, a year later, was universally lamented. D. J. M. Loop—and who, of all old neighbors, cannot remember him? Van Slyck was Justice then, and Loop practiced in Van's court, and it was Van's chief delight, when the frisky little disciple of Blackstone became enraged and unruly, to take him by the nape of his neck and the seat of his pants and throw him bodily through the window into the street. Alvah Hand, ever faithful to his client, continued the practice here till his death, which event occurred several years ago. Judge Kellogg died in 1874 at Rio. De Witt went West in search of another "rattle-trap" farm in 1860. A. C. Ketchum went to Memphis. John A. Johnson was the first partner of L. S. Dixon. Judge Dixon came late in the fall of 1850, fresh from the Vermont University, and the law school at Ballston Spa, we think, and here laid the foundation for the eminence he subsequently achieved at the bar and on the bench.

The town was soon full of mechanics, among them Alexander Carnagie. Alexander Chrystie and a man named Johnson ran a carpenter-shop on the corner near the City Hotel, and the building was afterward occupied by Col. Vaughan (brother-in-law to LeRoy Gates), a daguerrian, who removed to the Territories years later. H. Sexton and L. S. Thompson carried on the furniture business at Hollenbeck's old stand.

The first and only schoolhouse, at that time, excepting the Portage High School, with Mrs. Butz (afterward Mrs. Cornwall) as Principal, was situated in a small building and Delos Brown was the pedagogue.

The Presbyterians were the only denomination who could afford a church building, and Rev. W. W. McNair, who was the only preacher living there, preached the first season, at least, to the greater portion of the church-going community. Jenny Lind Williams used to come in eight or ten miles each Sunday to preside at the organ. The church stood on Cook street, nearly opposite the jail. Mr. McNair built and lived in the Doty House, and a few years after removed to the northwest part of the State. Williams is dead.

The construction of the canal between the two rivers, by the State, was then in progress, and a large number of laborers were attracted hither seeking employment, which was readily obtained. Thomas Reynolds had the contract for the work proper, while Gelson McNeal constructed the locks. Charlie Kingsbury, of St. Joseph, Mo., was in charge of the dredge boat, then working its way up the Fox, and a Mr. Alton was chief engineer, and had general supervision over all. The first boat through the canal was the steamer John L. Mitchell, which event occurred May 23, 1851. The appearance of the boat called out quite a concourse of people who gazed upon it in wonder and indulged in extravagant predictions as to the future. The first steamboat whistle ever heard on the "Wisconsin" in this region, was that of the old Enterprise. Perry Williams was the first man to catch the shrill sound. Never having heard its like before, Perry mistook the sound for the cries of some drowning raftsmen in the last agonies of despair, secured a skiff and started to his relief. An experienced riverman happening along, informed Perry that he was a "cussed dunce and had better go West," or words to that effect.

C. W. Mappa erected the first warehouse, which stood opposite the upper lock on the river bank. It afterward toppled over and was long since removed.

Capt. William Weir then took the fort under his protecting wing, as captain of the post in charge, and guarded faithfully and well the interests of "Uncle Sam."

P. B. Wentworth.

PORTAGE, CITY.

Michel Brisbois lived where John Graham's new brick block now stands. Mrs. B. was the daughter of Pierre Pauquette. Valentine Helmann was then shoving the jack-plane, while Owen, John and Larey Ward, Tom Dalton, Pat Sheehan, Jack Maloney and others, were like-wise engaged when not studying the sand bars and intricate channel of the "old Wisconsinse."

Of those not already mentioned, there were La Fayette Van Dusen, Dr. Seaman and Henry Ensign. All three are living in the Golden State. Of others now absent or dead, there are remembered Dr. F. W. Miller (an excellent physician, trusty friend and esteemed citizen), L. Cornwell, Amasa Wilson, E. Childs, J. M. Crawford, Deputy Sheriff Spoor, Dan Boylan, Jim Scott, Doc. Rollins, Dick Lamb, Thornton Thompson, Gale Anderson, Sam Carpenter, Charlie McNeal, D. B. Peck, Uncle Major Linn, Col. Morehouse and family, John Lodge, J. B. Sanderson, W. E. Waite, and last, though perhaps least, in size, little Sam Pearsoll.

The spring and summer witnessed the coming of a large number who have since been identified as among the city's most prominent citizens: J. J. Guppy, Josiah Arnold, J. B. Fargo, G. N. Richmond, Samuel Edwards, R. O. Loomis, H. S. Haskell, Milo and William Pettibone, A. B. Alden, O. Ward and others. Guppy then, as now, was County Judge. Not that he has held the office continuously since that time, for, be it remembered, he was an active participant in the late war, first entering the service as Lieutenant Colonel of the Tenth Regiment, and afterward assuming command of the Twenty-third, as Colonel.

Felix McLinden, "when the sun was low," assisted Samuel Reynolds about the improvement, and officiated in those days as Sergeant-at-arms of the Assembly. In a little building on Main street, N. H. Wood ran an auction store. H. G. Hansen and O. C. Bellrude kept a shoe-shop on Conant street, at the head of Main, and Thomas Buttrey had a similar institution, also on Conant street. Among other ancient "landmarks" deserving a passing notice were old Jo Robinson and old Uncle Lord, both graduates from the military post at Fort Winnebago.

The jumping of claims was of daily occurrence, and a street fight or a "knock-down" among the contestants for a corner lot was a frequent and indeed animating pastime; and may we not be pardoned for incidentally mentioning, at this late day, that we also occasionally "got one in under the ear," ourselves, but always, however, in defense of an honest claim. "Oh, dem was good times." The whole town site west of De Witt street, with occasionally here and there a house, was then in its primeval condition, being almost entirely covered with undergrowth. Main, and the east end of Cook, Conant and a little settlement in the Third Ward on Pleasant street were in town, and anywhere outside of them seemed like going into the country. Down by Hærtel's Brewery, Emders, the bank corner and Corning's store, pigeons were hunted among the then dense oak-trees, with no indifferent success. Mr. Whitney, one of the early pioneers (who died a year or two after), resided in a little frame house fronting on Canal street. The house formerly stood where Emders' Hotel now stands, and Whitney's always had a little wheat-field in his inclosure. Beyond Mr. Whitney's and near the upper lock, resided old Mr. Dempsey, who afterward removed to Lewiston, and, a few years ago, while fulfilling a contract for wood with us, fell from a load, was run over and instantly killed. A little further up and just beyond the lock, stood the building so long occupied by O. P. Williams as a residence, and which was afterward burned. In this house lived Hugh McFarlane, and in one end of the same he conducted a store. Here John Delany was dividing his time in reading law and waiting on any stray customer who chanced to favor him with a call. In the upper part of the building, Mrs. Cornwell conducted the Portage High School, an institution which was alike creditable to the enterprising citizens and its accomplished preceptress. From McFarlane's it was a short half-mile walk through the woods to the house of the late Andrew Dunn. Dunn, McFarlane and William Armstrong were early pioneers, and laid claim to a large tract of land, embracing the most of that part of the city. McFarlane was Portage's first representative in the assembly, and in making laws for the "boys" and advocating the interests of his constituents in general, proved himself a valuable member. Dunn, in 1857 or 1858, removed to New Lisbon, and, a few years later, died in the insane asylum at Madison. Across Silver Lake a mile from Dunn's, was, and still is, Conrad Collipp, the happy possessor of a valuable tract of land which has, under his supervision, been improved and beautified, and also increased in value tenfold. Samuel Slifer was Mr. Collipp's nearest neighbor. He died in 1851. Patrick Carroll made claim to what is now known as the Pettibone farm on the hill half a mile east from Collipp's. There was no road there in those days, the new pinery road not having been laid out until a year or two after. Benjamin Schulze made his claim that year, and was then living, as now, in the Second Ward. Out on the old pinery road, Coop. Lemour, from Canada, stuck his stakes and erected a small brick house, and, still further on, Enoch Pixley, also from Canada, pitched his tent and soon thereafter erected a brick building, and, for a time, ran a hotel for the accommodation of the pinery trade. These two buildings were the only brick structures in the whole village. Lemour removed to California in 1858. Bemus J. Pixley lived out in the bush opposite Mayor Gallett's residence, and James Marrs lived in the old dilapidated building in front of H. S. Haskell's. Solomon Leach and O. F. Waggoner landed here some time subsequent to the flood. Mr. Leach is rightfully entitled to the honor of building the first saw-mill which was situated on the island in the river opposite his house above the bridge. The mill was noted chiefly for its speed, the saw running on the same time-table with the Oxford stage, up one day and down the next. Mr. Waggoner for a year maintained the ferry across the river where the bridge now stands. He afterward located on the bluff which now bears his name, four miles up the river, but having a natural love for the attractions of the frontiersman's life, he soon thereafter moved further to the front. These half-dozen residents composed about all of what now constitutes the thickly settled and populous Fourth and Fifth Wards. Communication with the outside world was then by Frink & Walker's stage line to Madison, and the Veeder House, which was the stage house, oftentimes swarmed with travelers and river men on their way to the pinery.

A writer in November, 1850, says: "The canal connecting the Fox and Wisconsin Rivers at this point is very nearly completed. The work of excavation is finished, and but a small portion remains to be planked. The locks at each end are nearly finished—all, we believe, except the hanging of the gates. In addition to this improvement a levee or embankment is being erected by Messrs. Webb & Bronson (the enterprising proprietors of that part of the land on which the city is located, sold by the General Government), extending from the high land, or bluff, on the south side of the canal to the bluff on the other side of the portage. This embankment, when completed, will entirely prevent the overflow of the portage. It is now far advanced, and will cost about $16,000. Messrs. Webb & Bronson have also completed a turnpike road across the portage, from Carpenter's Hotel, on the Wisconsin River, to old Fort Winnebago, on Fox River, at a cost of $1,700.

"Heretofore, there has been but little said on the subject of the progress of our city, for the reason that while its progress has been rapid beyond parallel, it has been steady and unmarked by any particular distinguished incident. Good buildings have been erected and others are still going up. The number built within the past year is over two hundred. Among them are stores of all descriptions, mechanics' shops, taverns, offices, etc. The population of the city, as shown by the Marshal's returns, is 1,176, and is steadily increasing. This rapid improvement, startling and wonderful as it is, has been made in the face of the most serious drawbacks. Previous to the erection of the levee on the shore of the Wisconsin, eligible sites for building could only be found on the lands lately purchased from the Menomonee Indians, to which no higher title than that of a claim could be obtained. The ultimate value of such a title is subject to many contingencies, and present values and the safety of erecting buildings are determined entirely by the moral sense of the present inhabitants. So far, the confidence of those who placed a high estimate upon that moral sense has not been abused.

"The noise of hammers and saws is to be heard on every hand. The present progress of improvement is accelerated beyond that of any former time, and, during the rise of our city, the settlement in the surrounding country has more than kept pace with it. Building materials, water-powers of any capacity desired, and a rich, rapidly settling country are with us and around us. No obstacle, save that of the title to the land, stands in the track of our advancement."

"The tourist finds at this place," says a writer at Fort Winnebago, in October, 1851, "objects of deep interest. Here is the line that divides the northern and southern waters. Let us ascend the beautiful elevation that lies between the two rivers, for observations. On facing the east, we see the wide tracts once possessed by the Winnebagoes. On the right hand rolls in silent majesty the Wisconsin River, which, emptying into the Mississippi, at length reaches the Gulf of Mexico. On the river is the flourishing village of Fort Winnebago, or, as it is called, Portage City. Here, but a few years since, we wandered through a grove, where naught but the grave of the murdered Pauquette arrested the attention. Now, how changed the prospect! The place is sprinkled over with pretty white cottages and substantial stores of various kinds. A small, neat church stands in bold relief upon the brow of the table land; and this being the shire village of Columbia County, the spot where the court house is to be erected is very attractive. Standing on the high ground, it is to be a splendid building, facing a square. The courts are now held in the old garrison. On the south rise the Baraboo hills, and on the left hand the fertile lands, lately ceded to the United States by the Menomonees, stretch out in boundless extent."

PORTAGE IN 1860.

"I noticed," says a writer in 1860, "some very extensive stores in which the quality of goods and amount of display were not a whit behind Milwaukee. In W. W. Forbe's magnificent establishment in Pettibone's Block, there are no less than a dozen clerks busily engaged in their various departments. C. J. Pettibone's 'headquarters,' as he calls it, is in full operation. Pettibone opened his store in Portage eight or nine years ago, when it was a small village of only one tavern, one grocery, and a blacksmith-shop, where the lumbermen and farmers got cheated so badly that they christened it Gougeville. Indeed, that was the regular name for a long while of the now important and pretentious Portage. Pettibone's store has been carried on upon an honest principle, and has been largely influential, by square dealing, in removing from the incipient city its odious name. I also observed some fine stores on Cook street, and in the Vandercook Block, which appear to be prospering.

"Portage has one thing that is peculiarly enviable, and that is the beautiful cream-colored brick, of which most of her best buildings are made. Those who visit the place cannot fail to admire the splendid appearance of the Bank Block, Pettibone and Vandercook buildings, the Presbyterian Church, etc. These edifices owe their chief beauty to the material of which they are composed. I think that the pressed brick here are equal, if not superior, to the famous Milwaukee article. An extensive stone quarry back of Fort Winnebago furnishes substantial foundations for these beautiful structures, but there seems to be no disposition to use stone above the ground when brick and lumber are so easily obtained. The only stone building that I saw, except the county jail, was Reynolds, Craig & Co.'s Fort Winnebago Mill, at the junction of the canal and Fox River. This is an enormous building, four stories high, and now literally crammed with grain and flour, there being only room enough for six or eight runs of stone to operate in. The mill grinds steadily from Monday morning till Saturday night without cessation. Large quantities of flour and feed are sold and sent off daily.

"Portage is insufficiently supplied just now with good hotels. Last winter the Lee House burned down, and, about a month ago, the famous Veeder House was destroyed by the same means. The City Hotel and the McTighe or Ellsworth House are all that are now left to fill the vacancy, and they are crowded to repletion.

"The system of union schools just established here is in great favor. Prof. Magoffin, formerly of Carroll College, and more recently Principal of the Waukesha Union School, is at the head of an able corps of teachers, and is doing much in the cause of education."

"CLAIM TWENTY-ONE."

The land upon which a large portion of Portage now stands presents historical features of interest. Although the city is still young, title to a very important part of its site dates back many years. The land in question is that covered by what is known as the "Grignon Claim," frequently referred to as "Claim No. 21." The following is a copy of a deed made by the United States Government in 1832:

UNITED STATES TO AUGUSTIN GRIGNON.

The United States of America to all to whom these presents shall come, greeting: Know ye that there has been deposited in the General Land Office a certificate, numbered 266, of the Register of the Land Office at Detroit, in the Territory of Michigan, whereby it appears that, by the second section of the act of Congress approved on the 17th day of April, 1828, entitled "An Act to confirm certain claims to lands in the Territory of Michigan," Augustin Grignon was confirmed, saving the rights of the heirs of John Ecuyer [or Lecuyer], deceased, in his claim in volume numbered one of the Reports of the Commissioners on Land Claims in the Territory of Michigan, to the tract of land containing six hundred and forty-eight acres and eighty-two hundredths of an acre, situate at the portage of the Ouisconsin and Fox Rivers, bounded and described as follows, to wit:

Beginning on the northeast bank of the Ouisconsin River, one-fourth of a mile below the landing-place, at a post from which a birch twelve inches in diameter bears north 35 degrees west, distant eleven links, and a birch 14 inches diameter bears south 64 degrees east, distant 75 links; thence up the river north forty degrees, west twenty chains, to the landing place (entered prairie at five chains), north 70 degrees, west five chains, north 61 degrees, west 26 chains and 50 links (at three chains foot of island), south 81 degrees, west eight chains and 50 links to an aspen seven inches in diameter (corner on the bank of the river); thence north 10 degrees and 15 minutes, west thirty chains through prairie to the top of the hill to the corner of the pickets which surround the grave of the late John Ecuyer (no post, no bearings near); thence north 50 degrees east (at 15 chains enter barrens, after passing through old field at 41 chains a pond, at 46 chains left the pond, and at 58 chains a wet prairie), 118 chains to a post on the left bank of Fox River, from which a white oak five inches in diameter bears north 56½ degrees west, distant three chains and 46 links; thence up Fox River south five degrees, west three chains, south 16 degrees, west 9 chains and 50 links to landing-place at Portage, south 47 degrees, east 23 chains and 40 links to a post on the margin of river in a marsh; thence south 25 degrees and 30 minutes, west 116 chains and 70 links (entering timber land at 100 chains) to the beginning.

There is, therefore, granted by the United States unto the said Augustin Grignon and to his heirs, saving any right or claim which the said heirs of John Ecuyer, deceased, may have in and to the same, the tract of land above described; to have and to hold the said tract, with the appurtenances, unto the said Augustin Grignon and unto his heirs and assigns forever, saving, as aforesaid, any right, title or claim which the said heirs of John Ecuyer, deceased, may have in and to the hereby granted premises.

In testimony whereof, I, Andrew Jackson, President of the United States, have caused these letters to be made patent, and the seal of the General Land Office to be hereunto affixed. Given under my hand, at the city of Washington, the 26th day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-two, and of the independence of the United States the fifty-ninth.

By the President.

ANDREW JACKSON.

ELIJAH HAYWOOD,

Commissioner of the General Land Office.

Recorded on Friday, the 17th of August, A. D. 1832, at 6 o'clock P. M.

SAMUEL IRWIN, Deputy Register.

Augustin Grignon came into possession of the above described lands by purchase from the heirs of John Lecuyer, who acquired title to it by priority of settlement.

Under an act of Congress entitled "An act to confirm certain land claims in the Territory of Michigan," commissioners were appointed and sent out by the Government of the United States to inquire into the validity of title to "certain claims," and it was in accordance with the report of the commissioners that the Grignon claim became a valid one, recognized by the United States, from whom a patent accordingly issued. The boundaries of this claim have ever since been relied upon and followed by local surveyors, and frequent reference to "Claim No. 21" are made in the land records of Portage. The land was patented to Grignon in April, 1832, and on the 18th of June, of the same year, an indenture, made "between Augustine Grignon and Nancy Grignon, his wife, of the first part, and Daniel Whitney, all of Green Bay, county of Brown, of the second part, to wit: That the said parties of the first part, for and in consideration of the sum of $500 to them in hand paid by the said party of the second part, conveyed the property to Whitney. This conveyance was witnessed by Peter B. and Charles A. Grignon, and acknowledged before L. Grignon, a Justice of the Peace, being recorded June 26, 1832, by Samuel Irwin, Deputy Register of Brown County.

On the 14th of June, 1836, Sheldon Thompson, of Buffalo, N. Y., and De Gamo Jones, of Detroit, Michigan Territory, became the purchasers and owners of the land, paying therefor $12,500. Messrs. Thompson and Jones were trustees for themselves, Robert McPherson, Daniel Whitney, G. P. Griffith, and others, constituting "the Wisconsin Shot Company." They remained the owners of the Grignon claim until October 17, 1839, when the Portage Canal Company came into possession through purchase. The consideration was $34,234.61. "This indenture" was witnessed by Evan Griffith, B. L. Webb, Asher B. Bates and Samuel Haines Porter, and acknowledged by Sheldon Thompson before N. K. Hall, Commissioner of Deeds for Erie County, N. Y., and by De Gamo Jones before Samuel Haines Porter, a Notary Public in Wayne County, Mich.: received for record May 30, 1840, by Jacob McKinney, Register of Deeds, Brown County.

Thompson and Jones, it appears, again came into possession of the property, for in September, 1842, Claim 21 was sold by them, as trustees for themselves, and others, constituting the Shot Company, to Benjamin L. Webb, and in May, 1844, Alvin Bronson became the purchaser of an undivided four-nineteenths of the claim, paying Webb therefor $2,500. In November, 1849, a plat of the town of Fort Winnebago, covering the Grignon claim, was made by Messrs. Webb and Bronson, John Mullett, Surveyor. The boundary lines of this plat may be easily traced upon any of the modern maps of the city of Portage. The northwesterly boundary, designated as "the line of public lands," as distinguishing them from the early Menomonee possessions, begins at a point on the Fox River, opposite old Fort Winnebago, and runs southwesterly to the corner of Adams and Conant streets: thence almost directly south across the canal to the Wisconsin River: thence southeasterly along the bank of the river to a point half a block east of Ontario street: thence northwesterly on a direct line to Fox River, and down that stream to the place of beginning.

RICHARD FREEMAN VEEDER

was a man of wonderful constitution, and, had the laws of health been studied and more carefully observed by him, it seems as though he might have lived to an age not often allotted to mankind. His name is intimately associated with the early settlement of Portage. While he was frequently rude and rough in speech, he had a heart wonderfully tender and sympathetic, which was never appealed to in vain, and few men performed more acts of charity than "Uncle Dick." Hundreds will remember him for his charities, and speak kindly of his name, and all who ever knew him will never forget the peculiar characteristics which so emphatically distinguished him. He died at his residence, in Portage, January 19, 1870, aged about fifty-eight years. He lives largely in the remembrance of the people of Portage because of the "Veeder Claim," an account of which is given.

THE GUPPEY PLAT AND THE VEEDER CLAIM.

The plat of Portage City, covering Lots 2 and 3, and the northeast quarter of the southwest quarter, and the west half of the southwest quarter of Section 5, and Lots 5 and 6 of Section 8, all in Town 12 north, Range 9 east, and known as the "Guppy Plat," was surveyed in July, 1852, by Henry Meriton, and was recorded August 14, of the same year, in Volume VII of deeds, pages 2 and 3, by Josiah Arnold, Register. This plat was made under the provisions of a law of the United States authorizing County Judges to enter in trust for settlers thereon any portion of the public domain occupied as town sites. The above-described lands were entered by Joshua J. Guppy, County Judge of Columbia County, at the United States Land Office, June 1, 1852, but it being soon afterward discovered that the Government authorities at Washington would only recognize as valid the entry of lands on even sections, the tracts on Section 5 passed to the State, under the act of Congress, approved August 8, 1846, granting the "land equal to half of three sections in width on each side of Fox River, and the Portage Canal for the improvement of the Fox and Wisconsin Rivers." The Governor having selected the odd sections for the State, and the land comprised within the boundaries of Section 5 being within the limits of the grant—although the Indian title to it had not been extinguished when the grant was made—it was held that when the Indian title was extinguished the Governor's selection of the odd sections operated upon it, and it became the property of the State. Hence, its entry at the United States Land Office being unauthorized, the title must be secured from the State. Therefore, it will be seen that the County Judge, in making a plat to Section 5, was laboring under a very natural misapprehension of the then undefined law, and his action was not binding, his title having failed.

Finally, it having been conceded that title to Section 5 was vested in the State, Richard F. Veeder, who, in 1850, as one of a committee of settlers, platted an addition to the Webb & Bronson survey covering portions of Sections 5 and 8, was assured by his friends that he had a valid claim. Mr. Veeder had been living for several years on Block 163 of the Webb & Bronson plat, but had improvements to the value of $100 or more on the southwest quarter of Section 5. The State law, approved August 8, 1848, providing for pre-emptions on improvement land, gave to each person, who had made improvements worth $50 or more on each quarter-section of such land, the right to purchase the same at $1.25 per acre. There was also a State law passed at a later date, providing for the entry of any improvement lands occupied as town sites by the County Judge in trust for settlers thereon. This law, it will be observed, was similar in its provisions to the law of the United States on that subject. Under the State pre-emption law of 1848, Mr. Veeder made application to purchase the land as a pre-emption; under the State law for entry of town sites, Judge Guppy made application to enter the land in trust for settlers. Other parties—whose claims it will not be necessary to consider here, as the principal contest was between Mr. Veeder in his own interest, and Judge Guppy, acting as Trustee for the settlers—also attempted to establish pre-emption rights to the land.

As against the claim of the former, the rights of the settlers may be briefly stated, as follows: In February, 1850, a committee of settlers (acknowledged as such by the settlers), composed of R. F. Veeder, S. Dean and William R. Dewitt, laid out a plat, commonly known as Spain's Plat, which was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds. It is described in the book of plats as "an addition to the town of Fort Winnebago, laid out by authority of a committee appointed by claimants in the said addition, which is situate in the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 8, and the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter of Section 5, Town 12, Range 9, consisting of five blocks, surveyed by William H. Spain." At this time, Mr. Veeder, believing that his improvements on the Indian land were on Section 8 and not on Section 5, encouraged the people to settle on the latter section, assuring them that no one claimed the lots on that section. In the winter of 1850-51, the settlers on both sections jointly petitioned the Legislature to pass a law which would insure each settler on Section 5 not exceeding five lots at a reasonable price, and Messrs. Veeder, Thomas Christopher, J. A. Johnson and F. W. Peabody were appointed by the settlers a committee to urge the enactment of such a law. These gentlemen took the petition to Madison, and labored arduously to secure the required legislation, Mr. Veeder uniting with the others in the request.

When a hearing was reached at the State Land Office, all these facts were shown, and the Register decided that Mr. Veeder had a right to the land by pre-emption, for the reason that he had $50 worth of improvements thereon prior to any other occupancy thereof. On the 8th of August, an appeal was taken to the Circuit Court, and the decision of the Register was reversed. A counter appeal was then taken to the Supreme Court, where the decision of the lower court was set aside, and the original decision of the Register of the State Land Office affirmed, the higher tribunal declaring that the equitable relations existing between the settlers and Mr. Veeder could be more properly determined in other proceedings between them. The result was that Mr. Veeder took the legal title to tracts on Section 5, subject to the equitable rights of the settlers thereon; and, as before stated, the action of the County Judge in laying out the same into a plat was of no binding force.

This decision was reached in 1854. The litigation had very much impeded the development of the young city, and, after the decision was made, the settlers and Mr. Veeder differed so much about their respective rights, that the impossibility of an amicable settlement between them became more and more apparent, and improvements continued to be delayed for several years on account of the difficulty new-comers encountered in obtaining good titles. There seems, however, to have been no personal ill will between the settlers and Mr. Veeder, for the latter is said to have been a very kind-hearted man and good neighbor, while the former were of that class of order-loving citizens who will undergo much sacrifice to secure peace and quiet. At last, and in the year 1860, Mr. Veeder's misfortunes practically worked an unlooked-for settlement of the whole matter; for, on the 22d of March of that year, a judgment was recovered against him and others as sureties for Mrs. Sarah A. Babcock on an administrator's bond, amounting to $7,198.34, and his interest in lots on Section 5 was sold out in due course of law under an execution issued to satisfy said judgment. The lots were bid in by the settlers thereon or their friends for nominal sums. Prior to this time, most of the settlers, or parties interested in their behalf, had obtained tax titles to the lots occupied by them, so that with the tax deeds and the deeds of the Sheriff, the settlers considered their titles perfected.

In April, 1854, Mr. Veeder replatted a part of the southwest fractional quarter of Section 5, the survey being made by L. Van Slyck, but the plat was never recognized by the citizens or the local officers. All descriptions of lots on Section 5 were and have continued to be given to the present time in accordance with the plat laid out by J. J. Guppy.

There have been numerous additions to Portage since the Guppy Plat originated. Dunn, Haskell & Tenney's Addition, made in July, 1854, covers the north half of the southeast quarter of Section 6. Then came Schultz's Addition and Houston's Addition, lying in what is now the Second Ward, north of the railroad track; McFarlane, Dunn & Armstrong's Addition, south of the railroad depot; McCulloch's Prospect Hill Addition, on the Wisconsin River, one mile west of Mac street; Ketchum & DeWitt's "Rattle-Trap Farm" Addition, long since vacated, lying in the northwestern portion of the Second Ward; Borden & Fargo's Addition, south of the Wisconsin River, in Section 7; Ketchum's Addition, bounded by Houston street on the north and Hamilton street on the east, containing eight blocks; Leache's Addition, a strip along the Wisconsin River, east of the bridge; Haskell & Fargo's Addition, bounded by North, West and Harrison streets and the west line of Section 6; Hettinger's Addition, Hart & Norton's Addition, Pixley's Addition and H. R. Pettibone's Addition, on the Northern Division of the St. Paul Road.

The city limits of Portage are two and a half by three miles square, containing about four thousand eight hundred acres, including the area covered by waters of the Wisconsin River.

ORGANIZATION AND GOVERNMENT OF PORTAGE.

The first steps toward the township or precinct organization of the territory now included within the city limits of Portage were taken in July, 1846, when the County Commissioners set off "all that portion of the county embraced in Town[ship] 12 lying north of the Baraboo River, and Town[ship] 13 and Fractional Town[ship] 14, Range 8; also, Town[ship] 13 and the north half of Town[ship] 12, Range 9"—the territory described to "compose an election precinct to be known by the name of the Winnebago Portage Precinct; elections to be held at the house of Gideon Low; Richard F. Veeder, Daniel D. Robertson and Henry Merrell being appointed Judges of Election in said precinct." Such is the record of the County Commissioners dated July 10, 1846. No part of the territory west of the Fox and east of the Wisconsin Rivers and north of a line, connecting these two streams, running northeasterly and southwesterly through the present limits of Portage, was then attached to Columbia County (it being Menomonee land and belonging to Portage County. Consequently, all that portion of "Town[ship] 13 and Fractional Town[ship] 14, Range 8," as described by the Commissioners; also that portion of Town[ship] 13, Range 9, lying west of Fox River; also the northeast fraction of Town[ship]

12, Range 8, lying east of the Wisconsin River, and the northwest fraction of Town[ship] 12, Range 9, lying north of the above-described northeasterly and southwesterly line connecting the two streams, not then composing any part of Columbia County, the election precinct of Winnebago Portage, as formed by the Commissioners of Columbia County, was composed, in part, of territory belonging to Portage County. "Fractional Town[ship] 14, Range 8," referred to by the Commissioners, included territory now belonging to Marquette County, which was then embraced in Portage County. Much depended upon the intelligence of voters in those days.

On the 9th day of February, 1849, the title of the Menomonee Indians having been extinguished, and an act extending the northern boundaries of the county from Fox River to the Wisconsin River having been passed, thus bringing into the jurisdiction of the county what are now the towns of Lewiston and Newport and the unsurveyed fractions of Townships 12 and 13, Ranges 8 and 9, already described, the town of Winnebago Portage was organized by the Commissioners, with boundaries described as follows: "The fractional parts of the townships lying north of the Baraboo River and west of the Wisconsin River; also, the north half of Township 12 and the fractional part of Township 13 [lying east of the Fox River]. Range 9, in Columbia County, are hereby organized into a town to be called Winnebago Portage, and the Franklin House, in said town, is designated as the place for holding the first election." For some reason, the Menomonee lands lying in the county, although having been rightfully acquired, were not included within the boundaries of the town of Winnebago Portage; consequently, all the territory now embraced in the city limits of Portage lying north and west of a line running southwesterly from a point on Fox River opposite old Fort Winnebago to the corner of Conant and Adams streets, thence southerly to the Wisconsin River, was still outside the pale of sub-organization. The first election held by the electors residing within the newly made boundary lines of the town of Winnebago Portage took place, as specified, at the Franklin House, Gideon Low, proprietor, on the first Tuesday (3d day) of April, 1849, with the following result:

For Supervisors, Richard F. Veeder received 13 votes, Henry Carpenter, 13 votes, Edwin Sylvester, 13 votes. The last-named was selected as Chairman of the Board. For Assessor, Cornell Vaughn, 13 votes; for Treasurer, Henry Merrell, 13 votes; for Town Clerk, D. J. M. Loop, 13 votes; for Justices of the Peace, B. F. Veeder, E. Sylvester, M. Ahlum and H. Carpenter, 13 votes each; for Constables, H. Hanson, O. Bellrood, and H. McFarlane, 13 votes each; for School Commissioner, Henry Merrell, 13 votes; for Overseers of Highways, E. Sylvester, M. Ahlum and Gordon H. Merrell, 13 votes each.

It was agreed by the thirteen electors present that the place of holding the town meetings should be at the office of D. J. M. Loop. At a meeting held on the 18th of June, it was voted that a tax of $50 be levied for the support of common schools, $100 for the repair of roads and bridges, and $200 for other expenses of the town. On the 16th of November, a special election was held to fill vacancies, occasioned by resignation, in the offices of Justice of the Peace, at which Lorenzo Van Slyck, Michael Van Winters, Erastus Cook and Dr. James Prentice were chosen. At a meeting of the Town Board, held November 29, M. D. Ingraham was appointed Superintendent of Common Schools for the town of Winnebago Portage.

On the 8th of January, 1850, the County Board, in session at Wycocena, resolved to change the name of the town of Winnebago Portage to the town of Fort Winnebago, and also to relocate the boundaries as follows: The surveyed portion (excepting Section 33, in which Fort Winnebago itself was situated) of Town 13, Range 9, and a sufficient extent of the Indian, or unsurveyed, land west of Fox River to constitute it a town six miles square, were included and organized into a town called Port Hope (now Fort Winnebago), and the unsurveyed balance of Town 13, Range 8, and the northeast fractional part of Town 12, Range 8, and the northwest fractional part of Town 12, Range 9, were attached to Fort Winnebago for town purposes. Range 7 and the fractional portion of Range 6 in Town 13 were not officially included in the town of Fort Winnebago at this date, but nominally belonged to it. In April, officers for the town of Fort Winnebago were chosen as follows:

Supervisors—Erastus Cook (Chairman), Henry Carpenter and Richard Dempsey; Town Clerk, Cornelius H. Helms; Treasurer, Thomas E. Best; Assessor, Thomas Christopher; School Superintendent, D. Vandercook. Justices of the Peace—M. Van Winters, Walter N. Kellogg, Thomas Reynolds and Edwin Lolls. Constables—Donald Fairchilds, Samuel Spaulding and Azarial Fee; Overseers of Highways, District No. 1, M. Van Winter, No. 2, Erastus Cook; Sealer of Weights and Measures, Edward Christopher.

Officers elected April, 1851: Supervisors—A. C. Ketchum (Chairman), John Brewer and C. H. Helms; Town Clerk, L. D. Burges; Treasurer, T. E. Best. Justices of the Peace—L. Van Slyck, Andrew Dunn, J. B. Sanderson and G. T. Getty; Assessor, R. F. Veeder. Constables—William Anderson, William Fennegan and Charles Spore; School Superintendent, W. R. De Witt; Sealer of Weights and Measures, H. Merrell. At this election, 441 votes were cast "for the permanent location of the county seat at Fort Winnebago," and 7 votes against the proposition.

On the 11th of November, 1851, the County Commissioners authorized the formation of the town of Caledonia from territory then embraced in the towns of Fort Winnebago and Dekorra. This made the Wisconsin River and the town line between what are now the towns of Newport and Lewiston the western boundary of the town of Fort Winnebago, the other boundary lines established in January, 1850, remaining unchanged. Under this condition of things an election was held in April, 1852, with the following result:

Supervisors—Decatur Vandercook (Chairman), John Brewer and John Gates; Town Clerk, Charles H. Seamon; Treasurer, Richard F. Veeder. Justices of the Peace—L. Van Slyck, William E. Waite and H. R. Pettibone; Assessor, George Wall; School Superintendent, James Chancellor. Constables—John M. Crawford, William Fennegan and Thornton Thompson; Sealer of Weights and Measures, J. Belbond.

In November, 1852, the Board of Commissioners granted the prayer of P. K. Gill and others to organize the town of Newport, all that portion of Town 13, Range 6, lying on the east side of the Wisconsin River, and the west half of Range 7 in the same town, being duly incorporated in such town, and the house of James Cristie, in the village of Newport, being named as the place for holding the first election.

During the same session of the Board, Range 8 and the east half of Range 7, Town 13, were set off from the town of Fort Winnebago and formed into a new town, which was named Lewiston, the house of E. F. Lewis being designated as the place for holding the first election.

The work of re-organization was still further continued at this session of the Board, by that body setting off, in compliance with the request of Alexander McDonald and others, so much of the south half of Range 9, Town 12 (town of Dekorra), as lies east of the Wisconsin River, and attaching it to the town of Fort Winnebago, leaving the latter confined to all that territory lying east of the Wisconsin River contained in Town 12, Range 9, embracing the northeast fractional part of Range 8 in the same town lying east of the Wisconsin River, and the historical Section 33, in the then town of Port Hope, in which old Fort Winnebago was located.

December 15, 1852, after the receipt from time to time of various petitions with that end in view, Section 33 was awarded to Port Hope, and, two days later, the Commissioners granted authority for changing the name of the town of Fort Winnebago to the town of Portage City. In April following, an election for town officers took place, with the following result:

Supervisors—C. H. Moore (Chairman), Francis Winney and F. A. Hilbert; Town Clerk, John Lodge; Treasurer, C. H. Helms; Justices of the Peace, H. R. Pettibone and M. Auerback; School Superintendent, A. C. Ketchum; Assessor, C. J. Pettibone. Constables—W. R. Clough, Theodore Hoffman, D. W. Hinkley and J. Thompson; Sealer of Weights and Measures, William German.

In November, 1853, the name of the town of Port Hope was changed to the town of Fort Winnebago, and it has borne that title to the present time. At the annual session of the County Commissioners for 1853, the prayer of J. J. Guppy and others, that all that part of the town of Portage City lying north of the Wisconsin River and south of the town of Lewiston be attached to the town of Lewiston, was duly granted, but, at a subsequent sitting of the Board, a reconsideration of the subject was taken, and a bill passed leaving the matter to the electors of the town of Portage City to be voted on at their next succeeding annual election. The result was favorable to the town of Lewiston, and the territory in question was duly set off to that town.

City of Portage.—On the 10th of March, 1854, "An Act to incorporate the City of Portage," passed by the State Legislature, was duly approved by Gov. Barstow. The salient features of the charter were contained in the first, third and forty-third sections, as follows: Section 1 provided that, "from and after the first Tuesday in April, 1854, all that portion of the west fractional half of Section 4 which lies south and west of the Fox River, Sections 5 and 6; all that portion of Sections 7 and 8 which lies north of the Wisconsin River; the west fractional half of Section 9, and claim No. 21, known as the claim of A. Grignon, in Township 12, north Range 9 east, in the county of Columbia, State of Wisconsin, shall be a city of the name of the City of Portage, and the people inhabiting said district shall be a municipal corporation."

Section 3 provided for the division of the city into three wards, bounded as follows: "All that part lying south and east of the canal connecting the Fox and Wisconsin Rivers shall constitute the First Ward; all that part lying north of said canal and east of De Witt street and the road leading from the same to the north line of said Town 12, shall constitute the Second Ward, and all that part lying north of said canal and west of De Witt street and said roads shall constitute the Third Ward; but the Common Council shall have power to change said lines of division as they may deem convenient and proper."

Section 43, it will be observed, created the town of Pacific out of so much of the town of Portage City as remained without the newly incorporated city. It provided that "the connection between the city of Portage and the town of Portage City shall be dissolved, and the duties now or heretofore imposed upon the officers of the town, so far as they relate to the city of Portage, shall be imposed on the officers of said city of Portage; and so much of the town of Portage City as is not included in the limits of the city of Portage shall be the town of Pacific, for the purposes of town and county government, and they shall hold their next meeting at such place within the organized town of Portage City as the present Board of Supervisors shall appoint, and thereafter the place of meeting shall be decided by a vote of this town meeting."

On the 30th of March, an amendment was passed, providing, among other things, that "all that part of the city lying north of said canal and west of De Witt street, and the road leading from the same aforesaid, shall constitute the Fourth Ward." At the first charter election, held, as provided by law, on the first Tuesday in April, 1854, 366 votes were cast, and the following officers elected: Mayor, William Sylvester; Clerk, John Lodge; Treasurer, D. Vandercook; Assessor, Henry Carpenter; Marshal, Alexander Chrystie; School Superintendent, W. S. M. Abbott; Aldermen—First Ward, M. Van Winter, John McTighe; Second Ward, Josiah Arnold, George Wall; Third Ward, Alva Stewart,* John Gates; Fourth Ward, William Armstrong, S. L. Knapp.

1855.—Mayor, Andrew Dunn; Clerk, John Lodge; Treasurer, Samuel Edwards; Assessor, Conrad Collipp; Marshal, Daniel Ginder; School Superintendent, W. S. M. Abbott; Aldermen—First Ward, Michael McHale, D. Blass; Second Ward, Josiah Arnold, John Gates; Third Ward, Geo. N. Richmond, Wm. K. Miles; Fourth Ward, A. Murison, Wm. C. Pettibone.

1856—[Charter amended March 31.]—Mayor, Andrew Dunn; Clerk, John Lodge; Treasurer, C. D. Hottenstein; Assessor, Conrad Collipp; Marshal, Daniel Ginder; School Superintendent, Hugh M. Thompson; Aldermen—First Ward, Michael McHale, Perry Lee; Second

* W. K. Miles, elected June 15, vice A. Stewart, who failed to qualify.

Ward, Josiah Arnold, C. H. Moore; Third Ward, George N. Richmond, F. Steber; Fourth Ward, John A. Brown, J. G. Herrigal.

1857—[Charter amended March 7.]—Mayor, John P. McGregor; Clerk, John Lodge¹; Treasurer, C. D. Hottenstein; Assessor, N. Hollendyke; Marshal, Aaron Thompson; School Superintendent, Hugh M. Thompson; Aldermen—First Ward, Michael McHale, Perry Lee; Second Ward, L. S. Dixon, C. J. Pettibone; Third Ward, George N. Richmond, F. Steber; Fourth Ward, C. Hærtel, H. W. Tenney.

1858—Mayor, Henry B. Munn; Clerk, George D. Dimmick²; Treasurer, John Condon; Assessor, Volney Foster; Marshal, Aaron Thompson; School Superintendent, J. J. Guppy; Aldermen—First Ward, L. G. Bever, William Miller³; Second Ward, S. E. Dana, George Hatcher; Third Ward, George N. Richmond, F. Steber; Fourth Ward, R. S. Stoyell, J. Arnold.

1859—[Charter amended March 11.]—Mayor, John P. McGregor; Clerk, H. C. Baker; Treasurer, Henry Bolting; Assessor, Henry Carpenter; Marshal, Aaron Thompson; School Superintendent, J. J. Guppy; Aldermen—First Ward, Patrick Sheahan, Samuel Wisdom; Second Ward, John Graham, Benjamin L. Webb⁴; Third Ward, William K. Miles, A. M. Craig; Fourth Ward, James Collins, Francis Winne.

1860—[Charter amended March 27.]—Mayor, George N. Richmond; Clerk, H. C. Baker; Treasurer, Henry Bolting; Assessor, R. S. Stoyell; Marshal, S. S. Brannan; School Superintendent, J. J. Guppy; Aldermen—First Ward, L. G. Bever, Henry Emdler; Second Ward, S. E. Dana, L. W. Barden; Third Ward, Wells M. Butler,⁵ W. K. Miles; Fourth Ward, H. W. Emry, Andrew Kiefer.

1861—Mayor, George N. Richmond; Clerk, C. C. Britt; Treasurer, B. S. Doty; Assessor, Thomas Christopher; Marshal, E. Cook; School Superintendent, J. J. Guppy; Aldermen—First Ward, Edward O'Keeffe, John Brickwell; Second Ward, W. H. Smith, John Mansfield; Third Ward, S. S. Brannan, R. O. Loomis; Fourth Ward, George H. Osborn, A. Kiefer.

1862—[Charter amended June 17.]—Mayor, Alvin B. Alden; Clerk, C. C. Britt; Treasurer, B. S. Doty; Assessor, C. Collipp; Marshal, John Coleman; School Superintendent, H. B. Munn; Aldermen—First Ward, L. G. Bever, M. R. Keegan; Second Ward, John Gates, L. Fungenstein; Third Ward, Thomas Buttrey, S. S. Brannan⁶; Fourth Ward, W. W. Corning, C. Hærtel.

1863—[Charter amended so that Aldermen should hold their office for two years, one-half going out each year. Those elected for the short term this year were Messrs. Emdler, Randall, Ten Eyck and Ginder.]—Mayor, W. K. Miles; Clerk, C. C. Britt; Treasurer, B. S. Doty; Assessor, Thomas Christopher; Marshal, J. Coleman; School Superintendent, H. B. Munn; Aldermen—First Ward, H. Emdler, M. R. Keegan; Second Ward, C. J. Randall, L. Funkenstein; Third Ward, George Ten Eyck, Thomas Buttrey; Fourth Ward, John Ginder, Peter Karch.

1864—Mayor, John Condon; Clerk, V. Helman; Treasurer, B. S. Doty; Assessor C. J. Randall⁷; Marshal, Tim L. Collins; School Superintendent, H. B. Munn. Aldermen—First Ward, Lars G. Bever, M. R. Keegan; Second Ward, Matt. Hettinger,⁸ L. Funkenstein; Third Ward, E. H. Dewey, Thomas Buttrey; Fourth Ward, John Ginder, Peter Karch.

1865—Mayor, L. Funkenstein; Clerk, V. Helmann; Treasurer, B. S. Doty; Assessor, O. P. Williams; Marshal, P. Sheahan; School Superintendent, H. B. Munn. Aldermen—First Ward, John N. Kind, Lars G. Bever; Second Ward, R. B. Wentworth, S. B. Rhodes; Third Ward, Thomas Buttrey,⁹ E. H. Dewey; Fourth Ward, John Graham, Peter Karch.

1. Died December 2, 1857, and George D. Dimmick elected December 19, to fill the vacancy.

2. Died, and H. C. Baker appointed to fill the vacancy September 20, 1858.

3. Died, and Owen Ward elected to fill vacancy June 13, 1858.

4. Failed to qualify, and C. J. Pettibone elected to fill the vacancy May 2, 1859.

5. Removed from the ward, and A. P. Bennett elected to fill vacancy July 9, 1860.

6. Removed from the ward, and George Ten Eyck elected to fill the vacancy December 26, 1862.

7. Resigned, C. Collipp appointed to fill vacancy.

8. Removed from the ward and S. B. Rhodes elected January 28, 1865, to fill vacancy.

9. Resigned and W. F. Bailey elected to fill the vacancy November 7; at the same time J. O. Prescott was elected to fill a vacancy in the Second Ward in place of S. B. Rhodes, removed.

1866—[Charter amended February 28, March 31, April 7 and April 11.]—Mayor, L. Funkenstein; Clerk, V. Helmann; Treasurer, B. S. Doty; Assessor, Thomas Christopher; Marshal, Thomas Dalton; School Superintendent, J. J. Guppy. Aldermen—First Ward, Samuel Wisdom, John N. Kind; Second Ward, J. O. Prescott, R. B. Wentworth; Third Ward, Evan Arthur, W. F. Bailey; Fourth Ward, A. Klenert, C. R. Gillett.*

1867—[Charter amended April 10.]—Mayor, L. Funkenstein; Clerk, V. Helmann; Treasurer, B. S. Doty; Assessor, Thomas Christopher; Marshal, John Coleman; School Superintendent, J. J. Guppy. Aldermen—First Ward, Carl Prehn, Samuel Wisdom; Second Ward, S. S. Brannan, J. O. Prescott; Third Ward, George Port, Evan Arthur; Fourth Ward, H. Bolting, John Ginder.†

1868—[Charter amended and boundaries of the city changed as follows: Beginning at a point in the center of Fox River where the east and west quarter line of Section 33, Town 13, Range 9, intersects the center of said river; running thence west along the quarter line, through Sections 33, 32 and 31, Town 13, Range 9, to the centre of Section 36, Town 13, Range 8; thence south along the quarter line through Section 36, Town 13, Range 8, and Sections 1 and 12, Town 12, Range 8, to the south quarter post of Section 12, Town 12, Range 8; thence east along the south line of said Section 12 and of Sections 7, 8 and 9, Town 12, Range 9, to the south quarter post of said Section 9; thence north along the quarter line through Sections 9 and 4 till it intersects the easterly line of Claim No. 21 (known as Grignon's claim); thence northeasterly along the east side of said claim to the center of Fox River; thence down Fox River along the center thereof to the place of beginning. Ward 5 was created and the ward boundaries changed as follows: All that part lying south and east of the canal connecting the Fox and Wisconsin Rivers and north of the Wisconsin River, shall constitute the First Ward. All that part lying north of said canal and east of Adams street, extended in a straight line to its intersection with the new pinery road and east of said new pinery road, extended north to the north line of said city, shall constitute the Second Ward. All that part lying north of said canal and between Adams street so extended, and DeWitt street and said new pinery road, shall constitute the Third Ward. All that part lying southerly of Carroll street, extended from DeWitt street, westerly to the Wisconsin River, and along said river to the west line of said city, and all that part lying south of the Wisconsin River, shall constitute the Fourth Ward. All that part lying westerly of DeWitt street and northerly of Carroll street, commencing at DeWitt street, and running westerly along said street to the Wisconsin River, and along the banks of said river to the west line of the city, shall constitute the Fifth Ward.]—Mayor, J. P. McGregor; Clerk, V. Helmann; Treasurer, P. Karch; Assessor, J. Gates; Marshal, Geo. C. Snider; School Superintendent, J. J. Guppy. Aldermen—First Ward, H. Emden,‡ Carl Prehn; Second Ward, J. O. Prescott, S. S. Brannan; Third Ward, W. G. Bebb, George Port; Fourth Ward, W. W. Corning, H. Bolting; Fifth Ward, John Ginder, C. R. Gallett (short term).

1869—[Charter amended March 5.]—Mayor, John Graham; Clerk, V. Helmann; Treasurer, P. Karch; Assessor, Thomas Christopher; Marshal, L. M. Hickey; School Superintendent, J. J. Guppy. Aldermen—First Ward, John Holsten, Carl Prehn; Second Ward, Alex. Carnegie, J. O. Prescott; Third Ward, E. C. Main, W. G. Bebb; Fourth Ward, Cornelius Wheeler, W. W. Corning; Fifth Ward, L. T. Mead, John Ginder.

1870—Mayor, C. R. Gallett; Clerk, V. Helmann; Treasurer, O. Krisch; Assessor, Thomas Christopher; Marshal, L. M. Hickey, School Superintendent, J. J. Guppy. Aldermen—First Ward, Vinzenz Hamele, John Holsten; Second Ward, J. O. Prescott, Alex. Carnegie; Third Ward, Thomas R. Davies, E. C. Maine; Fourth Ward, John B. Dassi, James Collins; § Fifth Ward, Isaac W. Bacon, L. T. Mead.

1871—[Charter amended March 24.]—Mayor, S. S. Brannan; Clerk, V. Helmann; Treasurer, O. Krisch; Assessor, A. Hoffman; Marshal, C. Schneider; School Superintendent,

* To fill vacancy occasioned by the removal of J. Graham from the ward.

† To fill vacancy occasioned by removal of A. Klenert.

‡ Removed from the ward, and John Brickwell elected to fill the vacancy August 22, 1868.

§ To fill vacancy in place of C. Wheeler, removed from ward.

J. J. Guppy. Aldermen—First Ward, Ira Schœmaker, Vinzenz Hamele; Second Ward, Stillman E. Dana, J. O. Prescott; Third Ward, A. D. Hemenway, Wilford M. Patten;* Fourth Ward, James Collins, John B. Dassi; Fifth Ward, L. T. Mead, I. W. Bacon.

1872—Mayor, S. S. Brennon; Clerk, V. Helmann; Treasurer, C. Wheeler; Assessor, Thomas Christopher;† Marshal, C. Schneider; School Superintendent, J. J. Guppy. Aldermen—First Ward, Jacob Bauer, Ira Schœmaker; Second Ward, E. L. Jæger, S. E. Dana; Third Ward, Hugh O. Lewis, A. D. Hemenway; Fourth Ward, William Armstrong, James Collins; Fifth Ward, William Rusch, L. T. Mead.

1873—Mayor, C. R. Gallett; Clerk, V. Helmann; Treasurer, C. Wheeler; Assessor, John Bean; Marshal, Daniel Wells; School Superintendent, G. J. Cox. Aldermen—First Ward, J. C. Hass, Jacob Bauer; Second Ward, Job Purnell, E. L. Jæger; Third Ward, S. G. Gage, H. O. Lewis; Fourth Ward, F. Sieverkrop, William Armstrong; Fifth Ward, R. O. Loomis, William Rusch.

1874—[Charter amended March 7.]—Mayor, C. R. Gallett; Clerk, B. Doherty; Treasurer, A. Kiefer; Assessor, Alexander Carnagie; Marshal, Daniel Wells; School Superintendent, G. J. Cox. Aldermen—First Ward, A. C. F. Kœnig, J. C. Hass; Second Ward, John Graham, Job Purnell; Third Ward, H. O. Lewis, E. C. Maine;‡ Fourth Ward, Henry Emden, F. Sieverkrop; Fifth Ward, A. C. Flanders, R. O. Loomis.

1875—Mayor, W. W. Corning; Clerk, B. Doherty; Treasurer, A. Kiefer; Assessor, Alexander Carnagie; Marshal, William Edwards; School Superintendent, N. K. Shattuck. Aldermen—First Ward, J. C. Hass, A. C. F. Kœnig; Second Ward, E. S. Purdy,§ John Graham; Third Ward, E. C. Maine, H. O. Lewis; Fourth Ward, R. C. Rockwood, Henry Emden; Fifth Ward, C. R. Gallett, A. C. Flanders.

1876—[Charter codified, consolidated and amended; boundaries of Third, Fourth and Fifth Wards changed as follows: All that portion of the city commencing at the canal bridge on Wisconsin street, running thence northwesterly along Wisconsin street to its intersection with Mac street, thence northerly along Mac street to its intersection with the railroad track of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, thence easterly along said railroad track to its intersection with Adams street, thence in a southerly direction along said Adams street to the said canal, thence along said canal to the place of beginning, shall constitute the Third Ward; all that portion of the city lying southerly of Carroll street, extended from Mac street westerly to the Wisconsin River, and along said river to the west line of the city, and all that part lying south of the Wisconsin River shall constitute the Fourth Ward; all that portion of the city lying westerly of Mac street and the new pinery road, and northerly of Carroll street, commencing at Mac street and running westerly along said street to the Wisconsin River, and along the banks of said river to the west line of the city, shall constitute the Fifth Ward.]—Mayor, W. W. Corning; City Clerk, Valentine Helmann; Treasurer, James Collins; Assessor, William Hensel; Marshal, William Edwards; School Superintendent, N. K. Shattuck. Aldermen—First Ward, Julius C. Hass, John Brickwell; Second Ward, E. S. Purdy, John M. Holmes; Third Ward, E. C. Maine, H. O. Lewis; Fourth Ward, R. C. Rockwood, George Port; Fifth Ward, C. R. Gallett, Joseph Huebl.

1877—[Charter amended February 7.]—Mayor, Josiah Arnold; Clerk, V. Helmann; Treasurer, James Collins; Assessor, William Hensel; Marshal, Frederick Sieverkrop; School Superintendent, A. C. Kellogg. Aldermen—First Ward, Peter Mahon, John Brickwell; Second Ward, E. S. Purdy, John M. Holmes; Third Ward, J. E. Wells, H. O. Lewis; Fourth Ward, John Gonten, George Port; Fifth Ward, Ferdinand Manthey, Joseph Huebl.

1878—[Charter amended March 16.]—Mayor, Josiah Arnold; Clerk, John O'Keefe, Jr.; Treasurer, V. Helmann; Assessor, John Bean; Marshal, F. Sieverkrop; School Superintendent, A. C. Kellogg. Aldermen—First Ward, Christian Schultz, Peter Mahon; Second Ward, R.

* In place of T. R. Davis, removed from the ward.

† Died, John Bean appointed by the council to fill vacancy.

‡ E. C. Maine elected to fill vacancy occasioned by death of S. P. Gage.

§ Certificate of election given to S. S. Brannan, who resigned, and Mr. Purdy was chosen at a special election.

B. Wentworth, E. S. Purdy; Third Ward, G. J. Cox, J. E. Wells; Fourth Ward, George Port, John Gonten; Fifth Ward, Jacob Clemens, Frederick Manthey.

1879—[Charter amended March 4, and boundaries of the Fourth and Fifth Wards changed as follows: "Beginning, on the northerly bank of the Wisconsin River, in the center of Cass street; thence running north through the center of said Cass street, to the track of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad track; thence east along said track to the center of Mac street; thence south through the center of Mac street to the center of Wisconsin street; thence southerly through the center of the said Wisconsin street to the canal connecting the Fox and Wisconsin Rivers; thence westerly and northerly along said canal and river to the center of said Cass street, the place of beginning, shall constitute the Fourth Ward. All that part of said city which lies west and south of Wisconsin street, all that part which lies west of said Cass street and south of said railroad track, and all that part which lies north of said railroad track and west of the new pinery road, shall constitute the Fifth Ward."—Mayor, Josiah Arnold; Clerk, John O'Keefe, Jr.; Treasurer, V. Helmann; Assessor, Thomas Bennett; Marshal, Fred. Sieverkrop; School Superintendent, A. C. Kellogg; Aldermen—First Ward, Peter Mahon, Christian Schultz; Second Ward, Job Purnell, R. B. Wentworth; Third Ward, J. E. Wells, G. J. Cox; Fourth Ward, Henry Little, George Port; Fifth Ward, William Kallies, Jacob Clemens.

1880.—Mayor, Josiah Arnold; Clerk, John O'Keefe; Treasurer, Joseph Hueble; Marshal, Patrick Sheehan; Assessor, Alexander Carnegie; School Superintendent, A. C. Kellogg; Aldermen—First Ward, Frank Yanko; Second Ward, Alexander Thompson; Third Ward, R. C. Pixley; Fourth Ward, Alois Klenert; Fifth Ward, Jacob Clemens.

THE CANAL.

In 1837, a company was chartered, under the name of the "Portage Canal Company," for the purpose of building a canal connecting the Fox and Wisconsin Rivers. This company was composed of Sheldon Thompson, of Buffalo, N. Y.; DeGarmo Jones, Detroit, Mich.; Robert McPherson, Daniel Whitney, S. P. Griffith, and others, who were also the incorporators of the Shot Tower Company of Helena. They were the owners of all the plat of the village of Fort Winnebago. In the year 1838, they commenced to dig a canal at a point on Fox River, where it is crossed by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad. Its course was on the line of Bronson avenue, about two rods north, entering the Wisconsin River near Mac street. About $10,000 was spent by the company, when the work was abandoned.

Nothing further was done for some years. It finally attracted the notice of the General Government, and Secretary of War Poinsett called the attention of Congress to its value as a route for military communication and transportation, and urged an appropriation for the construction of locks around the rapids and a canal to unite the two rivers. To effect this object, in August, 1846, Congress passed an act granting the State of Wisconsin alternate sections of land, three miles on each side of the Fox River. In 1848, the State accepted the grant and appointed a Board of Public Works, who were charged with its execution. A new route was chosen, and between the hours of 12 and 1 o'clock, on the 1st day of June, 1849, the first soil was broken. Thomas Reynolds, of Madison, was awarded the contract of constructing the canal and Nelson McNeil, of Eau Claire, the locks. The work progressed somewhat slowly, being delayed by misunderstandings between the contractor and State. The men working upon it were kept out of their money for weeks and months, and were compelled to abandon it for that reason, leaving it in an unfinished condition. A resident of Portage thus describes the work, in March, 1851: "The banks of the canal at this place are crumbling before the thaw, in many places, and falling into the stream. The planking is in great part afloat. By prompt attention, the work done on the canal may be saved to the State. As it is now, it presents a melancholy spectacle of premature decay. The unpaid laborers, lately employed on the work, whose destitution and wrongs have aroused the indignation and sympathies of our citizens, will hardly assist in its repair, unless they are secured in their pay, as recommended by Mr. Crosswell, nor will they suffer strangers to be duped and wronged as they themselves have been." Repairs were subsequently made, the water let in, and on Saturday, the 24th day of May, 1851, a boat attempted to pass through the canal. The event was chronicled, at the time, as follows, by the Portage paper :

" First Boat Through the Canal—almost.—The beautiful steamer, John Mitchell, nearly accomplished the feat of passing through the canal at this place, from the Fox into the Wisconsin River, on Saturday last. She came up as far as Main street. As the John Mitchell came up the canal, the Enterprise came up the Wisconsin River to the head of the canal. The blustering rivalry between these inhabitants of different waters (the throat of each giving its best puff and whistle alternately), was quite exhilarating, and called out a large concourse of citizens, to gaze upon the scene presented, and make predictions for the future. After a short time, boats and citizens withdrew, amid strains of music, and the 'noise and confusion' were over."

The water was drawn off, and the work of strengthening the banks and bottom, to prevent the quicksand from pouring in and filling up the bed, was proceeded with; but their efforts were of little avail, if the same local authority quoted can be relied on. On the 31st day of August, 1851, the water was again let in, and the next morning it presented a rather novel appearance, the planking having raised from its fastening, at the bottom, and floated on either side of the surface, and forming two floating plank-roads. Fortunately no high winds prevailed; but had a storm arisen and stirred up the angry waters, there is no telling where the planking might have been hurled to, or where the destruction would have ended.

On Sunday night, September 28, 1851, the Wisconsin River, which had been unusually high for some days, broke into the canal, and cut a channel through its southern bank, some fifty yards wide and eight or ten feet deep. The warehouse of C. W. Mappa was undermined, and other houses fell in and floated off. The planking of the canal, together with a quantity of lumber lying on the bank of the Wisconsin, floated into the Fox River.

But little was done from this time until in 1853. As the Constitution of the State forbade the creation of any public debts, the Board of Public Works were limited in their expenditures to the receipts from the sale of land granted by Congress. At this stage of affairs, a company proposed to take charge of the work, completing the canal, and the improvements contemplated on the Fox and Wisconsin Rivers. On the 6th day of July, 1853, an act was passed by the Legislature of this State, incorporating the "Fox and Wisconsin River Improvement Company," composed of Mason C. Darling, Otto Frank, Morgan L. Martin, Edgar Conklin, Benjamin F. Moore, Joseph G. Lawton, W. H. Peak and Theodore Conkey. The State gave to this company all the interests that had been acquired by it, under certain conditions. The act making the transfer from the State to the improvement company, was approved by Gov. Coles Bashford, Oct. 3, 1856. The company was instructed to commence the work within ninety days, and to finish the improvement within three years. They failed to comply with the law, and finally the United States took the work off their hands.

As built by the Government, the canal was commenced in the fall of 1874, under the direction of Col. D. C. Houston, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., assisted by Capt. G. J. Lydecker, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., with Mr. John Pierpont and Mr. Edward Sargent, as civil assistants, until the winter of 1875 and 1876, when Capt. Lydecker and assistants Pierpont and Sargent were called to other work on the Fox River, and Col. Houston was assisted by Lieut. F. A. Hinman, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., with Mr. Edward C. Hinman, as civil assistant. The work of construction was done by contract, by Messrs. Conro, Starke & Co., of Milwaukee. The excavation was made by a steam excavator, wheelbarrows and small construction cars. The work was commenced at the lower end—in order that it could be drained as completed—and consisted of an excavation seventy-five feet wide and seven feet deep, with a timber and pile revetment on both sides. The latter was completed as fast as the excavation would permit. During the season of 1874, the work was completed about one-fourth of a mile. During the season of 1875, the revetment and excavation on the north side were completed, and, on the south side, about three-fourths finished. The balance of the work was completed in June, 1876.

A writer soon afterward says:

“The canal is seventy-five feet wide, inside the revetment, two and one-half miles long, and seven feet from the top of revetment to the bed.

“There is one waste weir at the lower end, to carry off the surface water, and ample as a feeder to the Fox River.

“Messrs. Starke & Conro, completed the canal between Fox and Wisconsin Rivers, and turned it over to the Government Friday last, July 30. The revetment on southerly side of the canal, between the bridge and the lock, was not carried through to the river, because a lock side and canal basin is to be constructed, between the canal and the river, requiring the whole of the point of land between them for that purpose; it is not yet determined whether the work of constructing the basin will go forward this season or not. The canal is a completed job, and is not excelled by any other work of the kind, of which we have any knowledge. There is six feet of water in it, which is a great abundance for any demand that will ever be made upon it.

“On the evening of the 30th, a party of gentlemen accepted an invitation from the officers in charge, to take passage on the Government steamer, Boscobel, on a trial trip through the canal, from the Wisconsin to the Fox. As a matter of record, we give the names of the following gentlemen: Hon. Alva Stewart, Hon. R. L. D. Potter, Messrs. G. J. Cox, E. E. Chapin, A. J. Turner, T. L. Kennan, W. D. Fox, Fred W. Schulze, E. S. Baker, John Cable, and others, whose names do not occur to us, besides Government officers in charge of the work. As the steamer coursed its way down to the Fox, trains passed by on the several divisions of the railroad. For some distance, the theme of conversation was the change wrought in the line of trade and commerce, within the past five years, by the introduction of steam power, and we all wondered how Louis Jolliet regarded it, if his spirit was floating about in this vicinity, where, 203 years before, on the 17th of June, he had hauled his batteaux across this same portage, between the Fox and Wisconsin Rivers, on his voyage of discovery, where steamboats and railroads now hold sway. And thus conversation ran on through the evening, until 10 o'clock, when the little excursion had been completed.”

At the upper end, the Portage City lock connects the canal with the Wisconsin River, with a lift from the canal of from nothing to nine feet, depending on the stage of water in the Wisconsin River. At the lower end, the Fort Winnebago lock connects it with the Fox River, having a lift of six feet from the Fox River.

These locks above mentioned, have both been rebuilt by the Government; the former in 1880, and the latter in 1874 and 1875. They are, as previously mentioned, thirty-five feet wide and one hundred and sixty feet long, between gates.

The United States steamer, Boscobel, was the first boat to pass through the canal, after its completion. On June 30, 1876, the steamer passed from the Wisconsin to the Fox River and returned. Everything was found to be in good working order, and navigation was opened immediately, and has been uninterrupted since that time.

THE SCHOOLS.

The subject of education is one of prime importance to every community, and the degree in which it is fostered and promoted is always a sure index to the intelligence and liberality of the people. The refinements of education constitute the most elegant and ennobling pleasures of life. The moral sentiments are elevated and the face of humanity made to shine with celestial luster. It has truly been said that, “an education is that which no misfortune can depress, no clime destroy, no enemy alienate, no despotism enslave; at home a friend, abroad an introduction, in solitude a solace, in society an ornament.”

As illustrative of the tendency of the times, it will not be out of place to show the attention education received at Fort Winnebago forty-five years ago. Maj. Green, then commanding officer at the fort, engaged, in 1835, Miss Eliza Haight as governess in his family, and he allowed the children of other officers of the fort to attend the private school thus established.

W. W. Corning

PORTAGE, CITY.

There were, in all, about one dozen pupils. In the spring of 1840, Rev. S. P. Keyes became both chaplain and schoolmaster at the post, and taught about twenty children, some of them over twelve years of age.

The first school in Portage, however, the benefits of which were enjoyed by actual settlers, was established in the house of Hugh McFarlane, in 1843, Mrs. McFarlane being the teacher. Instruction was given on Sundays only, and it was therefore a Sunday school. Books were purchased for the purpose, from a fund created by contributions solicited from the hardy raftsmen of the Wisconsin River, by Mrs. McFarlane. From this small beginning, a private school, with a "hired" teacher, grew into existence. It was located, for awhile, in one portion of Mr. McFarlane's blacksmith-shop, partitioned off for that purpose.

The town of Winnebago Portage, organized on the 9th day of January, 1849, by virtue of that organization, became, at that date, a school district, under a law of the Territory of Wisconsin, which continued in force till January 1, 1850, and which declared that "every town in this Territory, containing not less than ten families, shall be a school district," etc. There is no record of a public school in the town, during 1849; but in that year a portion of the town occupied by its residents living in the vicinity of the "old fort," was set off as School District No. 2, all other parts of the town being considered District No. 1. It is not necessary to give the limits of this District No. 2, as it became joint District No. 1, of Port Hope and Fort Winnebago, on the 8th day of January, 1850, when the name of Winnebago Portage was changed to Fort Winnebago, and Town 13, Range 9, taken from that town and organized as the town of Port Hope. This joint district followed the fortunes of Section 33, Town 13, Range 9, site of the old fort, and was transferred with it three times, from one town to the other. It was under the jurisdiction of the town of Fort Winnebago (now Portage) only about three years, and after noticing its first annual report, in 1850, its history will not be further considered in connection with that part of the city of Portage, except in the explanation of the numbering of the districts that may hereafter be named.

In 1850, School Superintendent D. Vandercook formed four new districts, in the town of Fort Winnebago, making five in all, viz., Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5. And as No. 3 soon passed to another town, and as No. 4 was substantially absorbed in another district of the same name, which in reality was the successor of joint District No. 1, hereinbefore named, they will be briefly described and "accounted for" first, so that further mention of them will not be required.

District No. 3.—Set off, June 27, 1850, commencing "at the west line of Town 12, Range 8, thence east three miles, including John Tibbet's claim on Section 5; thence north to the Wisconsin River, and bounded on the south by the Baraboo River." This district became a part of the town of Caledonia, at the organization of the latter, on the 12th of November, 1851.

District No. 4, set off November 30, 1850, contained the "east side of the village (at the Portage) from Center avenue," and was united with a part of joint District No. 1, before named, on the 30th day of August, 1851. The new district was designated No. 4, and as such made its annual report for the year 1851, being really the report of the school of said joint district for that year. It passed from the jurisdiction of the town of Fort Winnebago on the 15th day of December, 1852, with the site of the fort, Section 33, Town 13, Range 9, which was transferred to the town of Port Hope on that day.

Districts Nos. 1, 2 and 5, of the organization of 1850, have been the permanent districts of the place.

No. 1 embraced that part of the town south of the canal and west of Center avenue (in part of First Ward, now west of Center avenue) not set off to other districts.

No. 2.—Substantially the present Second Ward of the city (old No. 3 becoming joint District No. 1, as above stated), organized January, 1850.

No. 5.—Substantially what is now Third, Fourth and Fifth Wards of the city, and organized December 20, 1850.

Districts Nos. 1 and 2, of Fort Winnebago, and joint District No. 1, of Port Hope and Fort Winnebago (once No. 2 of Winnebago Portage), maintained public schools in the year ending August 31, 1850, and made annual reports, from which the following statistics are taken, viz.:

District No. 1.—Number of male children of school age, 21; number of female children of school age, 15; number attending school, 20; number of months' school, 3; wages, with board, per month, of teacher, Miss C. V. Baldwin, $6; schoolroom, second story of Henry Carpenter's warehouse.

District No. 2.—Number of male children of school age, 70; number of female children of school age, 65; number attending school, 87; number of months' school, 3; monthly wages of teacher, Mr. R. M. Brown, $18; the schoolroom was a shop of William Rice, standing on a part of the present homestead of Mrs. Dr. Dent, Block No. 240.

Joint District No. 1, of Port Hope and Fort Winnebago.—Number of male children of school age, 55; number of female children of school age, 41; number attending school, 65; number of months' school, 3; monthly wages of teacher, Mrs. Grace Bliss, $15. Schoolroom, arsenal building of the fort; William Wier was Clerk.

District No. 1 contained that part of the town south of the canal not set off to other districts. Its boundaries were not given on its records, for the reason that it originally contained the whole town, and it was called "No. 1," because it was the original organization, or what was left of that organization. To give it a name and limits on its records, School Superintendent W. R. DeWitt re-organized it on the 10th day of May, 1851, giving it the name it had borne and the boundaries rightfully belonging to it. Ten days after, namely, May 20, 1851, he organized that portion of the district south of Superior street into District No. 7 (No. 6 not described, being in what is now Caledonia). Practically, the two districts remained as one, and as the schoolhouse was in District No. 7, the annual reports were made in the name of that district, until the two were united under the original name, District No. 1.

During the year ending August 31, 1851, Districts Nos. 1 (7 and 1) and 2 again maintained public schools, and District No. 5 had its first public school. From the report of the Clerk of District No. 5 for that year, the following particulars are taken, viz.: Number of male children of school age, 43; number of female children of school age, 55; number attending school, 98; number of months' school, 3; monthly wages of teacher, Miss Helen M. Hand, $15. James Boylan taught ten days. The schoolroom was the schoolhouse of District No. 2, rented.

Changes of Name, etc.—The name of the town having been changed to Portage City, and some alterations having been made in its boundaries by the Board of County Supervisors on the 17th day of December, 1852, School Superintendent A. C. Ketchum re-organized the school districts on the 23d day of April following, designating Districts Nos. 1 and 7 as District No. 4, and District No. 5 as District No. 3, District No. 2 retaining its name. The city having been incorporated in 1854 with southeasterly boundaries different from those of the town preceding it, School Superintendent W. S. M. Abbott, on the 3d day of February, 1855, in making a record of the altered limits of the then District No. 4, restored its original name, District No. 1. From that date till graded schools were established in the city, the districts were: No. 1, First Ward; No. 2, Second Ward; No. 3, present Third, Fourth and Fifth Wards. And in speaking of them on other points of their history, the names last above given will be used, whatever may have been their designations when the events named took place.

Schoolhouses.—Districts 1 and 2 each erected a wooden schoolhouse in 1851, that of the former standing on Lot 10, Block 89, and that of the latter on Lot 16, Block 187, of Webb & Bronson's Plat. The one erected by District No. 1 now forms a part of the First Ward Schoolhouse on Block 140; and that erected by District No. 2 was sold by the city, and is now a dwelling-house on Block 197, of the plat of Portage City.

District No. 3 (5) did not erect a schoolhouse. For many years it rented one of Hugh McFarlane, erected by him for a private high school, and standing on Lot 9, Block 237, of Portage City, and in 1857 it purchased the house and lot of Mr. McFarlane for $1,500.

The house and grounds were sold by the city, and the building has been converted into a dwelling-house, and is now owned by William Miller.

The following is a list of teachers and officers of School District No. 1, during its existence—it being also known as District No. 4, and District No. 7, and the time it was so known being herein indicated: Year ending August 31, 1850—Miss C. V. Baldwin, Teacher; Henry Carpenter, Director; George W. Morgan, Clerk; M. Van Winter, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1851—Miss C. V. Baldwin, Teacher; Henry Carpenter, Director; S. F. Marston, Clerk; M. Van Winter, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1852—Mrs. Maria Gue and Miss E. J. Page, Teachers; Henry Carpenter, Director; O. P. Williams and M. Van Winter, Clerks; Alex. McDonald, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1853—Miss Sophia Wright, Teacher; Henry Carpenter, Director; M. Van Winter, Clerk; Alex. McDonald, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1854—Minor Palmer, Teacher; Henry Carpenter, Director; M. Van Winter, Clerk; Perry Lee, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1855—Miss Margaret E. Hand and Miss Margaret St. John, Teachers; Henry Carpenter, Director; C. A. Comstock, Clerk; Perry Lee, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1856—D. J. Waters and Miss Margaret E. Hand, Teachers; Edward O'Keefe, Director; M. McHale, Clerk; Perry Lee, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1857—D. J. Waters, Teacher; Henry Carpenter, Director; M. McHale, Clerk; Perry Lee, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1858—D. J. Waters, Teacher; Henry Carpenter, Director; Eugene Muldoon and John Brickwell, Clerks; Perry Lee, Treasurer. From August 31, 1858, to end of district system, May, 1859—Jerome Starr, Teacher; M. Van Winter, Director; John Brickwell, Clerk; Volney Foster, Treasurer.

List of teachers and officers of School District No. 2, during its existence: Year ending August 31, 1850—Mr. R. M. Brown, Teacher; Richard Dempsey, Director; T. Dean, Clerk; John M. Crawford, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1851—Mr. James Boylan, Miss B. Edgerton, Teachers; John A. Johnson, Director; H. R. Pettibone, Clerk; John M. Crawford and C. G. McCulloch, Treasurers. Year ending August 31, 1852—Miss B. Edgerton, Teacher; R. F. Veeder, Director; H. R. Pettibone, Clerk; C. G. McCulloch, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1853—Seth Mills, Teacher; George Wall, Director; A. C. Ketchum, Clerk; William Sylvester, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1854—Mr. R. S. Carter, Miss Jane S. Chappell and Miss Helen Ward, Teachers; Thomas Thompson, Director; John M. Crawford, Clerk; G. N. Oddie, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1855—Emory Peck, C. O. Paquin and Miss Helen M. Hand, Teachers; Thomas Thompson, Director; John M. Crawford, Clerk; William R. Clough, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1856—J. A. Burt and C. O. Paquin, Teachers; James Learmouth, Director; John M. Crawford and J. B. Rogers, Clerks; W. R. Clough, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1857—J. A. Burt and Miss Lucy A. Miller, Teachers; S. K. Vaughan, Director; J. B. Rogers, Clerk; James Learmouth, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1858—G. J. Cox and Miss Mary J. Bisbee, Teachers; M. M. Davis, Director; G. M. Oddie, Clerk; A. Carnegie, Treasurer. From August 31, 1858, to end of district system, May, 1859—T. C. Barden and Miss Fannie E. Waldo, Teachers; George Wall, Director; Baron S. Doty and J. O. Prescott, Clerks; Alex. Carnegie, Treasurer.

List of teachers and officers of School District No. 3, otherwise No. 5, during its existence: Year ending August 31, 1851—Miss Helen M. Hand, Teacher; Hugh McFarlane, Director; Daniel Young, Clerk; Daniel Clough, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1852—Mrs. Agnes N. Butz, Teacher; H. McFarlane, Director; C. H. Moore, Clerk; Daniel Clough, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1853—James Chancellor and Miss Helen M. Hand, Teachers; Charles H. Moore, Director; James Chancellor and A. Hand, Clerks; Daniel Clough, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1854—Seth Mills and Martha Mills, Teachers; Richard Dempsey, Director; L. Berry and D. J. M. Loop, Clerks; Daniel Clough, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1855—J. W. Hollenshead and Miss Butterfield, Teachers; Richard Dempsey, Director; E. Cook, Clerk; Daniel Clough, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1856—W. S. M. Abbott and Mrs. Abbott, Teachers; James Collins, Director; W. S. M. Abbott and H. B. Anderson, Clerks; Daniel Clough, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1857—George F. Richardson

George Hand and Mary Dempsey, Teachers; James Collins, Director; Richard Dempsey, Clerk; T. E. Best, Treasurer. Year ending August 31, 1858—George F. Richardson and Mary Dempsey, Teachers; William P. St. John, Director; H. S. Haskell, Clerk; D. Vandercook, Treasurer. From August 31, 1858, to end of the district system, May, 1859—George F. Richardson and Mary Dempsey, Teachers; John T. Clark, Director; H. S. Haskell, Clerk; H. L. Norton, Treasurer.

Graded Schools.—The present graded-school system commenced in 1859, as will appear from the following report of the first meeting of the Board of Education :

“ At the first meeting of the Board of Education of the city of Portage, held at the office of the City Superintendent, on the 2d day of May, 1859, at 7 o'clock P. M.—present, Commissioners Volney Foster, First Ward; Baron S. Doty, Second Ward; Alvin B. Alden, Third Ward; Henry B. Munn, Fourth Ward, and City Superintendent, J. J. Guppy, ex officio Secretary, being all the members of the board—the Commissioners took and subscribed to the oath of office.

“ On motion of Mr. Alden, seconded by Mr. Munn, Baron S. Doty was, by unanimous vote, elected President of the board.

“ On motion of Mr. Munn, Thursday, the 12th inst., at 9 o'clock, A. M., and the Common Council room, were designated as the time and place for examination of applicants for schools, and the Secretary was directed to give notice in the city paper accordingly.

“ After a general but informal discussion of the action to be taken by the board for the future, in reference to city schools, it was voted to hold an adjourned meeting on Monday, the 12th inst., at 9 o'clock A. M., at the Common Council room, for the purpose of examining teachers and transacting such general business as might be brought before the board. Adjourned accordingly.

JOSHUA J. GUPPEY, Clerk.”

The board met accordingly, and examined G. F. Richardson, Charles R. Gallett, Miss Kate Roland, Miss Fannie E. Waldo, Miss Luthera Waldo, Miss Hannah P. Best and Miss Helvetia L. Reese, as to their qualifications to fill teachers' positions, as follows: Messrs. Richardson and Gallett and Miss Luthera Waldo, for intermediate schools, and Miss Kate Roland, Miss Fannie E. Waldo, Miss Hannah P. Best and Miss Helvetia L. Reese, for primary schools. At a subsequent meeting of the board, reported favorable upon the application of each aspirant.

The next work of the board was “the organization of the primary and intermediate schools of the city of Portage.” This was accomplished by the adoption of a by-law, drawn and offered by Superintendent Guppy, providing that the First Ward of the city, excepting the portion lying northerly of Center avenue, should constitute a primary and intermediate school district, and there were established therein and therefor, one primary and one intermediate school, to be known as the First Ward Primary and Intermediate Schools; that so much of the First Ward as lies north of Center avenue, and all of the Second Ward, should constitute a primary and intermediate school district; that the Third and Fourth Wards of said city shall also constitute a primary and intermediate school district; provided, that a second primary school may be organized in the Third Ward, if necessary. In the two last-mentioned districts, primary and intermediate schools were established.

It was then decided to employ teachers two months from May 23, as follows: George F. Parkinson, First Ward Intermediate, at $35 per month; Miss Luthera Waldo, Second Ward Intermediate, $25; Miss Helvetia L. Reese, First Ward Primary, $15; Miss Fannie E. Waldo, Second Ward Primary, $20. At a subsequent meeting of the Board, Mrs. Agnes N. Cornell and Miss Caroline M. Prentiss passed successful examinations, and were employed in the Third and Fourth Ward Schools; Mrs. Cornell, in the intermediate department, at $35 per month, and Miss Prentiss, in the primary, at $20, per month—for a period of ten weeks from May 23, 1859. At a meeting of the board, held June 4, a resolution was passed requesting the Common Council to levy a tax of $1,500 for the support of the schools thus established.

Superintendent Guppy's first report under the new system showed that there were 1,076 children of school age residing in the city of Portage, 511 being males and 565 being females, divided as follows: First Ward, 293; Second Ward, 274; Third Ward, 145; Fourth Ward, 364.

In October, a second primary school was organized in the Third and Fourth Wards, "the schoolhouse near the residence of H. S. Haskell being leased for that purpose," and Miss Luthera Waldo being employed as teacher, at a salary of $20 per month.

The semi-annual report of the Superintendent, dated January 3, 1860, gave the status of the schools, at that date, as follows: Number of pupils in attendance, 641; average attendance, 464; aggregate monthly salaries of teachers, $285; cost of schools, from September 1, 1859, $1,064.75; estimated cost to next report (six months), $1,781.25.

The report of the Superintendent for the term ending August 31, 1860, gave the number of children of school age residing in the city, 1,047 (males, 512; females, 535), there being 242 in the First Ward, 241 in the Second, 149 in the Third, and 415 in the Fourth.

In August, 1861, there having been a reduction in salaries, thereby causing the resignation of certain teachers, Miss Jane Booth was employed as teacher in the Second Ward Intermediate School, Miss Emma Sherwood in the Fourth Ward Primary, and Miss Eliza Hunter in the First Ward Primary. The school census for this year showed 1,013 children of school age in the city, there being 490 males and 523 females. In October, Superintendent Guppy resigned his position, and the Common Council appointed Henry B. Munn to fill the vacancy. Edgar P. Hill succeeded Mr. Munn as a member of the board. In this connection, are found the following patriotic sentiments in the report of the Board of Education to the City Council:

"Shortly after the commencement of the current school year, we lost the assistance and co-operation of our late excellent School Superintendent, Joshua J. Guppy, and we desire in this, our annual report, to record our high appreciation of his successful efforts in behalf of the best interests of our public schools. He left us to take an active part in crushing out the infernal rebellion that is struggling to dismember our once happy land and overthrow the best government the sun ever shone upon. And, while we regretted his departure, we could not but bid him Godspeed. His leaving brought the subject of the war home to all the pupils in our public schools, and inspired them with a new love of country, and hatred of traitors. And our schoolrooms have resounded during the year with patriotic songs—songs kindling a patriotism which will never die."

At the November meeting of the board, a resolution was adopted setting forth the crowded condition of the schoolhouses then in use, and recommending the purchase of "the building now occupied by D. J. M. Loop, in the Third Ward, at a cost not exceeding $200." The City Council having granted the requisite authority, the building was purchased and an intermediate school established therein.

In January, 1863, a slight increase was made in the salaries of teachers, the Principal of the high school being allowed $70 per month, and his assistant $35. Teachers in the intermediate schools received $30, while those in the primary departments were allowed $20.

In 1864, the intermediate schools were somewhat reduced on account of the establishment of a grammar grade in the high school, but the primary departments were overflowing with "little prattlers," receiving the first seeds of knowledge. The receipts for school purposes this year were $9,938.14. This included the $5,000 of school bonds issued by the city. The expenditures (including the cost of the high-school building and grounds) balanced the receipts. The board estimated the value of school property belonging to the city at $12,400, divided as follows: high school and grounds (26 lots), $10,000; house and lot in the Second Ward, $600; house and lot in the Third Ward, $900; two buildings and lot in the Fourth Ward, $900.

At the beginning of the new school year of 1865, several changes occurred in the list of teachers. The term opened with the following persons at the heads of the different departments: Intermediate—First Ward, Miss Susan N. Waters; Second and Third Wards, Mrs. George Ege; Fourth Ward, Miss Maria Austin. Primary—First Ward, Miss Eliza Hunter; Second and Third Wards, Miss Fannie E. Waldo; Fourth, J. Kate Miller.

The first paragraph of the report of the Board of Education, at the close of the school year of 1865, is worth reproducing, as showing the wonderful contrast in educational matters, that must have existed at that time, between the loyal North and the rebellious South: "The schools have just closed another year of usefulness. Notwithstanding the terrible civil strife, now happily brought to a close, which has so long distracted a large portion of our fair country, and drawn so long and heavily upon our resources, the educational interests of our city have been steadily and quietly advancing. The average attendance of pupils has been about 500 daily. This exceeds the average of any previous year." About the middle of the term, Mrs. Ege resigned her position as teacher in the Second and Third Wards Intermediate, the vacancy being filled by the appointment of Miss Rose L. Wotring.

In April, 1865, Franklin Street School District was organized, out of the Third and Fourth Wards. Miss Lizzie C. Osborne was placed in charge, at a salary of $30 per month.

At the close of the school year of 1867, the names of the following persons appear on the records as teachers in the intermediate and primary schools: Intermediate—First Ward, Miss Mattie L. Gilman; Second, Miss M. McFarlane; Fourth, Miss M. Austin and Mrs. H. Stewart. Primary—First Ward, Miss J. A. Moore; Second, Miss F. E. Waldo; Fourth, Miss J. K. Miller and Miss Kate O'Leary. Franklin Street School—Mrs. Ann Condon, Miss Lizzie Osborne and Miss Mary Ten Eyck.

In 1867, the site of the old Lee House was purchased by the city, and the First Ward Schoolhouse removed thereto. Owing to the crowded condition of the Franklin Street School, a primary class was formed, and placed in charge of Miss Josephine Williams, a room having been fitted up in the basement of the high-school building for its accommodation. During this year, Miss Addie E. Forrest was placed in charge of the First Ward Intermediate School. Numerous changes having occurred in the corps of teachers, the names of those holding positions in the intermediate and primary departments, August 1, 1869, will be of interest. In the intermediate department, Miss Addie E. Forrest taught in the First Ward, Mrs. R. G. Wood in the Second, Miss E. R. Briggs in the Fourth, and Miss Lizzie C. Osborn and Miss Mary Draper in the Franklin Street School. In the primary department, Miss Joanna A. Moore presided in the First Ward, Miss Mary Draper and Miss Mary Ten Eyck in the Second, Miss Kate E. Brady in the Fourth, and Miss H. B. Cole in the Franklin Street School.

The large influx of Germans into Wisconsin made necessary the passage of a law providing for the establishment of German and English schools, the experiment of a German-English school was tried in Portage, in 1868. The lower floor of the Dean store, on Clark street, was leased for the purpose, Miss Amelia Schneider being placed in charge. The new institution grew rapidly in favor, and soon became a leading feature of the school system of Portage.

In 1871, Miss Delia Damp, Miss Annie Hagan and Miss Belle C. Stewart, were appointed upon the staff of primary teachers. Miss Briggs resigned her position in the Franklin Street School, and was succeeded by Miss K. C. Wright. Before the close of the school year, Miss Harriet Lowenfels, Miss Louisa A. Collipp and Miss Mary G. Staley, became teachers in the primary department.

In February, 1874, Miss Wright resigned as teacher of the Franklin Street Intermediate School, and Miss Fannie E. Waldo was appointed to fill the vacancy. Miss Mary Gaffney, as teacher of the Second Ward Intermediate, also resigned; Miss May Dent became her successor. Other changes followed thick and fast, and the report of the board for the school year of 1873 shows the following new names in the roll of teachers, in addition to those already mentioned: Intermediate department—First Ward, Miss A. McMurray and Gretta E. Collins. Primary department—Second Ward, M. B. Ferguson; Fourth, Miss Helen Flanders. Miss McMurray was shortly removed by death.

In June, 1873, bids were received for building a brick schoolhouse in the Fourth Ward, upon lots near the corner of Dunn and Howard streets, which cost the city $300. George Hurst and John Dalton were the successful bidders, at $3,420. The old Fourth Ward School is now the residence of Alois Klenert. It was built at an early day, by Hugh McFarlane, as a residence, and afterwards sold to the city for a schoolhouse.

In the spring of 1874, the old Second Ward Schoolhouse gave way to a brick structure, built on a $4,700 contract by A. Carnagie, at the corner of Howard and Monroe streets.

At the close of the school year of 1874, both the Second and Fourth Ward Schoolhouses having been completed and occupied, we find the list of teachers in the intermediate and primary departments as follows: Intermediate—First Ward, Miss E. A. Marsh; Second, Miss Mary Dent and Miss Amelia Schneider; Fourth, Miss S. A. Waters and Miss E. K. Briggs. Primary—First Ward, Miss M. Christopher; Second, Miss F. E. Pettibone; Third, Miss M. G. Staley; Fourth, Miss Helen Flanders and Miss Emma Marsh. One of the features in school matters for 1874 was the establishment of a preparatory grammar school, to which pupils were promoted from the intermediate classes. Miss Lucelle Shattuck was placed in charge. Besides Miss Shattuck's the names of new teachers appearing upon the record at the end of the school year of 1875 were Miss Mary Kane, First Ward Intermediate; Miss Nellie Flanders, Miss Anna Hogan and Miss A. N. Cornwell, Fourth Ward Higher Intermediate; Miss Helen Marsh and Miss H. B. Cole, Fourth Ward Lower Intermediate; Annie Muir and Fannie Waldo, Second Ward Primary; Nellie G. Goodrich, Franklin Street School. A year later, is found Miss J. Whitelaw as Principal of the Fourth Ward Higher Intermediate, and Miss Mary Downey and Miss Lida Gilman as the respective instructors in the Second and Fourth Wards Lower Intermediate.

The only changes in teachers for the school year of 1877 were the appointment of Miss Mary O'Neil to the Second Ward Higher Intermediate, and Miss Mary Cockroft to the Lower Intermediate of the same ward.

From August, 1878, to December, 1879, the only changes in teachers to note are the appointment of Miss M. Karch to the First Ward Higher Intermediate, Miss Kate Knibbs to the Third Ward Second Primary, Miss Rachael Buttrey to the First Primary of the Second Ward, and Miss Filie Collipp to take charge of the new primary class in the basement of the high-school building.

The present value of school property in the city of Portage is estimated at $25,000. The schoolhouses are of the most substantial character, and the extensive grounds surrounding them are studded with the best varieties of shade and ornamental trees.

The High School.—In August, 1859, soon after the propitious inauguration of the present ward-school system, the citizens foresaw the necessity for an academic branch in connection with the common school. The Board of Education, with commendable alacrity and wisdom, took immediate measures looking toward the establishment of a high school. The services of Prof. Magoffin, as Principal, were secured, at a salary of $800 per annum, with Miss Abbey O. Briggs, as Assistant, at $35 per month. The early historical features of the high school are contained in a by-law adopted by the Board of Education, at its meeting of August 16, 1859, which says: "There is hereby established in and for the city of Portage, a high school, which shall be kept and maintained in the Sylvester Store, so called, recently rented for that purpose; and said school shall be in charge of a Principal and one or more assistants, as may be found necessary. During the first term of said school, no more than eighty pupils shall, at one time, be entitled to seats therein; and if that number of qualified pupils resident in said city do not apply for admittance to said school, the number may be completed by receiving children of persons residing in other places, on the terms and in the manner hereinafter to be designated by the board. Until otherwise ordered, eighteen pupils shall be admitted to the high school from the First Ward, sixteen from the Second Ward, fifteen from the Third Ward, and thirty-one from the Fourth Ward; provided, that if any ward has not the number of qualified pupils assigned to it, such vacancies may be filled by qualified pupils residing in other wards of the city."

At a special meeting of the board, held September 1, 1859, Superintendent Guppy presented the names of the following successful applicants who had been by him examined as to their qualifications for admission to the high school:

First Ward—George Carpenter, Volney W. Foster, Charles A. Lee, William McDole Lee, John Buchannon, Gustavus A. Sahlquist, Annie Buchannon, Christina Delamater, Mary Hanson, Maulla M. Lee and Jane Lee.

Second Ward—Oscar C. McCulloch, Chauncey V. Pettibone, George Peabody, Uriah A. Phillips, William Shachell, Myra D. Vaughn, Edward J. S. Wright, Jane C. Ball, Anna H. Brady, Mary E. Brady, Agnes Carnagie, Eliza A. Crawford, Helen J. Crawford, Frances A. Crawford, Helen G. Cook, Susie Davis, Helen Hanson, Mary A. Learnworth, Fannie H. McCulloch, Kate M. Peabody, Maria C. Pettibone, Eliza Purnell, Josephine A. Turney, Josephine Williams and Manamne Wing.

Third and Fourth Wards—Homer Hart, Drayton A. Hillyer, Albro Johnson, Theodore Johnson, Eben Johnson, James Kane, Judson A. Lewis, Frederick Steveop, John Veeder, Emily Ayres, Hannah P. Best, Mary Brown, Cornelia M. Cook, Cornelia Hand, Lucy Hinkley, Helen Hunter, Lucy Johnson, N. Nellie Leavitt, Matilda McFarlane, Sarah L. McGregor, Kate Miller, Mary Miller, Clara Robinson, Georgianna Snyder, Emma J. Snyder, Ella Stewart, Emily St. John, Lydia Whitney and Elizabeth Waters.

Non-resident—Samuel Kerr, Harriet Munn and Adeline Parmenter. Total, sixty-eight.

Applications for admission became very numerous, and before the close of the first term (November 21) the following additional pupils passed examination, and were admitted: Residents—Louise Morehouse, Joanna Hazeltine, Eliza Hunter, Margaret Van Winter, Cassius Van Winter, Minnie Williams, Mary Draper, David T. Gilman, Ella Huntington, Ella McCulloch, Richard Cushing, Carrie M. Butz, James T. Hulihan, James H. Crawford, Mary A. O'Keefe, Joanne Moore, Catherine O'Leary, John M. Holmes and Letitia J. David. Non-residents—Melvin E. Merrell (Fort Winnebago), Sarah Hand, Alma M. Hand, Emma Kelley, Catherine Cairnes, Sarah E. Goodwin, Porter Langdon and Given J. Owen. From November 21, 1859, to July 13, 1860, there were thirty-nine additional pupils admitted, making the roll 107 for the first year.

From this date until 1863, there is but little to note in connection with the high school, save that it progressed rapidly and the membership increased even beyond the most sanguine expectations. In January of that year, the necessary measures were taken by the board and City Council for constructing a high school building. Alexander Carnagie became the successful bidder, he agreeing to erect a structure, according to plans previously adopted, for $4,325. Block 230, bounded by Mac, Franklin and DeWitt streets, was purchased of Mr. Barden, for the purposes of a site, $300 being paid therefor. City school bonds, to the extent of $5,000, were issued to defray the expenses of building.

From the report of Superintendent Henry B. Munn, who succeeded Superintendent Guppy, in 1861, it appears that there were 193 names upon the roll August 1, 1863, quite a number of whom were non-residents. The Portage High School, even at that early day, was regarded at home and abroad as one of the leading institutions of that character. Its able and intelligent management, as indicated by the carefully kept records of the time, fully justified this recognition. The new building was completed and occupied early in 1864, but from some inexplicable cause there had been a serious falling-off in the attendance, the average during the year being seventy-eight, while in 1863 it was eighty-two. The newly established grammar grade, under the new tutorship of Mrs. Agnes N. Cornwell, showed an average attendance of fifty-seven. At the beginning of the new school year, August 1, 1864, Prof. Magoffin and Miss Briggs were re-appointed to the positions of Principal and assistant, at salaries of $75 and $37.50 per month, respectively. Mrs. Cornwell was also retained as Principal of the grammar school at a salary of $35, while Miss Lutheria B. Waldo was appointed as assistant at $30 per month.

The report of the board at the close of the year was full of encouragement. It showed an average attendance of 109 out of a total attendance of 200. Of the number attending school during the year, thirty-nine had engaged in teaching in the country districts, most of them in Columbia County, and two had entered Racine College.

In September, 1865, Prof. Magoffin resigned as Principal, having held the position from the foundation of the institution in 1859. Miss Abby O. Briggs was placed temporarily in charge at a salary of $60 per month, with Mrs. Ann Condon as assistant. Miss Briggs fulfilled the duties of the position until August, 1866, when C. J. Whitney was appointed as Principal, at a salary of $1,000 per annum, Miss Briggs resuming her place as assistant, at an increased salary. At the end of Mr. Whitney's first term, his books showed an average attendance of 174, out of a list comprising the names of 322 pupils. Before the close of the spring term of 1867, Mr. Whitney sent in his resignation, which was accepted, and Miss Briggs was again called upon to take charge. She was assisted in finishing the term by the Hon. J. P. McGregor, who heard the Latin, and Mrs. Jane Steber, who heard the French, recitations. At the close of the term, Miss Briggs also resigned; E. E. Ashley was then engaged as Principal, at a salary of $1,200 dollars per year, with Miss M. Austin, from the Fourth Ward Intermediate, as temporary assistant. In August, 1867, Miss Rosa L. Wotring received the appointment of assistant to Mrs. Cornwell, in the grammar school, and in May, 1868, Miss Austin was succeeded by Miss Mary Flanders, as the assistant of Mr. Ashley, the Principal. In August, 1868, Mrs. Cornwell resigned the principalship of the grammar school, and in October was succeeded by Miss Lizzie C. Osborn, with Miss Maria Austin as assistant. During 1869, a German class was organized under the tutorship of the Rev. J. J. Hoffmann, who heard recitations in the tongue of the Fatherland, one hour each day, in the old Lutheran schoolroom. In 1870, two German classes were formed from pupils of the high school.

During the school year of 1871, Mr. Ashley, the Principal, was temporarily assisted by Miss Carrie B. Goldsmith and Miss Marion R. Rosenkrans. The Assistants of Miss Osborn, Principal of the grammar school, were Miss Maria Austin and W. G. Clough. Before the close of the year, Miss Rosenkrans became Mr. Ashley's assistant, while Miss Austin and Mr. Clough were succeeded by Miss Laura B. Copeland in the grammar department.

At a meeting of the Board of Education, held August 18, 1873, J. J. Hughes was elected Principal, and Miss Mary A. Clark, Assistant. Under the management of Mr. Hughes and Miss Clark, the school lost none of its previously acquired importance, and, toward the close of the school year, the first regular graduating exercises of which there is any record in the history of the institution, took place. The Class of '74 was as follows: Nellie Goodrich, Emma C. Prentice, George Muir and Samuel Lockhart. The effect of thus placing a "premium upon advancement" was noticeable in the increased average attendance and better behavior of pupils the following year, not only in the high school, but also in the lower grades. At the beginning of the school year of 1875, Miss Clark was succeeded by W. A. Weavman as Assistant, and at the August meeting of the board, William M. Lawrence and W. G. Clough succeeded to the positions of Principal and assistant, respectively. In December, 1876, Miss Fannie Estabrook, was appointed to the position of assistant teacher, in the grammar school, Miss Austin being promoted to the principalship. In April, 1877, Miss Osborn and Miss Austin were allowed to resume their original positions in the grammar school, and in July, W. G. Clough was appointed Principal of the high school, with Henry Reid, as assistant.

In accordance with a vote of the citizens of Portage, taken in April, 1877, this institution was organized under the high-school law of the State, which provides, among other things, that the State Superintendent shall prescribe the course of study to be pursued in all high schools, and shall designate the class of text-books to be used.

The graduates for 1877 were Annie Malloy and George Shackell. Under the careful management of teachers and officials, the Class of '78 was very encouraging and satisfactory. The graduates were Mary Ellen Borden, Rachael Ann Buttery, Joseph Francis Gallagher, Loa Brown Kennan, Kathrina Mary Knibbs, Thurlow Wheeler Maine, Isabella Jane G'Neill, Lillie Elenor Schneider, James Horace Wells, Susy F. Whitelaw, Grant Robinson Bennett, James Alfred Cole, Martha Ann Karch, Helen Blodgett Knibbs, Bennett R. Lewis, Bernard Joseph McMahon, Louis Oscar Pfaff, Fred Jackson Turner and Susan Elizabeth Wells.

At the beginning of the present school year, Henry Neill was appointed to the position of assistant teacher. Mr. Neill resigned in the latter part of 1879, and W. S. Jeffries was chosen by the board to fill the vacancy.

The graduating class for 1879 was as follows: Albert Samuel Crouch, Richard Arthur Dempsey, Ida May Farrington, Margaret Barbour Harvey, Belle Judson, Mary McDonell, Anna Gilrye Reid and Andrew Guppy Williams.

Private Schools.—The first school of a strictly private character established in Portage was the Classical Institute. It was founded in the winter of 1851–52, by William Sylvester, John Q. Adams, Lemuel Berry, Rev. Bradley Phillips, C. J. Pettibone and Rev. W. W. McNair. The Principal was the Rev. John Brittain, A. M., assisted by Miss Abbey O. Briggs and Miss Margaret B. Burt. In it were taught, besides all the English branches of education, Greek, Latin and French; also music, drawing and painting. As the district schools grew into importance, public interest in the Classical Institute seems to have waned, and it was completely supplanted when the present system of public education was organized and the high school established.

Cotemporaneous with the Classical Institute, was the select school of Miss Butts, which at one time enjoyed the patronage of about eighty pupils. When the lady principal entered the matrimonial state (becoming Mrs. Cornwell), a Mr. Mills took charge of the school; but the institution went into gradual dissolution from causes already cited. There were also the Parish School of St. John's Episcopal Church, established in November, 1855, and the female seminary, founded two years later. The Rev. H. M. Thompson presided over the former, with Miss A. O. Briggs, Mary Morehouse and Miss McFarlane as assistants. Mrs. E. D. Emery, Mrs. E. W. Tenney and Miss Briggs were connected with the latter.

Attached to the various Catholic and Lutheran churches in the city, are flourishing parochial schools, notable among them being the one in charge of three sisters of St. Dominick, located at the corner of Conant and Adams streets.

School Statistics.—The following is a tabulated statement of the condition of the schools of Portage, since 1859 :

SCHOOL YEARS.	No. Children of School Age.	Whole No. Children Enrolled.	Average Daily Attendance	No. Teachers Employed.	Monthly Pay of Teachers.	Receipts.	Disbursements.
1860.....	1,047	641	464	$285	$3,292	$3,444
1861.....	1,013	9
1862.....	1,070	897	400	9	247	4,423	3,696
1863.....	1,069	1,021	450	9	275	4,388	4,299
1864.....	1,075	1,198	458	10	233	*9,938	†9,938
1865.....	1,208	1,177	478	11	342	5,438	5,466
1866.....	1,282	1,018	478	12	350	5,198	4,601
1867.....	1,477	1,073	525	18	730	6,399	5,784
1868.....	1,496	1,045	485	13	485	6,186	5,590
1869.....	1,504	1,063	523	15	437	6,114	6,043
1870.....	1,521	1,065	561	16	540	6,146	6,236
1871.....	1,564	1,069	551	20	685	6,849	6,389
1872.....	1,539	1,064	547	13	515	6,813	6,513
1873.....	1,430	990	533	16	610	7,074	6,574
1874.....	1,556	1,074	571	18	665	11,978	13,217
1875.....	1,756	1,009	528	14	547	14,999	12,530
1876.....	1,776	528	20	592	12,516	12,863
1877.....	1,566	924	535	18	592	14,433	13,512
1878.....	875	599	15	590	10,580	9,948
1879.....	932	555	17	615	7,851	7,255

The following named individuals have held the office of Superintendent, since the establishment of the present school system: J. J. Guppy, from May, 1859, to September, 1861;

* Including bonds issued for building high school.

† Increased by additional expense incurred in building high school.

Henry B. Munn, from September, 1861, to April, 1866; J. J. Guppy, from April, 1866, to April, 1873; G. J. Cox, from April, 1873, to April, 1875; N. K. Shattuck, from April, 1875, to April, 1877; A. C. Kellogg, from the latter date to the present time.

The members of the Board of Education, appointed by the Common Council, in June of each year, have been:

1860.—First Ward, Volney Foster; Second, B. S. Doty; Third, A. B. Alden; Fourth, H. B. Munn.

1861.—First Ward, Henry Merrell; Second, B. S. Doty; Third, A. B. Alden; Fourth, H. B. Munn.

1862.—First Ward, Henry Merrell; Second, B. S. Doty; Third, A. B. Alden; Fourth, Guy C. Prentiss.

1863.—First Ward, L. G. Beaver; Second, B. S. Doty; Third, H. C. Baker; Fourth, G. C. Prentiss.

1864.—First Ward, M. R. Keegan; Second, H. D. Kingsbury; Third, H. C. Baker; Fourth, G. C. Prentiss.

1865.—First Ward, M. R. Keegan; Second, H. D. Kingsbury; Third, A. B. Alden; Fourth, W. K. Miles.

1866.—First Ward, L. G. Beaver; Second, H. D. Kingsbury; Third, H. C. Baker; Fourth, G. C. Prentiss.

1867.—First Ward, Henry Ender; Second, H. D. Kingsbury; Third, W. G. Bebb; Fourth, J. P. McGregor. (Re-elected in 1868.)

1868.—First Ward, V. Helmann; Second, S. E. Dana; Third, D. G. Muir; Fourth, Robert Mitchell; Fifth, J. P. McGregor.

1869.—First Ward, V. Helmann; Second, S. E. Dana; Third, A. D. Hemenway; Fourth, Robert Mitchell; Fifth, J. P. McGregor. W. W. Corning and G. C. Prentiss were subsequently appointed to represent the two latter wards, on account of the removal of Messrs. Mitchell and McGregor, to other localities.

1870.—First Ward, V. Helmann; Second, S. E. Dana; Third, A. D. Hemenway; Fourth, P. S. Hallenbeck; Fifth, Carl Schneider.

1871.—First Ward, John N. Kind; Second, S. E. Dana; Third, A. D. Hemenway; Fourth, W. W. Corning; Fifth, G. C. Prentiss.

1872.—First Ward, John N. Kind; Second, O. A. Southmayd; Third, A. D. Hemenway; Fourth, T. B. Duncan; Fifth, C. Schneider.

1873.—First Ward, John W. Kind; Second, S. S. Brannan; Third, Evan Arthur; Fourth, W. W. Corning; Fifth, C. Schneider.

1874.—First Ward, John Holstein; Second, S. S. Brannan; Third, Evan Arthur; Fourth, M. Waterhouse; Fifth, M. T. Alverson.

1875.—First Ward, John N. Kind; Second, Ll. Breese; Third, L. W. Borden; Fourth, M. Waterhouse; Fifth, M. T. Alverson.

1876.—First Ward, John N. Kind; Second, Ll. Breese; Third, M. Waterhouse; Fourth, Mr. Hagan; Fifth, M. T. Alverson.

1877.—First Ward, John N. Kind; Second, F. H. Lewis; Third, M. Waterhouse; Fourth, C. C. Britt; Fifth, Conrad Collipp.

1878.—First Ward, John O'Keefe; Second, E. S. Purdy; Third, George Murison; Fourth, V. Helmann; Fifth, C. Collipp.

1879.—First Ward, John O'Keefe; Second, E. S. Purdy; Third, W. G. Bebb; Fourth, Irving Bath;* Fifth, C. Collipp.

The Legislature of 1878-79, passed an act providing for the appointment of members of the Board, in April, and making the term of office two years instead of one. Accordingly, in April, 1879, Messrs. O'Keefe, Bebb and Collipp were appointed for one year, and Messrs. Purdy and Bath, for two years. In April, 1880, appointments from the First, Third and Fifth Wards were made, for two years.

* Removed from the Ward; V. Helmann appointed to fill vacancy.

RELIGIOUS INSTITUTIONS.

The first Christian missionary who visited Fort Winnebago is believed to have been a Romish priest named Mazzuchelli. He came to labor among the Indians as early as 1831, soon after the completion of the fort, and, being unable to speak their language, was usually accompanied by Miss Elizabeth Grignon as interpreter. Forty Winnebagoes were baptized and given Christian names by Father Mazzuchelli during one of his visits. The presentation of crosses, crucifixes and beads had a wonderful effect upon the recipients of these holy favors.

The first structure built and dedicated to the cause of Christianity in what is now Columbia County—and, indeed, it may safely be said that it was the first in Central Wisconsin—stood near the center of the present city of Portage. It was built about 1833 by the famous Peter Pauquette, whose wife professed a belief in Catholicism, and was located upon an elevation—long since leveled away by progressive whites—near the middle of what is now Adams street, at its intersection with Conant street, and almost within a stone's throw of the spot stained by the blood of its founder when he was foully assassinated, October 18, 1836. No one now living in Portage remembers anything concerning Pauquette's log church; but events which have transpired since the coming of those now classed among the first settlers, confirm the hitherto unsubstantiated statements regarding the existence of such a church. Satterlee Clark says he assisted at the burial of Pauquette, and that the remains were deposited beneath the floor of this church. The structure was destroyed by fire about 1840.

Ten years later witnessed the commencement of a new era in the history of Christian progress in Portage. The arrival and permanent settlement of Thomas Christopher, Patrick Lenon, Charles Moore, M. R. Keegan, James Collins, John Sweeney, Mrs. Ward and others owing allegiance to the church of Rome, opened the way for the establishment of a parish. The Rev. Father Smith, a Catholic missionary, was the first to preach to the small band of pioneers. After he left, came Father Hobbs, who held services in an unoccupied house near the fort. In the latter part of 1850, the Rev. Louis Godhardt, a Hollander, came as a missionary, and "said mass" in the house of Mrs. Ward, south of the canal. Early in 1851, a frame church was erected by the members of the parish upon a lot at the corner of Conant and Adams streets, donated by Webb & Bronson. Upon the site stood a small forest of crosses, marking the graves of a score or more of "good Indians," who, having been converted by early missionaries, had died in the faith. Among them rested the remains of Peter Pauquette, whose grave was indicated by a rude yet pretentious palisade of pickets. According to the original survey of the city of Portage, a street (Adams) passed through this graveyard, and in the center of that street were the modern Samson's remains. It had been especially stipulated by the donors of the lot that the Catholics, in accepting it, should agree to give proper burial to Pauquette's bones when the excavations for the street were made; so, in 1852, when the grading of what are now the principal streets, was in progress, the earthly particles of Peter Pauquette's body were disinterred, removed and reburied, this time beneath the threshold of the south entrance to the little frame church now used by the Catholics for the purposes of a parochial school, where they have lain to the present time; but there is a prospect that they will soon again be disturbed. While the excavations were in progress, the decayed foundations of a log house were discovered, not over or around, but near, Pauquette's grave; charcoal and ashes were noticeable in the vicinity—incidents which go to confirm the fact already shown, that a house once stood upon the ground, and that it was burned down. The little graveyard was doubtless the result of Catholic burials beneath the shadow of the rude cross that surmounted the first structure devoted to Christianity on the Wisconsin River northeast of Prairie du Chien.

In 1858, St. Mary's Parish (for such was the name of the organization) purchased a lot on the north side of Conant street, and removed thereto a small frame structure, in which, after needed improvements, they established a parochial school. Soon afterward, they made a second purchase—a lot just east of and adjoining the lot donated them by Webb & Bronson. A frame structure, in which the Baptists had but recently held services, was included in the latter purchase. The building was removed, and now forms the north wing of the Catholic school. The Baptists, in the mean time, had commenced the erection of a large brick church on Cook street, near Mac, but before completing the work, an exchange was effected, whereby the Catholics became possessed of the then unfinished brick, which they have since completed and largely embellished. Besides the church building, upon which there is an insurance of $5,000, the property consists of five lots, of average size, and a parsonage, which cost, "in war times," over $2,000. The number of families in the parish is given at 175. The successors of Father Godhardt have been the Revs. James Roche, James M. Doyle (now of Janesville), P. J. O'Neil P. F. Pettit and Thomas Keenan. Father Keenan, the present incumbent, also presides over the mission in Lodi, whither he goes once a month to console the spiritual troubles of a parish composed of some twenty families.

The M. E. Church.—Isaac Smith, it seems, was the first person in Columbia County to preach Methodism. He came from England, in 1846, with a colony, known as the Potters' Émigration Society, which settled on Portage Prairie. Mr. Smith applied at Fort Winnebago for permission to hold religious services therein, but, on account of the existence of various shades of religious belief among the officers, he received little encouragement. Thereupon the use of the dining-room of the Franklin House was tendered by Capt. Low, and Mr. Smith frequently held forth, thereafter, to large and interested audiences. In the spring of 1851, a society was organized in Portage by the Rev. Mr. Mackintosh, who remained until the meeting of the conference that year, when he received a call to other parts. The Rev. Mr. Wilcox, Presiding Elder, was requested by the society to bring before the conference the necessity for sending thither a minister, but for some reason he failed to do so. However, regular services were kept up by the exertions of local preachers, among whom were James Chancellor, Isaac Smith and others. In the summer of 1852, Presiding Elder Wilcox sent a divine named Irish, to minister to the spiritual wants of the society. He, being an invalid, remained but a short time, and during the fall, the Rev. John Bean, in answer to a call, took charge, and thus became the first regular Pastor. The immediate successors of Mr. Bean were the Revs. Stansbury (during whose pastorate the present church edifice was built), Hackney, Train and Hazletine. Since 1859, the following-named Pastors have presided: 1859, R. Langley; 1861, John M. Springer; 1862, I. B. Bachman; 1864, Jacob Miller; 1868, I. B. Richardson; 1869, William Haw; 1870, James Evans; 1873, George Case, now Presiding Elder of the district; 1876, John Knibbs; 1879, F. W. Hall, the incumbent. The membership is given at 115 persons, while the congregation frequently reaches 200. The society is free from debt. The present officers are: Trustees—J. F. Warren, Mr. Cutsforth, J. É. Wells. James Gowran, Mr. Wah, Evan Arthur, Mr. Kenion, Joseph Donham and W. Williams. Stewards—O. H. Lewis, J. Cole, S. M. Smith, Thomas C. Evans, W. Williams. Stewardesses—Mrs. N. Smith, Mrs. O. H. Lewis, Mrs. M. H. Wood and Mrs. James Gowran. Class Leaders—J. Cole and Joseph Donham. Sunday School Superintendent—W. Williams.

The Presbyterians.—In June, 1849, the Rev. William Wynkoop McNair was commissioned by the Board of Missions of the Presbyterian Church as an evangelist within the bounds of Wisconsin. At that time there was but one Presbytery in the State. In July following, Mr. McNair commenced preaching in the schoolroom at the garrison of Fort Winnebago. According to the records, he "devoted one-third of his time the first year to the portage, preaching occasionally toward the close of his missionary year in the new village then just springing up near the Wisconsin River, afterward called Portage City. The remainder of his time was devoted to Wyocena and Dekorra. In July, he commenced to devote two-thirds of his time to the portage and the remainder to Dekorra." At the meeting of the Presbytery of Wisconsin, held at Cambridge, Dane County, in June, 1850, a committee of four, consisting of Revs. Thomas Frazer, Bradley Phillips, Eben Blachley and W. W. McNair, was appointed to organize a church at Fort Winnebago, "if the way be clear." In the mean time, a colony, composed of members of the Presbyterian Church of Fremont, Ohio, had arrived and settled in the vicinity of the fort. The members of the colony were H. R. Pettibone, John A. Johnson, Mrs. Almira B.

Johnson, C. J. Pettibone, Caroline Pettibone and George and Ann Wall. Mr. McNair returned to his field of pioneer labor, and with his accustomed energy set about carrying out his instructions. The results of the first meeting are given in the church journal as follows: "In pursuance of public notice given by the minister of the First Presbyterian Church of Fort Winnebago on three successive Sabbaths previous, the people of said church and congregation assembled at the schoolhouse in said town—their most usual place of meeting for divine worship—on Monday evening, July 29, 1850, for the purpose of organizing themselves into a body corporate and electing trustees." At this meeting, the Rev. W. W. McNair was chosen President and J. A. Johnson Secretary. Church Trustees were elected as follows: H. R. Pettibone, John Ap. Jones and John A. Johnson. Among those who soon afterward became identified with the church may be mentioned Chester Helmes, Dr. C. D. Hottenstein, C. G. McCulloch and Mrs. Emily Best. The organization completed, the next thing was a house of worship. The individual and collective exertions of the congregation soon supplied the want. A commodious frame building was finished in December, 1850. It stood upon a lot on the southeast side of Cook street, opposite the present site of the county jail, serving the purpose for which it was erected until about 1855, when it was removed to the corner of Conant and Adams streets, being purchased by the Baptists. In the mean time, the society had commenced the erection of a handsome brick edifice at the corner of Cook and Adams streets. This was completed at a cost of $16,000, and opened in February, 1856. In September of that year, Mr. McNair tendered his resignation, and on the 18th of the same month it was resolved that "Dr. McCulloch be a committee to call at Port Byron, N. Y., and hear Rev. George C. Heckman preach, and report by mail immediately." Advices from the Doctor must have been favorable, for we find that Mr. Heckman soon afterward received a call at a salary of $800 per annum, which he accepted. The following named ministers have filled the pulpit since the time of Mr. Heckman: September, 1860, Benjamin Van Zandt; June, 1863, George C. Crissman; October, 1863, F. R. Wotring; November, 1866, Charles F. Beach; June, 1869, John H. Ritchie; December, 1874, Samuel Wyckoff; August, 1878, L. H. Mitchell, the incumbent. The present Trustees of the church are William Fulton, James Patterson, John Williamson, E. L. Jæger and George Wall. The following names comprise a complete list of the Elders since the organization: C. J. Pettibone (who was among the main pillars of the church during its early struggle for existence), George Wall, John T. Clark, L. Breese, Mr. Jennings, A. D. Hemenway, Dr. Schemerhorn, Thomas Yule, Donald Ferguson, William T. Parry and N. K. Shattuck. Messrs. Breese, Shattuck, Parry and Wall are the present Elders. Robert Campbell and E. L. Jæger have filled the office of Deacons, the latter acting in that capacity at present. The membership of the society is given at 110.

St. John's Episcopal Church.—This parish was organized in 1853, at a meeting held in Verandah Hall on the 8th day of June of that year. Henry Merrell was chosen Chairman and J. B. Seaman Secretary of the meeting, after which church officers were elected as follows: Henry Merrell, Senior Warden; Alvah Hand, Junior Warden; Vestrymen—C. D. Hottenstein, John Delaney, J. B. Seaman, M. H. Pettibone and A. C. Ketchum. After the election of Dr. Hottenstein and J. B. Seaman as Treasurer and Secretary, respectively, of the parish, an invitation was extended to the Rev. E. A. Goodnough, a missionary, to take spiritual charge of the small flock, which invitation was accepted. M. H. Pettibone tendered the use of Verandah Hall for meetings, which was also accepted. Such, in brief, were the proceedings of the first meeting of St. John's Episcopal Parish. The Rev. H. M. Thompson, of Maysville, Ky., was the first Rector. He came at a salary of $450 per annum, and remained until November, 1858, when he was succeeded by the Rev. Mr. Pattison. Mr. Thompson has since become somewhat noted, having filled the rectorship of Grace Church, New York, at a salary of $10,000 per annum. He is now Rector of Trinity Parish, New Orleans. In April, 1855, a committee was appointed to negotiate for a church site, which was secured on the north side of Pleasant street, near Clark, and a church edifice, built after plans drawn by William Thompson, a brother of the Pastor, erected thereon, at a cost of $5,000. Mr. Pattison was succeeded by the Rev. Alonzo J. M. Hudson, who took charge February 1, 1861, and remained until the summer of 1867, being superseded by the Rev. Walter F. Lloyd. During the rectorship of Mr. Hudson, the parish was duly incorporated in accordance with law. This event occurred June 27, 1864, the first parish officers under the incorporation being S. S. Case and H. S. Haskell, Wardens, and H. B. Merrell, W. W. Corning, I. W. Bacon, F. Winne, O. P. Williams and Mr. Wells, Vestrymen. The changes in the rectorship since 1867 have been Samuel D. Pulford, who came in 1869, and remained until July, 1876. The Rev. John J. Karcher was the next Rector. His resignation bears date of May 1, 1877. The Rev. Joel Clark followed and resigned April 10, 1879. Since then the Revs. Harry Thompson and Charles T. Susan have officiated. Two of the most pleasant features in the past history of St. John's Parish were; First, the presentation, during the rectorship of H. M. Thompson, of a costly silver communion set by the Rev. Mr. Hopkins, of New York City; and, second, the $1,000 bequest of Henry Merrell, for many years Senior Warden of the parish. The first confirmation occurred January 21, 1855, when a class of sixteen persons were accepted by the Rt. Rev. Jackson Kemper, Bishop of Wisconsin. The first baptisms in Portage, according to Episcopal rites, were of Helen M. H. Merrell, now Mrs. E. S. Purdy, and Henry L. Merrell, which occurred July 1, 1850, being performed by Bishop Kemper. The records show a total of 343 baptisms, 227 confirmations, 127 marriages and 157 burials. The present membership of the parish is about 100. A neat brick rectory was built in 1871, at a cost of $2,019. The present officers are: Wardens, H. D. Wells and G. H. Merrell; Vestrymen, John Graham, J. B. Wells, W. N. Cole, E. J. S. Wright, J. B. Taylor, W. D. Fox, Alexander Thompson and C. R. Gallett; Treasurer, E. J. S. Wright; Secretary, W. N. Cole.

Evangelical Association.—Eighty years ago, Jacob Albrecht founded a new religious creed among his German brethren in Pennsylvania, based upon rules of faith not unlike those governing Methodism. The "Albrights," as they are generally known, to distinguish them from other denominations, found their way to Wisconsin at an early day. Their advent into Columbia County dates back some thirty years ago, when a class was organized in the town of Lewiston. A similar organization was effected soon after in Portage, Samuel Schleifer being the prime mover. The Rev. George Eslinger (then the only minister of the Albrecht persuasion in the extensive circuit in which were included the present circuits of Portage, Westfield, Brandon, Winnebago, Fox River, Berlin, Marquette and Oshkosh, at present comprising an aggregate membership of fifteen hundred souls), presided every second Sunday. It was his custom to fill a small provision pouch with hard crackers and other imperishable food, and set out from Portage on foot, making his tour and reaching Oshkosh in seven days. Before leaving the latter place, on his return, a fresh supply of provisions was procured, and the reverend gentleman would make Portage in time to preach to his flock at that point on the following Sabbath. Services were held at the houses of members, or in halls, until 1871. During that year, a house of worship was completed, at a cost of $2,650, and also a parsonage, costing $1,400. Mr. Eslinger was succeeded by the Rev. L. Buehler, now Presiding Elder of Milwaukee District. Since then, the pastoral successions have been: The Revs. Henry Esch, L. Von Wald, A. Turnutzer (the present Presiding Elder of Portage District), William Stegner (now Presiding Elder at Winona, Minn.), M. Hauert, Peter Massueger, William Ziekerich, Charles Finger, George Schofer, Henry Schelp, M. Wittenwyler, O. Ragatz, Ernst Schulz (now Presiding Elder in Iowa), Nicholas Schuck, William Pfferkorn, T. Umbreit (who was in charge during the building of the church), Peter Held, Peter Speigh, and the incumbent, M. Wittenwyler. The present Trustees of the society are Aug. Matthison, George Koehler and Charles Moore; the membership about twenty families. This denomination has two church papers, in Cleveland, Ohio—the Christliche Botschafter and the Evangelical Messenger.

First Baptist Church.—Very full and complete records of this church have been preserved. The date of organization is given as August 30, 1853, and the names of those who figured in that event are A. L. Round, I. Fuller, M. Fuller, Samantha P. Kincaid, Eunice Fuller, Malissa Fuller, C. Wright, Julia Wright, A. Spicer, Caroline Spicer, R. Spicer, Christina Spicer.

Tacy Spicer, Mary C. Stout, T. R. Jones, Amanda Jones, Phœba and Lucy Fuller, Lecta M. Culy and Thomas O. Hear. The first meeting was "held in Spicer's Schoolhouse, located at Fort Winnebago." Subsequent services were conducted at the same place, and also at the residences of members, and in Verandah Hall. The first regular Pastor was Elder Rogers, who commenced his labors July 19, 1855. During his pastorate (in 1857) the society purchased a church edifice previously erected by the Presbyterians, on the southeast side of Cook street, opposite the present county jail, and removed it to the southeast corner of Conant and Adams streets. It was soon afterward sold for $1,600, to the Catholics, who removed it to an adjoining lot, whereon they had built a frame church, to which it was attached, and it is now used by them as a schoolhouse. The Baptists then took immediate measures for the construction of a brick church, on Cook street, near Mac. The basement of the building, in which the society assembled for worship, was dedicated on the 30th of October, 1858, the Rev. J. W. Fish preaching the dedicatory sermon. This uncompleted structure was deeded to John M. Henni, Catholic Bishop, October 29, 1859, "for which," says the record, "the church receives Lots 10 and 11, Block 186, in exchange; a warranty deed being executed to the Trustees for the same, by James M. Doyle; also the sum of $2,800 difference between the said property, $1,400 of which is secured by a mortgage executed by the said John M. Henni, payable in five annual payments of $280 each, bearing 7 per cent interest." Upon Lots 10 and 11, mentioned above, stood a frame building, erected the year previous by the Catholics for a schoolhouse. Gilbert Luther contracted to put seats into it, and, various improvements having been made, it long since took its place among the principal church edifices in Portage. Mr. Rogers resigned in December, 1859, and the society was without a regular pastor until January, 1862, when a call was extended to the Rev. I. J. Hoile. In May, 1865, Mr. Hoile was succeeded by the Rev. A. Whitman, who remained until April 5, 1869, preaching his farewell discourse from the pulpit of the Presbyterian Church. Since then the spiritual destinies of the society have been guided by the Revs. E. Ellis, Mr. Wilderman, W. Archer, Mr. McEwen, Mr. Murray and George P. Guild. The present Trustees of the church are N. M. Henry, John Reed, Stephen Turner, G. M. Oddie and Mrs. Lawrence; membership, eighty-nine; free of debt.

German Evangelical Lutheran Church.—Organized in 1854, through the efforts of Christian Braetz, George Jurgens and others. The Rev. Mr. Beckel was the first Pastor. Services were held by the society in the Fourth Ward Schoolhouse until 1874. In the mean time the membership was largely increased, while the financial strength of the organization, under the careful management of its founders, became such as to warrant the building of a place of worship. The attractive brick structure at the corner of Carroll and Mac streets, built in 1874, at a cost of $4,600, is the result. The number of families belonging to the society is given at one hundred and ninety. It belongs to the Synod of Missouri, and is known as the "Deutsche Evangelisch Lutherische St. Johannes-Gemeinde." The Pastors called to the charge since the early ministrations of the Rev. Mr. Beckel are the Revs. A. Rohrlack, Ch. Meyer, H. Hoffmann, J. Hoffmann and B. J. Zahn.

Free Methodists.—The first steps taken toward the organization of a society of those believing in Free Methodism, occurred in August, 1873, at Forest Schoolhouse, six miles northeast of Portage. The meeting was presided over by D. M. Sinclair, then at the head of the Wisconsin Free Methodist Conference. There were present on this occasion the Rev. Wellington Nobles, William Shepard and wife, James Morrison and wife, G. Haight and wife, and Mrs. Gates, now Mrs. William Holden. There were but few meetings held thereafter at that place, the society establishing themselves permanently in Portage in the fall. In 1874, they purchased of the German Lutherans a frame church building and removed it to the northeast corner of Jefferson and Pleasant streets, at a cost, when ready for occupation, of $700. Mr. Nobles was succeeded by the Revs. J. Murray, J. P. Shattuck and Robert Pate. The present Pastor, the Rev. Mr. Charnley, resides in Dekorra. The officers of the church are: Trustees, William Holden and James Morrison; Steward and class leader, William Holden. The membership is given at fifteen.

W. Meacher M.D.

PORTAGE CITY.

German Evangelical (Trinity) Church.—Organized in 1865 by the Rev. Louis Von Rague. Services were held in the hall of the fire department building, corner of Clark and Pleasant streets, until 1871, when a frame church edifice was erected on the south side of Wisconsin street, between Cass and Dunn, at a cost of $2,200. Mr. Von Rague was succeeded in the pastorate by the Rev. Mr. Hanf, and he by the Rev. Mr. Gottlieb. It was during the incumbency of the latter that the church building was erected. The society at that time was composed of twenty-five families. The Rev. A. Klein, the successor of Mr. Gottlieb, increased this number to forty-three. The ministers in charge since then have been the Revs. D. Ankele, J. Frankenhof and Chr. A. Hauck. Mr. Hauck commenced with twenty-one families; the membership is now thirty-four.

German Catholics.—This parish was organized in the fall of 1877, and during the following year a brick church edifice was constructed on Mac street, at a cost of $2,700. The parish originally comprised about one hundred families, but there has been a slight falling off from that number. The Rev. H. Pauzer was the first Pastor. The Rev. John Zawistowski is at present in charge.

MANUFACTURERS.

Solomon Leach's saw-mill was the first one erected within the borders of what are now the city limits of Portage. It was built in 1843, and stood on the south side of the Wisconsin River, near the present bridge. The propelling power was a wind mill, the wings of which were fanned by the upper air currents. The amount of lumber sawed depended, of course, upon the velocity and volume of the gale. The windmill was soon supplanted by a water-wheel, upon which the remarkable genius and industrious hands of Mr. Leach had labored for many weary days and nights. In 1845, during Mr. Leach's absence in the pineries, his mill took fire and was destroyed.

Campbell & Scott built a steam saw-mill in Portage, in 1850, and a large portion of the building material used by the early residents was the product of this mill. It was destroyed by fire July 7, 1852, the loss being estimated at $3,000. The proprietors immediately rebuilt, and for some years continued their operations; but the steam saw-mill, as it was called, long since became a thing of the past. Kent & Manchester and Buchanan & Murison also built and operated saw-mills, at an early day.

Flouring Mills.—The big stone mill, built by McNeal & Burgur in 1854, was, while it stood, one of the solid institutions of Portage. It was built of stone, the walls being four feet thick, covered an area of 40x50 feet, and was four stories high. The first grist was ground in October, 1854, and for sixteen years, its buhrs supplied the citizens of Portage and surrounding country with the "staff of life." During that time, Wells & Craig became the owners. It was destroyed by fire on the 11th of April, 1870, at an estimated loss of $24,000; insured for one-half this sum. At the date of its destruction, there were six runs of stones in operation, and the capacity of the mill was about 250 barrels per day.

Soon after the burning of the "Big Mill," when the proprietors gave evidence of receding from their expressed intention of rebuilding, the Portage Flouring Mill, a small frame institution, with one run of stones, was established by Fred. Siverkrop & Bro., at the corner of Pauquette and Wisconsin streets. In 1874, John Schlossman became a partner in the concern, and in 1876, Dr. M. Waterhouse acquired title to a two-thirds interest. Otto Krish and M. De Witt Older have since possessed themselves of the concern. Portage is virtually without a flouring-mill in keeping with her importance as a great commercial center.

Portage Iron Works.—The first iron foundry established in Portage was the property of Smith & Blair. It was built in 1853, and stood on Dodge street, in the rear of Helm's store. The institution seems to have supplied "a long-felt want," for we find that in 1856, the services of twenty men were required to perform the work that came to it. Neither was the demand strictly local, for an order, given by a New Lisbon mill-builder for a 1,500-pound shaft, was promptly filled. In 1863, M. R. Keegan founded a similar institution, on a small scale, and, after carrying it on for two years, sold to James Fyfe & Co., who removed and located it at the corner of Dodge and Wisconsin streets, where large and important additions have since been made. A general jobbing business comprised the extent of operations, until 1867-68, when the firm, to meet the demands of the times, entered largely into the manufacture of hop-presses, but the venture proved unprofitable, for the reason that a panic in the hop market set in just at a time when the manufacture of presses by Messrs. Fyfe & Co. had reached the maximum, leaving them with a high-priced article on hand, with no demand. In 1872, Fyfe & Co. sold out, and, under the name of the Portage Manufacturing Company, the business was continued, for about a year, with A. E. Eggleston as Superintendent. A re-organization then took place, the institution taking the name of the Portage Iron Works, with James Fyfe as manager. In 1878, Mr. Fyfe became sole proprietor. J. C. Anderson was shortly afterward admitted as a partner, when the firm resumed its original style and title—James Fyfe & Co. Under the new order of things, the manufacture of the "Portage Chilled Plows" was commenced, about 300 of these utensils, which are peculiarly adapted to the soil of Central Wisconsin, being turned out in 1878, and 500 in 1879. In 1876, a planing-mill was added to the foundry, but in 1879 the machinery was disposed of to R. B. Wentworth, by whom it is now used. Messrs. Fyfe & Co. have furnished the ironwork for the principal buildings in Portage. The handsome columns in the stone buildings of Loomis, Gallett & Breese, the Opera House and Graham's and Vortman's Blocks are the product of this foundry.

One of the institutions of this character, once existing in Portage, will be remembered—the Portage Foundry, established by Cromwell Bros., in the premises formerly occupied by Capt. Arnold as a sash and blind factory, in July, 1864.

Planing Mills.—In the fall of 1850, Carnagie & Learmouth set up a horse-power planing-mill in Portage, and the hillside between Cook and Canal and Jefferson and Monroe streets. Here they continued to make rough boards smooth until spring, when they removed their machinery to a point on the canal opposite the present site of Wentworth's elevator. In 1854, a steam engine was purchased, and for the next three years "things just hummed." In 1857, there was a dissolution of copartnership, Mr. Learmouth retiring. About the same time, the mill was removed to Goodyear's lumber-yard, on Wisconsin street, east of the canal, where it remained in successful operation until 1860. The encroachments of the Wisconsin River making a change of location necessary, the institution was finally and permanently established on Canal street, not far from the spot where the original horse-power was located ten years previously. In 1876, a partnership was effected under the style and title of Carnagie, Prescott & Co. Since then, the manufacture of sash, doors and blinds for the wholesale trade has been largely entered into, the demand extending throughout Wisconsin. Mr. Carnagie has, during all this time, applied himself individually to the work of contracting and building. The court house, the county jail, the high school and Second Ward School buildings and county poor house, at Wyocena, are among the principal structures erected under his supervision.

In the spring of 1855, B. F. Pixley established a planing-mill "near the ferry." It was quite an extensive institution, but was short-lived.

In the fall of 1879, R. B. Wentworth, the veteran editor, elevator man, banker, etc., purchased of James Fyfe & Co. an outfit of planing machinery, and located it in a building near his monster elevator, where it has ever since been operated by a neat twenty-horse-power engine. The capacity of the institution is about 30,000 feet per day, surfacing and siding. Under the same roof is a feed-mill, with a capacity of eight tons per day.

Elevators.—The purchase and shipment of grain forms one of the leading industries of Portage. Among the early wheat-buyers will be remembered W. P. St. John, William McKenzie, W. D. Fox, D. Muir, Hiram Sexton, S. K. Vaughan, N. H. Wood, C. J. Pettibone and S. S. Case. The latter, in 1860, built the first elevator, deserving the name of elevator, at the depot. Prior to that time, the grain purchased by the above-named individuals had been stored in out-houses and rudely constructed granaries: but the great fire of January 19, 1863, swept away these fragile concerns. Mr. Case's elevator was also burned. He rebuilt, however, and soon afterward sold to the railroad company. A. C. Flanders, the railroad agent, has the management of it at present. It has a capacity of 20,000 bushels.

The Wentworth elevator was built in 1862. During the first eight or nine years of Mr. Wentworth's wheat operations, shipments were made by water, on barges to Green Bay, thence by propellers and schooners to Buffalo. A much larger amount of grain was handled then than now. The product of the large grain-producing areas about Baraboo, Poynette, etc., now cut off by railroad, was then marketed in Portage. In 1871, the Madison & Portage Railroad Company (now the C., M. & St. P.) extended a side-track along the east side of the canal to the Wisconsin River, for the accommodation of merchants and others. Since then the shipments of the Wentworth elevator have been made by rail. One half of the grain handled by Mr. Wentworth is sold to millers in Watertown, Berlin, etc. Seventy-five thousand bushels were handled in 1879. The elevator building is 40x60 feet, has a storage capacity of 40,000 bushels, and is supplied with the latest improved cleaning apparatus.

Breweries.—On the 12th day of May, 1849, John M. Hettinger, with his family, arrived in Portage from Freeport, Ill. His first work was the building of a shanty, to protect his wife and children from the storms; then he built a brewery, and painted it red; and although he insisted upon calling it the Fort Winnebago Brewery, the people disregarded his wishes, and persistently styled it the Old Red Brewery. By the latter name it has ever since been known. Upon the death of John Hettinger, the management passed to his son Matthias. A partnership was subsequently arranged between the latter and his brother Michael, who, after the death of Matthias, carried it on alone for awhile, when it passed to the hands of the widow of the original Hettinger. She sold to Nauer & Klecker, but through some cause the property again reverted to the widow. John Hettinger then took charge of the establishment and ran it until the spring of 1876, when he sold to the present owner, Henry Epstein. The original capacity of the Old Red Brewery was from eighteen to twenty barrels, of thirty-two gallons each—which speak well for the capacity of the pioneers of 1849–50. The absence of census reports of the population of that early day prevents us giving the exact quantity of beer each person was required to drink to make Mr. Hettinger's business a profitable one.

In 1852, Charles Hærtel commenced the manufacture of lager beer in a small building on the northeast corner of Cook and Clark streets. Twelve barrels per week was his average brew until the demand for the beverage necessitated an enlargement of his premises, which was made in 1855 by the erection of a three-story brick building, 20x60 feet in size. Two years later, another addition was made, and this failing to afford sufficient room for his expanding trade, has been enlarged from time to time, until the present imposing structure, estimated to be worth $75,000, is the result. The annual product of this mammoth institution is about 250,000 gallons, requiring 80,000 bushels of barley. The death of Mr. Hærtel, in 1876, brought to the management of the brewery Jacob Best, a son-in-law of the deceased. A bottling establishment with a capacity of ten barrels per day, was added to the institution in 1877. There are five heirs to the Hærtel estate. A division of the property will take place in the course of a year, or as soon as Carl Hærtel, Jr. comes of age. The executors of the estate are Jacob Best, F. W. Schulze and Mrs. Charles Hærtel, widow of the deceased.

Tannery.—In 1851, J. Ludwig established a tannery on the north sands of the Wisconsin River, near where that stream is intersected by the canal. The scene of operations was the space embraced within the confines of a very small log house, which soon became inadequate to the increasing business of Mr. Ludwig, and, in 1852, a frame structure, a decided improvement over the log, was erected a few rods west, exactly opposite the mouth of the canal. In 1858, Mr. Ludwig established a manufactory at the corner of De Witt and Canal streets, where most of the product of his tannery is worked up into boots, shoes, boot-packs and shoe-packs. Large quantities of sheepskin leggings are also manufactured. Sales of these articles are made throughout Wisconsin, and in the principal markets of Illinois and Minnesota.

Distillery.—In 1850, a man named Awerbach established an old fashioned hand-mash distillery in one of the abandoned garrison stables at Fort Winnebago. A gentleman residing on the east side of the canal says that Mr. Awerbach, when he discovered that most of his patrons lived in Gougeville, removed his utensils thither, and located in a little building, since used for a soap factory by John Sisingut; but there must have been a successful temperance crusade soon afterward, as the ungodly Awerbach disposed of his pipes and stills within the year and went to Texas, where he resided when the rebellion broke out.

Portage Cheese Factory.—Established by N. H. Wood in 1874, in the First Ward. The factory is conducted upon a moderate scale at present, but it is the intention of the proprietor to increase its capacity. Mr. Wood has eighty cows, the milk product of fifty being manufactured into full cream cheese, which finds ready sale in home markets. The lands bordering upon Duck Creek, and the Fox, Wisconsin and Baraboo Rivers are peculiarly adapted to dairying.

Union Bed Spring Manufactory.—Established in Portage in January of the present year, by R. W. McIntyre, Jr. in connection with the main factory in Oregon, Wis. Among the many thousand applicants for patents on bed springs, the inventor of the Union Spring received, with his patent from Washington, a certificate testifying to the superiority of his invention. It has since taken premiums at the Nebraska State Fair, the Illinois State Fair, and been awarded the first premium two successive years at Madison. Mr. McIntyre is located on Wisconsin street just east of the canal, where he employs from four to six men.

Marble Works.—In 1866, B. & H. Doherty established themselves in Portage in the business of manufacturing marble monuments, headstones, mantles and table-tops. In April, 1878, H. Doherty purchased the interest of his brother, and has since conducted the business in his own right. Mr. Doherty's trade extends over eight or ten of the principal counties in the State. Office, corner Canal and Wisconsin streets.

In May, 1879, Groth & Stotzer established the Columbia County Marble Works, on Wisconsin street, near Cook, and have met with success sufficient to insure its permanency. Both of these firms deal in Italian and American marble and Scotch and American granite.

Brickmaking.—The peculiar excellence of the brick manufactured in Portage gives the place additional fame as one of the important commercial centers of the State. The first brick were made by Thomas Corey, a soldier, for use at Fort Winnebago. In 1847, Enoch Pixley, Samuel Reeder and William Armstrong burned a small kiln of brick made from the red surface clay on the present site of Mr. Armstrong's brickyard, near the Wisconsin River bridge. The burning of this kiln proved a profitable experiment. It was discovered that the red brick were very brittle, while those of a lighter color were strong and durable. At the suggestion of Luther Dixon, a practical brickmaker named Risdon, a friend of Mr. Dixon's, was imported from Vermont for the purpose of giving the white clay, which lay at a depth of two or three feet from the surface, a thorough trial. Mr. Risdon may be said to have been a "born brickmaker," just as poets are accredited with coming into the world crying and kicking in short or long meter. It was characteristic of him to chew clay, and he always tested the quality of his material by tasting it. It was under the management of Mr. Risdon and the proprietorship of Messrs. Armstrong, Pixley & Reeder that the first "cream brick" were made in Portage. Besides Mr. Armstrong, Isaac Corker, Dwyer & Jurgens, Sanborn & Maloy, and Conrad Collipp have carried on the business of brickmaking.

Vacuum Cream Extractor.—In May, 1878, a patent was obtained by J. W. Powers for a Vacuum Cream Extractor, and in December, 1879, for an improvement on the same. The inventor makes the following claims, and produces a large number of testimonials to substantiate them from parties that have used the invention: 1st—We use the deep-setting vessels. 2d—The vessels need not be submerged. 3d—The vessels may be submerged if desired. 4th—The vessels become air-tight the moment the vacuum is produced. 5th—But one set of vessels is required. 6th—The cream will be absolutely and perfectly raised between milkings. 7th—All unpleasant odors which may be in the milk will be taken out. 8th—The cream can be removed and the milk drawn off without lifting or moving the cans. 9th—The milk of twenty cows can be set in our vessels with as little labor as setting milk from one cow by the old method with tin pans. 10th—The apparatus takes up but little room. 11th—The price is reasonable and within the reach of every farmer. 12th—The cans being air-tight, may be kept in any cellar or other convenient place without injury to the milk from foul gas, odors, or from dirt or insects. 13th—The milk left after the removal of cream by the Vacuum process, is good for family use or feeding to young stock, because the sugar contained in it, and which is as valuable for food as the oily portion, remains unchanged in the short time required for getting the cream; whereas, by the ordinary process, chemical changes in the milk entirely destroy the sugar before the cream is removed. This saving alone will in a single season more than pay the cost of apparatus. 14th—Butter may be made from the cream while it is sweet, or after acidity begins, as the taste of the maker or the market for which it is made, requires. 15th—The butter made by the Vacuum process commands the highest market price. A company was organized in the winter of 1879–80 for the manufacture of these extractors, and is meeting with good success in its introduction.

FERRIES AND BRIDGES.

Peter Pauquette was the first to establish a ferry across the Wisconsin River, at or near the portage. It is not positively known in what year the "modern Samson" undertook the enterprise, but it could not have been at a much later date than that which witnessed the build-up of Fort Winnebago (1828). Pauquette lived, with his wife and children, on the south side of the river, where he tilled a small portion of the land now owned by L. W. Borden. In this connection, mention may be made of the fact that Madame Pauquette's first husband was a man named Lupient. By him, she had one child—Theodore, who, sometime in the early part of the sixties, met with an accidental death, in Chicago, being run over by a railway train, while in the "Garden City," exhibiting his grandfather, the famous Joseph Crelie, as "the oldest man in the world." In due course of time, after the tragic death of Peter Pauquette, at the hands of a revengeful savage, Mme. Pauquette married, for her third husband, Antoine Pervonsal, a Frenchman, who conducted the ferry, "at the old stand," until he himself passed over the river Styx, leaving the daughter of Joseph Crelie, thrice a widow. At this date (about 1840), according to Solomon Leach, the ferry fleet comprised a large rafting skiff for foot passengers, and an ordinary flat-boat for teams. The latter was propelled by means of long poles, in the shallow parts of the river, and mammoth oars over the deeper currents.

A mile below the ferry, on the flat, lived a solitary trader, Silas Walsworth, a widower with one son—Jared. At times, when business was slack, the old gentleman was in the habit of strolling along the shores of the river, and watching the shifting currents of the stream. His course was usually westward; as business grew duller, his walks grew longer, and soon his face became familiar at the ferry. Once he ventured over the stream, but did not remain long. The next day he came again, and as his visits increased, his gait became more buoyant. He bought a commutation ferry ticket, which was daily "punched in the presence of the passejaire," and when the unperforated territory of that ticket had narrowed down to half a dozen fares, the secret of the widower's movements got out. A quiet wedding soon followed, and then Silas Walsworth took charge of the ferry, having succeeded to its management in the same manner as had Pervonsal, his predecessor. During the proprietorship of Mr. Walsworth, Oscar F. Wagoner ran it on shares. In 1847, William Armstrong purchased the ferry, and carried it on, under a charter of the Legislature, until the first bridge was built across the Wisconsin River in 1857. Mr. Armstrong soon improved upon the old method of "polling," by stretching a chain across the river, to which the boat was attached by pulleys. The ferry tolls, established by the County Commissioners, were 50 cents for wagon and team of two horses, 12½ cents for foot passengers, and the same for four-legged animals, except sheep and swine, for which 2 cents per head was collected.

Soundings of the Wisconsin River were made as early as 1850, the object in view being the bridging of that stream for the accommodation of the rapidly increasing population. A small iron rod passed through the sand in the deepest place, near the point now spanned by the bridge, struck clay and stone at twenty-two and a half feet. The width of the stream, during low water, at the narrowest place, was thirty-four rods. An amount of water estimated at 3,325 cubic feet passed through the channel every second, at a rate of speed sufficient to give 134 horse-power.

In March, 1851, the Portage Bridge Company was incorporated by act of the Legislature, the incorporators being Jared Walsworth, Silas Wadsworth, Hugh McFarlane, Charles H. Moore, William Armstrong and such other persons as might be associated with them. The capital stock was $20,000, divided into shares of $10 each. Messrs. McFarlane, Moore and J. Walsworth were appointed Commissioners to raise subscriptions, and books were at once opened for that purpose. The incorporators were empowered to construct and maintain a bridge across the Wisconsin River in Section 7, Township 12, Range 9 east, not less than twenty feet wide with, a draw of at least fifty feet over the most navigable channel, and to be provided with a double track for wagons and a single track for foot passengers; to be commenced within two and finished within six years, the company to have power for a term of thirty years. They were further empowered to demand and collect tolls at the following rates: For vehicle and one horse, 15 cents, and each additional horse or ox, 5 cents; single horse and rider, 10 cents; foot passengers, 3 cents; for animals, excepting hogs and sheep, in droves of fifty or less, 2 cents per head; all over fifty, 1 cent each; hogs and sheep, 1 cent per head.

The company not having complied with the section requiring the commencement of the work within two years, the charter, of course, expired, and in March, 1855, a new charter was granted to Milo H. Pettibone, Hugh McFarlane, William Owen, Henry W. Tenney, Thomas Robertson, Charles H. Moore, Harrison S. Haskell, George H. Wall, Andrew Dunn, John Crawford and John A. Chandler, with similar powers given in 1851. The capital stock was $25,000, divided as before, and Messrs. McFarlane, Owen, Pettibone, Crawford and Tenney were commissioned to receive subscriptions. A meeting of the incorporators were held in Portage in April of the same year, at which the following officers were chosen to direct the work in the name of the company: President, M. H. Pettibone; Vice President, A. Dunn; Secretary, H. W. Tenney; Treasurer, W. Owen. Directors—H. S. Haskell, H. McFarlane and C. G. McCulloch. The sum of $4,000 was subscribed, upon which, at a subsequent meeting, a 10 per cent assessment was levied.

No further action seems to have been taken until December following, when a meeting of citizens was held at the office of Register of Deeds. At this meeting, a committee of five was appointed to draft a bill amendatory of the act incorporating the Portage Bridge Company. The purport of the amendment was to allow the city of Portage and the town of Caledonia to issue fifteen-year 10 per cent bonds—the former in any reasonable amount the citizens might deem necessary, and the latter not to exceed $15,000—each being empowered to levy an annual tax to pay interest and principal. The bill was passed in March, 1856, and on the 18th of November, at a meeting of the Portage Company, a resolution was adopted setting forth that it was “deemed expedient to have a new organization of the company,” with a view of placing control of the bridge question in the hands of the authorities of the city of Portage and the town of Caledonia, recommending the release of all subscriptions, and the resignation of the Directors. By this arrangement the city and town aforesaid became the Portage Bridge Company. Negotiations were at once entered into with Hall & Leet, a Philadelphia bridge-building firm, and in May, 1857, a contract was closed between this firm and Bridge Commissioner Vanderecock, the work of driving piles through the ice having commenced in February previous.

An idea of the progress of the work of construction may be had from the following “local item” written in August, 1857: “It is a massive piece of work, and is being carried on in a workmanlike manner. The large oak piles which compose the outwork of the piers are driven through the sand, and stand fast in a solid clay foundation. The inner spaces are filled with rock, 2,000 cubic yards of which have been used for the purpose. This insures a foundation against which floods and rafts may beat with impunity. Over 200,000 feet of lumber will be used in the framework. The whole length of the bridge will be 650 feet with a draw of 130 feet.”

The bridge was so far completed by October, 1857, as to permit the crossing of teams. At that date "ye local" describes it as being "640 feet long, and eighteen feet wide inside. There were used in its construction 250,000 feet of lumber, and the entire structure cost $26,000." In February, 1858, $10,000 worth of the city's bridge bonds found sale in New York city at 76½ cents. In November, 1866, the City Council levied a tax of 4 per cent with which to liquidate one-half of the bonded indebtedness on the bridge, and in March, 1867, the obligation, together with interest on the whole indebtedness, amounting in all to $18,049.50, was met.

The office of Bridge Commissioner at once became an important one, as is evident in the fact that in May, 1860, C. R. Gallett was chosen to fill the position by the Council on the sixty-ninth ballot, amid great excitement among the City Fathers and those who had been admitted to the council-room. From the date of the opening of the bridge (October 10, 1857) to December 31 of that year, the tolls amounted to $688. The receipts during the Commissionership of George Wall, from the date of his appointment in 1858 to April 9, 1859, were $1,672. Under the administration of John Bean, from May 7, 1859, to the same date in 1860, tolls to the amount of $1,818 were collected, and from the latter date to March 26, 1861, during Mr. Gallett's incumbency, they aggregated $2,163. From the date of the expiration of Mr. Gallett's term of office to March, 1868, (during the existence of the old bridge) the Commissioners and the amounts of tolls received by each were as follows: Charles Schenck (four terms), 1862, $1,798; 1863, $1,792; 1864, $2,322; 1865, $2,440; Patrick Sheehan (four terms, including 1869), 1866, $2,704; 1867, $2,056; 1868, $1,935. The total cost of the old bridge was $41,146.13. The expenses were largely increased by the city being compelled to sell its bonds at a discount of from 25 to 30 per cent and redeem them at par when they fell due. Thus it will be seen that the expenses exceeded the receipts nearly $20,000. In April, 1867, the Council resolved to make an effort to take up $3,000 of the bridge bonds before they fell due if the holders could be induced to turn them in at par. Correspondence was opened with an Eastern Shylock holding this amount of the bonds, who replied that he would take $1.25! The redemption scheme was abandoned. The Mayor was then instructed by the Council to solicit proposals to buy the bridge, and in February, 1868, it was sold under the hammer to W. W. Corning for $2,000, the sale being subject to ratification by the people. The sale was revoked before the time for holding an election arrived, it having been ascertained that the bridge was in an unsound condition.

In March, 1868, the Legislature passed two bridge bills, the first authorizing the city of Portage and the town of Caledonia to jointly erect a free bridge; and the second, if they should deem it inadvisable to construct such a bridge, authorizing the city of Portage to build another toll bridge. The latter measure provided for the same rates of toll allowed in the old charter, and authorized the city to assign its charter to an individual, or individuals, should any such wish to make the bridge a private enterprise. In the mean time, the City Council employed an experienced bridge-builder to inspect the old concern, and a report was made to the effect that an expenditure of $2,000 would keep it up for a couple of years longer. Before any definite action was taken, however, Messrs. Chapin & Wells, of Chicago, appeared upon the scene and submitted a proposition to remove the old bridge for $1,000, and place a new one—a Howe truss—upon the same piers, for $18,000, allowing the city the market value for any old materials which might be used. A contract was closed with the Chicago builders, and in May the work of tearing away the old structure was commenced. L. W. Borden established a ferry across the river, and maintained it while the new bridge was being built, the council voting $250 to aid him in keeping it up. The new bridge was completed in August, and has ever since answered the purpose for which it was intended. It is a massive structure, and an object of much curiosity to strangers. The bonds issued by the city to build it were redeemed, from time to time, as they became due, until the last cancellation was made.

The entire cost of building and maintaining both the old and new bridge, from the commencement of the work, in March, 1857, to March, 1871, was $119,624.02. The receipts of tolls, since the completion of the latter, have been $19,392, as follows: Under the Commissionership of Patrick Sheehan, in 1869, $1,965; J. B. Gilman, from 1869 to 1873, $9,491; Charles Schenck, from 1873 to the date of his death (August, 1875), and Thomas Bennett, for the unexpired term, $3,015; Thomas Bennett, 1876-77, $2,611; August Dettlerner, 1878-79, $2,310.

In October, 1869, the bridge was "boarded up" and covered, and in July, 1870, during the prevalence of a tornado, seventy feet of the roof was carried away. In March following, a similar catastrophe occurred, a hundred-foot slice being gathered to the breast of old Boreas and borne from its moorings. Under the consolidating act of 1879, the following rates of toll were established: For every vehicle drawn by one or more horses, or other animal or animals, and for every horse and rider, 10 cents. For hogs and sheep, 1 cent each, and for other animals, 2 cents each, provided that when the number of animals exceed ten, only one-half rates shall be taken for the excess. For cows passing to and from pasture, from April 1 to December 1, in each year, $1 each. No toll shall be collected from persons going to or from church on Sundays, or from funeral processions, or from officers of the city on official business. Persons paying 10 cents for crossing, as required in Section 2, shall be entitled to re-cross on the same day without further payment, and any person paying $5 in advance, shall be entitled to cross with one team for one year.

The Wisconsin Street Bridge.—Besides the draw-bridges built and maintained over the canal, by the railroad company, there is a first-class bridge at the junction of De Witt and Wisconsin streets, that deserves brief mention in these pages. In June, 1859, Mr. Jenne, Superintendent of the improvement, concluded an agreement with the city to place a safe temporary bridge across the canal, within three months' time, and within a year to complete a more substantial structure. The latter was finished, according to agreement, in July, 1860. In 1879, it became necessary to rebuild, and the present iron bridge at that point was the result.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT AND FIRE RECORD.

The frequency of destructive conflagrations in Portage, for ten years succeeding the burning of the old United States Hotel, in 1851, warned the citizens of the urgent necessity for protection of their property against the ravages of the "fire fiend." The fearful consequences that might result from delay in taking precautionary steps were often depicted in the columns of the local press, but not until 1863 was the repeated warning heeded. On the 6th of June, of that year, the Council, under the provisions of the recently amended charter, organized a fire department, with the following officers: Chief Engineer, James Collins; Assistant, L. T. Mead; Treasurer, John Graham; Secretary, S. S. Brannan; Fire Wardens, S. E. Dana and Carl Haertel. The lack of implements appertaining to the business of fighting fire, seriously militated against the efficiency of the department, the first year of its existence. In the spring of 1864, the citizens clubbed together and purchased an old hand engine, then in use in Milwaukee. Oregon Company, No. 1, was then organized, with the following officers: Foreman, John Curry; Assistant, John Schliessman; Hose Captain, F. Burbach; Secretary, V. Hellmann; Treasurer, P. McGinn; Marshal, John Coleman; Steward, M. Huber. Among the other members of the company, will be remembered J. O. Mullen, Peter Mahon, Patrick Sheehan, M. and N. Brand, Andrew Kiefer, Thomas Maloney, John White and Joseph Lynn. The engine was housed in a building located where Lewis' lumber-yard now is. The company proved itself a very useful institution, and flourished until about two years ago, when it was disbanded, owing to the organization of new companies.

In November, 1871, Hook and Ladder Company, No. 1, came into existence, through the efforts of certain citizens, whose names appear among the early officers and members. The first officers were: Foreman, William Hensel; First Assistant, Charles Prehn; Second Assistant, Frank Tessman; Secretary, A. Kiefer; Treasurer, Joseph Hubel. The present officers are: Foreman, William Hensel; First Assistant, Antoine Bartl; Second Assistant, Charles Haertel, Jr.; Secretary, A. Kiefer; Treasurer, Louis Prehn; Marshal, F. W. Schuabel; Steward, H. Hermann. The company now consists of fifty-eight members.

In 1874, the city purchased a "Champion Fire Extinguisher," paying therefor $2,200, Excelsior Engine Company, No. 2, having previously been organized from among the citizens to man it. The first officers of the company were: Foreman, Alexander Thompson; First Extinguisher Captain, Thack Pool; Second, William Beattie; Secretary, Henry Williams; Treasurer, Thack Pool; Steward, William Beattie. The company flourished until the Silsby steamer was bought, when gratitude for the services of its valiant members seems to have turned to admiration for the new "machine." Two years ago, a fireman's tourney took place on the fair grounds. Two old houses were fired, and while every one was watching the "Silsby boys" get ready to make the attack upon one of the burning buildings, the Excelsior crowd put out the fire in the other, thus winning the silver cup that had been offered as a prize to the most efficient company. The citizens were greatly surprised, but, nevertheless, interest has waned in the Excelsior's "soda fountain," notwithstanding the fact that the feats performed by those who manipulate it have been little less than miracles.

Silsby Steamer Company, No. 3, was organized in October, 1877. A first-class engine was purchased for the very small sum of $5,500 (the regular price being $7,500), owing to competition on the part of the Ahrens managers. The first officers of the company were: Foreman, V. E. Brewer; First Assistant, D. M. Neill; Second Assistant, William Edwards; Secretary, John Lewis; Treasurer, D. M. Neill. The officers for 1878-79 were the same, with the exception of Secretary, C. P. Jæger succeeding Mr. Lewis in the latter year. The present officers are: Foreman, V. E. Brewer; First Assistant, A. A. Sherett; Second Assistant, F. L. Jones; Secretary, Frank Wilkie; Treasurer, C. P. Jæger. There are now thirty-eight members in the company.

The building in which the city's fire paraphernalia is housed is one of the landmarks of Portage. It stood formerly on the east side of the canal, and was occupied by Mr. Berry as a store on the lower floor, the upper portion being used for county offices. In 1866, the Liederkranz Society purchased and moved it to a lot near the present site of James Collins' residence. It became the property of the city in 1874, and was removed to its present site.

As has been shown, the fire department was organized in June, 1863. The next election of officers of which there is any record was held in March, 1865, with the following result: Chief Engineer, Peter Karsh; Assistant, J. B. Cromwell; Treasurer, John Graham; Secretary, Andrew Kiefer; Fire Wardens, Charles Haertel and W. W. Corning.

1866—Chief, Peter Karsh; Assistant, L. T. Mead; Treasurer, John Graham; Secretary, Andrew Kiefer; Wardens, Charles Haertel and W. W. Corning.

1867—Chief, Peter Karsh; Assistant, Patrick Sheehan; Treasurer, John Graham; Secretary, A. Kiefer; Wardens, C. Haertel and S. E. Dana.

1868—Chief, John Currie; Assistant, Patrick Sheehan; Treasurer, John Graham; Secretary, A. Kiefer; Wardens, C. Haertel and S. E. Dana.

1869—Chief, John Currie; Assistant, F. Burbach; Treasurer, John Graham; Secretary, A. Kiefer; Wardens, Henry Bolting and S. S. Brannan.

1870—Chief, John Currie; Assistant, Charles Haertel; Treasurer, John Graham; Secretary, A. Kiefer; Wardens, Henry Bolting and S. S. Brannan.

1871.—Chief,* S. S. Brannan; Assistant, Charles Haertel; Treasurer, John Graham; Secretary, A. Kiefer; Wardens, Henry Bolting and Cornelius Wheeler.

1872.—Chief, Owen Hogan; Assistant, Charles Haertel; Treasurer, John Graham; Secretary, A. Kiefer; Wardens, John Dullighan and Henry Bolting.

1873.—Chief, James Fyfe; Assistant, Evan Arthur; Treasurer, C. Wheeler; Secretary, A. Kiefer; Wardens, John Dullighan and Henry Bolting.

1874.—Chief, James Fyfe; Assistant, S. L. Plumb; Treasurer, C. Wheeler; Secretary, A. Kiefer; Wardens, George Port and James Collins.

* Resigned in April; Owen Hogan appointed to fill vacancy.

1875.—Chief, William Hensel; Assistant, Patrick Sheehan; Treasurer, F. Silverkrop; Secretary, C. H. Tasker; Wardens, N. H. Wood and John Graham.

1876.—Chief, W. Hensel; Assistant, Patrick Sheehan; Treasurer, F. Silverkrop; Secretary, C. H. Tasker; Wardens, Charles Prehn and P. Mohan.

1877.—Chief, W. Hensel; Assistant, Charles Prehn; Treasurer, John Dullighan; Secretary, C. H. Tasker; Wardens, N. H. Wood and R. O. Loomis.

1878.—Chief, W. Hensel; Assistant, Alexander Thompson; Treasurer, R. A. Sprecher; Secretary, C. H. Tasker; Wardens, George Bohag and Louis Blakewall.

1879.—Chief, Alexander Thompson; Assistant, Jacob Best; Treasurer, R. A. Sprecher; Secretary, V. E. Brewer; Wardens, A. Kiefer and John Bean.

1880.—Chief, Alexander Thompson; Assistant, J. Muller; Treasurer, A. Klenart; Secretary, V. E. Brewer.

The Fire Record.—Following is a list of the fires that have occurred in Portage since 1850, with dates, losses, insurance, etc.:

United States Hotel, February 2, 1851. The hotel was under the management of Lee & Mitchell, and was then considered one of the institutions of Portage. The loss was about $6,000; insured for $3,000. It was rebuilt at once, and opened with a grand ball January 8, 1852.

Fort Winnebago, March 31, 1856. The fire broke out in the north wing of the buildings formerly occupied as officers' barracks, destroying most of the old landmarks of early days. The buildings were mostly occupied by private families.

Charles Haertel's brewery barn, October 6, 1856. Two valuable horses were burned to death. Loss about $500; no insurance.

Barn belonging to William Miller, on the east side of the canal, July 25, 1857.

Motash's City Bathing Establishment, near Silver Lake, November 30, 1857.

Lee House saloon, December 20, 1857. Two of Col. Orton's performing lions, housed in the establishment at the time, were liberated at the time to save them. The ground being covered with snow, they were easily recaged by their trainer, Charles Tubbs, when the fire was extinguished. Loss, $750; uninsured.

Lee House barn, April 14, 1859. Loss, $1,500; insured for $1,000.

The newly finished residence of S. B. Linscott, April 21, 1859. Loss, $600; no insurance.

Corne's meat market and adjoining buildings, December 18, 1859. Aggregate insurance of $1,500.

Lee House, December 21, 1859. Insurance, $4,000.

James Dunn's barn, December 24, 1859. Three cows burned to death. No insurance.

Veeder House, April 5, 1860. Insured for $9,500; loss much greater.

Richard Dempsey's house, Fourth Ward, October 15, 1860. Five hundred dollars in money destroyed. Insurance on property, $1,000.

Dean & Smith's foundry and machine-shop, August 21, 1861. It is believed the building was struck by lightning. Loss estimated at $20,000; insured for $5,000. Thirty men were thrown out of employment.

"Doc" Wooster's house on the river bank, August 26, 1861.

Samuel Edward's house, September 25, 1861; partially insured.

Mr. Peterman's frame building in the First Ward, March 17, 1862; insurance $1,000.

Railroad depot and other buildings, January 19, 1863—a very disastrous fire—destroying property to the extent of $30,000. It originated in W. D. Fox's storehouse at the west end of the depot, and spread to the depot building and eating-house; thence to the saloons of Carl Schneider and T. V. Derkson. S. S. Case's elevator building was the next to catch. In it were stored about ten thousand bushels of wheat and barley belonging to different parties.

C. H. Moore's house, near the old Christopher Hotel, March 19, 1863.

James Chancellor's house, February 19, 1864.

The old pottery, in the Third Ward, August 31, 1864.

Mrs. M. C. Alvord's house, First Ward, October 3, 1864; insured for $300.

The Columbia County Jail, December 24, 1864. Set on fire, it is believed, by prisoners, who tried to burn a hole in the floor, in order that they might escape.

Mr. Luther's new dwelling, in the Fourth Ward, March 1, 1865. Loss, $300; partially insured.

Felix Curran's residence and grocery, March 13, 1865. Loss, $800; insured for $500.

Thomas Buttrey's boot and shoe shop (the property of John Williamson) and W. G. Bunker's harness-shop, June 5, 1866. Loss $800.

Extensive conflagration on Cook street, July 7, 1866, resulting in the destruction of the following buildings and stores: Robert Norris' grocery, Morris Collins' grocery, James Malcolmson's second-hand store, Louis Eltermann's jewelry store, (over which resided George Helmann, the owner of the building), William Niemeyer's confectionery store, John Verson's harness-shop and residence, Andrew Kiefer's barber-shop and residence, and Donald Ferguson's residence. Mrs. Wightman's millinery store was saved by the efforts of a large number of ladies, who formed a line reaching to the canal and passed water in buckets to quench the flames that threatened their favorite temple of fashion.

A frame building occupied by Thomas Pile, M. Slinger and James Scott, adjoining the St. Charles Hotel, February 27, 1868; insurance, $250.

An unoccupied building in the Second Ward, belonging to Mr. McGoorty, November 20, 1868.

A large frame building belonging to N. H. Wood, burned January 27, 1869, while being removed from the First to the Fourth Ward. Loss, $300; uninsured.

Charles Sternberg's tannery on Canal street, June 9, 1869. Loss, $1,500; insured for $700.

A frame building known as the Murison House, in the Fifth Ward, December 25, 1870; partially insured.

Portage Stone Mill, owned by Wells & Craig, April 11, 1870. Loss, $24,000; insured for $14,000.

Engine House of the Portage & Madison Railroad, February 21, 1871.

Portage Hotel, near the depot, the property of James Graves, August 23, 1871; insured for $1,000.

John Bryan's livery stable, Fourth Ward, October 10, 1871.

I. Holmes' house in the Fifth Ward, occupied by J. M. Russell, partially burned, December 25, 1871.

Herrigel's building, Cook street, December 10, 1872. Loss, $500; no insurance.

D. A. Goodyear's building, occupied by C. A. Driese as a cigar manufactory, same date; insured for $600.

E. Wright's dwelling, in the outskirts of the city; same date.

George Brown's residence, Fourth Ward, January 5, 1873. Loss, $1,500; insured for $1,000.

Barn and granary of Patrick Mulcahey, March 18, 1873. Two horses burned to death.

Henry Hermann's residence, First Ward, December 4, 1874.

A building in the rear of the St. Charles Hotel, February 22, 1874.

John Bryan's slaughter-house, June 20, 1874. Loss, $200.

John Brisbois' residence in the Fourth Ward, June 26, 1875. Insured for $1,050, about two-thirds of the loss.

The unoccupied dwelling of P. McMurray, in the First Ward, August 23, 1875.

Carnegie's planing-mill, scorched October 7, 1875.

Ellsworth House, barn, property of Mr. McDonald, November 15, 1875. Four horses and three cows burned to death.

John Ringner's house, near Carnegie's planing-mill, February 3, 1876.

George Port's warehouse, Fourth Ward, April 1, 1876. Loss, $4,000; insurance, $1,000.

Henry Emders' barn, adjoining the hotel, September 30, 1876.
 Henry Fink's stable, January 11, 1877.
 Burning of the grass in Silver Lake Cemetery, April 25, 1877.
 Peter Neiss' dwelling badly damaged, May 15, 1877.
 E. J. McCabe's dwelling, Fifth Ward, July 18, 1877; insured for $2,075.
 John Mueller's cooper-shop, July 28, 1877. Loss, $800; insurance, $250.
 Fire in, and narrow escape of, Pettibone's Block, September 22, 1877.
 Joseph Lee's house, Fourth Ward, September 23, 1877.
 City Hotel, October 24, 1877; insurance, $1,000.
 The old Pettibone store, January 16, 1878. Loss, $500; no insurance.
 D. A. Goodyear's residence, February 8, 1878. Loss, $1,500; uninsured.
 John T. Clark's barn, March 17, 1878.
 John Duerr's house, Second Ward, May 13, 1878.
 House in the Fourth Ward belonging to John T. Clark, August 20, 1878.
 Morris Collins' house, Fourth Ward, October 12, 1878.
 The Kirby House barn, and the old Ira Blood house, First Ward, November 8, 1878.
 Mayor Arnold's barn, Fourth Ward, February 4, 1879.
 Patrick Hayes' house, near the lock, May 1, 1879; insurance, $1,000.
 E. A. Wells' residence, built in 1857 at a cost of $3,550, May 7, 1879; no insurance.
 Liederkrantz Society's building, occupied by A. Matthieson, tailor, May 22, 1879; insurance, $500.
 Barns of Mr. Pauley and Mr. Zastrow, in the First Ward, May 30, 1879.
 Unoccupied house of Mr. Chase, in the First Ward, January 10, 1880.
 Unoccupied buildings at east end of the Wisconsin Street Bridge, owned by Mary A. Keegan, March 9, 1880; uninsured.

BANKS.

The Columbia County Bank was started as a banking institution in 1853 by Marshal & Ilsley, of Milwaukee, and the late Harrison S. Haskell, the latter having charge of the business. May 1, 1854, it was regularly incorporated with Samuel Marshall as President, and H. S. Haskell as Cashier; capital, $25,000. In the spring or summer of 1855, Fred. S. Ilsley went into the bank as teller or assistant cashier. At this time Mr. Haskell's brother, Harvey, was also connected with the bank as book-keeper. In October, 1855, Mr. Haskell sold out his stock in the bank and retired. John P. McGregor then bought in and became Vice President; F. S. Ilsley being cashier and also a stockholder, and James Chancellor was book-keeper. In 1857, John S. Henderson went into the bank as a clerk. In 1858, F. S. Ilsley sold out his stock, and John S. Henderson became acting cashier. In 1859 or 1860, Horace E. Wells became a stockholder and cashier, Marshall & Ilsley having sold out their interest entirely, and Mr. Mitchell became book-keeper. About 1863, Henderson's health failed, and he left the bank, going to California, and Joseph Hainsworth came in as assistant cashier. In 1864, Theodore Goldsmith was engaged as clerk, and afterward was assistant cashier. About 1865, Horace E. Wells sold out his stock, and J. P. McGregor became the sole stockholder, and in 1866-67 Hainsworth left, going to Kilbourn to start the Bank of Kilbourn. A year or so afterward, C. Wheeler became cashier, and a year later W. M. Patton became assistant cashier. In the panic of 1873, the bank failed and went into the hands of receivers, who wound it up.

Bank of Portage.—This bank is also numbered among the financial institutions that became victims of panics. It was organized in 1857, with D. Vandercook as President, and H. L. Norton, Cashier. E. O. Emerson, who was its President and chief owner when it failed, is now paying the creditors of the Portage Bank. He is living in Titusville, Penn., and makes regular remittances to H. Breese and L. W. Barden, his appointed agents in Portage, who distribute the funds equitably among the creditors.

City Bank of Portage.—Incorporated April 16, 1874. Commenced business May 4, of the same year, with the following directory: R. B. Wentworth, W. D. Fox, E. L. Jæger,

A. Weir, R. O. Loomis and Ll. Breese. The officers were: Ll. Breese, President; E. L. Jæger, Vice President; R. B. Wentworth, Cashier. There has been but one change in the directory, A. Weir being succeeded by W. S. Wentworth, and but one in the officers, W. S. Wentworth succeeding his father as cashier. The capital stock is $25,000. Located in Vandercook's Block.

German Exchange Bank of Portage.—A private banking institution established by Haertel & Schulze, in 1874, with a capital of $20,000, Charles Haertel, President, and F. W. Schulze, Cashier. Upon the death of Mr. Haertel, Mr. Schulze became President, and R. A. Sprecher, Cashier. Located in Haertel's Block.

WISCONSIN EDITORIAL ASSOCIATION.

It is a matter of history that the first meeting of this well-known body was held in Portage. There were twenty-three members present, as follows: Harrison Reed, Conservator, Neenah and Menasha; E. A. Calkins, Argus and Democrat, Madison; J. W. Hoyt, Wisconsin Farmer, Madison; Horace Rublee, State Journal, Madison; Ansel N. Kellogg, Republic, Baraboo; Frank Hyde, Express, Marquette; J. T. Farrar, Democrat, West Bend; L. M. Rose, Freeman, Sparta; Horace Norton, Rara Avis, Portage; D. McBride, Star, Mauston; A. Holly, Mirror, Kilbourn City; H. N. Ross, Evergreen City Times, Sheboygan; S. D. Carpenter, Patriot, Madison; Charles Roeser, Demokrat, Manitowoc; F. A. Moore, Democrat, La Crosse; A. J. Turner, R. B. Wentworth and M. M. Davis, Record, Portage; J. A. Leonard, Republican, Waukesha; M. M. Pomeroy, Argus, Horicon; J. A. Brown, C. C. Britt, and J. M. Doty, Badger State, Portage; H. E. Hascall, State Republican, Lansing, Mich., permitted to join in the proceedings by courtesy.

The meeting took place at Pettibone's Hall on the 9th of July, 1857, and was called to order by M. M. Pomeroy. Upon the motion of C. C. Britt, Harrison Reed was elected President and E. A. Calkins and A. J. Turner, Secretaries. Resolutions were passed reciting reasons why the rates of public printing should be increased; calling upon the Legislature to authorize the publication, in newspapers, of all general laws passed by that body at the various sessions; approving the system adopted by the railroad companies of cutting off the peculiar privileges of "dead heads," but protesting against the term being applied to "our brethren of the local press;" condemning violations of the good old custom of sending newspapers to those who pay only in advance; recommending a discontinuance of the practice of "puffing" in general and the total exclusion of quack advertisements in particular. Scales of prices for advertising and job printing were adopted, as were also a constitution and by-laws. The following officers were elected: President, Harrison Reed; Vice Presidents, F. A. Moore, Charles Roeser and John A. Brown; Corresponding Secretary, J. W. Hoyt; Recording Secretary, M. M. Pomeroy; Treasurer, Alanson Holly; Executive Committee, A. N. Kellogg and H. N. Ross. Charles D. Robinson, of the Green Bay Advocate, and Horace Rublee, of the Madison State Journal, were appointed essayist and poet respectively, and instructed to be present in Madison, at the next meeting, the third Wednesday in June, 1858, with their literary productions.

The members of the association were entertained at the residence of Mayor McGregor in sumptuous style, and, at the end of their two days' deliberation, took their departure highly pleased with their visit and convinced that all that had been said about the beauties at Portage was true.

At a subsequent meeting of the association it was decided that the members should furnish historical matters, to be read before the association, concerning the press in the respective localities represented by them. The result was very satisfactory, and the letters of the various editors were afterward published. Here is one from John Delaney, of Portage: "Brother Hyer: In reply to your letter of inquiry I have leisure only to state that on the fourth of July, 1850, I issued the first number of the River Times. I had a short time before that come to Portage City to reside and practice law. We had everything except a newspaper to make a city. I had learned the trade at Green Bay, commencing in 1834, and on the solicitation of business men and politicians was induced to resume it for a time. I started the paper partly to advance the town, and keep up with other cities in dispensing knowledge of our advantages, and partly to give tone, so far as I could, to the politics of the day. I had seen many of the would-be leaders of the Democratic party pandering, through a change of its creed, for the abolition vote of the State, willing to insert or strike out planks from the platform to suit the day, but still retain the name of DEMOCRAT—anything, so a numerical majority of the vote of the State could be saved to candidates for office. I foresaw that such a course must end in sectionalizing the party; and, in disgust and indignation, did what little I could to stem the tide, with satisfaction to myself as to my own course. The Times was merged in the Badger State in 1853. The publication of a Democratic paper was soon followed by that of a Whig paper, to carry on the political war. W. W. Noyes started the Northern Republic, a national Whig paper, in 1851.

“Faternally yours,

JOHN DELANEY.”

EARLY JUSTICE IN PORTAGE.

Many interesting memories are extant concerning the early history of Portage. None, however, are so execruciatingly ludicrous or pathetic as those pertaining to the legal profession, concerning scenes in the early Justices' Courts. An idea of the ability of the average Justice of the Peace, in those days, may be had from the following entry made in a Justice's docket twenty-six years ago, a large number of these record-books being still in existence :

“A warrant was ishude on the 17 day of august 1854 and delivrd to coon Deputy cheref prisner in custiaty on the 18 prisner pleeds nott guilty on oplicashun ov prosecutin witnes the abov coase is continude til the 12 da ov August by conent of the dafendint at 1 O'C p. m. prisner dischargde whereas michel Craythin hes maid othe befor me aganst Graves for Sault And Batery whitche was A melishus prosecushun so thearefoor i rendearde a gugmant aganst Michel craythin for coast ov this sute coasts ov cort 168 cherefs feas 50.”

It must be remembered that the above was written before Josh Billings was heard of. In it we see traces of Nasby's style of orthography, but as there is no record of that distinguished citizen ever having visited Portage, it would be unjust to charge him with plagiarism.

In 1855, a trespass case came before a Portage Justice, the parties to the suit being well known and respected citizens. The very best legal talent in the city was engaged. Eloquence was then considered more powerful and effective than the rules of equity laid down in the books. Clients were not slow to observe this, and they generally took advantage of the strange condition of things. The defendant's counsel, for reasons of their own, obtained a change of venue to another Justice, and the Judge before whom the case originally came subsequently joined the counsel for plaintiff and aided in the prosecution. When the case came up it was discovered by the defense that the written complaint had been interlined and otherwise changed in favor of his opponents. The handwriting very closely resembled that of the Judge before whom the case was then on trial, and the irate attorney who made the discovery was not slow to accuse “His Honor” of having perpetrated the irregularity, for which mark of disrespect for the dignity of the bench he was fined $10. The implicated limb of the law arose to make an explanation, but, before he had concluded, was again fined for contempt and threatened with imprisonment if the offense was repeated. A most exciting scene then followed, resulting in the Judge being twice denominated “an old liar,” and the attorney receiving an infliction of a like number of fines, making the total penalty $40. Amid the wildest confusion, a recess was taken, and during the interval one of the plaintiff's attorneys induced counsel on the other side to agree to a jury trial, and at the same time persuaded the Judge to remit the fines, provided defendant's counsel would make due apology. A jury of six men was accordingly summoned, and when the court convened the matter was smoothed over and the case proceeded. The entire afternoon was taken up with discursive arguments, the jury frequently leaving their seats and retiring to an adjacent saloon for "consultation." When night came, the case was closed and the jury locked up, but it was evident to all concerned that there would be a disagreement. Judge and counsel then adjourned to a favorite resort across the street, where they awaited the result with such anxiety as to necessitate frequent potations of gin and sugar to keep their courage up. The opposing counsel vied with each other in efforts to "make it pleasant for the Judge," succeeding even beyond their most sanguine expectations; for when the short hours of the morning came his mental, physical and judicial equilibrium had given away, and after embracing each of his genial companions he insisted upon going over to the court room to re-instruct the jury. He was dissuaded from performing this unnecessary act, for the jury had agreed to disagree. When the Judge was apprised of the fact that there had been a disagreement, he assumed an air of indignation and made an attempt to be very dignified, avowing that he would "fine them for contempt of (hic) court." After falling over a chair, for which he apologized to the stove, his friends conveyed him to his home. During the night, when the prospect for a verdict was being discussed, the Judge took each of the opposing counsel aside and confidentially assured them that in case the jury disagreed he would decide the case in their favor. "Leave it to me," he said to each of them, "leave it to me, you're all (hic) right."

On another occasion, a replevin suit was up for trial, the property in dispute being a flock of sheep. The defendant's attorney, thinking to discourage his professional brother of the other side, said to him that there was no use in attempting a successful prosecution of the case, as he (counsel for defense) knew of a witness who would swear to anything necessary to insure a decision in his client's favor. Plaintiff's attorney saw at once that there was no hope for his client in court, so he advised him to procure a wagon, and, while the case was being tried, to proceed to the premises where the sheep were, and take them, vi et armis, if necessary. As was expected, the case was decided in favor of the defendant, but the sheep were never after heard of. This celebrated action has ever since been referred to as the "sheep-stealing case," and the eminent lawyer who planned the seizure of the mutton is highly esteemed, by young disciples of Blackstone, for his sagacity. There is no doubt that this case will some day be cited as a precedent.

Thomas Christopher once brought suit against Col. Tom. Reynolds, before His Honor Richard Dempsey, J. P. Hugh McFarlane was summoned as a witness. While on the stand, he claimed the right to give evidence in his own peculiar manner, to which an attorney, named Johnson, demurred. After much sparring, the witness put a quietus on the legal questioner, by saying: "If you interrupt me again, I will kick you square in the mouth."

Mr. Fry, one of the jurors, disgusted at such undignified conduct in court, rose to his feet and shouted, in a stentorian voice: "If this is to be a d——d row, I am going to leave. Constable, where is my coat and hat?"

The court objected to his leaving, and ordered him to be seated, threatening a fine for contempt of court. The refractory juror politely invited him to fine and be d——d, asserting that His Honor was nothing but an old wooden head anyway. Then the court, becoming highly indignant at such insolence, ordered the juryman, in language more forcible than polite, to leave the temple of justice.

Pending the trial, it became necessary for the court to take the witness-stand and supply evidence to sustain the complainant. Tom Reynolds, the defendant, being a Justice of the Peace, administered the oath, and, after the direct testimony was given, another juror, named Jimmy O'Neill, cross-questioned the court. His questions were so impertinent that the witness lost all patience, and it was only by the interference of the other jurors that a fight was prevented. The verdict is not recorded.

But the members of the legal profession in Portage seldom lost control of themselves, and we know of but one fisticuff to record in which lawyers participated. The little unpleasantness grew out of a case that had come before a Portage Justice, in which a man and wife, residing in the town of Caledonia, were the defendant and plaintiff, respectively. There had been previous trouble in that household, resulting in black eyes and dislocated joints, but these are of that class of domestic infelicities that attract but little attention. This time the question of the possession of certain property was involved, and the best "legal" talent in the city had been employed on both sides. When the arguments were reached, counsel for defendant (the husband) made an eloquent appeal, on behalf of what he was pleased to call the injured man. During the forensic onslaught, plaintiff's attorney, when his antagonist became too severe upon his fair client, would pull the speaker's coat tail and otherwise attempt to disconcert him. The Judge had observed the proceeding, and finally told the meddling attorney that his conduct was very unbecoming. Defendant's counsel continued to "warm up," not forgetting to occasionally abuse the gentleman on the other side for his unseemly interference. Pretty soon there came another tug at the coat tail, and as the speaker turned quickly around, probably to wither his opponent with a look, he received a blow square upon the nose, causing that organ to bleed copiously. Recovering himself, he knocked his assailant down, and then a rough and tumble fight took place, the belligerents both being pretty badly used. Plaintiff's counsel, being small of stature, had received a severe trouncing; both of his eyes were closed up tight, and he had been compelled to desist because he could no longer see whom he was hitting. Peace restored, the blood was washed away, and the attorneys accompanied each other from the court room, the victor leading the vanquished to his home.

In 1858, a petty case came before a well-known Justice of the time, for equitable adjustment, the defendant in which had a wide reputation for the frequency of his appearance in court, and his uniform success in getting a verdict or decision in his favor. The case was a somewhat aggravated one, the plaintiff having hesitated for a long time before concluding to enter into legal proceedings with an adept at lawsuits. Two of the best lawyers in the city were engaged, both being men possessed of rare powers as pleaders. When the defendant laid the case before his attorney, he was told that he would be beaten, because the facts and circumstances were clearly against him.

"That's none of your d—d business," replied the client; "facts and circumstances have nothing to do with it. Pay no attention to them, but go in and attack plaintiff's lawyer and do your best; that's what I'm paying you for."

"Very well," quoth the attorney, "I have no faith in the case whatever, but I'll make all the noise I can."

"That's right; slaughter the other fellow with words for weapons. Smother him with technicalities. Say anything you please to him, and I'll stand by you. Don't mind the merits of the case; I'll look out for that."

When the case came on there was a large crowd present, in anticipation of seeing the fun. The preliminaries were gone through with very quietly. The testimony was extremely favorable for the plaintiff, and it was generally conceded that he had won his case. Argument commenced with a full house, and the spectators were entertained for several hours with the most exciting debate they had ever listened to. The case was entirely lost sight of, and a fight between counsel was several times most imminent. The plea of defendant's counsel was exceptionally eloquent. When the arguments closed, the Judge arose and said:

"Gentlemen, you have tried this case remarkably well, your arguments were grand, I never heard anything like them. But I must say the law is on the side of the defendant. Therefore, I am constrained to record my decision against the plaintiff."

This disposition of the case was a surprise to every one, except, perhaps, the defendant. Defendant's counsel was elated over the result. He took the case with the gloomiest of forebodings; surely his eloquence had accomplished the work. He was beginning to feel himself quite a lawyer, when his client entered his office, and, laying some currency upon his table, said:

"There's yer $10. S'pose you think you won that case, don't you?"

"Most certainly I did," replied the attorney, surprised at the contemptuous tone of his client.

"Well, you didn't do no such thing."

T. L. Kennan

PORTAGE CITY.

"Then, pray, inform me who did."

"Why, I did, of course. I made the Judge a present of a d--d nice ham this morning before the case came up."

The attorney fainted.

THE SCHULZE BAND.

For the past thirty years, the citizens of Portage have been entertained and delighted with a very superior quality of instrumental music, rendered by the members of a band whose history is somewhat remarkable.

The Schulze Band, the one referred to, was organized in Schmannewitz, Saxony, about 1825. It was composed of Benjamin Schulze, the father of the Schulze brothers, who have, for the past quarter of a century, been identified with the growth of Portage, and his two brothers-in-law, named Wagenknecht. The instruments used were of the string and reed order, and the three musicians were always in demand at balls and such like amusements at Schmannewitz.

In 1830, they removed to Tamenheim, a small Saxon hamlet, where Mr. Schulze re-engaged in his three avocations—butchering, weaving and music teaching, and also kept a hotel, by way of relieving monotony. Three years later, bright business prospects induced a removal to Sitz-enroda, also in Saxony, where, in addition to his other callings, the versatile Schulze engaged in farming.

At that date, the first son, Frederick, who is now secretary of the government telegraph bureau in Bautzen, Saxony, had reached his sixth year, and, having received much early training in music, was a very proficient performer on the violin.

In 1835, the second son, Charles, having also been instructed in the divine art, reached his musical majority, which, in the Schulze family, was from four to eight years. Both boys soon became widely known for their peculiar accomplishments, and, with their father, were often called to distant parts to enliven festive occasions. The diminutive stature of the two children combined to make their performances in a degree wonderful; and, as the proud parents were blessed with increase of wealth in the way of musical prodigies of the male persuasion, the fame of the Schulze Band became almost national.

The most important period in the history of this band occurred in 1846, in the town of Mueckervena, ten miles from the abode of Benjamin Schulze, whose seventh son, Frederick W., was then but four years of age. The occasion was one of unusual import. Frederick William the Third, King of Prussia, was en route from Berlin to Deitsch, and the citizens of Mueckervena, as an exhibition of loyalty toward their sovereign, prepared to receive him in splendid style, as he passed through their humble village. By order of the Landrath (a sort of provincial satrap having jurisdiction over the district), the Schulze Band were present in full uniform, consisting of blue coats, black pants and "shako" hats.

The instruments used were a bass horn, upon which the father performed as leader; then came Frederick, the oldest son, with a trumpet, he being a trumpeter in one of the King's artillery bands. Charles playing upon a key-horn, Henry upon a trombone, Frank and Herman upon tenor horns, and Ferdinand and Frederick William upon French horns. They were assigned a position on the right of the procession, ranged in the order of their size, the father in front, and the mother bringing up the rear with the eight son, Samuel, in her arms.

When the pageant came within hearing distance, the band played "Heil Dir in Sieger's Kranz," an old national hymn, and when the King's carriage drew up and stopped, the Landrath, who, it seems, must have been master of ceremonies, requested the mother of this musical family to conduct her seventh born to the King's side, which she did. The little four-year-old was almost as much of a curiosity as the King himself. He had been the recipient of $50 from His Majesty, on the occasion of his baptism, in accordance with an old German custom, which is observed by the King standing as godfather for the seventh consecutive male child of all the families within his realm, and he immediately placed himself upon the most intimate terms with the mighty monarch. "How old are you?" queried he of the house of Hohenzollern, stroking the lad's forehead with his kingly hand. "Four years, sire," quickly retorted the youth, at the same time making a graceful obeisance.

At this juncture of the interesting proceedings, the pent-up enthusiasm of the crowd could no longer restrain itself, and amid deafening cheers, a rush was made for the king's carriage. In the confusion, little Frederick William and his horn were thrust aside. As the procession moved slowly away, Prince Wilhelm, now Emperor of Germany, pointing to the mother, asked; "Are you the mother of all those boys?" Receiving an answer in the affirmative, he replied: "I wish you eight more."

In 1850, this "little German band," with the exception of Frederick, the eldest son, came to America. The "Amalia," the good ship which bore them across the Atlantic, was nine weeks on the voyage, but the monotony was often relieved by strains of music.

The band also played at Quebec, Buffalo, Milwaukee and other principal points, on the way to Portage, where they arrived on the 28th of July, 1850, stopping at the Franklin House. While there, they serenaded the guests of the Veeder House, the dwellers of Fort Winnebago, and some of the leading citizens, taking up a collection of $6 on the first occasion. Since then the Schulze Band has been in demand on all stated occasions, and have furnished music at different points throughout the country for celebrations, balls, etc. At the Wisconsin band conventions, held in Portage in 1877, LaCrosse in 1878, and Watertown in 1879, the Schulze Band was classed among the best of the twelve or fifteen bands present.

When President Hayes and party were in Portage in 1878, the Schulze Band occupied a position in the procession similar, in many respects, to the part they bore in the reception of the King of Prussia, thirty-four years ago. The circumstances, however, were widely different; one was an ovation to a king by subjects, the other a reception to the President of a republic by a free people.

The little four-year-old, who, in 1846, stood at the foot of the class, and was the object of so much distinguished attention, has grown to man's estate, and is to-day the leader of this historical band, and several of the band's favorite pieces of music now performed by them are his own composition.

THE POST OFFICE.

The early history of this institution is so closely identified with postal matters connected with Fort Winnebago, that it will be necessary to go back nearly half a century to obtain a starting-point. John Kinzie, who is believed to have been the first Indian agent appointed by the Government, with headquarters at the fort, assuming his duties at that post in 1831, was authorized to act as Postmaster for the people of the garrison. He continued to fill the position until about 1834. In that year Henry Merrell was appointed Post Sutler. Mr. Merrell then acted as Postmaster, and held the position for several years, until business developments at the portage began to attract attention. Henry Carpenter, having built the old United States Hotel, and established a small store near the banks of the Wisconsin River, on what is now Wisconsin street, was appointed Postmaster. He removed the office from the fort to his place of business, but when, soon afterward, M. R. Keegan was appointed to the position, it was taken back and established in the commissary building at the fort. Here it remained until another change in office took place, G. T. Getty becoming Mr. Keegan's successor, when the office was located on the west side of Fox River, near the junction of the canal with that stream. In August, 1851, Mr. Getty advertised, in the River Times, "a list of letters remaining unclaimed in the post office of Fort Winnebago," and in October following, "T. Dean, Postmaster at Portage City," caused to be advertised, in the same paper, quite an extensive list of letters remaining unclaimed in his office. In this connection, the Times, of December 22, 1851, contained the following: "Among the many things which call for amendment in this town, we know of none more important than an alteration of the post office arrangements, by which the recipients of nine-tenths of all the mail matter coming to the post office at the garrison may be better accommodated. The necessity of being compelled to trudge two miles for all the mail matter destined for this place, or await its arrival at the side office in this city (where the principal office should be), two or three days after its arrival at the fort, is a burden too grievous to be longer borne without remonstrance. We believe, if the matter was properly presented, the Postmaster General would make this city the terminus of the route now centering at the fort." Early in January, 1852, the editor of the Times, "in conversation with Lemuel Berry, Deputy Postmaster at the Fort, understood him to say he would have no objection to the removal, if the two offices were merged in one." Mr. Berry soon afterward succeeded Mr. Getty as Postmaster. A consolidation of the two offices then followed, and the institution was located in Berry's Store, on Wisconsin street, a short distance east of the canal. The old building now does service as a fire-engine house, at the corner of Pleasant and Clark streets. Prior to the consolidation, the Portage City office was generally, but not officially, known as Wauona (the Indian word for Portage), named by Gov. Doty, who had a penchant for Indian appellations. Charles H. Moore was the first in charge of Wauona Post Office.

In March, 1853, James Delaney, Sr., succeeded Mr. Berry, and held the office until September, 1855, retiring in favor of Jerome B. Fargo. Mr. Fargo's successor was John A. Brown, who died in office February 10, 1859. During Mr. Brown's incumbency, the office became subject to Presidential consideration. C. C. Britt was appointed to fill the vacancy thus created, and remained in office until 1861, being succeeded by Stillman E. Dana, who was appointed by President Lincoln; Mr. Dana served nearly ten years, retiring in favor of Charles P. Austin. Harrison S. Haskell was Mr. Austin's successor. He died in office February 13, 1879. S. S. Brannan was then appointed to fill the vacancy, and upon his death, on the 5th of April, 1880, C. C. Dow succeeded to the position.

The office has been subjected to the usual changes of location experienced by similar institutions everywhere. From Berry's store it was removed by Mr. Delaney to Canal street, between Main and DeWitt. Mr. Fargo took it to Mappa's store, opposite Verandah Hall. Next it was located in a building on Conant street, between Adams and De Witt; thence to a one-story wooden structure on the southeast side of Cook street, near Wisconsin; thence to Arnold's Block (now the Corning House); thence to a building which stood on the vacant lot opposite the Corning House; thence to Emporium Block, on De Witt street; thence to the junction of De Witt and Wisconsin streets, near the bridge, in a brick building in which was located the State Register office, and finally to Vandercook's Block, its present location, to which place it was removed by Postmaster Austin.

It was during the incumbency of Mr. Delaney that a gentleman of color inquired for a letter. "Go way, ye blacknurd," said the Postmaster, "do ye think anybody would write to a nagur?"

Fifty years ago, when John Kinzie had charge of the office, the mail came from the East by way of Buffalo and Green Bay. From the latter point it found its way to the fort by the kindness of some voyageur, with but little regularity. There was no Chicago mail in those days; in fact there was no Chicago. Advices from Fort Dearborn (where Chicago now stands) were even less frequent than from Washington, New York, etc. Now there are eight mails a day to and from Portage. Letters are received from the Atlantic cities in forty-eight hours; from the city by the Golden Gate in less than six days.

The Portage office became a money-order office in July, 1865, the first order being issued to Levi W. Barden, in favor of Samuel D. Hastings, Madison, the amount being $9.10. Since then there have been over thirty-five thousand orders issued.

HOTELS.

As has been seen, Portage, from its infancy, has been quite a central point for travelers and the trans-shipment for merchandise. Before the railroads were built, it occupied a position at the cross roads of commerce, running from Green Bay to the Mississippi River, and from the great pineries of the North to Chicago and Milwaukee. It is not strange then that the business of hotel-keeping was a profitable one in early days; and, indeed, there has been but little change in this regard to the present time. Where, twenty-five and thirty years ago, there could be seen on the streets almost any time of the day, from ten to fifteen four-horse wagons heavily loaded with freight, there are now equally as many "traveling men" representing large firms in the great commercial marts who register at the leading hotels daily.

The Franklin House, built by Capt. Gideon Low about 1835-36, was the first hotel at the portage. Prior to this, those who came this way were accommodated at the fort or the agency building. The next was the United States Hotel, Henry Carpenter, proprietor. The old frame of this ancient caravansary still stands in the First Ward, a dismal monument to pioneer days. Then came the Wisconsin House, kept by the affable McFarlane, who, though the frosts of sixty winters have whitened his hair, is in no immediate danger of being reaped by the scythe of time. The Veeder House, the first "tavern" west of the canal is still standing. The McTighe House came next, and though it is built of wood, no one ever knew where Joseph Hagne got his lumber. It is still standing in the First Ward, the silent witness to the encroachments of the Wisconsin River. The old original Ellsworth House, F. H. Ellsworth, proprietor; Sylvester's Hotel, by Edwin Sylvester, and the City Hotel, solicited a share of the public patronage thirty years ago. In 1862, the Arnold Block, built by Andrew Dunn and J. Arnold, the present Mayor of the city, was converted into a hotel. F. H. Ellsworth was the first lessee, and it bore his name until a recent date, when it was changed to the Corning House. A. E. Smith is the present proprietor. The Emden House, by Henry Emden; the Farmers' Home, by John Hettinger, and the Pruyn House, complete the list of hotels in Portage. The Fox House, at the C., M. & S. P. R. R. depot, though generally known as an "eating-house," is in every respect a hotel of the first order, and is one of the institutions of the place.

PUBLIC HALLS.

Verandah Hall was the first place of any note calculated for the accommodation of public assemblages. It was built early in the fifties by Milo H. Pettibone, and stood on the present site of Graham's brick block. In it was a rude stage where early representations of the drama took place, both by traveling and amateur companies. The next place of this kind to claim the favor of the public, was Vandercook's Hall, in Vandercook's Block. The hall is now occupied by the Masons as a lodge-room. It is here that devoted husbands assemble on stated occasions to vote sustenance to widows and orphans, returning to their domestic firesides after a hard night's work for the amelioration of the afflicted and otherwise unfortunate, only to be accused of less unworthy acts. Pettibone's Hall built in 1855-56, and was for a time the most popular resort in the city. The I. O. O. F. lodge-room is located in Pettibone Block. Schulze's Hall came next, and is now a successful competitor for public entertainments. Wood's Hall was also one of the "institutions." In 1879, John Dullaghan erected a magnificent building on the north side of Cook street, devoting the entire upper part to the purposes of a hall, and dedicating it Dullaghan's Opera House. The size of the entire hall is 52x90 feet, including the stage. The latter has a dimension of 24x51 feet; is appointed with four ample dressing-rooms, two on each side; is abundantly supplied with water, toilet conveniences, and is completely and elegantly furnished throughout; the width of proscenium is thirty feet. The drop curtain is 15x28, and is an artistic triumph, being a bird's-eye view of Constantinople and the blue Bosphorus in the distance. The auditorium is 60x51 feet, and has a seating capacity of 700. The gallery is 17x51 in dimensions; will comfortably seat 300 people, and is reached by a double staircase branching off from the main entrance on either side. The seats are folding settees of the latest construction, on each of which six persons may sit. The reserved seats consist of two-seated settees, and are very elegant and comfortable. The hall is lighted by gas, manufactured by an apparatus on the premises. It was opened on the 15th of September, 1879, by a grand ball, under the auspices of the Guppy Guard, and, on the 19th of the same month, Jananschek, the German actress, appeared in the role of "Marie Stuart," dedicating the Dullaghan Opera House to the Muses. The building and hall complete cost $13,000.

LOCAL MILITIA.

The Portage Light Guard was the first regularly organized military company in Portage, and, it is believed, in Columbia County. The Guards were originally organized about 1859 or 1860, but did not enter actively into military discipline and drill until early in 1861, when a re-organization took place. By the time this had been effected, the war broke out, a call was made for 75,000 volunteers, and the Portage Light Guards proffered their services to the Governor, who accepted the offer and assigned the company to the Second Regiment, Wisconsin Volunteers, as Company G. But a large number of those who originally enlisted while the Light Guards were only "play soldiers," either resigned or were not accepted by the Government. A history of Company G will be found in another part of this work.

On the 6th of July, 1877, a meeting was held at the court house in Portage for the purpose of organizing a military company. A petition having been signed by about sixty-five young men of the required age for military duty, and presented to Joshua J. Guppy, requesting him to appoint some one to organize a company as provided for under the laws of the State, A. J. Turner was appointed to take steps for such an organization, which he did. At the first meeting of the company, A. H. Russell, who served several years in the war of the rebellion, was elected Captain, Homer S. Goss, First Lieutenant, and George S. Race, Second Lieutenant. The company soon afterward received from the State sixty Springfield rifles, with belts and cartridge boxes to match, and at once commenced regular drills. The next thing in order was to secure uniforms, which they did, the citizens of Portage subscribing liberally toward the purchase. There were sixty-five uniforms ordered at once, three of them being for commissioned officers. They are made of gray cloth, the finest manufactured, and known as West Point cadet cloth. They are trimmed with gold lace and dark facings, and were made by Messrs. Loomis, Gallett & Breese, at a cost, for the entire lot, of $1,485.50. The caps are made of gray cloth, with black top and gilt trimming, costing $2.25 each. The fatigue cap is of blue cloth, with gilt trimming, costing $1.25 each. The company receives $300 a year from the State, which pays incidental expenses.

The first competitive drill took place at Reedsburg July 4, 1879, with the Mauston Light Guard, which was called, at that time, one of the best companies in the State. The judges were unable to decide which was the most thoroughly drilled company, and concluded to divide the prize fund equally, giving each company \$100. The next competitive drill took place at Portage September 18 with the same company, the Guppy Guard taking the second prize of \$75, their score being 85 $\frac{3}{4}$, and that of the Mauston Light Guard, 90. The next drill, again with Mauston Light Guard, was on October 5, and the Guppy Guard succeeded in taking the first prize of \$125.

The Guppy Guard took part in the inaugural ceremonies of Madison, in January last, and this is what a local newspaper said of them: "The Guppy Guard, of Portage, Captain Womer, 'went in on its muscle,' and showed the crowd something grand. Cheer after cheer went up as the company went through with some of its fancy and most difficult movements. The other companies indulged in the usual parade movements only. Portage City is assured that her company 'took the palm' in the drill business in our city; and the Captain of this company may well be proud of his men."

The officers and privates of the company, at the present time, are as follows; J. D. Womer, Captain; W. S. Wentworth, First Lieutenant; W. B. Stevens, Second Lieutenant; H. W. Orthman, First Sergeant; G. C. Carnegie, Second Sergeant; J. C. Britt, Third Sergeant; J. H. Wells, Fourth Sergeant; C. P. Jaeger, Fifth Sergeant; I. A. Ridgway, First Corporal; T. W. Maine, Second Corporal; T. J. Wells, Third Corporal; R. G. Shackell, Fourth Corporal; James Dempsey, Fifth Corporal; B. R. Lewis, Sixth Corporal; John Sweeney, Seventh Corporal; W. D. McKenney, Eighth Corporal; Alex. Carnegie, Colors; J. B. Mills, Drummer. Privates—D. H. Abell, C. L. Alverson, J. C. Anderson, L. S. Allen, W. E. Allen, Fred. Allen, C. W. Allen, Thomas Barrett, Tony Brandt, C. M. Bard, William D. Beattie, Robert L. Beattie, G. R. Bennett, William Bengel, Frank Brandt, A. P. Bever, William W. Bullard, E. Betz, A. P. Barry, C. W. Baker, Fred. Blood, Daniel W. Bath, J. F. Cole, W. S. Corning, M. E. Cook, Harry Clark, Ansel Clark, James Cleary, Albert Crouch, G. A. W. Carr, J. B. Chadwick, D. J. Dalton, Richard Dempsey, John Dalton, James Dullaghan, Hewett Dent, T. M. Edwards, William Edwards, A. J. Eastman, William Fatchild, G. C. Fyfe, E. C. Frounfelter, W. B. Gilman, F. F. Goss, E. H. Hemenway, J. L. Hardie, T. Hofman, Nelson Hardie, R. M. Hazletine, George Hemenway, J. E. Jones, F. W. Loomis, J. C. Lewis, B. C. Meacher, D. C. Maine, F. S. McDuffie, Henry Mady, George M. Maloy, C. P. McKinney, Henry Neef, P. Powers, George W. Phillips, H. Pomeroy, S. H. Reed, D. G. Romdenn, J. Ruthven, Emil Reber, William Ruthven, William Richardson, L. F. Schulze, Max Schulze, E. J. Swift, G. T. Shackell, J. Spain, W. I. Sherman, L. S. Shattuck, E. E. Stevens, A. C. Stevens, George Stevens, F. J. Schulze, C. H. Tasker, F. B. Thompson, Fred J. Turner, G. Tschamer, Frank Veseley, J. E. Williams, F. C. Warren, A. L. Witter, M. Ward, J. H. Wells, Jr., C. W. Williams, John White, John T. Yule.

The first executive officers of the company were: J. J. Guppy, President; A. J. Turner, Vice President; John T. Yule, Secretary, H. S. Goss, Treasurer. The present are: A. J. Turner, President; W. D. Fox, Vice President; Alexander Carnegie, Secretary; W. S. Wentworth, Treasurer.

ORDERS AND SOCIETIES.

The Masons.—Fort Winnebago Lodge, No. 33, was organized in 1850, the dispensation being granted June 26, by William R. Smith, Grand Master of the State, and the charter, December 13. The original meeting place was in the house now occupied by John Graham as a residence. The building then stood on Cook street, opposite the present site of the Presbyterian Church. The old anteroom door, with the little wicket in the center, through which the belated members of the mystic order were wont to whisper mysterious things in order that they might get inside with the "rest of the boys," now does service as a cellar door on the premises of Mr. Graham. The charter members of the lodge were Hugh McFarlane, Erastus Cook, Charles M. Kingsbury, Walter W. Kellogg, G. Law, Nelson McNeal, Robert Hunter and Daniel Clough. John Delaney, the lawyer-editor, was the first initiate; he became a member October 17, 1850. The present membership of the lodge is about one hundred. Meetings are held in a well-appointed hall in Vandercreek's Block. Following is a complete list of the officers of the lodge since its organization:

1850—Walter W. Kellogg, Worshipful Master; Hugh McFarlane, Senior Warden; R. Hunter, Junior Warden. 1851—W. W. Kellogg, W. M.; H. McFarlane, S. W.; R. Hunter, J. W. 1852—H. McFarlane, W. M.; Erastus Cook, S. W.; Caleb Crosswell, J. W.; C. A. Gridley, Sec. and Treas. 1853—Josiah Arnold, W. M.; Erastus Cook, S. W.; William Armstrong, J. W.; Walter Smith, Treas.; John Delaney, Sec. 1854—Josiah Arnold, W. M.; William Armstrong, S. W.; William Crane, J. W.; A. B. Douglass, Treas.; Riley Moulton, Sec. 1855—Josiah Arnold, W. M.; George F. Huntington, S. W.; William Crane, J. W.; Riley Moulton, Treas.; J. B. Seaman, Sec. 1856—G. F. Huntington, W. M.; William Armstrong, S. M.; A. W. Manchester, J. W.; G. N. Richmond, Treas.; A. B. Alden, Sec. 1857—G. F. Huntington, W. M.; G. W. Stout, S. W.; John Delaney, J. W.; G. N. Richmond, Treas.; Edgar P. Hill, Sec. 1858—C. D. Hottenstein, W. M.; E. P. Hill, S. W.; John Graham, J. W.; G. N. Richmond, Treas.; H. B. Munn, Sec. 1859—E. P. Hill, W. M.; A. B. Alden, S. W.; John McGrath, J. W.; Henry Bolting, Treas.; M. P. Wing, Sec. 1860—A. B. Alden, W. M.; H. S. Haskell, S. W.; William L. Sawtell, J. W.; Edward F. Lewis, Treas.; George B. Burch, Sec. 1861—A. B. Alden, W. M.; E. P. Hill, S. W.; W. F. Thompson, J. W.; E. F. Lewis, Treas.; L. Breese, Sec. 1862—E. P. Hill, W. M.; J. H. Magoffin, S. W.; Peter Karch, J. W.; A. P. Bennett, Treas.; Julius Austin, Sec. 1863—J. H. Magoffin, W. M.; Harvey M. Haskell, S. W.; Lyell T. Mead, J. W.; A. P. Bennett, Treas.; S. S. Brannan, Sec. 1864—John Graham, W. M.; L. T. Mead, S. W.; A. P. Bennett, J. W.; H. Bolting, Treas.;

J. H. Magoffin, Sec. 1865—John Graham, W. M.; A. P. Bennett, S. W.; S. B. Rhodes, J. W.; H. Bolting, Treas.; J. H. Magoffin, Sec. 1866—John Graham, W. M.; Peter Karch, S. W.; D. A. Hillyer, J. W.; W. B. Dent, Treas.; O. C. Dibble, Sec. 1867—Peter Karch, W. M.; D. A. Hillyer, S. W.; H. S. Goss, J. W.; John Graham, Treas.; R. J. Flint, Sec. 1868—Homer S. Goss, W. M.; Ira Schoemaker, S. W.; I. G. Loomis, J. W.; F. Steber, Treas.; M. T. Alverson, Sec. 1869—D. A. Hillyer, W. M.; Ira Schoemaker, S. W.; E. C. Maine, J. W.; I. W. Bacon, Treas.; W. H. C. Abell, Sec. 1870—John Graham, W. M.; E. H. Hughes, S. W.; W. T. Parry, J. W.; I. W. Bacon, Treas.; C. Wheeler, Sec. 1871—Ira Schoemaker, W. M.; Sherman L. Plumb, S. W.; George T. Thompson, J. W.; I. W. Bacon, Treas.; Edward S. Baker, Sec. 1872—L. T. Mead, W. M.; S. L. Plumb, S. W.; M. T. Alverson, J. W.; I. W. Bacon, Treas.; J. E. Wells, Sec. 1873—S. L. Plumb, W. M.; M. T. Alverson, S. W.; Joseph Hurst, J. W.; John Graham, Treas.; J. E. Wells, Sec. 1874—I. G. Loomis, W. M.; F. B. Northup, S. W.; N. J. Currier, J. W.; John Graham, Treas.; J. E. Wells, Sec. 1875—H. S. Goss, W. M.; James Fyfe, S. W.; William M. Edwards, J. W.; John Graham, Treas.; J. E. Wells, Sec. 1876—William Meacher, W. M.; C. C. Dow, S. W.; J. E. Wells, J. W.; John Graham, Treas.; E. S. Baker, Sec. 1877—H. S. Goss, W. M.; J. E. Wells, S. W.; Samuel S. Brannan, J. W.; John Graham, Treas.; George S. Race, Sec. 1878—H. S. Goss, W. M.; E. J. S. Wright, S. W.; George W. Marsh, J. W.; John Graham, Treas.; George S. Race, Sec. 1879—H. S. Goss, W. M.; E. J. S. Wright, S. W.; S. S. Lockhart, J. W.; John Graham, Treas.; George S. Race, Sec. 1880—William M. Edwards, W. M.; E. H. Hughes, S. W.; S. S. Lockhart, J. W.; John Graham, Treas.; E. J. S. Wright, Sec.

Fort Winnebago Lodge has always had the reputation of being one of the model lodges of the State, its members being well skilled in the work, and close adherents of the ritual. Several members have filled positions in the Grand Lodge, A. B. Alden having been Grand Master of Masons of Wisconsin from 1861 to 1863, inclusive.

Fort Winnebago Chapter, No. 14, R. A. M.—Dispensation granted February 22, 1856, by R. D. Pulford, Grand High Priest, State of Wisconsin. The Charter was granted February 4, 1857. From the date of dispensation until February 5, 1862, the name of the chapter was "Portage," at which time it was changed to "Fort Winnebago," its present name. The chapter met for the first time March 11, 1859, and received nineteen petitions that evening. The chapter was constituted and officers installed by Daniel Howell, Grand High Priest, February 28, 1857. The first three who received the R. A. degree were A. B. Alden, G. W. Stout and J. Arnold. The officers have been: 1856—George F. Huntington, High Priest; Nelson McNeal, King; H. Nickerson, Scribe. 1857—George F. Huntington, H. P.; B. S. Doty, K.; Levi Funkenstein, S.; William K. Miles, Treas.; John Graham, Sec. 1858—G. F. Huntington, H. P.; B. S. Doty, K.; L. Funkenstein, S.; William K. Miles, Treas.; John Graham, Sec. 1859—G. F. Huntington, H. P.; A. B. Alden, K.; L. Funkenstein, Treas.; John Graham, Sec. 1860—A. B. Alden, H. P.; E. P. Hill, K.; L. Funkenstein, S.; William K. Miles, Treas. John Graham, Sec. 1861—A. B. Alden, H. P.; E. P. Hill, K.; Riley Moulton, S.; E. F. Lewis, Treas.; S. S. Lease, Sec. 1862—J. H. Magoffin, H. P.; S. S. Case, K.; L. T. Mead, S.; H. E. Wells, Treas.; M. P. Wing, Sec. 1863—A. B. Alden, H. P.; L. T. Mead, K.; C. J. Pardee, S.; L. Funkenstein, Treas.; M. P. Wing, Sec. 1864—A. B. Alden, H. P.; L. T. Mead, H. P.; John Graham, S.; L. Funkenstein, Treas.; J. H. Magoffin, Sec. 1865—L. T. Mead, H. P.; John Graham, S.; Peter Karch, S.; L. Funkenstein, Treas.; J. H. Magoffin, Sec. 1866—John Graham, H. P.; Peter Karch, K.; S. B. Rhodes, S.; L. Funkenstein, Treas.; L. T. Mead, H. P. 1867—John Graham, H. P.; Peter Karch, K.; H. S. Goss, S.; L. Funkenstein, Treas.; R. J. Flint, Sec. 1868—P. Karch, H. P.; H. S. Goss, K.; D. A. Hillyer, S.; L. Funkenstein, Treas.; R. J. Flint, Sec. 1869—H. S. Goss, H. P.; D. A. Hillyer, K.; S. L. Plumb, S.; John Graham, Treas.; M. T. Alverson, Sec. 1870—H. S. Goss, H. P.; D. A. Hillyer, K.; A. Hoffman, S.; John Graham, Treas.; M. T. Alverson, Sec. 1871—A. Hoffman, H. P.; S. L. Plumb, K.; Ira Schoemaker, S.; John Graham, Treas.

M. T. Alverson, Sec. 1872—S. L. Plumb, H. P.; M. T. Alverson, K.; E. H. Hughes, S., John Graham, Treas.; W. H. C. Abell, Sec. 1873—John Graham, H. P.; M. T. Alverson, K.; E. H. Hughes, S.; R. C. Rockwood, Treas.; W. H. C. Abell, Sec. 1874—S. L. Plumb, H. P.; E. H. Hughes, K.; William M. Edwards, S.; R. C. Rockwood, Treas.; W. H. C. Abell, Sec. 1875—S. L. Plumb, H. P.; W. M. Edwards, K.; I. G. Loomis, S.; R. C. Rockwood, Treas.; W. H. C. Abell, Sec. 1876—S. L. Plumb, H. P.; W. M. Edwards, K.; W. W. Corning, S.; R. C. Rockwood, Treas.; W. H. C. Abell, Sec. 1877—William M. Edwards, H. P.; W. W. Corning, K.; C. C. Dow, S.; R. C. Rockwood, Treas.; W. H. C. Abell, Sec. 1878—William M. Edwards, H. P.; N. J. Currier, K.; George S. Race, S.; R. C. Rockwood, Treas.; W. H. C. Abell, Sec. 1879—William M. Edwards, H. P.; O. H. Warriner, K.; William Meacher, K.; R. C. Rockwood, Treas.; W. H. C. Abell, Sec. 1880—Charles J. Pardee, H. P.; William Meacher, K. George S. Race, S.; R. C. Rockwood, Treas.; W. H. C. Abell, Sec.

In his report to the Grand Chapter, in 1878, the Grand Lecturer said: "April 9, I visited Fort Winnebago Chapter, No. 14, at Portage. This chapter fully maintains its old reputation of being one of the best working and most reliable of those in this jurisdiction. They have a large number of well-skilled workmen, capable of filling any station in the chapter." There are eighty members in the chapter.

Fort Winnebago Commandery, No. 4, Knights Templar.—Dispensation granted March 18, 1861, by H. L. Palmer, Grand Commander of Knights Templar, State of Wisconsin. Chapter granted January 2, 1862. The commandery met, the first time, on April 17, 1861. The officers of the commandery, since organization, have been: 1861—E. P. Hill, Eminent Commander; A. B. Alden, Generalissimo; C. J. Pardee, Captain General. 1862—E. P. Hill, E. C.; A. B. Alden, Gen.; C. G. Pardee, C. G.; H. E. Wells, Treas.; M. P. Wing, Recorder. 1863—A. B. Alden, E. C.; Charles Case, Gen.; J. H. Magoffin, C. G.; Yates Ashley, Treas.; M. P. Wing, Rec. 1864—A. B. Alden, E. C.; C. Case, Gen.; J. H. Magoffin, C. G.; Y. Ashley, Treas.; Ed. F. Lewis, Rec. 1865—Charles Case, E. C.; J. H. Magoffin, Gen.; S. H. Bailey, C. G.; Yates Ashley, Treas.; A. Hoffman, Rec. 1866—Charles J. Pardee, E. C.; Emmons Taylor, Gen.; L. T. Mead, C. G.; Yates Ashley, Treas.; John Graham, Rec. 1867—C. J. Pardee, E. C.; Emmons Taylor, Gen.; L. T. Mead, C. G.; Yates Ashley, Treas.; W. B. Dent, Rec. 1868—Emmons Taylor, E. C.; L. T. Mead, Gen.; E. M. Hall, C. G.; John Graham, Treas.; A. Hoffman, Rec. 1869—L. T. Mead, E. C.; Yates Ashley, Gen.; P. Karch, C. G.; W. H. C. Abell, Treas.; A. Hoffman, Rec. 1870—L. T. Mead, E. C.; George T. Thompson, Gen.; H. S. Goss, C. G.; John Graham, Treas.; A. Hoffman, Rec. 1871—L. T. Mead, E. C.; George T. Thompson, Gen.; H. S. Goss, C. G.; John Graham, Treas.; A. Hoffman, Rec. 1872—Emmons Taylor, E. C.; H. S. Goss, Gen.; L. T. Mead, C. G.; John Graham, Treas.; O. A. Southmayd, Rec. 1873—H. S. Goss, E. C.; J. B. Taylor, Gen.; E. E. Chapin, C. G.; John Graham, Treas.; O. A. Southmayd, Rec. 1874—H. S. Goss, E. C.; J. B. Taylor, Gen.; E. E. Chapin, C. G.; John Graham, Treas.; O. A. Southmayd, Rec. 1875—H. S. Goss, E. C.; J. B. Taylor, Gen.; William Meacher, C. G.; John Graham, Treas.; O. H. Sorrenson, Rec. 1876—James B. Taylor, E. C.; William Meacher, Gen.; S. L. Plumb, C. G.; John Graham, Treas.; O. H. Sorrenson, Rec. 1877—William Meacher, E. C.; C. C. Dorr, Gen.; W. W. Corning, C. G.; John Graham, Treas.; O. H. Sorrenson, Rec. 1878—William Meacher, E. C.; J. B. Taylor, Gen.; W. W. Corning, C. G.; John Graham, Treas.; W. H. C. Abell, Rec. 1879—William Meacher, E. C.; J. B. Taylor, Gen.; W. W. Corning, C. G.; John Graham, Treas.; W. H. C. Abell, Rec. 1880—William Meacher, E. C.; H. S. Goss, Gen.; W. W. Corning, C. G.; John Graham, Treas.; W. H. C. Abell, Rec.

The late Emmons Taylor was Grand Commander of the Knights Templar of Wisconsin when he died. Commandery No. 4 has 100 members.

The Odd Fellows.—Portage City Lodge, No. 61, was organized January 2, 1854. Among the first members were Henry Emden, Charles Haertel, C. R. Gallett, Thomas Drew, B. J.

Pixley, John Bläser, Adam Blochwitz, Frank Winne, Charles Brunœhler, John B. Dassi and Henry Bolting. In January, 1862, it became a German-speaking lodge, and has remained as such to the present time, the Americans having gradually withdrawn. Henry Emder is now the only member living who took part in the new organization. The Past Grands, who are entitled to seats in the Grand Lodge, since 1862, have been Henry Emder, George Port, G. Gerstenkorn, William Windus, William Hensell, Charles Wilkie, L. Prehn, C. Pfaff, G. Huebner, A. Bettke, F. Fोगmann, C. Mass, G. Janda, F. Findeisen and Jacob Best.

On the 8th of October, 1867, Wauona Lodge, No. 132, was instituted, with nineteen members, by Grand Master C. C. Cheeny. The charter members were Samuel K. Vaughan, M. Waterhouse, M. T. Alverson, B. J. Pixley, James Munroe, W. G. Bunker, E. H. Dewey, L. M. Averill, S. A. Carpenter and George Murison. First officers: S. K. Vaughan, N. G.; M. Waterhouse, V. G.; M. T. Alverson, R. S.; B. J. Pixley, Treas.; James Munroe, Per. Sec. The next election was held April 8, 1868, with the following result: M. Waterhouse, N. G.; M. T. Alverson, V. G.; W. G. Bunker, Sec.; M. M. Bradley, Treas. Since then the officers have been: October 7, 1868—M. T. Alverson, N. G.; W. G. Bunker, V. G.; T. A. Pool, Sec.; James Monroe, Treas. April 8, 1869—W. G. Bunker, N. G.; T. A. Pool, V. G.; H. Meriton, Sec.; J. C. Holden, Treas. September, 29, 1869—T. A. Pool, N. G.; H. Meriton, V. G.; J. C. Holden, R. S.; J. S. Smith, Treas.; H. W. Lee, Per. Sec. March 30, 1870—M. Waterhouse, N. G.; G. Murison, V. G.; V. E. Brewer, R. S.; J. S. Smith, Treas. September 28, 1870—George Murison, N. G.; E. H. Dewey, V. G.; T. A. Pool, R. S.; William Holden, Treas.; M. T. Alverson, Per. Sec. March 29, 1871—E. H. Dewey, N. G.; William Edwards, V. G.; C. A. Goodyear, R. S.; William Holden, Treas. September 27, 1871—H. Meriton, N. G.; H. W. Lee, V. G.; A. Thompson, R. S.; William Holden, Treas.; M. T. Alverson, Per. Sec. March 27, 1872—H. W. Lee, N. G.; C. A. Goodyear, V. G.; G. Murison, R. S.; M. T. Alverson, Per. Sec.; William Holden, Treas. September 27, 1872—C. R. Gallett, N. G.; Charles Baker, V. G.; G. C. Jackson, R. S.; G. Murison, Per. Sec.; W. Holden, Treas. January 1, 1873—C. R. Gallett, N. G.; C. Baker, V. G.; T. A. Pool, R. S.; G. Murison, Per. Sec.; W. Holden, Treas. July 1, 1873—C. Baker, N. G.; A. Thompson, V. G.; D. C. Treadway, R. S.; G. Murrison, Per. Sec.; M. Waterhouse, Treas. January 1, 1874—A. Thompson, N. G.; R. B. Pixley, V. G.; C. H. Tasker, R. S.; G. Murison, Per. Sec.; T. C. Thompson, Treas. July 1, 1874—William Edwards, N. G.; C. H. Tasker, V. G.; T. B. Fletcher, R. S.; George Murison, Per. Sec.; M. Waterhouse, Treas. January 1, 1875—R. C. Pixley, N. G.; T. B. Fletcher, V. G.; A. D. Hemenway, R. S.; George Murison, Per. Sec.; M. Waterhouse, Treas. July 1, 1875—C. H. Tasker, N. G.; A. D. Hemenway, V. G.; E. A. Rice, R. S.; George Murison, Per. Sec.; M. Waterhouse, Treas. January 1, 1876—T. B. Fletcher, N. G.; E. A. Rice, V. G.; D. M. Neill, R. S.; George Murison, Per. Sec.; M. Waterhouse, Treas. July 1, 1876—E. A. Rice, N. G.; V. E. Brewer, V. G.; H. W. Williams, R. S.; George Murison, Per. Sec.; M. Waterhouse, Treas. January 1, 1877—A. D. Hemenway, N. G.; D. M. Neill, V. G.; H. W. Williams, R. S.; George Murison, Per. Sec.; M. Waterhouse, Treas. July 1, 1877—V. E. Brewer, N. G.; H. W. Williams, V. G.; B. B. Hughes, R. S.; George Murison, Per. Sec.; M. Waterhouse, Treas. January 1, 1878—D. M. Neill, N. G.; B. B. Hughes, V. G.; S. M. Smith, R. S.; George Murison, Per. Sec.; M. Waterhouse, Treas. July 1, 1878—H. W. Williams, N. G.; T. B. Fletcher, V. G.; G. J. Cox, R. S.; George Murison, Per. Sec.; C. R. Gallett, Treas. January 1, 1879—B. B. Hughes, N. G.; S. M. Smith, V. G.; A. Holmes, R. S.; George Murison, Per. Sec.; C. R. Gallett, Treas. July 1, 1879—S. M. Smith, N. G.; G. J. Cox, V. G.; A. A. Sheret, R. S.; George Murison, Per. Sec.; C. R. Gallett, Treas. January 1, 1880—G. J. Cox, N. G.; A. A. Sherett, V. G.; E. A. Vaughan, R. S.; George Murison, Per. Sec.; C. R. Gallett, Treas. Number of members in lodge, seventy-five.

Excelsior Encampment was instituted by R. W. G. P. Hudson, of Portage, Wis., March 22, 1869, with Patriarchs S. K. Vaughan, M. Waterhouse, George Jowett, Charles Schenck, Charles Prehn and George Port as charter members, and the following officers were elected and installed: James Monroe, Chief Patriarch; George Port, High Priest; S. K. Vaughan, Senior Warden; V. E. Brewer, Junior Warden; H. Meriton, Scribe; Charles Schenck, Treas. The following officers were elected January 1, 1870: V. E. Brewer, C. P.; H. Meriton, H. P.; W. G. Bunker, S. W.; E. S. Purdy, J. W.; Charles Prehn, Scribe; Charles Schenck, Treas. July 1, 1870.—W. G. Bunker, C. P.; Charles Prehn, H. P.; M. Waterhouse, S. W.; M. M. Bradley, J. W.; A. Ducat, Scribe; H. Emden, Treas. January 1, 1871—M. W. Waterhouse, C. P.; E. S. Purdy, H. P.; E. H. Dewey, S. W.; William Hensel, Scribe; Charles Schenck, Treas. July 1, 1871—August Batke, C. P.; E. S. Purdy, H. P.; William Hensel, S. W.; C. A. Goodyear, J. W.; M. Waterhouse, Scribe; F. Seiverkrop, Treas. January 1, 1872—E. S. Purdy, C. P.; E. H. Dewey, H. P.; C. A. Goodyear, S. W.; J. Gerstenkorn, J. W.; George Port, Scribe; A. Cardozo, Treas. January 1, 1873—C. A. Goodyear, C. P.; George Port, H. P.; Charles Baker, S. W.; T. H. Cortelyou, J. W.; E. S. Purdy, Treas. January 1, 1874—H. W. Lee, C. P.; W. G. Bunker, H. P.; C. R. Gallett, S. W.; C. H. Tasker, J. W.; D. M. Neill, Scribe; E. S. Purdy, Treas. July 1, 1874—C. R. Gallett, C. P.; C. H. Tasker, H. P.; D. M. Neill, S. W.; T. P. Thompson, J. W.; Alex. Thompson, Scribe; E. S. Purdy, Treas. January 1, 1875—C. H. Tasker, C. P.; W. G. Bunker, H. P.; A. M. Fargemann, S. W.; H. Seiverkrop, J. W.; T. P. Thompson, Scribe. July, 1 1875—Alex. Thompson, C. P.; T. P. Thompson, H. P.; A. M. Fargemann, S. W.; C. R. Gallett, J. W.; E. A. Rice, Scribe; E. S. Purdy, Treas. January 1, 1876—D. M. Neill, C. P.; E. A. Rice, H. P.; T. B. Fletcher, S. W.; B. B. Hughes, J. W.; C. R. Gallett, Scribe; E. S. Purdy, Treas. July 1, 1876—T. B. Fletcher, C. P.; A. M. Fargemann, H. P.; A. Padley, S. W.; T. P. Thompson, J. W.; E. A. Rice, Scribe; E. S. Purdy, Treas. January 1, 1877—A. Padley, C. P.; B. B. Hughes, H. P.; L. D. Comstock, S. W.; E. F. Kind, J. W.; V. E. Brewer, F. S.; A. A. Sherett, Scribe; E. S. Purdy, Treas. July 1, 1877—B. B. Hughes, C. P.; E. F. Kind, H. P.; M. Waterhouse, S. W.; George Murison, J. W.; V. E. Brewer, F. S.; E. A. Rice, Scribe; E. S. Purdy, Treas. January 1, 1878—George Port, C. P.; A. M. Fargemann, H. P.; J. Huebner, S. W.; E. Schleicher, J. W.; V. E. Brewer, F. S.; C. R. Gallett, Scribe; E. S. Purdy, Treas. July 1, 1878—C. R. Gallett, C. P.; C. H. Tasker, H. P.; T. H. Cortelyou, S. W.; Samuel Schulze, J. W.; V. E. Brewer, F. S.; T. B. Fletcher, Scribe; E. S. Purdy, Treas. January 1, 1879—A. M. Fargemann, C. P.; S. Schulze, H. P.; D. Wells, S. W.; Wm. Hensel, J. W.; V. E. Brewer, F. S.; G. J. Cox, Scribe; E. S. Purdy, Treas. January 1, 1880—L. D. Comstock, C. P.; D. M. Neill, H. P.; T. B. Fletcher, S. W.; S. Schulze, J. W.; V. E. Brewer, F. S.; M. T. Alverson, Scribe; E. S. Purdy, Treas.

The encampment now numbers between fifty and sixty members. February 1, 1876, thirty-seven members purchased uniforms and organized the Portage Battalion of uniformed Patriarchs, which at that time was the largest number of any encampment in the State. The first officers were: V. E. Brewer, Commander; William Hensel, First Vice Commander; C. H. Tasker, Second Vice Commander. 1877—V. E. Brewer, Commander; William Hensel, First Vice Commander; E. S. Purdy, Second Vice Commander. 1878—V. E. Brewer, Commander; E. S. Purdy, First Vice Commander; William Hensel, Second Vice Commander. 1879—V. E. Brewer, Commander; E. S. Purdy, First Vice Commander; T. B. Fletcher, Second Vice Commander. 1880—V. E. Brewer, Commander; E. S. Purdy, First Vice Commander; T. B. Fletcher, Second Vice Commander.

Since the organization of the encampment the following members have died: S. K. Vaughan, M. Waterhouse, and Charles Schenck.

The Portage Temple of Honor, No. 16 was instituted April 15, 1875. The following were the charter members—E. W. Stevens, J. B. Tinklebaugh, F. Blood, D. A. Hughson, M. Waterhouse, A. P. Bever, A. C. Stevens, George Wright, Stewart Wyllie, Ll. Breese, T. C. Evans, D. G. Muir, E. J. S. Wright, W. Fulton, Alex. Thompson, W. T. Parry, S. M. Smith, James Gowran, W. P. St. John, E. C. Maine, A. D. Hemenway, G. W. Case, R. J. Lloyd. The first officers elected were M. Waterhouse, W. C. T.; D. G. Muir, W. V. T.; A. Thompson, P. W. C. T. The following persons were elected W. C. T. from the above date to the present time

E. W. Stevens, one term; W. Borne, one term; W. T. Parry, three terms; W. Fulton, one term; G. C. Jackson, one term; S. M. Smith, one term; H. H. Curtis, one term. Number of initiates during the time, 234. Number now in good and regular standing, 75. The most efficient workers in the cause of temperance have been W. T. Parry, W. Fulton, D. G. Muir, S. M. Smith, D. A. Goodyear, G. C. Jackson, Charles Prehn and Peter Mills. While many moderate drinkers have become total abstainers, there are twenty-nine who have been habitual drinkers and most of that number had gone down very nearly to destruction. Their reformation is believed to be complete.

The Mendotas.—On the 28th of March, 1876, Shu-na-ha-ha Council, No. 19, of the Ancient Order of Mendotas, was organized in Portage, with the following charter members: S. S. Brannan, G. O. Clinton, J. B. Taylor, E. C. Maine, I. G. Loomis, S. L. Plumb, Ferdinand Schulze, C. K. Peterson, O. H. Sorrenson, James Gowran, Mrs. S. S. Brannan, Mrs. J. H. Rogers, Mrs. S. L. Plumb, Mrs. Dow, Mrs. I. G. Loomis, Mrs. J. B. Taylor and Mrs. E. C. Maine. The prime object of the organization was the advancement of the cause of temperance. The council bore its part well in the battle against rum, until a lack of interest on the part of members necessitated a suspension. Mendota is the Indian name for the fourth lake at Madison, which, translated, means Spirit Lake. The nature of the spirits found there by the red men is not known.

The Turnverein (Vorwärts) of Portage. was organized April 15, 1877, with the following charter members: A. E. Klenert, Charles Klenert, Al. Niemeyer, Jacob Hornung, Frank Zienert, Frank Sieverkrop, Albert Schleicher, H. Sittenbecher, Ernst Schleicher, Henry Port, George Koberstein, Charles Klabunda and Joseph A. Versen. Their prosperity has been great in physical and social advancement. Their membership has increased to sixty-three, in good standing. The present officers are: President, A. E. Klenert; Secretary, Hermann Richter; Corresponding Secretary, Alois Krisch; Treasurer, Joseph A. Versen and Adam Rebholz; Teacher, Henry Port. Their financial standing is good; having cash and property to the extent of over $600 on hand.

Portage Liederkrantz.—This society was organized December 31, 1856, having for its object the practice and improvement in vocal music. Its constituent members were: Robert Gropius, President; Charles Deidrich, Secretary; Charles Moll, Treasurer; John B. Dassi, Conductor; Charles Brunchler, Peter Boll, Bernard Glöckler, John Versen, John Schliessmann, Thomas Spargnapani, Christian Schultz, Charles Prehn, John Misch, John Bartl, Jacob Clemens, Joseph Fuerst, William Haertel, Mr. Hilbert, Robert Lehmann, Louis Lange, Peter Reinhold, Franz Schulze, Charles Wilke, Sr., Mr. Weidenbacher, Charles Schmidt, Ferdinand Schulze, Henry Schulze, Andrew Kiefer, Samuel Kopp, Franz Julien and Diebold Blass. Regular monthly meetings have since been held, and at times, as seemed necessary, the members have been called together for practice. An annual ball is given on each recurring 31st of December. In 1864, the society purchased two lots on Conant street, moved thereon a building, employed a German teacher, and opened a select school. This enterprise not proving successful, the building, in 1872, was sold to the city for an engine-house. By this means, the small indebtedness incurred was paid off, and in the spring of 1880 the society was in a flourishing condition, having its two lots free of all incumbrances, and some money on interest. At that time its officers were, V. Helmann, President; Christian Schultz, Treasurer; John B. Dassi, Secretary; Joseph R. Huebl, Conductor; Robert Lehmann, Frank Helm and Charles Wilke, Directors.

THE CEMETERIES.

Fort Winnebago Cemetery.—In a thick wood of small oaks perhaps a quarter of a mile eastward from the fort along the military road is the old Fort Winnebago depository after the last muster-out. It is a lonely spot. About one hundred persons were buried here to await the resurrection. It was the cemetery of the earlier village which clustered around the fort. A number of soldiers went here below the thunder of the morning and the evening gun and the disturbing clatter of reveille tattoo. Their graves are undistinguishable now; though once the summits of their head-board were decked with black paint, a distinction their country gave them that they might not be confounded with the civilians sleeping about them. The names of Maj. Clark and Capt. Gideon Low appeared in the roll-call of death. Their remains, however, have been removed. Those of the latter officer were laid in the cemetery at Portage City. Indeed empty sepulchers are frequent on every hand. It is observable that most of the undistinguished tenants of these tombs are women. The summer fires leaping through the dry thicket have burned, and half burned, at will, the picketed inclosures about many graves, and the years have met success in their endeavors to raze and bury even the memorials of other burials. Your inadvertent foot each moment throws up excellently seasoned chips in memory of somebody whose name Old Time prefers you shall not read. Boastful, perennial, eternal Fame is after all but the serf and prey of this old grub among the epitaphs, build how you will. Cooper Pixley, a soldier of the Revolution, went to sleep in these grounds, aged eighty-six years and seven months. His grave is still undisturbed.

Near the corner of Adams and Conant streets, in the city of Portage, is another hallowed spot. For years, it was the happy hunting-ground for good dead Indians with friends to bury them. Here it was that the bones of Peter Panquette were placed only to be removed to make way for civilization's feet.

Silver Lake Cemetery.—With a public spirit and generosity deserving all commendation, H. S. Haskell and J. B. Fargo in 1856 set off forty acres of a farm, of which they were owners, for cemetery purposes. Previous to this time, there had been provided no resting-place for the dead of this city, and the wise forethought of these men was, doubtless, appreciated by the citizens. "Silver Lake Cemetery," as it was called, is a romantic upland spot, about one mile from the business center of the city, overlooking Wisconsin River on the one hand, and the pure and placid Silver Lake on the other. There are few spots devoted to such purposes more lovely than this, and none in the city that could be so readily beautified by the hand of man. In the winter of 1856-57, the Legislature of the State passed an act providing that Harrison S. Haskell and Jerome B. Fargo, and their associates, be organized as a body corporate, under the name of the "Silver Lake Cemetery Association." The lands set off by them were to be held and forever used solely and exclusively for the burial of the dead, and to be exempt from taxation and execution. The officers of the association were to consist of a President, Secretary and Treasurer, who were to be an ex officio board of directors. The first person buried in the cemetery was a Mr. Snow, in the spring of 1857. In 1867, considerable feeling was raised on account of an advertisement appearing in the city papers, offering the grounds for sale under a railroad mortgage given by the owner before it came into the hands of Haskell & Fargo; but, before the day of sale, Mr. Haskell paid off the mortgage, thus freeing it from all incumbrances. In 1867, the property was deeded to Mrs. Haskell. From August, 1857, to April, 1880, there had been about 525 interments, an average of 25 per year.

German Cemetery Association.—On the 30th of March, 1862, an association was organized for the purpose of providing indigent Germans a place for the burial of their dead. Christian Schultz, Charles Haertel and Andrew Kiefer were elected Trustees. Twenty-five lots were purchased in the Silver Lake Cemetery and set apart for their use. The first there buried was a child named August Helm. From March, 1862, to April, 1880, there were fifty-three interments. Matt. Brand, Peter Neiss and Andrew Keifer were Trustees at the latter date.

PORTAGE OF TO-DAY.

When the city adjusts its glasses fifty years hence to read of those who have passed away, the following account of Portage, in 1880, will be of interest:

Agricultural Implements.—James Gowran, Hugh O. Lewis, George Port.

Abstracts.—Smith & Dering.

Attorneys.—E. S. Baker, Harvey Briggs, J. Brickwell, G. J. Cox, Curtis & Curtis, D. J. Dalton, Thomas L. Kennan, J. H. Rogers, James B. Taylor.

Auctioneers.—John Bean, Stephen Turner, Daniel Wells.

- Bakeries.*—Edward Fink, Henry Fink and Michael Huber.
- Banks.*—City Bank of Portage and German Exchange Bank.
- Barbers.*—Deabolt Blass, H. Hildebrand, F. F. Hofmann and A. Kiefer.
- Baths.*—Dr. Minnie Hurlbut.
- Bed Springs.*—R. W. McIntyre, Jr.
- Billiards.*—John Dullaghan, Henry Emden, W. D. Fox and A. E. Smith.
- Blacksmiths.*—James Collins, G. C. Jackson, H. O. Lewis and R. J. Lloyd.
- Boots and Shoes.*—William Beattie, James Brodie, George Brown, Joseph Ludwig and John Williamson.
- Breweries.*—Henry Epstein and estate of Charles Hærtel.
- Brickmakers.*—William Armstrong, Affeldt & Gonten, and Sanborn & Maloy.
- Butchers.*—John Bryan, Anton Klenert, George Krech and Julius Mettler.
- Carriage Manufacturer.*—George C. Jackson.
- Cheese Factory.*—N. H. Wood.
- Cigar Factories.*—John U. Sanderson and F. Scherbert.
- Commission Merchants.*—Thomas W. Drew and Alexander Thompson.
- Contractors and Builders.*—A. Carnagie, R. C. Holmes, George Hurst, Peter Mahon, Charles Moll, Charles Prehn, Sanborn & Maloy, Patrick Sheehan.
- Cooperage.*—John Duerr and John Mueller.
- Dentistry.*—W. H. C. Abell and T. B. Fetcher.
- Dressmaking.*—Mrs. John Bean, Anna Ferguson, Annie Jordan, Mrs. Larowe, Maggie Lindsay, Dora Meyer, Clara M. Reed, and Misses Rumann & Jøerrison.
- Drugs, etc.*—John Graham, E. C. Maine, J. E. Parrott and E. S. Purdy.
- Express.*—S. S. McDuffie.
- Flour and Feed.*—Jacob Cole, Dates Brothers, N. M. Henry, Hughes & Thayer, and Daniel Wells.
- Flour Mill.*—M. DeWitt Older.
- Foundry.*—James Fyfe & Co.
- Furniture Manufacturers.*—P. S. Hollenbeck and George Murison.
- General Stores.*—Ernsperger & Co., E. L. Jæger, Loomis, Gallett & Breese, Mohr Brothers, Parry & Muir, Paul Schumann, Schumacher & Schulze, and N. H. Wood.
- Gloves and Mittens.*—Charles Baum.
- Grain Dealers.*—A. C. Flander and R. B. Wentworth.
- Grocers.*—E. O. Blackmar, John Dullaghan, C. P. Etten, William Fulton, Hermann Brothers, N. M. Henry, A. S. Johnson, H. L. Kind, Otto Krisch, Patrick Lennon, Madden Brothers, McDuffie & Goss, Patrick McGinn, Martin Moran, Morrison Brothers, William Neimeyer, T. D. Pugh & Co., Alexander Thompson and Frank Yanko.
- Hardware.*—W. W. Corning, J. Purnell, Schulze Brothers, and J. E. Wells & Co.
- Harness.*—William G. Bunker, Charles Kaiser and H. C. Thede.
- Hotels.*—Bartosz Hotel, S. Bartosz; City Hotel, Gage Brothers; Corning House, A. E. Smith; Emden House, Henry Emden; Farmers' Home, John Hettinger, Fox House, W. D. Fox; Prun House, Byron Prun.
- Insurance.*—Thomas Armstrong, Jr., Dering & Smith, Valentine Helmann, James Lawson, Rolleston & Marsh, Schulze & Sprecher, N. K. Shattuck.
- Jewelry.*—Bard & Reed, J. C. Forbes, Turner & Parsons.
- Leather.*—William Beattie, James Brodie, Joseph Ludwig and John Williamson.
- Lime.*—John Gonten, A. S. Johnson, and Schumacher & Schulze.
- Livery.*—George N. Gates, Henry Little and D. D. Porter.
- Lumber.*—Carnagie, Prescott & Co., F. H. Lewis and Nathan H. Wood.
- Marble Yards.*—H. Doherty and Groth & Stolzer.
- Millinery.*—Mrs. C. B. Chancellor, Mrs. S. M. Gallett, Miss McKenna, Miss P. Moll, Miss L. Rolleston and Mrs. E. Weir.

Ministers.—F. W. Hall, Methodist; Chr. A. Hauck, German Evangelist (Trinity); George P. Guild, Baptist; Thomas Keenan, Catholic; Charles T. Sasan, Episcopal; L. H. Mitchell, Presbyterian; A. Tarnutzer, Evangelical Association; B. J. Zahn, Evangelical Lutheran; Mr. Charmley, Free Methodist; John Zastronkowski, German Catholic.

Newspapers.—Columbia County Weeker, G. A. Selbach; Portage Democrat, Irving Bath; Wisconsin State Register, Clark & Goodell.

Painting.—W. W. Bullard, F. Barbach, E. H. Dewey, F. W. Foogmann, George Jowett, Charles Meyer, John Romdenne.

Peltries.—Arthur Brothers and J. Ludwig.

Photography.—S. L. Plumb and J. A. & A. L. Witter.

Physicians.—Mrs. Minnie Hurlbut, J. Cavaney, A. C. Kellogg, E. C. Maine, William Meacher, James Prentice and A. Schloemilch.

Picture Frames.—Z. J. D. Swift.

Pianos and Organs.—Abraham Padley.

Postmaster.—Charles C. Dow.

Printers.—Irving Bath, Clark & Goodell and G. A. Selbach.

Railroad Agents.—Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, A. C. Flanders; Wisconsin Central, R. E. Holston.

Saloons.—Achterberg & Schœk, Corning House, Emdor House, Henry Epstein, Farmers' Home, Fox House, Jacob Gauthi, Haertel Brewery, Henry James, Keegan & Michel and C. Koberstein.

Shoemakers.—John Marshall, John Metzler, J. W. Rice, Patrick Riley, A. B. Thompson and T. Venzke.

Stock Dealers.—A. M. Craig and Reid & Foster.

Tailors.—A. Ahrendt, P. Goodman, E. H. Hughes, August Kœnig and Loomis, Gallett & Breese.

Wagon Making.—Collins & Hensel, G. C. Jackson, Elijah Johnson and Lewis & Bauer.

Wall Paper.—John B. Dassi and John Graham.

CHAPTER XI.

THE CITY OF COLUMBUS.

FIRST SETTLEMENT—COLUMBUS TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO—GOVERNMENT—PLATS AND ADDITIONS—THE COLUMBUS POST OFFICE—THE SCHOOLS—RELIGIOUS INSTITUTIONS—MANUFACTURING INTERESTS—BANKS—COLUMBUS LIBRARY ASSOCIATION—HOTELS—COLUMBUS OPERA HOUSE—THE FIRE DEPARTMENT—LODGES AND SOCIETIES—CEMETERIES—LOCAL REMINISCENCES—TRAVEL NOW AND THEN.

FIRST SETTLEMENT.

Elbert Dickason was the first settler upon territory within the boundary limits of what is now the city of Columbus; and this brave and stalwart old frontiersman first sought this place as his abode, in 1839. He came hither under an agreement with Lewis Ludington, as the purchaser from the latter of a considerable tract of land on time. Erecting a small log cabin upon the west side of the Crawfish River, not far from the present site of the railroad depot, Dickason next turned his attention to the work of damming the stream and building a mill. He evidently came with the full determination of staying and making this his permanent home, for he brought with him a herd of cattle, a number of horses and a few wagons, with the necessary employed help to care for them and aid him in the improvements he set out to make. But, alas, misfortune bore heavily upon him. He lost most of his stock by the severity of the winter and the scarcity of food. Dickason, after many fruitless efforts to fulfill his part of the agreement with Ludington, relinquished his claim to the broad acres of fertile soil he had tamed from the wilderness. The saw-mill, which had been in successful operation for some time, also became the property of Ludington. Dickason received $200 in cash for his right and title to everything, and withdrew from the scenes of his greatest ambition comparatively penniless. It is said he spent nearly $10,000, all he had, of his own money in the enterprise.

There are but few men now living who knew Dickason in those days and witnessed his triumphs and disasters. Alexander McDonald, now a resident of Portage, says he was in the Major's cabin about the last of May, 1839. The house was of logs, covered with bark, and had Indian bedsteads around the sides. It had no floor or fireplace, but the fire was put against the logs at one end of the house, which was all burnt out. Dickason, Mr. McDonald thinks, built it the year before. McDonald stayed all night. The Major was absent, but his brother, the "Colonel," as he was called, was at home, and two Stroud boys, his nephews, were also there. Mrs. Dickason had not moved out yet. They slept on the ground wrapped up in Mackinaw blankets, with "smudges" around to keep off the mosquitoes. With Mr. McDonald were Daniel Hyer and Mr. Palmer, who came on from Madison—they having been hired by Maj. Dickason to get out timber for a saw-mill. They built a temporary shanty across the Crawfish, from Dickason's house, and went to work, while McDonald returned next day to Madison with the ox team.

Wayne B. Dyer, now of Durand, Pepin Co., was one of the earliest settlers in these parts. He came to Wisconsin in August, 1843, and when he passed over the present site of Columbus, the log cabin of Maj. Dickason, on the Crawfish, and that of Hiram Allen, not far from where the mill now is, constituted the entire village of Columbus. Mr. Dyer relates an incident in the experience of Dickason which illustrates the trials he bore. Once the "Major" got out of hay and was compelled to drive his cattle over to the vicinity of Beaver Dam, and chop down elm and basswood trees for them to feed or "browse" upon. This operation was called "grubbing it," and what is now known as Beaver Dam was then known as "Grubville." In that same spring of 1843, the deer lay dead upon the Crawfish—starved to death, because the deep snow prevented their getting any sustenance. Dyer was a great hunter and trapper in those days and killed many a deer in the vicinity of Columbus. Indeed, for years after his arrival he could start out almost any day and return with one. His lodge was seldom without venison. After Columbus had grown to be quite a village he saw several deer run across one of the principal streets. He trapped many otter, also, at that period along the Crawfish. Maj. Dickason passed through Otsego on his way to locate at Duck Creek, now Wyocena, the next day after Dyer was settled in his new home, and he took a primitive dinner with him.

Jeremiah Drake, as the agent of Mr. Ludington, succeeded Dickason in the management of early affairs in Columbus. He built the first frame house in the place. It stands near the mill and is known as the "mill house." Hiram Allen built the second frame house. It was afterward owned by Robert Mills, he having married the widow of Mr. Allen. From 1841 to 1846, the arrival of strangers who became permanent settlers was of almost daily occurrence. In 1841 Jacob Dickason, brother to the Major, settled near the latter's cabin. In 1842 came Noah Dickason, James Shackley, S. W. St. John and Mr. Baldwin. In 1843 arrived H. W. McCafferty, H. A. Whitney, Jeremiah and W. Drake, who settled just outside the village limits. Within a few miles of its site were located T. C. Smith, W. Stewart, B. Campbell and W. Wade. The year 1844 brought to the village Jacob Smith and the Stroud family, and to the immediate vicinity H. W. Hamilton, John Swarthout, H. Cady, A. Lashier, Mr. Edwards, and perhaps a few others. In 1845 there came to this frontier, for it was still so, J. T. Lewis, J. C. Axtell, D. E. Bassett, J. E. Arnold, Warren Loomis, W. C. Spencer, Jesse Rowell, E. Thayer, W. M. Clark, and some others, who settled in the village. The same year, A. P. Birdsey, Thomas Swarthout, the Barrows family and Zenas Robbins located in the vicinity.

In 1846, B. F. Hart and S. Wright came to the village, and the Adler family and R. Gamage settled near it.

Rev. C. E. Rosenkrans was the first minister in the village. J. T. Lewis was the first attorney, and Dr. J. C. Axtell was the first physician; they commenced practice in 1845, and the two occupied for some time the same office. The first tavern and the first store were opened by H. A. Whitney, and he was the first Postmaster, after a lively contest between his friends and those of Col. Drake. The second store was opened by J. E. Arnold and D. E. Bassett, in 1845. The first saw and grist mill was commenced by Maj. Dickason. B. F. Hart and S. Wright introduced in the community the ancient business of blacksmithing and working in iron. Hart & Wright sold the shop to Amasa Silsbee and J. Huntington, and years ago it was purchased by D. D. Kelsey. It is said that apparitions grim and ghastly made their periodical visits to this old shop before its removal. The clink of the sledge hammer told of times long gone by. Vulcan, who hammers out thunderbolts for Jupiter, is supposed to have had his headquarters at this antiquated forge. The first schoolhouse was built in 1846.

Several of the old settlers enjoy describing James T. Lewis as he appeared on his arrival. It was in July, 1845. He had left Orleans County, N. Y., a short time before, to find a home in the West. Arrived at Buffalo, he and Dr. Axtell made the trip around the lakes to Detroit together, and there parted. Lewis shortly after landed at Kenosha, and purchased himself a "mount" adapted to the vicissitudes of Wisconsin journeyings at that early period. It was an Indian pony of the value of $30 in the current money of the Republic, and was correspondingly caparisoned. On this "steed" he set out along the lake shore toward Green Bay. Civilization had scarcely more than begun to touch the Western coast, and as he passed along through the rude and hardly discernible beginnings of the future cities and villages of the State, it is probable he did not imagine that in less than twenty years the population of Wisconsin would approach a million, and that he would be its chief magistrate, during a portion of its history so important as two years of the rebellion. At that date Oshkosh, had made a slight start, and Neenah and Appleton were only in embryo. Fond du Lac was a small village, Green Bay was an old French trading post antedating Milwaukee, and that whole portion of the State gave little promise of its near hereafter. Turning his Bucephalus southward, Lewis was told at Fond du Lac that he would find another village about twelve or thirteen miles distant. This was the Waupun of the present day, that name meaning in the poetic Indian tongue "break of day."* Having ridden about the distance mentioned, he inquired at a solitary log house by the roadside how far it was to the village, and was told that he was in the very midst of it. Beaver Dam was then a little village. There were some hints of a road between Columbus and there, and along it Lewis made his way, much of his journey having been by the trail. He found four houses only in Columbus. It was upon the termination of this journey, on the travel-worn pony, and with the evidences of the trail and the bush about himself, that the oldest settlers obtained their first impressions of the future Governor, which they retain to this day. It is noticeable that Dr. Axtell, who had come from Detroit by the way of Chicago, and from that settlement across to Columbus, arrived the same day that Lewis did. The doctor was a man whom to see once was to remember always; and he is still mentioned as the very model of manly beauty, and as being possessed of unusual intellectual endowments.

RES. OF C. D. STILES TOWN OF HAMPDEN SEC. 23 COLUMBIA CO.

RES. OF ELIJAH FEDERLY SEC. 35 TOWN OF COLUMBUS.

COLUMBUS TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO.

The first copy of the Columbus Journal, dated in February, 1855, contained an article on "Columbus as it is," from which it is learned the village then claimed 800 inhabitants, and possessed a surpassingly beautiful location. Emphasis is placed upon the fact that, while other villages suffered from the cholera, the Asiatic destroyer had never had a victim in Columbus. We are further told that the village had advanced rapidly within two or three years, and that its growth had been sure and steady. It had already seven stores, with two or three more to be opened in the spring. There was a drug store, a good flouring-mill, a saw-mill, two wagon-shops, one of which had made a hundred wagons, and the other fifty, during the year previous; three groceries and provision stores, two hotels, four blacksmith shops, three boot and shoe stores, three tailor shops, one jewelry store and one harness-shop. The Congregational Church was building, and it was thought the coming spring would lay the foundations of Methodist and Universalist houses of worship. To show the business done, the writer states that during the preceding four months, 35,000 bushels of wheat and 147 tons of pork had been bought. One-half of this was purchased by one firm. The writer of the article mentions the high price paid for produce, and the low price to which competition had reduced goods, and adverts to the advancing value of real estate, and the good policy of immediately securing good locations. The Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway was built to Oconomowoc, would reach Watertown in the spring, and soon be finished to Columbus. The writer also understands that a railroad would soon be constructed from Chicago, and that the contract as far as Columbus was already let. In looking over the directory to see who were the business men, we find H. W. McCafferty keeping the Columbus Exchange Hotel, at the corner of James and Ludington streets; A. P. Birdsey is the landlord of the Mountain House; Isaac Robinson is a land agent and dealer in real estate, on James street; R. Thomas & Son have a rough and ready store; and next to them is J. McConnell, tailor; one door below him is Franklin F. Fowler, saddler and harness-maker; J. Colville has a cabinet shop; B. F. Hart is a dealer in groceries and provisions; E. Silsbee has to do with dry-goods; Farnham & Allen deal in the same commodities, at their old store on James street, and so do Griswold & Co. at their present corner; while on the opposite corner, in the same line of trade, is H. C. Cooper, in the rear of whose store J. Smith is a merchant tailor; next door west, R. W. Chadbourn is Justice of the Peace; next to the "Columbus Recess," whatever that was, S. McLarty has a tailor shop, while in the rear of that unknown Alhambra, H. A. Whitney has a livery stable; under Cooper's, one Carl Sampson consumes his strength in the management of an oyster saloon; J. P. Atwood is a cooper, on James street, below S. McLarty's; J. Williams is a cabinet-maker, at the corner of James and Waterloo streets; J. S. Manning grinds the Columbus Mills; Spencer & Buxton are carriage and wagon makers on James street, and next door above, D. D. Kelsey is a village blacksmith; O. H. Hammond is a daguerrean artist, over Bassett's brick store, on James street; moreover, F. W. Maynard sells groceries and provisions; C. W. Dean has a farmers' store; Silsbee & Swarthout are druggists; J. B. Ingalls & Co. are jewelers, in the rear of Cooper's, and J. S. Haines has a shoe shop in the same block, which seems to have been a sort of omnibus; William Drake has a wagon-shop on Ludington street; T. Bottom is maker of shoes on that avenue, and Mrs. Dayton has a boot and shoe store on that street; Mrs. N. Bissell has a millinery shop at her residence; Nelson Adams advertises to cure the public homeopathically, from his residence in West Columbus; Dr. Tucker is a botanic physician, office at his residence, No. 2 Broadway; A. G. Cook is an attorney and counselor; Drs. Earll and J. C. Axtell are physicians, and A. J. Willson is a dentist—all doing business one door north of Cooper's store.

* Waupun, in this case corrupted to Waupun, was the Indian word for "the early day."—Ed.

GOVERNMENT.

Prior to May, 1864, Columbus was under town government. The villagers took part in town affairs, and those residing "in the country" had a voice in all that pertained to the government of the villagers. But there came a time when the interests of these two classes of residents were not identical, when the requirements of one were not to the advantage of the other, and vice versa. The remedy came in the shape of a village charter, and Columbus was incorporated as a village by the provisions of an act passed by the State Legislature, approved March, 30, 1864. The boundaries were set forth to be all of Section 13, except the southeast quarter of the southeast quarter, and the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter; all that part of the south half of the south half of Section 12 included within the village plat of the town of Columbus and the several additions thereto; the northeast quarter of the southeast quarter of Section 14, all in Town 10, Range 12.

Section 3 provided that "the elective officers of said corporation shall be one president, four trustees, one marshal and one treasurer, to be elected annually on the first Tuesday in May." During the ten years it remained a village the following officers were elected:

1864—President, R. W. Chadbourn; Trustees, F. F. Farnham, Silas Axtell, John Hasey and Thomas Smith.

1865—President, R. W. Chadbourn; Trustees, John Hasey, E. S. Griswold, G. T. Dodge and Thomas Smith; Treasurer, Milo J. Ingalls; Marshal, B. F. Hart.

1866—President, W. W. Drake; Trustees, E. S. Griswold, J. A. Erhart, G. W. Campbell and Joseph E. Churchill; Treasurer, J. P. Miller; Marshal, M. B. Misner.

1867—President, F. F. Farnham; Trustees, D. F. Newcomb, Julius Fox, J. S. Manning and A. J. Whitcomb.

1868—President, Daniel E. Bassett; Trustees, John Swarthout, L. J. Sawyer, John Quincy Adams and Julius Fox.

1869—President, Daniel E. Bassett; Trustees, J. S. Manning, J. Q. Adams, L. J. Sawyer and Joseph Schaeffer.

1870—President, W. M. Griswold; Trustees, Frank Huggins, M. G. St. John, Joseph Schaeffer and J. M. G. Price; Treasurer, Milo Ingalls; Marshal, O. M. Dering.

1871—President, J. S. Manning; Trustees—F. Huggins, L. J. Sawyer, Joseph Schaeffer and James F. Allen; Treasurer, Milo Ingalls; Marshal, Adam McConnell.

1872—President, Frank Huggins; Trustees, L. J. Sawyer, Joseph Schaeffer, E. E. Chapin and James F. Allen; Treasurer, James Lowth; Marshal, A. J. Whitcomb.

1873—President, Frank Huggins; Trustees, E. E. Chapin, L. J. Sawyer, Joseph Schaeffer and James F. Allen; Treasurer, James Lowth; Marshal, A. J. Whitcomb.

From the organization of Columbus as a village to its incorporation as a city, Charles L. Dering, now a resident of Portage, acted as Clerk.

Incorporated as a City.—There had been considerable agitation of the question of incorporating as a city, on account of the difficulty encountered in filling a village charter to the requirements of a city de facto. In the month of December, 1873, the question began to take form, and a determination to organize under city charter was the result. Between the last meeting of the Board of Trustees, in December, and the first meeting in January, the question was quite thoroughly canvassed among the leading citizens and heavy tax-payers of the city, and the general opinion seemed to prevail that the better plan would be to organize anew under a city government, and accordingly, on the 6th of January, it was unanimously resolved, by a full board, "that a charter be drafted to incorporate the city of Columbus, and that it be made the special order of the next regular meeting."

A petition was drawn by the Clerk, circulated and generally signed by the prominent men and tax-payers within the proposed corporate limits. On the 20th of January, 1874, it being the next regular meeting of the Village Board, "the special order" was taken up. A city charter, in the mean time, in the main, had been agreed upon. The boundaries, however, had not been fully determined. For a number of reasons, it was thought best to extend the limits to embrace the south half of Sections 11 and 12, the west half of Sections 13 and 14, and the north half of the north half of Sections 23 and 24, provided that the persons living on the same were willing, and the board adjourned till the 21st. The parties were seen and nearly all acquiesced in the proposed change. At the meeting of the board, January 21, several of the prominent citizens were present. Amendments were proposed and considered. Suggestions were made, and the board adjourned till the 22d. The petition, in the mean time, was publicly circulated and generally signed, not by people outside the proposed city limits, but by actual residents, by those most interested.

The charter was finished on the 23d. A memorial of the Village Board to the Legislature was also prepared. Mr. Huggins, President of the Village Board, and E. E. Chapin were authorized to repair to Madison with the memorial and bill, and procure the necessary legislation thereon. February 3d, the memorial was introduced into the Senate, when that order of business was reached: likewise the "bill to incorporate the city of Columbus." The bill was read the first and second times and referred to the Committee on Incorporations. The bill, being very lengthy, was not printed till Thursday afternoon, February 5, and was laid on the desks of members on the morning of the 6th, at which time all the extra copies of the printed bill were obtained for the purpose of distribution. These copies, some seventeen of them, were distributed among the residents as soon as possible, that errors might be corrected, amendments proposed, and the charter perfected as near as possible while the same was before the committee, who had agreed not to report it back till the next week.

On the 9th, the board met, at which time nearly every gentleman with whom the printed bill had been left appeared and suggested amendments, corrected errors, and aided in perfecting the bill for its passage. At this meeting, Messrs. Huggins, Chadbourn and Chapin were appointed a committee to appear before the Senate Committee on Incorporations, on the 12th, with the proposed amendments. At the morning session of the Senate, "a remonstrance of the citizens of Columbia County against a bill to incorporate the city of Columbus" was presented, and on the afternoon of that day the committee appointed by the Village Board appeared before the Senate Committee on Incorporations, and presented the several proposed amendments, also urging a favorable report from the committee. The Chairman of Town Board of Supervisors also appeared before the Senate committee, and was decidedly opposed to the whole thing.

On Tuesday, the 17th, the Senate committee reported the bill back, unanimously recommending its passage, whereupon it was ordered engrossed for a third reading, and on the 18th it passed the Senate unanimously, and was messaged to the Assembly and passed without a dissenting vote. On the 23d, it was reported correctly enrolled, and on the 24th was signed by Lieut. Gov. Parker, messaged to the Assembly, signed by Speaker Bouck, returned to the Senate, then sent to the Governor, who, after a careful, critical reading, approved the bill on the 26th, when it became a law, and thus Columbus became a city, a municipal corporation by the name of "the city of Columbus."

In accordance with the provisions of the charter, the boundaries of the city were set off as follows: The south half of Section 11, the south half of Section 12, all of Section 13, all of Section 14, the north half of the north half of Section 23, and the north half of the north half of Section 24, all being in Town 10, Range 12. The above-described territory was divided into three wards, and it was provided that elections be held the first Tuesday of April in each year. Section 2 of the charter provided that "the elective officers of said city shall be a Mayor, a Treasurer, an Assessor and a Police Justice, elected for and by the city at large, and three Aldermen; one supervisor, to represent his ward in the Board of Supervisors of Columbia County; one Justice of the Peace and one Constable, to be elected by and for each ward." A subsequent amendment to the charter repealed the clause providing for the election of a Police Justice, and the duties formerly devolving upon that officer, are now performed by the Ward Justices. The city officers elected since the incorporation are:

1874—L. J. Sawyer, Mayor; H. Rowell, Police Justice; H. D. James, Treasurer; John C. Hoppin, Assessor. Aldermen—First Ward, R. W. Chadbourn, E. D. Kanouse, Joseph Schaeffer; Second Ward, John Hasey, J. S. Manning, Frank Huggins; Third Ward, C. A. Colonius, J. Topp, Frederick Hanneman. John Topp removed in July, and A. G. Cook was elected to fill vacancy. City Clerk, C. L. Dering; Marshal, O. M. Dering. Justice of the Peace—Third Ward, E. V. Briesen. (Other Justices of the Peace did not qualify.)

1875—L. J. Sawyer, Mayor; Michael Adams, Police Justice; W. G. Bresee, Treasurer; John C. Hoppin, Assessor. Aldermen—First Ward, R. W. Chadbourn, E. D. Kanouse, Joseph Schaeffer; Second Ward, John Hasey, J. S. Manning, D. C. Davies; Third Ward, A. G. Cook, F. Hannemann, August Krause. City Clerk, E. V. Briesen; Marshal, O. M. Dering.

1876—W. M. Griswold, Mayor; Michael Adams, Police Justice; Chas. A. Colonius, Treasurer; H. A. Lueders, Assessor. Aldermen—First Ward, R. W. Chadbourn, E. D. Kanouse, M. G. St. John; Second Ward, John Hasey, J. S. Manning, D. C. Davies; Third Ward, A. G. Cook, F. Hannemann, August Krause. Alderman Krause removed out of the ward in May, 1876, vacancy not filled. City Clerk, E. V. Briesen; Marshal, Alfred Miller; Justice, E. V. Briesen, Third Ward.

1877—O. E. Cornwell, Mayor; M. Adams, Police Justice; C. A. Colonius, Treasurer; L. Birdsey, Assessor. Aldermen—First Ward, W. G. Bresee, E. D. Kanouse, M. G. St. John; Second Ward, John Hasey, D. C. Davies, August Krause; Third Ward, H. C. Fields, C. Ulm, F. Hannemann. City Clerk, E. V. Briesen; Marshal, A. McConnell; Justice, First Ward, Hy. Annis (for one year).

1878—O. E. Cornwell, Mayor; C. A. Colonius, Treasurer; L. Birdsey, Assessor. Aldermen—First Ward, W. G. Bresee, E. D. Kanouse, M. G. St. John; Second Ward, John Hasey, R. D. Vanaken, August Krause; Third Ward, H. C. Fields, C. Ulm, F. Hannemann. City Clerk, E. V. Briesen; Marshal, A. McConnell; Justices—First Ward, H. Annir; Third Ward, E. V. Briesen.

1879—O. E. Cornwell, Mayor; C. A. Colonius, Treasurer; L. Birdsey, Assessor. Aldermen—First Ward, W. G. Bresee, E. D. Kanouse, R. W. Chadbourn; Second Ward, John Hasey, R. D. Vanaken, August Krause; Third Ward, H. C. Fields, C. Ulm, C. Leitsch. City Clerk, E. V. Briesen; Marshal, O. M. Dering.

1880—O. E. Cornwell, Mayor; C. A. Colonius, Treasurer; L. Birdsey, Assessor. Aldermen—First Ward, W. M. Griswold, E. D. Kanouse, R. W. Chadbourn; Second Ward, John Hasey, R. D. Vanaken, August Krause; Third Ward, C. Ulm, C. Leitsch, J. A. Erhart. City Clerk, E. V. Briesen; Marshal, H. W. McCafferty; Justices—First Ward, J. R. Decker; Third Ward, E. V. Briesen.

The original plat of the town of Columbus, embracing the four corners, the town pump, and a few acres, has from necessity been extended in either direction, and now covers hundreds of acres. Instead of only "the cross roads," are now scores of streets lined with maple, elm, linden and poplar shade trees, at sight, beautiful and attractive. Modest dwelling-houses, handsome cottages and splendid mansions, surrounded by lawn, trees, shrubs, flowers and cultivated gardens are now seen, in place of the rude structure and unbroken, uncultivated soil of early days.

PLATS AND ADDITIONS.

From the records at the Recorder's office, in Portage, it appears that the first plat of Columbus, called Ludington's Plat, and containing Blocks 1 to 9, was recorded in Brown County, on the 11th of November, 1844. The next plat made was of Ludington's Addition, Blocks 10 to 13, recorded in Columbia County August 6, 1849. On the 3d of October, 1850, Mr. Ludington made a second addition to the original plat, covering Blocks 14 to 19. In 1869, all that portion of this addition lying between Blocks 17 and 18, and as much as had been purchased by the railroad company for depot purposes, was vacated. Other additions have been made, as follows: Birdsey's Addition, Blocks 1 to 9, January 3, 1854; Birdsey's Addition, Blocks 10 to 27, June 4, 1855—Blocks 20 and 21, vacated December 1, 1868; Ingalsbe's Addition, April 9, 1856; Farnham & Co.'s Addition, June 25, 1856; Mills' Addition, July 3, 1856—vacated March, 1861; Manning's Addition, in August, 1856; Warner's Addition, September 29, 1856—vacated December 1, 1868, all except Blocks 1 and 5; Williams' Addition, March 4, 1857—all but Blocks 1, 15 and 29, vacated, in March, 1861; Warner & Fuller's Addition, May 12, 1857—vacated in 1868, except Block 6; Whitney's Addition, April 28, 1857; Thyng's Addition, August 8, 1857; Laura Gibbon's Addition, October 28, 1858; Butterfield's Addition, 1878.

The plat (J. T. Lewis) of the village of West Columbus was recorded June 10, 1854, in Vol. 10 of Deeds, on pages 107 and 208, in Register's office of Columbia County. The plat of Lewis' First Addition to the town of West Columbus, recorded August 8, 1856, in Vol. 17 of Deeds, on page 324.

THE COLUMBUS POST OFFICE.

Reference to this subject takes the pioneer back to the period when the only communication between Columbus and Beaver Dam was a mere Indian trail and the only means of transportation the backs of Indian ponies. Before the establishment of the postal route from Green Bay to Madison there existed a primitive line from Aztalan to the portage. Letters were dropped at Columbus by the carrier, who made the distance on horseback, and when any of the residents went to the "village of the mounds" they brought back letters to such of the neighbors as were fortunate enough to have any addressed to them. Late in 1845, a post office was established at Columbus with a weekly mail. There was an animated contest as to who should be the first Postmaster. The friends of Col. Drake and those of H. A. Whitney were equally active and made every exertion in their behalf. The latter, however, received the appointment. He shortly after went to the pineries on business, and in his absence the duties of the office were performed by Sylvester Corbin, more familiarly known in after years as "old Hyson." Corbin carried the mail about the place in his hat, except when out with his gun hunting prairie chickens. On such occasions, he would leave the contents of the "office" with Gov. Lewis. The first post office was kept in a low, flat-roofed building which stood nearly opposite the present site of Schaeffer's brick block, and which subsequently became one of the out-buildings of the Whitney House. F. F. Farnham, who came to Columbus about this time, thus describes it: "The apartment was partitioned by the aid of blankets, and in the room lay 'old Hyson' prone upon a bed, shivering with the ague. In one corner stood a barrel of whisky, a grocery much in vogue in those days, and in another was a 7x9 glass box, the contents of which constituted the post office, which the inquirer after mail rummaged at his leisure."

Josiah Arnold next became Postmaster, in the spring of 1847, and kept the office in a building which stood where the store of Bassett & Davies now stands. Arnold was familiarly known as "Captain Spraker" by reason of his connection with the famous "Old Guard," an organization more un-matrimonial than military. James E. Eaton is the next on the list. He was appointed in Fillmore's time, and is said to have been a cousin of that President, who wrote asking him what appointment he desired. He chose the incumbency of the Columbus Post Office. He was Justice of the Peace and kept the two offices together in a building which stood on the lot afterward occupied by the harness-shop of J. A. Erlhart. Eaton went to California in 1850, having resigned in favor of D. F. Newcomb, who shortly afterward removed the office to Griswold's store. Addison Griswold became Postmaster under President Pierce, but Mr. Newcomb remained with him for some time and attended to the business. The office was afterward removed to the building which then stood where is now situated John Swarthout's brick drug store. When Buchanan's administration came into power, A. G. Cook became the appointee and removed the office to the present site of Winler's jewelry store, into a building which had formerly been used by Mr. Farnham when Register of Deeds, and which was moved from its original foundations to make room for Farnham's old red store, which was in turn moved to Sargent's corner, to make room for Schaeffer's brick block. In 1859, Mr. Cook built what is now used as a millinery shop by Mrs. Dering and removed thither. Under Lincoln's first administration Frank Huggins was made Postmaster. When he first took possession he occupied the structure formerly used by Griswold as Postmaster, but in 1868 he moved the office into his new drug store. In May, 1869, John Swarthout was appointed to the position of Postmaster, and has held the office ever since, his long tenure being evidence of his ability. The Columbus Post Office was made a money-order office in 1867, the first order being issued September 9 of that year. Frank Huggins, the Postmaster, was the remitter and W. D. Ogden, of Chicago, the payee, the amount being $10. The number of orders issued up to March 31, 1880, is 18,415. H. D. James, who has been Assistant Postmaster for nearly twelve years, furnishes the following interesting statistics, which are in marked contrast with the number of letters it was the wont of "old Hyson" to carry in his hat: "The number of letters received at the office delivery during the year 1879 is estimated at 72,125; postal cards at 35,420. Number of letters mailed, 63,480; postals, 32,540. The number of stamps sold was 8,470 1-cent, 1,756 2-cent, 56,738 3-cent, 921 5-cent, 416 6-cent, 592 10-cent, 83 15-cent, 41 30-cent and 24,391 postal cards; stamped envelopes 11,410 and stamped newspaper wrappers 2,307. The discrepancy between the amount of postal cards sold and the amount mailed is caused by the large number mailed by traveling men which are furnished them by the houses for which they travel.

THE SCHOOLS.

The citizens of Columbus enjoy school privileges excelled by few cities in the State. These educational advantages were not attained all at once, nor without much effort. There is a fund of local history associated with their growth. It is said that Columbus never possessed a log schoolhouse. That rough cradle of learning, which many distinguished men recall in the glamour that memory throws around boyhood as their only alma mater, never reared its rugged exterior in the community. The old schoolhouse which stood on Ludington street was built in 1846, at a cost of $400. It was the scene of many varying events, often doing duty as a church, town hall, etc. Political harangues and religious exhortations, and much very far from kin to the latter, found voice within its walls. It saw festivity and mourning, and is itself fast coming to grief.

In this seat of learning a school-meeting was held in November, 1849, at which J. J. Guppy was Chairman, and F. F. Farnham, Clerk pro tem. On that evening, pursuant to a notice, an election for district officers was held, and Robert Mills was elected Director; J. T. Lewis was elected Treasurer, and H. S. Haskell, Clerk. At that same meeting, several resolutions passed which may be of some interest at this date, by way of comparison; $10 were voted to procure seats for the schoolhouse. It was voted to have four months' winter school, with a male teacher. On the succeeding page is a report of the District Clerk to the Town Superintendent, which states that on the 1st of September, 1850, there were residing in the district (No. 2) forty-seven male and forty-five female persons, between the age of four and twenty years; that sixty-six pupils attended during the winter term, and sixty-two during the summer; E. E. Randall taught four months, and Agnes N. Butts five months; the former was paid $100, and the latter $56; the amount of money received from the Town Superintendent was $91.50, and the amount raised by the district was $80. The text-books used during the school were Sanders' Speller, Sanders' Series of Readers, Rhetorical Reader, New Testament, Colburn's Arithmetic, Morse's Geography, Smith's small Geography of the Heavens, and Comstock's Philosophy.

By way of contrast, let us examine the report made by the Clerk of the district, in August, 1868. We find that there were then residing in the district 296 male and 321 female persons, between the ages of four and twenty, and the total number of pupils who attended during the year was 455. The school property in the district was appraised at $9,500, and during the year, the district paid to a male teacher $960, and to female teachers $1,637, a total of $2,597.

In running over these musty pages, we discover the names of several persons, spoken of as teachers, who have since become quite prominent before the public—Garrit T. Thorn, since then a Senator from Jefferson County, once taught in the old schoolhouse, as did John A. Elliot, since State Auditor of Iowa, and Dr. Laura D. Ross, who afterward took so active a part in the woman's rights movements, and several others.

In 1853, the number of males between four and twenty years was 100, and of females 185. The number who attended during the year was 173, and the total expenditure was $321.50.

At a meeting held in February, 1856, the expediency and necessity for building a new schoolhouse was considered. It was resolved that J. T. Lewis be authorized to apply to the Legislature for the passage of an act authorizing District No. 2, of Columbus, to loan money of the school fund, and that C. W. Dean, C. E. Rosenkrans, A. G. Cook, W. W. Drake and William McCracken, be a committee to confer with the State Superintendent of Schools and others, respecting plans and expenses of a suitable school building. In a resolution immediately following, the proximity of the Milwaukee & Watertown Railroad to the then site of the school is the only reason assigned for erecting a new building. But it was not until 1857 that the contest concerning a new building was fairly opened; and it was among the liveliest passages-at-arms ever known in the community. It continued and waxed hot, until about January, 1859, when the contract for building was awarded. Meetings were held in that interim, sometimes on alternate nights. There was occasionally manifested a careless audacity concerning the requirements of parliamentary law. The records, however, give little idea of the real animation of these occasions. According to the minutes, it was first voted to raise $3,000, for a building and site, and a committee, consisting of A. G. Cook, C. E. Rosenkrans and William M. Lewis, was appointed to select the latter. Two weeks after, it was voted to authorize the purchase of a portion of Newcomb's Nursery lots, and a fortnight later the vote was rescinded, as was also the vote to raise $3,000. This was in November, 1857. In October, 1858, another special meeting is recorded, when it was again resolved to procure a site and erect a union schoolhouse, the site to be the Newcomb lots, and $2,000 to be raised. A building committee, consisting of A. G. Cook, J. B. Folsom, F. M. Black, William L. Lewis and F. F. Farnham, was appointed, to procure land and contract the building, not to exceed $6,000 in cost. On November 20, succeeding, the adverse party called a meeting to consider and modify the action last taken. It was reported that a contract had already been made, but a motion was made to rescind the action taken at the last meeting. The chairman, William L. Lewis, declared the motion out of order. An appeal was taken from this decision, and the chair was not sustained. The motion to rescind was then put and carried, by a vote of fifty-nine to forty-nine. A division of the house was then called for, pending which the chair abruptly declared the meeting adjourned, and, as the official chronicler of the event says, "amid confusion the Chairman retired." A. Topliff was then elected Chairman, and a new building committee appointed, consisting of J. B. Folsom, William M. Griswold, H. J. Waterhouse, J. T. Lewis, Robert Mills, F. F. Farnham, Amos Clement and F. M. Black. At a subsequent meeting, William Griswold presented the majority report of this committee, in favor of two smaller-sized buildings, and J. T. Lewis a minority report, in favor of one large one. The latter was finally adopted, and the present site was finally selected, and purchased of R. W. Chadbourn, for $1,000. The building was completed the same year, John Haydon fulfilling the contract for $5,000.

As illustrating the growth of the schools the following figures from the records of Superintendent Bowen are given: In 1861, the number of male children between the age of four and twenty years residing in the district was 228: female, 225; making a total of 453. Of this number 292 attended school. The receipts for school purposes during this year were $2,430, $1,825 being raised by tax. In 1865, the total number of children in the district was 576, there being 16 more females than of the sterner sex, and in 1871 there were 640, the females being in the majority 38; receipts, $5,430. The salaries of teachers this year amounted to $2,821. In 1879, there were 697 resident children of school age in the district, 23 being the preponderance in favor of the females. The receipts for the school year of 1880 were $4,829, $3,500 of which was paid out for teachers' salaries.

The most important feature of the school history of Columbus is that embracing the free high-school system now in vogue. The act of February 26, 1874, incorporating the City of Columbus provided, among other things, for the establishment of a school system, which should be independent of the jurisdiction of the County Superintendent, and committing the educational interests of the city to a Board of Education whose duties and powers were prescribed. In the month of July following, the Common Council elected a Board of Education, and in the fall of 1874 the public schools were opened under the new system. On the 5th of March, 1875, the Legislature enacted a general law authorizing the establishment of free high schools. The city availed itself of the privileges given by the law, and duly appointed and held an election, August 9, 1875, by which it was determined by a majority vote of electors to adopt the free high-school system. The Board of Education experienced some difficulty in attempting the organization of the new system, but finally, in the month of January, 1876, succeeded, and the free high school of the city of Columbus became fully established.

In June, 1877, Miss Louie Adams graduated from the high school. A year later there were seven graduates from the high school, as follows: Laura Bassett, Mary R. Cook, Julia M. Davies, Carrie Genung, Nellie Ida Loomis, Elouise M. Stephens and Genevieve A. Stephens. Olivet Church was crowded on the occasion of the graduating exercises with the justly proud citizens of Columbus, the inside walls of the building being gaily bedecked with fragrant flowers. The programme of exercises is herewith given:

Quartette, by Misses Flora and Matie Walsh and Messrs. E. D. Kanouse and D. Griffith; Prayer, by Rev. M. E. Eversz; Solo, by Miss Satie Butler; Introductory Remarks, by Prof. G. M. Bowen; Essay, "The Extent of Man's Researches," by Genevieve A. Stephens; Essay, "Dr. Jenner," by Mary R. Cook; Solo, by Miss Katie Jones; Essay, "Climbing the Hill of Science," by Julia M. Davies; Solo, by E. D. Kanouse; Essay, "Joan of Arc," by Elouise M. Stephens; Essay, "Salt," by Laura Bassett; Trio, by Misses Maggie, Genevieve A. and Elouise M. Stephens; Essay, "Mound-Builders," by Carrie E. Genung; Solo, by Miss Kittie Lowth; Essay, "An Ill-Fated Nation," by Nellie A. Loomis; Valadictory, by Julia M. Davies; Solo, by Miss Lillie Lewis; Presentation of Class, by Prof. G. M. Bowen; Conferring Diplomas, by E. E. Chapin; Music.

The high-school curriculum, in addition to furnishing a thorough English education, is designed by the law as a preparatory course for the State University. Graduates passing the necessary examination are entitled at once and at all times to free tuition in all the colleges of the State University.

The following pupils graduated on the 27th of June, 1879: Angie Turner, Mattie Porter, Annie L. Loomis, Phoebe Wallace, Mary R. Southmayd, Charles M. Davis and Walter H. Waterhouse. The exercises were held at the Methodist Church, the interest manifested and the number of persons present being fully as great as on a similar occasion in 1878. The programme was as follows:

Prayer; Music; Salutatory, by Charles E. Davies; Essay—"No Pains, no Gains," by Angie Turner; Music; Essay—"Out of the Harbor," by Annie L. Loomis; Essay—"Haste Rhymes with Waste," by Walter H. Waterhouse; Music; Essay—"What the Types Tell," Mattie E. Porter; Music; Essay—"What Biography Teaches," by Phoebe Wallace; Essay—

“The Unseen Battlefield,” by Mary R. Southmayd; Music; Essay—“The Stability of a Republic the Intelligence of its People,” by Charles M. Davies; Valedictory—by Mattie E. Porter; Music; Conferring Diplomas; Music.

It is a noteworthy fact that there are less changes in the staff of teachers in the Columbus schools than in those of most other cities of the State. The acknowledged wisdom of this condition of things is shown in the marked evenness in the attendance of pupils and their rapid progress. In 1878, the board of instructors was composed as follows: George M. Bowen, Principal; Martha Dean, grammar school; Katie Jones, fourth intermediate; Celia Wilson, third intermediate; Anna Quickenden, second intermediate; Belle Merriam, first intermediate; Matie Williams, second primary; Hattie Chamberlain, first primary. Since then the only changes made have been these: In the grammar department, Miss Martha Dean was succeeded by Len. C. Mead, who, upon adopting the profession of a physician and entering Rush Medical College in Chicago, was followed in the school by Miss Kate Bailey. She resigned in April last, and William E. Ritter is now teaching. In the fourth intermediate department, Miss Katie Jones was succeeded, in 1878, by Miss Corrie Morse. Miss Hattie Chamberlain, of the first primary department, relinquished her class to Belle Pederson in 1879. Miss Pederson was soon succeeded by Miss Helen St. John.

Since the organization of the graded-school system, the Board of Education has been composed of the following gentlemen: The first board consisted of John Quincy Adams (President), James T. Lewis and E. E. Chapin, with S. O. Burrington as Superintendent. The Board of 1875 was substantially the same. In July, 1876, C. L. Dering was appointed to the vacancy occasioned by the expiration of the term of Mr. Lewis. In 1877, Mr. Adams was made School Superintendent, D. C. Davies being appointed to fill the vacancy in the board. Mr. Chapin was appointed as President. In July, 1878, H. A. Leuders succeeded Mr. Chapin on the board, D. C. Davies became President, and F. C. Eldred School Superintendent. In 1879, E. S. Griswold was appointed on the board in place of C. L. Dering. Mr. Davies is still acting as President; G. M. Bowen, the Principal of the schools, was made Superintendent, and fills that office to the present time.

Columbus Collegiate Institute.—In March, 1855, an act of incorporation was secured for the establishment in Columbus of a collegiate institute. The incorporators were J. T. Lewis, J. Q. Adams, R. W. Earll, E. P. Silsbee, Chester W. Dean, Joseph S. Manning, William C. Spencer, W. W. Drake, W. A. Niles, John A. Elliott and Cyrus E. Rosenkrans. The objects of the corporation were to provide for “the education, the mental and moral discipline and instruction in literature, sciences and arts of youth of both sexes.” It was provided that “no political or religious opinion shall be required as a qualification of membership, and no student shall be required to attend worship with any particular denomination.”

In pursuance of the act the Board of Trustees met at the Congregational Church on the 10th of April, 1855, and organized for business. The Rev. Mr. Rosenkrans was made President of the institute, and in anticipation of securing in the near future a more substantial structure, Block 15 in West Columbus was purchased and a small building erected thereon. In the fall, a school was opened with Miss Martha Brigham (now Mrs. William Hazelton) and Miss Mary L. Pomeroy (now Mrs. Polly) as teachers, which lasted about two years. Upon the completion of the present high-school building and the failure to get sufficient subscriptions, the institute suspended, and the teachers found employment in the public schools. It is said that Columbus at one time had fair prospects of securing the institution now located at Ripon, it having been the intention of the founders of the Collegiate Institute to make it what the enterprising citizens of Ripon have made their college.

There is now in Columbus no educational institution conducted by private enterprise, but several attempts have been made to establish schools and academies of more or less importance. In 1850, an act passed the Legislature chartering the Columbus Academy, but no action was taken under the grant. In 1854, Rev. C. E. Rosenkrans erected a building afterward occupied as a residence by M. Ingalls. It was designed to make this the basis of a seminary of some extent.

Circumstances, however, were not fortuitous, and the undertaking was sustained during a few months only. Among the teachers of this school were Miss Mary Pomeroy and Misses Mary and Martha Brigham. In 1859, the store now owned and occupied by the Dodge Brothers was built by A. G. Cook on the site where is now the calaboose; it was used as a schoolhouse for a year or more. Here taught Miss Achsah Huyek, afterward the wife of Rev. Mr. Phillips. There have been other and more recent movements toward the building-up of private institutions of learning, some of them looking toward extensive results, but they have made no progress.

RELIGIOUS INSTITUTIONS.

Columbus is truly "a city of churches." No city in the State has a larger number in proportion to population, and few of the same size has so many.

The Congregationalist and the Presbyterians.—The local relations of these denominations have been such as to make the writing of separate history of each without repetition one of the impossibilities. The original organization was perfected January 26, 1850, under the Congregational form of government, the Rev. A. Montgomery being chosen Chairman of the Council, and J. Q. Adams, Clerk. Letters from different churches were presented by James Campbell, Mrs. Julia Campbell, Richard Stratton, Mrs. Polly Stratton, Emily Stratton, Mrs. Asenath Stratton, Mrs. Helen S. Rosenkrans, Ellen Hagerman, Maria Hagerman and Mrs. Hayden, which were read and these persons were constituted a church. The church became a member of the Madison District Convention within a week from the date of its organization, and R. Stratton was sent as the first delegate. In August, 1852, it was voted to change the relations of the church from the Madison District to the Fox River Presbytery, and in November following the Presbyterian form of government was adopted, three Elders of that faith being chosen. Thus matters progressed until a majority of the church members withdrew, and organized a separate Presbyterian society in 1866. On the 29th of January of that year, the remaining members of the Presbyterian Church resumed the original name and form of organization, and officers chosen to correspond with the change.

It will now be necessary to return to an account of the first temporal work of the church. The Congregational Society of Columbus having been incorporated in September, 1850, Lewis Ludington, proprietor of the original village plat of Columbus, decided to the said society that year the land at the corner of Mill street and Broadway, upon which a house of worship was erected. The certificate of organization was signed by James Campbell and William E. Ledyard. H. S. Haskell, James Campbell and B. M. Benedict were elected Trustees at the first meeting.

The house erected at that early day was sufficiently large to meet the wants of the place at that time, but as the village grew in size and the country around became settled, better accommodations became necessary. The deficiency was provided for in 1864, when an addition of twenty feet was built to the rear of the original edifice, and other important repairs were made. The structure was being occupied in 1866, when the division occurred.

Recourse was then had to necessary legal measures, and the seceding fold at once organized themselves into a separate society. A place of worship and supplies for the pulpit were secured without delay. A Sabbath school was gathered, and afternoon services were held in the Baptist Church. Among those who served as supplies were the Revs. B. G. Riley, Mr. Post and Mr. Southwart. In July, 1866, the Rev. E. F. Fish became the stated supply, and the regular sessions were resumed. In the mean time, a lot was purchased on Broadway, and materials gathered for the erection of a church edifice. The society continued to accept the favors of the Baptists until September, 1867, when their new church was finished and dedicated to the cause. The structure cost about $5,000, and holds an important place among the many handsome buildings of that character in Columbus. Mr. Fish served as Pastor for two years. After his retirement, the pulpit was supplied for a time by the Rev. Mr. Patten, the venerable Kanouse, and others. The Rev. W. A. Hendrickson commenced his labors with the church in June, 1869, and remained until 1876.

In the mean time, the Congregationalists were "pursuing the even tenor of their way." The record of this church shows the names of the following Pastors: Rev. C. E. Rosenkrans, ten years; the Rev. T. C. Melvin, four years; the Rev. L. M. Gates, one year; the Rev. A. L. P. Loomis, one year; the Rev. E. P. Salmon, eighteen months; the Rev. M. W. Reed, eighteen months; the Rev. J. G. Schaeffer, nine months; the Rev. H. A. Miner, two years and four months. This brings the history of the church down to 1874, when we find a proposition from the Presbyterians, dated early in September of that year, looking toward a re-union of the two churches. The proposition is couched in becoming and Christian-like language, as follows: "The undersigned, members of the Presbyterian Church and society of Columbus, believing there are now too many separate church organizations within the limits of this city, in view whereof those who agree as to such things are essential, ought to make an effort to consolidate their organizations, and, believing that the time has come to make such effort, do cordially consent to the following as a basis for consolidation of the said Presbyterian with the Congregational Church of the same place: When each of said churches shall have assumed and taken the name of the Olivet Church of Columbus, and shall have formally assented to a proposition for consolidation with the other, the two churches shall thereupon become united and consolidated into one church, to be thenceforward known and designated as the Olivet Church of Columbus, and shall be ecclesiastically connected with the Presbyterian and Congregational General Convention of Wisconsin. It was signed on the part of the Presbyterians by the following persons: F. G. Randall, E. G. Stitt, E. D. Kanouse, Jay Jennings, D. C. Davies, Dora Davies, G. W. Hazelton, F. Huggins, O. Anderson, T. H. McConnell, H. D. James, Mrs. Jane Silsbee, J. F. Shad-duck, S. Hutchinson, A. S. Bath, I. G. McCafferty, Mrs. Adam McConnell, Rebecca H. Mettler, Emma J. McConnell, M. L. Hazelton, Delia L. Square, Mary C. Manning, Fannie Randall, Caroline Stitt, Mattie Stitt, Mrs. O. Anderson, Ida M. Jennings, Mrs. E. Bissell, Katie Bissell, Mrs. H. L. Rosenkrans, Mercy I. Hazelton, Harriett T. Hazelton, James H. Rosenkrans, Hellen Rosenkrans, Sarah Kanouse, H. C. Randall and A. Randall.

A similar paper was circulated and generally signed by the Congregational Church and society as follows: Alfred Topliff, J. Q. Adams, R. W. Chadbourn, E. E. Chapin, Milford Loomis, James Webster, W. A. Polley, M. L. Polley, Catherine E. Chadbourn, Sarah Chesbrough, Fannie E. Dean, Eunice Dean, Martha Dean, Grace Dean, Mrs. G. C. Butterfield, Mrs. E. B. Chapin, Mrs. M. J. Newcomb, F. W. Hart, H. Loomis, C. A. Loomis, M. Loomis, R. W. Earll, Charles H. Hall, B. F. Cooper, Theron Dodd, Mrs. L. I. Adams, S. W. Chadbourn, Mrs. S. W. Chadbourn, Lucius Randall, C. Baker, Mrs. P. B. Richmond, Mrs. C. M. Smith, Mary Benedict, Mrs. M. H. Parker, M. Smith, Mrs. J. D. Waterhouse, P. B. Richmond, L. G. Crosswell and Martha McConnell.

Resolutions were subsequently adopted by both denominations accepting the terms set forth in the basis of the proposed re-union, and on September 17, 1874, the two bodies held a joint meeting and perfected their organization by electing the following officers: For Deacons, E. G. Stitt, James Webster, J. A. Bowen, J. Q. Adams, Dr. E. D. Kanouse and Milford Loomis; for Church Clerk, H. Loomis; for Church Treasurer, F. G. Randall. On the 5th of October, the Olivet society was organized according to law, and the following persons elected as Trustees: E. D. Kanouse, L. Fuller, F. G. Randall, James Webster, Nelson Sawyer and E. G. Stitt.

The Congregationalists disposed of their church property to W. A. Thompson, and the old edifice is now in use as an agricultural warehouse. A lease, signed by G. W. Hazleton, E. G. Stitt, F. G. Randall, Jacob Smith, J. S. Manning and J. M. G. Price, was then drawn, setting forth that "In consideration of the premises and of one dollar to us in hand paid, the receipt of which is confessed, we do hereby let and lease to the Olivet Church society of Columbus the church edifice and premises on which the same stands, heretofore known and designated as the Presbyterian church property, located on Broadway, in the city of Columbus, county of Columbia, for the term of one year from the 1st day of May, 1876, necessary repairs to be made, if any are required, by the said Olivet Church society." In pursuance with the foregoing, E. G. Stitt, G. W. Hazleton, J. S. Manning, Jacob Smith and J. M. G. Price, Trustees of the Presbyterian Church society, made application to the court for an order to convey the Presbyterian Church property to Olivet society. To this a remonstrance was presented, signed by A. S. Eckert, C. S. McFadyen, D. J. Evans, Elizabeth Evans, Ann Evans, Frank Evans, Frank Johnson, J. E. Nelson, Mrs. O. Anderson, Mrs. L. G. McCafferty, Lurenda Drake, B. A. Carpenter, W. W. Drake and Helen Drake. Owing to the remonstrance, the court declined to issue the order applied for.

On July 15, notice was served on the Trustees of Olivet Church to the effect that the First Presbyterian Church society had by unanimous vote resumed the entire control of their church edifice and other property belonging to said Presbyterian Church society, and would exercise the same from and after that date. This notice was dated July 8, 1876, and signed by B. A. Carpenter, F. G. Randall, C. S. McFayden and W. W. Drake, Trustees. On Friday, July 21, the Olivet society was locked out of the church building, and since that date the two societies have worshiped in separate quarters. The Presbyterians continued to occupy the church whose doors had been closed against their Congregational brethren. Mr. Hendrickson was succeeded by the Rev. E. P. Clisbee, who supplied the pulpit about nine months. In November, 1876, the Rev. J. B. Andrews took charge and remained one year, being succeeded by the Rev. E. Smith Barnes, who occupied the pulpit until November, 1879. Since then it has been supplied by E. D. Kanouse and others. The present Elders of the church are Jacob Smith, A. S. Eckert and E. D. Kanouse; Trustees, W. W. Drake, Erastus Bowen and Messrs. Kanouse, Smith and Eckert. The membership is given at forty-two.

Olivet society (the Congregationalists) immediately proceeded to erect a church edifice. Three lots were purchased at the corner of Spring and Prairie streets, and by the 24th of December, 1876, the work had so far advanced that services were held in the basement, the present lecture-room. The entire cost was $8,800. The structure was completed early in 1877. It is a fine building—a credit to Columbus, and a substantial monument to the enterprise of its founders. The Rev. Moritz E. Eversz, the present Pastor, came to Columbus in July, 1876, a short time before the memorable division between the Congregationalists and the Presbyterians. The present officers of the church are: Trustees—Lucius Fuller, J. Q. Adams, James Webster, P. B. Richmond, Milford Loomis and D. C. Davies; Deacons—J. Q. Adams, Milford Loomis, B. F. Cooper, James Webster, H. Loomis and P. B. Richmond. The membership is given at ninety.

The Rev. M. Rosencrans, the founder of the Congregational Church in Columbus, and the first permanent minister in the place, died in 1860. He came hither as a missionary, and was widely respected for his many excellencies of character. For years he was the leading spirit in educational and religious interests, and he filled the Congregational pulpit until 1858, when, his health failing, he resigned. The regard his congregation, and the people of Columbus generally, had for him, was exhibited in a series of touching resolutions, adopted by them October 11, 1858, on the occasion of his resignation, as follows:

Resolved, That it is with unmingled feelings of regret we accept his decision to resign the charge of pastor over this church and society: that by this act we have lost in him a man of great piety, a supporter of good works, a zealous laborer in His service, a true and faithful minister—one who has brought light out of darkness in building up this church, which, while it redounds to the glory of Him who rules and masters all, is a lasting monument to his usefulness in the village of Columbus.

Resolved, That he has our heartfelt thanks for the great good he has done in this place, and that he has the united prayer of all, that his health may soon be so improved that he may go on in the good work in the vineyard of the Lord, until a ripe old age shall close his ministerial labors.

The English Methodists.—The first Methodist meetings in the vicinity of Columbus, and doubtless in Columbia County, were held in 1845 at what is now Fountain Prairie, which was included in a circuit comprising Waterloo, Aztalan and possibly Watertown. The Revs. Gallop and Wood, the latter as assistant, were in charge. Their successors were the Revs. Jones and Martin, who were the first to preach in Columbus, meetings being held in a wagon-shop. Then came the Rev. N. S. Green, with a Mr. Randall as assistant, and they, it is said, organized the society in Columbus. Their successors were the Revs. Mr. Brown and Mr. Fancher, and the Revs. Mr. Lewis and Mr. Stevens. About this date, the Columbus society was separated from the other points on the circuit. Since then, the following ministers have filled the pulpit: Revs. Chester, Palmer, Ford, Drew, Grumley, Sims, Blackburn, Bosworth, Reynolds, Carpenter, Sewell, Jones, Evans and the incumbent, R. W. Bosworth, who is here for the second time. The first church edifice was built in 1858-59, and was dedicated in February of the latter year by the Rev. H. C. Tilton. It stood near the present site of the foundry, and was purchased in 1872 or 1873, and has since been converted into a hall for theatrical representations. In the Spring of 1872, work was commenced on the new church and it was completed that fall under the supervision of J. P. Miller and L. W. Chase. The dedicatory sermon was preached by the Rev. C. H. Fowler, that event taking place October 26, 1873. The cost of the building was $18,906.10. There is now a debt upon it of some $2,000. The present Trustees of the church are J. P. Miller, H. Waterhouse, J. W. Leffingwell, A. Trowbridge, J. Whiting, D. D. Kelsey, B. Yule, E. Federly, R. P. Williams. The membership is about one hundred.

The Welsh Methodists.—In 1845, half a dozen Welsh families, just from Wales, settled in the town of Elba, in Dodge County. There, on the first Sunday after their arrival, they planted the seeds of Calvinism in the then sparsely populated wilderness, holding religious services in a wagon-box. Accessions to the little colony were made from time to time, and the Rev. Hugh Jones was among those who came in 1845. A log church was erected during the following winter, and Mr. Jones presided over the congregation until his death, in 1854. In 1866, J. J. Roberts, a young divine who had assisted Mr. Jones since 1846, and, upon the latter's death, became his successor, took spiritual charge of a meager congregation of his Welsh brethren in Columbus. Meetings were held over the store of Uriah Davies, on Broadway. In 1868, a frame church edifice was erected, at the corner of Church and Mill streets, at a cost of $2,200, including the building lot. The Rev. Mr. Roberts has supplied the pulpit ever since the organization. He preaches, also, in Salem Church, town of Calamus, and Bethel Church, in the town of Elba, Dodge County. The present officers of the Columbus society are: Deacons—Benjamin Hughes, John Davies, R. R. Roberts and Uriah Davies; Trustees—R. R. Roberts, William E. Williams and William J. Edwards. There are forty-five members in the society, which is free from debt and in a prosperous condition. The collections in the three folds under Mr. Roberts' charge amount to about $600 per annum, $400 of which is applied to the salary of the minister, the remainder being about equally divided for the support of home missions and the Bible Society. It is a notable fact the Welsh Methodists frequently contribute larger sums, annually, to the support of the Bible Society than all other denominations in the State together.

German Methodists.—In 1852, the Rev. Charles Kluckkorn came to Columbus, then a missionary point, to preach the Gospel in the German tongue, from a Methodist standpoint. He held occasional services for one year, and was succeeded by the Rev. J. Schaefer, who remained about the same length of time. In 1855, the Rev. John Westerfield took charge, and during his incumbency the Columbus German Methodists were separated from their Baraboo brethren for church purposes, and an independent society was organized. During that year, $213 was raised for ministerial support. The first Trustees of the new society were Louis Kenzel, John Miller, J. Battels, J. Fuhrman and Fr. Topp. In 1866, a church edifice was erected at a cost of $1,185.96, and in 1874, a new house of worship was erected, which cost $5,312.22. Mr. Westerfield's successors have been the Revs. Jacob Haas, Charles Buehner, R. Brueck, F. Conrad (who died here), H. Wegner, H. Eberhardt, J. Rinder, Christian Wenz, with George Achenback as assistant, F. Gotschalk, Christian Wenz again, J. Schaefer, F. Kluckkorn, brother of Charles, and E. Fitzner, the present incumbent. The value of church property, including parsonage, is given at $8,400. The Trustees are George Link, Charles Link, Christian Link, F. Wendt, John Lange, John Miller, William Thiede and Christian Moll; Stewards—Charles Colonius, C. Moll, L. Pietzner, F. Fuhrman and E. Meyer. The membership is 244.

The Baptist Church.—Preliminary steps were first taken to organize a Baptist Church on the 28th of May, 1853, and at a council which convened on the 21st of September following, fourteen names were recorded, as follows: Rev. D. D. Reed, W. S. Read, Morgan Evans, Lucius Warner, Calvin Read, L. B. Read and sisters Emily Read, M. C. Read, Sarah A. Warner, M. A. White, Ann Evans, Mary Read, Caroline Read and Eliza Borden. Rev. D. D. Read was chosen Pastor at the same meeting. Covenant meetings were held in private houses and public services in a hall over Cooper's store. In March, 1863, the first steps were taken toward building a church edifice, Messrs. A. Sawyer, William Lewis, L. Warner, H. Vincent, A. B. Goodrich and H. Seffens being appointed as a building committee. The structure—an imposing brick at the corner of Broadway and Harrison streets, costing something over $4,000—was completed in the fall of 1864, and dedicated the following spring. The whole number of names on the church book is 165. Forty-two persons have been baptized since the church was organized. Of this number of baptisms the Rev. L. Bath performed twenty-five. The Pastors since the time of Mr. Drake have been the Revs. Mr. Coffin, Mr. Wade, S. Jones, L. Bath, Mr. Eldridge, J. V. Stratton, R. J. Langridge, W. A. Cain and S. Gorman. At the close of Mr. Eldridge's pastorate, the church was supplied during a few months by the Rev. P. McLeod. During a vacancy which occurred after his departure, services were conducted by L. Bath, E. Butterfield and A. B. Goodrich. Rev. J. McDonald served the church as supply for several months. The principal Deacons have been Brethren Hoppin, Starks, A. Sawyer and Comstock; Clerks, Brethren D. D. Reed, Starks, Seffens and M. W. Sawyer, the latter being the present Clerk. The present officers of the church and society are: Trustees—E. P. Waldo, I. Merriam, M. Starkweather, V. Irons and W. H. Myers; Deacon—M. D. Comstock; Treasurer—M. W. Sawyer. The membership is thirty-five.

German Lutheran Church.—Over a quarter of a century ago, emigration from the "old home in Germany" found its way to Wisconsin and to the vicinity of Columbus, then only a small village. Several German families had settled here, including notably various former residents of the Grand Duchy of Mecklenburg. The desire to enjoy religious privileges similar to those in Germany led a number of them to form a religious society in Columbus in 1855. The first ministrations were by a clergyman from Watertown, whose name is not now of record or in remembrance. The first regular minister was Mr. Oswald, who came in 1855, and who, at first, preached in a private house, and subsequently in the old schoolhouse. Among the first members were Joachim and Christian Boelte, Henry Lange, Christian Westen, John Mauth, Joachim Herman and John and Christian Schwiesow, who are yet all members of the society. The following early members of the society are dead or have removed: John C. Lang, Charles Boldt, Christian Miller, Fred Spechdt, Fred Kuhl, Charles Linek, Henry Niemeyer, Sr., and John Topp, Sr. The congregation increased by new arrivals from Germany and by local accessions until the necessity for a church edifice became apparent. February 14, 1857, J. T. Lewis donated Lot 9, Block 10, West Columbus, as a site, and on May 3, 1858, while the Rev. Reuter was in pastoral charge, articles of agreement were signed, by which was formed the Evangelical Lutheran Zion congregation of Columbus. The first Board of Trustees were John Prien, Christian Mueller, Julius Fuehs, Carl Boldt, Fred Spechdt and John Lang. The building of a church was commenced on the donated site, but a majority of the congregation deemed another location more desirable, and the lot given by Mr. Lewis was sold, and Lot 1, Block 13, of Birdsey's Addition was selected. This lot was also a donation for the same purpose, by A. P. Birdsey, and was given on the 2d of December, 1858. The first church was built during the ministry of Rev. H. P. Duborg, in 1859. He was succeeded, in 1860, by the Rev. Braun. On the 24th of August, 1864, the congregation extended a call to the Rev. Meyer, and he sustained the ministerial relation until the close of 1865.

On the 8th of January, 1866, it was resolved to purchase from Smith Haines Lot 12, Block 8, of Birdsey's Addition, and to use the house thereon as a parsonage. The sale was perfected on the 27th of that month. On the 11th of March following, Rev. A. Liefeldt became the Pastor, Prof. Moldehucke, of Watertown, having preached several times during the interval. The growth of the congregation was steady and rapid, and an enlargement of the church soon became necessary. It was finally resolved, at a meeting held on the 28th of April, 1868, that the Board of Trustees be empowered to purchase from A. C. Olds Lots 6 and 7, and the southwest half of Lot 8, in Block 16, and to sell the society's other real estate. On the 6th of July, 1868, it was resolved to remove the church edifice to its present site, and on that plan the building should be enlarged. The sale of the other property was made to C. Zarz, September 30, 1868, and on the following day the deed for the new site was executed. During this period, the Rev. A. Liefeldt had resigned and the Rev. C. Oppen had assumed pastoral relations. On the 3d of May, 1869, the enlargement of the church was decided upon, and Messrs. John Prien and Joachim Herman were appointed a committee to procure the plan and engage an architect to take charge of the construction. The addition was completed in 1869. In April, 1876, Rev. Mr. Oppen resigned. Rev. Aug. F. Ernst, of the Northwestern University at Watertown, officiated until the 21st of May, 1876, when Rev. Henry Vogel became the minister. Again the congregation increased beyond the limits of the church, and in the first part of July, 1877, a new building was ordered. A committee, consisting of Messrs. Julius Vogt, Chris. Boelte, Henry Boelte, Fred Messow and E. V. Briesen, was appointed to make plans and estimates for another new edifice. The plan proposed a building 70 feet long and 40 feet wide, with a belfry 125 feet high, and was accepted as to its general features September 2, 1877. The estimated cost was $5,000. A few changes were ordered, and E. T. Mix, of Milwaukee, was directed to perfect a plan, which he did. In the mean time, the subscription showed $4,800 to be in readiness, and on the 9th of December, 1877, the erection of the new church was voted, the plan of Mr. Mix being adopted. John Prien, Julius Krueger, E. V. Briesen, Christian Boelte and Aug. Reddemann were named as the building committee, who, with the Board of Trustees, were empowered to make necessary contracts, and to superintend the work, E. V. Briesen to be chairman of the committee, Julius Krueger, secretary, and H. A. Lueders, treasurer. Contracts were let to Henry Bolte for the stone, brick and plaster work, for $1,500, and to R. D. Vanakin for the carpenter and joiner work and the painting, for $3,800. The organ used in the old church was bought, in 1873, of the Lutheran congregation of Sheboygan. On the 2d day of June, 1878, on the Sunday called Exaudi, the corner-stone of the building was laid with appropriate ceremonies, and on the 3d of November following the church was dedicated, the Rev. Deninger, of Waterloo, preaching the dedicatory sermon in presence of a large assemblage, composed of representatives from Beaver Dam, Lowell, Waterloo and Portage. The 1,600-pound bell in this church has something of a history. The metal from which it is made was presented to the society, in 1873, by the Emperor of Germany. On the 4th of July, 1876 (the centennial anniversary of America's independence), there arrived at New York from Berlin one six-pounder brass cannon and four pieces of other cannon, consigned to the Lutheran congregation of Columbus. These strange implements of warfare were of French pattern and were a part of the fruits of the conquest of Alsace and Lorraine. They reached Columbus on the 2d of February, 1877, and in April, 1878, were reshipped to Baltimore, where they were recast into a bell bearing the following inscription: "I call the living ones, I mourn the dead ones, I break the lightning." The Lutheran Church is a splendid piece of architecture, built of cream brick and trimmed with red brick. The entire structure, including the bell and organ, cost $7,000. The present officers of the church are M. Blievernicht, Aug. Reddemann, Christoph Boelte, Hy. A. Lueders (Secretary), John Topp (Treasurer), Charles Ulm.

St. Jerome's Church.—There is no record or remembrance of earlier Christian effort in Columbus, according to Romish tenets, than that embracing the ministrations of that pioneer apostle, the Rev. Martin Kundig, whose footprints we encounter in the early church history of almost every city or village of note in Central and Southeastern Wisconsin. He bore the cross into Columbus in the winter of 1856, and planted it in the midst of a small flock of the faithful, who hailed it with all the reverence begotten of earnest belief. The rude homes in which the members of the primitive parish lived were dedicated to the cause of the church, and their doors thrown open to receive the reverend father. Masses were said in the log cabins of the parishioners with all the profound impressiveness that now characterizes the more attractive service from gilt and draped altars, which echo back the notes of solemn-toned organs. A common tin pan then served as a baptismal font, and a gourd of water from the Crawfish River, properly blessed, removed the stain of sin from the finger-tips of devout believers. Early in the spring of 1856, work was commenced upon the foundation of a church edifice, on a lot donated for the purpose by A. P. Birdsey, and in June of that year the corner-stone was laid. For want of sufficient means, no further progress was made till 1864, when work was resumed, and, in 1866, during the pastorate and under the supervision of the Rev. E. McGuirk, the present substantial house of worship was completed. In the mean time, a temporary wooden structure had been built and occupied. Father Kundig's successors and McGuirk's predecessors were the Revs. Downey and Purcell. The first resident Pastor was the Rev. James O'Keefe, who succeeded to the charge in September, 1868. In that year, the red brick parsonage was purchased for $1,400. Father O'Keefe remained until May, 1870, being followed by Father McGuirk, who found both the affairs of the church and the spiritual condition of the parishioners much more satisfactory than when he had previously visited the place as a missionary. The fruits of his earlier labors were fast ripening. His stay was brief, however, being succeeded by the Rev. E. Gray, who, in December, 1872, retired in favor of the Rev. Henry Roche, the present incumbent. A much-needed addition was made to the church in 1879, making the total cost of the building about $5,000. The size of the parish is given at eighty families.

The Universalists.—The Rev. Dudley Tyng will be remembered by the people of Columbus as having presided over a society of Universalists a quarter of a century ago. This society went out of existence, and in February, 1866, a new one was organized from the fragments of the former society, by the Rev. M. G. Todd. The church was organized in September, 1869, and a church edifice erected that year at a cost of $7,000. Mr. Todd continued as Pastor until November, 1878, when he resigned and was succeeded by the Rev. Edgar Leavitt, the incumbent. The first officers of the present society were: John Hasey, President of the Board of Trustees; A. Chapman, Treasurer; Deacons, Rev. Dudley Tyng and L. H. Bingham. The present officers are the same, with the exception of the Rev. Mr. Tyng, who is now deceased.

The Episcopalians.—Luther Gregory was the first Rector, and the parish was organized over twenty years ago. The church edifice was built in 1871, at a cost of $3,000. S. S. Burleson is the present Rector. His circuit includes Beaver Dam, Fox Lake, Juneau, Doylestown and Columbus.

MANUFACTURING INTERESTS.

The first piece of machinery put in motion in Columbus was the rude attachment to Maj. Dickason's "up-and-down" saw. This earliest of all early Columbus pioneers built the first dam on the Crawfish River. It was he who first taught the stream to leap forth in the morning to its toil, and to glide away at evening to its rest. The Major put in a run of stones soon after getting his saw into operation, and thus he became the only miller for many miles around. In 1843, he was compelled to turn over the mill to Jeremiah Drake, who came as the agent and manager of Lewis Ludington. The grinding of grain was then made the leading feature. Another run of stones was added, but even this increase of facilities could not cope with the accumulating grists. People came from Madison, Stevens Point and other remote settlements to the Columbus mill. The various grists were numbered and had to "take their turn," many of them lying over for two weeks at a time. This was a serious condition of things when bread was short. One of the pioneers of Columbus relates with apparent amusement, having gone to the mill with a few bags of wheat at a time when there "wasn't a crust in the house." He found so many ahead of him that, had he taken his place in the hungry procession, he could not have reached home until late on the following day. The lamentable condition in which he had left his family urged him to use a little strategy; so, the miller's back being turned about the time the hopper became empty, he quietly turned his grist therein, but the miller made the discovery too late to remedy the matter; the hopper was full, and the only way to empty it was to keep the wheels turning and grind it out. In August, 1849, thirty-one years ago, J. S. Manning purchased the property. He has made many improvements about the old place, putting in an entirely new outfit of machinery. In 1858, a new stone dam was built, but a portion of it has since washed away. The main dam is now constructed of wood. In 1876, a sixty-horse power engine was added to the other improvements. Since then, water has been universally abundant. There are now four runs of stones in the mill, and it has a capacity of about one hundred bushels per day.

F. H. BOLTE & CO. FOUNDRY & MACHINE SHOP COLUMBUS WIS.

The Foundry.—In 1869, or perhaps a year earlier, Hall & Caswell established a factory in Columbus, where they turned out wagons, corn-plows, etc. Mr. Caswell soon retired from the business, selling his interest to a son of Mr. Hall, the firm becoming S. C. Hall & Son. In September, 1879, Bolte & Eckoff purchased the property. They have added largely to the machinery and now manufacture the "Eureka" windmill, upon which Mr. Bolte has a patent, it being his own invention. They also manufacture the "Economist" churn. Connected with the institution is a foundry in which are used all the modern appliances, and one run of stones upon which feed is ground, the whole being operated by a large and powerful engine.

The Elevator.—Built in 1865, by Farnham & Allen, now managed under the firm name of Farnham, Allen & Co. The elevator building proper is 40x40 feet, and has a capacity of 30,000 bushels of grain. Besides the usual machinery attached to elevators, there are two runs of stones for grinding feed, the whole being operated by a twenty-horse power engine. Adjoining the elevator is a warehouse 60x40 feet, built in 1856.

Near by is the extensive storehouse of Messrs. Churchill & Sexton, built in the spring of 1877. It is 130 feet long and 36 feet wide, and has an area of floor capable of holding 20,000 bushels of grain.

Columbus Marble Works.—Established by Wilson & Cramm in 1867, near the Fox House, on James street. In 1869, G. L. Graham purchased the works of Mr. Wilson, the latter having previously bought out his partner, Mr. Cramm, and removed it to the present site of Leuder & Krouse's store, and later, to the present site of Henderson's Opera House. J. P. Miller then became a partner and remained three years. A partnership was then formed with W. T. Turner. In 1872, the concern was moved to its present site. In 1878, H. M. Blumenthal took a third interest, and a year later, Mr. Turner retired in favor of his son, W. R. Turner. In January, 1880, Mr. Graham disposed of his interest to his partners, and the firm is now Turner & Blumenthal. From four to six hands are employed, and the result of their labor finds ready sale within a radius of forty miles.

Machine Shop, etc.—In 1870, S. Hutchinson established in Columbus as an agricultural implement dealer. In March, 1875, J. G. Kanouse took a half interest with him, and the firm commenced the manufacture of pumps on a small scale, and also repaired machinery. A ten-horse power engine is employed in the business. Attached to the shop are a turning lathe and a planing machine. On the 3d of April, 1880, Mr. Kanouse went out, leaving Mr. Hutchinson sole proprietor.

Joiner and Builder.—Among the institutions of Columbus, none have borne a more important part in the growth of the place than the establishment of R. D. Vanaken. Twenty-five years ago, he commenced in Columbus as a builder, manufacturing his own windows, doors, sash, etc., and has since erected nearly two hundred houses in and around the city. Many of the handsome stores, dwellings and churches in Columbus are of his workmanship.

Breweries.—Jacob Jussen was the pioneer brewer of Columbus. He built a small house on the west bank of the Crawfish, as early as 1848. The old Gambrinian temple still stands, though its beams are bent with the burden of time, and the walls within are odorous with age and the fumes of beer. Louis Brauchle purchased the establishment in 1849, and though he has repaired and rebuilt and made additions to it, the general decay that pervades the premises must ultimately triumph in their destruction. The old maltster long since passed the meridian of life, and soon both he and his brewery must take places among the things that were.

In 1859, Henry Kurth came to Columbus with his family and a four-barrel brewer's boiler. He located in the southwestern portion of the then village, and commenced the manufacture of the "creamy, dreamy beer." It must have been a profitable business, for, in 1865, he built a large brick brewery, at a cost of nearly $4,000, and a year later put in a large boiler and added other improved appliances. His establishment has now a capacity of about sixty barrels a week, though the demand only reaches from two hundred to three hundred barrels per year.

In 1869, Stephen Fleck built the Farmers' Brewery. Its custom is entirely local.

BANKS.

Isaiah Robinson carried on the first money exchange business in Columbus. His operations were necessarily the reverse of extensive, but were in keeping with the "small things" of the early fifties. R. W. Chadbourn engaged in the same branch of business in 1853, making insurance and real estate two of the three specialties. Money, however, seemed to be most largely in demand, and Mr. Chadbourn turned his attention almost entirely to this branch of his business.

Bank of Columbus.—In December, 1856, W. L. Lewis started the first bank of issue in Columbus. In it were interested C. C. Barnes and James Barnes, the latter being Cashier. Mr. Lewis was the President. About 1859, the institution became the property of Willard Scott and Vosburg Sprague, under whose management it ceased to exist in 1861.

On the 7th of September of that year, R. W. Chadbourn opened a private banking institution, in the same building vacated by Messrs. Scott & Sprague, and in 1863, it was organized under the National Banking Law, as the First National Bank of Columbus, with a paid-up capital of $50,000. Its number (178) indicates it as having been among the first institutions of the kind. The officers under this organization were R. W. Chadbourn, President; S. W. Chadbourn, Cashier; Directors—R. W. Chadbourn, S. W. Chadbourn, William M. Griswold, George Griswold and F. F. Farnham. Upon the death of Mr. Farnham, in 1877, C. L. Waldo became a Director. Otherwise the management has remained unchanged.

Union Bank.—In September, 1861, John R. Wheeler opened a private bank in A. G. Cook's building, and soon afterward organized under the State Banking Law, in connection with Marshall Hsley, of Milwaukee banking fame. Mr. Wheeler was the President, and A. G. Cook, Cashier. The capital stock was $100,000. In 1872, Mr. Wheeler having retired the circulation and discontinued the organization of the bank, it was transferred to L. R. Rockwell, who has continued it to the present time as a private bank. The Union Bank building, one of the architectural ornaments of the city, was erected in 1865.

COLUMBUS LIBRARY ASSOCIATION.

The intelligence of a community is usually gauged by the literary patronage of its citizens. The support the people of Columbus have given to the Public Library is excellent testimony of this. On the 20th of January, 1877, a meeting of prominent citizens was held at the Opera House, for the purpose of organizing a library association. The necessary preliminary steps taken, an adjournment was had until the 27th of the same month, at which time the organization was completed by the election of the following officers: President, Matthew Lowth; Vice President, E. S. Griswold; Secretary, C. L. Dering; Treasurer, L. R. Rockwell. Directors, for one year—R. W. Chadbourn, John Topp and William M. Griswold; for two years—J. Q. Adams, D. S. Fuller and Edward Bowen; for three years—R. W. Earll, D. C. Davies and E. E. Chapin. At the same meeting ex-Gov. Lewis donated fifty-four volumes of books. Another meeting was held on the 30th of January, at which committees were appointed as follows: Library Committee—W. M. Griswold, D. C. Davies and E. E. Chapin; Committee on Rooms—J. Q. Adams, D. S. Fuller and Edward Bowen; Finance—R. W. Chadbourn, J. Topp and R. W. Earll. E. S. Griswold tendered the use of two rooms in his brick block, which were accepted, and thanks voted. Miss Mattie Walsh was appointed Librarian.

The officers for 1878 were the same as in 1877, Messrs. Chadbourn, Topp and W. M. Griswold being elected Directors for three years. On the 29th of April, 1878, an executive committee was appointed, consisting of E. S. Griswold, J. Topp and W. M. Griswold.

In 1879, M. Lowth, E. S. Griswold and L. R. Rockwell were re-elected President, Vice President and Treasurer, respectively, Mic Adams succeeding C. L. Dering as Secretary. The Directors were J. Q. Adams, D. S. Fuller and Edward Bowen. The same executive committee chosen in 1878 were re-appointed, and Flora Walsh succeeded to the position of Librarian, holding it till November, 1879, when Helen Walsh was appointed.

In 1880, the only change in officers was the election of R. W. Earll, D. C. Davies and E. E. Chapin as Directors, and the appointment of M. Adams, D. S. Fuller and J. Topp as the executive committee.

The first purchase of books was made in March, 1877, of Jansen, McClurg & Co., to the amount of $550. Various purchases have been made since then, the total amount expended to the present time being $830. In 1878, the young ladies of Columbus presented the association with $59 in cash, the proceeds of a concert given by them for that purpose. Quite a number of donations of books have been made.

The association is composed of seventy-five life members, each of whom paid $10. One of the rules of the association provides for the admission of annual members at $1.50 each for the first year, and $1 for each subsequent year they remain as such. The annual membership has grown to important proportions. There are 1,000 volumes in the collection. Nearly one-fourth of this number is continuously in the hands of patrons.

HOTELS.

When the village of Columbus was platted by Lewis Ludington, it presented a promising picture—on paper. Passing through the eastern limits, the rippling Crawfish marked its winding course. Leading away to the southwest from the river's oak-fringed banks to the borders of clustering groves in the distance were broad avenues with other avenues crossing them at right angles. Near the river's edge was an entire block marked "public square," and not far away a "park," "schoolhouse," "church," "hotel," etc.—all donations from the proprietor of the village. H. A. Whitney was the lucky possessor of that portion of the plat indicated as the "hotel," corner of James and Ludington streets, and in the summer of 1844, he secured absolute title to it by building a hotel upon it. It was a one-and-a-half-story frame. Most of the lumber of which it was built was hauled from Aztalan. In the lower portion, Mr. Whitney kept a small stock of goods. About 1848, it passed into the hands of a man named Thomas, who devoted the entire establishment to the accommodation of the public. A. P. Birdsey purchased from Mr. Thomas. He built an addition to it and conducted it for a number of years. Whitney & McCafferty were the next landlords. At the end of a year and a half, they retired from the business, and the concern was then rented. On the 8th of October, 1857, it was completely destroyed by fire. The work of rebuilding commenced at once. Winter was approaching and Columbus was without a hotel. There are few instances to record where so much energy is displayed as was the case in the construction of the present Fox House. Within eighteen days from the time the first shovel of earth was removed in excavating for the foundations, a substantial four-story brick had been erected, and workmen were engaged putting on the roof. Mr. Whitney surprised himself as well as his friends. The following spring, it was rented to Mr. Gardiner, and not long afterward Mr. Whitney took the management upon himself. At the end of four years, he sold out to G. Fuller, but was compelled to take it back. Soon afterward, an old ex-sea-captain piloted his bark into Columbus, and, purchasing the Whitney House, anchored for a brief time. But the winds were unfavorable, and the old salt turned the house over to Mr. Whitney. Enoch Pulver then became the purchaser. A man named Graves bought of Pulver, and Julius Fox, the present owner, purchased of Mr. Graves.

One of the early institutions of Columbus was the old Mountain House, which stood on the high ground not far from J. T. Lewis' residence. Its career as a hotel was brief, though how brilliant is not known.

COLUMBUS OPERA HOUSE.

In 1872, the old Methodist church building was purchased by J. T. Henderson. It was then located near the present site of the foundry. From there it was removed to Broadway and converted into a public hall, and, in 1877, it was "made over" into an opera house. It was thought to be a fine edifice in its day. The voice of prayer has often been heard within its walls, and it has echoed to much pulpit eloquence of all sorts. In it Mrs. Van Cott made her series of public appeals and won sinners by her personal magnetism. When it had been decided to convert it into an opera house, a structure 16x35 was added for stage purposes. On the first floor are two rooms for rehearsals, etc., and the second floor is used entirely as a stage. Mr. A. Leibig, of Mayville, Dodge County, who was a scenic painter before he left Germany, executed the stage decorations. The total cost of the stage improvements is $1,200, of which $500 is for scenery. The hall will seat nearly four hundred.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Among other important clauses in the original city charter of Columbus was one providing for the establishment of a fire department. Accordingly, on the 26th of December, 1877, the City Council entered into a contract with the Babcock Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, for two of their extinguishers and one hook and ladder truck, for $1,800. At the same meeting of the Council, authority was granted for the formation of three fire companies. On the 19th of October previous, the Germania Fire Company was organized by the election of Fred. Hanneman, Foreman; John Topp, First Assistant; H. A. Lueders, Second Assistant; Fred. Wirth, Treasurer; E. Von Briesen, Secretary, and V. Batz, Marshal. The other members of the company were D. Stark, G. Link, J. Lemcke, C. Topp, C. Ulm, C. Mirow, J. Engel, M. Rueth, F. F. Wilske and A. Miller. The present officers are: H. A. Lueders, Foreman; John Topp and G. Link, Assistants; G. Woehlert, Treasurer; E. Von Briesen, Secretary, and W. Hanneman, Marshal.

On the 6th of December, 1877, Hook and Ladder Company No. 1 was organized with the following officers: E. Blasius, Foreman; J. McCabe, First Assistant; W. Vanaken, Second Assistant; T. Robinson, Secretary, and T. Morris, Treasurer. The other first members were M. Houghton, J. Mettler, T. Clatworthy, T. Nix, G. Mohring, C. Kellar, J. Cagney, A. Hirscher, S. Harding, S. McConnell; G. H. Colville, S. F. Strehmel, O. Schmidt, J. C. Hutchinson and J. A. Welton. The present officers are: M. J. Durkan, Foreman; J. A. Welton and J. Dreyer, Assistants; J. Schaeffer, Secretary; G. H. Colville, Treasurer; J. B. Barney, Marshal.

Columbia Fire Company was organized December 10, 1877. Officers and members: W. G. Bresee, Foreman; J. Jackson and R. Cunningham, Assistants; C. E. Fowler, Secretary; T. F. Sweeney, Treasurer; Charles Mohring, E. J. Davis, C. Randall, E. Kendall, J. Kendall, H. Annis, C. Cooper, D. McLarty, D. Griffiths, S. B. Kendall, L. Zick and J. Richards. This company was disbanded on the 9th of April, 1880.

On the 13th of November, L. J. Sawyer was elected Chief Engineer of the Fire Department, by the Common Council, but did not qualify. J. Cagney was chosen Assistant Chief, and the City Clerk and City Treasurer appointed to act as ex officio Clerk and Treasurer. The present Assistant Engineer is Andrew Hirscher.

Since the organization of the department, there have been three fires in Columbus. March 19, 1878, the calaboose was destroyed; March 27, the same year, J. J. Sutton's dwelling and barn, a somewhat memorable fire in the annals of Columbus; September 27, 1878, J. Kuhl's dwelling.

LODGES AND SOCIETIES.

The common tendency of civilized people to form themselves into societies for mutual advancement developed itself at a very early day in Columbus. From records still in existence, we find that a lodge of Odd Fellows was founded here, in 1849. It was called Columbus Lodge,

No. 40, and was organized on the 12th of September, with D. F. Newcomb, Andrew Higley, Benj. F. Hart, F. A. Fowler, J. J. Guppey, H. S. Haskell and Jerome B. Fargo as charter members. It prospered and grew in numbers until 1872, when it suspended operations.

In 1869, Benjamin Kelsey, J. R. Jones, A. H. Vanvoorhes, C. H. Townley, T. C. Charles, E. Richards and A. Miller applied for and received a charter for Ridgley Lodge, No. 165, but upon discovery that there already existed a lodge by that name (No. 82), it became necessary to adopt a new title for the new lodge, and on the 8th of May (the charter bears date of April 24, 1869) the word Gem, was substituted for Ridgley. The present officers of Gem Lodge are: F. Wirth, N. G.; Samuel McLarty, V. G.; W. G. Bresee, Sec.; L. Williams, P. S.; Robert Griffiths, Treas. The lodge has sixty-one members.

Mizpah Encampment, No. 61.—Organized May 6, 1875, with C. L. Dering as C. P.; Robert Griffiths, H. P.; F. W. Hart, Treas.; L. Williams, S. W.; C. S. McFadyen, J. W.; and L. E. Everson, Scribe. The present officers are: W. K. Hosken, C. P.; C. S. McFadyen, H. P.; R. Griffiths, S. W.; Benjamin Kelsey, J. W.; F. Wirth, Treas.; W. G. Bresee, Scribe. Number of members, twenty-three.

Irene (Rebecca) Lodge, No. 59.—Chartered November 25, 1879, with the following signatory members: W. A. Thompson, T. B. Elmore, C. Thiese, W. J. Edwards, W. K. Hosken, J. F. Buschke, S. McLarty, W. G. Bresee, A. D. Brewer, R. Griffiths, H. Annis, L. F. Owen, J. R. Jones, J. R. Decker, L. E. Everson, G. McIntyre, C. S. McFadyen, M. G. Todd, F. Wirth, and sisters Hosken, Griffiths, Bresee, Annis, Todd, Jones, Brewer, Thiese, Elmore and Decker. The present officers are: Samuel McLarty, N. G.; Mrs. H. M. Todd, V. G.; W. G. Bresee, Sec.; Mrs. W. K. Hosken, Treas. Thirty-two members. Meetings are held by the various lodges over Bassett & Davis' store.

The Masons—Columbus Lodge, No. 75.—Organized June 12, 1856, with the following charter members: F. Macauley Black, Edward Jussen, Silas Axtell, Peter Wentz, S. C. Higby, A. P. Birdsey, J. S. Manning, Benjamin Campbell, J. A. Elliott, B. F. Hart, J. J. Smith, E. E. Chapin, B. Chase, Robert Mills and J. H. Valentine. Messrs. Black, Jussen and Axtell were the first officers. The present are M. Adams, W. M.; N. Sawyer, S. W.; E. Churchill, J. W.; J. A. Erhart, Treas.; B. E. Johnson, Sec.; O. E. Cornwell, S. D.; L. A. Randall, J. D.; D. D. Kelsey, Tiler. Meetings are held over Griswold's store, where the lodge has a well-appointed hall.

The Good Templars.—As early as 1850, an organization known as the Sons of Temperance was effected in Columbus, and the work of reformation in this direction has gone steadily forward with slight variations of success. Among those who were prominently connected with the various temperance movements of early times, may be mentioned Chester W. Dean,* W. W. Drake, John H. Valentine, William McCracken,* R. W. Chadbourn, Samuel McLarty, H. Loomis, A. D. Williams, Milford Loomis, D. F. Newcomb,* and others. Meetings were then held over Swarhout's drug store, where Hayden Brothers' place now is. The ladies of the village took an active part, and the society succeeded in gathering quite an extensive library. On one occasion the lady members were allowed to vote on an important question, and this being a violation of the then existing condition of things, the Grand Lodge of the Sons of Temperance threatened a revocation of their charter and a confiscation of the property belonging to the liberal-minded cold-water champions of Columbus. In order that they might save their library, the lodge surrendered their charter to the Grand Lodge and went over to the Good Templars in a body. About 1855, a grand temperance sleigh-ride was gotten up. Three or four "bobs" were lashed together with ropes, and eight horses hitched to the concern. Fifty-six persons took passage for Beaver Dam in it. An hour and a half's drive brought the party to their destination, where a temperance dinner awaited them.

On the 6th of February, 1874, Columbus Lodge, No. 46, I. O. G. T., was organized with the following charter members: E. D. Kanouse, E. G. Stitt, Rev. W. A. Cain, L. Williams and wife, R. Griffiths and wife, Walter Stitt, T. H. McConnell, Mrs. A. McConnell, Annie * Dead.

M. McConnell, C. E. McConnell, Joel Winch, Mollie Campbell, H. D. James, Alice Randall, F. L. Jones, Willie Loomis, J. F. Shadduck, F. W. Hart, Theron Dodd, D. J. Kelsey, J. W. Campbell and wife, Eugene Everson, J. W. Quain, W. E. Bath, Hattie Tyng Griswold, Lorinda M. Drake, George Drake, Ettie Lee, George Spencer, T. D. Stultz, J. Roberts, W. G. Bresee and M. G. St. John. The present officers of the society are: T. Sanderson, W. C. T.; Nellie McLarty, W. V. T.; J. Harris, W. S.; R. Griffiths, W. F. R.; May Harris, W. T.; Anna Loomis, W. C.; R. Turner, Marshal; J. Birdsey, I. G.; H. W. Meyers, O. G. Meetings are held over R. Griffiths' furniture store.

Columbus Temple, No. 19, T. of H.—Instituted April 23, 1875. Charter members, Rev. H. Sewell, E. D. Kanouse, B. F. Hart, M. G. St. John, Jay Jennings, E. E. Jones, J. R. Jones, William Cole, R. T. Williams, R. Griffiths, P. J. Umbrite, H. Annis, G. Tollard, T. H. McConnell, A. Whitney, T. L. Jones, L. Williams, J. W. Quain, F. W. Hart, J. Jackson, M. W. Sawyer, E. Federly and Samuel Hutchinson. There are now seventy-five members in the temple; following are the officers: R. Griffiths, W. C. T.; D. McLarty, W. V. T.; S. McLarty, P. W. C. T.; M. W. Sawyer, Rec. Sec.; H. Annis, Asst. Sec.; W. Thompson, Fin. Sec.; S. Nelson, Treas.; A. W. Fuller, U.; F. Heise, D. U.; John Leith, W. S.; J. McConnell, W. G. Meetings are held over R. Griffiths' furniture store.

Turnverein Germania.—The "Columbus Turnverein Society" was the title of an organization which existed from about 1865 to 1869. Through a lack of proper interest it disbanded, and, in 1874, a new organization was effected with the same laudable objects which had animated the leaders of the one defunct. A permanent organization was reached October 14, the books showing the following charter members: J. Engel, O. Vogl, M. Alft, F. Wirth, H. F. Vogl, G. Morrisse, Antone Winter, J. G. Stahl, J. Siepp, C. Mohring, J. Kurth, J. Altschwager, G. Knaak, L. Knaak, C. Roth and G. Sproesser. The first officers were: Otto Vogl, President; C. Mohring, Vice President; F. Wirth, Treasurer; J. Engel, Secretary. The present are: John Topp, President; J. A. Erhart, Vice President; F. Wirth, Treasurer; J. Engel, Secretary; M. Ehrmann and H. A. Leuders, Wardens. The Turnverein is composed of about forty-five members, and is located in Henderson's Opera House.

St. Jerome's Temperance Society.—Organized January 1, 1876, by the election of the following officers: President, Terrence Flannagan; Vice President, M. V. Cunningham; Secretary, B. Conlin; Treasurer, John Crook; Spiritual Director, Rev. H. J. Roche. In May, 1880, a library association was formed by the members of this society, and they now have 100 volumes of choice books. The present officers of the society are: President, Stephen Tobin; Vice President, T. Conlin; Secretary, R. S. Cunningham. Mr. Roche is a strong advocate of temperance principles, and is meeting with considerable success in his work.

CEMETERIES.

When Lewis Ludington platted the village of Columbus in 1844, he donated to the use of the citizens of both town and village for burial purposes the most appropriate spot within the boundaries of the plat—the rise of ground now lying in the northeastern portion of the city. The first burial made there was that of the body of Hiram Allen, an early settler, who died in 1845. The cemetery question has entered quite largely into local political contests. When the city was incorporated, it was stipulated that there should be no change in the existing arrangements between the village and town. The matter has since been regulated by the Legislature, as follows: "Whenever any town cemetery shall become embraced within the limits of any city the duties and powers of the town board relating thereto shall be exercised by the Common Council."

Catholic Cemetery.—In 1868, St. Jerome's Parish purchased of A. G. Cook suitable grounds for cemetery purposes just north of the public burying-ground. The first interment made therein was in the spring of 1869, the body of Maurice Cunningham, who died the winter previous and was buried temporarily in the churchyard, being transferred to the new plat. The grounds have been appropriately laid out and beautified, and the little groves of crosseg that mingle with the growing shrubbery bear ample evidence that the hand of Death has not been idle.

LOCAL REMINISCENCES.

There are many good stories of early times in Columbus, but they are mostly of the character of the majority of good stories—they lose their best qualities when told in print; press a rose between “morocco” or “sheep” and its fragrance will vanish. The knowledge-box of the average “early settler” teems with pioneer reminiscences, ludicrous and pathetic; but it takes the “average early settler” to relate them. It is beyond the pen of the historian to portray, with any depth of interest, the incidents in John Swarthout’s first pilgrimage to Columbus. It is an easy matter to say, in bare words, that John was the captain of a “prairie schooner” propelled by several yoke of oxen, and that he found himself “unequal to the occasion” whenever it became necessary for him to “talk ox”—for John had been reared a city boy and knew more of the efficacy of pills and squills than he did of the language usually applied to beasts of burden of the bovine species. Stripped of the intonations and gestures of the narrator, the story loses its charm.

It would also be a difficult matter for any one besides Uriah Davies to describe the appearance of Mr. Swarthout when he came to Columbus the second time, dressed in new “store clothes,” his young and tender brow shaded from the torrid rays of the sun by a genteel, and at that date very stylish, white soft hat. Quite a difference of opinion existed among the settlers as to the nature of the stranger’s calling; some insisted that he was a minister, while others declared this view to be a libel upon the church. It was some days before the new-comer found favor in their sight.

Nor can a correct history be written of the “Codfish Society,” so long ago has it been since their martial tread was heard in the streets of Columbus. They were wont to rouse “the boys” from their slumbers and “press them in” at all hours of the night. This once famous quasi-military society acquired its name from the alacrity with which its members could surround and annihilate a salt codfish. Its eminent commander saw actual service during the rebellion, leading the gallant Twenty-third through the domain of King Cotton. Codfish was then a luxury.

There were initiations by that immortal brotherhood, the A. O. O. T. O (Ancient Order of One Thousand and One), which, in point of thoroughness, rivaled all other initiations ever heard of. Patent-medicine men, patent-right sharps and such like adventurers, willing to sacrifice a little principle to gain “business prestige,” fell easy victims. Occasionally a resident candidate took the “degree” and became honored with membership. But the order is no more. It has passed away, with many another institution, whose existence was in accordance with the conditions of society.

It has been deemed proper to preserve a few incidents of early times, as illustrating what those conditions of society were. One of the first settlers in Columbus, who is still living, says the first winter he spent in the place he boarded at the hotel. If there is one thing about that hotel he remembers more distinctly than another, it was the landlady, who was a large, masculine-looking woman, well proportioned (though rather too corpulent to be considered a good figure), and withal a woman of great strength. She sometimes displayed her physical powers in leading unprofitable customers out by the ears, and was, at times, something of a terror to the boarders generally. Our pioneer informant recollects on one occasion hearing an unusual noise in the kitchen of the ancient hostelry, and upon going to see what wonderful thing had happened, found one of the male boarders being used as a rolling-pin by the female Samson. The unfortunate man had in some way interfered with the landlady’s prerogative. She was engaged at the time rolling out biscuit on a large table, and had taken the offending boarder, and, sprinkling him well with flour, forcibly laid him across the table, and was rolling him back and forward over the dough, in place of the wooden instrument commonly used for that purpose. The astonished observer of the proceeding thought it best not to interfere. But the old lady soon after came to grief at the hands of her victim. It was in this wise: She very frequently put in an appearance when anything interesting was going on, and seemed anxious to know all about it, sometimes taking part in the fun. One afternoon, quite a number of men had collected in front of the hotel, and were engaged in shooting a rifle. The female giant came to the door and said she wasn't afraid to shoot a gun, and would like to try what she could do. The gentleman who had, but a short time previous, been made to serve as a rolling-pin was present; his time had come to square accounts with his tormentor. There was an old musket setting in the bar-room, which, when heavily loaded, was wonderfully given to kicking. Indeed it was difficult to tell which was the safer end of the gun to stand in front of when it was discharged. The old "fusee" was brought out and given to the landlady, who knew nothing of the old musket's history, and was equally ignorant of the handling of fire-arms of any caliber. Seizing the weapon, she placed the silent end against her stomach (not her shoulder, as most people do), and pulled the trigger. The reverberating report of the musket was followed by a heavy thud upon the ground. The old lady and the gun had suddenly parted company. The target was untouched, but the earth in front of the hotel looked as if it had stopped a meteor. Dr. Axtell happened to be present, and by the free use of camphor, the old lady was restored, but she was never again known to engage in artillery practice.

It is related that the first attempt to hold a religious meeting in Columbus occurred in 1846. A well-groomed young man put in an appearance one Saturday afternoon and exposed written notices on the four corners, announcing that on the day following he would conduct divine service in the schoolhouse, which was then regarded as an imposing structure. Something of a congregation of both sexes duly occupied the benches. The prayer was made fluently enough, and the reading of the sacred poetry was accomplished without any perceptible violence to the sentences. Then the divine plunged glibly into the delivery of his discourse, but, after rolling out a single paragraph, he hesitated, and at once fell over the fragments of a sentence and finally went back to his beginning again. This provoked a ripple of merriment, which was quickly subdued, when, after a little "scoring," his sermon got under headway again. He broke down a second time at the same place, and when he again went back to the commencement to re-form, it was amid something like a general laugh. He went on once more briskly enough till he reached the old pitfall, and there he floundered hopelessly for the third time. The laugh was general and hearty now. In a pause of it the speaker proceeded to say: "I have always believed that I could preach, and, being among strangers, I thought I would take advantage of the opportunity. It's the first time I ever tried it, and, ladies and gentlemen, I haven't done near as well as I expected." Thereupon he fished up his hat, and, quickly vanishing, was never again recognized in these parts.

In 1846, Elder Winchell, a clergyman of the Baptist style of doing things, arranged for a meeting in the village and secured for the occasion an apartment in the old hotel that then occupied the present site of the Fox House, and which offered about the only feasible place in the settlement for the public breaking of the bread of life. A few of the villagers gathered in to refresh their recollection of meeting as they had been accustomed to it before their removal to the frontier; but the audience must have been very small indeed, as the residents of the entire hamlet then would not have made a corporal's guard. The minister made fair sailing with the preliminary exercises, and had just started in his discourse with some show even of listening on the part of his little congregation. All at once, however, their attention seemed diverted toward some object in the street and momentarily became more engaged. Presently one of the little company went softly out on tiptoe; then another, and another, after which the balance of the flock stood not on the order of their going but went noiselessly out in a body, leaving the surprised minister entirely alone, and not yet advanced to the middle of his sermon. Bassett & Arnold had recently built a little store, which stood somewhere near the present location of Leuders & Krause's new block, and Bassett, who had been East for a stock of goods, had arrived that Sunday forenoon with a load of mixed merchandise, and his appearance with it in the streets was so great an event that it caused the stampede mentioned, and undoubtedly gave the preacher an experience entirely new in his ministry.

There is "a good one" told of J. T. Lewis, and it is worth preserving for posterity. Not long after his arrival in Columbus, the now ex-Governor was met near the place where he now resides, by E. Thayer and H. Cady. They had just wounded a deer, and the animal was over the hill using his best endeavors to escape. They were on foot and Mr. Lewis was mounted on his Indian pony, and they requested him to give pursuit and secure their venison. Now, it may be premised that he knew as little about the cervine quadruped as any man in these parts, but he gave chase. The difference in the speed of the pony and that of the wounded buck was hardly discernible, but the former gained slowly, and after a sharp run came alongside. The rider was at the moment perfectly guiltless of any weapons of offense or defense, and the buck had ugly antlers, a circumstance before unthought of, but Mr. Lewis unhesitatingly flung that physique which was subsequently to embellish the gubernatorial chair of Wisconsin, prone upon the back of the running deer. It was a seat even more uncertain than the seat of power, and his future Excellency was precipitated several yards into the snow. He shook himself from his descent, and, bethinking himself of his pocket knife, followed on foot the now almost exhausted animal, and, after one or two ineffectual attempts, succeeded in dispatching the deer by stabbing him in the neck, and was himself completely covered with blood.

The national anniversary of our independence was first commemorated in Columbus in 1846. Most of the settlers for miles around were convened and expressed their patriotism without any reference to the conventionalities that came in later years. The country tavern which then stood on the present site of the Fox House, had been transferred by Mr. Whitney to a Mr. L. Thomas, and here the dance, indispensable at such a time, was held. In those days most of the settlers were young or unmarried men, and the gentler sex did not exist in the proportion in which they are now to be found. Partners were in demand, and all the wearers of petticoats were impressed into the service. Many of those who were noted for their grave and dignified deportment that year passed the night of the 2d decorating the hall, danced all night on the 3d, and spent the night of the 4th in general jollification. The portico of J. T. Lewis' little law office was the rostrum for the orator of the day, who was Mr. Lewis himself, and Dr. Axtell read the Declaration of Independence. The ordnance consisted of a couple of anvils, the one inverted on the other, and the martial music to stir the patriotic breast of the early residents included a fife and drum, the latter manipulated by A. P. Birdsey.

The first court ever held in Columbus was when the old district system obtained, and was presided over by Judge Alexander W. Stowe in the old schoolhouse. Judge C. H. Larrabee was elected for this district, but at the time had made an exchange. Judge Stowe was an old bachelor of rather an harmonious turn of mind, and several dry jokes are related concerning him. During the first term of the court, T. Clark Smith was Sheriff and H. A. Whitney was Deputy. In the first case that was tried the jury went out under the direction of the Deputy to a room in the Whitney House to make up their verdict. The deliberation extended into the night, and the jurors, becoming convinced they could not agree, suddenly dispersed through the window, despite all the efforts of the deputy.

It was at this same term of court that Judge Stowe fined a petit juror for contempt, to which judicial visitation the party punished replied promptly and cheerfully, "Fine and be d—d," whereupon the court "went and saw him" in a second mulct, which satisfied him.

The first proceedings in the Justice Court in Columbus was an action of assault and battery, wherein one Joseph Brown did do Bob Mills bodily harm contrary to law. He was tried before Squire Allen.

Josiah Arnold, now Mayor of Portage, was a Columbus pioneer. He was a Massachusetts boy, and his birthplace was among the hills of Berkshire. He came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1843, and located at Janesville, then a small settlement. In 1845, Arnold and D. E. Bassett, another Columbus pioneer, started business together at Janesville, and conducted it there for about a year. Thinking the demands of trade too fully met in Janesville, Arnold started northward on horseback, in August, 1845, to find a new location. He came by way of Lake Mills and Waterloo, and night overtook him about six miles south of the hamlet of Columbus.

He inquired at the double log house, which was then occupied by a man named Paddock, and which is on the farm now occupied by Cyrus Montgomery, if he could find accommodations for the night. The lady of the rude mansion, which was kept as a sort of hostelry, told him that he could, if he would take care of his own horse. He accordingly mowed the animal some feed from the luxuriant meadow of nature which grew close by the premises, and stabled him in the log barn, which was well built enough for those times, except that it was roofless and without doors. There was no intimation of supper that evening, but as Arnold had eaten late in the afternoon, he did not suffer in consequence of that omission. Stopping at the house at that time, was a bridal party which added to the interest of Arnold's first night in this part of Wisconsin. Mayor Fisk had recently been married to a daughter of Zenas Robbins, and as the course of true love was running very rough in his case, he had found it expedient to put some distance between him and his irretrievable father-in-law. He was a devotee of the violin, and he fiddled away the hours of his honeymoon there in the wilderness in careless happiness, as if he was the possessor of millions, instead of being penniless. Arnold at length grew drowsy under the influence of this indifferent execution of "Old Zip Coon," "The Arkansas Traveler," and other harmonies of that ilk, mixed with much billing and cooing, and was shown to bed without any light. During the night, Paddock returned home from Columbus in a condition the reverse of sober. The second floor was thin and full of cracks, and Arnold had the complete benefit of the rough eloquence with which Mrs. Paddock assailed her lord for an hour or more on the enormity of going to Columbus and getting drunk, with a stranger in the house, the cows not come up, and not a mouthful for anybody to eat. When Arnold awoke the next morning, the light was shining full in his face through the rents in the roof, and a line of chickens were roosting calmly on a pole stretching across the room at right angles with his bed. The breakfast of which Arnold and the happy bride and groom partook that morning consisted of tea without milk or sugar, dry bread and stewed tomatoes.

Arnold came into Columbus that day, and purchased the lot opposite the Fox House, 150 feet front, for $30; Bassett and Arnold built a store that fall, and went into business, though they did not remove all their goods from Janesville until the following spring. Arnold continued a resident of Columbus until the fall of 1851, when, having been elected Register of Deeds, he removed to Portage, where in 1853 he and "Bony" Fargo established themselves in the hardware business in what was known as the old Verandah Block. Fargo subsequently went to California, and is now one of the leading wholesale liquor dealers in San Francisco.

TRAVEL NOW AND THEN.

BY H. D. BATH.

One of our business men has pressing business in Milwaukee, and while yet the nocturnal darkness shadows his sleeping neighbors, he shakes himself from his slumbers and reaches the railroad depot. The quiet of that gloomy period that precedes daybreak by a couple of hours rests in all the surroundings, which look as if life or animation never fell upon or entwined them. It is the period when animal life is at its lowest ebb; when the powers of darkness and of radiance are beginning a combat, the result of which will be a new day. He feels the depressing influence of the time, and half regrets the precipitancy that led to his taking an early train. But he waits drowsily for the coming conveyance, and perhaps, in the mean time draws a practical comparison as to the yielding of slumber between the hard benches of the waiting room and his own comfortable bed. There is a languor upon him that speaks of nature violated and the diminution of her sweet restorer, and he falls into a troubled nap. Amid the dreams that flit across it, the carpet bag under his head seems gradually to assume Alpine altitude and ruggedness, and to produce a proportionate strain on the back of the neck. Presently, he catches an approaching rumble which suggests to his bewildered faculties the opening of an overture. Only half awakened, he reaches the platform and is in the midst of the glare of the great fiery eye of the advancing locomotive. Though expecting it, he cannot repress the momentary impression that it is a colossal living monster, glaring with accumulated life, as in passing its hot breath steams into his face. Amid the clanging of the warning bell, the shrieking of the whistle, the grinding of the brakes, the multiplied rattle of wheels, the voices of the conductor, baggage-man and brakeman, the din of the gradual annihilation of trunks, words of good bye, the thud of the fuel falling into the tender to replenish the red-hot man of the engine, he takes his seat in the cushioned car and is soon wrapped in comfortable unconsciousness, and is passively gliding, at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour, toward the coming morning and his place of destination. And who can indicate the magnificence of those unlockings of the eastern portals from the first purple flash that steals through the orient gate, when it is but half ajar to the full glory of the perfect day as it streams forth regardless of any barrier. Seen from a car platform with the pure fresh breeze rushing against the cheek, youth and health find an ecstasy in the situation that words do not express. Our traveler arrives in Milwaukee just as the first murmur of business has begun to rise from the busy metropolis. He breakfasts liberally and has a full half-day to attend to business before the next return train, taking which he is home again the same day at 5 o'clock, P. M.

This is the manner in which the people in Columbus now reach the chief city of the State; but some of our residents remember when travel was a thing far different. It was quite another affair in 1844, when a visit to the county seat, then at Plover, was a horseback pilgrimage of many days' duration, on which the solitary traveler guided his course through the wilderness "by the blaze." We meet on our streets every day comparatively young men who went to Milwaukee from this (then) village with trams when the trip was a campaign of fourteen days through mud and rain and swamp and wood. The main route was by what is known as the old Government road, by the way of Lake Mills, Aztalan, and the junction of the Watertown and Aztalan roads, twelve miles east of Watertown, at which junction stood an old tavern that many have good reason for remembering well. Thence the road was to Summit, to within two miles of Oconomowoc, when the Watertown plank-road was reached. In particularly bad weather it was necessary to go around by the way of Whitewater, Palmyra and Waukesha. Men who were on the road in those days tell us of being stuck in the mud, and, after ineffectually laboring until nearly night to extricate their wagons, mounting a horse and going for assistance and being all the next day in getting back to them. Subsequently, travel went by way of Lowell, and not unfrequently it was a day's hard work to transport a load to that point. Gliding so easily across the country in these times, we do not realize how arduous was the travel in those days of the pioneers.

CHAPTER XII.

TOWN OF ARLINGTON—VILLAGE OF ARLINGTON—TOWN OF CALEDONIA—TOWN OF COLUMBUS—TOWN OF COURTLAND—VILLAGE OF CAMBRIA—VILLAGE OF RANDOLPH—TOWN OF DEKORRA —VILLAGE OF DEKORRA—VILLAGE OF POYNETTE—TOWN OF FORT WINNEBAGO.

TOWN OF ARLINGTON.

The first permanent settlement in Arlington was made by Clark M. Young, on Section 1, in the spring of 1838. For six years, he was "monarch of all he surveyed" in this town, there being no other settler to dispute his claim. J. Pratt came in 1844; and during that year and the six following, came a large number, including N. Van Winter, Nathan Hazen, William A. McIntosh, Fred Starr, Hugh McFarlane, Jeremy Bradley, Mark Meadowcraft, John Franklin, Usual Youngs, George Bradley, A. P. Smith, Isaac N. Brown, H. N. Joy, Thomas Rassou, Mr. Jackson, Samuel D. Drake, Ambrose Powers and Henry Hill.

Upon the organization of the county, the east half of Township 10, Range 9, was included in the Lowville Precinct, and the west half was, with other territory on the west, known as the Pleasant Valley Precinct. In 1849, the east half of this township, together with Township 10, Range 10, and the south half of Township 11, Range 10, was organized into a town to be known as Lowville; the west half, together with Township 10, Range 8, and the fractional part of Township 10, Range 7, was the same time organized under the name of Lodi. In 1850, the east half, with Township 10, Range 10, was organized under the name of Kossuth; the west half remaining as before. In 1855, all of this township, except Sections 6, 7, 18, 19, 30 and 31, was organized into a town, under the name of Arlington. For many years, the effort was made to have restored to the town these sections. The courts were appealed to, but could give no redress; the Legislature was also asked to pass a special act for this purpose. This was refused, but an act was passed authorizing the County Board of Supervisors to attend to the matter. In 1871, the Board passed a resolution permitting the change, provided the town would assume the proportionate amount of the debt of the town of Lodi, which would be collected from the owners of the sections named. This was accordingly done, and these sections became part of the town of Arlington, thus made to comprise the entire township. The debt assumed amounted to $4,375.

Thomas Rassou and Tirza Jackson were united in marriage in 1846, being the first couple married in the town.

James H., son of Clark M., and Jeannet Young, was born May 6, 1846, being the first birth in the town.

The first death was Charles W., son of Clark M., and Jeannet Young, who died in the summer of 1849.

At the house of Usual Youngs was taught the first school in the town in the summer of 1847. In the spring of 1848, a log schoolhouse was built on Section 1, and in the following fall, Miss Sarah Richardson taught the first term of school therein. The first school in the central part of the town was on Section 22, and was taught by Miss Caroline A. Foster, in 1854. In the spring of 1880, there were in the town six whole and three joint districts, with six school-houses valued at $2,000. Number of pupils, 425.

Rev. Henry Maynard, an itinerant of the Methodist Episcopal Church, preached the first sermon in this town at the house of Clark M. Young in the summer of 1845. For several years he visited the town from time to time, but no class was formed. In 1854, Rev. T. Lewis, of Lodi, a Presbyterian minister, preached at the house of A. P. Smith, and shortly after a congregation was formed, but no church building was erected.

When Clark M. Young settled on Section 1, in 1838, there was not a house between there and Columbus; only one until Portage, then Fort Winnebago, was reached—that of Wallace Rowan, of which mention is made in the history of the town of Dekorra; and but one between there and Madison.

The town of Arlington is almost altogether upon the top of the watershed, having a surface of rolling prairie, and a general altitude of 450 to 570 feet. In the northern row of sections, this high ground breaks down abruptly 200 feet toward the headwaters of Okee Creek. The Madison & Portage Railroad was built through the town in 1870, passing through Sections 2, 11, 14, 13, 24, 25 and 36. A station was located on Section 13, to afford farmers in the vicinity facilities for the shipment of grain and stock. The town is an exclusively agricultural one, and said by the State geologist to be one of the best in the State.

In the spring of 1875, a stock company was organized under the name of the Arlington Cheese Manufacturing Company, with a paid-up capital of $2,000. A. W. Vaughan was elected President; George Clark, Secretary; Levi Clapp, Treasurer. The manufactory was put in operation that season, and 40,000 pounds of cheese were manufactured. The amount has been increased year by year, in 1878, it being 97,000 pounds.

The following is a list of town officers from the organization of Arlington to the present time:

1855—Nathan Hazen, Chairman; H. N. Joy, James H. Foster, Supervisors; Julius Austin, Clerk; Clark M. Young, Treasurer; Solomon Matteson, Assessor; Ambrose Powers, School Superintendent.

1856—A. P. Smith, Chairman; Phincas Watson, Isaac N. Brown, Supervisors; Julius Austin, Clerk; John C. Dunning, Treasurer, Solomon Matteson, Assessor; Ambrose Powers, School Superintendent.

1857—Julius Austin, Chairman; Lewis Newton, H. N. Joy, Supervisors; W. Bullen, Clerk; C. C. Knapin, Treasurer; T. Matteson, Assessor; L. H. Smith, School Superintendent.

1858—J. Austin, Chairman; J. T. Hillyer, Mark Meadowcraft, Supervisors; W. Bullen, B. Look, Treasurers; Solomon Matteson, Assessor; A. Powers, School Superintendent.

1859—J. T. Hillyer, Chairman; H. N. Joy, T. T. Dunning, Supervisors; A. O. Dole, Clerk; Joseph McIntosh, Treasurer; Solomon Matteson, Assessor; Ambrose Powers, School Superintendent.

1860—J. T. Hillyer, Chairman; H. N. Joy, J. H. Foster, Supervisors; D. Drown, Treasurer; A. O. Dole, Clerk; Solomon Matteson, Assessor; A. G. Dunning, School Superintendent.

1861—H. J. Sill, Chairman; Thomas Mair, Dan. W. Burlison, Supervisors; Andrew J. McFarlane, Clerk; Ambrose Powers, Treasurer; Jeremy Bradley, Assessor; A. G. Dunning, School Superintendent.

1862—H. J. Sill, Chairman; A. Powers, L. Clapp, Supervisors; Andrew J. McFarlane, Clerk; E. B. Thomas, Treasurer; Solomon Matteson, Assessor.

1863—J. T. Hillyer, Chairman; G. A. Clark, A. Powers, Supervisors; A. G. Dunning, Clerk; E. B. Thomas, Treasurer; Solomon Matteson, Assessor.

1864—J. T. Hillyer, Chairman; A. Powers, G. A. Clark, Supervisors; L. H. Smith, Clerk; E. B. Thomas, Treasurer; Solomon Matteson, Assessor.

1865—Winslow Bullen, Chairman; William Caldwell, Ingle Spoonan, Supervisors; L. H. Smith, Clerk; Adam Culdon, Treasurer; T. S. Phillips, Assessor.

1866—Winslow Bullen, Chairman; G. A. Clark, William Caldwell, Supervisors; L. H. Smith, Clerk; Adam Culdon, Treasurer; T. S. Phillips, Assessor.

1867—W. Bullen, Chairman; A. Powers, William Caldwell, Supervisors; L. H. Smith, Clerk; J. J. Hunt, Treasurer; T. S. Phillips, Assessor.

1868—Winslow Bullen, Chairman; L. Lintner, J. Witters, Supervisors; L. H. Smith, Clerk; Judson J. Hunt, Treasurer; Joseph Axon, Assessor.

1869—W. Bullen, Chairman; L. Lintner, William Currie, Supervisors; L. H. Smith, Clerk; O. S. Bartlett, Treasurer; Joseph Axon, Assessor.

1870—Hugh McFarlane, Chairman; Ingle Spoonan, C. M. Young, Supervisors; L. H. Smith, Clerk; O. S. Bartlett, Treasurer; Judson J. Hunt, Assessor.

1871—Hugh McFarlane, Chairman; Ingle E. Spoonan, Louis Lintner, Supervisors; L. H. Smith, Clerk; Charles Mair, Treasurer; William Stevenson, Assessor.

1872—Hugh McFarlane, Chairman; Robert Wilson, David Bullen, Supervisors; George C. Clark, Clerk; Charles Mair, Treasurer; William Stevenson, Assessor.

1873—Hugh McFarlane, Chairman; O. S. Bartlett, John Caldwell, Supervisors; L. H. Smith, Clerk; Allen Bogue, Treasurer; B. E. Jones, Assessor.

1874—Hugh McFarlane, Chairman; John Caldwell, O. S. Bartlett, Supervisors; L. H. Smith, Clerk; Allen Bogue, Treasurer; B. E. Jones, Assessor.

1875—Allen Bogue, Chairman; William McCulley, O. S. Bartlett, Supervisors; L. H. Smith, Clerk; George McMillan, Treasurer; E. B. Jones, Assessor.

1876—A. Bogue, Chairman; O. S. Bartlett, William Stevenson, Supervisors; L. H. Smith, Clerk; George McMillan, Treasurer; John Caldwell, Assessor.

1877—A. Bogue, Chairman; O. S. Bartlett, William Stevenson, Supervisors; L. H. Smith, Clerk; George McMillan, Treasurer; John Campbell, Assessor.

1878—A. Bogue, Chairman; O. S. Bartlett, William Stevenson, Supervisors; L. H. Smith, Clerk; George McMillan, Treasurer; John Caldwell, Assessor.

1879—A. Bogue, Chairman; William Stevenson, William Bartlett, Supervisors; L. H. Smith, Clerk; George McMillan, Treasurer; William Dunlap, Assessor.

1880—Adam Bogue, Chairman; Thomas Mair, August Gundlach, Supervisors; L. H. Smith, Clerk; David Bullen, Treasurer; William Dunlap, Assessor.

VILLAGE OF ARLINGTON.

The village of Arlington, located upon Section 13, of the town of Arlington, was platted in 1871, by Mrs. Sarah Pierce and David Bullen, the former owning the land upon the north side of the main street, and the latter the land upon the south side.

The first house was built by Winslow Bullen, in the same summer, the lower story of which was used as a store, by George McMillan, he being the first to engage in the mercantile trade, and the upper part was rented for a dwelling.

The first house used exclusively as a dwelling house was erected by Charles Ginther.

Charles and George Ginther were the first blacksmiths, and opened in 1875. Their run of work rapidly increased, and soon the business of wagon and carriage making was added, and in the spring of 1880, the firm, then being Ginther & Seiler, were doing a lucrative business.

The Arlington Hotel was erected in 1871, by John McMillan, and has been run by him up to the present time. It is a two-story frame, and will accommodate fifteen or twenty guests.

The second person to engage in mercantile trade was H. W. Hall, who sold goods about two years; the third was Winslow Bullen, who in the summer of 1877, opened a stock of general merchandise, in the building erected originally for that purpose, in 1871.

George Ginther and Miss Nellie Shanks were the first couple united in marriage in the village limits, which event occurred in December, 1876.

The first birth was Jessie, daughter of George and Ann McMillan, in the summer of 1875.

The Madison & Portage, now Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, Railroad, was completed through the village in the summer of 1871, a depot erected, and Edward Watkinson appointed agent. D. C. Moak, F. R. Morris, Charles Morris, A. D. Goodrich and William Caldwell, have, in the order named, been agents since that date. A large amount of grain is shipped from this station.

A post office was established here in 1871, with Mrs. Adeline C. Paine as Postmistress. George McMillan, H. W. Hall, and again George McMillan, have since then been Postmasters.

TOWN OF CALEDONIA.

This town is the largest in territory in the county, being situated on its western boundary line, by which it is separated from the towns of Greenfield and Merrimack, in Sauk County. It consists of that part of Township 11, Range 8, lying west of the Wisconsin River, and that part of Township 12, Ranges 8 and 9, lying south and west of the same river, making 54 full and 14 fractional sections of land. It is watered by the Baraboo River, which enters the town in the northwestern part, at Section 18, Township 12, Range 8, and flows southeasterly into the Wisconsin River, at Section 29, of the same township and range. There are two small streams in the southern part, that flow into the Wisconsin River, and one into the Baraboo. The lands in this town are undulating, with numerous bluffs and high hills, which are found in different parts of the town, and particularly on the Wisconsin River, and are covered mostly by oak openings. On the Baraboo River are numerous marshes or meadow lands, and some prairie in the northern part. In this town the country is generally much lower than the quartzite range, but in parts quite broken and hilly. Its general altitude runs from 200 to 300 feet, whilst outlying bluffs in Sections 9, 10, 15, 16 and 21 reach altitudes from 450 to 540 feet. Some of these rise abruptly from the north bank of the Wisconsin, and have directly opposite to them on the south bank of the river, the similar bluffs of Dekorra, causing for a short distance an unusually narrow bottom.

The first settlement made in this town was by Alexander McDonald, who built a claim shanty on the northwest quarter of Section 2, Township 11, Range 8, June, 1840. Madam Panquette was then living on the bank of the river, on the west side, within the present limits of the city of Portage, trading with the Indians; also a half-breed named Leambro, on the bluff on Section 27, Township 12, Range 8, who was farming on some old Indian fields, and was also trading with the Indians. In June, 1841, Thomas ("Daddy") Robinson came on a claim nearly opposite Dekorra Village. He boarded at La Fayette Hill's, in what was then called "Kentucky City," afterward Dekorra. Some others made claims that year, but did not move on to them until the next year, when James Wilson and John Pate settled on Section 36, immediately opposite the village of Dekorra; also Henry Lewis, an old soldier at Fort Winnebago, on the bluff in Township 12, Range 8. The family of Mr. Robinson came with Pate and Wilson, from Scotland, and moved into the house prepared for them the year previous.

In 1843, Allan Johnson settled in Township 12, Range 8. Other early settlers were Frank Nichols, Harrison Jerrison, Hugh Muir, Aaron Chalfant, William King, J. Allen, Henry Kingsbury, John Owens, David Owens, John Rowley, George and Charles Temple, Charles Ginther, Anton Jerrison, Messrs. Prentice, Freeman, Reuben and Sterling.

A log schoolhouse was erected on Section 6, Township 12, Range 9 east, in the summer of 1846, and Mr. Bailey taught therein the first school in the fall of the same year.

James Wilson was a man that was extremely cautious, and seldom ventured in debt. On one occasion he had a debt of $12, which he was owing Clark Young, and which troubled him greatly. When he paid it, he remarked to Young: "Well, that is the last cent I owe in this world." "That shows you are doing a damned small business," was the reply, and all the consolation he received.

A writer thus makes mention of "Daddy" Robinson: "He was born in Ayerston, Scotland, A. D. 1800, died in Caledonia, November 7, 1872, aged seventy-two years. The funeral was attended at his late residence Monday, November 11; sermon by the Rev. Hugh Brown, text, Ecclesiastes, twelfth chapter and seventh verse—'Then shall the dust return to the earth, as it was, and the spirit shall return to God who gave it.' Mr. Robinson emigrated to this country A. D. 1840, settling at the north of the Baraboo River. He was one of the first Scotch settlers in this country, A. and W. McDonald and a few at the garrison being the only exceptions. The writer of this called on him in 1850, enjoyed his generous cheer, and made the note that the Old Daddy was a man of keen perception and universal observation. Five children emigrated from Scotland with him, and two were born here. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church both here and in Scotland, and efficient in its first organization in Caledonia. He was for a number of years chairman of the town of Caledonia, and served as a Justice of the Peace in his own town, but was better known as jovial, companionable old Daddy, and so long as his vigorous health lasted, he was the center of attraction wherever he happened to be. His sallies of wit were electrical, and so good-natured and pointed were his hits, that his victim laughed as heartily as the rest. He was a genius peculiar to Scotland, and of that class which have no duplicates. No man living in Caledonia will be more missed, and a void will not only be felt in that town, but also in Portage and Dekorra, where his presence has so often, like magic, driven dull care away.

‘ To Scotia send this greeting, then,
Please spare us more of just such men.’ ”

The first farm opened up in the town of Caledonia was by Peter Pauquette for the Indians. The first American farming done in the town was by Gideon Low, on the place that used to be called Black Earth, now known as the “Indian Farm,” in the town of Caledonia. But Low held the land only as a “claim” at the time, employing another person to farm it. He purchased the land when it came into market, it is true, but, admitting that his farm was the first one regularly tilled for an American, it would not entitle him to be called the first settler in the town, as he did not reside upon his “claim,” and was engaged in other business. The work of the farm was done by Leon Braux. The third farm opened up was by John T. De La Ronde, in 1838. De La Ronde was born at Barbeaux, in France, February 25, 1802, his ancestors were men of note in the military and marine service in his native country. His father, Louis Denys, Chevalier De La Ronde, was born at Detroit, Mich., while the grandfather, an officer in the French service, was stationed at Detroit, previous to the final surrender of the Canadas by the French to the English, in 1760. This same grandfather, Louis Denys De La Ronde, was at one time in command at Chequamegon, on Lake Superior. The father of John remained in France till the battle of Waterloo, when, not wishing to live under the rule of Louis XVIII, he came to Canada with all his family, and became a partner in the Northwest Company. He died at Montreal in 1818. The son received a good education in French and English; he seems to have been in the College of Montreal at a very early age, and to have studied medicine under Dr. Robert Nelson V. Smith, but never practiced it as a profession. In 1819, he became a clerk in the Northwest Company, with which he remained seven years, during which time he went to London, England, as a witness in a dispute between his company and the Hudson Bay Company. A settlement having been effected between these companies, he was transferred to the Hudson Bay Company, with which company he remained till 1828, at which time he came to Fort Winnebago, now Portage. This was the year in which Old Fort Winnebago was built. Here Mr. De La Ronde engaged as clerk of the American Fur Company, under the noted Peter Pauquette, who was then, and for some time thereafter, agent of that company. Here Mr. De La Ronde married an Indian woman of the De Kau-ry tribe of Winnebagoes, but who had been brought up mainly among the whites, and had never worn a blanket. To him was born from this wife one child, a daughter, who was left motherless at the age of two years, and who was married at the age of sixteen to Antoine Grignon, a descendant of the Grignon who formerly lived at Portage, and later about Green Bay. Mr. De La Ronde brought up this child with great care, sending her to Prairie du Chien and other places for school privileges.

Her husband was a well-educated farmer, and she is an accomplished woman. They have long resided at Trempealeau, in this State. When this daughter was five years of age, her father married another Indian woman of the De Kaury band, who survives him at his late residence in Caledonia, near Portage. She is now totally blind. He also leaves one son and two daughters, who are now grown and live with their mother. Mr. La Ronde, from the time he came to Portage, spent his time trading with the Indians, assisting and accompanying them on their journeys to their reservations, to Washington, and wherever they needed his services as interpreter. He acquired their language thoroughly, and at one time spent considerable labor on a dictionary and grammar of it, but he never completed the work. His business and his domestic relations brought him almost constantly in contact with the Winnebagoes, and he became much like them in his ways of life and in his principles. He had a very strong sympathy with them and looked on their side of the question. He was a soldier under Col. Dodge in the Sauk war. He was a man of more than ordinary intelligence; loved reading of every kind, especially history and accounts of travel. He held the office of Justice of the Peace in the town of Caledonia at one time. He died on the 2d day of March, 1879, at his residence in the town of Caledonia, and was buried in the Catholic Cemetery in Portage.

Joseph Hartman

HARTMAN

One of the oldest residents of the town of Caledonia was John Pate, who died on the 19th of December, 1879. He was one of those pioneers who buffeted the hardships of a new country in the day when a man had to sacrifice all the comforts of civilization in order to start a home in the Far West. Mr. Pate was born Feb. 17, 1802, at Browncastle Parish, East Calbride, Lanarkshire, Scotland; was married to Agnes Stewart, April 29, 1839, and emigrated to this country April 26, 1842; sailing from Glasgow in the ship Perthshire, Capt. Simpson, being seven weeks in making the voyage across the Atlantic to New York. Thence he took steamboat to Albany and canal boat to Buffalo, and again steamboat to Chicago; for, in those days, there were no boats landing regularly at Milwaukee for want of suitable harbor and pier. From Chicago the remainder of the journey was made to Dekorra, the most important point in this region, by team, reaching there July 14, 1842. Those were not the days of fast travel and conveniences. As compagnons du voyage were the families of Thomas Robertson and James Wilson both lately deceased. Their first settlements were made in the now Caledonia, formerly Portage County, Territory of Wisconsin, on unsurveyed lands; roads and bridges were then unknown, and ferries were few and far between. In order to get a grist to mill they had to go to Sugar River, ten miles west of Madison; later to Columbus or Beaver Dam, when Dekorra mills were out of repair. The market for farm produce was at Milwaukee, or in the pineries, but all transportation was carried on by means of teams. Little produce was raised except so much as would satisfy their immediate wants, which were few and frugal, and supply also the needs of new comers.

Splitting fence rails and making hay were the chief occupations; but it is the concurrent testimony of all that those were happier days than now. When the town of Caledonia was organized from Dekorra, Mr. Pate was its first Chairman and represented the town in the County Board of Supervisors in the year 1852; afterward, he was elected Assessor, Town Clerk, and to many other offices of trust in the town and community. On the same farm of 200 acres he lived since 1845, and his generous and open hospitality made his house a synonym of kindness and welcome to all. He took an especial delight in music, and was never more himself than in singing or playing on the violin. Deeply religious in his nature, he loved to discuss religious topics, and sing the sacred tunes of the old psalmody. For entertainment or edification might be heard, at any time, "Dundee's wild warbling measures rise, or plaintive Martyrs, worthy of the name."

There are many original pieces of his own composing still extant, one of which, entitled "Caledonia," is worthy of mention, as it is frequently sung in the Presbyterian Church of Caledonia. Aside from musical and religious subjects, he was much interested in the scientific progress of the day; and being a great reader and deep thinker, he always had sensible and liberal views on such subjects as he gave his attention to. His latch string was always out, night and day, and everybody was welcome and enjoyed a "crack wi' auld John Pate."

His time since coming to this country was mainly occupied in managing his farm; but since his family grew up, the cares devolved upon them, and he gave his time to reading and music which he enjoyed so much. For the last six or seven years of his life he was afflicted with erysipelas or an irritation of the blood which finally resulted in a cancer of the face and was the cause of his death. Throughout his long suffering he was always hopeful and contented, enduring his trials with Christian fortitude.

He left a family of four sons and one daughter, all of whom were present at his funeral. He was buried in Crawford Cemetery, Caledonia, beside the remains of his son Andrew, the only son of his family who preceded him to the grave.

"Let not Ambition mock their useful toil,
Their homely joys and destiny obscure ;
Nor Grandeur hear with a disdainful smile
The short and simple annals of the poor."

The only children of the somewhat famous Peter Pauquette are residents of this town. Theresa Pauquette was born in 1826 at the old agency near Fort Winnebago. She has been twice married ; first, to M. J. Brisbois, in 1849, who died some years later in California ; second, to Mr. Prescott, of Caledonia, Columbia County. Mrs. Prescott received a thorough education in English and French in a convent in St. Louis. Moses Pauquette was born at the agency in 1828.

A post office was established near the central part of the town in 1863, to which was given the name of Alloa. James Stewart was the first Postmaster. It has been suspended once, but was re-established in 1879.

The first couple married in the town was a soldier from the fort, named Powers, and a daughter of Henry Lewis. The second was Clark M. Young and Miss Jeanette Wilson, who were married in 1844.

The first death was Aaron, son of Absalom Chalfant.

There is no village in the town of Caledonia, it being an exclusively agricultural town. Three nationalities are pretty equally divided—Scotch, Welsh and Germans. Very few American-born have ever settled here.

The following is a list of town officers from the organization of the town to the present time :

1851—John Pate (Chairman), John Turner, Oscar T. Wagoner, Supervisors ; Alexander Prentice, Clerk.

1852—John Pate (Chairman), Oscar T. Wagoner, William H. Hill, Supervisors ; Quintin Smith, Clerk ; Robert Howey, Assessor ; Alexander Prentice, Treasurer ; John Tibbits, Superintendent of Schools.

1853—John S. Richmond (Chairman), David Owen, John Jones, No. 4, Supervisors ; Quintin Smith, Clerk ; William Stevenson, Assessor ; Alexander Prentice, Treasurer ; John Jones, No. 4, School Superintendent.

1854—John S. Richmond (Chairman), John Jones, No. 4, Charles W. Gunther, Supervisors ; John Turner, Clerk ; John Pate, Assessor ; Alexander Prentice, Treasurer ; Thomas Phillips, Superintendent of Schools.

1855—Thomas Robertson (Chairman), David Owen, John Tibbits, Supervisors ; John Turner, Clerk ; John Pate, Assessor ; William Stevenson, Treasurer ; Thomas Phillips, Superintendent of Schools.

1856—Thomas Robertson (Chairman), Michael Cochran, Richard Jones, Supervisors ; John Pate, Clerk ; John Pate, Assessor ; David Owen, Treasurer ; N. T. Jennings, Superintendent of Schools.

1857—Alexander McDonald (Chairman), Michael Cochran, Owen F. Owens, Supervisors ; Milton Jennings, Clerk ; John Capner, Assessor ; David Owen, Treasurer ; Charles McLeish, Superintendent of Schools.

1858—Thomas Robertson (Chairman), William McLeish, John Jones, No. 4, Supervisors ; Thomas H. Spencer, Clerk ; Andrew Robertson and Alexander Prentice, Assessors ; Hugh Muir, Treasurer ; William Stevenson, Superintendent of Schools.

1859—Thomas Robertson (Chairman), John G. Staudenmayer, Thomas Morris, Supervisors ; Thomas H. Spencer, Clerk ; William Ireland, Assessor ; Hugh Muir, Treasurer ; N. T. Jennings, Superintendent of Schools.

1860—William Stevenson (Chairman), James Wilson, Owen F. Owens, Supervisors; John G. Staudenmayer, Clerk; James Baird, Assessor; Alexander Prentice, Treasurer; Thomas H. Spencer, Superintendent of Schools.

1861—William Stevenson (Chairman), Owen F. Owens, James Wilson, Supervisors; John G. Staudenmayer, Clerk; William Black, Assessor; Alexander Prentice, Treasurer; Peter Longwell, Superintendent of Schools.

1862—James Wilson (Chairman), James Baird, David J. Williams, Supervisors; John G. Staudenmayer, Clerk; James Robertson, Assessor; Alexander Prentice, Treasurer.

1863—James Wilson* (Chairman), John Lockhart, Thomas Walker, Supervisors; John G. Staudenmayer, Clerk; James Robertson, Assessor; Allen Bogue, Treasurer.

1864—William Stevenson (Chairman), John Lockhart, Thomas Walker, Supervisors; John G. Staudenmayer, Clerk; James Robertson, Assessor and Treasurer.

1865—Michael Cochrane (Chairman), John Gibson, David Owen, Supervisors; John G. Staudenmayer, Clerk; James Robertson, Treasurer and Assessor.

1866—Michael Cochrane (Chairman), John Gibson, David Owen, Supervisors; John G. Staudenmayer, Clerk; James Robertson, Treasurer and Assessor.

1867—John S. Richmond (Chairman), John O'Shaughnessy, Charles McLeish, Supervisors; John G. Staudenmayer, Clerk; James Robertson, Assessor and Treasurer.

1868—William Caldow (Chairman), F. T. Ruman, Owen F. Owens, Supervisors; Griffith J. Owen, Clerk; James Robertson, Assessor and Treasurer.

1869—William Caldow (Chairman), F. T. Ruman, Owen F. Owens, Supervisors; Griffith J. Owen, Clerk; James Robertson, Assessor and Treasurer.

1870—Alexander Prentice (Chairman), James Baird, Owen F. Owens, Supervisors; G. J. Owens, Clerk; David Owen, Assessor; James Robertson, Treasurer.

1871—John G. Staudenmayer (Chairman), Hugh Roberts, James Stewart, Supervisors; G. J. Owens, Clerk; James Robertson, Treasurer; David Owen, Assessor.

1872—John G. Staudenmayer (Chairman), Hugh Roberts, Henry Hamilton, Supervisors; William Black, Clerk; James Robertson, Treasurer and Assessor.

1873—John G. Staudenmayer (Chairman), Henry Hamilton, Thomas Walker, Supervisors; William Black, Clerk; David Owen, Assessor; James Robertson, Treasurer.

1874—John G. Staudenmayer (Chairman), Owen F. Owens, William M. Shanks, Supervisors; Robert S. Marshall, Clerk; F. T. Ruman, Treasurer; John Towers, Assessor.

1875—John G. Staudenmayer (Chairman), Hugh Roberts, W. M. Shanks, Supervisors; Robert S. Marshall, Clerk; F. T. Ruman, Treasurer; John Towers, Assessor.

1876—William Black (Chairman), Henry Hamilton, W. W. Owens, Supervisors; R. S. Marshall, Clerk; F. T. Ruman, Treasurer; James Robertson, Assessor.

1877—Charles McLeish (Chairman), Henry Racek, George Geyman, Supervisors; C. F. Mohr, Clerk; F. T. Ruman, Treasurer; John Towers, Assessor.

1878—Robert Whitelaw (Chairman), Hugh Roberts, John Staudenmayer, Supervisors; C. F. Mohr, Clerk; John Towers, D. J. Williams, Assessors; Thomas Robertson, Treasurer.

1879—R. Whitelaw (Chairman), W. W. Owen, John Dunigan, Supervisors; F. T. Ruman, Clerk; James Robertson, Assessor; Samuel J. Pate, Treasurer.

1880—C. F. Mohr (Chairman), John Lockhart, John Dunigan, Supervisors; J. B. Marshall, Clerk; James Robertson, Assessor; S. J. Pate, Treasurer.

TOWN OF COLUMBUS.

The incipient steps toward the formation of a town, to be called Columbus, were taken by the County Commissioners on the 16th day of July, 1846, when they organized a voting precinct by that name out of Townships 10 and 11, in Range 12 east. This precinct remained the same at the revision of voting precincts, April 3, 1848, but the territory afterward became the towns of Columbus and Fountain Prairie. On the 9th of January, 1849, the Board of County Commissioners organized Township 10, in Range 12 east, into a town, to which they gave the name of Columbus, and the house of A. P. Birdsey was designated as the place for holding the first election.

* In this year, James Wilson resigned the office of Chairman, and the Board appointed William Stevenson to serve the rest of the term, from November 3 until April 5, 1864.

The town of Columbus is mostly low and level, lying farther down the Rock River slope than the town of Fountain Prairie. A little prairie extends into the northwestern sections, and marsh belts occur along the streams in the northern half of the town, where the general altitude is from two hundred and fifty to two hundred and eighty feet. The southern and southwestern parts of the county lie higher, reaching from three hundred to four hundred feet. Four small, northeast-trending branches of Crawfish River cross the town.

The first lands entered in this town was on the 18th day of February, 1839, by Lewis Ludington and John Hustis, as follows :

The west half of the southeast quarter of Section 12, eighty acres; east half of the southeast quarter of Section 12, eighty acres, Lewis Ludington.

West half of the southwest quarter of Section 12, eighty acres; east half of the southwest quarter of Section 12, eighty acres, John Hustis.

East half of the northeast quarter of Section 13, eighty acres; west half of the northeast quarter of Section 13, eighty acres, Lewis Ludington.

West half of the northwest quarter of Section 13, eighty acres; east half of the northwest quarter of Section 13, eighty acres, Lewis Ludington.

East half of the northeast quarter of Section 24, eighty acres; west half of the northeast quarter of Section 24, eighty acres; west half of the southeast quarter of Section 24, eighty acres; east half of the southeast quarter of Section 24, eighty acres, Lewis Ludington.

The whole number of acres entered was 960, making three half-sections—the north half of Section 13, the south half of Section 12 and the east half of Section 24.

In the summer of 1843, T. C. Smith's cabin was the only house northwest of what was then the incipient village of Columbus, until Fort Winnebago was reached. Mr. Bushnell, however, was living in a shanty in a grove outside of what is now the city of Columbus.

W. B. Dyer built a small log house on the Baker farm, which was the first house ever built in what is now the town of Fountain Prairie. He lived in the building until May, 1844, when he sold out to E. J. Smith his pre-emption claim of 160 acres, and moved to where the village of Otsego now sits, on the creek.

Among those who were residents of the town of Columbus in 1845 and 1846, the following are remembered :

T. C. Smith, J. Smith, J. C. Axtell, J. T. Lewis, H. A. Whitney, D. E. Bassett, Josiah Arnold, M. G. St. John, H. W. McCafferty, S. Corbin, Jesse Rowell, J. Swarthout, R. Mills, B. F. Hart, S. Wright, U. Davies, A. Silsbee, E. Silsbee, Erastus Silsbee, W. Thompson, John Adler, James McConnell, W. Clark, J. Brown, W. W. Drake, J. Drake, O. R. Luey, Noah Dickason, W. H. Hamilton, T. Swarthout, R. Larned, E. Thayer, H. Cady, E. Lyons, S. St. John, Warren Loomis, John McConnell, J. P. Atwood, J. Barrows, T. Barrows, T. Jones, H. Swift, Jacob Swarthout, G. Aldrich, David Langdon, N. Richards, A. P. Birdsey, George Robinson, A. Lashier, J. Edwards, Andrew McConnell, A. E. Houghton, L. Smith, Z. Robbins, T. Bendure, D. Blanchard, Joseph Mathews, J. Miller, W. Haight, F. F. Farnham, W. McIntyre.

A. P. Birdsey was among the pioneers of Columbus, and more than a mere passing mention is due him. He was born at Middlefield, Middlesex Co., Conn., May 7, 1813, where he remained until 1831, and where he married his wife, whose native place was only five miles from his own. There was a trifle of romance associated with his marriage; and it is a fact not generally known, even among the more intimate friends of the deceased, that he was twice married. His first wife was Jenette Bell. He was joined in wedlock to her when he was but eighteen years of age. Within a year, she became the mother of a child and immediately after died. Her offspring survived her only three months. On the 1st of December, 1832, Mr.

Birdsey was again married. He had known his second wife since she was twelve years of age. His oldest boy, Walter, was born before his father's twenty-first birthday.

In 1837, Mr. Birdsey removed to Leyden, Lewis Co., N. Y., where he cleared a new farm with his own hands. In 1839, he removed to Boonsville, a town five miles distant, where he assumed the management of a hotel, where he remained until May, 1840. He came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1840, and went first to live at Prairieville, now known as Waukesha, having previously made a rapid tour of observation through the State.

On the 4th of July, 1840, Mr. Birdsey removed to the town of Jefferson, and purchased forty acres of land, two and a half miles from the village, on which was erected a small log house, and where only three acres had been broken. He worked steadily and energetically in putting more land under the plow, and as rapidly as any money was accumulated, invested it in more acres, until he was the owner of eight forties.

He built what everybody knew in those days as the old yellow tavern, and most old residents remember the entertainments that were given there, to the life and enjoyment of which the landlord contributed greatly. In the spring of 1844, he sold his farm and moved to the town of Columbus.

About that time he went South and purchased fifty head of cows, which were all sold before the following spring. This was his first speculation in Columbus. In 1845, he sold his farm and moved to the village of Columbus, buying the hotel of Mr. Thomas, which had formerly been managed by Mr. Whitney. This was the building, a portion of which was afterward removed across the street; it was subsequently burned. At that time, Mr. Birdsey erected the old square hotel, known as the Columbus Exchange, which was afterward sold to Mr. Ingalsbee. He purchased what is known as the corner store, with its stock, but soon sold it. He then bought a farm, and there erected the tavern known as the Mountain House. This farm was afterward sold to Michael Cromer, Hawley and others, for upward of $23,000. Immediately after this he built the Birdsey House. This tavern he conducted for two years, and then exchanged it for a farm in Fountain Prairie, where he erected a residence and made many improvements. In the fall of 1860, he returned to the hotel, and was its landlord until the spring of 1861, when he again returned to his farm, and lived upon it until 1865. He then removed to Iowa, near McGregor, where he was engaged in farming until his death. He died on Friday evening, August 6, 1869, and was brought to Columbus, where he was buried with Masonic honors. His life was a varied one; impetuous and erratic in his nature, he was full of generous impulses, and the history of his life would include a record of many good and not a few noble actions.

TOWN OF COURTLAND.

At a meeting of the County Commissioners, held at the house of Elbert Dickason, on the 16th day of July, 1846, Township 12, Range 12, together with much other territory, was made a voting precinct, under the name of Leroy Precinct, and Nathan Griffin, James Buoy and Erwin McCall were appointed Judges of Election, and the house of Oliver Langdon designated as the place for holding elections. On the organization of the county into towns, in 1849, Township 12, Range 12, was organized into a town, and the name of Portage Prairie given to it. The house of Horace Rust was designated as the place for holding the first election. By resolution of the Board of Supervisors, November 19, 1852, the name of the town was changed to Courtland.

Patrick Chestnut emigrated from Ireland when about thirty years of age; settled in Pennsylvania, from which State he emigrated to Wisconsin, and on the 29th day of July, 1844, entered the county and located his claim upon Section 3, Township 12, Range 12, being the first to settle in the town. Mr. Chestnut soon had erected a comfortable house, and here spent the remainder of his days, departing this life, November, 1878, in his ninetieth year. He was a type of the old-style gentleman, being held in respect by all with whom he was acquainted. When Mr. Chestnut came to this country, he was ignorant of backwoods life, and had never seen a tree felled. Desiring one day to cut down a tree, he shouldered his ax and proceeded to the timber. He began his work, cutting completely around the tree an equal distance, but was afraid to push it over for fear of accident, and did not understand that if he cut enough upon one side it would fall by its own weight. Cautioning his son, who was with him, to leave the tree alone, he went two miles to a neighbor to come and fell the tree. The neighbor came, and, with a few well-directed blows with the ax, the tree lay upon the ground.

In the fall of 1844, J. Jess and Mr. Hooker came in, and in the summer of 1845, William Bump, James Buoy, Nathaniel Wilkins, Jonathan Moulton, Horace Rust and William Toby made a settlement here. From this time on, for a number of years, the land was rapidly taken up by actual settlers.

In the summer of 1847, William Bump and Sarah Griffith were united in marriage, by M. W. Patton, Esq., this being the first ceremony of the kind performed in the town.

The event took place about one mile south of Cambria. This was the first appearance of the Squire in official duty. He then lived in Centerville, about three miles northwest of Cambria, but at that time there was no Cambria, nor houses between his place and the house of the bride, but he passed a piece of fencing divided by a small gap. Mr. Patton could get no form for marriage, but his legal knowledge came to his rescue, and after considerable hard study he drafted a service that he was confident would survive the wreck of time and hold them "for better or for worse." It was a legal document, interlarded with quotations from Holy Writ and some poetry. Armed with this document which he had committed to memory, he started out on his holy mission to make "two hearts beat as one." Halting at the gap in the fence referred to, he united the two detachments of fence by repeating his marriage service, without a skip or blunder, and then pursued his way on foot. When he arrived there, he found the party waiting for him, and as a casual guest T. Clark Smith, of Columbus, was present. The bridal party were duly arranged on the floor and the Squire proceeded with the ceremony. But alas! for human weakness! He forgot his oration; "his tongue clave to the roof of his mouth." In vain he straightened up his spinal column, "smote his knees together, gnashed his teeth," rolled his eyes, brushed back his front hair and mopped up the perspiration on his face, his tongue refused to give utterance to the chaos that raged in his brain. Smith grinned and the bridal party blushed, while other members looked on with pity. The Squire had completely forgotten himself, but his mind at length wandered back to the rail fence, and then the floodgates of memory were thrown open, and he went on with the ceremony and clinched it with an eloquent quotation from Scripture, "What God has joined together let no man put asunder:" received a five-franc piece for his fee, and with a light heart bent his steps homeward.

Marshall, son of Nathan and Harriet Swain, was the first child born in the town of Courtland, his birth dating in the fall of 1846.

Death claimed its first victim in the person of Patrick Griffith, who died in the fall of 1846. He was buried a short distance east of Cambria.

The first school was taught by William S. Chestnut in an upper room of the dwelling of Jonathan Moulton in the spring of 1847. About twelve scholars were in attendance.

The first mill built in the town was by Daniel Langdon, an account of which is given in the sketch of the village of Cambria.

The first public dance was at the house of Daniel Langdon in 1846, the same house mentioned in the history of Cambria as the first built in the village, and which in 1879 was used by the owners of the Cambria mill as a stable.

A family named Hagadorn, consisting of father and mother, three sons, Henry, Jacob and Adam and a daughter, moved there in 1845. If reports are true, this family did not contribute materially to the peace and welfare of that community, but on the contrary kept the neighborhood in a chronic uneasiness, but it was believed after all by many, that the reputation of the old man and his boys was often used to cover up the crookedness of others. Various and numerous were the irregularities that were charged to this family, and often were the officers of the law armed with the necessary papers to bring the old man to judgment, and vindicate the peace and dignity of the State of Wisconsin. William S. Chestnut, then a young man, conscientious in the discharge of his duties generally, came in contact with Hagadorn frequently in an official way. At one time, Hagadorn made one of a party of several of the Courtlanders who started to Milwaukee with ox teams. They camped the first night a few miles east of Fox Lake, and the teamsters made free with a settler's corn-field close at hand to bait their oxen. The owner had the party arrested for stealing, and they swore the theft on to Hagadorn, who admitted that he appropriated a little corn, but insisted that the whole party was also guilty. But the old man's bad reputation let them off.

Later still, a warrant was issued by a Justice named Toby and placed in the hands of Chestnut for service. Chestnut mounted his horse and pounced upon his victim, Hagadorn, while the old man was quietly partaking of his noontide meal. The lawless Hagadorn donned a swallow-tailed coat that, in the days of antiquity, had made its way in society, and meekly walked alongside the mounted officer of the law toward the residence and office of Squire Toby. While silently marching along a bridle path in a thicket of timber, Chestnut casually remarked to his prisoner that, "this would be a good place to run away." The prisoner looked up into the stern face of his captor, which seemed to relax a trifle. The next moment that swallow-tailed coat represented an angle of forty-five degrees as its proprietor was scudding through the woods only as a man can scud when he is in a great hurry. In vain did the constable jump from his horse and pursue the fugitive and yell after him to "come back." The pursuit was abandoned, but he picked up Hagadorn's hat that had parted company with its owner, and hung it on a twig near the path. Mr. Chestnut returned the warrant marked, "served and prisoner escaped," remarking that he "didn't think he was guilty anyway." That was the end of the case. Hagadorn was not entirely destitute of honor, evidently, for some time after that, while Chestnut was passing his house, he was called, when the former told him that he wanted to pay him for his trouble on that occasion. "All right," said Chestnut. "There," continued he, pointing to an overgrown, lank and dingy-looking pup that was dozing under the soporific influence of a hot kitchen fire, "is a splendid pup; I'll give you that pup to call it square." "A bargain," said Chestnut, and he proudly bore off the fee at the end of a string, meditating on the great future that the pup might develop. The pup was taken to his new home, for which he soon formed a warm attachment. He grew and waxed strong and soon proved an adept in hunting eggs, which he sucked with pleasure. William says there is no telling what faculties that pup might have developed, had his early training not been neglected and had not one of the boys in a fit of anger "cut him down in the morning of life."

About the time Mr. Chestnut came to town, a number of young men from Illinois, Indiana and other States, inaugurated here a new enterprise. They would select some pretty good land, enter the same, build thereon a small house, and sell out the same the first opportunity, and then take up another claim. They would thus keep in advance of the actual settlers, and compel them to submit to their unjust claims. To resist one of the number would bring the whole body upon the offender.

The first election in the town was the occasion of a great deal of fun in the way of "big drunks." Whisky was free, and everybody partook, but, as in the days of the Apostles, the good wine was set out first, and after that the worse. As the barrel was being emptied of its first contents, it was replenished with water, the greater number of the men being so drunk they did not know the difference between water and whisky.

The town lies immediately south of Randolph. The prairie of the latter town extends into Courtland, occupying the northeastern section, and then, extending in a narrow belt southwestward across the town, widens out again on the west side. In the southeast sections, narrow and marshy belts with the same southwest trend are observed. The surface is generally quite level, running for the most part from 350 to 400 feet in altitude. In the northeast corner, however, the ravines about the head of Duck Creek cut down to an altitude of 260 feet. The highest points probably are on Sections 17, 18, 20 and 19. Most of the town lies on the divide between the systems of the Rock and Wisconsin, so that the streams heading on either side are but small, the main branch of Duck Creek, at Cambria, being the principal one.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway traverses the town from east to west, entering on Section 1, and passing through Sections 2, 3, 4, 5, and into Springvale from Section 6.

The first entry of land was made June 5, 1844, by Peter Goulden, and patented September 1, 1846, and comprised the east half of the southeast quarter of Section 10.

Of Horace Rust, one of the early settlers of this town, the Columbus Democrat of April 12, 1879, says:

“It was mentioned in the Democrat of last week that Mr. Horace Rust, of Courtland, had been upon his death-bed for several days, and that he had probably passed away before that writing, but he lingered in an unconscious condition for several days more, and breathed his last at 3:30 A. M., on Monday. The funeral occurred on Wednesday, and was largely attended. He was born in Rochester, Vt., in 1798, and his life, thus prolonged far beyond the existence of an ordinary man, was full of incident. Several of his earlier years were passed in Maine, where he was a contractor for the construction of a canal. In 1823, he was married at Stockbridge, near the place of his birth, to Miss Roxana Mills. In 1843, he came to Walworth County, Wis., and for about two years resided with his brother-in-law, Dr. Mills, who was then Territorial Senator. In 1845, he moved to what is now Courtland, and selected the beautiful location which embraces the fine farm where he died. His son Henry has resided with him during most of these years, and during the greater part of the time has managed the farm. As he advanced in years, having acquired a competence, the elder Mr. Rust relinquished active life, and, relieved from all care and oppression of want, enjoyed a pleasant and comfortable home with his son. The estate, though not large, is valuable and forms one of the coziest and pleasantest homes anywhere in that region. The deceased was full of reminiscence concerning early life on this frontier, when he was in the mood; and many interesting recollections of that character have died with him. In 1845, with his two sons, Henry and Mills, and a yoke of cattle, he entered Courtland, and built a log house into which he removed his family in the succeeding year. He related that after finishing this house, he and his sons started on the return to Walworth. At that time, the old road to Columbus and Watertown made an extensive detour to the west, and went to Otsego to avoid impassable swamps. The pilgrims took an early breakfast that morning, and the ox-line did not bring them to Otsego until late in the afternoon. Mr. Rust always spoke of his substantial dinner that day at W. B. Dyer's log tavern in Otsego, as the best meal he ever ate in his life. At an early day, he and Squire Topliff, still of this city, were engaged for some time in surveying, and they laid out the road between Columbus and Cambria. Under President Polk's administration, Mr. Rust was appointed Postmaster, the office being at his house, and being known as the Portage Prairie Post Office. It is said to have been on the route following the old military road from Green Bay to Prairie du Chien, and the mail probably arrived about once a week. Under President Taylor, however, the office was removed to Centerville, two miles north of Cambria, and the ‘High Court of Centerville’ appointed the Postmaster. Mr. Rust was a member of the commission which laid out the road from Columbus to Princeton. During the first years of the county, he was elected Treasurer, but by some manipulation or other, S. C. Higbie obtained possession. He was twice Postmaster at Cambria, and held that office in Rochester, Vt., under President Jackson. From the organization of the party to his death, he was an ardent Republican. A correspondent says of him and his class: ‘The early settlers in this vicinity were fine specimens of manhood, and, perhaps, on the whole, the advancing step of civilization has not improved the character of our citizenship. We often sigh for the strong bonds of brotherhood which elevated the first settlers to a great extent above the petty jealousies and social and political strivings that now seem to permeate society. Then life was primitive; then the duties and details of existence, and its social relations, were truer and more genuine.

“‘There was a general sympathy and all rejoiced sincerely in the success of a neighbor. We all feel deep and real sorrow at seeing one after another passing away, and to reflect that these golden links binding eras of life, will soon all be broken beyond restoration by any cunning hand.’ The old age of Mr. Rust was genial and pleasant. Care sat lightly upon him and he never sought the jagged edges of life. Up to within a week of his demise, he was apparently in full possession of his mental faculties, and his health was always remarkably good until within a short time of his death. However, it had been evident of late that his was the common lot of humanity. The correspondent above quoted remarks: 'It is many years since he gave up active labor and business, but he preserved in an eminent degree his remarkable social powers. It seemed as though by almost superhuman energy that, while the physical man was gradually wearing away, the mind would not surrender its scepter until its tabernacle crumbled entirely away. There is a moral sublimity in the close of a symmetrical life: in the blending of earthly and spiritual life, where there seems no chasm to separate the present from the great future. Manhood succeeds childhood, and old age follows close upon the footsteps of manhood; and the hoary frost of many winters crown the head until he is gathered in like golden grain fully ripe and ready for the sickle.' Mr. Rust was married but once, but was a husband fifty-six years, thirty-three of which were passed in Courtland. His wife and five of his nine children survive him."

The following is a list of town officers from the organization of the town to the present time:

1849—Jeremiah Williams, Chairman; Horace Rust, Milan G. Toby, Supervisors; Edward E. Randall, Clerk; Jackson G. Coil, Assessor; John Jess, Treasurer; Edward E. Randall, School Superintendent.

1850—Jeremiah Williams, Chairman; John B. Williams, Ransom H. Mead, Supervisors; William L. Williams, Clerk; Jackson G. Coil, Assessor; Randall Illsley, Treasurer; Francis G. Randall, School Superintendent.

1851—Ransom H. Mead, Chairman; C. B. Williams, Wilson G. Toby, Supervisors; Jeremiah Williams, Clerk; William Bump, Treasurer; William B. Toby, Alonzo C. Knight, Evan Edwards, Assessors; John M. Mead, School Superintendent.

1852—Ransom H. Mead, Chairman; Roger Rogers, Samuel G. Whiting, Supervisors; Henry B. Galleys, Clerk; William Bump, Treasurer; Robertof Roberts, John M. Mead, Assessors; John M. Mead, School Superintendent.

1853—Ransom M. Mead, Chairman; Robertof Roberts, Roger Rogers, Supervisors; Henry B. Galleys, Clerk; William Bump, Treasurer; F. G. Randall, William O. Jones, Assessors; Samuel G. Whiting, School Superintendent.

1854—R. H. Mead, Chairman; Roger Rogers, Seth H. Higgins, Supervisors; John M. Mead, Clerk; Wolcott Watson, Treasurer; William Bump, Assessor; Samuel G. Whiting, School Superintendent.

1855—Nathan Griffin, Chairman; John ap Jones, Lewis Brown, Supervisors; Charles Rust, Clerk; Jesse G. Southwell, Treasurer; Edwin B. Griffin, Assessor; S. D. Hambleton, School Superintendent.

1856—F. G. Randall, Chairman; Randall Illsley, Roger Rogers, Supervisors; Charles Rust, Clerk; Franklin C. Toby, Treasurer; Horace Rust, Assessor; S. D. Hambleton, School Superintendent.

1857—Ransom H. Mead, Chairman; Mills Rust, Roger Rogers, Supervisors; F. G. Randall, Clerk; Edward L. Williams, Treasurer; Horace Rust, Assessor; J. H. Williams, School Superintendent.

1858—Jeremiah Williams, Chairman; Wolcott Watson, L. Richards, Supervisors; J. D. Jones, Clerk; Evan Owens, Treasurer; E. L. Williams, Assessor; G. F. Hunt, School Superintendent.

1859—J. D. Jones, Chairman; Richard McCumber, Roger Rogers, Supervisors; Evan O. Jones, Clerk; Mills Rust, Treasurer; E. L. Williams, Assessor; Charles Rust, School Superintendent.

1860—John D. Jones, Chairman; Solomon Harvey, William Bump, Supervisors; David R. Evans, Clerk; R. H. Mead, Treasurer; E. L. Williams, Assessor; J. L. Williams, School Superintendent.

1861—Solomon Harvey, Chairman; Evan O. Jones, William Bump, Supervisors; D. R. Evans, Clerk; Robert H. Hughes, Treasurer; Edward L. Williams, Assessor; Henry H. Rust, School Superintendent.

1862—E. O. Jones, Chairman; William Bump, R. B. Thomas, Supervisors; D. R. Evans, Clerk; Roger Rogers, Treasurer; Edward L. Williams, Assessor.

1863—E. O. Jones, Chairman; R. B. Thomas, W. Griffin, Supervisors; D. R. Evans, Clerk; J. G. Southwell, Treasurer; Edward L. Williams, Assessor.

1864—William Owen, Chairman; R. B. Thomas, William Bump, Supervisors; R. T. Williams, Clerk; Jeremiah Williams, Treasurer; Edward L. Williams, Assessor.

1865—R. B. Thomas, Chairman; D. R. Jones, George Bennett, Supervisors; G. O. Jones, Clerk; Jeremiah Williams, Treasurer; Edward L. Williams, Assessor.

1866—Henry B. Rust, Chairman; George M. Bennett, William O. Jones, Supervisors; G. O. Jones, Clerk; R. B. Thomas, Treasurer; Edward L. Williams, Assessor.

1867—H. B. Rust, Chairman; John L. Lloyd, Supervisor; John B. Jones, Clerk; R. B. Thomas, Treasurer; Edward L. Williams, Assessor.

1868—R. H. Mead, Chairman; Roger Rogers, William R. Williams, Supervisors; G. O. Jones, Clerk; R. B. Thomas, Treasurer; Mills Rust, Richard G. Owen, Evan Owens, Assessors.

1869—R. H. Mead, Chairman; Evan Owens, David D. Morris, Supervisors; G. O. Jones, Clerk; R. B. Thomas, Treasurer; Mills Rust, Assessor.

1870—H. B. Rust, Chairman; D. D. Morris, Evan Owen, Supervisors; G. O. Jones, Clerk; R. B. Thomas, Treasurer; Mills Rust, Assessor.

1871—George M. Bennett, Chairman; D. D. Morris, William O. Jones, Supervisors; E. O. Jones, Clerk; R. B. Thomas, Treasurer; Jonas Conklin, Assessor.

1872—George M. Bennett, Chairman; D. D. Morris, William O. Jones, Supervisors; E. O. Jones, Clerk; Robert J. Rowland, Treasurer; Jonas Conklin, Assessor.

1873—George M. Bennett, Chairman; William Hughes, G. W. Townsend, Supervisors; E. O. Jones, Clerk; R. J. Rowland, Treasurer; Jonas Conklin, Assessor.

1874—George M. Bennett, Chairman; William Hughes, John W. Lee, Supervisors; R. J. Rowlands, Clerk; Hugh R. Hughes, Treasurer; Jonas Conklin, Assessor.

1875—John W. Lee, Chairman; D. D. Morris, D. T. Williams, Supervisors; R. J. Rowlands, Clerk; Hugh R. Hughes, Treasurer; Jonas Conklin, Assessor.

1876—J. W. Lee, Chairman; D. D. Morris, D. T. Williams, Supervisors; R. E. Jones, Clerk; Hugh R. Hughes, Treasurer; Jonas Conklin, Assessor.

1877—John W. Lee, Chairman; D. D. Morris, D. T. Williams, Supervisors; R. E. Jones, Clerk; Hugh R. Hughes, Treasurer; Jonas Conklin, Assessor.

1878—John J. Lloyd, Chairman; D. D. Morris, G. Richards, Supervisors; R. E. Jones, Clerk; H. R. Hughes, Treasurer; Jonas Conklin, Assessor.

1879—D. D. Morris, Chairman; Maurice Blodgett, Owen Corley, Supervisors; R. E. Jones, Clerk; H. R. Hughes, Treasurer; John Quinn, Assessor.

1880—D. D. Morris, Chairman; M. R. Blodgett, Owen Cordy, Supervisors; R. E. Jones, Clerk; H. R. Hughes, Treasurer; John Quinn, Assessor.

VILLAGE OF CAMBRIA.

In 1844, two brothers, by the name of Langdon, settled on the site of the present village, one of them building a saw-mill on a branch of Duck Creek, the other opening a small stock of general merchandise. Four blocks were surveyed and platted, and the prospective village named Florence. The name, however, was not readily accepted by the community surrounding it, and was better known as Langdon's Mill.

In 1848, the Langdons put up a frame for a grist-mill, but were unable to purchase the necessary machinery to operate it. In the spring of 1849, one Bell came out and advanced money for that purpose, taking a mortgage upon the whole of Langdon's property to secure the debt, and, in consequence of non-payment when due, it all passed into his hands. Mr. Bell now took steps to enlarge the boundaries of the new village, having surveyed and platted quite a large addition to the original plat. In order to perpetuate his name, he called the village Bellville. The business of milling, as established by the Langdons, he continued until 1851, when he disposed of his entire interest in mill and village to John ap Jones and Evan Edwards. Jones & Edwards not being practical millers, employed Gabriel Williams to superintend it, and the mill became more noted than ever before. Until age made it necessary to abandon the work, Mr. Williams continued to be identified with the mill as Superintendent or proprietor.

The new proprietors of the village, as well as the few who had settled here, were not pleased with the name of Bellville, and by them it was changed to Cambria. But little growth was attained until the completion of the railroad through the place in 1857. At that time, the prospect was good for a large and enterprising village, but for some cause its growth was checked. Unlike many villages, it cannot be said it ever was ahead of the country tributary to it.

As might be inferred, the first building in the village was erected by the Langdons, and was situated near the mill. This house was still standing in 1880, but no longer used as the abode of man. For a number of years previous, the owners of the mill into whose hands it fell used it for stabling purposes.

The first hotel in Cambria was built by Griffith & Evans in the summer of 1856. It remained in their possession but a short time, when it passed into the hands of Gibbs & Halsey, who in turn transferred it to John O. Jones, it afterward passing successively into the hands of H. Dunham, Murdoch & Smith and Chatwood & Son, and was burned in 1872.

In the fall of 1852, L. Richards came to the village and opened a small store. At this time, there was no post office here, and Mr. Richards, as well as others, was put to a great deal of inconvenience in receiving mail, being under the necessity of going some three miles to the nearest post office. Mr. Richards began to urge the department to establish an office here, and it was mainly through his instrumentality the work was accomplished. The country being thinly settled, and two post offices within three miles, the department felt unwilling to do anything unless one of the two should be suspended, and the mail contractor willing to change the route. But, in the spring of 1854, the necessary arrangements were made for an office, and William Post received the appointment of Postmaster, and served as such until the spring of 1856. At this time, James Kelley came to the village looking for a location, and, being favorably impressed, he purchased the stock of merchandise of Mr. Post, and the latter resigned in his favor. Mr. Kelley performed the duties of the office until 1868, when he resigned and was succeeded by Horace Rust. Going East, Mr. Kelley embarked in oil and other speculations, which not proving remunerative, he returned to Cambria, and receiving the appointment, he again discharged the duties of Postmaster, and continued until January, 1879, when he was succeeded by Peter Williams. The office was made a money-order office in 1869. The first order was issued July 14, 1869, to Griffith O. Jones, in favor of C. H. Mariner, New Lisbon, Ohio, for the sum of $35. The second order was also issued to Mr. Jones. During the year 1879, there were issued 1,045 orders, calling for the sum of $15,075.53.

In addition to the hotel of Chatwood & Sons, which, as has already been stated, was burned in 1872, two others have been erected in the village—the Peterman House and Cambria Hotel. The former was a large stone structure, erected in 1874, and burned April 26, 1879. The latter was opened in 1872, after the first was destroyed, by Isaac Parry.

A fire visited the village in 1874, which is thus described by a local writer: "On Sunday afternoon, December 20, 1874, occurred the most destructive fire ever witnessed in our village, destroying the principal stores, and laying desolate the greater part of the north side of Water street. At about 3:30 P. M., the alarm of fire was raised, and smoke was seen issuing from the building of B. W. Roberts, the lower part of which was occupied by J. B. Smith, who had lately opened a branch of his Fox Lake store, under the care of David Williams. On forcing open the doors, the ceiling was discovered to be ablaze, and the fire under full headway. A large crowd soon gathered and many of the goods were saved. To the west was a large wooden building, the main part of which was used as a warehouse by Isaac Parry, the rest of which was occupied by Squire Patton as a dwelling. This was soon in flames. The next building was Adam Schlussmann's shoe-shop, which was soon torn down to prevent further spread of the fire to the west. If there had been any wind from the north, the whole town would have been burned. As it was, the greatest care was necessary to prevent the buildings on the opposite side of the street from taking fire; they were scorched and blistered, and every pane of glass in front of Peterman's new hotel was cracked by the intense heat. East of Smith's store was D. D. Jones' dry-goods store, which was soon in flames. It was now evident that the whole street would go, and the greater part of the goods in the remaining buildings were speedily removed. The next building demolished was occupied by D. Roberts as a dwelling-house and tailor-shop; next came E. R. Williams' harness-shop; then as fast as the flames could devour them, George Buck's barber-shop, John Davies' shoe-shop, and finally Thomas Lewis' harness-shop. Here the fire stopped, there not being wind enough to carry the flames across Madison street to Purnell's hardware store. The entire loss is estimated at from $18,000 to $20,000; insurance about $2,000. The principal losers are J. B. Smith and D. D. Jones; Smith's goods were insured, and he will lose about $3,000; Mr. Jones had no insurance, and loses about $6,000. None of the buildings were insured. Dr. M. A. Shaw, whose office was over Smith's store, lost his medical library, which was insured for $50. This is a hard blow for Cambria, but the burned district will probably be rebuilt, and the appearance of the village improved. It is not known how the fire originated."

The school district of Cambria was organized in 1847, and a house was built the same year on land given by Samuel Langdon. In size it was 20x24, built of oak lumber from Langdon's mill. The first winter term of school was taught by Betsy Griffin, in 1848-49. The first and second summer terms were taught by S. S. Torbet; the third by Miss Butterfield; the fourth by Miss Carhart; the fifth by Mr. Knight; the fourth winter term by William Hollinshead. Teachers then received $1.50 per week, boarding around, and for the winter term $20 to $25 per month. Mr. Edwards taught during the school year of 1855-56; John J. Williams, the summer of 1856; Miss Mary Rust, the summer term of 1857; and Charles Rust, the winter of 1857-58. The house then became inadequate to accommodate the pupils, there being seventy-five to crowd in a room 20x24. It was then abandoned and a room hired in a building then owned by Evan Morris. The new schoolhouse was built in 1861—Hugh Roberts, builder—at a cost of $1,600. Number of scholars at that time, 313. The school was now graded, and the first teachers under the graded system were Harvey Rust, S. A. Van Middleworth and Amelia Kelly, and the wages received were $50, $32 and $20 per month. In 1868, the schoolhouse was moved to a more favorable location on Tower street, and an addition was built for the primary department, at a cost of $600. John J. Lloyd, S. A. Van Middleworth and Nellie Roberts were teaching that year at a salary of $66, $32 and $24, respectively. Number of scholars enrolled, 332. In 1879-80, Ladoc Merrill, Lizzie Williams and Lizzie Hughes were teachers, receiving, respectively, a salary of $56, $26 and $20. Number of pupils enrolled, 254. Miss S. A. Van Middleworth taught the intermediate department eight years in succession. The highest wages that have been paid a male teacher, were $66, and the lowest, $50, per month.

Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church.—This church was organized in 1853, by Rev. William Jones, with twenty-five members. Rev. John ap Jones, a local preacher, ministered to the congregation from its organization until June, 1857, when he was succeeded by Rev. Reece Evans, who "labored in word and in doctrine" until June, 1879. The first services were held in the schoolhouse in the village, continuing therein until the erection of their church edifice in 1857. The church house cost $3,000. It is 40x50 feet, and will seat 350 persons. The membership of the church was 108. A Sunday-school was organized by the congregation in 1853. In 1879, its average attendance was 140. Henry Williams was their Superintendent.

Methodist Episcopal Church.—In 1850, Rev. Henry Roberts organized a class in a schoolhouse about one mile south of the village of Cambria, composed of about fifteen members, among whom were H. O. Evans and wife, Griffith W. Jones, wife, son and daughter; William Davis and wife, William Lloyd and wife, Ann Jones, John H. Roberts, Rowland Jones and wife, John T. Jones and wife. The congregation continued to worship in the schoolhouse where it was organized until 1856, when a church house was built in Cambria. To this place they then came. In the spring of 1873, the house was moved to a more favorable location and services held in the English language. Previous to this time, the Welsh tongue was used. The Welsh pastors of the church were Revs. Henry Roberts, William Owens, Robert Price, William R. Jones and John Jones. The English Pastors were Revs. Bronson, Shepherd, Teel, Averill and Saffron. The first officers were John T. Jones and John H. Roberts, Class Leaders; H. O. Jones, G. W. Jones and John H. Roberts, Stewards. In 1849, Samuel Davis was Class Leader and Thomas Morris, Steward. Membership, twelve. A Sunday school was organized in 1873, which ceased to exist in 1878.

Welsh Congregationalist Church.—This church was organized in 1856, by Rev. John Parry, and a small frame house erected, which they designated as their "Tabernacle," wherein they met to worship until the completion of a church edifice in 1858. Their new house of worship was erected at a cost of $1,400, and was located on State street, Roberts' Addition to the village. Rev. John Parry was the first Pastor of the congregation, followed in order by Revs. G. Jones, D. D. Jones, M. Morris and J. V. Evans. Among the number composing its organization were W. R. Lloyd, Dr. J. H. Williams, David Richards, L. Richards, H. Hughes, P. Griffiths and Rev. G. Jones. In 1879, the church had a membership of fifty, with Roger Rogers, Deacon; J. R. Jones, Treasurer; Thomas Davis and John Owens, Trustees; L. Richards, Secretary. In 1879, the Sunday school connected with the congregation had had a continuous existence of twenty-six years, and had on its roll about sixty scholars. L. Richards, Superintendent.

Presbyterian Church.—The society was organized in 1859, and a church building erected in 1860-61. The first Elder was John Peabody, and its constituent members were Mrs. Peabody, Miss Peabody, John Van Middleworth and wife, Sarah Van Middleworth, Mrs. John D. Jones, Robert Currie. The Pastors have been Revs. Andrew Hardy, John Densmore, John Kelley, J. H. Richey, C. H. Spencer, David James, Morris Davis, Robert Roberts. Its present membership is 40. Elders—David Glass, John ap Jones, H. W. Thomas and G. D. Myers.

The various temperance and benevolent organizations have not been without representation in the village, being represented by the Masons, United Workmen, Good Templars and Juvenile Templars.

Good Templars.—A lodge of Good Templars was instituted March 28, 1874, by B. F. Parker, G. W. S., assisted by Theodore D. Kanouse, G. W. C. Its first officers and charter members were: K. Scott, W. C. T.; Nellie Evans, W. V. T.; Rev. W. Teal, W. Chap.; H. C. Glendening, W. S.; R. G. Humphrey, W. A. S.; Louisa Hughes, W. T.; Richard Jones, W. M.; Perrie Williams, W. D. M.; Laura Humphrey, W. I. G.; J. Ridgeway, W. O. G.; Mrs. Scott, R. H. S.; Peter Williams, L. D.; M. J. Teal, Jennie Williams, Rev. Reese Evans, Neil Evans, Mrs. H. C. Glendening, Mrs. B. Owen, Sarah Perry, Maggie Owens, M. J. Rach, Annie Williams, M. J. Owens, M. E. Williams, Sarah Humphrey, J. Bartholomew, Mrs. J. Bartholomew, Thomas Owens, Annie Morris, David Williams, Mrs. E. Evans, Mrs. A. Humphrey, Mrs. R. Williams, Richard Jones, Louisa Hughes, Rev. M. E. Davis, A. C. Humphrey, John Williams, Samuel Davis, Catharine Davis. In January, 1880, the officers were: George Beyers, W. C. T.; Jennie Williams, W. V. T.; John Davis, P. W. C. T.; R. G. Humphrey, W. Chap.; John V. M. Davis, W. S.; Jennie Owens, W. A. S.; William E. Williams, W. F. S.; Nellie Edwards, W. T.; John Edwards, W. M.; Lizza A. Jones, W. A. M.; Hattie Hughes, W. I. G.; William Beyers, W. O. G.; Elza Williams, R. H. S.; Louisa Hughes, L. H. S.; Robert E. Jones, L. D. Membership, 55. Night of meetings, Friday, in Edwards' Hall.

Cambria Lodge, No. 61, A. O. U. W.—This lodge was organized April 24, 1879, by A. H. Casey, with the following-named officers and charter members: M. A. Shaw, P. M. W.;

Peter Williams, M. W. ; Fred. Miller, M. ; William Peterman, O. ; Edmund Evans, R. ; J. J. Edwards, F. ; H. W. Thomas, Receiver ; Henry Williams, G. ; Edwin Davis, I. W. ; A. Schlissman, O. W. ; Samuel Davis, William H. Sanders, Fred. Seeman and D. D. Jones. The lodge adopted as regular nights of meeting the second and fourth Wednesday in each month. At its first meeting in January, 1880, were elected and installed, Fred. Miller, M. W. ; H. R. Williams, G. F. ; William Sanders, O. ; William Peterman, O. ; M. A. Shaw, G. ; A. Schleissman, I. W. ; William Seeman, O. W. ; J. J. Edwards, F. ; H. W. Thomas, Rec. ; Peter Williams, P. M. W. Trustees : D. D. Jones, J. J. Edwards, and Henry Williams.

Cambria Lodge, No. 152, A., F. A. M., was organized July 26, 1865, by S. H. Marquissec. Its charter members and first officers were G. O. Jones, W. M. ; D. C. Davis, S. W. ; H. B. Rust, J. W. ; Horace Rust, Treasurer ; R. J. Rowland, Sec. ; W. Meacher, S. D. ; J. B. Smith, J. D. ; S. G. Winters, Tiler. Up to January, 1880, five members had died, as follows : Mr. Blodgett, Jacob Jackson, Robert J. Rowlands, George Farcy, D. H. Ennis. At the annual election, January, 1880, were elected and installed, Peter Williams, W. M. ; E. Tripp, S. W. ; John Houston, J. W. ; P. Beckelhaupt, Treas. ; Z. Merrill, Sec. ; John Davis, S. D. ; H. H. Jones, J. D. ; D. A. Roberts, Tiler. Regular night of meeting, first and third Thursday, in each month.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Fires.—As has been stated, in 1872 the hotel of Chatwood & Son was destroyed by fire. In 1874, seven buildings on the north side of Water street were destroyed, the loss amounting to $10,000. April 26, 1879, four buildings on the south side of Water street met a similar fate, inflicting a loss of $35,000.

The grist-mill has frequently changed hands. Its first proprietors were the Langdons, then Bell, Jones & Edwards, John ap Jones, Jones & Williams, Williams & Evans, Gabriel Williams, and Williams & Jones, who in 1880, were its proprietors. The old frame long since passed away and in its stead was erected, in 1871, a large and handsome stone structure costing $40,000, and having placed in it nothing but the latest and most approved machinery.

Since the original plat was recorded, several additions have been made to the village, and are known as J. D. Jones', Roberts', Sarah ap Roberts', Williams', Jones' and Kelly's Additions to Cambria. The greater part of the place lies within the town of Courtland, while the remainder is in the town of Randolph. Cambria was under town government until 1866, the Legislature of that year passing an act of incorporation, and in April, 1866, the first charter election was held. By the act of incorporation, the government was to consist of a President and five Trustees, a Clerk, Treasurer, Police Justice and Constable, who should be an ex officio Marshal, and such other officers as the Trustees should ordain. The President and Trustees and the Police Justice were to be elected annually, on the second Monday in April, the other officers to be appointed by the President and Trustees, to hold their offices for one year, or until their successors were duly appointed and qualified. The Police Justice was given all the rights and privileges of a Justice of the Peace, and was entitled to the same fees as received by them. Power was given to the President and Trustees to grant licenses for the sale of intoxicating, alcoholic, vinous, fermented, malt or mixed liquors, wine, beer or cider, and for passing and enforcing all laws necessary for the government of houses thereby licensed ; for organizing fire companies, restraining drunkards, establish pounds, and the licensing and controlling of other matters that might be necessary for good government.

The following is a list of village officers for the several years since the organization of the village up to and including 1879 :

1866—E. O. Jones, President ; Jacob Jackson, Nicholas Jones, R. J. Lloyd, Willard Smith, E. R. Williams, Trustees ; D. C. Davies, Police Justice ; R. T. Williams, Clerk ; R. J. Rowland, Treasurer, S. G. Winters, Marshal ; M. W. Patton, Street Commissioner.

1867—E. O. Jones, President; Willard D. Smith, John De Witt Jones, Nicholas Jones, Elias R. Williams, Jacob Emter, Trustees; Calvin M. Bush, Police Justice; G. O. Jones, Clerk; R. J. Rowland, Treasurer; John L. Owens, Marshal.

1868—E. O. Jones, President; John D. Jones, Peter Bickelhaupt, J. W. Kelley, O. E. Jones, G. D. Myers, Trustees; R. J. Rowland, Police Justice; G. O. Jones, Clerk; Isaac Perry, Marshal; William H. Patton, Street Commissioner; Elias R. Williams, Treasurer.

1869—E. O. Jones, President; John D. Jones, G. D. Myers, D. D. Owens, Nicholas Jones, H. J. Roberts, Trustees; R. J. Rowland, Police Justice; G. O. Jones, Clerk; O. E. Jones, Street Commissioner; Herman Mode, Marshal; John D. Jones, Treasurer.

1870—E. O. Jones, President; C. D. Myers, Peter Bickelhaupt, H. J. Roberts, Nicholas Jones, Hugh W. Thomas, Trustees; Griff O. Jones, Police Justice; E. P. Jones, Supervisor; Griff O. Jones, Clerk; John D. Jones, Treasurer; O. E. Jones, Street Commissioner.

1871—G. D. Myers, President; Isaac Parry, Nicholas Jones, Thomas Lewis, Robert King, E. R. Williams, Trustees; E. O. Jones, Police Justice; E. O. Jones, Clerk; H. J. Roberts, Treasurer; H. Moede, Marshal; John B. Williams, Street Commissioner.

1872—G. D. Myers, President; Peter Bickelhaupt, Thomas Lewis, Evan W. Lloyd, Gershom Jones, Elias R. Williams, Trustees; E. O. Jones, Police Justice and Clerk; H. J. Roberts, Treasurer; Nicholas Jones, Street Commissioner; H. Moedi, Marshal.

1873—G. D. Myers, President; George Forey, H. W. Thomas, D. D. Jones, E. Purnell, H. F. Miller, Trustees; E. O. Jones, Police Justice and Clerk; E. W. Lloyd, Treasurer; O. E. Jones, Marshal; Nicholas Jones, Street Commissioner.

1874—G. D. Myers, President; H. F. Miller, H. W. Thomas, John L. Owens, John Davis, M. A. Shaw, Trustees; E. O. Jones, Police Justice and Clerk; D. D. Jones, Treasurer; R. G. Humphreys, Marshal; John W. Williams, Street Commissioner.

1875—M. A. Shaw, President; Thomas Morris, John L. Owens, Thomas Lewis, George Forey, E. Purnell, Trustees; E. O. Jones, Police Justice and Clerk; D. D. Jones, Treasurer; O. E. Jones, Marshal; John W. Williams, Street Commissioner.

1876—John Davies, President; Thomas Morris, Enoch Evans, G. Williams, Jacob Emter, J. W. Kelly, Trustees; G. D. Myers, Police Justice; J. W. Kelly, Treasurer; Nicholas Jones, Street Commissioner; Isaac Parry, Marshal; M. A. Shaw, Clerk.

1877—Elias R. Williams, President; Hugh W. Thomas, Robert G. Humphrey, John D. Owens, E. Purnell, Peter Williams, Trustees; M. W. Patton, Police Justice; John Davis, Clerk; E. W. Lloyd, Treasurer; Thomas Lewis, Street Commissioner; Edward N. Jones, Marshal.

1878—G. D. Myers, President; D. G. Williams, E. W. Lloyd, E. R. Williams, J. J. Edwards, T. A. Davis, Trustees; Peter Williams, Police Justice; Thomas Lewis, Street Commissioner; E. O. Jones, Clerk; Peter Bickelhaupt, Treasurer; Isaac Parry, Marshal.

1879—D. G. Williams, President; H. W. Thomas, Thomas A. Davis, Peter Bickelhaupt, G. D. Jones, William A. Jones, Trustees; Peter Williams, Police Justice; M. A. Shaw, Clerk; Isaac Parry, Marshal; Henry Jackson, Street Commissioner; D. D. Jones, Treasurer.

The general business of the village has always been good, and is now represented by four general stores, one exclusive grocery store, one hardware, one jewelry, two drug and groceries, one furniture, one book, one restaurant, three saloons, one photograph gallery, two harness-shops, three shoe-shops, three wagon and blacksmith shops, one machine-shop, two tailor-shops, two paint-shops, one pump-shop, three millinery stores, three dressmakers, three physicians, three grain and stock dealers, one express agent, two insurance agents, two lumber-yards, one hotel, one grist-mill, two sewing-machine agencies and three agricultural machinery agencies.

VILLAGE OF RANDOLPH.

Following the building of a railroad, will be found villages springing up here and there, some of which are of mushroom growth, while others are the work of years, and show to the most casual observer an air of stability. Among the latter is the beautiful little village of Randolph, the west ward of which is situated on Section 1, in the town of Courtland, the remainder being in the town of Westford, Dodge County. On the completion of the Milwaukee & La Crosse Railroad, now the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, the citizens living near the present village, for their own convenience, desired that a station should be located here. The company proposed to erect a good depot building and the necessary side tracks, provided ground should be donated to them for that purpose. In the person of Abiel Stark was found one with sufficient public spirit to furnish the required land; and, on the 3d day of March, 1857, he executed to the company the following deed:

THIS INDENTURE. Made this 3d day of March, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven, between Abiel Stark and Jane A., his wife, of Fox Lake, party of the first part, and the La Crosse & Milwaukee Railroad Company, party of the second part, all of the State of Wisconsin, Witnesseth, that the said party of the first part, for and in consideration of the sum of one dollar, to them in hand paid, by the said party of the second part, the receipt whereof is hereby confessed and acknowledged, have given, granted, bargained, sold, remised, released, aliened, conveyed and confirmed, and by these presents do give, grant, bargain, sell, remise, release, alien, convey and confirm unto the said party of the second part, their heirs and assigns forever, for a depot for said company, a certain piece or parcel of land, situate in the county of Dodge, and described as follows, to wit: Commencing at the southeast corner of a strip of land, north of right of way, on southwest quarter of Section six (6), Township thirteen (13) north, of Range thirteen (13); thence running north on the highway, from right of way, two hundred and sixteen feet; thence west nine hundred feet; thence south one hundred and sixty-six feet; thence west four hundred and fifty-three feet, to county line; thence south fifty feet to the said right of way, containing five acres of land, more or less, together with all and singular the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining; and all the estate, right, title, interest, claim, or demand whatsoever of the said party of the first part, either in law or equity, or in possession or expectancy of, in and to the above bargained premises and their hereditaments and appurtenances, to have and to hold the said premises above described, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, unto the said party of the second part, and to his heirs and assigns forever.

And the said Abiel Stark, for himself, his heirs, executors and administrators, does covenant, grant, bargain and agree to and with the said party of the second part, his heirs and assigns, that at the time of the ensembling and delivery of said presents, were well seized of the premises, above described, as of a good, sure, perfect, absolute and indefeasible state of inheritance, in the law, in fee simple, and that the same are free and clear from all incumbrances whatever, and that the above bargained premises, in the quiet and peaceable possession of the said party of the second part, their heirs and assigns, against all and every person or persons, lawfully claiming the whole or any part thereof, he will forever warrant and defend.

In witness whereof, The said party of the first part hereunto set their hands and seals the day and year first above written.

Sealed and delivered in the presence of

FRANCIS WANS,
JOHN CONVERSE.

ABIEL STARK, [L. S.]
JANE A. STARK. [L. S.]

STATE OF WISCONSIN,)
COUNTY OF COLUMBIA. }

Be it remembered, that on the 3d day of March, A. D. 1857, personally came before me the above-named Abiel Stark, and Jane S., his wife, to me known to be the said persons who executed the said deed, and acknowledged the same to be their free act and deed, for the uses and purposes therein mentioned.

JOHN CONVERSE, Notary Public.

The above deed was received for record at the office of the Register of Deeds, at 11:45 A. M., April 30, 1857.

A temporary depot was erected the same month in which the deed was made, and used until the completion of the present building, in August following.

The first plat of the village was made December 2, 1857, principally on the farm of Abiel Stark, together with five acres held jointly by Abiel Stark and John Converse. In May (1858) following, Dickinson's addition was surveyed, followed by an addition in June, 1859, by Abiel Stark, and one in October, the same year, by Mr. Hollinshead, this last being within Columbia County.

In April, 1857, John Converse finished the first building erected on the present site of the village, and used the same as a dwelling. Others were soon afterward in the course of erection; and before long a thriving little village sprung up, which has had a steady growth to the present, not increasing rapidly in numbers, but adding to its population year by year, and also increasing steadily in material wealth.

The first store building was erected in the year 1857 by H. B. Converse; the first warehouse by S. Merrill.

Rees Evans

CAMBRIA.

The village now presents a very neat appearance, with a large number of excellent dwelling-houses and stores, the latter doing a first-class business. The population is about five hundred. Few of the first settlers of the place now remain, some having moved away, while others have died. Abiel Stark, the real founder of the place, departed this life in August, 1869, enjoying the respect and confidence of all who knew him. He was a consistent member of the Baptist Church, and died in the faith. Mr. John Converse died in August, 1879, surviving Mr. Stark some ten years.

It is well to state here that the village was first given the name of Converseville, from Mr. John Converse; it was afterward changed to Westford, and, finally, to Randolph. For the first thirteen years, it was attached to the town of Westford; but, in the winter of 1869-70, the Legislature of the State passed an act incorporating Randolph as a village, and, on the 8th day of March, 1870, the first charter election was held.

GOVERNMENT.

The charter contains a provision that the President of the Board shall always be a resident of the East Ward, or that part lying within the limits of Dodge County. The following village officers have been elected since the act of incorporation:

1870—President, Dr. William Meacher. Trustees, East Ward—R. C. Penney and A. Jones; West Ward—G. C. Foster and J. Binny. Assessor, R. D. Calkins; Treasurer, R. Illsley; Constable, Morris Taylor. Justices, East Ward—D. Kenyon; West Ward—S. M. Smith; Clerk, S. M. Smith. Supervisors, East Ward—John E. Root; West Ward—S. M. Smith.

1871—President, Alvarado Jones. Trustees, East Ward—N. Rasmusson and G. C. Foster; West Ward—R. Arms and J. Binny. Assessor, M. Wilson; Treasurer, R. C. Penney. Supervisors, East Ward—J. E. Root; West Ward—S. M. Smith. Constable, Walter Hinchliffe; Clerk, S. M. Smith.

1872—President, James Knowles. Trustees, East Ward—Martin Allen and I. S. Butterfield; West Ward—J. Stalker and G. C. Foster. Supervisors, East Ward—J. E. Root; West Ward—S. M. Smith. Treasurer, R. D. Evans. Justices, East Ward—H. B. Converse; West Ward—J. Stalker. Constable, Walter Hinchliffe; Clerk, H. B. Converse.

1873—President, J. J. Stocks, elected, but resigned, and James Knowles appointed by the Board to fill vacancy. Trustees, East Ward—James Knowles and J. G. Stark; West Ward—R. S. Richmond and R. Arms. Supervisors, East Ward—J. E. Root; West Ward—J. Stalker. Treasurer, R. D. Evans; Assessor, A. Jones. Justices, West Ward—R. S. Richmond; East Ward—H. B. Converse. Constable, M. G. Toby; Clerk, H. B. Converse.

1874—President, R. D. Calkins. Trustees, East Ward—M. Wilson and N. Rasmusson; West Ward—G. C. Foster and J. Stalker. Treasurer, R. D. Calkins; Assessor, A. Jones; Supervisors, East Ward—H. B. Converse; West Ward—W. T. Whirry. Justices, East Ward—H. B. Converse; West Ward—W. T. Whirry. Constable, J. A. Townsend; Clerk, H. B. Converse.

1875—President, James Knowles. Trustees, East Ward—J. G. Stark and C. O. Bigelow; West Ward—R. S. Richmond and J. Stalker. Treasurer, R. D. Evans; Assessor, C. J. Coleman. Supervisors, East Ward—J. E. Root; West Ward—J. Stalker. Justices, East Ward—H. B. Converse; West Ward—W. T. Whirry. Constable, J. A. Townsend; Clerk, J. E. Root.

1876—President, R. D. Calkins. Trustees, East Ward—R. N. Rasmusson and C. O. Bigelow; West Ward—R. S. Richmond and Richard Arms. Treasurer, R. D. Evans; Assessor, C. J. Coleman. Justices, East Ward—R. D. Calkins; West Ward—Roger Williams. Supervisors, East Ward—J. E. Root; West Ward—J. Stalker. Constable, J. A. Townsend; Clerk, R. G. Roberts.

1877—President, James Knowles. Trustees, East Ward—J. G. Stark and M. Wilson; West Ward—J. Roberts and R. S. Richmond. Assessor, C. J. Coleman; Treasurer, R. D.

Evans. Supervisors, East Ward—J. E. Root; West Ward—J. Stalker. Justices, East Ward—R. D. Calkins; West Ward—Roger Williams. Constable, J. A. Townsend; Clerk, J. E. Hughes.

1878—President, W. S. Johnson. Trustees, East Ward—H. W. Owen and N. Rasmusson; West Ward—G. C. Foster and R. V. Roberts. Assessor, C. J. Coleman; Treasurer, R. D. Evans. Supervisors, East Ward—J. E. Root; West Ward—G. C. Foster. Justices, East Ward—R. D. Calkins; West Ward—Roger Williams. Clerk, R. G. Roberts.

1879—President, C. J. Coleman. Trustees, East Ward—C. O. Bigelow and E. P. Jones; West Ward—R. S. Richmond and Roger Williams. Assessor, M. Wilson; Treasurer, R. D. Evans. Supervisors, East Ward—J. E. Root; West Ward—G. C. Foster. Constable, M. D. French; Clerk, J. G. Stark.

1880—President, C. J. Coleman. Trustees, East Ward—C. H. Smith, E. P. Jones; West Ward—R. S. Richmond, Roger Williams. Treasurer, R. D. Evans; Assessor, M. Wilson; Constable, M. L. French; Supervisors, East Ward, John E. Root; West Ward—G. C. Foster; Justices, East Ward, R. D. Calkins; West Ward, Roger Williams.

FIRST THINGS.

The first settler where the village now stands was John Hopper, who owned forty acres of land on what is now known as Dickinson's Addition to the village.

The first child born in the village was Jessie R. Converse.

The first school was taught by Lura L. Stark, daughter of Abiel and Jane Stark, in 1858-59.

The first lawyer was M. M. Fowler, who located here in 1859.

The first load of wheat sold in the place was in August, 1857, by C. N. Ashley to G. W. Goldsmith.

The village, like the country surrounding, was first settled by emigrants from the East; but, of late years, a large number of Welsh have made their homes here, and to-day this people comprise nearly half of the population. They are an industrious and thrifty class, and make good citizens and neighbors. They have two flourishing churches.

POST OFFICE.

The first Postmaster in the village was John Converse, then James Knowles, and last, John E. Root, who received his appointment in 1873, the first year of Grant's second term. Mr. Root came to the village in 1861, and has resided here ever since. The office was made a money-order office in 1872, the first order drawn being in favor of the Andes Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, by S. M. Smith, for the sum of $29.50. The amount of the business now being done yearly is about $20,000.

MANUFACTORIES, ETC.

Two mills have been built, the first in 1859, by Converse & Stevely, which was burned in 1861. Another was erected some twelve years after, by Fred Zollner, assisted by the farmers of the neighborhood, who contributed some $2,000 for that purpose. This, too, was burned to the ground in May, 1879.

Three large elevators are here, each handling a large amount of grain, and owned and controlled by James Knowles & Co.

The State of Wisconsin has obtained an enviable reputation for the quantity and quality of its cheese, and in no place is this article better made than in the village of Randolph. In the year 1872, R. D. Calkins commenced its manufacture, and, during the season of 1879, he used the milk of about two hundred cows, and manufactured about thirty thousand pounds, which, estimating the average price per pound at 10 cents, will net the snug little sum of $3,000. Mr. Calkins buys his milk of the neighboring farmers, paying therefor about 90 cents per hundred pounds.

The mercantile trade of the place is rather above the average, there being about twenty stores of all kinds, including dry goods, groceries, hardware, millinery, drug, book, boot and shoe stores.

NEWSPAPERS.

Randolph, like many other similar villages, has had its newspaper. On the 1st day of January, 1873, the first number of the Randolph Enterprise made its appearance, J. S. Lightner, publisher; Dr. Haeston, editor. For two years the Doctor continued its editor, when Mr. Lightner, its publisher, donned the editorial harness and remained in charge for about one year, during which time it attained its greatest circulation. At the expiration of this time, he sold the material and good will of the office to E. W. Stevens, who continued it for another year, then selling to Messrs. Brown & Foster, who changed its name to Lively Times, which, if report be true, was less lively than any of its predecessors. Before the expiration of the year, they suspended the paper and moved the material of the office to another part of the State, since which time no effort has been made to fill its place.

SCHOOLS.

One of the best criterions by which to judge a village or city is the condition of its public schools, and it may be said that Randolph will not suffer by comparison. In 1867, it was discovered that the old schoolhouse was entirely unsuited to the wants of a thriving village, and steps were at once taken for the erection of a better building. A site was chosen by a committee appointed for that purpose, and, the following year, the contract was let for the building of a house 34x50 feet, two stories in height, for the sum of $4,000. J. Roberts, N. Rasmusson and R. D. Calkins are the present Directors, with William Keeley, Principal, and Miss Jennie Marvin, assistant, in charge of the school.

EXPORTS.

The amount of shipments of the place in the year 1879, was as follows: Wheat, 5,574,000 pounds; barley, 365,840 pounds; potatoes, 66,780 pounds; cattle, 772,000 pounds; hogs, 852,000 pounds; butter, 57,475 pounds; wool, 86,000 pounds. If reduced to cars, we have, of wheat, 279; of barley, 1; potatoes, 4; cattle, 65; hogs, 71; butter, 3; wool, 7; a total of 438 cars for the year.

CHURCHES.

There are in the place four churches, Baptist, Methodist, Episcopal, Welsh Methodist Episcopal and Welsh Congregational, each with large, comfortable church buildings.

Baptist.—This church was organized in February, 1867, with twenty-seven members, Elder Moore being its first Pastor. The erection of a suitable place of worship was at once taken in hand, and, in March, 1868, the present building was completed, at a cost of $5,000. The membership of the church increased rapidly until it numbered at one time nearly one hundred, but of late years it has been decreased by removals and deaths until their number has become so small they are not able to have regular services. They also have disbanded their Sunday school and stopped their weekly meetings for prayer. The following named have served as Pastors of the church since its organization: Elders Saxton, First, Heagle, McLeod and Sweet. The present Trustees are D. D. Ashley, Lewis Brown and R. D. Calkins.

Methodist Episcopal.—The Dodge County Directory, published in 1872, gives the date of erection of their church building as 1859. The church is now in a very flourishing condition, having a membership of about one hundred, and an average attendance in their Sunday school of eighty. Their church building is a large frame, with basement. The following have served as Pastors: B. R. Shephard, C. C. Lathrop, D. Brown, F. T. Allen, Mr. Window, J. B. Cooper, Mr. Olmstead, Mr. Woodhead, U. H. Thompson and A. Reed, the present Pastor.

Welsh Methodist Episcopal.—This society was organized in 1868 with thirty-two members. It first worshiped in a schoolhouse purchased at a cost of $248. In 1876, their present substantial building was erected at a cost of $3,000. Its size is 32x46. The church is in a flourishing condition and the members are working together harmoniously. They employ no regular Pastor. Rev. Thomas Faulk and Rev. Thomas R. Jones are the resident local preachers. Present membership of church, eighty-seven; Sunday school, seventy-five.

Welsh Congregational Church.—Organized in July, 1876, with the following named members: John Lewis, James Thomas, H. C. Ellis, William E. Roberts, John W. Davis, J. D. Jones, William R. Roberts, Peter Thomas, Griffith R. Jones. The congregation is in good condition, with a membership of forty-five. They have only had one Pastor since their organization—Rev. J. P. Evans. The church building was erected in 1877 at a cost, including site, of $3,100. James Thomas and John W. Davis are Deacons; Griffith R. Jones, Treasurer; R. Griffith, Secretary; H. C. Ellis, O. W. Lloyd, William J. Davis, Trustees. The average attendance of Sunday school is forty-four.

SOCIETIES.

But one benevolent or temperance organization was in the place in 1879, that of the Temple of Honor, No. 33, organized in January, 1876, by Col. Watrous, G. W. T., with sixty-four members. The Temple is in a flourishing condition, meets every Tuesday evening at Temple Hall (Baptist Church).

The following named comprise the charter members: C. O. Bigelow, W. S. Johnson, R. D. Evans, J. W. Olmstead, C. J. Coleman, R. G. Roberts, F. O. Bolles, W. H. Albright, J. M. Albright, Hans Johnson, J. A. Lightner, M. H. Epley, J. M. Allen, John G. Griffin, M. F. Arms, H. Gilmore, J. H. Rockfellow, John E. Hughes, W. F. Root, James Lockhart, O. C. Dibble, R. N. Rasmusson, H. C. Dunham, W. Byron, J. W. Townsend, John D. Davis, H. W. Owen, Charles Heyer, F. D. Taylor, W. W. Alward, H. Phelps, David L. Hughes, D. S. Johnson, John H. Owens, George G. Roberts, H. C. Williams, William E. Owens, D. Hsley, O. F. Lloyd, Milton Jones, Thomas R. Jones, O. D. Scofield, John Jess, Charles W. Hinchliffe, W. Chapman, Thomas C. Williams, John Lloyd, N. Rasmusson, G. C. Foster, Frank Dibble, Junius Marvin, F. Yoaker, J. H. Phelps, R. H. Mead, William Lyke, E. H. Holmes, James Hanson, Thomas Alrinds, J. H. Holmes, H. Hutchinson, S. J. Butterfield, W. L. Price, E. Bryant, M. Neilson.

The first officers were C. O. Bigelow, W. C. T.; W. S. Johnson, W. V. T.; R. D. Evans, P. W. C. T.; C. J. Coleman, W. R.; R. G. Roberts, W. A. R.; M. Arms, W. F. R.; H. Dunham, W. T.; Charles Hinchliffe, W. M.; W. Chapman, W. G.; E. Holmes, W. S.; G. C. Foster, W. T. D.

Present officers: R. D. Calkins, W. C. T.; H. Harmer, W. V. T.; W. W. Lloyd, W. R.; C. Hutchinson, W. A. R.; Dr. C. M. Willis, W. F. R.; N. Rasmusson, W. T.; James Marvin, M. U.; Hans Larson, W. D. U.; John Eggleston, W. G.; W. S. Johnson, W. S.; W. C. Foster, P. W. C. T.; John Lloyd, W. T. D.

HOTELS.

Clement House.—This house was erected immediately after the laying-out of the village, by H. H. Russell, and kept by him for a short time, when it was disposed of to Edward Clement. Mr. Clement has leased the house from time to time to various parties, E. L. Hoyt taking possession January, 1880.

Russell House.—Was built by John Converse, who kept it for several years, disposing of it to H. H. Russell. In the spring of 1880, it passed into the hands of Roger Williams.

TOWN OF DEKORRA.

In 1846, this town, with much other territory, was formed into an election precinct, to be known as Dekorra Precinct. Elections were ordered held at the house of La Fayette Hill, and Joshua W. Rhodes, John Springer and Thomas Swearingen were appointed judges of election. In 1849, the Board of County Commissioners ordained that all that portion of Columbia County lying west of the Wisconsin River, and south of the Baraboo River, and the fractional part of Township 11, Range 9, and the fractional part of Township 11, Range 8, and that part of the south half of Township 12, Range 9, lying east of the Wisconsin River, should be organized into a town, to which was given the name Dekorra, and the house of Bishop Johnson designated as the place for holding the first election. Subsequently, the town was made to embrace only Township 11, Range 9, except a part of Section 6, lying west of the Wisconsin River, and all of Township 11, Range 8, lying east of the Wisconsin River.

The northeast quarter of the southeast quarter of Section 34, Township 11, Range 9, was the first land entered in this town. It was entered, as mentioned in a previous article, by Wallace Rowan on the 6th day of June, 1836. The remaining three forties of this quarter were entered by J. D. Doty on the 8th day of February, 1837.

Lots 2 and 3, on Section 5, Township 11, Range 9, were also entered by J. D. Doty on the 29th of July, 1836. All of Section 7, Township 11, Range 9, was entered October 10 of the same year, and all of Section 8, Township 11, Range 9, was entered the following day.

Upon the land entered by Wallace Rowan, the first hotel in the town was built, and for a considerable time kept by him. Many of the earlier settlers of the State have partaken of the hospitalities of Mr. and Mrs. Rowan, and many a singular anecdote is told of the manner in which the nights were spent at that place. The house was small and not calculated to accommodate a great number of guests, and hotels in those days being few and far between, there were times when the number of guests were much greater than the lodging capacity of the house would accommodate.

The oldest records of the town show that on the 3d day of April, 1849, there was an election held at the village of Dekorra, and that William W. Drake was elected Chairman of the Board of Supervisors, and Charles W. Kingsbury and Christopher Randall were his associates; Quintin Smith was elected Town Clerk; Joshua W. Rhodes, Assessor; William Owen, Superintendent of Schools; William P. Barber, Hugh Mair and Thomas Robertson, Justices of the Peace; Joel C. Doolittle and Robert Wilson, Constables. It appears, however, that some of the officers elected failed to qualify for on the 26th day of May of the same year, another election was held and Lafayette Hill was elected Justice of the Peace; Joel C. Doolittle, Town Treasurer, and John S. Richmond, Superintendent of Schools. It again appears that John S. Richmond and Joel C. Doolittle failed to qualify, and that on the 28th day of November, James R. McMillan was appointed Town Treasurer and John Pate, Superintendent of Schools. On the 3d day of September, 1849, another election was held for county officers, at which there were forty ballots deposited. Those voting at that election were David McMurphy, William B. McQuewen, W. P. Barber, Noah Dunham, Cyrus M. McMurphy, Lewis Butterfield, Thomas Greene, Henry W. Kingsbury, Nathan Palmer, Hezekiah Kingsbury, William G. Greene, Thomas Robertson, Lewis From, William Butterfield, C. Kingsbury, Isaac Griends, Henry York, W. B. Streeter, Solomon Cook, William W. Drake, J. C. Doolittle, John Pate, James Robertson, Quintin Smith, David Brewer, Thomas B. Scott, John Hutchinson, Pardon Davis, Joshua Dayton, Alexander McDonald, John T. De La Ronde, Simeon Lecuyer, Mingo Bennett, James McMurphy, Rufus McMurphy, J. B. Miller, Samuel Williams, Bishop Johnson, Hugh Muir, J. H. Warren. Of the above number, in 1879 not one was then living in the town. Some four or five were in Caledonia, some have moved to parts unknown, and some have died. On the 6th day of November, of the same year, an election was held for State officers, at which forty-seven votes were cast, only one of which, in 1879, was of the town, that being William McDonald. Some six or seven were then residents of Caledonia.

The pioneer mill in this part of Wisconsin is situated on Rocky Run Creek, about a hundred rods from the Wisconsin River, in the town of Dekorra, seven miles from Portage, and is known as the Dekorra Mills. It was erected in 1843, at which time there was no grist-mill at Madison, Baraboo, Portage, Wycena, Kingston or at Columbus, and in the first years of operating the mill, grists were brought from all these points and from a distance thirty or forty miles north of Portage. The mill was built by a company of men from Ohio who had large landed interests in Wisconsin, and who were the platters of the ancient and obsolete village of Dekorra. The first grist, which was of corn, was ground for Thomas Robinson, of Caledonia, better known as "Daddy" Robinson, now deceased. In 1847, the mill was leased for three years to Joshua Rhodes and John Springer, both of whom have since died, the consideration being the building of a new dam and the making of some other improvements. The next tenant of the mill was I. I. Ege, who died at Dekorra two or three years ago, and who managed it a year. In 1852, S. M. Carr traded his farm in Ohio for this property without ever seeing it, and at once removed to Dekorra. He made considerable improvements in the mill and operated it until April, 1868, when it passed into the hands of John McKenzie, who has managed it ever since. He purchased the mill for a consideration of $9,000. The cost of the repairs and improvements which he has since made on this property amounts to almost as much as the original price of the mill. During the first summer, he entirely overhauled it and put in a new water wheel at an expense of $2,300. In 1870, he expended $900 more for an additional water wheel, and in 1877 the mill was stopped for repairs from June to August. In that season, the race was widened and deepened, and considerable masonry was laid under and about the mill, new timbers placed beneath it and new flumes constructed, the whole disbursement amounting to $2,500. The latter, as a rule, have to be renewed every ten years, the line of decay being at the point where air and water meet. That submerged lumber does not rot is well illustrated by the fact that some of the white pine lumber, which has been under the water here for thirty-five years, is still as sound as when hewn, and harder. Except a portion of the frame, very little of the old mill now remains, and it has been gradually and constantly improved until it is now one of the most convenient and easily operated in the country.

Among his improvements is the erection of a store building for flour, 14x36 feet, with basement underneath, used as a hitching place for the horses of his patrons. He has also constructed a very tasty and well-built barn 30x42 feet, with a basement under all. A notable feature about the building is the attempt which has been made to render it rat-proof. The floor and walls have been made the same as the solid rock, the grout and rock on the bottom being seven inches thick, with a plank floor over that. The carpenter work was done by G. M. Odie, a former resident of Portage, and the masonry by Henry Loos and Thomas Arnott, both of Portage.

Before the supplying of the flour for Portage was divided up among so many mills, the monthly sales from that at Dekorra was sometimes as high as two hundred and fifty barrels, but now the monthly shipments here are scarcely a hundred. Gristing is done for patrons in Arlington, Caledonia, Dekorra, Lowville, Leeds, Pacific and Wyocena. This includes the operation of the mills except that during the winter a considerable quantity of breadstuffs are ground and shipped to the pineries, and his shipments, in the winter of 1879, were twenty-one car loads.

The first schoolhouse (a board shanty) was erected in the spring of 1850, on the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 26, Township 11, Range 9, and the first school was taught therein by Miss Sarah Richardson. The following spring, a more substantial log building was erected a short distance from where the board shanty stood. This house served as a schoolhouse, church and rostrum, for a number of years. The first frame schoolhouse built in the town was built in the fall of 1850, near the village of Dekorra.

Among the early settlers of this town were Thomas C. Nelson, Joshua W. Rhoads, Lafayette Hill, William Hartman, William McDonald, James R. McMillan, Peter McKenzie, Alexander Stevenson, William Wilbur, Mr. Fish, Mr. Hutchinson, M. R. Rowan, Samuel B. Pinney, John Thomas, S. B. Thomas, John Sims, Mr. Ensminger, Hubbard Johnson, Hugh Jamieson.

In the summer of 1877, the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, living in the northeast part of the town, assisted by those liberally inclined, erected a neat church edifice, 26x40 feet, at a cost of $1,600. They also furnished it with patent iron seats at an expense of $200. In the winter of 1876-77, Rev. J. Warren, a local preacher living in the neighborhood, began a protracted meeting, which was continued some weeks, resulting in the conversion of forty souls. A class was organized, but no church formed, those holding out faithfully uniting with the church at Portage. A Sunday-school had been held in the neighborhood for twenty years previous, the meeting being the result of the interest awakened in the school. The church building was the result of the meeting.

Allen Johnson and Mary Chalfant were the first couple united in marriage in the town, and the event occurred in 1843.

Death claimed his first victim in the person of Washington Van Winter, who died in February, 1845. The second death was that of Mr. Osborne, who died the following spring at the house of A. Johnson.

The surface of this is generally wooded with the ordinary small oaks, showing only one small patch of prairie in the southeast corner of Township 11, Range 8. Along Okee Creek, in the southern part, and along Rocky Run, in the northern part, are marsh belts about a mile in width. Near the Wisconsin River, the altitude is generally 190 to 200 feet; away from it, 250 to 300 feet. The higher limestone country skirts it along its southern and western sides, sending into it a few projecting points. A number of isolated bluffs also dot its surface, rising 100 to 200 feet above the general level, the highest ones reaching the horizon of the Lower Magnesian.

In the fall of 1870, the Madison & Portage, now the Madison Branch of the Chicago Milwaukee Railroad, was completed through the town, passing from north to south through Sections 3, 10, 15, 22, 27, 26 and 35. The company made two stations in the town—at Poynette and Hartman's. At the latter, there being no village, trains do not stop unless flagged, or to permit a passenger to get off the train.

The following is a list of town officers from 1849 to 1880 inclusive:

1849—William Drake, Chairman; Charles W. Kingsbury, Christopher Randall, Supervisors; Quinton Smith, Clerk; Joel C. Doolittle, Treasurer; Joshua W. Rhoads, Assessor; William Owen, School Superintendent.

1850—Bishop Johnson, Chairman; John S. Richmond, Danforth Pratt, Supervisors; Quinton Smith, Clerk; James McMillan, Treasurer; Robert H. Miller, Assessor; John Pate, School Superintendent.

1851—Joshua W. Rhoads, Chairman; William Shanks, Matthew L. Kenyon, Supervisors; Quinton Smith, Clerk; Thomas McMillan, Treasurer; Alexander Prentiss, Assessor; John Pate, School Superintendent.

1852—Daniel White, Chairman; James Wilson, John Hutchinson, Supervisors; Josiah Mitchell, Clerk; Samuel B. Thomas, Treasurer; Joseph Hartman, Assessor; John Thomas, School Superintendent.

1853—Daniel White, Chairman; James Wilson, John Hutchinson, Supervisors; James B. Boylan, Clerk; George Ege, Treasurer; Samuel B. Thomas, Assessor; James B. Boylan, School Superintendent.

1854—Daniel White, Chairman; James Wilson, John Hutchinson, Supervisors; Charles Martin, Clerk; M. M. Ege, Treasurer; Robert Shortly, Assessor; Harver Curtis, School Superintendent.

1855—Joshua W. Rhoads, Chairman; Solomon Cook, George C. Hopkins, Supervisors; Charles Martin, Clerk; Josiah Mitchell, Treasurer; William H. Wilbur, Assessor; James Irons, School Superintendent.

1856—Daniel White, Chairman; Alexander Stephens, Robert Wilson, Supervisors; George L. Francis, Clerk; Josiah Mitchell, Treasurer; John Sims, John McKenzie, Assessors; James Irons, School Superintendent.

1857—Daniel White, Chairman; Alexander Stephens, John Hutchinson, Supervisors; George L. Francis, Clerk; Joseph Wood, Treasurer; Archibald Hastie, Assessor; James Irons, School Superintendent.

1858—Daniel White, Chairman; Alexander Stephens, John Hutchinson, Supervisors; George L. Francis, Clerk; Joseph Wood, Treasurer; Archibald Hastie, Assessor; James Irons, Superintendent.

1859—William Waugh, Chairman; L. N. Wilkins, Samuel Fish, Supervisors; William Bonstel, Clerk; Neenian Thompson, Treasurer; James Mccolean, Assessor; James Irons, School Superintendent.

1860—Daniel White, Chairman; Samuel Fish, Horace Hutchinson, Supervisors; George L. Francis, Clerk; B. S. Buck, Treasurer; Ralph Tomlinson, Assessor; Nelson Whitman, School Superintendent.

1861—Hugh Jamieson, Chairman; Oliver Luther, William Buckley, Supervisors; George L. Francis, Clerk; Alexander Freeland, Treasurer; John McKenzie, Assessor; James L. Sims, School Superintendent.

1862—Hugh Jamieson, Chairman; O. C. Luther, William Buckley, Supervisors; George L. Francis, Clerk; Alexander Freeland, Treasurer; John McKenzie, Assessor.

1863—Hugh Jamieson, Chairman; James Wilson, O. C. Luther, Supervisors; William C. Bonstel, Clerk; Archibald Hastie, Treasurer; John McKenzie, Assessor.

1864—B. S. Buck, Chairman; James Wilson, Elijah Hinkson, Supervisors; E. F. Russell, Clerk; Frank Wilkins, Treasurer; Joseph Hartman, Assessor.

1865—Hugh Jamieson, Chairman; Robert Wilson, Elijah Hinkson, Supervisors; E. F. Russell, Clerk; Silas J. Packard, Treasurer; William C. Bonstel, Assessor.

1866—Hugh Jamieson, Chairman; Elijah Hinkson, Archibald Hastie, Supervisors; E. F. Russell, Clerk; Silas J. Packard, Treasurer; Charles Early, Assessor.

1867—Hugh Jamieson, Chairman; Elijah Hinkson, A. Hastie, Supervisors; E. F. Russell, Clerk; T. Hartman, Treasurer; Alexander Freeland, Assessor.

1868—Hugh Jamieson, Chairman; William C. Bonstel, Charles Early, Supervisors; William Hastie, Clerk; Joseph Hartman, Treasurer; Alexander Freeland, Assessor.

1869—John McKenzie, Chairman; Elijah Hinkson, William Buckley, Supervisors; William Hastie, Clerk; William Laughlin, Treasurer; Alexander Freeland, Assessor.

1870—Hugh Jamieson, Chairman; Neenian Thompson, Thomas Cutsforth, Supervisors; William Hastie, Clerk; W. B. Laughlin, Treasurer; George McMillan, Jr., Assessor.

1871—John McKenzie, Chairman; H. S. Reedal, James Luther, Supervisors; William Hastie, Clerk; William Dunlap, Treasurer; George McMillan, Jr., Assessor.

1872—John McKenzie, Chairman; H. S. Reedal, James Luther, Supervisors; James Hastie, Clerk; William Dunlap, Treasurer; O. P. Stevens, Assessor.

1873—John McKenzie, Chairman; H. S. Reedal, James Luther, Supervisors; Edward Waugh, Clerk; William Reedal, Treasurer; James Cordiner, Assessor.

1874—John McKenzie, Chairman; H. S. Reedal, James Luther, Supervisors; Edward Waugh, Clerk; William Reedal, Treasurer; O. P. Stephens, Assessor.

1875—Hugh Jamieson, Chairman; W. B. Laughlin, William Dunlap, Supervisors; S. L. Scofield, Clerk; N. C. Fish, Treasurer; A. Hastie, Assessor.

1876—Archibald Hastie, Chairman; William Dunlap, Thomas Cutsforth, Supervisors; S. L. Scofield, Clerk; Frank E. Smith, Treasurer; James Cordiner, Assessor.

1877—Archibald Hastie, Chairman; Alexander Freeland, Newton Davis, Supervisors; S. L. Scofield, Clerk; Frank E. Smith, Treasurer; William Dunlap, Assessor.

1878—Archibald Hastie, Chairman; Alexander Freeland, Newton Davis, Supervisors; S. L. Scofield, Clerk; Frank E. Smith, Treasurer; Thomas Cutsforth, Assessor.

1879—James R. Hastie, Chairman; Alexander Freeland, William Reedal, Supervisors; S. L. Scofield, Clerk; M. B. Scofield, Treasurer; Joseph Wood, Assessor.

1880—J. R. Hastie, Chairman; Newton Davis, William Reedal, Supervisors; S. L. Scofield, Clerk; M. B. Scofield, Treasurer; Joseph Wood, Assessor.

In the spring of 1837, Thompson, Trimble and Morton platted a village on Section 5, to which was given the high-sounding name of "Kentucky City," so named in honor of Mr.

Merton, who was from the State of Kentucky. LaFayette Hill was induced to settle here, and in August, 1837, he built the first and only house erected in the "city." In vain was the call made for other settlers; neither the name, location, or inducements held out by the proprietors of the place, attracted those in search of a home. The plat was vacated in due time, and "Kentucky City" was a thing of the past.

VILLAGE OF DEKORRA.

In the fall of 1842, Thompson & Trimble, who became sole owners of the greater part of Sections 5, 6, 7 and 8, Township 11, Range 9 east, including the site of the former village of Kentucky City, sent out J. W. Rhoads and Thomas C. Nelson, with instructions to build a mill, lay out a village and establish a store at this point. The mill was built according to instructions, a complete account of which is given in the history of the town of Dekorra, it being outside the limits of the village as platted. The village was laid out, the plat made and recorded January 7, 1843. The site was that upon which the former village of Kentucky City was located, and was selected on account of the facilities as a landing on the river at that place, and for years it was a great distributing point for lumber, and a large area of country, extending as far north as Madison, was supplied thence. Quite a village gradually sprang up around the landing, and there is a tradition that Dekorra narrowly escaped being selected as the site for the State capital; but the building of railroads cut off its trade, and it languished and dwindled until it now consists of only a store, run by James McMillan, who is also Postmaster; a blacksmith shop, and the best ferry on that part of the river.

In 1856, Peter Taylor and Mr. Ege built a saw-mill at Dekorra, which was subsequently transformed into a steam grist-mill. The enterprise proving a failure, the machinery was sold and transferred to Blue Mounds.

The first store was opened in 1843, by Rhoads & Nelson, agents of Thompson & Trimble; the second, by J. B. Miller; third, by James McMillan; fourth, by George Ege; fifth, a grocery store, by Thomas McMillan.

John Springer started a blacksmith-shop in the village this same year.

A post office was established here in the spring of 1843, with Thomas C. Nelson as Postmaster.

La Fayette Hill, whose house was built while the place was known as Kentucky City, kept the first hotel, and Hill's tavern was always well patronized.

Death claimed its first victim in a child of John Springer, in 1844.

No church building was ever erected in the village, but a congregation of Presbyterians was organized here October 24, 1854, under the name of "Presbyterian Church of Dekorra and Caledonia." The Presbytery of Winnebago at this time sent Revs. H. R. Robertson, W. W. McNair and Elder Reed to organize if the way was clear. After the usual services, Michael Cochrane, Robert Sample, William Sample, John Brown, Margaret Brown, John Marshall, James Stevenson and wife and Peter Shaw signed the articles of covenant and were constituted a Presbyterian Church as above named. John Brown was elected and ordained as Elder, and John Marshall, Deacon. Rev. John McNulty was chosen as Pastor and served until his death in 1861. On the 3d day of September, 1862, the congregation was formally disbanded.

On the 9th day of April, 1863, a United Presbyterian Church was organized by Rev. J. W. Collins. Peter McKenzie and Thomas Allan were chosen as Elders. Those composing the organization, in addition to the Elders named, were David Aitken, Margaret Aitken, Samuel Edwards, Elizabeth J. Hastie, Jane McCulloch, Jane McMillen, Christina McKenzie, John McKenzie, Isabella Robertson, Electa M. Smith, Mary Wilson, Sr., Elizabeth Wilson, James Burns. Those serving the church as Pastors were Revs. J. A. Morrow, G. W. Torrence, Thomas S. Parks, J. R. Harris, Mr. Brown, W. Wright, Mr. Smith, M. B. Williams and Hugh Brown. Mr. Brown served a longer time than any other Pastor, his labors ceasing only when called away by death, May 15, 1876. Since the death of Mr. Brown, the church has not flourished, and it has now but seven or eight members, with Peter McKenzie and John Brown as Elders. A good Sunday school is kept in operation.

In 1846, William McDonald laid out a village on the northwest quarter of Section 14, Township 11, Range 9 east, and gave it the name of "Inch." The place has never belied its name, its rank among the villages of the county being such as to properly bring it within the meaning of that appellation. No lots were ever sold, stores opened or houses built, and in the year of our Lord 1880, people living in the neighborhood speak of it as "once being called Inch, but now it is not even half an 'Inch.'"

La Fayette Hill, in 1848, purchased the northeast quarter of Section 10, and laid out the village of Oshaukuta. Like many other villages, it never attained a very remarkable growth. Mr. Hill himself erected a public house, known as Hill's tavern, which always maintained a good reputation, and was open to the public until his death, in 1853. Several lots were given away and a half-dozen houses erected, including a store and blacksmith-shop. A post office was also established here, but has long since been discontinued.

VILLAGE OF POYNETTE.

Upon the 8th day of February, 1837, J. D. Doty entered 120 acres of land of the southeast quarter of Section 34, Township 11, Range 9, and caused to be laid out the village of Pauquette, the plat of which was recorded on the 15th day of March of the same year. The plat, however, was subsequently vacated. About the year 1850, application was made by petition to the Post Office Department, through Doty, to have a post office established at this point, and the petitioners desired the name given the office to be Pauquette, the same as that given by him to the village he had laid out. Through a clerical error, it was called Poynette. No effort was ever made to change the name, and when the village was again laid out it was called Poynette, after the name of the post office.

The first plat of the village was made in 1851, by Samuel B. Pinney, and comprised the northeast quarter of the southeast quarter of Section 34. Mr. Pinney, shortly after platting, transferred it to John Thomas. Since this time, various additions have been made, one made by Brayton & Tomlinson, and recorded September 25, 1863; one by Mary A. Jackson, recorded November 16, 1865; one by Tomlinson & Hudson, recorded July 14, 1871. The Poynette House and American House, and nearly all that part of the village west of Main street, on the north side, and part of that on the south side, of the creek, are on Jamieson's Addition. Other additions were made, but prior to 1879 had been vacated.

"There were about a dozen inhabitants in the village of Poynette twenty-five years ago, and four dwelling-houses, including the public house kept by Hugh Jamieson. S. B. Thomas, who kept the post office (John Thomas was the Postmaster), Hubbard Johnson and Hugh Jamieson—the latter just married and occupying one apartment of a double log house, while the other served as a schoolroom. It was Poynette's first school. The inhabitants contemplated building a schoolhouse, and in order to draw the public money they had to have a school; so they taxed the inhabitants to raise money to pay a teacher, for which services they paid $6.00 per month. For something to eat the teacher walked home with her scholars, sometimes two or three miles out in the country: for Poynette was a village (why not?) with hotel, post office, and blacksmith shop. I used to hear people say Poynette would be as large as Portage City some day. The school numbered twenty-four scholars, but twelve or fifteen was the usual attendance. An old bachelor refused to pay his tax for the reason he had no children to send to school. Another (not an old bachelor) withheld a portion of his tax, claiming that a certain young man who was paying his addresses to the teacher owed him, and he was holding on to see how matters progressed, and if they married he was going to turn it, and if not he would pay the teacher some time. Of the scholars only two are now residents of Poynette—Courtland Brown and John Wilson. Of the rest, some have died, some are in Iowa, some in Minnesota, some in Missouri, and one in New York, now a Methodist minister. I rememera snow storm the 11th day of June. As I was on my way to school, I saw a man in the field near the roadside planting corn over with overcoat and mittens on. The same was Hugh Jamieson. When I arrived at the schoolhouse, the scholars were there; and as most of them were barefooted, and no fire in the schoolroom, they had to go home and wait for fair weather. The house was built by Wallace Rowan; and, since vacated, has served for the purposes of a dry-goods store, post office, schoolhouse and meeting-house. A Mr. Cornell, a Baptist minister, used to come to Poynette. He usually sent an appointment to preach on the Sabbath. Of the dozen inhabitants, no two held the same faith and belonged to the same order. Mrs. Johnson was the only Methodist. Pierce Jamieson was the first white child born in the village of Poynette. Mr. Thomas was Postmaster, and the mail matter was kept in an old tool chest in one corner of the kitchen. It is a difficult matter for the youth of the present day to understand that at the time of which I write, the fleet-footed deer and wily prairie wolf might occasionally be seen where the iron horse now plunges along, heavily laden with the products of a country which then scarcely furnished more than the inhabitants required for immediate use, for scarcely a foot of land on the prairie south of our now prosperous and flourishing village was under cultivation, except a very few pieces adjoining the timber. If, however, they had a few bushels of grain to spare which they wished to convert into cash, they hauled it to Milwaukee, a distance of upward of a hundred miles. This journey was usually performed with oxen, taking from eight to twelve and sometimes fifteen days to make the round trip. They usually camped out and carried their provisions with them. Such journeys were frequently performed, and some of our most wealthy and respectable citizens still live to remember the dreary, dusty and sometimes disagreeable time they had in making the trip. In those days, men had many disagreeable duties to perform, and, knowing this, they nerved themselves to the task and went at it with a will and determination to succeed."

The growth of the village until the completion of the railroad was quite slow. At that time, there was not to exceed one hundred and fifty inhabitants, and its business was all upon the south side of Rowan Creek, with the exception of Jamieson's Hotel. The first house erected after platting the village was by S. B. Thomas, and the first store kept was by Thomas & Pinney. H. P. Jamieson, son of Hugh Jamieson, was the first white child born here.

Hotels.—Four years before the platting of the village of Poynette, by Gov. Doty, Wallace Rowan built a house on the south side of the creek, which, for several years, was a noted public house, entertaining many of the earlier and most prominent men of the State. Rowan sold the house in the course of time to Samuel Woodworth, who leased the same to Mrs. Ensinger, who continued in possession until 1852, when Mr. Woodworth sold it to Hugh Jameison. About two years before it came into the possession of Mr. Jamieson, a new structure had been erected on the south side of Rowan Creek, which he occupied until February, 1858, save for a period of one year, when he leased it to Samuel Wilkins, and made an extended visit to his native country, Scotland.

Poynette House.—In 1856, Hugh Jameison began the erection of this house, which was not completed until February, 1858. For ten years, Mr. Jamieson continued in possession. On one occasion, a traveler put up with him for the night, and a Norwegian man-of-all-work was instructed to show him to his room, wait till he retired, and then bring back the light. The man, being a devout Catholic, after disrobing knelt by the bedside to perform his evening devotions. In making the sign of the cross, and other motions peculiar to those professing that faith, he aroused the suspicions of the Norwegian, who, setting down the candle, took the man up in his arms and threw him on the bed, with the exclamation, "You been taking a little too much, to-night." In May, 1868, Mr. Jamieson disposed of the house to Tomlinson & Hudson, who have since served the weary traveler.

American House.—This house was erected by James Oleson in 1859, who sold it to H. Jamieson, who sold the same to C. Conger, he disposing of it to B. Van Vleet. He disposed of it to George T. Morrison, who, in turn, sold the same to E. F. Tillotson, April, 1877. Various changes and improvements were made from time to time, adding to the comfort and convenience of the traveling public.

Poynette Upper Mill.—This mill was erected in 1860, by Mr. Fish. It has, from that time, to January, 1878, been the property of L. Stevens, Mr. Aiken, Robert Robertson and Kenry Kuntz.

Poynette Lower Mills were built in the summer of 1858, by A. P. Smith. J. Bridge, of Wyocena, was the superintending millwright. The carpenter work was done by H. J. Sill, the stone work by Melancthon Smith and James Hunt. The size of the main building was 36x40, three stories, containing two run of three feet ten inch buhrs and necessary machinery, all driven by a 13x14-foot overshot wheel. The iron work and buhrs were furnished by Decker & Seville, of Milwaukee. The mill, at that time, was considered the best mill in the county. The first miller was James Ashley. It was run by various parties until the spring of 1867, when it was purchased by A. O. Dole. It was run without any material changes in the machinery until June, 1878, when it was entirely remodeled by its present proprietor, F. A. Dole. The overshot wheel, with its cumbrous gearing, was replaced by three Elmer wheels—two 17-inch, and one 12-inch, manufactured by Davis & Pugh, Berlin, Wis.; an entirely new flume and headrace replaced the old one. The old wheelhouse was torn down and replaced by a new one 16x38, requiring thirty cords of stone for the basement. The bolts were remodeled, a power corn sheller added, and a full line of new process machinery for making patent flour. The cost of the improvements amounted to $2,500. The mill is fitted up for both custom and merchant work. Its principal brands of flour are Dole's Straight and Dole's Pride. The mill has a large local flour trade, and is well patronized by the farming community.

The Madison & Portage Railroad was completed to this place in October, 1870. E. F. Russell was appointed its first agent. He only filled the position three months, having accepted the appointment with the understanding he was to be relieved as soon as another could be had to fill his place. S. F. Hill then came and remained one year. He was succeeded by W. Gleason, who attended to the duties of the office for eight years, when W. H. Whitcomb was appointed.

Surrounded by a good farming country, Poynette has been considered an excellent point for grain. On the completion of the railroad, R. B. Wentworth & Co., of Portage, built a small warehouse, and for two seasons purchased grain. Hugh Jamieson, in the summer of 1871, erected a large elevator, with a storage capacity of 12,000 bushels, and entered on the business of buying and shipping. For seven years, Mr. Jamieson continued in the trade, withdrawing in 1878, in favor of his son, H. P. Jameison and H. C. Gould. The annual shipments from 1870 to 1879 inclusive have ranged from 150 to 200 cars.

Poynette was early made a missionary field. The Methodists and Baptists were the first to move in the matter.

Methodist Episcopal Church.—Poynette was, in 1844, embraced in Madison Circuit, under the supervision of Elder Elihu Springer. R. J. Harvey, a reverend and a lawyer, was sent to travel this circuit, but never reached Poynette. The next year, Lodi and Poynette were set off from Madison Circuit, and Rev. Adams was appointed to the charge. Mr. Adams continued on the circuit three months, but never reached Poynette. He was then succeeded by Rev. H. Maynard. Before the close of the year, Father Maynard was called to attend the funeral services, at the house of A. Johnson, of a deceased friend of Mr. Johnson. On this occasion was the first Gospel sermon ever heard in Poynette, at least by a Methodist Episcopal minister. Afterward Mr. Maynard had regular preaching at the house of Clark M. Young, a short distance from the village. Father Maynard was followed by Revs. Waldron, Holmes, Woodley and Bunce. In 1853, Revs. Butler and Kidder came, during whose stay of one year (1853-54) Poynette was separated from Lodi. Rev. Waterbury came in the fall of 1854, and remained one year. During the next two years, the parsonage at Dekorra was sold and one built in this village. Mr. Waterbury reported at the end of his labors 100 members and 5 probationers. In the fall of 1857, Rev. Levi M. Cochrane was appointed to the charge, but at the end of six months, finding the work was too hard for him, Rev. H. D. Jencks was employed to assist him. In 1858, Rev. Whiteman was sent to fill out the term of Mr. Cochrane, and at the end of the year he reported 113 members and 115 probationers. In 1859, Rev. Lester Perkins was appointed to the charge and continued until 1860, reporting, at the expiration of his term of labor, 180 members and 20 probationers. Rev. Ransom Gould was appointed in the fall of 1860. During Mr. Gould's stay, the church was forbidden the use of the schoolhouse, which resulted in the building of a neat and commodious house of worship, at a cost of $2,500. From the fall of 1862, till the summer of 1863, Rev. John M. Springer filled the pulpit. He was an eloquent, earnest, patriotic, Christian man. He was drafted and appointed Chaplain of his regiment, which position he filled till in battle at Resaca, the Captain, First and Second Lieutenants of his company fell, when he seized a musket and led on the charge, was struck in a mortal part and carried from the field. In his last moments, he said to Charles Early, a comrade, "I have lived what I preached in our Northern home, and die in the favor of God." In the fall of 1863, Rev. H. Chadsayne was appointed to this church, and was succeeded, in the fall of 1864, by Rev. R. Fancher, who remained two years. At this time, there were 132 members and 12 probationers. In 1866, Rev. William Harvey was called and labored for a year and a half, when Rev. O. D. Teal was appointed to fill out the unexpired term. In 1868, Rev. H. D. Jencks took charge of the circuit and remained one year. An extensive revival occurred this year. In 1869, Rev. S. S. Benedict filled the pulpit and continued in charge until the fall of 1871, when Rev. James T. Pryor was sent to the work. He remained until the fall of 1874, when Rev. J. J. Clifton took his place and remained two years. During his administration, the church building was removed to a more central location, and fitted up at an additional expense of $1,500. In the fall of 1876, Rev. Edward McGinley was by the Conference sent to this field and remained two years, when he was succeeded by Rev. Matthew Dinsdale, who labored for twelve months. In the fall of 1879, Rev. Richard Pengilly became Pastor of the church, entering with spirit upon his work. For some weeks succeeding the week of prayer, in January, 1880, Mr. Pengilly continued in a protracted effort, in which the church was greatly strengthened, and twelve added to it. At that time, the membership was eighty-four. Stewards—Adam Hall, S. L. Scofield, S. M. Owen, Christopher Wilson, Charles Early, A. D. Rose, F. E. Smith, Ella J. Cave. Trustees—Adam Hall, John Palmer, John S. Wolstone, John Lake, S. L. Scofield, S. M. Owen, Lewis Newton. Class Leader—John Lake.

First Presbyterian Church.—On the 24th of April, a committee appointed by the Presbytery of Columbus, consisting of Revs. Warren Mays and James A. Lowrie and Elder John B. Dwinell, visited this place in company with Rev. B. G. Riley, District Secretary of the Home Missions, and Rev. A. G. Dunning, for the purpose of organizing a church. After the usual services, Augustus P. Smith, Caroline A. Smith, Augustus O. Dole, Sarah E. Dole, Harvey J. Sill, Maranda M. Sill, Adeline Youmans, John Watson, Elizabeth Watson, John Forsythe, Margaret Forsythe, Mrs. Jeannet Campbell, Mrs. Agnes Campbell, after hearing the articles of covenant read and consenting thereto, were declared a body corporate to be known as the First Presbyterian Church of Poynette. Augustus P. Smith, Augustus O. Dole and John Forsythe were elected Elders, and A. O. Dole, Clerk. In April, 1874, the church adopted the plan of electing their eldership for a stated period. A. O. Dole was elected for five years; John Forsythe, four years; Eli Norton, three years; E. F. Russell, two years; Thomas Mair, one year. In 1880, the eldership consisted of Thomas Mair, I. C. Sargent, Eli Norton and E. F. Russell. In 1874, a church edifice was erected 32x52 feet, at a cost of $4000. It was dedicated January 27, 1875, by Rev. L. Y. Hays, of Madison, Wis. Rev. J. A. Lowrie was the first Pastor, and was succeeded in order named by Revs. D. B. Gordon, George A. Hutchison, H. H. Bushnell, E. Smith Barns and Frederick Wall. The membership, January, 1880, was sixty-one. A flourishing Sunday school at that time had been in existence from the organization of the church.

Masonic Lodge.—Poynette Lodge, No. 173, was instituted June 10, 1868. Its first officers and charter members were: Louis Low, W. M.; E. F. Russell, S. W.; David Bullen, J. W.; L. A. Squire, Sec.; George W. Webb, Treas.; B. M. Low, S. D.; W. H. Young, J. D.;

John Campbell, Tiler. The second and fourth Saturday evenings of each month were chosen as the times of meeting. During twelve years of its existence, it was called upon to deposit within the tomb three of its members, all at the time of death occupying official positions—Louis Low, W. M.; A. Powers, S. W.; S. M. Wallace, J. W. At their annual election for officers for 1880, L. A. Squire was elected W. M.; Eli Norton, S. W.; A. J. Brown, J. W.; B. S. Buck, Treas.; Andrew Semple, Sec.; G. W. Webb, S. D.; James R. Hastie, J. D.; Hugh Bowie and Allen Bogue, Stewards; John Campbell, Tiler. Membership, thirty-seven.

Odd Fellows' Lodge.—Poynette Lodge, No. 240, I. O. O. F., was instituted October 15, 1874, by W. G. Bunker, District Deputy. Its first officers and charter members were: Joseph Hartman, N. G.; A. L. Wood, V. G.; W. G. Robinson, R. Sec.; John Binnie, Treas.; S. M. Owens, Henry Sloggy. The officers during the first term in 1880 were: J. F. Bohling, N. G.; John Hogan, V. G.; W. C. Gault, Treas.; James Thompson, P. S.; W. G. Robinson, R. S.; Frank Smith, P. N. G. Membership, thirty-four.

Good Templars.—In 1865, a lodge of Good Templars was instituted here, which continued to exist some two years. On the 4th day of October, a number of interested persons met at the house of Isaac C. Sargent and re-organized under the name of Poynette Lodge, No. 288, I. O. G. T., with D. C. Strong, Jane Strong, Debbie Brayton, A. L. Wood, Judson Packard, I. C. Sargent, Warren Turner, A. Faucher, A. O. Dole, E. J. Sargent, J. D. Thompson, A. J. Townsend, Stephen Brayton, Julia B. Sargent, John Watson and N. Miller as charter members. For about one month, the lodge held its meetings at the house of Mr. Sargent, when the Methodist Church was secured for that purpose. Another removal was made some six months after to the schoolhouse, and then to Wood's Hall. Here the lodge enjoyed a season of prosperity, purchasing an organ and otherwise improving their hall. In 1876, in consequence of a change in their place of meeting, some of the members became disaffected, withdrew and instituted another lodge, which was given the name of Centennial Lodge. For a few months, both lodges seemed to prosper, but finally the Centennial surrendered its charter after a few months' existence. Poynette Lodge has had several seasons of prosperity and of adversity. In February, 1880, its membership was reported at forty-five, with C. J. Harris, W. C. T.; Mrs. C. J. Harris, W. V. T.; John Thomas, W. S.; Mrs. H. C. Butler, W. F. S.; H. C. Butler, W. T.; E. E. Hinkson, P. W. C. T.; Richard Pengilly, Chaplain; John Jameison, W. M.; Charles Butler, W. O. G.; Harry Russell, W. I. G.; Jennie Powers, R. H. S.; Eliza Lake, L. H. S.; William Hopkins, W. A. S.; Alida Luther, W. D. M.; E. F. Russell, L. D.

Poynette Temple, No. 95, is a juvenile Temperance Lodge, under the auspices of the Grand Lodge I. O. G. T., and was instituted August 1, 1879, by Miss Emma Sprague, of Watertown, Wis. Its first officers and charter members were Charles Turner, C. T.; Mally Squire, P. C. T.; Jennie Gleason, V. T.; Esther Montford, F. S.; Harry Russell, R. S.; Bertie Norton, T. For its first quarter in 1880, the officers were Samuel Jameison, C. T.; Kittie Wheeler, V. T.; Harry Russell, R. S.; Henry Butler, T.; Esther Montford, F. S.; Louis Brown, M.; Mally Squire, C.; Charles Butler, I. G.; Josie Montford, O. G.

Post Office.—A petition was forwarded to the Post Office Department, in care of J. A. Doty, the founder of the village of Pauquette, then a member of Congress, in the winter of 1850-51, for the establishment of an office at this point. It was the desire of the citizens that it be called Pauquette, but the department read the name as if it was Poynette, and so named it. The name was accepted by the citizens, and no effort was made to have it changed. John Thomas was the first Postmaster, and received his appointment in the spring of 1851, since which time Stephen Brayton, Ira S. Allen, Abram Padly, Willard Knight, E. Fred Russell, Ambrose Powers, Harlow J. Youmans and Isaac C. Sargent have occupied the office. It was made a money-order office July 1, 1877. J. F. Bohling & Co. drew the first order in favor of Calvin Chesney, for $7.50. During 1879, the amount drawn was $12,000. Amount paid, $2,500.

Schools.—In 1852, a school district was formed comprising Sections 34 and 35, in the town of Dekorra, and Sections 2 and 3, and north half of 10 and 11, in the town of Arlington, and called Joint District No. 4 of the towns of Dekorra and Arlington. A schoolhouse was built one-half mile south of the village of Poynette. It was a one-story frame, 18x28, and was used until 1867, though for several years previous it had become too small to accommodate the pupils of the district. A room was rented in the village for the higher department, the primary alone occupying the school-room. In 1865, the question of a new school building was agitated, culminating in the erection of a large two-story house, which was first occupied in the fall of 1867. R. M. Bashford was the first Principal in the new building. He was followed by H. A. Thomas, S. M. Wallace, D. W. Gilfillan, Kennedy Scott, J. K. Hastie, Nora C. Waters, J. M. Bushnell, Sylvanus Ames and J. H. Hamilton. In the Primary Department, Laura Copeland, Ada Maxwell, Laura A. Downs, Briggetta A. Waters and Mary Ellen Axon have served—Miss Waters occupying the position from 1870 to 1878. The district has usually paid from $60 to $75 per month, more generally the latter sum, for principals, and $30 to $35 for assistants.

Cemetery Association.—On the 4th day of December, 1865, an association was formed under the general law, and a board of trustees elected, consisting of Hugh Jamieson, Phinneas Watson, Isaac C. Sargent, H. J. Sill and Stephen Brayton. Seven acres off the southeast quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 35, Township 11, Range 9, was purchased of Brayton & Tomlinson for the sum of $50 per acre, which was surveyed and platted for burial purposes. A child of Rev. Rufus Fancher was the first buried therein.

Cheese Manufactory.—Articles of incorporation were filed in the office of the Secretary of State, February 3, 1876, by E. Fred Russell, W. C. Gault, William Forrest, John Collins and Hugh Jamieson, under the name of Poynette Cheese Manufacturing Company. Hugh Jamieson was elected President; James Mack, Secretary; E. F. Russell, Treasurer. The capital stock of the association was placed at $2,500. During the spring, a large two-story building was erected and 30,000 pounds of cheese made during the season. J. Noyes was Superintendent of the manufactory during the first season; E. O. Madison, the second, and C. J. Harrison assumed the management. In 1879, the entire stock passed into the hands of Hugh Jamieson, who continued the business as a private enterprise.

TOWN OF FORT WINNEBAGO.

On the 9th day of January, 1849, all of Township 13, in Range 9, lying east of Fox River, with much other territory, was organized into the town of Winnebago Portage, by the County Commissioners, the balance of the township being Menomonee lands, and of course not then surveyed by the United States. On the 8th of January, 1850, the County Board of Supervisors organized this township into a town by itself, and named it Port Hope, all west of the river being still unsurveyed. The house of A. T. Spicer was designated as the place for holding the first town meeting. July 19, 1850, Section 33 was taken from the town and attached to Fort Winnebago, then composed of the greater part of Township 12, Range 9, and other territory. December 15, 1852, the section was restored to the town. A change having been made in the organization and name of the town on the south, the name of Port Hope was changed at a meeting of the Board of Supervisors, held November 18, 1853, to Fort Winnebago, the latter name being thought to be appropriate, on account of the old fort being in the territory comprising the town. March 23, 1858, a portion beginning at a point in the center of Fox River, where the east and west quarter line of Section 33 intersects the center of said river, running thence west along the quarter line through Sections 33, 32 and 31, was taken from the town and annexed to the city of Portage.

The first permanent settlement of the town was made in 1848. Previous to this time, a number of persons had, for a short season, lived here in the neighborhood of the old fort, none of whom could be reckoned as permanent inhabitants of the town. In May, 1848, Jonathan Whitney came from Green Lake County, and, looking over the ground, selected the southwest quarter of Section 3 as the place of his future home. Charles Baker came shortly after, and settled on Section 2, while John W. French, Lyman J. Barrows, J. M. Hatch and Mr. Green followed: French, Green and Hatch locating their claims on Section 1. August Putsch came in the fall and settled upon Section 10. In 1849, quite a number settled in the town, among whom were Asa Baldwin, Avery T. and Henry Spicer, who also settled upon Section 10; "Bachelor" Brown, on Section 13; Isaac Pasco, Daniel M. Brown, Robert B. Willis, Augustus Rood, Jr., Calvin Eastman, Aaron Chesebro, Jacob Lorenzo Wood, Michael Keegan, John Sweeney, Edmund Swift, Alexander Gamble, James Gamble, Sr., James Gamble, Jr., Dominic Moran, Patrick Leeman, John Hogan, John Hogan, Michael Hogan, Matthew Fitzharris, Walter Kelly, Patrick Lovell, Patrick Canall, William Kelley, Michael Coughlin, Thomas Coughlin, James Casey, James Roach, Dennis Cushing, John Cushing, William Cushing, M. O'Hare, William Geary, Paul Duffey, John O'Keefe, James Meany, M. Joyce, Daniel Breen. In 1850, came Abraham Grier, Joseph Spain, Robert Grier. These men were mostly from Ireland.

In 1849, a colony of English came in, a portion of whom settled in the northeast part of this town, but the greater number located over the line in Marquette County. They established a ferry across the Fox River, on Section 4, to which they gave the name of Emancipation Ferry, for the reason that they felt themselves emancipated from the virtual position of serfs in the mother country and here were made freemen.

In the fall of 1848, Mr. French built a saw-mill on Fox River, which was kept running for several years, but was torn down in 1855, and a grist-mill erected in its place, by two brothers named Chapman, who afterward disposed of it to Dates Brothers, at Portage. At this place it was proposed to establish a village to be called Milford, but beyond naming it nothing was ever done. Jonathan Whitney kept a stock of groceries here in the fall and winter of 1848, selling out the same in the spring of 1849 to Mr. Barrows.

Early in the year 1849, a petition was circulated and numerously signed, asking the Department to establish a post office in the northeast part of the town, for the convenience of the large settlement there formed. The request was granted, and Jonathan Whitney was appointed Postmaster. The name given to the office was Port Hope, so called from the hope to establish here upon Fox River a port, which would be the commencement of a new village. In 1880, Mr. Whitney was Postmaster, having served from his first appointment till that time, with the exception of the years 1857, 1858 and 1859. The town on its formation in 1850 was called Port Hope from the post office.

The first birth in the town was Edmund, son of Charles Baker. The second was Almeron W., son of Jonathan Whitney, who was born February 19, 1849, and was killed in the battle before Petersburg, June 18, 1864, aged fifteen years and four months.

The first couple united in marriage were Milton French and Miss Pearce, in 1849.

The first school was organized in the summer of 1849, a room being rented of Asa Baldwin for school purposes. Miss Charlotte Baldwin was the first teacher. In 1850, a log house was erected on Section 10, for School District No. 2, the first schoolhouse in the town. The house was built on the volunteer plan, all the men of the neighborhood turning out to assist in the work. In 1880, the town had seven school districts, with a like number of good substantial school edifices.

Fort Winnebago, west of Fox River, was surveyed into sections and quarter-sections in July, 1851. There were at that time one house on Section 4; two on Section 5; one on Section 7; two on Section 8; one on Section 9; one on Section 16; one on Section 17; one on 18; two on Section 19; two on Section 20; one on Section 21; two on Section 29; two on Section 30; one on Section 31, and one on Section 33—in all twenty-one houses.

The first sermon preached in the town aside from any that might have been preached at, or in the vicinity of, the fort, was at the house of Asa Baldwin by a preacher belonging to the Primitive Methodist Church. This was in the fall of 1849. One Saturday evening, the reverend gentleman rode up to Mr. Baldwin's place, and inquired of him if they had ever had preaching in that neighborhood. Mr. Baldwin, who was one of those bluff, yet kind-hearted men, curtly replied, "No, sir, we never had." "Would you like to have a sermon preached here, then?" asked the preacher. "Yes, by —, if it is the right kind." "Can you get me a room in which to preach?" "You can have my house." "Can you give notice so I can have a hearing?"

Wm. E. Field

FALL RIVER

"I will send my boy around to tell the neighbors, and I guess it will be all right." Mr. Baldwin then asked the minister to stop with him, which invitation was accepted. Before the hour arrived for the sermon, the preacher had learned that the neighborhood was made up of those holding various religious opinions, while some had no opinion on religion at all. It being his first visit in this vicinity, he thought he would preach so as to hurt the feelings of no one. When the hour arrived, a respectable congregation had assembled and services were begun. The preacher, in his remarks, which were of a general nature, stated that all denominations were working for one end, and that it did not matter what party label one wore, if his conduct was all right; heaven was the object of all—for which place all had embarked. Notwithstanding different roads had been taken, it would not matter when they reached the heavenly region by which route they had come. In illustration of this thought he said that the general course from England by which Wisconsin was reached, was to take a steamer at Liverpool, come to New York, and there take the cars for this State. Now he came from England to New Orleans, thence by the Mississippi River to the State, but he was here all the same, and he supposed he was all right; and it was just as satisfactory as though he had come by way of New York. While this thought was very consoling and satisfactory to some, one old gentleman, a member of the Regular or "Hard-shell" Baptist Church, jumped to his feet, started out, and, slamming the door behind him, remarked: "A man that will preach such stuff as that ought to be locked up!" The subject was discussed pro and con by the whole neighborhood for years, and old settlers say the effect of that sermon was still felt in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine.

Fort Winnebago is traversed centrally from south to north by the Fox River, along which are considerable marshes, as also along French Creek, a tributary of the Fox, in the northeastern sections. The Fox River marsh has an altitude of about two hundred feet, the rest of the town generally not over 250 feet. In the middle and western portions, and again in the southeast corner are isolated sandstone bluffs rising 350 to 400 feet.

The early settlers of this town had to endure the same privations as experienced by others, but not for so long a time, as Portage soon began to be quite a business place, with a market sufficient to supply all their wants; but during the first few years, grain was hauled by teams to Milwaukee, the teamsters returning with merchandise for the tradesmen in this vicinity.

On the 11th day of August, 1836, Robert McPherson entered the first piece of land, being the west half of the southwest quarter of Section 25. He also entered the southwest quarter of Section 27, receiving his patent for both November 7, 1837.

The first town meeting was held the first Monday in April, 1850, at the house of A. T. Spicer. Annual meetings have since been held; a list of the principal officers elected each year, up to and including 1879, we give below.

A noted character in an early day in Wisconsin was "Count" Haraszthy, a Hungarian refugee. He settled at what is now Sauk City, but occupied for awhile the island on Section 27 in this town, and furnished the fort with wood. Agoston Haraszthy was born in the year 1812, in the Comitatus of Baeska, Hungary. His family was one of the oldest and most influential of the old nobility—the name appearing frequently in the history of that country over a period of 760 years. He was educated to the law, as was the custom there. At the age of eighteen he was a member of the body guard of the Emperor Ferdinand, which was composed of nobles. Then he was Chief Executive Officer of his State. He then became the Private Secretary of the Viceroy of Hungary.

When the Liberal movement began in 1839 and 1840, he at once took the lead of that party in his State, but was afterward, upon the failure of that movement, compelled to leave his country. He came at once to New York, and, after traveling over the United States, he wrote and published a book upon their resources. The work was designed to invite emigration from Hungary, and was the first work upon that subject ever printed in the Hungarian language.

Soon after, in 1840 and 1841, he made the State of Wisconsin his home, purchased large tracts of land, founded several settlements, built bridges, constructed roads and established ferries.

Having in his possession valuable State papers, the Austrian Government opened negotiations for their surrender. The question was referred to Lewis Cass, who succeeded in gaining permission for Haraszthy to return to Hungary and remain for one year. This he did, settling up his affairs; and although his landed estates were confiscated, he succeeded in saving $150,000, which he brought with him to this country, together with his family, and a large portion of the family plate and paintings.

Returning to Wisconsin, he engaged, in 1842 and 1843, in mercantile pursuits; built and owned steamboats, filled large contracts with the Government for supplying Fort Winnebago with wood, living at one time on the island in Fox River, in what is now the town of Fort Winnebago, Columbia County. He was also engaged extensively in agricultural pursuits. He was the first to plant the hop in the State, and encourage its cultivation. The Commissioner of Agriculture reports that the product of this crop in the county where it was then introduced, for the year 1866, amounted to over $2,000,000.

He was at this time also at the head of the Emigrant Association of Wisconsin, which brought over large colonies of English, German and Swiss emigrants, and settled them upon the fertile lands of this State. He gave to the Catholic Church a tract of 640 acres of land, upon which has since been erected an extensive monastery.

When news came of the revolution in Hungary in 1848, he was the leader of those who gathered arms and ammunition, and sent them to his countrymen; also expending large sums from his own private purse for the same object.

Concerning his career in Wisconsin, a writer in 1874 gives this graphic description: "In 1842, a wealthy Hungarian nobleman named Haraszthy, with a company of attendants and servants, numbering about twenty, came to the United States, intending to settle in the territory of Wisconsin, and form a colony. His arrival in Milwaukee, at that time a frontier village of not less than 3,000 inhabitants, was hailed as an important event. Of course, a gentleman traveling all the way from Europe with such a large retinue, and paying promptly in gold for everything he purchased, was notably presumed to be possessed of fabulous wealth, and his coming to that far-off territory was hailed as a harbinger of great prosperity.

In the early summer of 1842, he set out from Milwaukee with six of his party, leaving the rest to await his return, on a prospecting tour in the western and central portions of the State. On the shores of a beautiful lake, not many miles from Madison, he selected a plot of 4,000 acres, staked off the boundaries of the tract by the surveyors's mark which he found cut in trees, and built a couple of huts on the lake shore, to fix his right of possession. With an attendant he returned to Milwaukee, where the United States Land Office was, to pay for his land. Here he found only the Register, the Receiver having gone to Washington to settle his accounts. This last mentioned official was the only one entitled to receive money for land, and he would not return in less than a month's time. Haraszthy would not wait so long, and the Register proposed to accommodate him, take his money, enter the proposed purchase on the books and send him the proper vouchers by a special messenger, after the Receiver's return. This was agreed to, and the nobleman paid $5,000 in gold, taking an informal receipt. He departed the next day with the remainder of his party, and reaching the land, he at once set to work to build houses, naming his colony Good Hope.

Two months elapsed, but no messenger came from Milwaukee. Haraszthy was not alarmed, believing that in dealing with a Government official, he was all right. Before the end of three months, however, a cadaverous individual made his appearance on horseback at the colony, claiming to own the identical tract of 4,000 acres, having purchased and paid for it immediately after the Receiver's return, and offered to sell it to the nobleman at an advance of 100 per cent. Haraszthy hastened to Milwaukee to find that the land grabber had really paid for the land, but with the identical gold which, three months before, the nobleman had left with the Register to secure the same purchase for himself, while that officer had since resigned and left the place. The Hungarian was exasperated at the swindle; went back to his colony; burnt every house and shanty he had erected, broke up camp and started west, where he located on the Wisconsin River, purchasing over six thousand acres of land, three miles below an old settlement known as Prairie du Sauk.

He called his new colony by his own name, and had it incorporated. It soon grew to be a flourishing village, through Haraszthy's enterprise. He started a horse-ferry across the river, made excellent roads, established flouring-mills, lumber-mills, stores, and subsequently ran a small steamboat down the Wisconsin River as far as St. Louis. But yearly recurring prairie fires destroyed his crops and many of his buildings; and besides, the commercial crisis of 1847 crippled him severely. His family had joined him in 1844, and in 1846, he succeeded in having his place selected as the county seat, building a court house at his own expense. Still, the many losses between that year and 1849 told heavily on his finances, and, with a long train of over fifty associates, he started overland to California.

He settled at San Diego, was elected Sheriff of the county, and rendered valuable aid in suppressing the Indian war of that period. He laid out what is known as "Middle San Diego," and, in 1852, was elected a member of the Legislature. Being a working member, he had a place on the principal committees, and distinguished himself by his opposition to all schemes of fraud and monopoly.

In 1852, he removed to San Francisco, and devoted himself to agriculture and horticulture upon his property at Crystal Springs, in San Mateo County. He was appointed by President Pierce as Assayer in the United States Branch Mint, and at a later period was made melter and refiner. After his resignation of these positions, serious charges were made against him, but upon a thorough investigation they were proven to be wholly without foundation, and he was honorably acquitted. During this time, he built the present metallurgical works, which have rendered such important service, and also he received patents for improved processes for the refining of gold.

In 1856, he removed to Sonoma, and devoted his whole attention to viniculture. He founded a horticultural society, and began importing vines from abroad. He was the first to advocate the raising of vines without irrigation, planted the most extensive vineyards, and at once put himself at the head of the wine interest. He may with propriety be called the father of viniculture in California.

In 1858, he wrote a treatise on the culture of the vine and the manufacture of wine, which was published by the State of California for gratuitous distribution. This publication gave the first impulse to this interest, and from that time California became the wine State of the Western Continent. He was the first to employ Chinese labor in his vineyards, and the first to adapt the redwood timber to the making of casks for wine.

In 1861, he was appointed by the Governor of California as a Commissioner to visit the wine countries of Europe, which resulted in the importation of 400 different named varieties of grape vines, which have now been planted quite extensively in most of the vineyards in the State, from which are made the most valuable wines now produced there.

The book written by Haraszthy, entitled "Grape Culture, Wine and Wine-Making," is conceded to be the best yet written. Upon his return from Europe in 1862, he was chosen President of the California State Agricultural Society, having been Vice President for three terms prior thereto. In 1863, he organized the Buena Vista Vinicultural Society, to which society he conveyed his 400 acres of vines in Sonoma.

In 1868, Haraszthy went to Nicaragua, with the intention of engaging in trade; but his active mind and talent for improvement would not let him rest. He became interested in an extensive sugar plantation, and began clearing new lands and planting more canes. Having procured from the government of Nicaragua valuable privileges for distilling, he erected an extensive distillery for the manufacture of spirits for exportation. He also turned his attention to the textile fibers of the country, and was waiting patents for improved machinery for their cleansing and preparation for market.

In the winter of 1869-70, he returned to California to purchase machinery, and to charter a vessel with which to open the trade between San Francisco and the ports of Nicaragua. It was his desire to make the rich products of that country tributary to the wealth and material progress of California.

Agoston Haraszthy, or, as he was usually called in Wisconsin, Count Haraszthy, met his death on the 6th of July, 1870, in Nicaragua, on the Hacienda San Antonio, near the Port of Corinto. This hacienda, consisting of one of the largest sugar plantations in Central America, and comprising outside of it 100,000 acres of land, was, at the time, owned by Agoston Haraszthy, Gaza Haraszthy, his eldest son, and Dr. Theodore Wassmer. The business they were engaged in was the production of sugar, the distillation of rum and the sale of timber from their hacienda.

It appears that on the forenoon of the 6th of July, Haraszthy left his dwelling to go to a new landing, where they were putting up a saw-mill, to meet a Mr. Lewis, who had the contract. Not finding the latter, he spoke to the workmen, saying the mill was too far from the river, and would have been better on the other side. He then rode toward the bank of the river to a point, some few hundred yards away, where there was a crossing. Here, in the bushes, he tied his mule, and, spreading his oilcloth cloak upon the ground, must have laid on it for a time. Thence his footsteps, two days afterward, were traced to a large tree, whose limbs touched the other bank, and which, in the rainy season, was used as a sort of natural bridge to pass to the other side of the stream. About half-way over, a large limb was found to be freshly broken, and it is supposed that in attempting to cross, Haraszthy lost his balance, fell into the swollen stream and was drowned. An Indian boy, passing, saw him go to the tree, but as it was a usual occurrence paid no further attention, and that was the last ever seen of him. His body was not recovered, nor was there ever found any trace of it or of his clothing, but as the stream emptied itself but a few miles below into the ocean, it may have been swept out and devoured by the man-eating shark, so abundant in those waters.

At the time of his death, Haraszthy left to mourn his loss four sons and two daughters.

Haraszthy was a man whose whole aim was to introduce new elements of wealth, to search out new fields of industry, and thus to lead the way to a wider field of material progress, in whatever country he lived. He was a man of good and generous impulses. He was hospitable and liberal almost to a fault. His hand was ever ready to help those who stood in need. He was full of ambition, but only in the line of being useful to his fellows. Those who knew him intimately loved and admired him, and all acknowledged a charm in his presence which they felt, but could not explain.

During 1842 and the year following, Haraszthy brought with him, from Hungary, his mother, who died at Grand Gulf, Miss.; his father, Charles Haraszthy, who died at sea, on his return from Corinto to San Francisco, July 22, 1870; his wife, Eleonora Dodinsky, who died at Leon, Nicaragua, July 15, 1869; his son, Gaza Haraszthy, who died near Corinto, in Nicaragua, December 17, 1878; his son, Attila F. Haraszthy; and another son, Arpad. His daughter Ida was born in Peoria, Ill.; his son, Bela, in Sauk City, Wis.; and his daughter, Otelia, at Madison, in the same State.

The following is a list of town officers from the organization of Fort Winnebago to the present time:

1850—Jonathan Whitney, Chairman; Robert B. Willis, Augustus Rood, Supervisors; August Putsch, Town Clerk; Henry Merrell, Treasurer; James M. Hatch, Augustus Rood, James Hinman; Lyman A. Bliss, Superintendent of Schools.

1851—Jonathan Whitney, Chairman; James Devine, J. L. Heath, Supervisors; August Putsch, Clerk; Alexander Gamble, John Devlin, Aaron Chesebro, Assessors; William H. Whitney, Superintendent of Schools.

1852—James M. Forrest, Chairman; William Geary, John Scott, Supervisors; George Michael, Clerk; Edward C. Degrusti, Treasurer; T. M. Hatch, J. L. Heath, Dennis Cushing, Assessors; Andrew Sweemey, Superintendent of Schools.

1853—Abram Dates, Chairman; John Scott, Shubael Spieer, Supervisors; George Mitchell, Clerk; Daniel G. Brown, Treasurer; Patrick Lennan, Martin Carey, Thomas Joyce, Assessors; A. J. Rounds, Superintendent of Schools.

1854—John Hagan, Chairman; Thomas Joyce, Samuel Williams, Supervisors; George Mitchell, Clerk; Isaac Smith, Treasurer; Martin M. Carey, Assessor; James M. Forrest, Superintendent of Schools.

1855—John Hagan, Chairman; Maximilian Averbeck, Samuel F. Williams, Supervisors; Andrew Sweeney, Clerk; Patrick Lennan, Treasurer; Abram Dates, Michael Coughlin, Joseph Brentnall, Assessors; James M. Forrest, Superintendent of Schools.

1856—John Devlin, Chairman; Abram Dates, S. F. Williams, Supervisors; D. C. Berry, Clerk; Patrick Lennan, Treasurer; George Mitchell, Abraham Dates, Assessors; August Putsch, Superintendent of Schools.

1857—Andrew Sweeney, J. M. French, William Geary, Supervisors; Charles Baker, Clerk; Patrick Lennan, Treasurer; George Mitchell, William Malcomb, John Scott, Assessors; Charles Sweeney, Superintendent of Schools.

1858—Andrew Sweeney, William Geary, Michael Coughlin, Supervisors; Charles Baker, Clerk; Thomas Joyce, Treasurer; John Hagan, M. M. Cary, Jacob Davis, Assessors; Charles Sweeney, Superintendent of Schools.

1859—Laurence Sweeney, Chairman, M. McLaughlin, Dixie C. Hall, Supervisors; George Mitchell, Clerk; Thomas Joyce, Treasurer; James Wilson, Bradley S. Sanborn, Assessors; James M. Forrest, Superintendent of Schools.

1860—O. S. Smith, Chairman; James Hume, Dixie C. Hall, Supervisors; J. B. Wood, Clerk; D. B. Peck, Treasurer; G. M. Chase, Assessor; James M. Forrest, Superintendent of Schools.

1861—O. S. Smith, Chairman; H. M. Chapman, James Wilson, Supervisors; William H. Whitney, Clerk; Warren Cooley, Treasurer; A. T. Spicer, John Cushing, Assessors; J. B. Wood, Superintendent of Schools.

1862—D. C. Hall, Chairman; H. M. Chapman, William Geary, Supervisors; J. B. Wood, Clerk; Warren Cooley, Treasurer; Abram Dates, Assessor.

1863—D. C. Hall, Chairman; William Geary, M. Coughlin, Supervisors; Joseph Spain, Clerk; Warren Cooley, Treasurer; A. Dates, Assessor.

1864—Abraham Dates, Chairman; Daniel Brown, Kneeland B. Cook, Supervisors; Joseph Spain, Clerk; Thomas Coughlin, Treasurer; Charles Baker, Henry Bartels, James Heath, Assessors.

1865—John M. French, Chairman; Daniel Breen, Henry Bartels, Supervisors; Joseph Spain, Clerk; Charles Baker, Treasurer; W. H. Whitney, Assessor.

1866—Philemon Van Brant, Chairman; Henry Bartels, James Clithero, Supervisors; R. O. Nelson, Clerk; Charles Baker, Treasurer; H. B. Cook, Assessor.

1867—Charles Baker, Chairman; Abram Dates, James Clithero, Supervisors; Joseph Spain, Clerk; P. Van Brant, James Sweeney, D. C. Hall, Assessors; Thomas O'Hare, Treasurer.

1868—Charles Baker, Chairman; Henry Bartels, Daniel Breen, Supervisors; Joseph Spain, Clerk; Maurice Coughlin, Treasurer; James Wiem, Assessor.

1869—Charles Baker, Chairman; A. J. Spain, Daniel Breen, Supervisors; Joseph Spain, Clerk; James Wiem, Treasurer; D. C. Hall, Assessor.

1870—Abram Dates, Chairman; George G. Shaw, William Annacker, Supervisors; Kneeland B. Cook, Clerk; Bartholomey Hanley, Treasurer; Joseph Spain, Assessor.

1871—Charles Sweeney, Chairman; S. D. Merrill, Moses W. Prescott, Supervisors; P. F. Casey, Clerk; Charles Baker, Assessor.

1872—Charles Sweeney, Chairman; Benjamin J. Emerton, William Annacker, Supervisors; Joseph Spain, Clerk; B. Hanley, Treasurer; John R. Dee, Assessor.

1873—Abram Dates, Chairman; John Cushing, George Bain, Supervisors; Joseph Spain, Clerk; B. Hanley, Treasurer; Thomas Graham, Assessor.

1874—Charles Sweeney, Chairman; Daniel Breen, James Hume, Supervisors; Joseph Spain, Clerk; Thomas Coughlin, Treasurer; John Cushing, Assessor.

1875—Charles Sweeney, Chairman ; Patrick Lennan, James Hume, Supervisors ; John R. Dee, Clerk ; John Cushing, Treasurer ; James M. Winn, Assessor.

1876—Charles Sweeney, Chairman ; Patrick Lennan, John Wilcox, Supervisors ; Joseph Spain, Clerk ; John Cushing, Treasurer ; B. Hanley, Assessor.

1877—Charles Sweeney, Chairman ; Mat. Sinnott, John McKauna, Supervisors ; Joseph Spain, Clerk ; Patrick Lennan, Treasurer ; James Winn, Assessor.

1878—Charles Sweeney, Chairman ; William Myers, Matthew Sinnott, Supervisors ; Joseph Spain, Clerk ; Patrick Lennan, Treasurer ; John T. Jones, Assessor.

1879—Charles Sweeney, Chairman ; William Myers, B. Hanley, Supervisors ; Joseph Spain, Clerk ; Patrick Lennan, Treasurer ; James Winn, Assessor.

The Wisconsin Central Railroad enters the town from the city of Portage, on Section 33, passes through Sections 28, 21, 16, 9 and 5 into Marquette County. A small station is located on Section 9, called Corning Station.

CHAPTER XIII.

TOWN OF FOUNTAIN PRAIRIE—VILLAGE OF FALL RIVER—TOWN OF HAMPDEN—TOWN OF LEEDS —TOWN OF LEWISTON—TOWN OF LODI—VILLAGE OF LODI—VILLAGE OF OKEE.

TOWN OF FOUNTAIN PRAIRIE.

At a meeting of the County Commissioners, held in 1846, all of Township 11, Range 12, together with other territory adjacent on the south, was made a voting precinct, and elections ordered held at the house of A. P. Birdsey; and Asa Proctor, J. T. Lewis and Jeremiah Drake were appointed Judges of Election. At a further meeting of the board, held in January, 1849, the township was set off to itself and given the name of Fountain Prairie. The house of A. A. Brayton was designated as the place for holding the first election.

Chester Bushnell was the first actual settler of the town. He arrived here in the spring of 1843, and erected a board shanty on Section 33. Wayne B. Dyer came in September of the same year, and erected the first log house. John Brown and Benjamin Sage came also the same fall and selected land, Mr. Brown remaining here and Mr. Sage returning to Vermont after his family. Mr. Brown built a log house upon the land he had selected (the east half of the northeast quarter of Section 34). In July, 1844, Mr. Sage came back, bringing with him his family. He erected a house upon the west half of the northeast quarter of Section 34, being the fourth built in the town. During that summer and for two or three years, a number of settlers came in, among whom were Asa Proctor, John Boutwell, L. Pearson, Julius Higbe, John Q. Adams, Enos Grout, Alison Horton, E. J. Smith, A. A. Brayton, S. M. Smith, John O'Brien, J. D. Bullis, Isaac Bennett, Phinneas Underwood, Edward Tripp, James Ketchum, John Swarthout, Nelson Swarthout, Jacob Swarthout and James C. Carr.

In addition to those already mentioned as settling in the town in 1843, H. W. McCafferty made a claim, as it was called, which consisted in selecting a section for a farm and designating such selection by plowing a few furrows upon it, or making some slight preparations for building a cabin, or oftener by blazing a few trees in the timber, or setting a stake or two on the prairie, and placing one's initials upon them. These slight indications of intention to settlement were generally regarded as sacred by the early settlers, so that a claim was seldom jumped. McCafferty's claim was on Section 21 and the adjoining sections. Mac had an eye to a rauch of magnificent proportions. He plowed a few acres and sowed it to winter wheat in the fall of 1843; a very fair crop was harvested, although somewhat injured by the deer feeding upon it. The California gold fever breaking out soon after this, McCafferty was swept along with it; when he returned, part of his claim had been taken up by others and the remainder had been despoiled of its timber, so he abandoned it, yet his name adheres to the place, as the high ridge of land running through Sections 21 and 15 is known as McCafferty's Ridge.

July 15, 1843, is the date of the first entry of land in the town. This was made by James C. Carr. The railway station at Fall River is upon it. Carr came from the State of New York and settled upon this land June, 1844. He filled the office of Justice of the Peace for many years, and was several times elected Chairman of the County Board of Supervisors. He removed to Missouri. Wayne B. Dyer came from Ohio in August, 1843, located on Section 34, the farm now occupied by Mr. Kelly. October 5, 1843, Dyer entered the northeast quarter of the northeast quarter of Section 26, the timber land northeast of the cemetery, on the road to Lost Lake; this was the second entry of land in town. The following May, Dyer sold his claim and improvements to E. J. Smith, and, anticipating Greeley's advice to young men, "went west" and located in the present town of Otsego, where he was the first settler and built the first house in town. Two of his daughters, Mrs. Capt. M.

C. Hobart and Mrs. J. E. Grout, reside in Fountain Prairie. The next entries of land were made October 18, 1845, by Benjamin Sage and John Brown, heretofore mentioned, on the farm now owned by Enos Grout. When one considers that there were not a dozen farms then located in the eastern half of the county, he is just a little surprised at Mr. Brown's choice. Their lands selected, they set out on foot from Fountain Prairie to Green Bay, the land office being located there. This was no small undertaking at that time, a few blazed trees marked the way to Beaver Dam, at Waupun a solitary log house, a few cabins at Fond du Lac, and from there on the east side of Lake Winnebago to Green Bay, most of the country was owned by the Indians. Northeast of Stockbridge was one stretch of twenty miles with only one settled cabin to cheer the tired and lonely traveler as he plodded on through the dense forest, but the goal was reached, the land purchased. Sage returned immediately to Vermont. Brown came back, built a log house, spent the winter alone, and was enabled, he says, to enter into the feelings of Alexander Selkirk, when he sang:

"I am monarch of all I survey,
My right there is none to dispute,
From center all round to the sea,
I am lord of the fowl and the brute."

Dyer and Bushnell were the only other settlers in town at this time, and not so much as a cabin on the west until Fort Winnebago was reached.

There were "marrying and giving in marriage" in the early day in Fountain Prairie, as well as other portions of the civilized world. The first in the town to take upon themselves the vows to be one "until death should part them," were Clark Heffron and Jane Boutwell, in 1846.

In August, 1845, the wife of James C. Carr died, being the first death.

Martha, daughter of Benjamin and Margaret Sage, was born September 2, 1844; the first birth in the town.

Quite a settlement was effected in the southeast corner of the town as early as 1845, and in the fall of that year a schoolhouse was erected on Section 23 and Mr. Babcock was engaged to teach school therein, during the following winter. The house was also used for religious services, being free to any denomination that desired its use. Here Rev. Stephen Jones, N. S. Green, E. J. Smith and other pioneer preachers labored in word and doctrine, and exhorted sinners to repent. School was held in this house summer and winter until the organization of the town into school districts in 1849. In that year, a better building was commenced and completed the following year; the district being known as No. 1. In 1879, there were five whole and five joint districts in the town.

Benjamin Sage and John Brown made the next entries, October 15, 1843. To make these entries, Sage and Brown walked the entire distance to and from Green Bay, where the land office was located.

J. C. Carr, heretofore spoken of, was a skeptic in religion, while Mr. Sage was a zealous member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The former cared nothing for the Sabbath, while the latter believed in the sacredness of the day. While building his house, forgetting himself one Sabbath day, Mr. Sage took his spade and began work in his cellar. As it happened, Mr. Carr came along, and taking in the situation, he hid behind a tree and in a deep tone of voice cried out, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy!" Mr. Sage stopped his work, got upon a rock lying in the cellar, looked all around, but could see no one. He then returned to his work. Again the voice cried out as before. A second time Mr. Sage looked around to see whence came the voice. But no one was in sight, and he resumed his work. A third time the voice called on him to remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. Firmly impressed with the idea that an angel from Heaven had spoken to him, Mr. Sage cleaned off his spade and started away, when Mr. Carr stepped from behind the tree, laughing heartily at the result of his work.

There were frequently strifes among the early settlers for possession of choice pieces of land. On one occasion, E. J. Smith and Jacob Swarthout desired a certain tract, so, one morning, unbeknown, as he thought, to any one, Mr. Smith started off to Green Bay to secure the prize. Mr. Swarthout was informed of the fact during the day, and just before night he mounted an Indian pony and started for the same place. When about half-way, he made a temporary exchange with an Indian for his pony and continued his journey without stopping to rest. He arrived at his destination about six hours ahead of Mr. Smith, and so secured the land.

Coon-hunting was an amusement occasionally indulged in. Wayne B. Dyer, Lewis Smith and Jacob Swarthout went out once, and, treeing a coon, Mr. Smith climbed the tree for the purpose of bringing him down. The coon had taken refuge in the hollow of the tree and Mr. Smith put in his hand to draw him out. The coon seized it and the hand was drawn out suddenly and with it the coon, who was thrown, by a violent jerk of Mr. Smith, some two or three rods away. Now the sight of blood always caused the gentleman to faint; knowing this fact and pretending great anger, Mr. Swarthout began to curse him at a fearful rate, telling him he threw the coon away purposely; that it was a mean, shabby trick, and drawing his gun on him threatened to shoot him if he did not at once come down out of that tree. The ruse was successful; the mind of Mr. Smith being thus diverted from his maimed hand, he safely descended the tree. Explanations were made and a hearty laugh enjoyed.

During the first ten years of the town, it was settled by many first-class farmers, among whom might be mentioned John Brown, Henry C. Brace, William H. Proctor, Stephen Field, T. J. Smith, Jacob Swarthout, Oliver W. Field, Henry C. Field, Victor Brossard, John Q. Adams and others.

Fountain Prairie is bounded on the north by Courtland, on the south by Columbus, on the west by Otsego, and on the east by Dodge County. Its area is six miles square, the principal portion being prairie land. The name, Fountain Prairie, was given to it from the fact that there was a spring or stream of living water on every section of land save three. The north branch of the Crawfish River enters the town on Section 18, passes through into 17, 8, 9, 10, 16, where it unites with the main stream: the south branch enters on Section 30, runs through 31, 29, 20, 21, and on 16 joins the main branch, which courses through Sections 15, 14, 13, 23, 26, 27, 34, 35, and passes out from Section 36. The town is well adapted for grazing purposes.

In 1864, the La Crosse Division of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad was built through the town, entering on Section 34, crossing in a northwesterly direction through Sections 27, 28, 29, 20, 19, and into Otsego from 18. In consequence of the lay of the land not being favorable, the road was built about one mile southwest of the village of Fall River, but for the convenience of the citizens a depot was erected on the northeast quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 34, on land then owned by S. L. Batchelder. A small portion of his land was platted by Mr. Batchelder, and was called Batchelder's Addition to Fall River.

The first town meeting was held April 3, 1849, at the store of A. A. Brayton. Enos Grout was chosen Moderator; Jonathan Chase, Assistant Inspector, and N. S. Green and J. C. Carr, Clerks. Sixty-two names are on the poll list, as follows: A. A. Brayton, George Welker, Calvin Bell, Horace O'Brien, Jonathan Eggleston, William Grout, James S. Hart, Francis Meadway, Benjamin Sage, Yule Borden, Silas M. Smith, Jacob Swarthout, John O'Brien, H. D. Manville, John D. Bullis, George Brown, Isaac Bennett, Oliver W. Field, E. T. Kearney, Henry C. Field, Joel Williams, Christopher Brown, Phineas Underwood, Marvin Sturges, Hiram S. Hastings, William Hare, John Brown, William Rue, Henry C. Brace, Josiah Loomis, F. Justin, Nelson S. Green, Orson Snow, Charles Chase, Aaron Lashier, F. A. Martin, William R. Sperling, Edward Wipp, J. Lyman, Jr., William H. Proctor, J. W. Townsend, John D. Hunt, Brooks Fuller, S. R. Dix, John Hicks, Thomas J. Smith, Calvin Martin, Lorenzo Bennett, Stephen Fields, J. C. Carr, Smith Horton, Richard Blake, Jr., J. C. Heffron, Enos Grout, Abel Pierce, Jonathan Chase, Victor Brossard, Orin Bliss, Edward J. Smith, William O. Maine.

The town officers elected were: Alfred A. Brayton, Chairman; Supervisors—Stillman R. Dix, Calvin Martin; Town Clerk, Silas M. Smith; Assessor, Benjamin Sage; Superintendent of Schools, John Q. Adams; Treasurer, Nelson S. Green; Justices of the Peace, Nelson S.

Green, Henry C. Fields, Moses R. Cobb, Calvin R. Martin; Constables, E. T. Kearney, John Hicks and Lorenzo Bennett. Smith Horton was elected Road Supervisor in the western road district, and Enos Grout in the eastern district. The meeting voted to raise $125 for current expenses, about enough to pay a town clerk in a small town in 1876; $175 for school purposes, and $30 for bridge plank.

In addition to the foregoing, those assembled at this town meeting took upon themselves the law-making power, and voted that four and one-half feet in height shall constitute a lawful fence; that fence viewers shall determine whether a fence is lawful, provided it is four and one-half feet high; that any male swine running at large shall be forfeited; that hogs shall not be free commoners except in the months of October, November and December; to allow orderly horses, cattle and sheep to run at large, except stallion horses and buck sheep; that a fine of $5 be imposed on any person violating the foregoing by-laws.

A few years later, this by-law was put upon the record: "Moved and carried that hogs running at large shall not be considered as property, but shall become the property of any man who will take them up and keep them confined."

The first highway located in the town was a Territorial road from Fort Winnebago to Jefferson, by way of Columbus and Waterloo. This was in 1844. The route selected was substantially over the present traveled road from Columbus to Otsego.

It will be remembered that Benjamin Sage, after purchasing his land, went back to Vermont. He returned in the spring of 1844 with his family, and put up a shanty with a hay-roof with a stove pipe running up through it. He was soon burned out. This was the first fire in town; no insurance.

Sage died in August, 1871. Says the Columbus Democrat of August 25, 1871:

"Benjamin Sage died at his residence in Fountain Prairie on Tuesday last of apoplexy. He was sixty-seven years old and was among the pioneer settlers of Columbia County. Twenty-eight years ago this autumn he came to this county and selected his farm and future home. There was only one family living in the present township of Fountain Prairie. It was necessary at that time to go to Green Bay to purchase, as the land office was then situated there. This journey he made on foot. The intervening country was then inhabited by Indians only. Roads and hotels at that period were of course not among the conveniences found by travelers. John Brown had selected an eighty adjoining the prospective farm of the Captain. With a single exception, these claims were the first two made in that township. These two pioneers made the journey to Green Bay together. The friendship formed during that trip was as lasting as life. Either could have adopted as his own the words of David lamenting for Jonathan, 'Very pleasant hast thou been unto me; thy love to me was wonderful, passing that of woman.' In the spring of 1847, Capt. Sage brought his family to Fountain Prairie and built a cabin. He has resided at the same location ever since. He was a good citizen, order-loving, public spirited and a Democrat of the old school.

In 1845, A. A. Brayton entered the land for the mill-site and village of Fall River, where he built a saw-mill in 1846, which furnished all the sawed lumber that was used in the construction of hundreds of log houses in this region. White oak boards were considered good finishing lumber in 1846. Brayton opened the first store in town in the fall of 1846, using a slab shanty for his store. This year, 1846, was known to the early settlers as the sickly season. Fever and ague and chills and fever were very prevalent. In many neighborhoods there were not well ones enough to care for the sick, and some left the country because of its unhealthiness. This town lying in the forks of the Crawfish, which is skirted with timber, was a favorite hunting and fishing ground for the Indian. Then it was right in his pathway from the Rock River to the portage between the Fox and the Wisconsin, and deep trails were worn across the prairie where for many a long year the savage had led his squaw and his pony. For several years after the first settlement, the Indian was wont to visit these old hunting and fishing grounds; but he was not the Indian of song and story, but a miserable, thieving, begging, cowardly specimen of humanity. Deer and the prairie hen were the principal game that the early settler found, and they were very abundant. Many a family subsisted almost entirely for weeks together upon food obtained by hunting and fishing.

The town of Fountain Prairie lies directly south of Courtland, but is considerably lower than the latter town, the dividing ridge having passed off to the westward. Prairie occurs in the southwestern sections only. Narrow marshy belts are seen in the northern portion and middle sections. The Crawfish River traverses the southeastern portions, and near the middle of the town divides into two main branches, the one heading in the southwest corner of the town, the other and more northern one heading in the town of Otsego, on the west. Both streams and marsh belts show the same southwest-northeast direction as observed in the town of Courtland. The largest part of the town lies at an altitude of 300 to 350 feet, the extremes being about 250 feet along the Crawfish in the southeast part of the town, and points in the northwest, reach 380 to 400 feet. The streams run in shallow but well-defined valleys.

The following is a list of town officers from 1849 to 1880, inclusive:

1849—Alfred A. Brayton, Chairman; Stillman R. Dix, Calvin Martin, Supervisors; Silas M. Smith, Clerk; Nelson S. Green, Treasurer; Benjamin Sage, Assessor; John Q. Adams, School Superintendent.

1850—Alfred A. Brayton, Chairman; Benjamin Sage, H. C. Field, Supervisors; Silas M. Smith, Clerk; Nelson S. Green, Treasurer; James C. Carr, Assessor; John Q. Adams, School Superintendent.

1851—John Q. Adams, Chairman; J. S. Field, Samuel Lashier, Supervisors; Silas M. Smith, Clerk; John Swarthout, Treasurer; James C. Carr, Assessor; A. A. Brayton, School Superintendent.

1852—John Q. Adams, Chairman; Aaron Backus, Jacob Swarthout, Supervisors; Silas M. Smith, Clerk; A. A. Brayton, Treasurer; John S. Field, Assessor; James C. Carr, School Superintendent.

1853—James C. Carr, Chairman; William P. Bliss, Joel Dudley, Supervisors; S. C. Higbie, Clerk; H. T. Henton, Treasurer; A. A. Brayton, Assessor; J. Q. Adams, School Superintendent.

1854—James C. Carr, Chairman; William P. Bliss, H. C. Field, Supervisors; S. M. Smith, Clerk; H. T. Henton, Treasurer; E. H. Wood, Assessor; John Q. Adams, School Superintendent.

1855—John Walton, Chairman; John G. Chase, E. H. Wood, Supervisors; S. C. Higbie, Clerk; John B. Stickney, Treasurer; Jacob Swarthout, Assessor; James C. Carr, School Superintendent.

1856—James C. Carr, Chairman; S. M. Smith, E. H. Wood, Supervisors; S. C. Higbie, Clerk; F. W. Stiles, Treasurer; J. S. Hobart, Assessor; Eli S. Grout, School Superintendent.

1857—S. M. Smith, Chairman; E. H. Wood, W. H. Proctor, Supervisors; M. C. Ingalls, Clerk; F. W. Stiles, Treasurer; H. S. Hastings, Assessor; A. A. Brayton, School Superintendent.

1858—J. C. Carr, Chairman; Samuel Lashier, John S. Hobart, Supervisors; M. Ingalls, Clerk; F. W. Stiles, Treasurer; John Q. Adams, Ezra H. Wood, Assessors; George E. Talbert, School Superintendent.

1859—J. C. Carr, Chairman; L. B. Reed, William Grout, Supervisors; M. Ingalls, Clerk; F. W. Stiles, Treasurer; John Q. Adams, E. H. Wood, Assessors; M. Ingalls, School Superintendent.

1860—John Q. Adams, Chairman; H. C. Field, M. C. Hobart, Supervisors; Benjamin Sage, Jr., Clerk; F. W. Stiles, Treasurer; James C. Carr, James H. Huntington, Assessors; A. A. Brayton, School Superintendent.

1861—E. H. Wood, Chairman; H. C. Field, H. C. Brace, Supervisors; F. W. Stiles, Clerk; S. C. Higbie, Treasurer; James C. Carr, John Q. Adams, Assessors; John E. Grout, School Superintendent.

1862—James C. Carr, Chairman; John E. Grout, H. C. Brace, Supervisors; F. W. Stiles, Clerk; Samuel Lashier, Treasurer; John Q. Adams, Assessor.

1863—H. C. Brace, Chairman; H. C. Field, E. H. Wood, Supervisors; F. W. Stiles, Clerk; John G. Chase, Treasurer; John Q. Adams, James C. Carr, Assessors.

1864—George E. Talbert, Chairman; W. H. Proctor, J. S. Hobart, Supervisors; F. W. Stiles, Clerk; Samuel Lashier, Treasurer; John Q. Adams, Assessor.

1865—John Q. Adams, Chairman; W. H. Proctor, Eli L. Grout, Supervisors; Benjamin Sage, Jr., Clerk; J. C. Backus, Treasurer; John Q. Adams, Assessor.

1866—John Q. Adams, Chairman; O. W. Field, Orson Snow, Supervisors; Spencer H. Bronson, Clerk; Zebulon Russell, Treasurer; Calvin Baker, Assessor.

1867—Samuel Lashier, Chairman; Oliver W. Field, Martin C. Hobart, Supervisors; Benjamin Sage, Jr., Clerk; Zebulon B. Russell, Treasurer; J. E. Grout, Henry C. Brace, Assessors.

1868—Henry C. Brace, Chairman; John Brown, Aaron Backus, Supervisors; Benjamin Sage, Jr., Clerk; Z. B. Russell, Treasurer; John E. Grout, Samuel King, John Hicks, Assessors.

1869—William H. Proctor, Chairman; Calvin Baker, S. B. Reed, Supervisors; Benjamin Sage, Jr., Clerk; Z. B. Russell, Treasurer; John Foster, Assessor.

1870—W. H. Proctor, Chairman; Horace O'Brien, F. L. Jones, Supervisors; Benjamin Sage, Jr., Clerk; Z. B. Russell, Treasurer; J. E. Grout, Assessor.

1871—H. C. Field, Chairman; O. W. Field, Peter Secor, Supervisors; Benjamin Sage, Jr., Clerk; S. B. Sage, Treasurer; Jacob Swarthout, Assessor.

1872—H. C. Field, Chairman; O. W. Field, John Foster, Supervisors; B. A. Sage, Clerk; Z. B. Russell, Treasurer; George D. Rice, Assessor.

1873—H. C. Field, Chairman; O. W. Field, John Foster, Supervisors; B. A. Sage, Clerk; Z. B. Russell, Treasurer; J. E. Grout, Assessor.

1874—H. C. Field, Chairman; William Walker, J. S. Babcock, Supervisors; B. A. Sage, Clerk; James H. Haskin, Treasurer; J. E. Grout, Assessor.

1875—W. H. Proctor, Chairman; William Walker, Peter Secor, Supervisors; B. A. Sage, Clerk; J. H. Haskin, Treasurer; J. E. Grout, Assessor.

1876—O. W. Field, Chairman; William Walker, John W. Kehoe, Supervisors; B. A. Sage, Clerk; S. Lashier, Treasurer; John E. Grout, Assessor.

1877—William H. Proctor, Chairman; John Foster, Peter Secor, Supervisors; B. A. Sage, Clerk; Samuel Lashier, Treasurer; J. E. Grout, Assessor.

1878—M. C. Hobart, Chairman; William E. Field, J. E. McMahon, Supervisors; B. A. Sage, Clerk; Samuel Lashier, Treasurer; J. S. Babcock, Assessor.

1879—M. C. Hobart, Chairman; J. Swarthout, J. R. Nashold, Supervisors; B. A. Sage, Clerk; S. Lashier, Treasurer; J. E. Grout, Assessor.

1880—Spencer Randall, Chairman; Jacob Swarthout, John M. Kehoe, Supervisors; B. A. Sage, Clerk; Samuel Lashier, Treasurer; John E. Grout, Assessor.

VILLAGE OF FALL RIVER.

The village of Fall River was founded by A. A. Brayton in 1846. Brayton moved with his father's family to Wisconsin in 1837, and, in 1838, settled at Aztalan, where, the following year, he was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Grout. At this place, he kept a small variety store. In 1846, he purchased the southwest quarter of Section 26, Township 11, Range 12, in what is now the town of Fountain Prairie. He drew up a plan of the village and proceeded to erect a saw-mill. He also opened a variety store. The saw-mill he continued to operate for six years. In 1850, he erected a large grist-mill, which was well patronized by the farmers in the immediate neighborhood. In a short time, he sold a half-interest to A. W. Kellogg, and, afterward, the remainder to Mr. Kenney. Kellogg & Kenney, in the spring of 1860, disposed of it to Mortimer & Curtis. Up to March, 1880, it had successively passed into the hands of C. D. Cotton, Prime & Jones, E. T. Jones & Bro., and William R. Hughes.

To the original plat of the village, made by Mr. Brayton in 1856, Eli Grout made a small addition. On the completion of the railroad in 1864, S. L. Batchelder also made an addition in the vicinity of the depot. Previous to 1880, many streets and blocks of land had been vacated, reducing materially the original plat.

The first house was erected by Alfred A. Brayton, who likewise opened the first store. Martha, daughter of Benjamin and Margaret Sage, was the first born in the village as well as town.

On the 13th of August, 1853, a cemetery association was formed with S. C. Higbie, S. M. Smith, Samuel Lashier, J. D. Bullis, E. T. Kearney, Christopher Brown, Thomas Benner, S. B. Hancock and Elisha Roberts as Trustees. Three acres of ground were purchased of C. Brown, off the southeast corner of the southwest quarter of Section 26. The first burial therein was a son of Christopher Brown.

Dr. Hanson Hurd in 1856 started a match manufactory in the place, which he ran for two years, when he sold out to M. & E. H. Bronson, who successfully continued the business until 1860, when they disposed of it to Prime & Randall, who continued it until 1862, when it passed into the hands of Folsom & Grout. The latter firm, in consequence of the hard times during that period, suspended. For a time, the factory employed from ten to twenty hands.

Cigar Manufactory.—C. Palmer started, in 1860, the manufacture of cigars, but continued the business but a short time, disposing of it to D. Robbins, who soon after suspended. In 1872, Charles A. Taylor commenced to manufacture, continuing for about one year, when Z. B. Russell engaged in the work. The latter has had fair success in building up a trade. In 1879, he employed one hand and worked at the bench himself.

Cheese Manufactory.—In 1873, O. B. Prime commenced the manufacture of cheese in the village, making, the first year, about eighty thousand pounds. The quantity was increased each year until 1878, when it reached 166,000 pounds. In 1879, a less amount was made on account of the scarcity of milk. An average of $12,000 per year, from 1873 to 1879, inclusive, was distributed among the farmers in the neighborhood from this one industry alone.

Fall River House.—In 1849, S. C. Higbie erected the Fall River House, opening it to the public the same year. In 1860, he disposed of it to George Sickles. From 1860 to 1880, it has passed successively into the hands of Mr. Miller, John Fields, John Young, Richard Blake, S. L. Batchelder, C. Palmer, Lewis Norton and John Hicks. The house was built so as to accommodate twenty guests.

Post Office.—One of the first things attended to by A. A. Brayton, on his removal to this place, was to petition the Post Office Department to establish an office at this point, which was accordingly done early in 1847, and Mr. Brayton was made the first Postmaster. He was succeeded by S. C. Higbie, and in turn by F. W. Stiles, and F. W. Stiles by S. H. Bronson.

Railroad Station.—On the completion of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad to this point, Mr. Hildreth was appointed Station Agent. Between the years 1864 and 1880, Mr. Hildreth, J. W. Taylor, E. W. Williams and H. Newnham had been in the employ of the company. As Express Agents, E. W. Williams, H. Newnham, H. D. Cotton, S. H. Bronson, George D. Rice, W. E. Batchelder and J. A. Smith had served.

Schoolhouses.—In 1850, a schoolhouse was built in the village, the district being designated as No. 1. The house, in 1856, was found too small to accommodate the number of scholars living in the district, so another was added in that year. The primary scholars attend one, and the higher grades the other.

Methodist Episcopal Church.—This society was organized in the log house of Clark Smith, by Rev. Stephen Jones, in 1844, the locality at the time being connected with the old Aztalan circuit. The members were Rev. E. J. Smith, Martha Smith, Clark Smith, Sarah Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron E. Houghton. E. J. Smith was appointed leader. A log schoolhouse was erected soon after, and the meetings transferred to it. As the population of the village increased, in due time the society was removed here. In 1855, a church edifice was built, at a cost of $2,000. It was rebuilt and enlarged in 1875, at a cost of $1,200. Revs. Stephen Jones, N.

S. Green, C. G. Lathrop, Mr. Marshall, J. M. S. Maxon, Ezra Tucker, James Lamson, R. Franchen, William Averill, S. L. Brown, William Stevens, D. Lewis, E. W. Stevens, J. C. Aspinwall, A. Hitchcock, J. Searles, W. Sturgess, S. V. R. Shepherd, C. L. Shepherd, A. Hamilton, J. S. Bolton, J. E. Grant, A. J. Brill, W. E. Randolph, C. D. Cook and C. A. Stockwell have served the church as Pastors. In March, 1880, the membership of the church was ninety-five, with S. H. Bronson, Rec. Steward; John Fardell, H. S. O'Brien, J. S. Babcock and George Kirk, Stewards; J. H. Haskin, H. S. O'Brien, H. C. Glendenning, A. Horton, J. S. Babcock and B. Babcock, Trustees.

First Regular Baptist Church and Society.—The first preaching by a minister of the Baptist Church in this vicinity, was in 1847, Elders Green and Reed being the pioneer preachers. A church was also organized about this time. A legal organization was effected March 18, 1867, under the name, "First Regular Baptist Church and Society." The first Trustees were H. C. Brace, J. A. Franklin, L. B. Reed. Loyal Morton, Deacon; H. C. Brace, Clerk. In 1869, a house of worship, 38x60 feet, was erected at a cost of $5,000. Those serving the church as Pastors from 1847 to 1880, were Elders Green, Reed, Wade, Jones, Jeffreys, Meredith, Chapin, Langridge, Gorman and Pickering. In 1877, H. C. Brace and A. M. Hastings were elected Trustees, and in 1879, James Randolph, F. C. Thomas, M. A. Franklin and E. Oliver were added to the number. M. H. Bender, Deacon and Clerk.

TOWN OF HAMPDEN.

✧ The first settler in the town of Hampden was Alfred Topliff, who located there May 1, 1844. Lewis and Landy Sowards, with their families, arrived there some four or five weeks later. J. E. Haight and family arrived in the autumn of the same year. What is now the county of Columbia was, in that year, mostly an uninhabited wild. Fort Winnebago, Dekorra, and some eight or ten families in Columbus and Fountain Prairie, then constituted nearly the entire population of the county. The first settlers of Hampden had to go to Aztalan Post Office, a distance of thirty miles, for their letters and papers. Most articles of provisions were procured at Milwaukee, a distance of seventy miles. The road then traveled to Milwaukee by way of Aztalan, and thence through the dense and nearly uninhabited forest of Rock River woods for eighteen miles, over a track that was hardly passable, requiring five or six days to make the journey to Milwaukee and return. The country in all directions was without roads (excepting the Indian trails) and all rivers and brooks without bridges, in this or adjacent towns. The traveler had to search in all directions to find a place where he could possibly cross the streams and marshes and then to find himself in a situation from which, with the utmost difficulty he could extricate himself and reach the opposite shore. This difficulty was much increased by the rains which were of such frequent occurrence during the summer and September of that year. The marshes, which were the dependence of the settlers for hay to winter their stock, were so filled with water that hay could not be procured from them until October, when the grass was so injured by frosts as to make the hay of diminished value, and a consequence was that quite a proportion of the cattle died during the winter following for want of suitable food to sustain them.

The year 1845 afforded some additions to the population, but they were mostly transient settlers who have long left for other localities.

In 1846, the brothers, Elijah and Perry Lee, with their families, and Mrs. Roys and her son, Clarendon Roys and brothers, and Messrs. Henry Clark, Thomas Smith and Benjamin Chase, arrived and located in the town. A settlement of Norwegians was also made in the southwest quarter, and a settlement of Germans in the southeast quarter of the town.

The town of Hampden is bounded on the east by Columbus, on the west by Leeds, on the north by Otsego, and on the south by Dane County. Before the organization of the county into towns it was in the third election precinct composed of Townships 10 and 11, Range 11, the place of voting being at the house of Landy Sowards, the Judges of Election being Jonathan

E. Haight, Landy Sowards and Henry Pellet. The precinct was known as Dyersburg, so-called in honor of Wayne B. Dyer, the first settler of Otsego, and first Clerk of the Board of County Commissioners. In 1849, Township 10, Range 11, was organized into a town to which was given the name of Hampden, and the house belonging to Cornwall Esmond, situated on the northwest corner of Section 15, designated as the place for holding the first election.

Among other early settlers of the town were Daniel Soward, Clarendon Roys, Benjamin Chase, Mr. Tillotson, Henry R. Clark, Clark Hazard, James Montgomery, Jonathan E. Haight, William K. Custer, John A. Franklin, Lyman Morse and John Derr.

Alfred Topliff taught the first school in the town on Section 11, in 1847.

Rev. Reuben Bates, a pioneer Methodist preacher, was the first to proclaim the Gospel here, though previously Rev. Edward Smith preached the funeral sermon of Mr. Douglas in June, 1845. In 1846, at the house of Mr. Morris, he delivered his first discourse.

In 1857, the Town Board purchased of Samuel Smith a fraction over two acres off Section 16, for a place for the burial of the dead.

The town in 1865 erected a comfortable town hall, 26x36 feet in size. Here town meetings are held, and the hall has also been used for religious and educational purposes.

A post office was established near the center of the town in 1847, and A. Topliff made Postmaster. He was succeeded by Benjamin Chase, Lloyd Newcomb and William Bradley. About 1865, the office was discontinued, but re-established in 1877, and Halver Halverson made Postmaster.

Among the principal farmers prior to 1856, might be mentioned Clarendon Roys, Henry R. Clark, Clark Hazard, Eli Sowards, Daniel Sowards, C. C. Tillotson, T. S. Roys, James Montgomery, E. Fairbanks, James H. Sutton, John Derr, Peter Hanson, O. J. Oleson and E. Knudson.

About the year 1868, E. Fairbanks began to give special attention to the improvement of cattle and sheep. His herds of Durham cattle and merino sheep, between the years 1868 and 1880, have been exhibited at county, district and State Fairs, with results highly satisfactory to their owner. The example of Mr. Fairbanks has been imitated by other farmers in the town. Several fine horses were imported from France, in 1875, by an association formed in the town.

The town of Hampden is largely rolling prairie in the western and central portions, the prairie connecting by a narrow strip with that of Fountain Prairie and Columbus. In the southwest there are small tamarack marshes. The town lies upon the eastern slope of the dividing ridge, and thus rises rapidly from east to west. In the lower portions on the east line, the altitude is 320 to 350 feet; whilst on the west side, it is 400 to 500 feet. In the southeast is high ground, continuous with that in southwest Columbus. The town lies on the southern boundary of the county, in the southeastern part, by which it is separated from the town of Bristol, in the county of Dane. It is about twenty miles southeast of the city of Portage, and is known as Township 10 north, of Range 11 east. The town is watered by a small stream that flows through it from west to east—an affluent of the Crawfish River.

The first entry of land was made by Alfred Topliff June 28, 1844, consisting of the southwest quarter of the northeast quarter and the southeast quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 11.

The following is a list of town officers from the organization of the town to the present time:

1849—William K. Custer, Chairman; Nelson B. Lloyd, George D. Mead, Supervisors
John A. Franklin, Clerk; Lyman Morse, Treasurer; Enoch Pulver, Assessor.

1850—Elijah Lee, Chairman; James Montgomery, Cephas Tillotson, Supervisors; Thomas B. Haslam, Clerk; Albert Pease, Treasurer; Jonathan E. Haight, James H. Sutton, Albert Wilkins, Assessors.

1851—Elijah Lee, Chairman; Henry R. Clark, James Montgomery, Supervisors; Thomas B. Haslam, Clerk; Albert Pease, Treasurer; Ezra Mead, Assessor.

1852—Elijah Lee, Chairman ; James Montgomery, John Derr, Supervisors ; Thomas B. Haslam, Clerk ; William K. Custer, Treasurer ; Ezra Mead, Assessor.

1853—Elijah Lee, Chairman ; Zalmon McDougal, John Derr, Supervisors ; Thomas B. Haslam, Clerk ; James H. Sutton, Treasurer ; James Montgomery, Assessor.

1854—Elijah Lee, Chairman ; Nels Mikelson, John Derr, Supervisors ; Thomas B. Haslam, Clerk ; James H. Sutton, Treasurer ; James Montgomery, John Oleson, Assessors.

1855—James Montgomery, Chairman ; George Tillotson, John Derr, Supervisors ; Marshal R. Keeler, Clerk ; James H. Sutton, Treasurer ; Hiram R. Tripp, John Oleson, Assessors.

1856—E. Fairbanks, Chairman ; John Derr, Benjamin Chase, Supervisors ; George Tillotson, Clerk ; James Montgomery, Treasurer ; H. R. Tripp, John Oleson, Assessors.

1857—E. Fairbanks, Chairman ; C. C. Tillotson, Henry Lull, Supervisors ; L. D. Parker, Clerk ; James Montgomery, Treasurer and Assessor.

1858—Henry Lull, Chairman ; Clark Hazard, Nels Mickelson, Supervisors ; William E. Newcomb, Clerk ; William K. Custer, Treasurer ; Ira Ford, Assessor.

1859—William K. Custer, Chairman ; Clark Hazard, Samuel Smith, Supervisors ; George Tillotson, Clerk ; John Oleson, Treasurer ; Ira Ford, Assessor.

1860—Edward Fairbanks, Chairman ; John Logeman, Thomas Sanderson, Supervisors ; L. D. Tasker, Clerk ; Clarendon Roys, Treasurer ; John J. Sutton, Assessor.

1861—James H. Sutton, Chairman ; C. C. Tillotson, John D. Logeman, Supervisors ; T. S. Roys, Clerk ; Samuel Smith, Treasurer ; James Montgomery, Assessor.

1862—Edward Fairbanks, Chairman ; Clarendon Roys, Samuel Smith, Supervisors ; T. S. Roys, Clerk ; James Montgomery, Treasurer and Assessor.

1863—James H. Sutton, Chairman ; Samuel Smith, John Oleson, Supervisors ; T. S. Roys, Clerk ; Thomas Sanderson, Treasurer and Assessor.

1864—James H. Sutton, Chairman ; H. R. Clark, Aad Henderson, Supervisors ; G. W. Putnam, Clerk ; J. E. Perkins, Treasurer ; H. R. Tripp, Assessor.

1865—Edward Fairbanks, Chairman ; Benjamin Fuller, Horace Morse, Supervisors ; A. Sanderson, Clerk ; Halver Halverson, Treasurer ; James Montgomery, Assessor.

1866—H. R. Clark, Chairman ; G. S. Armitage, William Bradley, Supervisors ; A. Sanderson, Clerk ; Ole J. Oleson, Treasurer ; James Montgomery, Assessor.

1867—H. R. Clark, Chairman ; C. Tillotson, John Oleson, Supervisors ; A. Sanderson, Clerk ; Ole J. Oleson, Treasurer.

1868—James Montgomery, Chairman ; John Derr, Ira H. Ford, Supervisors ; A. Sanderson, Clerk ; Charles Conrad, Treasurer ; A. L. Sutton, Assessor.

1869—C. Roys, Chairman ; Samuel Hasey, Ingelbert Everson, Supervisors ; C. S. Tompkins, Clerk ; William McBurnie, Treasurer ; Galen Hall, Assessor.

1870—C. Roys, Chairman ; Samuel Hasey, Ingelbert Everson, Supervisors ; C. S. Tompkins, Clerk ; E. J. Morse, Treasurer ; James Montgomery, Assessor.

1871—Samuel Hasey, Chairman ; Ole L. Clave, Ingelbert Everson, Supervisors ; C. S. Tompkins, Clerk ; T. S. Roys, Treasurer ; Thomas Sanderson, Assessor.

1872—Charles Tompkins, Chairman ; Ingelbert Everson, Samuel Smith, Supervisors ; S. C. Bell, Clerk ; William McBurnie, Treasurer ; James Montgomery, Assessor.

1873—Samuel Hasey, Chairman ; Peter Hansen, John Derr, Supervisors ; A. Sanderson, Clerk ; Henry Bock, Treasurer ; Thomas Sanderson, Assessor.

1874—John Derr, Chairman ; Halver Halverson, Eli Morse, Supervisors ; S. C. Bell, Clerk ; Henry Bock, Treasurer ; Thomas Sanderson, Assessor.

1875—John Derr, Chairman ; E. J. Morse, H. Halverson, Supervisors ; S. C. Bell, Clerk ; A. Sanderson, Treasurer ; James Montgomery, Assessor.

1876—John Derr, Chairman ; Halver Halverson, E. J. Morse, Supervisors ; William McBurnie, Clerk ; A. Sanderson, Treasurer ; Thomas Sanderson, Assessor.

1877—Thomas Sanderson, Chairman ; Albert Scheidler, Samuel Smith, Supervisors ; S. C. Bell, Clerk ; Henry Bock, Treasurer.

RESIDENCE OF GEO. S. TILLOTSON SEC. 10 TOWN OF HAMPDEN

1878—James Montgomery, Chairman ; E. J. Morse, Halver Halverson, Supervisors ; S. C. Bell, Clerk ; Henry Bock, Treasurer ; I. Everson, Assessor.

1879—Edward Fairbanks, Chairman ; Peter Hanson, Adolph Schultz, Supervisors ; William McBurnie, Clerk ; A. Sanderson, Treasurer ; S. C. Bell, Assessor.

1880—H. R. Clark, Chairman ; Adolph Schutz, Halver Halverson, Supervisors ; A. Sanderson, Clerk ; Nicholas Ziegler, Treasurer ; Thomas Sanderson, Assessor.

TOWN OF LEEDS.

The town of Leeds is almost altogether upon the top of the watershed, having a surface of rolling prairie, and a general altitude of 450 to 570 feet. In the northwest corner, this high ground breaks down abruptly 200 feet toward the head-waters of Okee Creek. The State Geologist, in one of his reports, remarked that there were some of the finest lands here that were to be found in the State. The first entry of land was made October 3, 1844, by John Dalziel, consisting of the northwest quarter of the southwest quarter, and the southwest quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 26. Prior to this, La Fayette Hill made claim on Section 14. He erected a log house which, in his absence, was burned by the Indians in the winter of 1843-44. In the spring of 1844, one Johnson came in, and Mr. Hill, for a small consideration, surrendered to him his claim and removed into the town of Dekorra. Mr. Johnson conveyed in June following a portion of this tract to Oliver G. Chilson. William Young came in in 1844, but remained only a short time, when he removed his house just across the line in the town of Lowville. In the fall of 1844 came William Bradley, Thomas Dalziel, and Mr. Hinman. Soon after this came Stephen Brayton, Charles B. Thompson, Sylvester Dutton, O. C. Howe, A. Klienert, F. Rennebohm, Jacob Townsend, Smith Scott, Charles Brown, Norman Ives, Fred Lubins and others.

The town of Leeds is an agricultural town. No effort has ever been made to locate a village within its boundaries, but now its inhabitants are well supplied with mail facilities, there then being four post offices in the town—Leeds, North Leeds, Leeds Center, and Keyser.

Leeds Post Office was established on Section 32 in 1854, with William P. Bradley as the first Postmaster. Mr. Bradley was succeeded by George Durkee, and Mr. Durkee by Anson Engel.

Leeds Center was established in 1856, chiefly through the instrumentality of Dr. R. A. Squires, who was made its first Postmaster. He was succeeded by Norman Ives, who continued but a short time when G. E. Fox was appointed, after which it again passed under control of Dr. Squire, who was succeeded in 1857 by A. S. Packard.

Humphrey McKinney was the first Postmaster of North Leeds, the office being established in 1858. William Dieruf was Mr. McKinney's successor.

In 1876, an office was established in the southeast part of the town, with Benjamin Braeson as Postmaster.

The first school in the town was held at Leeds Center on the corner of the northwest quarter of the southwest corner of Section 14, in 1848. In 1850, a substantial log school-house was erected which burned down the first winter. In 1851, a stone house was erected which served the district (No. 1) until June, 1878, when a good frame house was erected and well furnished at a cost of $1,600.

It has been stated there had never been an effort to locate a village in the town, but notwithstanding this fact, around Leeds Center Post Office quite a little village sprang up in 1856-57, there being there at that time two stores, a blacksmith-shop, post office and a tavern, the latter being erected by John T. Baker, and continued by him about four years. Leeds Center was then on the line of the stage route from Beaver Dam to Lodi and also from Madison to Portage.

From the organization of Leeds, town-meetings have been held at Leeds Center. Election days have generally been considered as holidays and the average voter expected to have some fun. There formerly lived here a genius who would occasionally imbibe too freely of the juice of the corn. He was an ardent Republican and never got so drunk but he knew the difference between a Republican and Democratic ticket. On one occasion on election day, he was so drunk a leading Democratic politician thought he would get him to vote the Democratic ticket, and to accomplish his aim was very affectionate toward the old man. Taking him by the arm and placing a Democratic ticket in his hand, he led him up to the polls. The Republicans were of course watching every movement. When the old man arrived at the voting-place, he turned to a leading Republican and said, "Give me a ticket, John." "Why," responded John, "I thought you were going to vote the Democratic ticket?" "You think (hie) because I've got the (hie) symptoms, I've turned Democrat, (hie) do you?" John furnished him with the ticket of his choice.

Horse-trading has been classed as a high art in Leeds, and the people of that town have become proverbial as horse-traders. Woe be to the man who considers himself the better judge of horseflesh, and the more experienced in a trade. Orin Powers was a good-hearted, honest citizen of Lowville, and was possessed of a horse valued by good judges at $125. One day, he made up his mind that he would take that horse over to Leeds, and make a little by trading him to some one. He was advised by a friend not to go, but the advice he considered an insult. The idea of his being taken in by those Leeds men! He would show them he knew what he was about in a horse trade. So over to Leeds he went. Along about sunset, he was seen returning to the point from which he started, on foot, with a bridle in his hand. "Why, Orin, what's the matter?" said the friend of the morning. "Oh, Doctor," he replied, "they've used me up." "Why, how is that?" "Well, you see, I went over there, made two or three trades, and on the last one I got a horse and two cows. I thought I had done well. The horse was a fine-looking animal, and I got on him to ride him home, and coming along, the blasted thing had a fit, fell down and nearly killed me. I took off the bridle and left him to die, and here I am with two cows, worth not over $25. I wish I'd taken your advice."

The town of Leeds is situated in the south part of the county, on the county line, which separates it from the town of Windsor, in Dane County. It is about fifteen miles southeast of the city of Portage, and is in Township 10, Range 10 east. Nearly one-half of the township is prairie land; the other half is oak openings, which are in the northern and southeastern parts. The town is scantily supplied with brooks or streams, there being only a small rivulet in the southeast portion, which has an outlet in a lake situated on parts of Sections 23, 24 and 26. A large number of the settlers in the southeastern part of the town are Norwegians, and that nationality, with the Germans, largely predominate. The town is well improved and under excellent cultivation.

Lutheran Church.—On the 27th day of March, 1847, the first Norwegian Evangelical Lutheran congregation in Columbia County was organized, by Rev. I. W. C. Dietrickson, as "Spring Prairie Congregation." It consisted of settlers residing in the towns of Leeds, Hampden, Otsego, Lowville, and later Arlington and Dekorra, in Columbia County, and Bristol, Windsor and Vienna, Dane County. The first Norwegian services were held at the house of Sjur Reque, some time previous. Among the first members of the congregation were John O. Fosmark, Nels O. Fosmark, Lars Johannesen Moen, Aad Johnson Himle, John Langeteig, Peter Halvorsen, Angud Aames, Eivind Thorstensen. On the 15th day of October, 1849, Spring Prairie congregation was divided into three congregations—Spring Prairie and Bonnet Prairie, Columbia County, and Norway Grove, Dane County. These three congregations resolved to constitute one parish, where, somewhat later, was joined Lodi congregation, in the towns of Lodi, Arlington and Dekorra, in Columbia County. Rev. I. W. C. Dietrickson had charge of these congregations, and served as their minister up to the 10th of April, 1850; Rev. A. C. Preus from May, 1850, till August, 1851. Rev. H. A. Preus took charge of them August 10, 1851, and has served as their minister till the present time. As the latter gentleman has had to attend to a very extensive missionary work among Norwegians in the northern and middle part of Wisconsin, and has also, since 1862, acted as President of the Norwegian Evangelical Lutheran Synod in America, the following named have served as assistants: Rev. C. Magelssen, from September, 1866, to October, 1867; Rev. B. Hovde, from January, 1869, to April, 1872; Rev. A. Vinnor, from May, 1872, to May, 1873; Rev. A. Bredeson, from May, 1873, to August, 1876; Rev. Chr. K. Preus, from August 13, 1876, to the present time. The first Norwegian church edifice was a small log one, in the town of Otsego, built in the summer of 1853. On the 25th day of June, 1853, the corner-stone of the church in the town of Leeds was laid. It is 50x35 feet, has a fine steeple, and, when erected, cost $2,500. The Bonnet Prairie congregation, Otsego, built a stone church in 1866, 54x35 feet, which cost $7,000. The Lodi congregation was the next to build, in 1871. Their church edifice is of brick, 54x28 feet, with a steeple 70 feet high; is located in the town of Arlington, and cost $3,600. There are 280 families in the various congregations connected with this parish. Trustees of Spring Prairie congregation—John O. Fosmark, John Hermundsen, Hans Bjornsen; of the Bonnet Prairie Congregation—Andves Loselu, Halvor Anderson, J. B. Berquam; of Lodi—Ives Larsen, G. Pedersen and A. Ommundsen.

The town of Leeds was organized in 1850, and comprised all of Township 10, Range 10, and the east half of Township 10, Range 9. In 1855, the latter portion of the town was set off to Arlington, leaving the town of Leeds one full township.

The following are the names of the town officers since its organization to the present time:

1850—Thomas Dalziel, Chairman; Charles B. Thompson, Nathaa Hazen, Supervisors; David M. Hatch, Clerk; Oliver G. Chilson, Treasurer; William T. Bradley, Superintendent of Schools; Henry Waterhouse, Clark M. Young, Assessors.

1851—Thomas Dalziel, Chairman; Sylvester Dutton, William Young, Supervisors; James M. Robinson, Clerk; Clark M. Young, Thomas Green, John Oleson, Assessors; William T. Bradley, School Superintendent.

1852—Chester S. Chapin, Chairman; Sylvester Dutton, Lars Johnson, Supervisors; David M. Hatch, Clerk; Henry Waterhouse, Treasurer; John Oleson, C. M. Young, Thomas Green, Charles Brown, Assessors; William T. Bradley, School Superintendent.

1853—William H. Young, Chairman; Sylvester Dutton, Amond Christophersen, Supervisors; J. W. Robinson, Clerk; Thomas Dalziel, Treasurer; C. M. Young, Neils Knudson, Assessors; Isaac C. Sargent, School Superintendent.

1854—William H. Young, Chairman; Sylvester Dutton, Nelse K. Garvinde, Supervisors; J. W. Robinson, Clerk; O. G. Chilson, Treasurer; Stephen Brayton, Assessor; D. C. Strong, Superintendent of Schools.

1855—Isaac C. Sargent, Chairman; Charles Brown, Anton Nelson, Supervisors; F. W. Cady, Clerk; Thomas Dalziel, Treasurer; J. W. Robinson, Assessor and School Superintendent.

1856—Sylvester Dutton, Chairman; Thomas Dalziel, Amond Christophers, Supervisors; M. J. Waterhouse, Clerk; William T. Bradley, Treasurer and Assessor; L. A. Squire, School Superintendent.

1857—William T. Bradley, Chairman; C. L. Brown, Ender Knudson, Supervisors; H. P. Estabrook, Clerk; Halver Halverson, Treasurer; William T. Bradley, Assessor; I. C. Sargent, School Superintendent.

1858—William T. Bradley, Chairman; C. B. Thompson, Amond Christophers, Supervisors; Abel Alden, Clerk; Halver Halverson, Treasurer; William Young, Assessor; L. A. Squire, School Superintendent.

1859—Charles L. Brown, Chairman; B. F. Everett, A. Christophers, Supervisors; Abel Allen, Clerk; Halver Halverson, Treasurer; William T. Bradley, Assessor; L. A. Squire, School Superintendent.

1860—C. L. Brown, Chairman; A. Christophers, R. Helfritz, Supervisors; E. F. Russell, Clerk; H. Lubins, Treasurer; B. F. Everett, Assessor; L. A. Squire, School Superintendent.

1861—L. A. Squire, Chairman; Christian Munson, R. Helfritz, Supervisors; C. L. Brown, Clerk; Henry Lubins, Treasurer; William T. Bradley, Assessor; Benjamin F. McKinney, School Superintendent.

1862—L. A. Squire, Chairman; C. Munson, William T. Kleinert, Supervisors; C. L. Brown, Clerk; Lars J. Lee, Treasurer; William T. Bradley, Assessor.

1863—L. A. Squire, Chairman; C. Munson, William T. Kleinert, Supervisors; Abel Allen, Clerk; Lars J. Lee, Treasurer; William T. Bradley, Assessor.

1864—Thomas Sanderson, Chairman; E. C. Lubins, Benjamin Johnson, Supervisors; Abel Allen, Clerk; J. B. Hagaboom, Treasurer; C. M. Smith, Assessor.

1865—William T. Bradley, Chairman; D. C. Lubins, Peter Oleson, Supervisors; Abel Allen, Clerk; Robert Dalziel, Treasurer; Smith J. Scott, Assessor.

1866—A. H. Quaackenbush, Chairman; Peter Oleson, Thomas Pashaw, Supervisors; Abel Allen, Clerk; Robert Dalziel, Treasurer; S. J. Scott, Assessor.

1867.—L. A. Squire, Chairman; Lars J. Lee, Conrad Selle, Supervisors; Abel Allen, Clerk; J. V. Mixer, Treasurer; Norman M. Ives, Assessor.

1868.—L. A. Squire, Chairman; Lars J. Lee, Conrad Selle, Supervisors; Abel Allen, Clerk; William Dieruf, Treasurer; Norman M. Ives, Assessor.

1869.—L. A. Squire, Chairman; Lars J. Lee, Conrad Selle, Supervisors; J. E. Butler, Clerk; William Dieruf, Treasurer; Norman M. Ives, Assessor.

1870.—L. A. Squire, Chairman; Lars J. Lee, Conrad Selle, Supervisors; William Dieruf, Clerk; William T. Kleinert, Treasurer; Norman M. Ives, Assessor.

1871.—L. A. Squire, Chairman; G. A. Kleinert, Anson Nelson, Supervisors; William Dieruf, Clerk; William C. Kleinert, Treasurer; Norman M. Ives, Assessor.

1872.—L. A. Squire, Chairman; G. A. Kleinert, Anson Nelson, Supervisors; William Dieruf, Clerk; William C. Kleinert, Treasurer; Norman M. Ives, Assessor.

1873.—William C. Kleinert, Chairman; Abram Page, John Peterson, Supervisors; L. L. Phinney, Clerk; Fred Reembohm, Treasurer; Norman M. Ives, Assessor.

1874.—William C. Kleinert, Chairman; Abram Page, John Peterson, Supervisors; L. L. Phinney, Clerk; Charles Steltner, Treasurer; Norman M. Ives, Assessor.

1875.—William C. Kleinert, Chairman; F. B. Scott, Andrew A. Erickson, Supervisors; L. L. Phinney, Clerk; Joseph L. Lee, Treasurer; Norman M. Ives, Assessor.

1876.—William C. Kleinert, Chairman; Andrew A. Erickson, Abram Page, Supervisors; L. L. Phinney, Clerk; Joseph L. Lee, Treasurer; Norman M. Ives, Assessor.

1877.—William C. Kleinert, Chairman; Andrew A. Erickson, Abram Page, Supervisors; L. L. Phinney, Clerk; L. N. Lee, Treasurer; Norman M. Ives, Assessor.

1878.—L. L. Phinney, Chairman; Conrad Selle, John Peterson, Supervisors; Joseph Faerber, Clerk; L. N. Lee, Treasurer; Norman M. Ives, Assessor.

1879.—L. L. Phinney, Chairman; Conrad Selle, John Peterson, Supervisors; Joseph Faerber, Clerk; L. N. Lee, Treasurer; Norman M. Ives, Assessor.

1880—W. C. Kleinert, Chairman; L. M. Lee, George Wylie, Supervisors; Joseph Faerber, Clerk; C. N. Ransom, Treasurer; N. M. Ives, Assessor.

TOWN OF LEWISTON.

The town of Lewiston includes the whole of Township 13 north, in Range 8 east, except the southeast quarter of Section 36, which lies within the city limits of Portage; also all of the north tier of sections in Township 12 north, in the same range, lying north of the Wisconsin River, except the east half of Section 1, which is a part of the city of Portage; also, so much of the east half of Township 13 north, in Range 7 east, as lies north of the Wisconsin. It contains, therefore, about one township and a half of land. It is bounded on the north by Adams and Marquette Counties; on the east, by the town of Fort Winnebago and the city of Portage; on the south, by the city of Portage and the Wisconsin River, and on the west by the Wisconsin River and the town of Newport.

On the 18th day of November, 1852, "Range (8) eight and the east half of Range (7) seven, in Town [ship] thirteen," were "formed into a new town, under the name of Lewiston." Afterward, so much of Township 12, in Range 8, as lies north of the Wisconsin River was added to Lewiston, this fraction and Township 13, in the same range, being diminished a little over three-fourths of a section when the city of Portage was incorporated. When the selection of a name became necessary, that of Beaver Creek was suggested, and was so incorporated in the petition for the organization of the town; but the Board of Supervisors changed it to Lewiston, in honor of E. F. Lewis, one of the earliest settlers.

The southwest portion of the town, along the Wisconsin River, is quite level, and, in high water, it has overflowed and run through the town, thence to Fox River, by the way of a stream known as the Grand or Big Slough. There are several small streams of water in the town, mostly emptying into the Fox River. There are also three lakes, situated in the northwest corner of the town, known as Lake Whiting, Lake Loomis and Lake Corning. Lake Whiting has a small stream running into it on the northwest part, passing out on the south and running down the west side of this town and east side of the town Newport, the Wisconsin River; thence to the Gulf of Mexico. From the same lake there has been a ditch dug, running in an easterly direction, a distance of about a mile and a quarter, with a fall of twenty-one feet, and thence through the Fox River to the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The Big Slough forms on Section 33, near the Wisconsin River; crosses Sections 34, 26, 23, 22, 21, 16, 9 and 4, entering Neenah Creek, or North Branch of Fox River, on Section 3. Though the name of "slough" is given it, it can hardly be said to be appropriate, as it is a stream of living water, and, though narrow and shallow in places, occasionally are to be found holes ranging in depth from twelve to twenty feet, and increasing in length and width as it approaches its mouth. From the bottom of these deep holes springs of cold water are forced upward. Bass and pickerel abound in the stream. Neenah Creek, where connecting with the Big Slough, crosses Sections 3, 2 and 1, passing into Marquette County on the northeast corner of Section 1, and returns into this county on Section 5, Town of Fort Winnebago.

The first white settlement in the town was made by Daniel Brown, in February, 1849, on the northwest quarter of Section 12, Township 13, Range 7, and Thomas Fletcher soon after settled on the northwest quarter of Section 17, Town 13, Range 8, which was all the settlement in the town until the 8th of June following, when E. F. Lewis settled on the northwest quarter of Section 21, Township 13, Range 8. On the same day, there was a load of lumber left on the west half of the northwest quarter of Section 25, Township 13, Range 8, by Samuel and Jacob Reader, to secure a claim made there by them. Also, at the same time, Ira Young made a claim on the southeast quarter of Section 17, Township 13, Range 8. James Sloan and William Finnegan made claims on Section 20, Township 13, Range 8. About the 20th of June, Peter Thompson and Mons. Johnson made claims on the east half of Section 21, Township 13, Range 8, which was the first settlement by the Scandinavians in the town. Amplias Chamberlain and John Huxley made a settlement on Section 6, Township 13, Range 8, in July, and Jonathan Butterfield and Aaron Toun made claims, in the spring of 1842, where Briggsville now stands, and gave the claim to A. E. Briggs, in 1851, on condition that he would improve the water-power thereon. Mr. Briggs built a saw-mill at once, which was the first start of the village of Briggsville. Solomon Clark and Daniel Burlison made a claim on Section 26, Township 13, Range 8, and Jacob Jacobia also settled on the same section in the fall of 1849. Several settlers came in during the months of July and August of that year, among whom were Robert Shortly and a man of the name of Parks, who settled on Section 1, and Robert Thompson, who settled on Section 4, Township 13, Range 8. About this time, the Germans began to settle in the south part of the town, along the Wisconsin River, among whom were Fred Bach, on Section 32; William and Harry Lintz, and Christian Pfeiler, on Section 4, Township 12, Range 8. The first settlers in the east part of the town were the Devine brothers and Patrick Shea, who settled on Sections 18 and 14, Township 13, Range 8, and the Ryan brothers, on Section 24. William, James and Robert Clark settled in the northeast corner of the town, on Sections 3 and 10, and from that time on the settlement became general throughout the town.

When Mr. Lewis settled on his claim, he lived three weeks in his wagon box. He then erected a log house 22x52 feet, a story and a half high, for hotel purposes, christening his house the "Pinery Exchange." Being on the old pinery road, on which there was considerable travel, the hotel flourished until the building of railroads diverted emigration. Other hotels along the line of the road through this county were erected, each receiving fair patronage. Jacob Jacobia built on Section 26, in the fall of 1849, and E. N. Storms in 1851. When the new pinery road was opened in 1852, E. B. Craig erected a hotel where it crosses the Big Slough, naming it the "Menominee House."

In 1849, a claim society was organized, composed of settlers in the towns of Newport, and Lewiston, Columbia County, and the counties of Adams and Marquette. The object of the society was to protect the first settlers in their claims. The land, not then being in market, was not subject to entry, but many men locating and improving lands selected, with the intention of securing their claim as soon as thrown in the market. It was feared that there would be those who, observing improvements made, would hasten to file claims before the original settler could do so, thus defrauding them out of their just rights. A number of cases of disputed claims came before the society, which they attempted to settle in their own way. In the spring of 1852, James Litchfield located upon the northwest quarter of Section 1, Township 13, Range 7, erected a small frame dwelling and cleared about five acres of land. He received notice from the society to vacate, as another party had a prior claim. Consulting with neighbors, he was satisfied that Mr. Norris, the other claimant, had selected another quarter, and was, therefore, entitled to no more. For this reason he refused to go. One Saturday, in the month of May, 1852, near midnight, some ten or twelve masked men came here, and calling up Mr. and Mrs. Litchfield, ordered them from the house, set it on fire, burning it to the ground. The unfortunate couple went to the house of John Brickwell, where they remained a few days, and from there to Mr. Briggs', where they stayed until a new house could be built for them by the sympathizing neighbors. Five of the masked men were recognized by Mr. and Mrs. Litchfield, warrants were sworn out, and they were arrested and bound over for trial in the Circuit Court for the crime of arson. The first term, after indictment, the defendants got a continuance of the case, and at the time of the second term Mrs. Litchfield was too ill to attend the trial. The matter was then compromised and the case stricken from the docket.

The first school in the town was taught by Mrs. Brickwell, in the summer of 1853, on Section 12, School District No. 1.

The first white child born in the town was a daughter of Frederick Back, on Section 32, Township 13, Range 8, in the summer of 1849. This child died the following winter from being scalded in a tub of hot water.

The first death was at the house of E. F. Lewis, in September, 1849. Elisha Parmenter, with his family, came from the State of New York, and stopped with Mr. Lewis. There he left his family, and with his team returned to Milwaukee for his goods. Returning with them, he was taken sick and lived but a few days. He was buried in the military burying ground at Fort Winnebago.

The whole number of acres assessed on the first assessment roll was 13,747.73, valued at $46,420. The value of personal property on the same roll was $1,150. Total, $47,570.

The first election was at the house of E. F. Lewis, on the 5th of April, 1853, at which Riley Woodford, Almon Hay and John Brickwell acted as Inspectors and L. C. Jacobs as Clerk. Those voting at this election were John Brickwell, Riley Woodford, E. F. Lewis, Almon Hay, Robert Thompson, M. B. Eastings, Charles S. Mason, George W. Bird, Moses Johnson, Peter Thompson, Elling Mahl, Hans O. Mensen, Jacob Jacobia, John Fitch, Orrin Hay, Hans Hanson, Jr., Lewis Hanson, Hans Hanson, Sr., Thomas Robinson, Hans Thompson, M. H. Dahl, Warren Hay, T. E. Bendixon, John A. Gund, Joseph Wagner, Jacob Poagle, Robert Thompson, Allen Vincent, George Winders, Nels Paterson, Albert Oleson, Peter Hees, Hans Lolliger, Lewis Sader, Frederick C. Martin, Stephen Collenson, Solomon Clark, Henry Jertson, Hans Jertson, Lars Isaacson, Joseph Mathias, Isaac Andrews, Sven Johnson, Ole Johnson, Ole Oleson, John O'Mare, William McDonald, Edmund Beaz, S. A. Reader, Riley A. Woodford, Fred Bach, Claus Hilderbrand, Frederick Guildner, Mortz Kuhl, Andrew Languard, Robert Clark, James Clark, Andrew McFarlane, T. Fletcher, Holly Warden, John Isaacson, Joseph Blume, C. W. Gay, L. C. Jacobs, G. M. W. Carey, Sven Anderson, E. N. Storms, Ole Erickson, Daniel Oleson, George W. Green, Talbot Askinson, Clark Vincent, James Devine, John Ryan, Dennis Callaghan, William Messer, Christian Tilder, John Hickitkere, Robert Doyle, Michael McCormick, Edmund Cushing, John Kline, Dennis Harrigan, Jeremiah Devine, Daniel Cushing, Nelson Van Wil, Michael R. Devine, Richard Bagnall, Andrew Baarnaman, George R. Kindness, Francis Dane, John Devine, Frederick Severt, William Clark, Jacob Reader, John Ewing, Jacob Mickelson, W. Finnegan, Peter McCormick, Charles Seavert, Lewis Vake, James Sloan and John Guilder—a total of 104, of which number, in 1880, about twenty-five were residents of the town.

The town was divided into school districts May 19, 1853, by John Brickwell, who was then Superintendent of Schools of the town. In 1879, there were ten districts in the town, all of which had good schoolhouses. A good deal of interest has generally been manifested in the schools.

The town has had to be at considerable expense in building roads and bridges, and also in the construction of a levee on the bank of the Wisconsin River, to prevent it, in stages of high water, overflowing and so passing over a portion of the town, to Fox River, thereby keeping the land too wet for cultivation.

The land was generally surveyed by the General Government in 1850 and 1851, the township lines being run in 1850 and subdivision lines in 1851, after which, and before the land was brought into market, the settlers had a chance to take out pre-emption papers on their claims, and prove them up, without interference of the land speculators.

The first piece of land entered in the town was August 11, 1852, by Jacob Jacobia, the east half of the southwest quarter of Section 26, Township 13, Range 8; the next was on August 28, by William McDonald, the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter of Section 23; the third entry was by Henry Lintz, on August 29, the south half of the southeast quarter of Section 33; the fourth was by Jerry Devine, on the 30th of August, the north half of the northeast quarter of Section 24, and all in Township 13, Range 8.

Norwegian Evangelical Lutheran Church, by Portage.—This church was organized in 1851, by Rev. H. A. Preus, with about fifteen families. Mr. Preus was called to the pastorate, and served until 1865, when Rev. Sh. S. Regue was chosen, serving until 1872, when Rev. B. Hovde took charge of the work, remaining until 1879; Rev. E. J. Petersen was then called. A small church was erected in 1873, on the northeast quarter of Section 20. In 1879, there were twenty families connected with the congregation.

Methodist Episcopal Church.—A class was organized in the schoolhouse of District No. 2, in 1853, and a Sunday school shortly after. Meetings of the class and occasional preaching by ministers in charge of the circuit have since been held at the same place.

German Methodist Episcopal Church.—On Section 26, Township 13, Range 7, a German Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in 1858. A church house was erected in 1860, at a cost of $800. Regular services have since been held, and a large congregation formed.

German Evangelical Lutheran Church.—The Germans living in the west part of town erected a log house for religious purposes, in 1853, when a congregation was formed, bearing the above name.

In 1851, a post office was established, which was given the name of Beaver Creek, with E. F. Lewis as the first Postmaster. Mr. Lewis continued to serve until elected Sheriff in the fall of 1856, when he resigned in favor of Nelson Farrar. Mr. Farrar served as such two years, but, failing to forward his bond to the Post Office Department for approval, and failing, also, to account for government property in his possession, the office was discontinued. In 1868, it was re-established under the name of Lewiston, and E. F. Lewis was again placed in charge.

The old pinery road strikes the town on Section 36, Township 13, Range 8, leaving on the line between Sections 2 and 3, Township 13, Range 7. The new pinery road strikes the town on Section 24, Township 13, Range 8, and leaves it on Section 5. For many years, the old pinery road was the only thoroughfare between Fort Winnebago and the pineries at Grand Rapids.

In 1857, the La Crosse & Milwaukee, now the La Crosse Division, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, was built through the town, entering on Section 1, Township 12, Range 8, taking a northwesterly direction, passing out on Section 22, Township 13, Range 7. A station was located on Section 27, which was given the name Lewiston, and a post office established there by the name of Colburn.

E. F. Lewis, in 1872, commenced at his home in Lewiston the manufacture of ladies' and gents' underwear, an article which has given universal satisfaction, his trade yearly increasing. The goods, instead of being woven, are knit, and knit the double rib stitches, making them very elastic, and conforming closely to the form of the body and limbs. There is no shrinking or stretching, from wearing or washing, and fitting closely to the body, they admit of no currents of air next to the skin, thus preventing the chill one experiences on going out doors, or passing from a warm into a cold or damp room. In the winter of 1879, to this industry, Mr. Lewis added that of knitting socks by hand, thus furnishing employment to many deserving poor of his neighborhood. From using about one hundred pounds the first year, the amount was increased to over two thousand pounds in 1879.

In Township 13, Range 8, the general altitude is about two hundred and thirty to two hundred and fifty feet, but on the eastern and northern sides are sandstone bluffs, running up one hundred to two hundred feet higher. This town is watered entirely by the branches of a tributary of the Fox, Neenah Creek, or the "Big Slough," which trends within half a mile of the Wisconsin, on Section 33. Beginning in Township 13, Range 6 (town of Newport), and Township 13, Range 7, the ground rises rapidly toward the north and west. On the west side of this town, and extending into Newport (Township 13, Range 7), is a tamarack marsh four miles across from north to south, and three from east to west.

There are no villages in the town, but two post offices—Lewiston and Colburn. The last is at Lewiston station, on Section 27, on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad.

The following comprises the town officers from 1853 to the present time:

1853—Samuel A. Reader, Chairman; William Clark, Frederick Martin, Supervisors; L. C. Jacobs, Clerk; Riley Woodford, Treasurer; William Finnegan, Assessor.

1854—E. F. Lewis, Chairman; A. Barmore, James Devine, Supervisors; Peter O'Meara, Clerk; Riley A. Woodford, Treasurer; G. C. Snider, Joseph Hess, Assessors. Peter O'Meara resigned. G. M. W. Carey appointed November 8, 1854.

1855—Jacob Jacobia, Chairman; John A. Gund, Francis Dane, Supervisors; William Finnegan, Clerk; M. B. Easting, Treasurer; James Devine, Assessor. William Finnegan resigned. James Devine appointed November 8, 1855.

1856—John Ewing, Chairman; Mons Johnson, Alfred West, Supervisors; E. F. Lewis, Clerk; L. V. Rich, Treasurer; O. P. Johnson, Assessor. E. F. Lewis resigned November 4, 1856. L. C. Jacobs appointed.

1857—Samuel A. Reader, Chairman; Lars Isaacson, A. A. West, Supervisors; L. C. Jacobs, Clerk; Riley A. Woodford, Treasurer; E. Corning, Assessor.

1858—Peg Thomas, Chairman; John A. Gund, Michael Colman, Supervisors; James Devine, Clerk; Oscar F. Robins, Treasurer; E. B. Craig, Assessor.

1859—James Devine, Chairman; Andrew Jertson, A. A. West, Supervisors; William K. Harvey, Treasurer; S. V. Hanft, Thomas Norton, Assessors.

1860—James Devine, Chairman; Alfred A. West, Lars Isaacson, Supervisors; W. K. Harvey, Treasurer; S. V. Hanft, Clerk; Joseph Bannister, Assessor.

1861—L. D. Dean, Chairman; A. A. West, Albert Scharf, Supervisors; William McDonald, Treasurer; G. M. W. Carey, Clerk; J. W. Treadway, Assessor.

1862—James Devine, Chairman; Andrew Jertson, Theodore Eickholt, Supervisors; Joseph Clark, Clerk; E. B. Craig, Treasurer; S. V. Hanft, Assessor. S. V. Hanft resigned. James Devine appointed August 10, 1862. Joseph Clark resigned January 27, 1863.

Andrew Peterson appointed February 2, 1863; resigned February 28, 1863, and Joseph Murphy appointed Clerk.

1863—James Devine, Chairman; Theodore Eickholt, Andrew Jertson, Supervisors; G. M. W. Carey, Clerk; E. B. Craig, Treasurer; Albert Scharf, Assessor.

1864—E. B. Craig, Chairman; Andrew Jertson, Fred Klein, Supervisors; Albert Scharf, Clerk; James Devine, Treasurer; Theodore Eickholt, Assessor. Albert Scharf resigned. Thomas McFarlane appointed April 21, 1864. G. M. W. Carey appointed Clerk, September 7, 1864, in place of Thomas McFarlane, gone to the war. Thomas Norton appointed Side Supervisor, in place of Andrew Jertson, October 5, 1864, gone to the war. B. H. Wilmsen appointed Treasurer, December 28, 1864, in place of James Devine, having removed from town.

1865—E. B. Craig, Chairman; Lars Isaacson, Thomas Norton, Supervisors; G. M. W. Carey, Clerk; B. H. Wilmsen, Treasurer; Fred Klein, Assessor. Fred Klein did not qualify. G. M. W. Carey appointed May 29, 1865, in place of Fred Klein.

1866—E. Corning, Chairman; S. Cushman, Lars Isaacson, Supervisors; F. O. Barney, Clerk; M. W. Smith, Treasurer; William McDonald, Assessor. F. O. Barney did not qualify. E. F. Lewis appointed Clerk, April 11, 1866. E. Corning resigned January 7, 1867, B. B. Utter appointed in his place. E. F. Lewis being absent from town, G. M. W. Carey appointed to fill vacancy January 11, 1867.

1867—M. W. Smith, Chairman; William McDonald, Hilarius Ehr, Supervisors; Jacob Thielen, Clerk; Herman Brane, Treasurer; B. H. Wilmsen, Assessor. B. H. Wilmsen refused to accept the office as Assessor. E. Corning appointed Assessor.

1868—M. W. Smith, Chairman; Fred Siewert, Andrew Jertson, Supervisors; Jacob Thielen, Clerk; Herman Brane, Treasurer; Albert Scharf, Assessor. M. W. Smith resigned October 3, 1868; E. F. Lewis, appointed. E. F. Lewis resigned January 29, 1869; John Ewing appointed Chairman.

1869—William McDonald, Chairman; Fred Siewert, Andrew Isaacson, Supervisors; G. M. W. Carey, Clerk; John Ewing, Treasurer; Jacob Thielen, Assessor.

1870—E. F. Lewis, Chairman; Andrew Isaacson, Mathias Wagner, Supervisors; B. H. Wilmsen, Clerk; Albert Scharf, Treasurer; Herman Brane, Assessor.

1871—E. B. Craig, Chairman; August Kaufmann, E. R. Brown, Supervisors; B. H. Wilmsen, Clerk; Hermann Brane, Treasurer; Albert Scharf, Assessor.

1872—Albert Scharf, Chairman; Ole M. Bendixson, Pierce Joyce, Supervisors; E. F. Lewis, Clerk; Sven Isaacson, Treasurer; Hermann Brane, Assessor.

1873—Albert Scharf, Chairman; Ole M. Bendixson, James Clark, Supervisors; E. F. Lewis, Clerk; Peter Tennesson, Treasurer; Hermann Brane, Assessor.

1874—Albert Scharf, Chairman; Fred Malish, Pierce Joyce, Supervisors; B. H. Wilmsen, Clerk; Peter Tennesson, Treasurer; Hermann Brane, Assessor.

1875—Albert Scharf, Chairman; Pierce Joyce, Fred Malish, Supervisors; B. H. Wilmsen, Clerk; Patrick H. McMahon, Treasurer; Joseph Murphy, Assessor.

1876—Peter Tennesson, Chairman; H. Ehr, Volney P. Dean, Supervisors; E. F. Lewis, Clerk; Ludwig Wagner, Treasurer; Gottlieb Windus, Assessor.

1877—Albert Scharf, Chairman; Volney P. Dean, Ludwig Wagner, Supervisors; Dennis Leary, Clerk; Fred Malish, Treasurer; E. B. Craig, Assessor.

1878—John H. Clark, Chairman; Sievert Christian, William Mews, Supervisors; B. H. Wilmsen, Clerk; Andrew Jertson, Treasurer; E. B. Craig, Assessor.

1879—John H. Clark, Chairman; Pierce Joyce, Andrew Isaacson, Supervisors; B. H. Wilmsen, Clerk; Ole M. Bendixson, Treasurer; Volney P. Dean, Assessor.

1880—John H. Clark, Chairman; Andrew Isaacson, August Kaufmann, Supervisors; B. H. Wilmsen, Clerk; Ole M. Bendixson, Treasurer; Frederick Malish, Assessor.

TOWN OF LODI.

In the spring of 1844, G. M. Bartholomew, then a citizen of Illinois, being advised by his physician to seek a better climate than that State afforded, visited Lodi Valley and determined that either here or in Portage Prairie he would in the future reside. Returning to Illinois, his description of Lodi Valley so charmed his brother, Marston C. Bartholomew, that the latter determined also to emigrate: therefore in the early spring of 1845, he bade farewell to his family and sought out the "land of promise." He arrived here in March, located a claim and erected, with the aid of a friendly Indian, his cabin upon the east half of the southwest quarter of Section 22. George M., the brother, came back in April, 1845, and selected the southeast quarter of Section 22. In May of the same year came Rev. H. Maynard, who settled upon Section 21. Mr. Maynard brought with him his family, his wife being the first white woman in the valley. In September, the two Bartholomews brought their families out, and in December following, James McCloud came and settled upon Section 27. These four were all the settlers in this town during that year.

In the spring of 1846 came Isaac H. Palmer, with the intention of locating a new village. He, too, settled upon Section 27, and in April of that year erected a saw-mill, the first in the town. During that year there also settled here Adam and Nathan Bowman, Joseph Brown, Jacob Hurley, Amos and Jehu Stroud, Aaron Chalfant, William G. Simons, G. T. Simons, Johnson Sowards, John Chance and Simeon Ryder. In 1847 came T. S. Wells, John Foote, H. M. Ayer, Ira Polley, Alonzo Waterbury and Peter Froland.

When the first settlers came, in 1845, they found about two hundred Indians encamped on the creek, near where the village of Lodi was afterward located. These were mostly Winnebagoes: a few were Brothertowns. During that season, they were peaceable and friendly, and in the fall they all disappeared. In 1847, they came back to the number of about eighty, with their chief, and encamped on the creek below where the Bartholomews had settled. They soon began to show their natural propensities, and the property of the settlers occasionally disappeared. One of the settlers, G. M. Bartholomew, returned to his home, after an absence of a few days, and found the Indians had stolen a part of his hogs. He went to the chief and complained. The chief denied, but the complainant insisted, and resolutely told Mr. Chief that he could have till the next morning when the sun was "so high," telling him how high by pointing, to be off. The chief promised to be off at once and to go to the "Milwaukee woods." Thereupon, Bartholomew roused the settlers to the number of about twenty-five, and the next morning, when the sun was "so high," they appeared at the spot "with horse and gun," but the Indians had left. Fearing they might again camp near enough to continue their depredations, our cavalry followed their trail, and found them just striking their tents on Rowan's Creek, in the town of Dekorra. As the settlers approached the camping ground, they were discovered by two hunters, who were apparently going out to bring in some game, who, seeing the fearful array and fearing more to follow, turned their ponies and rapidly returned. The pursuers halted and Bartholomew went forward to the camping ground and inquired if this were "Milwaukee woods." The chief answered "No:" whereupon he was informed he could have just five minutes in which to make his departure. At the expiration of the time named, the redskins were on the move. The pursuers followed at a respectful and effective distance, as far as Poynette, or where the village was subsequently located, and then returned to their homes. The Indians never reappeared to make further trouble.

Notwithstanding no more trouble was experienced, the settlers were continually on the alert, and on one occasion were considerably frightened by the report that a large body of Indians were marching on the settlement. It appears that one evening as one of the early settlers was busy doing up his chores, his strong frame was made to tremble at the sight of several hundred redskins, who had made their appearance on the prairie not half a mile distant. He could plainly see they were marching in solid ranks on the beautiful village of Lodi, and that something must be done at once, or every settler in the vicinity would fall a victim to the merciless sons of the forest. Accordingly he quickly loaded his family into a wagon and hastened to the village and spread the news. Then there was hurrying to and fro, and every man's team was brought into requisition to convey the women and children to places of safety, while the stronger sex, save those with the teams, were armed with muskets, rifles, shotguns, pistols and bowie-knives, and forming into ranks marched to the brow of the hill, on the south side of the village for the purpose of meeting the enemy in open engagement. The brow of the hill was reached, and it was discovered that the Indians had halted and turned their ponies loose to graze on the prairies. Then a little reconnoitering was done, and it was ascertained the savages had suddenly been transformed into a herd of cattle!

In the summer of 1846 the first marriage occurred, being that of H. W. Kingsbury and Miss Nancy Chalfant. They were married by Henry Carpenter, Esq., of Portage City.

The first sad affair that cast a gloom of sorrow over the settlers of Lodi Valley, and called them together in mourning, was the announcement of the death of Mr. Chalfant's son, aged about two years, who died in November, 1846.

The first white person born in the town was Josephine, daughter of G. M. and Catherine Bartholomew, April 30, 1846. She grew to womanhood in the vicinity and within the village of Lodi, and was married to William H. Chapin, October 29, 1866.

On the organization of the county in 1846, the County Commissioners ordained that the west half of Township 10, Range 9, Township 10, Range 8, and the Fractional Township 10, Range 7, should comprise a precinct to be known by the name of Pleasant Valley Precinct. Marston C. Bartholomew, Aaron Chalfant and H. Maynard were appointed Judges of Elections, which were to be held at the house of Marston C. Bartholomew. The same boundary lines were retained on the organization of the town, January, 1849.

The first election for town officers was held at the log schoolhouse, about one-fourth mile northeast of the village of Lodi, April 3, 1849. The legal voters assembled at the schoolhouse at 10 o'clock A. M., and were called to order by Isaac H. Palmer. On motion of Mr. Palmer, George M. Bartholomew was chosen Moderator, and James O. Eaton, Clerk. The hotel of Freedom Simons, in the village of Lodi, was chosen as the place for holding the next annual meeting, and one hundred dollars was voted to be raised by taxation to defray the expenses of the town for the year. Marston C. Bartholomew was elected Chairman of the Board of Supervisors: William H. McIntosh and Ira Polly, Supervisors: James O. Eaton, Clerk: William G. Simons, Assessor: Timothy S. Wells, Treasurer: John Foote, Superintendent of Schools: James McCloud, Horace M. Ayer, Lester Ray, Constables: John Slown, Aaron Chalfant, Simeon Ryder, James Thomas, Justices of the Peace. Those voting at this election were Isaac H. Palmer, Robert Hopkins, Samuel B. Farrington, Lewis Baldwin, Lester Ray, James Thomas, O. A. Kilburn, George Lyman, W. E. Cathcart, Joseph B. Hopkins, James Thomas, Jr., Leander Drew, Timothy S. Wells, Jacob Dawson, William G. Simons, Simeon Ryder, John Foote, Reuben Ring, Nathan Bowman, Samuel Ring, Jacob Hurley, G. M. Bartholomew, J. O. Eaton, John Slown, H. M. Ayer, Johnson Soward, James McCloud, Joseph Brown, M. C. Bartholomew, Moses Chase, Freedom Simons, William H. McIntosh, J. B. Tabor, Aaron Chalfant, William B. Partridge, Silas Ryder, Joseph Stretch. Total, 37. Of these there were still living in the town, in March, 1880, Isaac H. Palmer, Timothy S. Wells, William G. Simons, John Foote, G. M. Bartholomew, J. O. Eaton, H. M. Ayer, James McCloud, Joseph Brown, M. C. Bartholomew, Freedom Simons, William H. McIntosh and J. B. Tabor. Total, 13.

The first school was taught in a house erected in 1846, on Section 27. The building was a small log house, and the school was taught in the summer of that year by Miss Mary Yockey. The next schoolhouse was a frame building, erected in 1851, also on Section 27. Mrs. S. J. Andrews in the Lodi Journal, July 21, 1872, thus speaks of the old log schoolhouse: "That primitive institution of learning, which contained no desk but a board fastened at a convenient height, for the purpose, against the wall, or rather logs, seats of the plainest kind, with no backs, and a floor through the crevices of which snakes and mice often emerged to our delight, was situated upon the rise of ground, then shaded by lofty wide-spreading oaks, near where Mrs.

Bower's house now stands. And the boiling, bubbling springs at the foot of the hill, the leafy coverts so admirably arranged for miniature housekeeping—and other considerations, drew the round-eyed, wriggling pupils, full many a time, from the sight of the not too vigilant school-mistress, under cover of the weak subterfuge of studying in the shade. I think I see them now, gay gamboliers in verdant summer bowers, their rippling laughs and gleeful shouts sounding strangely far off and echo-like adown the corridors of time. Play on, blindfolded children, types of innocency and thoughtlessness, for just before you on life's journey are tears and open graves, thorns that will tear your tender feet, and icy-wind storms that may blast, or cover with perpetual snow, the fragile buds of promise in the gardens of your hearts. Or, if your steps grow laggard from weariness, go in to your indulgent teacher and eon your right-soon forgotten tasks. There are lessons for you in the future of distrust and indifference, which contact with a world without a heart must teach. They will be bitter oftimes, and you cannot forget them, though you would."

The first entry of land was the northwest quarter of Section 20. E. Hale purchased and patented June 21, 1836. I. H. Palmer made three of the first entries by an actual settler, being a portion of Section 27, on which he laid out the village of Lodi.

The town of Lodi is skirted on the south and east by the edges of the high limestone country. North and west of this edge, which is ragged, sending out irregular projecting points, the general surface is 200 to 300 feet lower, but this lowland includes a number of limestone-capped outliers, some of which have an area of several square miles, and reach as great altitudes as attained by the limestone country to the south and east—that is, 500 to 600 feet. Considerable areas of prairie occur in southern and eastern Lodi. The principal stream is Spring Creek, which, heading in the towns to the southward, traverses Lodi from south to north with a fall of some sixty feet. Along its valley the county, though well down in the sandstone, shows a rich alluvial soil. A little marsh occurs along Spring Creek.

The Chicago & Northwestern Railroad was built through the town in 1871, passing through Sections 8, 17, 16, 21, 27 and 34. Two villages have been laid out, Lodi on Section 27, and Okee on Section 8.

During the four years' struggle for national existence, the part performed by Lodi was such as will illustrate the character and patriotism of her people. The call was no sooner made by the President than many of her brave sons responded. Company H of the Second Regiment, Capt. Randolph (the first company entering the United States service), was largely made up from this town.

From June, 1861, to November, 1863, there went out 120 men represented in seventeen regiments. Of these were G. H. Irwin, Company G, Second Wisconsin Volunteers; William L. Black, J. R. Bryan, T. D. Bahn, F. J. Burnett, D. C. Edwards, Stephen Fauss, Jehu Grover, G. M. Humphrey, O. S. Hawkins, D. C. Holdridge, Thomas Knutesen, Jonathan Kirk, Edward Louie, William McIntosh, Thomas Murphy, Charles W. Moon, B. F. Stahl, W. F. Turner, H. H. Titus, Sidney Wells, J. G. D. Wall, Charles Eriksen, James Osborn, J. D. Lyman, Alfred Armor, Fifth Regiment; M. C. Bartholomew, Joseph M. Bartholomew, John Bartholomew, Samuel Baehman.

Company A, Seventh Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry (second company raised), Capt. George Bill—Henry Barney, T. J. Buchanan, Michael Burke, William Chalfant, Edward Chalfant, Ebin B. Dunlap, John Grant, Alexander Hall, E. B. Hines, John Jorgesen, Samuel J. Osborne, Lucius Phinney, Philander Phinney, George D. Phinney, John Quinn, John Small, Thomas Twett, Henry T. Turner, James Morrison, Joseph M. Ring, S. J. Morrow, Stephen D. Duel, William D. H. Rood, Silas C. Casper, Horace A. Foster, Ole Aufresen, Marcus Johnson, Henry Nolf, Stephen H. Ward, M. Landers, Daniel Leitch, Hiram Brown, Joseph Brown.

Company H, Twenty-third Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry (third company raised), Capt. E. Howard Irwin—Samuel Holdridge, Thomas C. Armor, Joseph M. Bartholomew, A. W. Baker, J. Cornelius Brown, Henry A. Bates, H. L. Baneraft, A. S. Burlingame, Charles L. Brown, Thomas Bunker, Simon Cleland, John Cavanaugh, Joseph R.

Collin, Joseph Church, Cornelius Dever, Thomas J. Dowden, Joseph R. Eells, F. A. G. Eaton, Thomas Farber, E. Howard Irwin, G. W. Kingsley, A. J. Kyle, H. C. Lockwood, John Lawrence, James Pettit, George Phinney, Anthony Phillips, James Quinn, Leroy Riddle, William Ring, Ransom P. Ray, G. E. Reynolds, J. F. Stahl, C. F. Stacker, John Sweet, John R. Scott, Seth B. Tannahill, Thomas Townsend, L. F. Warner, Leander Wells, Thomas Yule, George Van Lone, W. W. Hurd, Robert Travis, William Travis, Thoms Anfreson, Ed. Moore, J. C. Stahl, T. R. Cross, G. W. Barney, W. H. Dowden, G. T. Hill, J. B. Rogers, Isaiah Van Brocklin, Trueman Piper, Edwin Chapman. Of this number, November, 1863, seventeen had died in the service of their country—eight were killed in battle and nine died of disease. Twenty-two others had been wounded, and twenty-five discharged in consequence of wounds or disease. At this time Lodi had furnished one in eleven and a half of her entire population. The quota of the town under all calls was eighty-four, therefore an excess of thirty-six had gone out to battle. Says a writer in a local paper at that time: "Had we been able to have procured credit for our excess, we would not only have been clear of the late draft, but we would also have had more than enough to clear us from the next 300,000. Had the whole State done as well as we have here, she would have sent 67,650 men to the war. Had New York done as well she would have sent 340,000. Had the loyal States all done as well, counting only 50 per cent of the population of the border States, we could have had an army all told, of 1,900,000 men; and we would have in the field, to-day, an army of 1,235,000 effective men. Lodi has had her representatives on many of the most fiercely contested battle-fields of the war. The first Bull Run was witness to the valor of her sons, and Gettysburg was the crowning glory of many noble deeds. It is no slight honor that fifty of our townsmen are, or have been, connected with the Old Iron Brigade. Not at the East alone, have our brethren displayed their heroism. Nothing could have required greater self-denial than what our boys were obliged to endure before and during the siege of Vicksburg. But without a murmur they bore it all for the good of the cause."

While the soldier boys were in the field, the loyal men and women at home were not idle. A large Union League Club was formed in the village of Lodi March 7, 1863, for the purpose of aiding and assisting the Government in its efforts to crush out treason and rebellion. Also at Okee, on the evening of March 17, 1863, a similar club was organized. The call of the Government the latter part of 1863 became very urgent, and to encourage enlistments a large fund was raised, by private subscription, to pay each volunteer from the town the sum of $200. In response to the call then made, J. G. Knappen, Frederick Richard, Charles F. Greenman, John F. Hair, Lucius A. Crosier, Norman Cutler, Cyrus Casper, Joseph Charles, George Phinney, George Donaldson, George Evans, Henry O'Connor, Francis Cole and Henry Dunning were sworn into the service.

At a town meeting, held Tuesday, August 2, 1864, a tax of $4,000 was voted to procure volunteers. On Friday, August 19, another meeting was held, and it was voted to pay each volunteer $200 each, and an additional tax of $3,500 was levied. About this time, G. M. Humphrey began to raise a company, which was soon completed, consisting of 84 men. This was the fourth company raised and was known as Company C, Forty-second Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, Captain, G. M. Humphrey; First Lieutenant, Robert Steele; Second Lieutenant, C. M. Bush. Sergeants—Lewis Lyman, Thomas Baltuff, Charles Early, Charles Pigg, H. A. Shaw. Corporals—Frank Church, W. Ryder, J. Chase, G. Keebaugh, A. Chrisler, P. V. M. Pools, M. Cooper, E. Riley. Musicians—E. Richmond, J. B. Quiggle, H. Barnes, H. S. Northrop, D. L. Richmond, G. Davis. Privates—J. Avery, R. H. Brown, A. Bitney, L. J. Burlingame, R. A. Burlingame, J. Burrows, H. D. Crosby, J. W. Chrisler, W. E. Curtis, S. Clements, J. Cole, J. Donalds, M. Donahue, N. C. Densmore, J. Evans, W. Edwards, H. A. Foster, W. D. S. Gardner, H. D. Gamsby, E. Gardner, W. M. Groton, B. Haskins, L. I. Hinds, W. H. Hartson, S. K. Hovey, J. Johnson, H. J. Jenkins, J. Jermore, H. Koch, D. Koch, W. Keebaugh, J. Kuster, J. Lewis, S. M. Lewis, E. Luse, W. Lyman, H. S. Laub, William Lang, L. McIntyre, G. Mortor, J. McFarland, J. Pagler, P. Proper, C. T. Potter,

C. Ring, J. R. Scott, O. P. Stephens, A. E. Stephens, S. L. Scofield, J. Starkson, J. P. Staring, F. Shultz, N. D. Spery, C. L. Stodard, G. T. Thompson, H. L. Turner, H. J. Wall, J. Woodley, S. C. Washburn, O. P. Williams, W. S. West, D. York.

The ladies of the village of Lodi and vicinity formed a Soldiers' Aid Society, November 2, 1864, and Mrs. W. M. Bartholomew was elected President; Mrs. E. B. Wait, Vice-President; Miss M. A. Lewis, Secretary; Miss M. A. Palmer, Treasurer; Mrs. D. Hinds, Mrs. Humphrey, Miss M. Farrell, Mrs. H. Cass, Mrs. J. N. Lewis, Directors. The society rendered much aid to the sick and wounded soldiers.

In 1864, the fifth company was raised; this was known as Company C, Fiftieth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, Capt. Philander Phinney. In this company, there were from Lodi Frank E. Austin, Joseph M. Bartholomew, John Buchanan, William Cross, Henry Daws, Lewis E. Harris, Anthony Kibbe, John R. Knoles, Charles W. Narracong, Philander Phinney, James W. Rathbun, Henry Schlosser, Edward Beynow and Ira A. Sadders.

OLD SETTLERS' ASSOCIATION.

Pursuant to call the old settlers of Lodi and vicinity met at Eaton's Hall on Monday evening, March 22, 1880, for the purpose of organizing an "Old Settlers' Society." G. M. Bartholomew was chosen Chairman and John Foote, Secretary. On behalf of a committee appointed at a previous meeting, J. O. Eaton presented a draft of a constitution for such a society, which was read, and, on motion, adopted and signed by most of the early settlers present. The following persons were then chosen permanent officers of the society: President, G. M. Bartholomew; Vice Presidents, James Wilson and J. O. Eaton; Secretary, John Foote; Treasurer, J. B. Dwinell.

CONSTITUTION.

WHEREAS, It has become customary in all well-regulated communities, to form associations of the early settlers, therefore, the undersigned, residents of Lodi and vicinity, do hereby unite in such an organization and adopt the following constitution:

ARTICLE I.—This Association shall be known as the Old Settlers' Club of Lodi, Wisconsin.

ART. II.—Its object shall be to encourage friendship, by holding a social meeting at least once in each year, and to place on record incidents that heretofore have, or hereafter may occur, which will be of interest to future generations.

ART. III.—The officers of this Club shall consist of a President, Two Vice Presidents, a Secretary and Treasurer, who shall hold their offices for one year and until their successors are chosen.

ART. IV.—The officers of the Club shall be chosen by ballot.

ART. V.—The officers of this Club shall perform the duties usually appertaining to their respective offices, to call all meetings of the Club, and the Secretary, in addition to the usual duties of his office, shall record any incident worthy of record, that may be related by any member of the Club, at a regular meeting thereof.

ART. VI.—Any person who, at the time of signing, has resided in the vicinity of Lodi, Wisconsin, for the term of twenty years, may become a member of this Club on the payment of twenty-five cents and signing this constitution.

ART. VII.—This constitution may be amended at any regular meeting of the Club, by a vote of a majority of the members present.

At the first meeting, the constitution was signed, with the date of their arrival in the vicinity of Lodi, by G. M. Bartholomew, April, 1845; W. G. Simons, July, 1847; Freedom Simons, October, 1842; James Wilson, July 14, 1842; Robert Wilson, July 14, 1842; James Crowder, January, 1845; Robert N. Bartholomew, June, 1845; John Foote, June, 1846; W. Dunlap, 1846; James H. Strangeway, 1848; John B. Tabor, 1847; Edgar Richmond, 1856; Henry W. Clugston, 1858; W. M. Bartholomew, 1849; J. O. Eaton, 1848; J. B.

Dwinnell, 1850; William Goldspohn, 1850; George F. Clemans, 1852; George T. Simons, 1846.

The following comprises the town officers from the organization of the town to the present time:

1849—Marston C. Bartholomew, Chairman; William H. McIntosh, Ira Polley, Supervisors; James O. Eaton, Clerk; Timothy S. Wells, Treasurer; William G. Simons, Assessor; John Foote, School Superintendent.

1850—Marston C. Bartholomew, Chairman; William H. McIntosh, William G. Simons, Supervisors; Earl C. Tuller, Clerk; William M. Bartholomew, Treasurer; George M. Bartholomew, Assessor; William M. Bartholomew, School Superintendent.

1851—George M. Bartholomew, Chairman; James McCloud, William B. Partridge, Supervisors; John Foote, Clerk; L. D. Barnes, Treasurer; Robert Hopkins, Assessor; William M. Bartholomew, School Superintendent.

1852—G. M. Bartholomew, Chairman; W. G. Simons, William Rogers, Supervisors; John Foote, Clerk; T. S. Wells, Treasurer; William H. McIntosh, Assessor; Jeremy Bradley, School Superintendent.

1853—W. G. Simons, Chairman; Jacob Herley, Herman Veeder, Supervisors; James Barnes, Clerk; John Foote, Treasurer; Nathaniel Goodall, Assessor; John B. Dwinnell, School Superintendent.

1854—William H. McIntosh, Chairman; Jacob Herley, Robert Hopkins, Supervisors; George Frissell, Clerk; John Foote, Treasurer; G. T. Long, Nathaniel Goodall, Assessors; J. B. Dwinnell, School Superintendent.

1855—M. C. Bartholomew, Chairman; William H. McIntosh, Robert Hopkins, Supervisors; George Frissell, Clerk; W. G. Simons, Treasurer; N. Goodall, James Barnes, Assessors; John Foote, School Superintendent.

1856—John B. Dwinnell, Chairman; Stephen Lewis, Aratus Bailey, Supervisors; G. C. Cleghorn, Clerk; William Dunlap, Treasurer; Edward Nichols, Assessor; John A. Young, School Superintendent.

1857—W. G. Simons, Chairman; Adam Shoneberger, W. H. McIntosh, Supervisors; G. C. Cleghorn, Clerk; W. B. Partridge, Treasurer; W. L. Wells, Assessor; Edward Nichols, School Superintendent.

1858—John B. Dwinnell, Chairman; S. B. Thomas, W. H. McIntosh, Supervisors; Alpheus W. Baker, Clerk; W. B. Partridge, Treasurer; John Foote, Assessor; Edward Nichols, School Superintendent.

1859—W. N. Baker, Chairman; Darius Kingsley, Sylvester Reynolds, Supervisors; Alpheus W. Baker, Clerk; William B. Partridge, Treasurer; John Foote, William L. Wells, Assessors; John A. Young, School Superintendent.

1860—W. N. Baker, Chairman; Darius Kingsley, Sylvester Reynolds, Supervisors; Edward Nichols, Clerk; William B. Partridge, Treasurer; John Foote, William L. Wells, Assessors; John A. Young, School Superintendent.

1861—W. N. Baker, Chairman; A. Burlingame, Danford Pratt, Supervisors; Edward Nichols, Clerk; William B. Partridge, Treasurer; M. C. Bartholomew, Assessor; Miles G. Todd, School Superintendent.

1862—William Dunlap, Chairman; D. Pratt, Thomas Albiston, Supervisors; A. W. Baker, Clerk; William B. Partridge, Treasurer; Joel Pruyn, Assessor.

1863—John B. Dwinell, Chairman; Pliny H. Gunnison, Job Collin, Supervisors; Henry L. Bancroft, Clerk; Thomas Yule, Treasurer; Sylvester Reynolds, Edward Nichols, Assessors.

1864—Jonas Narracong, Chairman; Joel Pruyn, Danford Pratt, Supervisors; H. L. Bancroft, Clerk; Thomas Yule, Treasurer; W. M. Bartholomew, Assessor.

1865—William Dunlap, Chairman; J. C. Mosher, Danford Pratt, Supervisors; H. L. Bancroft, Clerk; Thomas Yule, Treasurer; W. M. Bartholomew, E. Nichols, Assessors.

1866—J. Narracong, Chairman; Danford Pratt, W. M. Bartholomew, Supervisors; Edward Nichols, Clerk; Thomas Yule, Treasurer; W. L. Wells, Assessor.

1867—William M. Bartholomew, Chairman: W. G. Simons, William Dunlap, Supervisors: T. D. Bahn, Clerk: Robert Travis, Treasurer: J. B. Dwinell, J. C. Mosher, Assessors.

1868—Joel Pruyn, Chairman: James Wilson, Aaron Burlingame, Supervisors: Theodore D. Bahn, Clerk: R. S. Travis, Treasurer: W. L. Wells, H. N. Cowen, William H. McIntosh, Assessors.

1869—Joel Pruyn, Chairman: William H. McIntosh, Daniel Rickelson, Supervisors; T. D. Bahn, Clerk; H. Burroughs, Treasurer; W. L. Wells, Assessor.

1870—Joel Pruyn, Chairman: James Wilson, M. C. Bartholomew, Supervisors; H. L. Baucroft, Clerk; Hiram Burroughs, Treasurer; W. L. Wells, Assessor.

1871—Joel Pruyn, Chairman: James Wilson, Samuel Stahl, Supervisors; E. W. Gardner, Clerk; Hiram Burroughs, Treasurer; W. L. Wells, Assessor.

1872—Addison Eaton, Chairman: James Wilson, John B. Dwinell, Supervisors; Horace M. Ayer, Clerk; Henry L. Bancroft, Treasurer; John Foote, Assessor.

1873—Addison Eaton, Chairman: James Wilson, William L. Wells, Supervisors; J. M. Bartholomew, Clerk; H. L. Bancroft, Treasurer; John B. Dwinell, H. M. Ayer, Assessors.

1874—Addison Eaton, Chairman: P. S. Kingsley, Charles Goodall, Supervisors; H. M. Ayer, Clerk; Henry L. Bancroft, Treasurer; W. M. Bartholomew, Assessor.

1875—James Wilson, Jr., Chairman: Charles Goodall, Aaron Burlingame, Supervisors; H. M. Ayer, Clerk; John Yule, Treasurer; W. M. Bartholomew, Assessor.

1876—James Wilson, Jr., Chairman: Charles Goodall, Aaron Burlingame, Supervisors; H. M. Ayer, Clerk; John Yule, Treasurer; W. M. Bartholomew, Assessor.

1877—James Wilson, Jr., Chairman: Charles Goodall, Danford Pratt, Supervisors; J. M. Bartholomew, Clerk; Orrin Rice, Treasurer; W. M. Bartholomew, Assessor.

1878—Charles Goodall, Chairman: Danford Pratt, Sylvester Reynolds, Supervisors; J. M. Bartholomew, Clerk; R. W. Mills, Treasurer; W. M. Bartholomew, Assessor.

1879—Charles Goodall, Chairman: Danford Pratt, John Brownrigg, Supervisors; J. M. Bartholomew, Clerk; John Yule, Treasurer; John Foote, Assessor.

1880—James Wilson, Chairman: Danford Pratt, John Brownrigg, Supervisors; J. M. Bartholomew, Clerk; E. W. Gardner, Treasurer; W. M. Bartholomew, Assessor.

VILLAGE OF LODI.

In the summer of 1845, Isaac H. Palmer made a trip through the southwest portion of Columbia County in search of a suitable place on which to locate, and where he could, in time, be surrounded by a thriving village. He found the greater part of the choice Government land had been taken up by speculators, but Section 27, Township 10, Range 8, was yet subject to entry, and there being a fine water-power, he determined here to set his stakes. On the 6th day of February, 1846, at the land office in Mineral Point, he entered the southwest quarter of the southeast quarter of this section, and on the 17th day of March, 1846, he entered the southeast quarter of the southeast quarter. On the 2d day of April, 1846, he entered, in the name of G. D. Palmer, the northeast quarter of the southeast quarter. He also entered the northwest quarter of the southeast quarter, August 12, 1847, which he transferred to James McCloud, who had built a house upon the same some time previous. Again, on the 14th day of February, 1848, he entered the southeast quarter of the northeast quarter, making a total of five quarters, four of which he retained for his own use, and upon a portion of which he afterward laid out the village.

About the 1st of April, 1846, Mr. Palmer came and at once commenced getting out timber for a saw-mill, and preparing to erect a log house for his family. The saw-mill was completed and in running order by fall; the house was ready for occupancy, and his family moved in June of the same year, being the first actual settler within what was afterward made the village limits.

Hugh Jamieson

POYNETTE.

In the year 1847, Mr. Palmer, ambitiously intent on developing the resources of the place, and informing the outside world of its existence, applied to the Government for an established mail route through here, and also submitted to the Legislature a memorial praying for ferry accommodations on the Wisconsin River. Both petitions were granted. A charter was obtained for Chester Matson for a ferry on Section 1. This was indispensable, on account of a much-needed road from Madison to Baraboo, by way of Lodi.

The post office was established, and I. H. Palmer appointed Postmaster, his commission dating April 17, 1848, the office being opened in July following. Until he obtained a mail-bag, Mr. Palmer carried the mail from Clark's Corners in his hat, delivering the same at the residence of those for whom it was intended. The second quarter, E. C. Tuller was employed to carry the mail, Mr. Palmer agreeing to make up the amount of his wages over postage received during the time he was employed. The total receipts of the office for the first quarter was $1.62; second quarter, $3.24; third quarter, $6.59. In April, 1849, Mr. Palmer resigned the office, and James O. Eaton appointed, and held the office until 1853, when H. M. Ayer was appointed, and held the office during the administrations of Pierce and Buchanan. On the election of Abraham Lincoln for the first term, a meeting was called by the Republican Town Committee of Lodi, to be held January 26, 1861, to express their choice for Postmaster. The meeting was accordingly held, and, on the first formal ballot, James O. Eaton received seventy-nine votes and William Merryman forty-eight. Mr. Eaton was accordingly recommended and duly commissioned. He held the office until 1867, and, having received an appointment in another and more lucrative position, he could not attend to the business of the office, and Robert Travis succeeded him, and continued till January, 1875, when H. R. Eaton was appointed. In 1868, the office was made a money-order office. The first order drawn was October 28, 1868, Duke W. Rogers, of Okee, remitter, and Joshua W. Rogers, payee, of Williamsport, for the sum of $50. Mr. Rogers also drew the second order, in favor of the same party, and for the sum of $45. The first order paid was December 21, 1868, to John B. Dwinnell, and drawn by Simeon Wood, Tomah, Wis. From October 28, 1868, to October 28, 1869, were issued 618 orders, amounting to $16,135.28, for which fees were paid amounting to $101.80. Amount of orders paid for the same period, $2,124.40. In 1879, were issued 2,661 orders, amounting to $35,175.74, on which fees were paid of $295.92. Number of order paid during the same time, 308, amounting to $5,016.92.

On the 25th day of June, 1848, the first plat of the village of Lodi was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, at Portage City, by I. H. Palmer, consisting of a part of the south-east quarter of Section 27. Various additions were afterward made, consisting of two by Mr. Palmer, three by James McCloud and one by John Foote. Inducements were held out by the original owner of the village plat to secure the settlement now of representatives of the various trades. A building was commenced by him in the fall designed for a store, and in November of that year, James O. Eaton came out, looked at the location, and an offer was made to him to open a stock of general merchandise in the building then being erected. Mr. Eaton told the proprietor that he would let him know within two weeks whether he would accept his offer. The time having expired without his receiving any information from Eaton, the building was let to Thomas & Pinney, a couple of young men then doing business at Hanchetville, Dane County. It was the fault of the mails that Palmer did not hear from Eaton, as the latter had sent a letter notifying him that he accepted his offer and would be there in a few days with a stock of goods. In coming to this place, Eaton passed through Hanchetville and there learned that Thomas & Pinney expected to occupy the building he supposed was intended for him. Mr. Pinney, learning Eaton's intention, a race was improvised by the two for Lodi, but the old proverb was here exemplified, "The more haste the less speed," and both got lost on a snow-covered prairie and were compelled to hire a cutter and ride into the village together. On referring the matter to Palmer, he decided the last contract was binding; that Thomas & Pinney were entitled to the house. As an inducement to Eaton to locate he offered him a choice of any unoccupied lot, which offer was accepted, and on Monday morning (it being Saturday night when they arrived), the building was commenced, and by Saturday night following it was completed and occupied by the owner. The formal opening of the store occurred Monday, December 18, 1848, but goods were sold the Saturday previous.

It must not be thought that Lodi could thrive without its village blacksmith-shop, therefore on Main street, on land given for that purpose, Reuben Ring built his shop in 1848. This Ring was a bachelor, and it would appear from tradition was an object of some solicitude from the fair matrons and maidens in the vicinity. Says an early writer: "The Smith with an endless name, although he had outgrown the verdancy of youth, failed to profit by the lessons of wisdom years should have taught him. He stole—stole the heart of, alas(s)!—Sophronia Bunker, and we suppose she stole likewise, for the two were fettered in the bonds of matrimony, being the first couple united in the village, thereby establishing a precedent which others were not slow to follow, for you know 'One sheep goes over the pasture wall, and others follow after.' They got married. Yea, and they were serenaded also. But how shall we describe that 'charivari'—that majestic inauguration of holiday occasions—where the combination of musical instruments displayed an uniqueness of design inimitable by ancient or modern Jubal; where swine, upon a slight pinch, gave protracting squeals, long, deep and dire, evincing a total lack of sympathy in the joyousness of the occasion; while poultry, cats, cow-bells, and rustic fiddles came on in the double chorus with a stupendous volume of sound, worthy to be a prelude to the Boston jubilee. Here I will say it was not at the wedding just referred to that the bridegroom treated the guests to small pieces of stick cinnamon each, though such an exhibition of generosity did actually once occur at a bridal scene. Ah, well, that was the day of small things, which we are recommended not to despise. And, doubtless, the delicate bark from that tree, whose aroma lades the breeze that blows soft o'er Ceylon's isle, was more acceptable to the uneducated tastes of that company than to 'Measure their cups of ale, draining the oaken pail.'"

The first "Knight of the Awl" to open his shop in the place was Mandras Randall, who, in 1848, made known to all the people around, that he would attend to their soles, or, in other words, he would manufacture, of as good leather as could be obtained, boots and shoes for all who would give him their order. He was succeeded by Mr. O'Hara, who was drowned in the mill-pond in the village. Having no friend or relative in the vicinity, he was buried by the authorities here.

W. E. Carthart was the first M. D. to advertise his ability "to cure all the ills that flesh is heir to," but it appears, from the records of that early day, the people were too perverse to get sick for the purpose of affording employment to a doctor, however great his skill. With hope deferred, he waited till his heart grew sick, and he left for more unhealthy parts. Says the writer already quoted: "In his wake, at brief intervals, one by one, came a whole faculty of medical men—Ingalls, Warren, Lake, Heath and others, men whose pill boxes, we'll venture, contained no atomized, homœopathic dose, to tickle the epicurean taste, but the concentrated, double-refined extract of marah, under the effects of which, the repentent patient assents unqualified to the theological dogma, 'In the gall of bitterness and bonds of iniquity,' for you remember the fogyish, foregone conclusion, almost invariably acted upon in those days, 'I think the patient will do well to take a dose of calomel.' However, the grateful survived, with a few exceptions, the visits of these wandering stars; these Israelites in the wilderness, longing for the flesh-pots of Egypt."

"It is appointed unto man once to die," and death is ever nigh, ready to snatch a victim here and there. On the 17th day of July, 1849, Herbert Edward, son of J. O. and M. M. Eaton, was called away, and he was laid in the cold and silent tomb—the first death in the village.

The first celebration of Independence Day was held Saturday, July 3, 1852; the Fourth occurring upon Sunday. The day was ushered in by the firing of cannon. The officers of the day were Isaac H. Palmer, President; G. M. Bartholemew and John Sloan, Vice Presidents; John Ingalls, Marshal; E. D. Steel, Reader of the Declaration of Independence; Rev. J. N. Lewis, Orator; Rev. E. S. Bunce, Chaplain. 'At 1 o'clock, a dinner was served by J. O. Eaton, near his hotel. Everything passed off in a highly satisfactory manner, without an accident to mar the occasion; but not so on the 4th of July following. Albert Eells, son of Joseph Eells, had charge of the cannon, which exploding, he was struck by a fragment and instantly killed.

The first lawyer in the village was L. A. Ellis, who, in 1854, came and remained two years. He was succeeded by R. Lindsay, who came to the village in 1858. For twenty-two years, Mr. Lindsay has occupied the same premises for an office, the same first occupied by Mr. Ellis.

Lodi in 1852.—Rev. J. N. Lewis, a pioneer missionary of the Presbyterian Church, who located here in the spring of 1852, thus speaks of Lodi and vicinity: “Here are groves of all sizes, free of bushes, bearing a striking resemblance to orchards, and, in spite of our knowledge to the contrary, deluding us, for the moment, that they are really such, are scattered everywhere in the valleys, on the hillsides and on the summits. The admirer of nature will here find that she has arrayed herself in superlative attractions, as on some bright, summer day, he looks over this landscape from the hills, or rides through these valleys—not a line or course in all the bounding surface is jagged, while the waving grain and flowery hues of the prairies, and the herds of cattle grazing thereon, remind him of the happy valley of Rasselas. The town of Lodi lies principally in this basin, and embosomed among the hills at the intersection of the main valleys, on a small stream, is the recent and thriving little village of the same name—a retired spot, and but little known, because the thoroughfare from the capital westward at present, pass north and south of it. We could wish, on many accounts, that it might remain so (though we are threatened with a railroad soon), since the beauty of its location, the abundance of water power, and the fertility of the surrounding country, will command a growth sufficiently rapid for its moral healthfulness, and let it be forever small, rather than be crowded with such a population as the rapidly growing villages of the West are often composed of. Better it is for a place to start with a good moral influence, and to secure a good moral reputation, than to have a reputation for mere business and money-making. We can afford to spare the loose and low population, which might otherwise be crowded in here, and we hope soon that the sight of church steeples, and the sound of the Sabbath bell, which summon the good to the temple of God, will warn and scare away whatever of moral trash which has found its way to this quiet retreat. A period of four years has, despite of its retired situation, built up a cluster of about thirty dwelling-houses, several stores, a tavern, two good flouring-mills, which are crowded beyond their capacity with custom work from the vicinity, a saw-mill and mechanics of all kinds. Much water-power remains still unemployed. We have three organized churches—Presbyterian, Baptist and Methodist, and preaching every Sabbath in a large and convenient place of worship, by clergymen of each of these denominations, an excellent school, a temperance organization, which now, indeed, needs resuscitation, and more energy, though its friends are numerous. We hope that, without any feelings of selfishness, or any bias from any self-interest, we may recommend this place to persons who are intending to remove to this State. The population is mostly free from the foreign element found in almost every town elsewhere—the country is so much settled by native-born Americans, that doubtless this will always be its character. Society is of the Eastern tone, and we trust we have among us enough of the salt of the earth, to give controlling influence to it, and shape it to permanent morality. As to secular advantages, they are not lacking. Cultivated farms can be purchased at $8 or $6 per acre. A large quantity of land in the hands of speculators, eager to get rid of it, supplied well with wood and water, can be bought for $4 or $5 per acre, farms well adapted for raising grain or stock. We are well situated in respect to markets, having always, in fact, the choice of four or five. Being near the Wisconsin River, we can send our produce to the pineries on the same stream at the north, or by the Mississippi to Minnesota, or to Galena and St. Louis on the south, or by way of Portage, through the canal to Green Bay; or by railroad, nearly completed, both from Milwaukee and Chicago to Madison; we can have intercourse summer and winter with the seaboard. During the past winter, the Rock River Railroad Company have surveyed a route from Janesville, through Madison and this place, to Baraboo, beyond the Wisconsin River, with the intention of extending it to Minnesota.”

As the village grew in size and importance, the necessity for its incorporation under the general laws of the State became apparent, in order that such improvements might be made as would best advance its interests, improvements that the town would not consider. A preliminary meeting, to take into consideration the subject of incorporation, was held at Eaton's Hall, Saturday, April 13, 1872. Addison Eaton was made Chairman of the meeting, and H. M. Ayer, Secretary. It was voted that a charter be applied for under Chapter 188, of the General Laws of 1872, and that all of Section 27 be embraced in the limits of the village. H. M. Ayer and C. Bacon were appointed a committee to take the census of the section, and E. W. Gardner, R. Lindsay, and J. M. Bartholomew, to draft the application and present it to the court, and also to make a map of the area embraced in the application. L. F. Wanner was appointed to see to the printing of the proper notices, and that the census returns and map be filed in the office of the Town Clerk for inspection. As the result of the census, it was found there were 647 inhabitants residing on the section mentioned.

The application of the citizens of the village was favorably considered by the court, and on the 20th day of July, 1872, the first election was held, resulting in the choice of Horatio N. Cowen, President; E. Andrews, Alexander Woods, James McCloud, H. C. Bradley, William Dunlap and Leonard F. Wanner, Trustees; Carlos Bacon, Clerk; J. M. Pruyn, Treasurer; H. M. Ayer, Police Justice. Other elections have annually been held, resulting as follows:

1873—E. W. Gardner, President; E. Andrews, William Dunlap, I. V. N. Walker, William Goldspohn, Thomas Albiston, Frederick Hanson, Trustees; H. M. Ayer, Clerk; J. M. Pruyn, Treasurer; H. M. Ayer, Assessor; John Foote, School Superintendent; A. Woods, Police Justice.

1874—E. W. Gardner, President; E. Andrews, William Dunlap, I. V. N. Walker, William Goldspohn, Thomas Albiston, Frederick Hanson, Trustees; H. M. Ayer, Clerk; H. L. Bancroft, Treasurer; John Foote, School Superintendent; G. T. Simons, Constable; G. M. Bartholomew, Justice of the Peace; James Seville, Police Justice.

1875—E. W. Gardner, President; E. Andrews, William Dunlap, I. V. N. Walker, William Goldspohn, Thomas Albiston, Frederick Hanson, Trustees; H. M. Ayer, Clerk; John Yule, Treasurer; John Foote, School Superintendent; G. T. Simons, Constable; G. M. Bartholomew, Justice of the Peace; H. M. Ayer, Police Justice.

1876—E. W. Gardner, President; E. Andrews, J. O. Eaton, G. E. McKeebe, William Goldspohn, Thomas Albiston, Peter Kehl, Trustees; J. M. Bartholomew, Clerk; John Yule, Treasurer; Addison Eaton, School Superintendent; Alfred Clemens, Constable; S. S. Dunning, Justice of the Peace; H. M. Ayer, Police Justice.

1877—Thomas Albiston, President; E. Knutsen, E. Andrews, Peter Kehl, W. M. Bartholomew, Henry B. Bancroft, J. O. Eaton, Trustees; J. M. Bartholomew, Clerk; Orin Rice, Treasurer; G. M. Bartholomew, Police Justice; E. W. Gardner, Justice of the Peace; J. U. Ray, Constable.

1878—G. M. Bartholomew, President; S. M. Blake, William Goldspohn, S. H. Watson, W. M. Bartholomew, H. L. Bancroft, William Dunlap, Trustees; J. M. Bartholomew, Clerk; R. W. Mills, Treasurer; E. W. Gardner, Police Justice; Alfred Clemens, Constable.

1879—Edward Andrews, President; S. H. Watson, H. L. Bancroft, J. O. Eaton, E. B. Wait, William Goldspohn, Jacob C. Wisler, Trustees; J. M. Bartholomew, Clerk; John Yule, Treasurer; G. W. Fenno, Marshal; H. M. Ayer, Police Justice; E. W. Gardner, Justice of the Peace.

CHURCHES.

The religious and moral influences of the village have always kept pace with its growth. The Methodists were the pioneer laborers in the field, followed closely by the Baptists and Presbyterians. The Universalists were the last to form an organization.

Methodist Episcopal.—Rev. L. Harvey had in 1845 a conference appointment to travel, west, southwest and northwest of Madison, about thirty miles out, and seeing, in the post office of that city, some Methodist church papers directed to Rev. H. Maynard and the Bartholomews, he inquired where they could be found. The Postmaster told him the course to take as best he could, and the missionary started to hunt them up, and, as remarked by Father Maynard, he found them waiting for him. This was late in the fall of that year. A class was immediately formed, according to the rules of the Methodist Episcopal Church, consisting of G. M. Bartholomew, Leader; Catherine Bartholomew, M. C. Bartholomew, Mary Bartholomew, Christiana Bartholomew, Henry Maynard, Catherine Maynard, Harriet E. Maynard; in all eight. Preaching was had once in two weeks in the log cabins of the Bartholomews, or Mr. Maynard, until the log schoolhouse was built on Section 27 in the spring of 1846, which became their regular place of worship. Says the Rev. H. Maynard, in a local paper in 1879: "These meetings were generally attended with the Divine presence, spiritual and profitable, with some revivals and additions to the church. As others came and settled in the valley, they came and worshiped with us, in the little log schoolhouse, with one heart and one mind. Mrs. J. N. Lewis says the first time she attended service in this valley she rode on an ox sled, with a family, to that little log house. Every church in Lodi to-day may thank God for the influence that went out from that little log house. There was an unusual proportion of the settlers that were church-going people, hence the influence of Christianity prevailed over opposing influences. The ministers that have been appointed to labor for the Methodist Church in this place from 1845 to 1880 inclusive are: Rev. L. Harvey, about ten months; W. Smith, one year; S. Tasker, one year; assistant preacher, Mr. Adams, six months when he sickened and died, when H. Maynard finished the year; S. P. Walden, one year; James Holmes, six months; M. Wooley, finishing the year; E. Bunce, two years; Nelson Butler, two years; James Wells, one year; Mr. Cochran, two years; S. Dodge, two years; J. B. Bachman, two years; S. Delap, one year; J. S. Hurd, two years; J. D. Searles, two years; B. C. Hammond, one year; J. B. Bachman, one year; J. T. Prior, two years; E. Tasker, two years; F. M. Fullerton, one year; W. H. Kellogg, two years; J. C. Aspinwall, two years; R. Burnip, two years; J. D. Brothers, who received his appointment in the fall of 1879. The most of these ministers are yet in the regular work, a few of them are worn out by long, hard service, and are waiting with holy patience the Master's call to come up higher. A few of them have gone from labor to their reward; they fought a good fight, received their discharge, and have gone to enjoy the faithful soldier's reward. Rev. Mr. Adams was a young preacher of good talents, deep piety, much zeal, and a good prospect for future usefulness in the church. He traveled this circuit some four months, sickened and died at Clark's Corners. He left a wife and two children. I was with him in his last sickness, preached his funeral sermon, and then we laid his remains beneath the sod to sleep until the resurrection morn." As the population increased and the log schoolhouse became too small, a house was obtained in the village of Lodi, which was of sufficient size for some time.

In the year 1855, the society built a large stone church at a cost of $4,500, which was dedicated June, 1857, N. E. Cobleigh, President of Appleton University preaching the dedicatory sermon.

In March, 1880, there were 146 members of the church. Its officers at that time were Rev. Joseph D. Brothers, Pastor; L. F. Wanner, R. Steele, A. S. Bowman, G. M. Bartholomew, John Wilkins, M. Cain, C. Goodall, N. G. Burlingame, Stewards; J. M. Bartholomew, Recording Steward; G. M. Bartholomew, C. Goodall, L. F. Wanner, W. M. Bartholomew, H. Phinney, L. J. Burlingame, M. Cain, A. S. Bowman, E. B. Wait, Trustees; H. Phinney, L. J. Burlingame, Class Leaders.

Baptist.—A meeting was held at the house of H. M. Ayer, April 23, 1852, for the purpose of taking into consideration the organization of a Baptist church. Elder Joseph Bowman was chosen Moderator and H. M. Ayer, Clerk. It was resolved to organize, and Peter Van Ness, William G. Simons and Cyrus Hill was appointed a committee to prepare articles of faith and covenant, and present a name for the church when recognized. On Saturday, the 22d of May, those interested again assembled to hear the report of the committee, which report was adopted and the articles signed by Peter Van Ness, Cyrus Hill, William G. Simons, H. M. Ayer, Freedom Simons, William Wait, Matthias Warner, Ira Polly, Emma Van Ness, Caroline L. Simons, Almira Simons, Lucy Warner, Caroline Wait, Catherine Polly, James Cross, Laura Durkee, Betsy Hill. Peter Van Ness was elected Deacon. On Wednesday, the 26th of May, the Council, consisting of Elders Moses Rowley, Joseph Bowman, Peter Conrad and Charles Perry, convened at the appointed place and voted unanimously to extend to the brethren and sisters the hand of fellowship as a regular Baptist Church. Elder Conrad preached, and Elder Rowley extended the hand. On Thursday, June 3, 1852, the church was received into the Dane Association, then convened at Fall River. In January, 1853, the church invited Elder Joseph Bowman to become its Pastor, which invitation he accepted, and the relation continued till December 28, 1861. During this time the church had no stated place of meeting of its own, but assembled in schoolhouses in the village and out districts. Its membership, too, was scattered over quite an extended territory, rendering it impracticable to keep up regular social and prayer meetings. Under the labors of Elder Bowman twenty were added by baptism; by experience and letter, thirty-eight. After Mr. Bowman closed his work the church was without a pastor for two years and a half, in which time three were added by letter, three dismissed in the same way, and two died. Elder O. O. Stearns was then called to the pastorate, in which relation he continued for ten years, or until July, 1874. In February, 1863, a committee was appointed by the church to see how much could be raised for building a house of worship. In January, 1865, a committee was appointed to select a site. In September the church voted to build, and appointed Deacons Van Ness and King and William Simons a building committee. The enterprise was prosecuted vigorously till the house was erected and inclosed; when that was done, it was found the fund was about exhausted, and additional subscriptions had to be obtained. On the 13th of March, 1867, it was completed, furnished, and duly dedicated to the service of the living God. The entire cost of the building and furniture was $1,500. Rev. H. C. Fuller was called to the pastorate December 13, 1874, and continued for two years, when the church was without a pastor until April, 1877. When Elder N. E. Chapin accepted a call and entered upon the work. A Sunday school was organized when the congregation took possession of their house of worship, and has been a great help to the church, a number of its scholars becoming members. The constituent members of the church were 17, and up to March, 1880, there have been added by baptism, 95; by letter, 43; experience, 20; a total of 175. The dismissals by letter, death and exclusion have been 99; leaving a membership of 76. At this time, its officers are Rev. N. E. Chapin, Pastor; Peter Van Ness, Freedom Simons, Deacons; E. W. Gardner, Clerk; E. Richmond, Treasurer; F. Simons, Isaac Van Ness, E. W. Gardner, Trustees.

Presbyterian.—In June, 1852, a small band of Christian men and women gathered in a small room on Columbus street, for the purpose of forming a Presbyterian or Congregational church, according to the voice of the majority, whichever way it might be. As a majority were Presbyterians, it was thought best to have the church of the same form, the Congregationalists cordially acquiescing and supporting the organization. It was put in connection with the Wisconsin Convention, a union of the Congregationalists and Presbyterian Church for united work, in which connection it continued six years, when it was transferred to the Presbytery of Columbus, since which time its relation has been with the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church. The organization was consummated by signing the articles of covenant, ten persons affixing their names: James O. Eaton and wife, A. P. Smith and wife, Robert Mann and wife, Mrs. Partridge, Mrs. Strangeway, Mrs. J. N. Lewis and Miss Eliza Steele. At the first communion, Mrs. I. H. Palmer was received on profession, and at the next Mrs. Crowley, by letter. A. P. Smith and Robert Mann were chosen Elders. The Rev. J. N. Lewis, in a quarter-centennial sermon, delivered in June, 1877, remarked that "there seemed to have been a marked Providence in the commencement of this church, as indeed its whole history to this hour reveals the faithful hand of God in blessing and guiding us. With much reluctance, and after much urging by the Secretary of the Home Missionary Society, the first Presbyterian minister to Lodi consented to take a letter of introduction to James O. Eaton, residing here. From descriptions given, the place was pictured in his mind as a gloomy hamlet, where two cross-roads met, with merely a tavern on one side and a blacksmith-shop on the other, in a dingy dell, with a soil of the hardest white clay, covered with the scrubbiest of scrub-oaks, much like Petrolenm V. Nasby's 'Confederit Corners,' abating the whisky and politics of Deacon Pogram. But what a surprise to behold, instead, the most enchanting landscape, these broad valleys of the greenest prairie, these bold bluffs, these symmetrically rounded hills, with groves in groups scattered on their tops and sloping sides, the music of the mills and the crystal streams, all presenting a view more lovely than, even in its wild state, than since the hand of civilization has despoiled it of half its original beauty."

The first Presbyterian sermon was preached here on the 19th of October, 1851. There was no church or society to decide about accepting or rejecting the service of the preacher, no trustees to pledge adequate support. The only support that could be relied on was the pledge of a small sum from the Secretary of the Home Missionary Society. In December following, the missionary, the Rev. J. N. Lewis, arrived with his family. Says Mr. Lewis, in the sermon referred to: "The next day after our arrival, while moving the goods to the new home, what gloomy thoughts—more gloomy than the gloomiest of winter days. What was he doing here? Was this faith or folly, prudence or presumption, to engage in such an undertaking? Where was the food to come from, unless, like Elijah's, it was brought by the ravens? With such forebodings, the table was spread and occupied for the evening meal, when there was a knock at the door, when a present for the frying-pan next morning was handed in, from good mother Eells over the way. Soon another knock, and a bundle of clothing from Brother Rosenkrans, of Columbus, desiring to divide the contents of a missionary-box he had just received. Truly, it was felt at the table that the ravens were already on the wing. The next day the message had gone beforehand to Judge Palmer's miller, 'take no toll from the missionary;' and soon from another, 'come for a bag of oats.' From that day, all anxiety in regard to support was dismissed. In the course of six years, the feeble band of ten was increased to thirty-nine, subsequently six more were added."

Early in August, 1857, the Rev. G. B. Riley, from Horseheads, N. Y., commenced his labors in the place. Not having a church edifice, and being able to obtain the schoolhouse for only a portion of the time, he preached much in the school districts adjoining. A church building was commenced, and the basement finished for occupancy. Mr. Riley labored with the congregation six years, during which time seventy-six communicants were received. After an interregnum of nearly a year, the Rev. Daniel A. Bassett, from Illinois, was invited, and began services in August, 1864. He was a man devoted to his work, a good preacher, and during his two years' stay there were two interesting revivals, and forty-six members were received. The next Pastor was the Rev. Warren Mayo, from Danby, N. Y., a man of the stature and stateliness of Saul, King of Israel. In his ministry continual additions were made to the church, in all seventy-five. He was succeeded, in 1872, by the Rev. J. W. Knott, who had a very successful pastorate of seven years, during which time large additions were made to the church, 112 being added at one time, the result of an extensive revival. Mr. Knott was succeeded, in October, 1879, by the Rev. H. L. Brown. The church very early adopted the plan of a rotary eldership. In March, 1880, its Elders were William Dunlap, J. B. Dwinnell, Addison Eaton, P. H. Gunnison and E. H. Irwin. Its Trustees at the same time were J. O. Eaton, Danford Pratt, A. Arries, Thomas Albiston and E. Andrews.

Universalist.—A parish was organized December 8, 1872, H. C. Bradley and H. L. Bancroft, Trustees; H. C. Bradley, Treasurer; R. N. Bartholomew, Clerk. Its constituent members were John Foote, R. N. Bartholomew, H. C. Bradley, H. L. Bancroft, S. M. Blake, D. Hesselgrave, Laura Foote, Ann M. Bancroft, Julia A. Bradley, S. A. Dearborn, Mary J. Botsford, Sophia Hidden, Hannah Hesselgrave, Jane Lovering, Jane Perry, Philander Mosher, John W. Foote, John C. Dearborn, John T. Hidden, Albert Lovering, William B. Chrisler, Jacob Chrisler, Elizabeth Chrisler, M. H. Chrisler, George T. Cawthorne, Jonas Narracong, Seth

Andrews. A church, in connection with the parish, was organized September 2, 1875, with the following membership: David Hesselgrave, Hannah Hesselgrave, Frank Terrill, Frederick Perry, John Foote, William B. Chrisler, Elizabeth Chrisler, J. A. Wieting, R. N. Bartholomew, H. L. Bancroft, C. A. Martin, Mrs. C. A. Martin, Mr. Curtiss and wife, Abbie Curtiss, Mary S. Bradley, Jane A. Perry, Albert Lovering, Jane Lovering, Julia A. Bradley, John W. Foote, Laura R. Foote, Emily B. Foote, Florence M. Foote, A. Terrill, Jacob Chrisler, Mary H. Chrisler, Josephine Cawthorn, Carlton Cawthorn, Emma Cawthorn, Mattie E. Bartholomew. The first minister to preach Universalism in Lodi was Rev. M. G. Todd, through whose instrumentality a good work was wrought. He was succeeded by Rev. B. F. Rogers, in 1872, during whose pastorate the parish was organized. For the year 1873, the parish had no minister, but in 1874, Rev. Mr. Todd once more became its minister, and by him the church was instituted. The church edifice is of brick, and is finished in handsome style. Its erection was commenced April 3, 1873, and dedicated January 15, 1878, the sermon of dedication being preached by Rev. M. G. Todd. The cost of the building was $4,000. A successful Sunday school, of fifty members, has been in operation for some years. Rev. A. C. Barry, D. D., was the successor of Mr. Todd and has met with fair success in his labors.

Schools.—The first settlement in the village of Lodi was made in the spring of 1846, and in the summer a log house was erected on Section 27, and school taught therein by Miss Mary Yockey. This house served until 1851, when a frame building was erected on the same section, the district being No. 1. John Foote taught the first winter term in 1848-49. The school districts of the town remained as organized by the Town Superintendent of Schools until 1864. On the 17th day of September of that year, the Supervisors of the town, by order, attached the territory of Districts Nos. 2 and 6 to District No. 1. On the 8th day of October, 1864, by order of the Board, District No. 7 was also attached. On the 5th day of November, 1877, the portion of Joint District No. 3, lying within the town of Lodi, was attached, making the Union District composed of Nos. 1, 2, 6, 7, and a part of No. 3. The first school meeting of the consolidated districts was held September 26, 1864. At this meeting, H. M. Ayer was elected Director for three years; John B. Dwinell, Treasurer, for two years; W. M. Bartholomew, Clerk, for one year. A special school meeting was held October 8, 1864, when the District Board was authorized to move one or more of the schoolhouses in the district as will best subserve the interest of the whole district. The object of uniting these school districts was to form a union school of high grade. Previous to this time, Prof. A. G. Riley had been teaching a select high school in the village, and had awakened considerable interest in a higher education than was then being taught by the common schools of the town. At the same time the State Superintendent of Public Schools, in his annual report, had placed the village in rather an unenviable light in comparison with Kilbourn City, Pardeeville, Wycocena, Cambria, Fall River, and Poynette, which aroused the pride of the citizens of Lodi, and steps were at once taken to remedy the matter. On the suggestion of the Superintendent the consolidation was effected. Prof. Riley expressed himself ready to abandon his school if the change was made. He was chosen the first Principal of the Union School, which was opened Monday, November 14, 1864.

At the annual meeting, August 28, 1865, the sum of $375 was appropriated and the Board instructed to purchase for a new school building, and to sell all real estate not then used for school purposes. At the annual meeting, August 27, 1866, it was voted to raise $60, to pay rent for the basement of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which was being used for the high school. It was also voted to purchase a lot of E. B. Wait for $150; one of J. B. Dwinell for $127; and two of William Dunlap for $275. These purchases were authorized and made with a view of erecting a new school building. In furtherance of this idea, at the annual meeting, held August 26, 1867, there was appropriated $50, to pay for plan and specifications of the new house. A committee was also appointed to secure the passage of a private law to enable the district to issue its bonds for the purpose of erecting the building. The Legislature acceded to the request of the will of the district, as expressed in their meeting, and passed an enabling act.

At the annual meeting, held July 13, 1868, the district resolved that a new schoolhouse was needed, and voted to issue district bonds for $10,000, according to the special act of the Legislature, to apply on the building. The District Board, at the same time, were appointed a building committee.

On the 1st day of March, 1869, the contract for the new schoolhouse was awarded to James McCloud, of Lodi, for $9,475, and the district bonds for that amount were sold to Mr. McCloud at their par value. The house was finished and occupied for the term commencing in November, 1869. It was arranged for four departments on the first floor, and one on the second floor, with two recitation-rooms. Its seating capacity was 340. About 2 o'clock on the morning of March 29, 1878, an alarm of fire was raised, and it was discovered the schoolhouse was in flames. In the absence of water and a machine with which to throw it, it was evident nothing could be done to save the building, and it was with feelings of sadness that teachers, pupils and citizens had to witness its destruction. It was insured for $7,000, which amount was paid in due time by the insurance companies.

On the 25th of May, 1878, the District Board was authorized to contract for a new schoolhouse with the lowest responsible resident bidder, at a cost not to exceed $6,800, exclusive of furnishing. The same day, a contract was made with James McCloud, the contractor of the old building, for the sum mentioned. The plans and specifications for the new house were furnished by D. R. Jones, architect, of Madison. The house was completed and occupied December 12, 1878. It is a large two-story cream-colored brick, with three schoolrooms below and three above.

The first Principal, employed November, 1864, was A. G. Riley, who remained four years, the second was E. B. Everdell, one year; third, J. C. Yocum, five years; fourth, A. A. Miller, two years; D. O. Hibbard, one year; W. E. Todd, three years. The assistants, in the various departments, from 1864 to 1879 inclusive, have been Elmira Duncan, Martha Lewis, Sarah Bartholomew, Carrie R. Tabor, Julia Bartholomew, Martha Van Ness, Leora M. Evans, Miss Wright, F. Johnson, Jennie E. Little, Tillie M. Riddle, Jennie Sprague, M. C. Buchanan, Sarah Dunlap, Laura Luse, Mr. Aldrich, Alice Welch, Emma Curtis, Michael Clinton, Minnie Waldo, Maggie Ferguson, M. J. Owen, Annie Blachley, Ada Simons, Mr. E. H. Phillips, Misses Fanny Pettit, Hattie A. Salisbury, Ida Merryman, Libbie Batty, Mr. Webber, E. M. Gunnison, Alice Randall, Rose Newell, Emma Salisbury, Tillie Knutesen, Hattie C. Hall, Mary L. Aspinwall, Elsinia Wiswall, Rose Knutesen, M. A. Owen, A. R. Luse, Emma Foote, Minnie Ayer, Alice Coapman, Mattie Buchanan, Lizzie Dwinnell, Lottie Lattimer and Marion Miles.

Graduates of the High School.—Since the organization of the graded-school system, up to and including the year 1879, there have graduated twenty-nine young gentlemen and ladies, as follows: Annie Irwin, Minnie L. Ayer, Eva Bartholomew, Florence M. Foote, Ida Merryman, Millie Maynard, Rose M. Knuteson, Lewis E. Walker, James I. Bartholomew, Lizzie I. Dwinnell, Tillie J. Knuteson, Herbert Goodall, James P. Wilson, Eva Goodall, Adell Bartholomew, Henry Early, Silas Overton, Harry Irwin, Bert Palmer, Miles Fenno, D. W. Simons, Nora Knuteson, Elma Simons, Mary L. Overton, George B. Gardner, Ben Wait, Frank Foote, Robert Wilson, George Dwinnell.

TEMPERANCE.

The principles of temperance, as held and taught in early days, found a genial soil whereon to take deep root, among the settlers of Lodi. Among its advocates were the names of John Slown, Aaron Chalfant, I. B. Tabor, the Bartholomews, Simonses, Maynards, J. O. Eaton, I. H. Palmer, E. C. Tuller, Dr. John Ingals, John Foote, with their families. In the summer or fall of 1849, an organization was formed, called the Lodi Temperance Society. The first meetings were held in the old log schoolhouse, afterward in the hall of Lodi Hotel. J. O. Eaton was chosen Secretary, John Slown or G. M. Bartholomew, President. The obligation bound its members to abstain from the use of, or traffic in, alcoholic liquors, except for medicinal, mechanical or sacramental purposes. It was similar to the obligation of the Washingtonian Society, at that time quite popular in some parts of the country.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 272, I. O. G. T.—This lodge was organized May 10, 1865, by Miss M. Emery, State Organizer, with about twenty charter members. Its first officers were: J. O. Eaton, W. C. T.; Mrs. E. S. Lewis, W. V. T.; E. B. Meeteer, W. S.; Mary E. Eaton, W. A. S.; James Chapin, W. F. S.; Minnie Chapin, W. T.; Oscar Dunlap, W. M.; Mattie Luse, W. D. M.; Mrs. H. L. Meeteer, W. I. G.; George Eaton, W. O. G.; Mrs. Schemmerhorn, R. H. S.; Mrs. Lindsay, L. H. S. The first year, ending May, 1865, there were 185 initiated, including the charter members. The second year, 78; third year, 21; fourth year, 27; fifth year, 15. The sixth year was a very dark one for the lodge, there being no meetings held between May 24 and September 6, 1870. On the evening of the 6th, a meeting was held and officers elected. Mattie Lewis was elected W. C. T.; Sarah Luse, W. V. T.; Laura Foote, W. S.; Carrie Tabor, W. F. S.; Maggie Wells, W. M.; Frank Luse, W. T.; M. Blachley, I. G.; John W. Foote, O. G.; Warren Mayo, Chap. During the remainder of the quarter, the meetings were very poorly attended, and it was a question whether to strive longer to keep up the lodge or surrender the charter; but a few determined ones resolved they would never surrender, but would adopt for their motto "Perseverance," the name of the lodge, and press forward. The lodge accordingly elected Frank Luse, W. C. T.; Sarah Dunlap, W. V. T.; Maggie Wells, W. S.; Mattie Tabor, T.; S. K. Luse, W. F. S.; L. E. Walker, W. M.; M. Blachley, I. G.; Sarah Luse, O. G.; Mrs. Adeline Chalfant, Chap. The officers were not installed and regular meetings were held only once in two weeks, using the old pass-word, until December 6, when the G. W. C. T. sent R. B. Rowland, a Grand Lodge Deputy, to visit and re-organize. After a few words of cheer, followed by remarks from Frank Luse, W. M. Dunlap, H. M. Ayer, Laura Foote, Sarah Dunlap, Delia Luse and others, the members were re-obligated, and the lodge declared re-organized. Weekly meetings were again commenced, and twelve initiated during the remaining part of the year, and a number re-instated. The seventh year, ending May, 1872, there were fifteen initiated, but the lodge was in rather a weak condition, and attendance small.

The eighth year, ending May, 1873, the lodge seemed to take a new start; the hall of E. Knuteson was rented, fitted up, and fifty-two members initiated, and many old ones re-instated. The attendance was good, and a general interest manifested in the cause. The ninth year, the lodge was in a flourishing condition, though some trouble was experienced in dealing with members violating their pledge; forty-five initiated during the year. The tenth year prosperity continued with the lodge; nineteen initiated. Eleventh year, thirteen initiations; attendance not quite so good on account of the organization of a division of the Sons of Temperance, which was quite prosperous that year. Twelfth year, only nine initiations; thirteenth year, thirty-six; fourteenth year, twenty-six. For the fourteen years, ending May, 1879, the total initiations were 553, some of whom were initiated twice, but probably 500 different persons were connected with the order during that time. For initiations and dues, over $2,500 were received, the greater part of which was paid out for the incidental expenses of the lodge, but about $500 went to the Grand Lodge. Quite an amount was spent to further the cause of temperance in other ways than through the lodge, such as in the purchase and distribution of tracts and in aiding weak lodges. Those that have held the position of Lodge Deputy were J. O. Eaton, H. W. Cass, Charles E. Eaton, H. M. Ayer, L. P. Hindes, John W. Foote, L. R. Luse, W. M. Dunlap, W. H. Slightman. At the first meeting in February, 1880, were installed Morgan L. Boyce, W. C. T.; E. A. Cannon, W. V. T.; Douglas Ayer, W. R. S.; Mollie Woods, W. A. S.; Fayette Cannon, W. F. S.; Miss Early, W. T.; H. M. Ayer, W. C.; William H. Slightman, W. M.; Josie Brothers, W. A. M.; Eva Moran, W. I. G.; Chris. O'Degard, W. S.

Lodi Temple of Honor, No. 154, was organized August 22, 1877, by Dr. Wilder, G. T. D., of Rio. Its first officers and charter members were J. M. Pruyn, W. C. T.; L. E. Harris, P. W. C. T.; John Foote, W. V. T.; G. W. Fenno, W. R.; Charles Goodall, W. F. R.; W. M. Bartholomew, W. T.; G. M. Bartholomew, W. U.; William Dunlap, W. D. U.; P. Richards, W. G.; E. Knutesen, W. S.; L. F. Wariner, G. D.; H. M. Ayer, F. W. Chandler, J.

M. Bartholomew, W. M. Dunlap and Morris M. Mitchell. Trustees, Goodall, Dunlap and Knutesen. During two years, forty-six persons had been initiated into the order. For the first term in 1880, its officers were J. Christler, W. C. T.; P. H. Gunnison, W. V. T.; J. M. Bartholomew, W. R.; J. F. Collins, W. F. R.; E. Richards, W. T.; G. M. Bartholomew, W. U.; W. B. Hook, W. D. U.; Ira A. Soddars, W. G.; F. W. Chandler, W. S.

Osseo Council, No. 44, Ancient Order of Mendotas, was organized May 1, 1878. Its first officers and charter members were W. A. Bartholomew, Sachem; Eva Bartholomew, Queen; E. Seville, Prophet; Mrs. J. W. Watson, Priestess; W. H. F. Barnes, Writer; Mrs. W. A. Bartholomew, Treasurer, M. D. Fenno, Guide; Rose Knutesen, O. Henricks, Queen's Guard; Anna Watson, Temptress; L. F. Twitchell, White Eagle; P. Hanson, E. Knutesen, W. M. Bartholomew, W. H. Buchanan, R. Burnip, E. Sloggy, S. Stewart, J. W. Watson, David Anderson, J. F. Crouk, J. M. Bartholomew, J. S. Bartholomew, Emma Seville, Neddie Crouk, Victoria Babcock, Dell Bartholomew, Mrs. P. Kehl, Edward Lindsay, W. P. Van Ness, Mrs. P. Watson, Ada Knutesen. The council has had a prosperous existence, meeting every Friday night, in the hall over the store of E. Knutesen. The membership has steadily increased, until in April, 1880, it had a membership of 100, its officers being at that time, W. H. F. Barnes, Sachem; Eva Bartholomew, Queen; H. H. Harris, Prophet; Ida Springer, Priestess; H. C. Lindsay, Writer; Hattie Gardner, Treasurer; Emma Knapp, Financial Writer; Samuel J. Wilson, Guide; Alida Buchanan, Guard of Tent; Sylvester Brown, Queen's Guard; Dell Bartholomew, Temptress; David Anderson, White Eagle; J. F. Bartholomew, Lodge Deputy.

BENEVOLENT ORDERS.

Lodi Valley Lodge, No 99, A., E. & A. M.—This lodge was organized under dispensation June 3, 1857, with Rufus W. Reed, W. M.; William N. Baker, S. W.; John W. Fisher, J. W.; A. G. Hadder, Secretary; Darius Kingsley, Treasurer; E. W. Kingsley, S. D.; A. Hartson, J. D.; W. B. Partridge, Tiler. On the expiration of the year, a charter was granted, bearing date June 9, A. D. 1858, and of Masonry 5,858. The first place of meeting was in Partridge's hall, where they met for six years, when the place was changed to Way's hall, which was occupied until January 11, 1867. At this date, they moved into their new hall, erected for their use by J. O. Eaton. A public installation was held in the Presbyterian Church, and a supper prepared at the hall, by the ladies of the members of the order. In January, 1880, the membership of the lodge was sixty-two, at which time were elected and installed E. Andrews, W. M.; J. E. Park, S. W.; J. G. Patterson, J. W.; A. Eaton, Treasurer; J. S. Gardner, Secretary; W. B. Pratt, S. D.; William Cross, J. D.; John Collins and Jacob Chrisler, Stewards; J. E. Mandeville, Tiler. Trustees—P. Perry, W. L. Wells, J. E. Parke. In twenty-three years, 157 persons were initiated into the lodge.

CEMETERY.

In June, 1855, James O. Eaton purchased of James McCloud one and a half acres of ground lying southwest of the village, and had it surveyed and platted and gave it the name of Mount Pleasant Cemetery. The first laid to rest therein was a young man named George Palmer, and the next was his sister, Mrs. Reuel Noyes. The ground was consecrated for burial purposes in August, 1856. In September, 1863, Mr. Eaton purchased another acre and a half, which he likewise had laid out in lots, which were speedily disposed of. J. T. Hidden, June, 1871, also made an addition thereto, his plat conforming to that of Mr. Eaton. In twenty-five years this "city of the dead" has gradually increased its numbers, each year adding one or more. Beautiful headstones and monuments mark the spot where the loved ones lie. Among the most attractive stones within this hallowed spot, is that of the soldiers' monument erected in 1868, and commemorating the death of the sons of Lodi, who fell in battle during the war of the rebellion. The inscription placed upon it is as follows: "To the memory of our brave volunteers, who gave their lives in defense of the Union, in the great rebellion of 1861. Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori.* Erected and dedicated by the town of Lodi, A. D. 1868." Twenty-three names are inscribed upon the monument.

Fires.—The village has never experienced any very extensive conflagrations, but from time to time a small fire has broken out, entailing individual loss. The most extensive fire was that of the schoolhouse, March 28, 1878 (an account of which has already been given) incurring a loss of $12,000. The first fire was the dwelling-house of A. Hartson, February, 1857; loss $150. Other fires are summed up as follows: J. O. Eaton, store building, March, 1859; loss, $1,000; Richard Lindsay, dwelling, August, 1869, $700; Dr. N. P. Bunnell, dwelling, October, 1873, $1,000; J. M. Bartholomew, dwelling, April 30, 1875, $500; S. M. Goodall, dwelling, 1876, $600; John Gavin, dwelling, 1877, $150; school building, March 28, 1878, $12,000; R. R. Lloyd, dwelling, 1879, $600; J. R. Collins, April 12, 1880, $300. The last was one long to be remembered, resulting in the death of three prominent men in the village. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon of the day mentioned, an alarm of fire startled the people of the village, who soon saw flames issuing from a small frame building a story and a half high, owned by Joseph R. Collins, and situated near the railroad. The fire was first discovered by a little girl of ten or twelve years of age, who was alone in the house at the time. She promptly gave an alarm, and the village bell was rung, arousing the inhabitants to an intense pitch of excitement, as a high wind was blowing at the time. There being no fire department in the village, the people could do nothing to check the flames, and devoted their energies to getting out the furniture and household goods, nearly all of which were removed before the building appeared to be in a dangerous condition. The bottom part of a bookcase remained in the house, however, and John T. Hidden, John Rathbun and Henry Harris rushed in after it, in spite of the protestations of their friends and neighbors, who all expressed fears that the building would fall, and tried hard to dissuade the men from the rash attempt.

They had hardly disappeared through the door of the burning building, when to the horror of the crowd, the chimney toppled and fell, carrying the roof and ceiling down with it on the heads of the devoted men inside. After a few moments of thrilling suspense, which seemed like hours to the almost crazed people outside, Mr. Hidden was seen, crawling out of the building on his hands and knees, with his hair and clothing nearly all burned off, and his face and body so badly charred that he was almost unrecognizable. He stood erect when free from the building, and called aloud for the people to throw water on him. A wagon was procured, and, aided by kind hands, the unfortunate man was conveyed to his home, and medical aid summoned. Drs. McKibbe and Irving were promptly on hand, and did everything possible to alleviate his sufferings.

As soon as the fire had burned down sufficiently to allow one to approach it, measures were taken to rescue the bodies of the other two victims of the fire fiend. Persistent effort was rewarded by the discovery of the remains of Rathburn and Harris, so badly charred that they were unrecognizable, except by trinkets about them and articles found in the remnants of their clothing.

The bodies were removed to Eaton's Hall, where Justice H. M. Ayer summoned a jury and held an inquest—a verdict of "accidental death" being returned.

The building was totally consumed, but most of the furniture and valuables were saved by the efforts of the people.

Mr. Harris was buried on Wednesday morning, at 10 o'clock, by Osseo Council of the Ancient Order of Mendotas, of which he was a member. The members of the council met at their hall, whence, most of them attired in black, and all wearing a white arrow with a black crape bow across the middle, led by the Sachem and Queen carrying arrows uplifted and crossed above their heads in front. These were followed by the Prophet and Priestess, the former of the two being appointed for the occasion, the rightful incumbent of that office being the occupant of the coffin and the hearse. The Prophet's arrow was draped entirely in black crape, while the others, and the spear also, carried by the White Eagle, were only partially draped. The procession proceeded to the Methodist Church, where the services were conducted by Rev. Messrs Chapin and Brothers, and Rev. Dr. Barry, Mr. Brothers preaching the sermon.

*It is sweet and honorable to die for one's country.

At the grave the ceremonies were few and simple, yet beautiful and expressive.

The burial service of the M. E. Church was read, and the members of the Council passed around the grave, each depositing a sprig of evergreen therein.

Mr. Rathbun's funeral was conducted at 2 o'clock P. M., under the auspices of Lodi Valley Lodge, F. & A. M., of which he was a member. The services were held at the Presbyterian Church, and were conducted by the same ministers as in the morning at the Methodist Episcopal Church, Dr. Barry preaching the sermon.

Both the victims of this fire were men of steady, exemplary habits, and had acquired and retained the respect and good will of the people in a great degree, having long been residents of the village. Both leave widows to mourn their loss, and Mr. Rathbun leaves also a little girl fatherless.

Mr. Hidden lingered on until Wednesday evening about 8 o'clock, when he, too, passed away. His death was hard and his struggles great. His strength was such it seemed he could not die, and the death agonies were long and protracted. He was surrounded at the last by his family and Masonic friends, who ministered tenderly to his wants, and did all that could be done for his comfort with full hearts and willing hands.

Mr. Hidden was a man of great energy, promptness and decision of character. With him to think was to act, and whatever he believed right and expedient he was not backward in doing. He was honest and plain-spoken to all. If, like all men, he had his faults, they were largely overbalanced by the promptings and kind impulses of a large and generous heart. His sympathies were easily touched by a tale of woe, and many a poor, homeless wanderer has been indebted to his kindness for shelter and food, and "the blessings of him who was ready to perish" have frequently been due to him, whether given or not. In short, he was a large-hearted, generous, whole-souled man, and as such he will be mourned by this entire community.

The funeral took place at 2 o'clock P. M., on Thursday, when, for the third time since the Sunday morning previous, the Masonic Fraternity of Lodi were called out to perform the burial rites for brother Masons.

The services were conducted by the same clergymen as were Rathbun's, the day before, the Rev. M. G. Todd, of Columbus, who had arrived in town that morning, also taking a part in the sad ceremony.

The Masonic services were conducted at the grave in the usual impressive manner, and were participated in by quite a large number of Masons from Baraboo, and other towns in this and adjoining counties. The funeral procession was one of the largest and most imposing ever seen in Lodi.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Briggs House—When Judge Palmer laid out the village of Lodi, he began to consider the propriety of having a hotel started, as an inducement to travelers to call and view the fine location of the place and its vicinity. By the offer of a couple of lots, he induced Freedom Simons to undertake the work. In the winter of 1848, Mr. Simons commenced the building of what he intended as the L part, which was a story and a half, 16x24, and a leanto, 12x24, one story high. This he partially finished in time to occupy it, January, 1849. In the spring and summer, he put up a two-story front, 24x38, but left it in an unfinished condition and in the fall of that year sold to Samuel Ring, who at once rented it to William B. Partridge. In the summer of 1850, James O. Eaton rented the house for two years, from the 1st of September. The house was yet unfinished, but was completed by Mr. Eaton, who erected a handsome sign, in the shape of a triangle, a form used by the Sons of Temperance for their badges and seal. The sign bore the inscription, "Lodi Hotel—J. O. Eaton." The house was well furnished for the times, and enjoyed a good reputation. On the expiration of Mr. Eaton's lease, the house was purchased by L. D. Barnes, who took possession and began the duties of host. The house next passed into the hands of George W. Lay, who was succeeded in order by Sydney Burlingame, Benjamin Colton, Daniel Mills, Daniel O'Herron and Stephen Lyon. The last named, probably to perpetuate his own name, changed the name to the "Lyon House," which name it bore while occupied by his successor, George T. Simons, who purchased the house, October, 1865, and who continued its proprietorship and management for four years, when it was sold to William Williams, the name, "Lyon House," still being retained. Mr. Williams, in a short time, sold to Alexander Woods, who moved back the entire house, and erected in front a large three-story building, which was certainly a credit to the place. The business not proving satisfactory to him, he sold to Mrs. Briggs, of Chicago. During his administration the house was known as the "Woods House." When Mrs. Briggs came into possession, she changed its name to the "Briggs House," which name it still retained when it passed into the hands of George T. Simons, for the second time, in the fall of 1878. When Mr. Simons took possession, the upper part of the house was in an unfinished condition. He at once proceeded to finish the building, and furnished it in a style equal to any first-class house in the State. With well-furnished rooms, an excellent table, and the wants of every patron being fully met, the "Briggs House" soon obtained an excellent reputation, and has been a haven of rest to commercial and other travelers.

Northwestern Hotel.—This house is located on Main Street, near the creek. The first part of the house was built at an early day, for the purpose of a woolen factory, but the outlook not being favorable, at that time, it was never put to the use for which it was intended. Its lower part was long used as a furniture-room, and its upper for the meetings of the Masonic Lodge, dances, etc. It finally passed into the hands of J. T. Hidden, who, in the fall of 1870, fitted it up for a hotel, after making very important additions thereto, enlarging it to more than double its original size. The house was well finished and has enjoyed a fair run of custom.

Excelsior Mill.—This was the first grist-mill erected in the village as well as in the town. Its erection was commenced in the fall of 1848, by Samuel Ring, just below the junction of the two branches of Spring Creek, on Section 27. It has since been owned by Freedom Simons, James O. Eaton, Adam Schoneberger, James H. Hill, Otto Heinrichs and Peter Kehl. The mill has always borne an excellent reputation, the quality of the flour manufactured being equal to any in the State. The general run of the mill has been on custom work.

Lodi Mill.—This mill was erected in 1850, by Isaac H. Palmer. As first built, it had only one run of stone, another being added in 1857, at which time the mill was leased by Mr. Palmer, to A. Ambler, who ran it for five years, when Kibbey & Andrews rented and continued the business for eighteen months, when E. Andrews alone leased it. In March, 1870, Mr. Andrews purchased the mill from Mr. Palmer, and in 1872, rebuilt and made some valuable improvements. In 1878, farther improvements were made, another run of stone added for the manufacture of the patent flour, and an elevator built. This mill has usually been crowded to its utmost capacity with custom work, its trade extending for many miles in every direction from Lodi.

Lodi Cheese Factory.—In February, 1873, John B. Dwinnell, John Foote and H. C. Bradley had incorporated, under the general law, the Lodi Cheese Manufacturing Association, with capital stock of $2,000 divided into eighty shares of $25 each; one-half only of which were issued and taken by about thirty persons. It was late in the season before the association was ready for work, but they made 30,000 pounds that year. J. B. Dwinnell was elected President; L. F. Warner, Secretary; Thomas Albiston, Treasurer; James A. Weiting, Superintendent of the manufactory. Average price realized for the season was 12½ cents per pound. During the next six years, up to and including 1879, were made respectively, 70,000, 86,000, 114,000, 106,000, 132,000, and 96,000 pounds per year. For two years the association rented, but in 1875, it purchased necessary buildings, which they fitted up for their use with the best machinery to be obtained. The cheese has always brought the highest price in the market, bringing from one to two cents a pound more than market quotations at time of sale. In 1878, at the international fair, in New York, all the cheese placed on exhibition was sold at auction and the Lodi cheese brought a cent and a half per pound more than any other. The association make none but full cream cheese. For several years, the great bulk of their sales were made for shipment to Liverpool. Its officers elected for 1880 were Job Mills, President and Secretary: Thomas Albiston, Treasurer.

Mineral Springs.—Lying within the village is a spring, the existence of which was well known at an early day, attention having been called to it because of the ferruginous deposits along the line of its flow, and also because of its strong styptic taste. Here all thought of it ended, and no attempt was made to ascertain its true character, or whether it was of medicinal value. Then Judge Palmer built his mill over it, and for many years it was hid from view. In the summer of 1878, while repairs were being made by the proprietor, Mr. Andrews, into whose hands it had passed, the effect of the water upon the workmen using it, led to an investigation. With a view of ascertaining what were the mineral contents of the spring, the services of Dr. Barry, of the village, were secured, who reported, as a partial analysis, that the constituents of the water were carbonic acid gas, oxide of iron, carbonate of magnesia, chloride of lime, and chloride of sodium; the iron especially being present in large per cent. Quite a number of persons in the village began using the water, with marked effect. S. M. Blake, M. D., of the village, in a communication in the Lodi Valley News, under date of January 29, 1879, wrote as follows: "In the short time that I have had the opportunity to observe the effects upon the system, I do not hesitate to state that its effects are more immediately perceptible than any other with which I am personally acquainted, being diuretic, laxative, and, in many cases, positively cathartic. As a remedial agent in diseases of the kidney and bladder, of an inflammatory character, and in all cases of torpor of the portal circulation, or of liver complaint, I believe it to be a very efficient remedy. This opinion is based upon the disinterested statements of those who have used it for the last few weeks, as well as upon the chemical analysis of Dr. A. C. Barry. We would also be led to look for decidedly tonic influences from its chalybeate character, but more extensive observation is needed to speak positively as to this effect." Of well-known citizens who have used this water, I may be allowed to mention the names of Hon. Joel Pruyn and Rev. Father Maynard. For the last five years, he has been afflicted with chronic diseases of the kidney and bladder, compelled many times to seek aid from several different physicians, myself among the rest. He has also used the Bethesda water of Waukesha; but his present convictions are that the water from Andrews' spring 'beats us all' in giving relief. Father Maynard, who is using it for the relief of costiveness and nervous debility, certifies to positively beneficial results." One gallon of the water was sent to Gustavus Bode, analytical chemist, of Milwaukee, for analysis, and he returned the following result:

Chloride of sodium.....	0.3748 grains.
Sulphate of soda.....	0.1843 "
Bicarbonate of lime.....	10.7520 "
Bicarbonate of magnesia.....	7.8643 "
Bicarbonate of iron.....	0.6787 "
Alumina.....	0.2457 "
Silica.....	1.5260 "
Organic matter.....	0.1536 "

Mr. Bode reported, also, the water contained almost all the salts as bicarbonates, and was in this respect, as well as the small sulphates contained therein, similar to the Waukesha waters. In comparing the analysis of these waters with that of Bethesda Springs, of Waukesha, it is found they contain sixteen times as much bicarbonate of iron, and nearly two grains less organic matter. Other chemists have analysed the water with like results. John H. Tesh & Co., of Milwaukee, writing to Mr. Andrews, said: "I think you can safely recommend your spring water for any and all things that the Waukesha waters are recommended for, for the analysis proves them identical."

Since the above was put in type the spring has been opened to its fountain head, and the following analysis made:

Potassium sulphate.....	0.0234
Sodium chloride.....	0.1983
Sodium sulphate.....	0.6007
Sodium bicarbonate.....	0.5338
Sodium phosphate.....	trace.
Calcium bicarbonate.....	15.0757
Magnesium bicarbonate.....	8.4447
Iron bicarbonate.....	0.6059
Aluminum oxide.....	0.0699
Silica (silicon dioxide).....	0.3091

Total grains of solids in a gallon (231 cubic inches)..... 25.8615

Perils of the Ice.—Under date of December 2, 1876, the Columbus Democrat relates the following: “At noon on Friday of last week, the children at the district school, three miles north of the village of Lodi, while at play, went upon the newly formed ice upon the pond near the school premises. The ice gave way, and five of them fell into water seven feet deep, beneath which was a bottom of mud. The cry of alarm was raised, and fell upon the ears of Mr. John McCarton, the teacher, who proved to be a noble young man, as our correspondent declares him. He sprang to the rescue, pulled off his coat and leaped in. He was the fortunate instrument of saving two lives, one of the recovered being a little daughter of James Wilson, and the other a child of James Collins. The other three children clung so close to him in their wild afright that he was drawn under the water himself. Indeed, his own chance of escape was now very small, for he had become so nearly lifeless that he could not cling with his hands to the rope, which had, by this time, been cast to him, they had become so chilled; but by seizing the rope with his teeth, his grasp was at length so tenacious that he was finally pulled out by that means. He was at once taken to the house of James Wilson, where he received every care, and has since recovered. Three children were drowned. One of them was a daughter of Mr. Dennis Maloney, and her age was thirteen. The other two were children of Mr. C. Flint, a boy, aged eleven, and a daughter, aged fourteen. It is related that the brother got out once, and would have made good his escape but for his endeavors to rescue his sister. In so doing, he was pulled in again, and thus lost his own life in an unsuccessful attempt to save hers. The bodies of the drowned were dragged from the water on Friday evening, and taken to their homes for the last time. The funeral of Mr. Flint's son and daughter occurred at the Baptist Church, in Lodi, the Sunday following, and was very largely attended. The remains of Mr. Maloney's daughter were borne to the Catholic Church, at Rocky Run, on the same day, and were also followed by a large procession.”

VILLAGE OF OKEE.

BY ARETAS BAILEY.

The first settler at Okee was Samuel Ring, who came and built the saw-mill in 1847. The mill passed through the hands of Z. Kipp, Blachley & Mathers, Blachley & Bailey, Bailey & Wells and T. S. Wells. In 1858, T. S. Wells erected the present saw-mill on the east side of the creek and put in a planing-mill and circular saws in addition, devoting the old mill to a mill for grinding feed. In 1869, Wells sold the mill power to John Brownrigg, the present owner, who erected the present commodious grist-mill in 1875. Seth Bailey settled in Okee in 1854, becoming joint owner in the saw-mill with Dr. Miller Blachley, and platted the village of Okee in 1858. Mrs. T. S. Wells built the first house after the village was platted. James R. Wells and Rebecca Harmon were the first wedded couple: and a little child of this couple was the first to die. The first school taught was in the year 1849, by Miss Eunice Kirk, in a room of Reuben Ring's house, who received for the three months' service the sum of $6.

The first Postmaster appointed was Gideon Clark, April, 1858, E. W. Horton acting as Deputy; Gideon Clark not residing in the village. The following year, Isaac P. Cole started the first store and acted as Deputy Postmaster for nearly three years, when he sold his place and removed. John Durant, then keeping a few groceries and notions, was appointed Deputy Postmaster under Clark until January, 1862, when he received the appointment of Postmaster. The following year, he removed from the village, Aretas Bailey then took the office as Deputy Postmaster under John Durant until March, 1866, when he received the appointment as Postmaster, and is still the incumbent.

J. Curtis

ROCKY RUN.

The first and only schoolhouse was built in 1853. School was taught in that house the winter of 1853-54, by Miss Kate Bell, who received $12 for three months' service.

There were eight dwelling-houses when the village plat was made.

I. P. Cole started the first store, continued in business about three years. John Durant followed for two years with rather a limited stock. Samuel Woodley erected quite a large store-room adapted to general merchandise, but occupied it only as a grocery store for a period of five or six years.

Miss C. M. Bailey commenced as a grocer in October, 1874, added dry goods in 1877, and is still in business. W. S. Stahl commenced business as a grocer in 1878, and is still in business.

The lumber business has been the leading business of Okee. As late as 1856, the saw-mill had orders for long lumber from places as distant as Sun Prairie. The place has never had any saloons. In 1859, J. N. Fellows (in the height of the lumber trade) established a hotel, connecting a whisky bar, under a license from the Town Board of Lodi. A two years' trial compelled him to seek something different for a livelihood. A young man by the name of Ober shortly after came to the place with a keg of beer and opened to sell lunch and beer to those coming for lumber. Himself and wife drank the beer, and had not money enough to buy a second keg, so the business failed.

The fire record of the place is rather remarkable; one dwelling, that of J. J. Ross, and an outhouse of Mrs. C. Scott, are the only losses sustained since the first settlement of the place.

The war record of Okee is remarkable. The village and a circuit of two miles furnished nineteen men for the army; of these, two were killed in battle, two died from disease contracted in the service, and one, a starved prisoner, died of disease contracted before he reached his home after the close of the war. The remaining number all returned without serious mishaps, although most bear some marks of their devotion to their country.

The first child born in the village was H. H. Rogers', son of D. W. Rogers.

CHAPTER XIV.

TOWN OF LOWVILLE—TOWN OF MARCELLON—TOWN OF NEWPORT—VILLAGE OF NEWPORT—VILLAGE OF KILBOURN CITY.

TOWN OF LOWVILLE.

On the organization of the county, in 1846, the north half of Township 11, Range 10, together with Townships 13 and 12, same range, was made an election precinct and named Wyocena, while the south half of Township 11, Range 10, together with Township 10, Range 10, and east half of Township 10, Range 9, was formed into another precinct under the name of Lowville, after Jacob Low. The name was afterward given to the town. At a meeting of the Board of County Commissioners, held in January, 1849, Townships 10 and 11, Range 10, and the east half of Township 10, Range 9, was formed into a town and the name of Lowville given to it. The house of Jacob Low was designated as the place for holding the first election. At a meeting of the County Board of Supervisors, held January 8, 1850, the town of Lowville was made to comprise only all of Township 11, Range 10,

The first settlement made in this town was in 1843. During that and the following year, Jacob Stone, Jacob Low, Edward Clark and Jonathan Gilbert selected and built upon their claims. In 1845, Silas W. Herring, Henry Herring, John Barmore, Orin Rogers, S. J. Scott and Jefferson Waters came in. S. P. Webb, Claudius Evarts, Justice Worden and Joseph Snell came in 1846.

Thomas McDonough Richards and Julia A. Webb were united in marriage on the 15th day of July, 1847, being the first couple married in the town.

Emma, daughter of Claudius and Betsy Evarts, was born in May, 1847—the first white child born in the town.

The first death was that of Joseph Snell, who died July 30, 1848.

In the summer of 1848, Julia Stevens taught a three-months term of school in a frame shanty, near the house of Jacob Low, on Section 32. At the same time, B. M. Webb taught a term on Section 5. These were the first schools in the town. In the fall of 1879, there were eight good schoolhouses, four of which were owned by the town and the remainder were held by joint districts with other towns.

Elder William Cornell, in 1848, began the proclamation of the Word, his first discourse being at the house of Theodore Northrup, on Section 8. In September, 1849, he organized a Baptist Church, near where he first preached, with sixteen members. The first meetings were held in private houses, and, on completion of a schoolhouse on Section 5, the services were there held. For more than twenty years, the society met in this schoolhouse, when the place of meeting was changed to Edmister's Schoolhouse, on Section 17. Elder Cornell was the first Pastor of the church, followed by Elder Evan Meredith, who for twenty years broke the bread of life to the congregation. Mr. Meredith was succeeded by Elder Enoch Pickering. About 1855, the Presbyterians began services in the town, meeting in different schoolhouses until 1862, when they erected a small but neat church edifice on Section 32. The society has been ministered to from time to time by Revs. Lewis Strong, Lawrie, Gates, Gordon, Hutchinson, Bushnell, Barnes and Wall.

In 1846, a post office was established on Section 32, with Jacob Low as first Postmaster. Mr. Low was succeeded, in order named, by Stephen Brayton, De Witt C. Strong, James Hall and William Ridgeway. The first mail route by which this office was supplied was from Madison to Portage. Prior to the completion of the Northern Division of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, this route was extensively patronized by traveling men. Jacob Low converted his house into a hotel in 1846, continuing the same until 1853. Stephen Brayton, who lived but a short distance from Mr. Low and who succeeded him as Postmaster, then entertained man and beast until 1856, when the stage line was discontinued and travel thus cut off. In 1852, a store was started at the corners, near the post office, by Dr. C. Strong, and it was thought a village would here eventually grow up. But the bright anticipations of the Doctor and land-holders thereabouts had not been realized, up to March, 1880.

The early settlers were occasionally troubled with claim jumpers, and the Claim Club was brought into requisition more than once. At a very early day, one Devendorf made a claim to a certain quarter, remained on it for a time, and then left, no one knew where. Being gone a considerable length of time it was considered he had abandoned his claim, and it was taken by another party. In the course of time Mr. Devendorf returned, erected a shanty on the claim and proceeded to make himself at home. He was ordered off by the Club, but refused to go; therefore one night he received a visit from a dozen men, and was taken out to the marsh in a state almost similar to that in which he came into the world, and as the night was quite cool he soon agreed to do the bidding of the Club.

There are two post offices in the town—Lowville and Rocky Run. This last office was established in 1851, with J. F. Hand as Postmaster. He was succeeded by Ella C. Curtiss, who is the present incumbent.

The following comprise the town officers from 1849 to 1880 inclusive:

1849—Stephen Brayton, Chairman; S. P. Webb, James Hinman, Supervisors; Lemuel Page, Clerk; Clark M. Young, Treasurer; Jonathan Hibbard, Assessor; William T. Bradley, School Superintendent.

1850—Oliver C. Howe, Chairman; John A. Bannon, John J. Lewis, Supervisors; J. F. Hand, Clerk; Silas W. Herring, Treasurer; Jacob Townsend, Assessor; Walter A. Northrup, School Superintendent.

1851—F. C. Curtis, Chairman; J. A. Bannon, Henry Lane, Supervisors; J. C. Jay, Clerk; Samuel Dunn, Treasurer; O. C. Howe, Assessor; C. M. Curtis, School Superintendent.

1852—F. C. Curtis, Chairman; J. Brady, S. P. Webb, Supervisors; P. L. Carman, Clerk; J. Gilbert, Treasurer; J. Townsend, Assessor; William C. Bonstel, School Superintendent.

1853—J. F. Hand, Chairman; Giles Easton, L. G. Folsom, Supervisors; Samuel Dunn, Clerk; L. G. Folsom, Treasurer; F. C. Curtis, Assessor; William C. Bonstel, School Superintendent.

1854—F. C. Curtis, Chairman; Orin Rogers, Birdsell Wheeler, Supervisors; Samuel Dunn, Clerk; Samuel Wheeler, Treasurer; William C. Bonstel, Assessor; William C. Bonstel, School Superintendent.

1855—F. C. Curtis, Chairman; Birdsell Wheeler, O. F. Rogers, Supervisors; Samuel Dunn, Clerk; William C. Bonstel, Assessor and School Superintendent.

1856—F. C. Curtis, Chairman; Michael Gallagher, Delos Bundy, Supervisors; William C. Bonstel, Clerk; N. W. Bennett, Treasurer; J. W. Curtis, Assessor; J. F. Hand, School Superintendent.

1857—Samuel Dunn, Chairman; H. M. Delaney, R. Johnson, Supervisors; F. S. Henry, Clerk; N. W. Bennett, Treasurer; F. C. Curtis, Assessor; J. F. Hand, School Superintendent.

1858—Samuel Dunn, Chairman; Delos Bundy, H. M. Delaney, Supervisors; F. S. Henry, Clerk; S. R. Lane, Treasurer; F. C. Curtis, Assessor; J. F. Hand, School Superintendent.

1859—J. F. Hand, Chairman; Ole Wilson, Birdsell Wheeler, Supervisors; Samuel Dunn, Clerk; H. Lane, Treasurer; F. C. Curtis, Assessor; F. L. Henry, School Superintendent.

1860—Delos Bundy, Chairman; William H. Young, Nelson Wilson, Supervisors; D. C. Strong, Clerk; W. W. Curtis, Treasurer; F. C. Curtis, Assessor; F. L. Henry, School Superintendent.

1861—Delos Bundy, Chairman; H. Lane, O. C. Scovell, Supervisors; D. C. Strong, Clerk; W. W. Curtis, Treasurer; F. C. Curtis, Assessor; M. T. Alverson, School Superintendent.

1862—Samuel Dunn, Chairman; S. W. Herring, Henry Lane, Supervisors; M. T. Alverson, Clerk; W. W. Curtis, Treasurer; S. P. Webb, Assessor.

1863—William H. Young, Chairman; Adam Hall, Matthew Trout, Supervisors; Samuel Dunn, Clerk; W. W. Curtis, Treasurer; F. C. Curtis, Assessor.

1864—William H. Young, Chairman; Warren Gilbert, John Halpin, Supervisors; Samuel Dunn, Clerk; W. W. Curtis, Treasurer; F. C. Curtis, Assessor.

1865—William H. Young, Chairman; Adam Hale, John Halpin, Supervisors; Samuel Dunn, Clerk; W. W. Curtis, Treasurer; F. C. Curtis, Assessor.

1866—I. N. Brown, Chairman; John Budd, Lewis Edmister, Supervisors; Samuel Dunn, Clerk; John Halpin, Treasurer; F. C. Curtis, Assessor.

1867—J. W. Henry, Chairman; Elbridge Curtis, John Halpin, Supervisors; Samuel Dunn, Clerk; W. W. Curtis, Treasurer; F. C. Curtis, Assessor.

1868—S. W. Herring, Chairman; Elbridge Curtis, Matthew Trout, Supervisors; Samuel Dunn, Clerk; William W. Curtis, Treasurer; F. C. Curtis, Assessor.

1869—F. C. Curtis, Chairman; Matthias Trout, James Price, Supervisors; Samuel Dunn, Clerk; Thomas Smith, Treasurer; W. W. Curtis, Assessor.

1870—William F. Young, Chairman; Matthew Trout, Charles Woodford, Supervisors; Samuel Dunn, Clerk; Thomas Smith, Treasurer; F. C. Curtis, Assessor.

1871—Samuel Dunn, Chairman; F. M. Delaney, Eli Rosabaugh, Supervisors; James Price, Clerk; Thomas Smith, Treasurer; F. C. Curtis, Assessor.

1872—Samuel Dunn, Chairman; William McNeerney, Eli Rosabaugh, Supervisors; James Price, Clerk; Thomas Smith, Treasurer; F. C. Curtis, Assessor.

1873—Samuel Dunn, Chairman; Eli Rosabaugh, Daniel Scofield, Supervisors; James Price, Clerk; Thomas Smith, Treasurer; F. C. Curtis, Assessor.

1874—Samuel Dunn, Chairman; John Kearney, Daniel Scofield, Supervisors; James Price, Clerk; Thomas Smith, Treasurer; S. W. Herring, Assessor.

1875—Samuel Dunn, Chairman; M. Trout, Isaac Rosabaugh, Supervisors; James Price, Clerk; Thomas Smith, Treasurer; S. W. Herring, Assessor.

1876—F. C. Curtis, Chairman; M. Trout, L. C. Brown, Supervisors; Joseph Townsend, Clerk; Thomas Smith, Treasurer; E. Curtis, Assessor.

1877—F. C. Curtis, Chairman; M. Trout, Nels. Wilson, Supervisors; Samuel Dunn, Clerk; Joseph Edmister, Treasurer; William Young, Assessor.

1878—F. C. Curtis, Chairman; M. Trout, John Kearney, Supervisors; Samuel Dunn, Clerk; Thomas Smith, Treasurer; William H. Young, Assessor.

1879—John Palmer, Chairman; I. L. Curtis, Thomas Austin, Supervisors; Joseph Townsend, Clerk; Joseph Edmister, Treasurer; William Evert, Assessor.

1880—James Price, Chairman; Matthias Trout, Nils Wilson, Supervisors; Samuel Dunn, Clerk; Thomas Smith, Treasurer.

TOWN OF MARCELLON.

On the 9th day of January, 1849, all of Township 13, Ranges 10 and 11, was organized into a town, and the name of Marcellon given to it, and McDonald's Hotel designated as the place for holding the first election. At the annual meeting of the Board of Supervisors in December following, Township 13, Range 11, was taken from the town leaving, as the territory of Marcellon, all of Township 13, Range 10.

The first settler in the town was Francis B. Langdon, who located on Section 24, in November, 1845. Case and Powell came soon after. P. Peckham came in March, in 1846, and E. Herod, William J. Ensign, Gilman H. Hoyt, came that same year, while, previous to 1849, quite a large number made here their homes, among whom were Samuel Seavy, John Seavy, Thomas D. Wallace, William H. Cahoon, George Brinkerhoff, William Bonny, Lawrence Van Duesan and Hiram Albee.

The first marriage in the town was that of P. Peckham and Miss Austin, in October, 1847.

Death claimed the first victim in the person of Harriet Ensign. She was the daughter of William J. Ensign. Her remains were deposited on the farm and afterward removed to the cemetery at Marcellon, being the first burial therein.

The first school in the town was taught by Leona Ensign in the summer of 1847, on Section 36. In 1879, there were four whole and eight joint districts, with seven school buildings, valued at $1,835, with accommodations for 367 pupils. The number in attendance during that year was 362, and the total amount paid in the districts, where there are school buildings, for the same period, was $1,148.

The first religious services in the town were held on Section 1, at the house of Mr. Powell in June, 1846. Elder Wedge, a Baptist minister, was the pioneer preacher of the Gospel, and addressed the audience on this occasion.

The first church organized was the Protestant Methodist at Marcellon Post Office, in 1849. Rev. Mr. Cassell was the organizer, and meetings were held in the schoolhouse. No church edifice was ever erected. The congregation disbanded in a short time, the greater portion of the members afterward uniting with the Methodist Episcopal Church at Pardeeville.

In 1879, there were two churches in the town, the Methodist Episcopal brethren having one on Section 7, and the Baptists one on Section 5.

The first winter Francis B. Langdon was here he lived in a small log house in which there was no window, and but one door. To obtain flour and meal for the use of the family, he had to go either to Beaver Dam, Columbus or Waupun, it requiring several days to make the journey, and, when arriving at his destination, there was no certainty of obtaining a supply.

On the 20th day of November, 1850, was organized the Marcellon Cemetery Association, with Nathan Beach, George Babcock, James D. Carr, Gilman H. Hoyt, A. L. Crippin and William J. Ensign, Trustees. The association purchased of Thomas D. Wallace two acres off the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter of Section 36, for cemetery purposes. In 1872, another acre was added to the original plat. The daughter of William J. Ensign, whose death has been previously mentioned, was the first here buried.

Marcellon Post Office was located on Section 36, on the main thoroughfare between Milwaukee and Portage, and around the office grew up, between the years 1849 and 1857, quite a little village, the greater part of which was located on the lands of William J. Ensign and Andrew Lipe. During this time there were here three general stores, with other kinds of business sufficiently represented to meet the wants of the community. On the completion of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, which was run three miles south, the place ceased to exist. The first house built in the village was by Gilman Hoyt, the second by William J. Ensign, the third by S. G. McDowell. A. P. Lipe built the first hotel, and provided "entertainment for man and beast," for a number of years. The post office was established in 1849, with William Wallace as the first Postmaster. Mr. Wallace was succeeded successively by William Greens, George Janes, A. P. Lipe, T. Wade, J. W. Campbell, G. Hoyt, P. C. Heath, William Herreman and Mrs. M. I. Lockwood; the latter of whom was in possession of the office in February, 1880, at which time mail was received twice a week from Pardeeville.

Marcellon is bounded on the east by Scott, on the west by Fort Winnebago, on the south by Wvocena, and on the north by Marquette County.

The town has a rolling surface, is in some parts very heavily drift-covered, is almost without marsh or prairie, and, lying almost wholly within the area of the Potsdam sandstone, presents a generally low and sandy soil. The Fox River crosses the southeast corner of the town, and two small head-streams of French Creek, a tributary of the Fox, traverse the western section.

Bellefontain Post Office was established in 1850, some two miles north of its present location, on Section 14, with James H. Bonney as Postmaster. Between 1850 and 1859, the office was moved three times, with Horace Carpenter and Mr. Kelly as Postmasters. In 1859, James Aldrich was appointed, and the office was removed within a half-mile of its present location. In 1863, Henry Neef succeeded Mr. Aldrich, and, in turn, was succeeded by E. C. West in 1869.

On the 18th day of February, 1859, Rev. D. C. Miller organized the Scott and Marcellon Free-Will Baptist Church. Services have been held alternately in the Barden Schoolhouse, in the town of Scott, and Comstock Schoolhouse, in this town. In the spring of 1880, a church house was erected on the line dividing the two towns, but in the town of Scott.

Midland Post Office is located upon Section 3, and was established in 1847, with Robert McKay as Postmaster. William Meacher was appointed in 1867, and is the present Postmaster.

The first entry of land was by L. Foote and Charles McDougal October 11, 1836: patent issued November 7, 1837, for the southwest quarter of Section 31, containing 144 acres.

In 1864, a Methodist Episcopal class was formed at the stone schoolhouse, on Section 5, but the first preaching by a minister of that denomination was by Rev. Joseph Bolton, at a schoolhouse on Section 18. Mr. Bolton organized the class mentioned, and ministered unto them during his stay on the circuit. He was succeeded, in the order named, by Revs. T. M. Ross, M. Peck, Edward Bronson, Jabez B. Cole, O. B. Clark, William Jones, William Cook, John Varty and W. F. Stright. The Methodist Episcopal Church on Section 7, known as the Goodman Church, was built in 1869. The building committee were Farnsworth, Morrison, Dunbar, Goodman and D. S. Woodworth. The Baptists have a church on the southwest quarter of Section 5, which was built in 1869. Mitchell, Rounds, Cocker, Loomer, Dates and Woodworth were active in its construction.

Hiram Albee, of whom mention has been made as an early settler, died on the 8th day of May, 1878. The Portage Register thus speaks of him: "The late Hiram Albee was one of Marcellon's oldest and most valued citizens. He was born at Wardsboro, Windham Co. Vt., February 13, 1812; although he was one of ten children and his parents were very poor, he managed by means of his natural abilities and industry to acquire considerable education, as is shown by his teaching during his life twenty terms of district school; a large number of men and women can testify to his faithfulness and efficacy as a teacher. In 1828, he emigrated to New York and then married May J. Barrett, of Broad Albion, in that State.

"He remained in New York until 1846, when he removed to Wisconsin, and in 1847, he settled at Marcellon, where he spent the remainder of his days. He was identified with the organization of this town and was its second town Superintendent, which office he held for three terms. He was also Deputy Provost Marshal during the late war, and was Justice of the Peace for more than twelve years. He died as he had lived for many years, a member in good and regular standing of the Close Communion Baptist Church, and to this church, as well as to the community and his sorrowing family his death is a great loss. He leaves an aged wife and eight children: W. C. Albee, of Marcellon; Emily A. Ross, wife of Henry Ross, Barron County; Euretta McDonald, wife of Marion McDonald, Furness County, Neb.; George W. Albee, of Benton County, Iowa; Morette Dean, wife of Charles Dean, Barron County, Wis.; D. J. Albee, Portage, Wis.; Gurdetta Herreman, wife of Ivin Herreman, of Marcellon, and Fagette Albee, of Marcellon. The funeral was held at the late residence of deceased in Marcellon, and was conducted by Elder Thomas Yule of this city, and the singing was led by David G. Muir, in pursuance of a request of Mr. Albee previous to his death."

The following is a list of town officers from the organization of the town to the present time:

1849—Mathew W. Patton, Chairman; John Meddaugh, Samuel Seavey, Supervisors; Thomas D. Wallace, Clerk; Gilman H. Hoyt, Assessor; John Seavy, Treasurer; James M. Hoyt, School Superintendent.

1850—John Seavy, Chairman; Thomas D. Wallace, William H. Cahoon, Supervisors; George Brinkerhoff, Clerk; William Bonny, Treasurer; Lawrence Van Dueson, Assessor; Hiram Albee, School Superintendent.

1851—Moses F. Case, Chairman; Samuel Hovey, James M. Hoyt, Supervisors; William H. Cahoon, Clerk; Martin M. Williams, Treasurer; James D. Cann, E. A. McDowell, Assessors; O. D. Coleman, School Superintendent.

1852—Jacob Rood, Chairman; Elmon Barker, Giluan H. Hoyt, Supervisors; S. G. McDowell, Clerk; James D. Carr, Treasurer; Nathan Beach, Assessor; O. D. Coleman, School Superintendent.

1853—Ebenezer Williams, Chairman; David Wyman, E. A. McDowell, Supervisors; Morris S. Williams, Clerk; E. A. McDowell, Jacob Rood, Assessors; John Seavy, Treasurer; P. C. Heath, School Superintendent.

1854—E. A. McDowell, Chairman; Darius Pierce, Ovid French, Supervisors; S. A. Knapp, Clerk; Ovid French, J. S. Blodgett, Elmon Barker, Assessors; Elam McDowell, Treasurer; O. D. Coleman, School Superintendent.

1855—John Seavy, Chairman; Simon Hoyt, H. J. Prescott, Supervisors; S. A. Knapp, Clerk; William Meacher, Nathan Beach, Assessors; E. McDowell, Treasurer; J. M. Hoyt, School Superintendent.

1856—M. F. Cass, Chairman; E. G. Chase, H. J. Prescott, Supervisors; S. A. Knapp, Clerk; William Meacher, Nathan Beach, Assessors; E. M. McDowell, Treasurer; O. D. Coleman, School Superintendent.

1857—James H. Bonney, Chairman; Martin M. Williams, Edward Leighton, Supervisors; Rufus Comstock, Clerk; Elam McDowell, Treasurer; Josiah Pierce, S. A. Knapp, Assessors; J. C. Blodgett, School Superintendent.

1858—James H. Bonney, Chairman; James H. Blodgett, P. C. Heath, Supervisors; Rufus Comstock, Clerk; Martin M. Williams, Treasurer; William Meacher, Merrell H. Smith, Assessors; J. C. Blodgett, School Superintendent.

1859—M. M. Williams, Chairman; Edward Leighton, W. W. Comstock, Supervisors; C. C. Chapple, Clerk; F. B. Langdon, Treasurer; M. F. Cass, Assessor; Hiram Allen, School Superintendent.

1860—S. A. Knapp, Chairman; N. Beech, R. D. Tasker, Supervisors; F. McGuire, Clerk; A. Smith, Treasurer; William Meacher, School Superintendent.

1861—S. A. Knapp, Chairman; R. D. Tasker, G. W. Allen, Supervisors; E. G. Chase, Clerk; S. Herreman, Treasurer; M. H. Smith, Assessor; Hiram Albee, School Superintendent.

1862—Nathan Beach, Chairman; William Meacher, G. C. Hopkins, Supervisors; M. S. Williams, Clerk; S. A. Knapp, Treasurer; William Meacher, Assessor.

1863—James M. Hoyt, Chairman; W. W. Comstock, H. H. Chapman, Supervisors; E. G. Chase, Clerk; Samuel Herriman, Treasurer; P. C. Heath, Assessor.

1864—Phillip Loomis, Chairman; O. S. Ensign, W. W. Comstock, Supervisors; E. G. Chase, Clerk; Jackson Kohler, Treasurer; Hiram Albee, Assessor.

1865—William Meacher, Chairman; G. H. Hoyt, James C. Morrison, Supervisors; H. Albee, Clerk; William Woodford, Treasurer; William Meacher, Assessor.

1866—L. A. Bliss, Chairman; L. H. Cass, G. W. Allen, Supervisors; Henry Neef, Clerk; Edward Leighton, Treasurer; Henry Preston, Assessor.

1867—L. A. Bliss, Chairman; R. D. Tasker, G. W. Allen, Supervisors; Henry Neef, Clerk; Rufus Comstock, Treasurer and Assessor.

1868—C. W. Beach, Chairman; G. S. Dunbar, W. W. Comstock, Supervisors; Henry Neef, Clerk; L. A. Bliss, Treasurer and Assessor.

1869—George S. Dunbar, Chairman; W. W. Comstock, R. D. Tasker, Supervisors; Henry Neef, Clerk; H. H. Preston, Treasurer; M. H. Smith, Assessor.

1870—Hiram Albee, Chairman; E. C. West, Frank Fuller, Supervisors; Henry Neef, Clerk; William Herriman, Treasurer; William Meacher, Assessor.

1871—Hiram Albee, Chairman; John Moran, Frank Fuller, Supervisors; Henry Neef, Clerk; William Herriman, Treasurer; William Meacher, Assessor.

1872—Hiram Albee, Chairman; John Moran, D. B. Herreman, Supervisors; Henry Neef, Clerk; William Herriman, Treasurer; William Meacher, Assessor.

1873—Hiram Albee, Chairman; John Moran, D. B. Herreman, Supervisors; Henry Neef, Clerk; Asa Smith, Treasurer; William Meacher, Assessor.

1874—Hiram Albee, Chairman: John Moran, D. B. Herreman, Supervisors; Henry Neef, Clerk; William Herreman, Treasurer; William Meacher, Assessor.

1875—Hiram Albee, Chairman: John Moran, D. B. Herreman, Supervisors; Henry Neef, Clerk; William Herreman, Treasurer; William Meacher, Assessor.

1876—O. D. Coleman, Chairman: Isaae Beach, Zadoc Waite, Supervisors; Henry Neef, Clerk; Asa Smith, Treasurer; William Meacher, Assessor.

1877—O. D. Coleman, Chairman: C. Cole, Z. Waite, Supervisors: Amos Cannon, Clerk: Asa Smith, Treasurer; Stephen Woodard, Assessor.

1878.—Asa Smith, Chairman: Levi Reeves, John Moran, Supervisors; A. A. Cannon, Clerk; Christopher Cole, Treasurer; Elon Woodard, Assessor.

1879—Asa Smith, Chairman: William Barry, John Moran, Supervisors; A. A. Cannon, Clerk; H. M. Preston, Treasurer; William Meacher, Assessor.

1880—Asa Smith, Chairman: William Carry, Henry Cuff, Supervisors; A. A. Cannon, Clerk; Christopher Cole, Treasurer; William Meacher, Assessor.

TOWN OF NEWPORT.

This town includes all of the west half of Township 13 north, of Range 7 east, lying north of the Wisconsin, and so much of the east half of Township 13 north, of Range 6 east, as lies north and east of that river.

The first settler was Alonzo B. Stearns, who came here in March, 1849, and located on Section 17. Mr. Stearns erected a small log cabin, and commenced to clear the land for a farm. The second person to settle in the town was Marvin Mason, followed by E. A. Toles, E. A. Toles, Jr., and Mr. Abbott. These all came in the spring of 1849.

The first child born in the town was Lena Oleson, daughter of Mary and Ole Arenson, December 26, 1849, at the house of J. Thompson.

The first marriage was that of "Big" Swain Tollison and Tony Gunder. The happy couple were poor in this world's goods, and there being no one in the neighborhood authorized to perform the marriage ceremony, they went on foot in search of a priest. Crossing the river, where the village of Newport was afterward located, the lady was left in the care of Mr. Gilson and family, and the gentleman proceeded to Delton and secured the services of Elder Topping to unite them in wedlock. Not having any money to satisfy the Elder, Mr. Tollison agreed to pay him in hay some time during the next season: but it required a gentle reminder from the good man before he secured his dues.

The town did not fill up very rapidly with settlers, and it was not until the winter of 1853-54 that a schoolhouse was built. In the spring of 1854, Miss Frances M. Howard taught the first school, at a salary of $2.25 per week. The schoolhouse was located on Section 7.

The first sermon preached in the town was at the house of A. B. Stearns, July 5, 1852, the occasion being the death of L. W. Stearns. Elder Dickens, a Wesleyan Methodist, was the officiating clergyman. The first sermon preached in the English language, where people assembled for religious purposes, was at the house of E. A. Toles, Jr., in March, 1853, and was delivered by Elder Anderson, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Hospitality was a distinguishing trait of almost every early settler. Marvin Mason, with his wife, two children, and a brother of Mrs. Mason, William Pixley, lived together in a cabin 14x16 feet. A. B. Stearns and Mr. Abbott boarded with them, and when E. A. Toles and wife, E. A. Toles, Jr., wife and two children, came out, they also stopped with Mr. Mason, and all lodged in that cabin until the Toles' could erect themselves a house.

There were several Norwegians who were early settlers of this town. Some of them located there in the fall of 1849, among whom were Peter Juleson and family, Swain Tollison, J. Thompson, Paul Anderson, Swain Thompson, Iver Inglebretson, Hans Peterson, George Peterson, Kittle Kittleson and Osman Jensen. They are a thrifty class of people, and are generally held in high esteem by their American neighbors. The first religious services in the town were held by them in 1852. At this time they organized a society, to which was given the name of Norwegian Evangelical Lutheran Church. In April, 1857, a lot was selected on the northwest quarter of Section 20, and the erection of a church was begun, and soon after completed and opened for worship. The entire work was accomplished by volunteer labor. Rev. H. A. Preus was the first Pastor, and labored with the congregation for fifteen years. The Rev. E. J. Peterson has served since December, 1879.

Newport was taken from the town of Fort Winnebago, and organized as a new town, on the 15th of November, 1852, by the County Board of Supervisors. At the time the town was set off, the Wisconsin River was quite high, and occasionally boats would run up and effect a landing on the site of the village that was then being surveyed, and the old settlers were asked to select a name. The name of Newport was suggested, as here a new port was being made by the boatmen. The name was accepted, and the village and town were called by it.

The first election was held at the house of James Christie, the first Monday in April, 1853.

The following are the names of the officers elected since the organization of the town :

1853—James Christie, Chairman ; Andrew Washburn, Perry Woodworth, Supervisors ; Joseph Bailey, Town Clerk ; E. W. Bradley,¹ Treasurer ; Charles Bowen, Assessor.

1854—Edward A. Tolls, Jr., Chairman ; John Cone, Herman Bradway, Supervisors ; Thomas Laffan, Town Clerk ; Alonzo B. Stearns, Treasurer ; H. H. Beardsley, Assessor.

1855—Samuel H. Baker,² Chairman ; Peter Rafferty, David Cone, Supervisors ; Thomas Laffan, Town Clerk ; Isaac Andrews,³ Treasurer ; Elbridge Walker, Assessor.

1856—Edward Dawes, Chairman ; David Cone, Paul Anderson, Supervisors ; Thomas Laffan, Town Clerk ; Alonzo B. Stearns, Treasurer ; Thomas Laffan, Assessor.

1857—Edward Dawes, Chairman ; David Cone, Paul Anderson, Supervisors ; Thomas Laffan, Town Clerk ; Thomas Laffan, Treasurer ; Jacob Sterenberger, Assessor.

1858—Edward T. Hooker, Chairman ; Stewart Blood, John Stuvell, Supervisors ; J. H. Foote,⁴ Town Clerk ; H. H. Beardsley, Treasurer ; H. McDonald, Jacob Frey, Elbridge Walker, Assessors.

1859—Jonathan Bowman, Chairman ; William Porter, David Stillwell, Supervisors ; Clinton D. Woodruff, Town Clerk ; H. H. Beardsley, Treasurer ; Daniel B. Kuney, Jacob Sterenberger, Stewart Blood, Assessors

1860—John W. King, Chairman ; John Tanner, Osmond Jenson, Supervisors ; William A. Gardner,⁵ Town Clerk ; Halvor Severson, Treasurer ; Emory W. Wait, Assessor.

1861—John W. King, Chairman ; John Tanner, Osmond Jenson, Supervisors ; J. Jackson Brown, Town Clerk ; Halvor Severson, Treasurer ; Jacob Sterenberger, Rockwell M. Thompson, Amplus Chamberlin, Assessors.

1862—Robert Herren, Chairman ; Nathaniel Van Alstine, Osmond Jenson, Supervisors ; Abram R. Dixon, Town Clerk ; Seth Knowles, Treasurer ; Perry G. Stroud, Irving W. York, Halvor Severson, Assessors.

1863—Robert Herren, Chairman ; Hans Petersen, Anfend Nelson, Supervisors ; G. A. Corning, Town Clerk ; A. L. Proescher, Treasurer ; F. Heberlein, Alonzo B. Stearns, Osmond Jenson,⁶ Assessors.

1864—George H. Daniels, Chairman ; Hans Peterson, John Lynch, Supervisors ; Edwin R. Herren, Town Clerk ; A. L. Proescher, Treasurer ; Henry M. Whitney,⁷ Martin Nelson, George F. Noble, Assessors.

1865—Irving W. York, Chairman ; Anfend Nelson, Charles Teshner, Supervisors ; Charles A. Noyes,⁸ Town Clerk ; Charles Moeller, Treasurer ; Amplus Chamberlin, Martin Nelson, Assessors.

1. E. W. Bradley failed to qualify and Charles K. Gile was duly appointed and qualified.

2. Mr. Baker qualified, and afterward, during his term, removed from the town, and Edward Dawes was duly elected to the office in his place.

3. Mr. Andrews failed to qualify and Thomas Laffan was appointed in his stead.

4. C. D. Woodruff, Deputy Town Clerk, appears to have performed the duties of Town Clerk, during the term.

5. Mr. Gardner acted as Clerk during part of the term ; J. Jackson Brown (appointee) during the remainder.

6. Mr. Jenson failed to qualify, and D. B. Kuney was appointed in his stead.

7. Mr. Whitney failed to qualify, and E. A. King was appointed in his stead.

8. Mr. Noyes resigned December 13, 1865, and Thomas B. Coon was appointed in his stead.

1866—Irving W. York,¹ Chairman; Benjamin D. Dawes, Anfend Nelson, Supervisors; Thomas B. Coon, Town Clerk; Charles Moeller, Treasurer; Amplias Chamberlin, Alonzo B. Stearns, Assessors.

1867—Robert Herren, Chairman; Charles Teshner, Osmond Jensen, Supervisors; Thomas B. Coon, Town Clerk; Charles Moeller, Treasurer; Amplias Chamberlin, Frank Hill, Halvor Severson, Assessors.

1868—Robert Herren, Chairman; Charles Teshner, Hans Peterson, Supervisors; Thomas B. Coon, Town Clerk; Charles Moeller, Treasurer; Amplias Chamberlin, Alonzo B. Stearns, Henry Howard, Assessors.

1869—George H. Daniels, Chairman; George Ribenack, Anfend Nelson,² Supervisors; Michael Griffin, Town Clerk; Henry M. Whitney, Treasurer; Amplias Chamberlin, Assessor.

1870—George Smith, Chairman; George Ribenack, Anfend Nelson,³ Supervisors; Michael Griffin, Town Clerk; Henry M. Whitney, Treasurer; George H. Daniels,⁴ Assessor.

1871—George Smith, Chairman; John N. Schmitz, John Mylrea, Supervisors; Thomas B. Coon, Town Clerk; Henry M. Whitney, Treasurer; William A. Ramsey, Assessor.

1872—George Smith,⁵ Chairman; John Mylrea, John N. Schmitz, Supervisors; Thomas B. Coon, Town Clerk; Amplias Chamberlin, Treasurer; William A. Ramsey, Assessor.

1873—Irving W. York, Chairman; John N. Schmitz, Anfend Nelson, Supervisors; Thomas B. Coon, Town Clerk; Amplias Chamberlin, Treasurer; William A. Ramsey, Assessor.

1874—Amplias Chamberlin, Chairman; Anfend Nelson, George Ribenack, Supervisors; Thomas B. Coon, Town Clerk; John R. Snider, Treasurer; William A. Ramsey, Assessor.

1875—Irving W. York, Chairman; George Ribenack, Anfend Nelson, Supervisors; Michael Griffin, Town Clerk; John R. Snider, Treasurer; William A. Ramsey, Assessor.

1876—Irving W. York, Chairman; John N. Schmitz, Martin Nelson, Supervisors; Thomas B. Coon, Town Clerk; Marcus A. Rublee, Treasurer; Frank Hill, Halvor Severson,⁶ J. Henry Guyer,⁷ Assessors.

1877—Irving W. York, Chairman; John N. Schmitz, Thomas Hanson, Supervisors; Thomas B. Coon, Town Clerk; Marcus A. Rublee, Treasurer; Frank Hill, Assessor.

1878—Irving W. York, Chairman; John N. Schmitz, Thomas Hanson, Supervisors; Thomas B. Coon, Town Clerk; Marcus A. Rublee, Treasurer; William A. Ramsey, Assessor.

1879—Irving W. York, Chairman; John N. Schmitz, Thomas Hanson, Supervisors; Thomas B. Coon, Town Clerk; Marcus A. Rublee, Treasurer; Frank Hill, Assessor.

1880—Irving W. York, Chairman; Thomas Hanson, R. B. Rose, Supervisors; Thomas B. Coon, Town Clerk; George A. Boyd, Treasurer; Frank Hill, Assessor.

From the organization of the town until 1858, it was Democratic in politics, since which time it has gone Republican at every annual election.

The town of Newport, like Fort Winnebago and Lewiston, presents the usual sandy soil. In Township 13, Range 6, and Township 13, Range 7, the ground raises rapidly towards the north and west, so that on the north side of the town it attains elevations considerably over 400 feet, being well upon the high ground which encircles the plain of Adams and Juneau Counties. The eastern portion of the town, extending into the town of Lewiston, is occupied by a large tamarack marsh, four miles across, from north to south, and three from east to west. Along the west side of the town are the walls of the lower part of the "Dalles of the Wisconsin."

VILLAGE OF NEWPORT.

In 1850, Joseph Bailey made claim to a quarter-section of land on Section 15, Township 13 north, Range 6 east, lying upon the east bank of the Wisconsin River, in the present

1. Mr. York failed to qualify, and Mr. Benjamin D. Dawes, Supervisor, performed the duties of Chairman during the term.

2. Mr. Nelson failed to qualify, and George Smith was appointed in his place.

3. Mr. Nelson failed to qualify, and John Mylrea was appointed in his stead.

4. Mr. Daniels failed to qualify, and Daniel B. Kuley was appointed in his stead.

5. Mr. Smith removed from the town during the term, and Irving W. York was appointed in his stead March 25, 1873.

6. Mr. Severson failed to qualify.

7. Mr. Guyer failed to qualify.

town of Newport. In 1851, Jonathan Bowman, then a young lawyer, just graduated from the law school at Balston Springs, in company with Dr. George W. Jenkins, who had just received his diploma from the medical college at the University of New York, came to the place. Mr. Bowman suggested that here would be a fine site for a village. The river would afford good water-power for all the mills that could be erected upon its bank, and should a railroad ever be run between Milwaukee and La Crosse, coming upon a direct line, it would cross the river at this point. Mr. Bailey, at this time, was a young man with considerable energy but little money, and he proposed to Mr. Bowman that if he would advance the cash to build a small warehouse, and pay for the land he had selected, when it came into market he should have conveyed to him the undivided half and the two would have it surveyed and platted for a village. The proposition was accepted.

About the same time that Mr. Bailey located upon the east side of the river, Edward Norris, John Marshall, Joseph Kendrick and William Steele, secured the title of the land upon the west side, in Sauk County. The proposition of Mr. Bowman was also viewed favorably by these gentlemen, and all afterward joined in building up the village.

In 1852, a charter was obtained from the Legislature, authorizing the construction here, of a bridge across the river, which was to serve as a highway for commerce and travel. During that year, the La Crosse & Milwaukee (now the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul) Railroad was chartered. Byron Kilbourn became its President. Steps were at once taken, by the proprietors of the prospective village, to secure the crossing of the road at this place, and to their propositions the President gave a satisfactory reply.

The Legislature of the State, in 1853, passed an act authorizing John Marshall, Joseph Bailey, Edward Norris, Jonathan Bowman, Joseph Kendrick, Charles Bowen and James Christie to construct a dam across the river on the north half of Sections 15, Township 13, Range 6 east. The act further authorized them to erect and use mills and other machinery; to construct and use wharves and other buildings; to make and use races and other water-courses on such lands as it might be necessary thus to use, or in any manner to make use of the water for hydraulic purposes.

By entry and private purchase, Bailey & Bowman had obtained 400 acres of land, and on the passage of this act, they proceeded to survey and plat a portion of it. They gave their village the name of Newport. Then the owners of the land on the west side of the river also laid out a village which they called Dell Creek. Lots in Newport were no sooner placed in market than purchasers were found at really exorbitant prices, and the summer of 1854 witnessed the erection of a number of dwellings and business houses. The population rapidly increased until the summer of 1855, when the village contained about 1,500 inhabitants, with thirteen large stores, three hotels and other business houses.

As a further inducement to secure the crossing of the railroad at this place, Bailey & Bowman agreed to make a transfer of the undivided half of the 400 acres owned by them to Byron Kilbourn, President of the company. The incorporators of the dam also agreed to assign to him their charter. Kilbourn sent Garret Vliet, to perfect this arrangement in the name of the latter, which was faithfully carried out on the part of Bailey & Bowman and the incorporators of the dam, the only consideration being that they required Mr. Vliet to give two bonds, in the sum of $100,000 each, providing that in case the road should not cross the river at this point, that amount should be forfeited by him to cover damages sustained by the parties executing the deed and transfer. Kilbourn, through his representative, Mr. Vliet, was also bound to build the dam as provided by the charter.

Bailey, Bowman and Vliet now proceeded to survey and plat the remainder of the 400 acres, extending the limits to the village from Section 15 to Section 4, in the present town of Newport, a distance of a mile and a half along the east bank of the river and one half-mile back, overlapping a portion of present village of Kilbourn City.

When it became known that additional territory was being platted, it gave a new impetus to every kind of business, especially in the sale of lots, which changed hands rapidly at advanced rates. In some cases parties would double their money in twenty-four hours' time, and holders of lots did not know whether or not to dispose of them. The name of Newport was considered too tame, and it was changed to Wisconsin City. This it retained but a short time, when, by act of the Legislature, it was changed back to Newport.

Shortly after the transfers previously mentioned, Vliet, acting in behalf of the parties in whose interest it was made, began the construction of the dam, but accomplished very little in the matter, as it was thought best, in order to avoid individual responsibility for any damage that might arise from overflow or other causes, that the work should be done by a company; therefore, on petition, the Legislature passed an act authorizing Garret Vliet, Andrew Dunn, Anson Eldred, John Anderson and John B. Vliet, and all who should become associated with them, to become a body corporate under the name of the "Wisconsin River Hydraulic Company," and as such corporation to have perpetual succession, to be capable of suing and being sued, pleading and being impleaded, answering and being answered unto, both in law and equity, in all courts, and of making and entering into contracts with all parties; of purchasing, holding and conveying real, personal and mixed estates; of having a common seal and making and changing the same at pleasure; of appointing all such officers, agents and servants as to them might seem necessary and proper for conducting the business and protecting the interests of the corporation, and prescribe the compensation to be paid for all services rendered by the persons so appointed; and generally to do all such acts and things as might be necessary for carrying out the objects of the corporation. The company was also authorized to erect a dam across the Wisconsin River on Sections 9, 10 and 15, or either of them, in Township 13 north, Range 6 east, in counties of Columbia and Sauk, but not so high as to interfere with the navigation of the river by rafts, logs or lumber, and to erect and use mills, manufactories and other machinery of whatever kind, to construct and use booms, wharves, storehouses and other buildings, to make and use races and other water-courses, and to make use of the water for hydraulic purposes, and to authorize the same to be done by other parties for a consideration to be agreed on by and between the corporation and such other parties as might desire to be interested therein. To this company, Mr. Vliet conveyed the real estate secured from Bailey & Bowman, as well as the charter for the building of the dam, and the company assumed in its name the bonds given to Bailey & Bowman and the originators of the dam.

A survey of the new railroad was made with Newport as a point upon the line, and it was said that every agreement made with Mr. Vliet was to be carried out in good faith, therefore village lots continued to advance in price. Holders of real estate in proximity to the village also held the same at high figures, and some, whose lands would be overflowed by the construction of the dam, gave notice they should expect quite large sums for "flowage." This proceeding alarmed the members of the hydraulic company, who feared their profits would thus be cut short. As they were under bonds to complete the dam, and also to cause the railroad to cross the river at this place, they feared they were at the mercy of those who might make claims for damages. In this extremity, they proposed to those to whom they had given bonds to surrender the same, assuring them that the railroad would undoubtedly cross at this point, that it was to their interest it should do so, and that their only reason for making the request was that they could make better terms with those who should lay claim for damages arising from the overflow of their lands. If it should be known by these parties that the hydraulic company was under no pecuniary obligation to have the road constructed through the village, they would not be so exorbitant in their demands. As Bailey & Bowman, together with the incorporators of the dam, were only desirous the road should cross here, and believing the work so far advanced that the company would not readily change its plans, and having such strong faith in their new and enterprising village that the railroad company could not ignore its claims, they consented to the request, and the bonds were surrendered. While these operations were taking place, the members of the hydraulic company were engaged in a trade for other land. They purchased the tract upon which Kilbourn City was afterward located.

During the summer of 1855, the citizens of Newport began to fear there was yet some danger of losing the road, and when it became known that, in the month of August, a survey of another line had been made, with the object of crossing the river about two miles above, their fears and anger were unbounded. The further growth of the village was at once checked.

While it was said by those in authority that the road would, in all probability, cross at Newport, all confidence in their assurances was lost. Communication was entered into between the citizens and the railroad company and with the hydraulic company, but no satisfaction was given. The latter company were asked to again enter into bonds or to restore the land and dam privileges, to all of which they turned a deaf ear. As will readily be seen, neither the original owners of the land, the first incorporators of the dam or the citizens of the village who had made investments therein, with the understanding that the railroad should cross the river here, had any recourse in law.

When these facts were fully impressed upon the minds of all, and when known to a certainty that the railroad would cross the river about two miles above, on Section 4, a panic ensued among the holders of real estate. Nearly every one wished to sell and few desired to buy. Property began to depreciate very rapidly, and, in the spring of 1857, when the railroad was completed through the village of Kilbourn City, lots that, two years previous, were held at $1,000, could readily be purchased for $100. Every day, there were some leaving for other and more favorable localities. Good dwelling-houses, on which there were small mortgages, were abandoned or willingly surrendered to the mortgagees. Notwithstanding all this, there were still a few who were determined not to give up without a further struggle for life.

In the winter of 1857, a petition, numerously signed by the citizens of Newport, was presented to the railroad company, praying for the location of a depot at a point on the road nearest their village. As an inducement to the company to grant their request, the citizens obligated themselves to build and keep in good order a ferry across the river, and to carry free all freight intended for the village of Delton, Baraboo or other point on the west side. As the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad was not built at this time, this would be a favorable arrangement for citizens of the places mentioned, as well as for the railroad company. A favorable response to their appeal was made on condition that Newport would erect a suitable station-house and pay the expense of such additional track as might be necessary for the convenient transaction of all business. This the citizens willingly agreed to do.

When the depot was built and an agent placed in charge, Newport held a large mass-meeting, to celebrate its "resurrection." Speeches were made, toasts drank and a general season of rejoicing indulged in. It was now believed that the village would again become as prosperous as formerly, and all their fond anticipations realized.

A year passed, and these bright visions faded away. It was now clearly seen that they were fighting against the inevitable—the village was doomed to die. At this time, the population had lessened fully one-half, and those remaining endeavored to make a change as quickly and quietly as possible. A number of buildings were removed bodily; others were torn down and the material taken away for erection elsewhere. Merchants that had been doing a business of $20,000 to $100,000 a year could not sell enough goods to pay expenses, and, one by one, they boxed up their effects and sent them to other parts, until, in the summer of 1860, but one firm remained. In October following, Freeman Longley quietly followed the example of others, and the village of Newport was—dead.

VILLAGE OF KILBOURN CITY.

It has already been stated that the Wisconsin River Hydraulic Company, in the summer of 1855, purchased the land on which the village of Kilbourn City was afterward located. At this point the table-land lies about eighty feet above the Wisconsin River, the perpendicular, rocky banks of which are occasionally broken by easy ravines running thirty, forty or fifty rods back. These table-lands extend northeast, east, and southeast, to an indefinite extent, and to the south about three-quarters of a mile, where they become more broken by bluffs and hills. Some of this land is level, and some gently rolling. In a state of nature it was generally covered with scattering oaks of middling size, the river and some of the ravines being fringed with rich-appearing yellow pines. This ground for nearly a mile in length and half a mile in breadth, was, in the month of June, 1856, laid out in village lots, with two main streets, one hundred feet wide, corresponding with the principal points of the compass, crossing at right angles half a mile from the river, and all the other streets running parallel with these two, eighty feet wide, and dividing the whole plat into convenient squares and lots for residences and business.

The first settler at this place was Alanson Holly, who arrived here in November, 1855. He at once proceeded to the erection of a dwelling-house, also of an office wherein he was to print the Wisconsin Mirror. "When we came here about the 20th of November," writes Mr. Holly, "there was scarcely a beginning made in the woods at this point. Part of the frame of our office, and part of the frame for a dwelling, were on the ground, that was all. It was cold weather, and a dwelling for our family and a printing office were to be prepared in time to open our press and materials, and issue the first number of the Mirror on the 1st day of January. By unavoidable delays this work of preparation was hardly commenced before the 1st of December. Then we had but four weeks to do all the work, of which time we needed three weeks to open type, fit up the inside of the office, and set up and print the first number. On the 22d of December, we had a dwelling so far prepared that we moved into it, and that night the extreme cold weather commenced. About this time the shingling of the office was finished, and the "boys" commenced opening type before the floor was completed, and while the plastering was going on. On the 25th, the plastering was finished and frozen solid, but the office was still minus half the windows. In this situation, with the thermometer ranging from ten to twenty-five degrees below zero, the compositors set up the type for the first paper—huddling their stands around the stove, heating boards to stand upon, holding their fingers in warm water every ten minutes to keep them limber, and working until 11 and 12 o'clock nights! But the Wisconsin Mirror made its appearance on the morning of January 1, 1856, and we submit to those who saw it if its appearance wasn't respectable considering the circumstances? And that was the way it was done." As the editor well remarks, he was doing what was probably never done in the United States before—printing a paper in the woods! Not a dwelling except his own was within half a mile, and only one within a mile!

On the afternoon on which the paper was to make its appearance, rather an exciting and pleasant affair transpired in the office. A number of the friends of the paper gathered in the office to witness the operation of printing in the woods. Feeling sentimentally inclined, before the press was started, short speeches were made by Hon. S. H. Baker, of Dane County, Jason Weaver, of Ohio, Hon. Jonathan Bowman, Dr. Jenkins, Gen. Joseph Bailey, Dr. Hooker, and others, and it was proposed that the first copy struck from the press should be sold at auction. M. A. Holly, the editor's son, then struck off a copy, and G. F. Noble was called upon to act as auctioneer. The first bid received was from Mr. Bowman, who named $15, and from that it ran up rapidly to $40, $50, $60, and, finally, $65, and passed into the hands of Mr. Weaver. The second copy was then sold to Abram Vliet, for $10, and the third to Joseph Bailey, for $5.

As illustrative of life in the woods, and especially in this embryo village, in the issue of the Mirror for February 5, 1856, the editor says: "We have just moved into our new house, which has been hastily prepared within the last few weeks. It is 20x25 feet, a story and a half high, battened three-fourths of the way round: bricked below next to the outside boarding; lathed on a part of the partitions, and carpeted and blanketted on the rest; a hole dug in the ground 10x14 feet, and 6 feet deep, for a cellar: some rough boards, some smooth ones, and some dry-goods boxes, for a buttery; beautiful frost curtains, and two stoves, smoking hot all the time, to keep the whole warm—no danger of burning the curtains though. We rise early in the morning—fly about awhile to make fires. Mrs. Holly and the girls bake potatoes and pancakes, which we eat for breakfast, and look out of the window at the quails for meat; lug dry limbs on our back for wood, because green oak don't burn good; girls washing dishes, sweeping and making beds; boys working in the office; we snatching five minutes now and then, between chopping wood, bringing water, and calking house, to select copy and write editorials; cold potatoes and pancakes, and thoughts of deer for dinner, and, on special occasions, a talk about apples, lemons, etc., for dessert; biscuit and a little butter, and partridge drumming for supper: twenty-three degrees below zero, and baby crying for sleep—all to be repeated the next day, and so on. But our location is beautiful, and our home will be as neat as a pin when we get it fixed. Four oak-trees hang their branches over our house like the arms of power for our protection; the majestic Wisconsin, catching ten thousand sunbeams, and throwing them joyously into our windows; the rocks and hills peering up in the distance, and the thin covering of snow sparkling in the sunlight, like ten million eyes looking out from the spirit world—is not such a place pleasant for a home? Live in the cities if you will, but give us the wild, wild woods, the rocks, the hills and the majestic river, with health and loving friends, and we are content."

In the winter of 1855-56, the hydraulic company commenced the building of a dam at this place, their charter having been so amended as to authorize its construction. When completed it was 425 feet long, with a fall of eight feet. Considerable trouble was experienced by the lumbermen in running their rafts over, and a large party gathered here in the spring of 1859 and destroyed it.

Soon after Mr. Holly located here, J. B. Vliet, John Anderson, G. F. Noble, James Bailey and others came in, and the place began to assume a business-like appearance. A considerable number of men were employed in clearing away the trees for the streets of the village, and others were engaged in building houses and working on the dam.

One of the rules of the hydraulic company was, that those who purchased lots were to build on them within a reasonable time, or they were to be forfeited to the company. Although it was not until June 10, 1856, that the plat of the village was placed upon record, yet many lots were previously chosen by those who were ready to comply with the terms of sale. The new village in the woods was now christened Kilbourn City, so named in honor of Byron Kilbourn, President of the La Crosse & Milwaukee Railroad. With reference to the selection of this name, the Mirror, under date of June 17, 1856, says: "Under ordinary circumstances we should be opposed to naming a town after a person, but we think the circumstances in this place are such as to make it eminently proper. Hon. Byron Kilbourn, of Milwaukee, for public enterprise which tells on the prosperity of the State, undoubtedly stands first. This makes it proper that an important central town should be named after him. He is one of the early settlers of the State, having come to the metropolis in its infancy, and having been instrumental beyond any other individual in its growth and prosperity; hence there is a propriety in fixing his name to an enduring monument. He is the body and soul of the La Crosse Railroad. On that more than all other enterprises he has staked his reputation as a business man, to make it the great trunk line of the State. The present prosperity of the road shows that his success is almost certain. Under these circumstances it seems highly fitting that some place on the line of the road should bear his name. Our place is nearly central on the road, at the place where it crosses the largest river in the State, and we expect it to be the largest inland town in the State. Then what place could be named after the head man of the road with greater propriety than this? In the name itself there can be no objections. It has but two syllables and is euphonious, consequently is easily spoken and agreeable to the ear. These reasons we think are abundantly sufficient for naming our place as we have. And as the place is honored by the name, it is expected that the name will be honored by the place."

The first public sale of lots was advertised to commence Monday, August 18, 1856, to be continued through the week. At the time specified a large number of persons from Milwaukee, Madison, Portage City, and other points in this State, together with a few from Illinois, Ohio, New York and other States, gathered in the "city" and just before noon the sale began. The conditions of the sale were, one-quarter down, and the balance in three equal annual payments, at 7 per cent interest. Twenty per cent on the price for which the lots sold were deducted for payment all down. The stock of the hydraulic company was taken in payment at par. The sale was closed on Thursday, up to which time lots were disposed of amounting to $76,235, ranging in value from $50 to $1,450 each, ten of which brought upward of $1,000 each, and many others ranging from $500 to $1,000.

Just after the sale was closed, and as night drew on, a party were standing in front of the Mirror office, when an Irishman came running up and hastily inquired: "And is this Kilbourn?" When answered in the affirmative, he replied, "And glad I am, for I could not see it all, for trees, till I was just here, and I was afraid it was a great ways off in the woods, and it would be dark, and the bears would catch me! so I have been running down the strate, with all me might, and just see how wet it is that I am!" and with that he drew out his shirt bosom dripping with sweat. The crowd laughed, and reasoned, though their might be some sense in running from bears in Wall Street, New York, the idea of being caught by them on Broadway, Kilbourn City, was ridiculous.

The second public sale of lots occurred on the 14th, 15th and 16th days of October, 1856, and was conducted by Caleb Wall, of Milwaukee. Mr. Wall was very enthusiastic in his views of Kilbourn, and in an advertisement of a sale that was to take place at his rooms in Milwaukee he says: "There is no new city which holds out such great inducements for all classes of mechanics as Kilbourn City: and I would call upon all mechanics who have families, and who want to better their condition, and secure themselves home and property, not to let this opportunity slip. Many who are now rolling in wealth in Milwaukee, and other cities of our State, owe it to the rise of property: and the chances in Kilbourn City are as great as in any city that has been started in the last ten years. I have no doubt in my own mind, taking the central position of Kilbourn City, that the seat of Government of our State will be located there! A more beautiful site is not to be found for a city." At this second sale, lots were disposed of amounting to $34,447. As at the first sale, many were in attendance from abroad and a large number of lots were sold for speculative purposes.

The first year's growth of Kilbourn City cannot be said to have been very rapid, notwithstanding a large number of lots were sold. Still quite a number of houses were built, and its population gradually increased. Many who doubtless desired to locate here were deterred from the fear that its future might be similar to that of the village of Newport. Still the fact of its being backed by the President of the railroad company, and that the owners of the land here were identified with the railroad was much in its favor. According to the Mirror of this place, considerable jealousy was entertained against it by citizens of neighboring cities and villages. Says the Mirror, under date of December 9, 1856: "Of all the bumpers that ever were invented, we will give some of the people of Newport, Baraboo and Portage City, the credit of capping the climax. Not a man can get through either place, headed toward Kilbourn City, without hearing some of the greatest yarns ever spun. At first, these wisecracks of our neighboring towns pretend to be ignorant that any such place as Kilbourn City exists; afterward they do recollect that there is a place of some such name up there in the woods, but it will never amount to anything; and finally they come fully to their recollection, and declare that though there is such a place, the railroad is not located and will never be built there; the grading is all for sham; the bridge is not let; and the dam will never be put in, and a string of similar falsehoods too lengthy to report. Well, it is and always will be true, that the best fruit trees may be known by the number of clubs about them! There are other towns starting about here, but our neighbors of the towns named seem to have no clubs for them. They are all hurled against Kilbourn City. Really, we hope the poor souls who hurl them will keep on. It gives the world ocular demonstration that ours is the most important town in this part of the State, and the only one to be feared by them as an overshadowing rival. Besides, while Kilbourn City is constantly going ahead, and making sure the foundation of her future greatness, these revilers have nothing else to do but to roll their spite like a sweet morsel under their tongues. Surely we would not deprive them of that pleasure."

The first citizens of Kilbourn City appreciated the advantages of the public school, and about the 1st of February, 1856, appointed a building committee, who at once selected a site and gave orders for the necessary material for the house, which was to be "26x36 feet in size, well finished and conveniently seated." In May following, the building was ready for occupancy, and Miss Julia Seville was engaged to teach a three-months' term, at a salary of $10 per month. There were twenty-seven children of school age in the district, No. 6, of whom fourteen attended the school. Miss Saville was engaged the following fall, at an advanced salary of $24 per month. At the expiration of three months, Miss Lucy A. Swain took charge, at a salary of $22 per month. At the first annual meeting, a tax of $900 was voted to pay for the schoolhouse, and, during Miss Seville's first term, a bell was purchased for it, at a cost of $125. The first to fill the office of School Director of the district was Emory Wall, with John B. Vliet, Treasurer, and George F. McAlister, Clerk.

Geo W Jenkins M.D.

KILBOURN, CITY.

In 1857, there were eighty-five persons of school age in the district, of whom fifty attended school. The number of school age was increased to 180 in 1858. In 1861, Dell Prairie was united with this district, and it was then, and is now, known as Joint District No. 6. On account of the increase of pupils, it became necessary to enlarge the school building, which was accordingly done, at an expense of $400. But the village of Kilbourn continued to grow, and a larger and better building was demanded. At a school meeting held in September, 1867, it was voted to appropriate $1,450 to purchase, of Thomas B. Coons Block 78 of the village, on which it was designed, in the near future, to erect a building that would be sufficiently large to accommodate all the pupils of the district. At this same meeting, a communication was received from Kilbourn Institute, proposing to furnish instruction to the pupils of the high school for the sum of $800 per year, which proposition was accepted. This arrangement continued for the school year, when a room was rented in which the higher branches were taught by a teacher employed by the district, in the year 1868-69, and also the following year, or until the completion of the new building.

After the purchase of the block of ground of Mr. Coon, arrangements were at once made to build, and, in the summer of 1870, was completed the present fine structure, at a cost of $12,287. The building is of cream-colored brick, 40x60 feet, three stories high. There are five main schoolrooms, three recitation and one furnace room. It cost $1,400 to furnish. When first occupied, the present graded system was adopted, and the whole placed in charge of a Principal. On account of the incompetency of the Principal, the schools did not flourish for awhile, and it was not until 1877 that that efficiency was attained that the expenditures warranted. In this year, Prof. A. L. Burnham was employed by the board as Principal, and his selection has been approved by the people. A fine scholar and good disciplinarian, the schools have flourished under his charge. For the session of 1879-80, there were employed: A. L. Burnham, Principal; Lizzie M. Pendleton, Assistant; Hester J. Teare, Emma Darling, Ada Douglass, Bina Loughney. The Principal receives a salary of $1,000 per year, his assistant $315, and the others from $225 to $270.

Kilbourn Institute.—In 1857, through the liberality of A. Bronson, of Prairie du Chien, an academy was started at Point Bluffs, some fourteen miles north of Kilbourn City. For several years, the school was continued with varying fortune, until 1865, when it ceased to be profitable, and was discontinued. In 1863, a charter was secured from the Legislature incorporating the "Kilbourn City Seminary," and when the academy at Point Bluffs was discontinued, the incorporators of the seminary proposed the school should be removed to this place and operated under that charter. The proposition was accepted, the building at the Bluffs moved here, and the Kilbourn Institute opened to the public, with Rev. G. W. Case as Principal. Fine success attended the efforts of those interested in the school, and, in the fall of 1867, there were 140 pupils enrolled.

About 1 o'clock, Sunday, January 30, 1868, while dedicatory services were being held in the new Methodist Episcopal Church, the congregation was startled with the announcement that the institute was on fire. It being some distance off, the building was not reached until the fire had so far advanced that it was impossible to save it. A few articles of furniture were taken from the lower rooms, and all else destroyed. Loss, about $5000.

It does not often occur that a newspaper has the privilege of announcing, at the time, the first birth in a place, but the Wisconsin Mirror, under date December 2, 1856, thus breaks forth: "First Birth in Kilbourn City.—Little Nettie Kilbourn Munger (daughter of C. D. & M. E. Munger, late of Warsaw, N. Y.), was no doubt greatly astonished, last Thursday morning, November 28, on opening her eyes and finding herself the first child born in Kilbourn City—a matter she will probably have occasion to speak of a number of times in the next seventy years." The editor's prediction was not to be, as the little babe lived only until the next August.

The first male child was Victor Stillwell, who was born about two weeks later.

The first lawyer in Kilbourn was named Perry, who came early in 1856, but did no business. Chamberlain & Southgate came in the fall of 1856, and remained about twelve months, but the business not being remunerative, they, too, departed. In the spring of 1857, L. B. Noyes opened an office, and, in the fall, he and P. G. Stroud formed a copartnership, which lasted until September, 1859, Mr. Stroud succeeding to the business. Jonathan Bowman came up from Newport in 1862.

The first death in the village was Morton A. Holly, son of Alanson Holly, of the Wisconsin Mirror, the young man who struck the first paper from the press. On the night of March 13, 1857, young Holly was disturbed by a cat, near his sleeping apartment, and taking a gun he went out of the house and shot it. The next morning he arose early, went out, and taking up the animal, started to the river for the purpose of throwing it in. A slight snow was upon the ground, which was also very slippery. It appears, from the marks made, that when he arrived near the river, in throwing the animal in, his feet slipped from under him and he fell a distance of forty feet, upon the rock and ice below, meeting instantaneous death.

When the dam was torn away by the lumbermen, in 1859, the hydraulic company had become hopelessly involved. The building of the dam had cost them a very large sum of money, which, together with improvements made in the village, had compelled them to borrow largely, their heaviest creditor being Hon. Byron Kilbourn, who had taken judgment notes for all that he advanced. When the loss of the dam occurred, Mr. Kilbourn entered up his judgments, and in due course of time the property all passed into his hands.

No attempt was made to repair the dam until the year 1866. In that year was incorporated the Kilbourn Manufacturing Company, with John Tanner, Edward T. Hooker, M. Griffin, Ulmer F. Hinds and Guido J. Hansen as incorporators. This company was organized for the special purpose of utilizing the immense water-power at this place, and were further authorized to construct and provide such shops, factories, stores and other buildings, works, machinery and fixtures, as may be necessary and convenient for the purposes of milling and manufacturing any and all kinds of implements and fabrics, whether composed of wood, iron, wool, cotton or other materials, and all kinds of machinery; to construct, provide and use water, steam or other power to propel machinery, and to sell, lease or let to any person or persons, or body corporate and politic, the whole or any part of the real estate, water, steam or other power, shops, factories, stores or other buildings, machinery or fixtures, for such price and on such terms as may be agreed on by the contracting parties, and to make and execute such deeds, leases and other writings therefor as may be necessary to protect the rights of the respective parties thereto. The company was also authorized to complete the water-power on Sections 3, 4, 9 and 10, in Township 13 north, of Range 6 east, in the counties of Columbia and Sauk, by raising the dam a sufficient height for that purpose, not exceeding three feet above the usual low-water mark in the Wisconsin River, and so forming the same that rafts of lumber can pass safely and conveniently without hindrance or delay.

Pursuant to this act, the incorporators repaired the dam during the summer of 1866, raising it about two feet above low-water mark. It should be stated here that Kilbourn assigned all his right, title and interest in the dam on the east side of the river, acquired from purchase of the Wisconsin River Hydraulic Company, so as to enable the incorporators of the Kilbourn Manufacturing Company to proceed with the work without hindrance or delay. A temporary injunction was obtained restraining them in that work, and suit was brought in the United States Court at Milwaukee to declare the dam a nuisance. The trial was had before Judge Miller, who decided it was not a nuisance. Before the judgment was obtained, Byron Kilbourn died, and the company was obliged to abandon the work for a time. On the settlement of the estate of Mr. Kilbourn, Byron H. Kilbourn, his son, obtained possession of that portion of the dam owned by his father, as well as the real estate in Kilbourn City.

Before utilizing the water-power created by the erection of the dam, the Kilbourn Manufacturing Company thought best to give the lumbermen time to test the work in order to ascertain whether trouble or damage would be done in passing over. The test being satisfactory, it was intended to embark in some enterprise that would be satisfactory to the members of the company.

In 1871, Byron H. Kilbourn, Harry B. Shears, George Lintner and G. J. Hansen, under the general law, secured a charter for the formation of the Kilbourn Mill Company, and obtained a perpetual lease from the Kilbourn Manufacturing Company, to use the water-power on the east side of the river, at the same time the manufacturing company binding itself to keep the same in good repair.

In 1871, the company proceeded to the erection of a large mill, which was completed and duly "dedicated" February 22, 1872, by a number of citizens of the place, who assembled at the mill, witnessed its works put in motion, and from the first flour ground, partook of biscuits, made by Mrs. Purcell and Mrs. Ramsay. Toasts were given and responded to, and Kilbourn was happy.

In the spring of 1872, some damage was experienced by the lumbermen in taking their rafts over the dam. Instead of appealing to the courts for redress, they called upon the Legislature to repeal the charter of the manufacturing company, on the ground the dam was dangerous to their interests. This repeal was resisted by the company and the citizens of Kilbourn City. The latter issued a circular, in which, after quoting the charter of the company, they say: "By this charter the company is authorized to construct such a dam as that rafts of lumber can pass safely and conveniently, without hindrance or delay. If the company have done so, certainly no one can complain; and if they have not, then they are not protected by this charter, and are subject to the same liability as though they had no charter. If the company have complied with the provisions of their charter, then to repeal it would manifestly work a great injustice, not only to the company, but to the people of Kilbourn City and vicinity. On the other hand, if they have not complied with its provisions, then the charter affords them no protection, and its repeal will not in the least aid those who claim to have been damaged thereby.

"The company claim that they have complied with the charter; those opposed to them say they have not. Who shall determine the question, the Legislature or the courts?—an impartial jury, or a committee, composed, in part at least, of those who openly claim to be the parties interested? The company say, the courts and jury; the lumbermen say, the Legislature, with themselves composing a part of it.

"Which is right?"

"The dam was constructed during the summer of 1871, in exact accordance with, and fulfillment of, the provisions of the charter; and there was no difficulty in running the dam in the fall of 1871. But in the spring of 1872, the water cut away the west bank of the river, below the dam, and thereby an eddy was formed. This was an unforeseen difficulty, and there was no practical way to remedy it until winter, when work could be done on the ice. The company immediately called to their aid experienced lumbermen and engineers, to determine the best mode of remedying the difficulty, and acting upon the advice given them by the latter, determined to construct a gunwale below the dam, and during the present winter, the company have had a large force at work, at heavy expense, constructing such gunwale.

"The company have acted in good faith. They built their dam in accordance with the provisions of their charter. And, as soon as a difficulty, which no human foresight could have anticipated, occurs, and their dam becomes in the least detrimental to any other interest, they immediately go to work to remove the difficulty.

“ And they only ask reasonable time, to remedy not only the present, but any future accident, not happening through their neglect or the want of a proper regard for the right of others. “ Shall they have it?”

The efforts of the lumbermen to secure the repeal were in vain, and, therefore, they appealed to the courts. In the name of Bradford, McCoy & Co., of Quincy, Ill., they brought two suits in the United States Court, at Madison—one against the Kilbourn Manufacturing Company and G. J. Hansen, H. B. Shears, George Lintner and George Ribenack; the other against the Kilbourn Mill Company and G. J. Hansen, H. B. Shears, George Lintner and George Ribenack. The gentlemen named composed the Kilbourn Mill Company, and the object of the lumbermen in making them parties to the suit was to prove their individual liability for the damages sustained. At the same time, suits were brought against the same parties by Weston & Co., in the Circuit Court of Sauk County. All these suits were brought with the avowed object of having the dam abated as a nuisance, and to recover damages sustained in running lumber over it.

In April, 1874, the cases were called in the United States Court, and the verdict of the jury was that the Kilbourn Manufacturing Company should pay damages amounting to $500, while the mill company should pay $1,000. A special verdict was rendered in both cases that the dam was not a nuisance, and that Hansen, Shears, Lintner and Ribenack were not individually liable.

Under these judgments, the dam upon the east side of the river was sold June, 1876, and purchased by John T. Kingston, representing the lumbermen. In consequence of these verdicts in the United States Court, the suits in the State Courts were abandoned.

From that time, nothing has been done to utilize the water-power. The dam remains as constructed, and, although one-half is owned by the lumbermen (Jonathan Bowman owning, by purchase from Kilbourn, that upon the west side of the river), it is well known they have been willing to dispose of their interest or unite in the erection of such manufactories as may seem profitable. The mill from which so much was expected, after a two-years successful run, was burned in the fall of 1874.

Saturday, November 15, 1856, at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the La Crosse & Milwaukee Railroad, held in Milwaukee, the contract for the bridge across the Wisconsin River, at this place, was let to Stone, Boomer & Boughton, of Chicago, to be completed the 1st day of September, 1857, and by that firm was completed by the time specified. The bridge was that of the “Howe’s Patent Truss,” and constructed at an expense of $100,000. It was 450 feet long and 30 feet wide, and had an abutment of solid stone, 60 feet high in the water. Its height was 20 feet, making a distance of 80 feet between the railroad track and the river. Under this track was a carriage-way. The span between the eastern shore and the river abutment was 200 feet. The bridge had three large arches, parallel to each other, and was well inclosed, painted and covered with tin. At that time, it was the finest structure of the kind in the State.

In May, 1866, just after a train of cars had passed over, it was discovered to be on fire. A large crowd of people gathered on the river-bank, but were powerless to prevent its destruction.

While the bridge was burning, a telegram was sent to the firm that built it, and one of the members arrived on the ground before the fire had died out. A contract was immediately entered into for the rebuilding, and, in time, another bridge of the same pattern was constructed. It consisted of four spans, two of 56 feet each, one of 91, and one of 247, giving a total length of 450 feet. The height of the track above the water’s surface was ninety feet. The bridge was composed of 2,345 pieces of timber, 5,912 pieces of wrought, and 3,460 pieces of cast, iron, making a total of 10,717 pieces of wood and iron. The lineal dimensions of the timber portion of the structure amounts to 29,450 feet, or over five and one-half miles, and that of iron 15,850 feet, or about three miles, making a total length of iron and timber of 45,300, or more than eight and one-half miles. All the timber of the main span, 247 feet in length, was burnettized, or submitted to a process by which the natural sap was extracted, and certain kinds of liquids infused, by which the durability of the timber was increased nearly 100 per cent. The weight and size of the span was not equaled by that of any span in any bridge, in proportion to its length, in the United States. Although not so large and fine-looking as the first, it was thought to be a more powerful and durable structure, and the longest, finest and most costly one in the State, and even in the West, except three across the Mississippi—one at St. Paul, one at Clinton, and the other at Rock Island. It was erected, as stated, by the same firm that built the first, and under the general superintendency of J. B. Kupers.

This second bridge did not prove to be as strong and durable as its builders and the public predicted. After a time, it began to weaken, so much so that the company determined to replace it with an iron one of the most improved pattern. We are indebted to Le Roy Gates, of Kilbourn City, for the description here given. The bridge consists of one span 56 feet, one of 243₁₀ feet, and two of 68 $\frac{1}{2}$ feet each, a total of 436 $\frac{1}{10}$ lineal feet, and is furnished for both railway and highway uses.

“The railway is carried on four iron stringers, with ends riveted to floor beams, which in turn are riveted to the posts of the bridge near the upper chord. Commencing at the east end of the bridge, the highway passes under the 56-foot span, and then is carried on the lower chord of the 243-foot span, passing the two 68 $\frac{1}{2}$ -foot spans, from the first of which it is suspended.

“The 243-foot span is what is known as the whipple, or double intersection truss, and the small spans the single intersection trusses. The tension members of the bridge are made from the best quality of iron, capable of sustaining an ultimate tensile strain of 55,000 pounds per square inch, and having a limit of elasticity of from 28,000 to 30,000 pounds per square inch. Notwithstanding the great strength of the iron, it possesses remarkable ductility. In testing specimens to destruction, they were required to elongate at the least 15 per cent, and show a reduction of area at breaking point of 25 per cent. All tensile members, when manufactured, ready to place in the bridge, were tested to 18,000 pounds per square inch, without showing any defector signs of permanent elongation. The compression members are composed of built sections of channel plate and angle iron, and were all proportioned from the latest modifications of Gordon's and Rankin's formula, derived from recent experiments with posts of similar sections. All the material is wrought iron, with the exception of the massive bedplates upon the piers, and a few unimportant washers, whose office is simply to fill certain places without being subject to any strain.

“The bridge is proportioned to sustain, in addition to its own weight, a train weighing 4,000 pounds per lineal foot, headed by an engine weighing 72,000 pounds, on a wheel base of twelve feet, and the train moving at the rate of thirty miles an hour. Additional strength is provided to sustain a wind pressure sufficient to overturn a train of loaded freight cars. Under the worst possible condition of loading, no portion of the structure will be required to sustain a load greater than one-sixth of its ultimate strength.

“The railway floor is composed of cross-ties, 5x8 inches, placed four inches apart, and, on each side of the steel rail is placed a heavy wooden guard rail, having its corners protected by angle iron, and clasped and bolted to each cross tie, so that in case of a train ever leaving the track, it could not possibly get off the bridge. In addition to a substantial oak floor, the bridge is provided with guard rails and handsome railing.

This bridge possesses many points of special merit, some of which have never been embodied in any other structure. Every detail has been designed upon scientific principles, and the closest attention paid to the manufacture of even the smallest pieces. The work has been supervised by a competent inspector, who has seen the manufacture of the bridge from the condition of the pig-iron all through the different processes to the magnificent structure.

D. J. Whitmore, Chief Engineer of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, gave the work his personal attention, and spared no pains to attain the highest perfection in its every detail. The bridge was designed by C. Shaler Smith, President and Chief Engineer of the Baltimore Bridge Company, who is also the contractor. The shopwork was done by the Edgemoor Iron Company, of Wilmington, Del. It is proper to state in this connection that the heavy pieces of iron in the bridge having a play of only one-hundredth of an inch in the joints, when placed in position fit with the accuracy of clockwork. To save time, the manufacture of the rough iron was done simultaneously in six different rolling-mills in Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

The erection of the structure was commenced by Charles J. Houser, Assistant Superintendent of the Baltimore Bridge Company, who unfortunately lost a leg in the early stage of the work.

When Mr. Houser was displaced, James Baldwin was placed in charge as foreman, with Onward Bates, General Superintendent.

But a little over a month was required in the construction of the bridge, and, while being built, and the old one torn away there was not a moment's delay to any train of cars passing over the road.

The village was under town government until 1868, when the Legislature of the State passed an act of incorporation, which was approved February 29, 1868, and which is very liberal in its provisions. The officers of the corporation consist of a president, six trustees, clerk, treasurer, police justice, marshal. The charter provides that the trustees shall have power to grant licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors, wine, beer or cider, to organize fire companies, restrain gambling, and to pass any ordinance for the good government of the village not contrary to the Constitution of this State or of the United States.

The first election, as provided by this charter, was held May 10, 1869. The following are the names of the officers elected from 1869 to 1879 inclusive:

1869—George Smith, President; G. J. Hansen, John Tanner, Henry H. Drinker, George H. Daniels, John N. Schmitz, A. Chamberlain, Trustees; H. H. Hurlbut, Police Justice; J. Jackson Brown, Clerk; George Ribenack, Treasurer; George A. Boyd, Marshal.

1870—George Smith, President; George H. Daniels, G. J. Hansen, H. Corning, R. Herren, J. N. Schmitz, Charles Teshner, Trustees; Hugh Murray, Clerk; Joseph Hainsworth, Treasurer; W. A. Ramsey, Street Commissioner; J. B. Sanderson, Marshal; Thomas B. Coon, Police Justice.

1871—George Smith, President; H. Corning, G. H. Daniels, G. J. Hansen, R. Herren, J. N. Schmitz, Charles Teshner, Trustees; Thomas B. Coon, Police Justice; Hugh Murray, Clerk; G. J. Hansen, Treasurer; J. B. Sanderson, Marshal; W. A. Ramsey, Street Commissioner.

1872—G. J. Hansen, President; I. W. York, George Ribenack, George W. Boyd, Amplus Chamberlain, Charles Buckminster, Charles Moeller, Trustees; Thomas B. Coon, Police Justice; J. Jackson Brown, Clerk; Oscar C. Hansen, Treasurer; W. A. Ramsey, Street Commissioner; William N. Barton, Marshal.

1873—I. W. York, President; George Ribenack, H. H. Drinker, Frank O. Wisner, O. C. Hansen, Frank Raddant, Charles Buckminster, Trustees; Thomas B. Coon, Police Justice; J. Jackson Brown, Clerk; I. H. Chickering, Marshal; W. A. Ramsey, Street Commissioner; G. J. Hansen, Treasurer.

1874—Charles A. Noyes, President; Robert Drinker, Carl Moeller, H. Corning, H. N. Whitney, A. Chamberlain, D. McManmon, Trustees; Thomas B. Coon, Police Justice; J. Jackson Brown, Clerk; J. B. Sanderson, Marshal; W. A. Ramsey, Street Commissioner; D. E. Loomis, Treasurer.

1875—Charles A. Noyes, President; H. Corning, R. W. Drinker, Charles Moeller, D. McManmon, H. M. Whitney, George Oswald, Trustees; John Jackson Brown, Police Justice; John Jackson Brown, Clerk; Daniel E. Loomis, Treasurer; John R. Snider, Street Commissioner; J. B. Sanderson, Marshal.

1876—I. W. York, President; William F. Angell, Charles O. M. Buckminster, James H. McNeil, Aiken J. Sexton, John Mylrea, Charles W. Snider, Trustees; J. Jackson Brown, Police Justice and Clerk; Daniel E. Loomis, Treasurer; Gilson Van Alstine, Marshal; John Cowley, Street Commissioner.

1877—George Smith, President; Frank Hill, John N. Schmitz, Charles Schroeder, R. B. Rose, George Oswald, Bernard Krech, Trustees; George F. Noble, Police Justice; Thomas J. Conner, Clerk; Daniel O. Loomis, Treasurer; Gilson Van Alstine, Marshal.

1878—Charles A. Noyes, President; Frank Hill, R. B. Rose, J. P. Soeldner, J. N. Schmitz, Henry Snider, Charles Schroeder, Trustees; William Snoad, Police Justice; Charles E. Mylrea, Clerk; Daniel E. Loomis, Treasurer; Robert Sexton, Street Commissioner; George Oswalk, Marshal.

1879—I. W. York, President; P. J. Mechler, B. Krech, R. B. Rose, Charles Schroeder, M. A. Rublee, Frank Hill, Trustees; William Snoad, Police Justice; C. E. Mylrea, Clerk; J. Roemback, Street Commissioner; Daniel E. Loomis, Treasurer; N. A. Fedderly, Marshal.

In 1857, the village had three public houses—the Forest City House, the St. Nicholas and the Kilbourn City House. There were two dry-goods stores, one cigar manufactory, one hardware store, one printing office, one clothing store, one livery stable, one grocery and provision store, one blacksmith-shop, one drug and grocery store, one carpenter-shop, one book and variety store, one barber-shop, two millinery stores, one saloon, one boot and shoe store, one meat-market, one lawyer, one doctor, one music-teacher and one editor. There were in process of construction four store buildings, two steam saw-mills and a machine-shop.

In the year 1835, the steamboat Frontier, Capt. D. S. Harris, made a trip up the Wisconsin as high as the Dells, but did not attempt to pass through. Steamboats continued to make occasional trips as high as the Dells for some years afterward. In 1850, the Enterprise, Capt. Gilbert, reached the Dells, tied up in the eddy over night, and the next morning continued on through the Dells and as high up the river as Point Bass. The same boat afterward made two or three trips to the same point.

For several years before the railroad reached Kilbourn City, John B. Du Bay kept a keelboat on the river a considerable portion of the time, carrying freight from Portage City to Point Bass. Owing, however, to the swiftness of the current in the Dells in high water, and the numerous sandbars in the river above and below that point in low water, the navigation of the Wisconsin above Portage was always both uncertain and expensive, and the charges for freight 75 cents per hundred alone justified the expense of navigation.

Notwithstanding the existence of the Dells was known for many years, and a few venturesome spirits, in frail skiffs, explored the river and admired the fine scenery, it was not until 1873 that any special effort was made to accommodate the sight-seers who desired to visit the wonderful scenes which they had heard described, but who were too timid to row the river. In the summer of that year, Capt. A. Wood brought the steamboat Modocawando down the river from Quincy, Wis., with the design of making regular trips through the Upper Dells. The season was tolerably successful. In 1874, she continued her trips through the Upper Dells until about the 1st of August, when she was transferred below the dam, and, during the rest of the season, made trips through the Lower Dells. In 1875, she passed into the hands of Capt. Walton McNeel, who continued to run through the Lower Dells during the season. In 1876, the boat was sold, taken to Portage and placed upon Fox River.

Dell Queen.—In the fall of 1874, Bergstresser & Bell brought the steamer Lake City from Madison, re-constructed and re-christened her the Dell Queen; but the boat was from inadequate to the requirements of a first-class pleasure-boat, and, during the winter following, was dismantled, and an elegant and commodious steamer, bearing the same name, was built to take her place. Under command of the genial and accommodating Capt. Bell, she plied the Upper Dells during the seasons of 1875, 1876 and 1877. On the 4th of June, 1878, the boat was burned. A large force of men were immediately put to work to rebuild her, and, July 4 following, her first trip was made, and, during the seasons of 1878 and 1879, regular trips were made, and many thousands of persons have had the opportunity to visit the wonderful scenes of the Dells of the Wisconsin. Regular trips are made each day, at 9 A. M. and 2 P. M. Other trips are made as required.

Champion.—In 1875, Capt. A. Jones came from Point Bluff with a small steamer called the Champion. She ran two seasons through the Upper Dells, and then went below the dam and ran the Lower Dells for one season. In 1879, the boat was taken to Mirror Lake, about three and a half miles from Kilbourn City.

Alexander Mitchell.—This steamer was built in 1878, by the Kilbourn Boat Company—George Smith, President. Under command of Capt. D. C. Van Wie, she made regular trips during the seasons of 1878 and 1879. Her regular hours of departure were 9 A. M. and 2 P. M. Her run is through the Upper Dells.

Hops.—The cultivation of hops for the general market commenced in this vicinity in 1859, the first load being brought here by King Thompson, in the fall, and sold to W. A. Ramsey, for 14½ cents per pound. Year by year, the quantity increased, and as the quality was good, fair prices were received. In 1865, Ramsey and Hansen commenced the manufacture of hop presses, in that year making 100 and finding a ready sale for them in this neighborhood. In 1866, the number was increased to 200, which was further increased to 300 in 1867, and the same number in 1868, since which time there has been no demand. The profits made by those engaged in the culture of hops being large, one after another of the farmers engaged in it, until, in 1867, the whole country in this vicinity became excited in a wonderful manner, and a very large area of land was devoted to this purpose. When the season came for picking and drying, considerable difficulty was experienced in securing a sufficient number of pickers, and this demand created a new industry. Leroy Gates, the celebrated Dell Pilot, conceived the idea of going to many of the cities and villages throughout the State, securing the service of as many girls as possible, and hiring them to the farmers at a certain sum per head. It required 15,000 pickers to gather the crop this year, 10,000 of whom were brought from abroad, the greater number through the influence of Mr. Gates. The editor of the Milwaukee Sentinel was on one of the trains bringing a delegation of pickers to this place, and thus expresses his thoughts: "Coming from Milwaukee, a few days ago, while comfortably enjoying a cigar in the smoking car, the train stopped at a little station—there they were, and in they came—a thousand, we thought, but the recruiting officer said there were but six hundred—a thousand were coming on the next train. The major general of this division of the army of hop pickers was Leroy Gates, who makes the unsuspecting public, who read the Sentinel, believe that he is a Dells pilot. Pilot he is, but not of logs or lumber—he pilots the wearers of calico and crinoline to the fields where the hops do grow. It broadens human feelings to know there are so many lively girls in the world, and beer will be none the worse for a view of the hands which pick the berries, that give it its bittersweet." The total yield for the year, shipped from this station, was 27,000 bales, of 200 pounds each, a total of 5,400,000, which, at 50 cents per pound, would yield a revenue of $2,700,000. This is a low estimate, as a large amount was sold at 65 cents a pound. The cost of picking this crop was $270,000, nearly all of which was earned by girls.

The circulation of nearly $3,000,000 among the farmers in this vicinity stimulated every branch of industry. Every one seemed to have all the money they cared for. The farmers were delighted with their experience, and each believed he had found the sure way to wealth. Therefore, in 1868, the number of hop-yards increased, and the older ones enlarged. When the season drew near for picking, the question arose as to where the pickers were to come from to gather this immense crop. Leroy Gates and Anson Rood endeavored to solve the problem and, in midsummer, advertised throughout nearly the whole State for pickers, and established agencies in almost every village. Contracts were made for the season with all who would go, their railroad fare being paid to and from their place of residence, and board guaranteed, with the highest market price paid for picking. Special trains were chartered to bring in the pickers, and, for several days, every freight and every passenger train was crowded with fair women, on their way to the hop-fields. It was the endeavor of Gates and Rood to keep those from a neighborhood together, if possible, and, when engaged, they were classified as A, B, C, and so on, and instructed, on their arrival at this place, to go with the party who should call for their class. Farmers who had contracted for a certain number of pickers were given to understand they should receive their number from a specified class. This plan did not work as satisfactorily as expected. Unprincipled men took advantage of the circumstances, and, on arrival of the train, would call out, "Class A, take this wagon." "This way, all belonging to Class B." thus deceiving the ladies, and swindling the contractors out of their fees for obtaining the service of the pickers, and the contracting parties out of the number they were to obtain.

The heaviest loaded train arriving here contained about twelve hundred. It arrived in the night, but over three hundred teams were in readiness to convey the pickers to the hop-yards. The crop this year amounted to 30,000 bales, but instead of receiving fifty and sixty cents per pound, ten cents was all that could be obtained. Instead of $3,000,000, which it was confidently believed would be realized, $600,000 was about the sum total, half of which went to the pickers.

As may readily be imagined, the hop-yards of 1869 were few and far between, and the yield for the year was small indeed, and but little, comparatively, has since been done, though there are those who have never abandoned the business, and taking it year by year, there is nothing grown here that will yield a better profit.

Fires.—A fire of a magnitude never before witnessed in this section of the country occurred in this place about 10 o'clock, P. M., March 14, 1866, turning ten families out of doors and destroying the business of eleven men and firms—two of the families left without a change of wearing apparel. The Eastern mail, arriving here at 9 P. M., is distributed about 10, at which time most of the citizens receive their mail, and the leading places of business are not generally closed till some time after. So it was on this occasion, and while many were still in the post office, Mr. Kingsbury, on his way home, noticed a fire in a shed attached to the second story of J. E. Dixon & Son's store, at the back end of the main building, and extending over the roof of an extension to the store, in which shed the fire probably originated, but from what cause can be only a matter of speculation. The firm of J. E. Dixon & Sons were all in their office at the time, which was almost directly under the shed before mentioned. The first intimation they had of the fire, they saw it breaking through over their heads. It was then too late to impede its progress, and the only thing that could be done was to save such goods as they could, but the fire being in the center of the store, but a small portion could be saved. They had in their store between $90,000 and $100,000 worth of goods. They succeeded in securing, in a damaged state, somewhere about $25,000 worth.

The second story was occupied by Mr. E. R. Herren, a member of the firm, and by his father, Robert Herren, as dwellings. At the time the fire broke out, Mrs. Herren and servant-girl were absent from home. Mrs. Robert Herren and family had all retired. Mr. Herren had just returned from the post office, and hardly had time to get himself and family out, some of them without even a full suit of clothing.

The fire first extended east, and shortly after west, burning in its course the stores of Dr. G. W. Jenkins, druggist; T. Connor, dry goods; Mrs. Stevens, milliner; J. P. Dunlap, grocer, and N. Van Alstine's blacksmith-shop, in the east, and a store owned and occupied by F. Martin; store owned by Seth Knowles and occupied by C. D. Woodruff, druggist, and J. M. Weber, jeweler and Postmaster; store of J. E. Hansen, hardware merchant; store of Kuney & Bergstresser, occupied by J. E. Hansen with stoves and iron; two stores owned by E. F. Barker, one occupied by T. Baker as a butcher shop, and the other by A. S. Barker as a furniture-shop on the west, in each of which buildings, except the store of Kuney & Bergstresser, there was a family.

The night was extremely still; there was no wind, and none, or scarcely none, was created by the fire, yet the flames extended very rapidly, consuming the entire row of stores in about two hours. The flames reached very high, and it is stated were seen at a distance of twenty-five miles. Most of the household goods, except those of the Herren's, were saved, but very much damaged. The other goods saved were also greatly damaged. Loss, $100,000.

The second fire of special consequence was on the 30th day of January, 1868, when the Kilbourn City Institute was destroyed, with a loss of $5,000.

On the 4th day of October, 1876, Kilbourn City was again visited with a destructive fire, in which eight buildings on the south side of Broadway, between Oak and Elm streets, were totally destroyed. George Oswald, Rev. Matthew Bennett, Jake Roth, G. Maultbetsch, A. Rost, S. H. Higgins, Mrs. Louisa Taylor, Mrs. Brown and Dr Hooker, were the principal losers. In this fire, the office of the Wisconsin Mirror was destroyed: total loss, $10,000. Says a writer in the Columbus Democrat, October 14, 1876:

"The fire at Kilbourn, last Wednesday morning, was a disastrous one for that village. At about 1 o'clock, the flame was discovered in the building wherein are located the Mirror office and the flour and feed store of John Soeldner: it was altogether beyond control, and very little was rescued at this point. The fire, first seen on the south side of Broadway and east of Oak street, soon spread to the buildings on either hand, and made rapid progress until every structure in the block east of Stroud & Coon's law office, including several frame buildings, were entirely consumed. An employe in the adjacent shoe-shop of George Oswald was at work there until midnight, and, if the fire did not originate there, it was undoubtedly an incendiarism. Oswald's loss was very slight, the contents of his shop being saved in great part. The presses of the Mirror were saved in a damaged condition, but everything else was burned. Soeldner's loss is $500. The building was owned by Mathew Bennett, of Baraboo, as was the Mirror building, Jacob Roth's family, in the next building, had close work to escape with their lives, and saved nothing but a sewing machine and the Sunday clothes of Mr. R.: his loss is $1,800. The next house east was owned by George Maultbetsch, but was unoccupied; a barn and ice house were on the lot, and the loss is $1,000. Next came the milliner-shop and dwelling of Mrs. G. Van Alstine, owned by Seth S. Higgins, of Randolph: this building was insured for $1,000 and was the only one so insured. In Wright's furniture and book store, much of the goods were saved, but a large amount of furniture, lumber and tools were burned: Wright's loss is estimated at $2,000. J. Jackson Brown's building was the last in the block, and was destroyed like the others; it was occupied as a meat-market, by Mr. Banker, who saved nothing but his ice-box."

In the formation of new villages, the usual order is first a blacksmith-shop, then a saw-mill and after that other enterprises demanded from the situation. In Kilbourn City, the first thing was a newspaper, second a carpenter-shop, and third a hotel. This latter was the third building erected in the place and was known as the Tanner House, but in 1875 changed to the Finch House.—Captain John Tanner had a small story and a half house in the village of Newport, which in December, 1855, he removed to this place, and fitted up for a hotel. Moving it up on runners, and before placing it upon the foundation prepared for it, Mrs. Tanner prepared therein an excellent dinner, and Byron Kilbourn, President of the LaCrosse & Milwaukee Railroad Company; Jonathan Bowman, afterward State Senator from this district, then of Newport; John Anderson, contractor for the building of the dam, and John B. Vliet, locating engineer of the L. & M. road, sat down to the table by invitation of Mr. and Mrs. Tanner. After eating, each of these gentlemen insisted on paying 50 cents for their dinner, in order to properly dedicate the house to hotel purposes. In 1860, the house was enlarged by adding an addition three stories in height, leaving the original house to serve the purpose of an L. In 1867, the house passed into the hands of George Ribenaek, and by him was enlarged to its present dimensions in the summer of 1868. In 1875, W. H. Finch became the proprietor, and farther improved the appearance by the addition of verandas on the south and east sides. The house has always borne a good reputation, but since it came in possession of Mr. Finch it has become more noted and its praise is spoken far and near. Mr. Finch refurnished the house in every particular: its rooms are large, nice and clean, and, assisted by A. W. Oxley, he does everything in his power to render his guests comfortable. The table is equal to any $2-a-day house in the west. During the summer season, it is continually crowded, and visitors to the Dells ever find the Finch House a pleasant place to stop after a day's ramble, and view the magnificent scenery. In 1878, during the season for the summer excursions, 2,500 persons registered at this house, and in 1879, the number was increased to 3,500.

Commercial House.—This house was erected in 1857, by Col. Moeler, and named the Railroad House. Several changes were made in its ownership, and in 1875, it passed into the hands of John Bush, who removed it to its present location fronting the freight depot, and changed its name to the Commercial. Mr. Bush remained proprietor until 1868, but leased it one year to R. B. Rose. In 1878, Mrs. Ryan became proprietor.

Western House.—Erected in 1878 by John Bush. Is a large two-story frame and will accommodate about twenty guests.

Glen Cottage was opened in 1874, by J. Dunn, and continued in successful operation until fall of 1879, when Mr. Dunn retired and the house closed. It was a pleasant stopping-place with accommodations for about twenty persons.

Farmers' Home.—R. B. Rose commenced the erection of this house in March, 1877, and opened it to the public in the fall following. As its name indicates, it is a good farmers' home, and well patronized by that class. Accommodates about twenty.

American House.—Was built in 1860, and has had a varied fortune. In the fall of 1876, Charles F. Howard purchased the property. It is located opposite the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad depot. Has accommodations for about twenty.

Medical and Surgical Institute.—As the traveler approaches Kilbourn City, no matter from what direction, the first object that attracts his attention is a large brick building situated on the summit of a hill about a mile from the depot. At an early day a man named Bronson, a resident of Prairie du Chien, endowed an institute for the higher education of young men and women, the location of which was to be decided by the Methodist Conference. In 1856, Point Bluff was selected as the site of the proposed seminary, and it was completed and opened in 1857. For a time, everything prospered and the school was full. Fine houses were built and the future of Point Bluff seemed assured, but in 1858 the Milwaukee & La Crosse Railroad was completed to Kilbourn City, and from that time the place began to decay, though the school was not closed until 1865. The next year the building was removed to this place, as Kilbourn was considered a much more eligible locality than Point Bluff. A large number of pupils were in attendance, and the school prospered finely, but on the 31st of January, 1868, it was burned to the ground. There was an insurance of $4,000 on the building, and with this money a fine brick structure was erected, but no school was ever held in the new building. In 1876, Frank C. Straw, Esq., bought the property for $800, with the condition that he should improve the property and run it, at least five years, as a water-cure and medical and surgical institute.

Before the property came into the possession of the present owner, $5,800 had been expended upon the building and grounds. Mr. Straw has invested about $6,000 more, making the total cost some $12,000.

The structure is situated on the hill at the head of Washington avenue, and the cupola is about one hundred and sixty feet above the passenger depot. The main part is 36x53 feet, two stories and a half in height, surmounted by a cupola, or dome, which is inclosed with glass doors and windows. The wing is built on the east end of the main building, and is 28x65 feet, three stories and attic. The entire building contains thirty rooms, besides numerous closets, bath-rooms and wardrobes. From the cupola a magnificent view can be obtained for miles around. Seventeen miles to the southward, a gap in the Baraboo Bluffs shows where Devil's Lake reposes. The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad stretches away to the southeast, and occasional clouds of smoke show the position of the heavily laden trains as they are sweeping along their pathway of steel. To the southwest, a few scattering houses can be seen, showing where the once flourishing village of Newport stood, while the little village of Delton lies nestled among the hills just beyond. Turning toward the setting sun, we see Coon Bluff and Hay Stack, seemingly but a short distance away, but in reality many miles, while in the northwest the Elephant's Back rises far above the neighboring hills. At our feet, embowered in a forest of trees, lies Kilbourn, while we trace the channel of the grand old Wisconsin until finally it is lost in the mazy distance.

The wing of the building has been fitted up for bedrooms, kitchen, dining-room, bathrooms, etc. On the lower floor is the Turkish bath room, which joins the shampooing-room and hot and cold water bathroom. The engine-room contains a five-horse-power engine which pumps water from a well 160 feet deep into the tanks in the attic. Steam and hot water from the boiler is used for heating the water in the tanks.

The institution was opened in the summer of 1878, by Dr. William Russell, who operated it until April, 1879, when it passed into the hands of Dr. J. S. Galloway and Dr. G. C. McElroy and wife, the latter also being a physician. In January, 1880, Dr. Galloway retired, and G. C. McElroy, M. D. and Mrs. A. McElroy, M. D., remained in charge.

The first settlers of Kilbourn City experienced considerable difficulty in their intercourse with the outer world by means of the mails. From the time Alanson Holly settled here in the woods till September, 1857, the citizens were dependent upon Newport. Strenuous efforts were made to have an office established here, but it was not until after the completion of the railroad that their efforts were crowned with success. J. Armstrong was the first Postmaster. Filing the required bonds, he then appointed Edward Palmer deputy, and the latter attended to all the duties of the office. Mr. Armstrong resigned soon after. Mr. Palmer was appointed to fill the vacancy, and served until the spring of 1859, when J. Jackson Brown was commissioned in his stead. Mr. Brown held the office until February, 1864, when J. M. Weber succeeded him, and continued in office until February, 1878, a period of fourteen years. W. H. Mylrea was Mr. Weber's successor. In 1867, it was made a money-order office. The first order drawn was to George A. Woodford in favor of R. M. Thompson, Unionville, Conn., and payable at Hartford, in same State. Mr. Woodford had also the second order drawn.

The Spring Grove Cemetery Association was organized December 11, 1859, having for its purpose the securing and holding in trust a place for the burial of the dead. George F. Noble, S. D. Hambleton, Charles Teshner, W. H. Peabody, I. W. York and H. McDonald were elected trustees. The trustees were instructed to procure from E. T. Hooker twenty acres of land, described as the west half of the northwest quarter of the southwest quarter of Section 1, in Township 13, north of Range 6 east. On account of the difficulty in securing a perfect title, and also because of the great distance from the village, this action was reconsidered, and, in the spring of 1862, Dr. Hooker deeded the association twelve acres off the northwest quarter of Section 11, Township 13 north, Range 6 east, which lies just east of the village. This land has been laid out in blocks and lots, with convenient roadways running through, and is also neatly inclosed. The first person to be buried there was a child of G. H. Daniels. The trustees in 1879 were J. N. Schmitz, George Oswald, W. A. Ramsay, A. Chamberlain, I. W. York and Frank Hill.

Saw Mill.—The first saw-mill in the place was put in operation in the fall of 1857, by Hines & Drinker, who continued to run the same until 1870, when it was purchased by the junior member, who formed a partnership with two brothers, under the firm name of Drinker Brothers. Steam power is used. The mill is capable of turning out 14,000 feet of lumber each day of ten hours' run. Drinker Brothers are extensive dealers in lumber and all material usually found in a yard of that kind.

Planing and Grist Mill.—As soon as lumber could be obtained from the new saw-mill of Hines & Drinker, Walker, Munger & Co. erected a large planing-mill and commenced the manufacture of sash, doors and blinds. In 1860, they added a grist-mill to their business, since which time the three departments have been in constant operation. A thirty-horse power engine drives the whole machinery. In ordinary times employment is given to about thirty men. The flour here manufactured is rated in the Chicago market as the very best, and generally the firm receive an advance on the highest quotations. In 1878, the manufacture of syrup from sorghum was also engaged in with success.

Foundry and Machine Shop.—In April, 1879, G. M. Marshall & Son established in the village a foundry and machine-shop, meeting with good success in the manufacture of Marshall's patent blacksmith shears, power corn shellers, and turbine water-wheels. Their foundry is well supplied with every modern invention for their work, and they turn out, on short notice, casting of all kinds.

Kilbourn City Brewery.—Erected in 1858, by Mechler & Leute, who continued the same until 1861, when, on the death of the junior partner, Andrew Leute, Julius, Charles and Thaddeus Leute, brothers of Andrew, purchased the institution from Mr. Mechler and the heirs of Andrew Leute. These brothers continued in partnership a short time, and then Julius Leute became sole proprietor. About eight hundred barrels of lager beer are manufactured yearly.

Union Horse Collar.—The invention of John N. Schmitz, of this village. It is a collar and hame combined, and is made so as to be easily fitted to the neck of the horse, having a swivel screw on top, by which it can be made wider or narrower by the hame-strap below. It can be lengthened and shortened by the bolt in the cap on the top. In 1876, a company was formed, under the name of Union Collar Company, for the manufacture of the article. They have succeeded in building up a large trade.

Bank of Kilbourn.—This institution was opened for business, August 26, 1867, by John P. McGregor. In February, 1868, Mr. McGregor disposed of the same to Jonathan Bowman. It is a private bank, with its entire business transacted upon its own capital, receiving no deposits, but otherwise doing a regular banking business, selling exchange upon Milwaukee, Chicago, New York, and all foreign countries. John W. Brown is the cashier, and has been with the bank since January, 1869.

Town Hall.—This is a large building upon Oak street, north of the Finch House, and was erected for theatrical, concert and lecture purposes. In size it is 30x80, 18-foot ceiling, with large stage in the rear. It was built by a stock company in 1868, and is rented for purposes named, on reasonable terms; W. H. Finch, agent.

Baptist Church.—Elders Keith and Sprague were the first missionaries of this church, and held a number of services in the winter of 1858. In May following, a number of the brethren met in the old schoolhouse, for the purpose of effecting an organization. Elder A. E. Green was present and acted as Moderator. Deacon John Hogoboom, Mary Hogoboom, Samuel S. Barker, Mary A. Barker, Augustus S. Barker, Edward F. Barker, Charles H. Barker and David Stillwell signed the articles of covenant. John Hogoboom was made Deacon, and David Stillwell, Clerk. Elder Green was invited to become their Pastor, and accepted the call, coming twice a month from his home in Delton to hold services here. He remained with them until August, 1864, when Elder Snider was called to the work. July 13, 1867, Elder George W. Freeman was invited to become their regular Pastor, and accepted the invitation. In August, 1867, the churches of Dell Prairie and Delton, which had become weakened by removals and other causes, came forward and united with this church, thus giving them an effective working strength of about sixty members. At this time, J. W. Wood was appointed Deacon, and A. S. Barker, Clerk. February, 1868, a committee was appointed to take into consideration the erection of a church edifice, and their report being satisfactory, the work was immediately undertaken. The flush times of the previous year made the community liberal in subscribing to the church fund, but the failure in the principal product of this region made collections slow, so that it was impossible to complete the building. As soon as inclosed and plastered, it was rented to the village for two years. It was not made ready for formal dedication until December, 1872. Elder J. W. Fisher preached the sermon. Elder Freeman remained with the church until November, 1869. Elder E. L. Schofield was the next to minister to the congregation, but only remained a few weeks, and was succeeded by Elder A. L. Seward, who remained six months. The church then remained without a pastor for several months. In August, 1871, Rev. H. C. Fuller engaged in the work, and continued for two years. Again, for a short time, the church was without a shepherd; but in April, 1874, Elder John C. Douglass was ordained to the ministry, and was then called to the pastorate: remained one year, and was succeeded by Elder J. S. Cox, who served four months, when Rev. F. S. Witter came and remained one year. Rev. H. C. Fuller was then called for the second time, and continued to serve until September, 1879. The church is weak numerically and financially, but has some earnest Christian men and women connected with it. A Sunday school is maintained, with a membership of fifty, with A. S. Barker as Superintendent. Hours of service for the church: Sunday, 10:30 A. M., and 7:30 P. M. Sabbath school, 12 M.

Methodist Episcopal.—The first preaching by a minister of this denomination, in this village, was in the old schoolhouse, in the spring of 1857, by Rev. William Mullen. A congregation was soon afterward formed. John Kneen and wife, Silas Merrill and wife, Cook and wife and Harriet Peabody were in the first organization. Silas Merrill was the first Class Leader. After worshipping awhile in the old schoolhouse, a small dwelling-house was purchased and fitted up for religious purposes. Here they assembled from time to time until the house became too small, when they went back to the schoolhouse. An old store building was now purchased and used until it also became too small, when it was sold and the money applied on a new building. While this was in progress, the congregation worshiped in the old academy building. Sabbath, January 31, 1868, the new church was dedicated, with appropriate services. Among the Pastors who have served, were Revs. Mullen, Springer, Searles, Faucier, Smith, Yocum, Howe, Bennett, Case, Bishop, Allen, Buck, Gaskell, Steele, Hamilton, Duncan, Hazelton, Full and Webster. The church is weak numerically and financially.

Protestant Episcopal.—The first public service of the church in Kilbourn City was in the year 1858, the Rev. Hugh Miller Thompson, of Portage, officiating. Occasional services were thereafter given by the Rev. Mr. Thompson and his successor in St. John's Parish, Portage, the Rev. A. J. M. Hudson. From 1860 to 1863, services were given more or less regularly by the Revs. J. O. Barton, William Pray Ten Broeck and Mosely Morris, successively itinerants on the line of the La Crosse & Milwaukee, now Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad. Some church interest was developed and two lots were given by Mr. Edward Roddis, of Milwaukee, for the purpose of erecting thereon a church building. The missionary, however, being withdrawn and the services discontinued, several of the church families in the meanwhile removing, the lots were allowed to be sold for taxes, and all church interest died out. In the year 1867, the Missionary Board, adopting a new plan of missionary work, placed the Rev. George Vernor as its missionary on the line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad; at which time services were once more commenced, and regularly maintained on the first Sunday of each month, together with occasional week-day services. Some of the old church families having returned and new ones having moved in, a new interest was developed, and a mission organized under the name of St. Paul's Mission, Kilbourn City. The lots sold for taxes were redeemed, and a deed for another lot was given by Byron Kilbourn. In the fall of 1868, the Rev. Chester Adams was associated in the missionary work, the headquarters of the mission being Beaver Dam, services being continued at Kilbourn City, the same as the year previous. In 1870, Rev. William B. Bolmer was placed in charge, and continued to serve until 1872, when he was succeeded by Rev. Peyton Gallagher, who only remained six months, and was followed by Rev. F. C. Eldred, who remained until March, 1875. At this time, Rev. J. B. Pedelupe was called to the pastorate, remaining in charge until June, 1878, since which time no regular services have been held. The parish was organized with nine communicants. Thirty-two have been added to this number, making a total of forty-one, of whom fourteen have removed, leaving twenty-seven. A. C. Dixon, Warden; John W. Brown, Secretary and Treasurer.

Presbyterian.—In the summer of 1855, a petition was drawn up, signed by nineteen persons, asking the Presbytery of Winnebago to organize a church at Newport and Delton. The petition was sent to Rev. William W. McNair, then of Portage City. Rev. Stewart Mitchell was stopping with Mr. McNair, and the two visited the new field. The Presbytery soon after sent Rev. H. M. Robertson to organize the church, should the way be clear. The church being organized by Mr. Robertson, Rev. Stewart Mitchell was called as its first Pastor. Great difficulty was experienced in obtaining a room in which to hold divine service. Frequently the congregation would meet in private houses, in public halls, in store-rooms, in dining-rooms, any where that shelter could be had, and the people assembled to hear the Gospel. A church house was needed, but property in Newport was depreciating, and it was with the utmost difficulty a sufficient sum could be raised to erect a church edifice. But by persistent effort, it was done, and on the 23d of August, 1857, a small church building was dedicated to the service of Almighty God. The church meanwhile began to lose by removals, and soon after the church was built, it became apparent that it would have to be abandoned. On Sunday, June 29, 1856, Rev. Mr. Mitchell preached his first discourse in Kilbourn City, and soon after began to preach regularly in the place. But great difficulty was experienced in awakening an interest. Elder J. M. Weber removed here in the spring of 1858, and the minister in the fall. The first communion was held in April, 1858, and four persons were admitted to the church. R. M. Thompson was elected an additional Elder. The church now began to grow slowly. In 1861, the project of building a church was seriously talked of, and, in the beginning of 1862, the church at Newport was taken down, and the materials brought to this place for erection during the summer. Various circumstances delayed action until fall, and in the fall difficulties were greater than ever. Money was not easily obtained, and the work could not have commenced, but for the help of a benevolent lady in Milwaukee, Mrs. Harriet T. Smith, who furnished the means to buy the lumber necessary for erecting and inclosing the building. Alanson Holly gave the lot on which to build. In August, 1863, the church building was dedicated during a meeting of the Presbytery of Winnebago. At this time, Rev. Mr. Mitchell resigned the pastorate on account of the ill health of his wife, and was succeeded by Rev. Alexander Strain, who acted as supply for a year. An interim of a few months followed, when Rev. Willis B. Phelps supplied the church in part and, on the 25th of September, Mr. Phelps was invited by the church to become its Pastor. This relation continued until 1870, when Mr. Phelps retired, and was succeeded by Rev. George F. Hunting, who for two years supplied the church, and was then chosen its Pastor and continued as such until 1876. For two years, the church was without regular service, but in 1878, Rev. J. V. R. Hughes was called to the work and yet remains with the church. Those composing the church on its organization were Jacob Van Doren, Rachel Van Doren, Simeon Hunter, Eliza Jane Hunter, Abigail Britts, Elizabeth Van Vetcher, Caroline Dawes, Mary E. Holmes, Jacob Vanderburg, Charity Vanderburg, Maria Andrews, Everett Beardsley, Olive Beardsley, Thomas Murray and Isabella Murray. J. M. Weber and wife united shortly after. Everett Beardsley was the first Elder, and Jacob Van Doren, S. D. Hunter, J. M. Weber, the first Deacons. In 1856, Mr. Weber was made an Elder, and has since held that responsible position. Since the organization of the church there have been admitted to membership 195. Present membership, 66. The officers in 1880 were E. H. Parmlee, Timothy Temple, Harlan McDonald and J. M. Weber, Elders. Services held each Sabbath at 10½ A. M. and 7 P. M. Sunday school meets each Sabbath at 12 M. Dr. McElroy is Superintendent of the Sunday school.

German Evangelical Lutheran.—Organized in the fall of 1876, at which time a small church house was built, at a cost of $800. Rev. Zorn, of Portage, was the first Pastor. He was succeeded by the Rev. Hovde, and he, in turn, by Rev. Gesal. In the latter part of 1879, Rev. E. J. Peterson was called to the work. The church is weak, numerically, numbering but about twelve families.

Roman Catholic—In 1859, a church was erected in this place, at a cost of $600, since which time improvements have been made and the church enlarged, making the value of the property about $1,200. In addition, a parsonage was built in 1871, at a cost of $1,600. The church numbers eighty-five families. Fathers Montecue, Keenan, De Kalver, Ryan, Siner, Galweiler, Gohntyn and Hækler have each, in turn, served the congregation.

Columbia Lodge, No 124, A. F. & A. M.—Was organized by dispensation March 14, 1860, and by charter June 13, 1860, by A. B. Alden, Grand Lecturer. The first officers and charter members were: J. M. Weber, W. M.; J. H. Fort, S. W.; Robert Herren, J. W.;

J. E. Dixon, T.; L. R. Mitchell, S.; John Tanner, E. T. Hooker, W. S. Payne, William Gardner. From its organization till January 1, 1880, ninety persons have been initiated into the order. The membership at that time was thirty-eight. The lodge meets the first and third Tuesday evenings of each month. The officers for the term commencing the first meeting in January, 1880, were: H. R. Snider, W. M.; W. H. Mylrea, S. W.; C. E. Griffith, J. W.; J. Mylrea, T.; W. A. Ramsay, Sec.

Columbia Chapter, No. 31, A., F. & A. M.—Instituted March 8, 1866, by M. L. Young, H. P.; A. B. Alden, K., and E. F. Lewis, Scribe. Its first officers were: William C. Swain, H. P.; William Case, Scribe; Frank M. Stewart, K.; I. T. Murray, C. H.; G. H. Daniels, P. S.; G. W. Jenkins, R. A. C.; O. W. Dickinson, Third V.; Robert Herren, Second V.; Frank Hill, First V.; George Smith, T.; A. Chamberlain, Sec.; U. F. Hind, G. Present membership, twenty-eight. Meets second and fourth Tuesday evenings of each month. The officers for the term commencing the first meeting in January were: George Smith, H. P.; A. Chamberlain, K.; K. F. Hill, Scribe; Frank Hill, R. A. C.; G. W. Jenkins, C. H.; I. W. York, P. S.; G. B. Bacon, Third V.; C. A. Noyes, Second V.; A. C. Dixon, First V.; John Mylrea, T.; J. M. Weber, Sec.; O. W. Dickinson, G.

Dell Lodge, No. 175, I. O. O. F.—Was chartered January 20, 1870, with S. F. Smith, John Jellodd, Peter Emser, A. C. Dixon, J. H. Fosnot, A. F. Leonard, H. H. Tredwell, I. F. Friend, C. H. Stone, F. S. Meakler and J. Kingsland as charter members. Membership, January, 1880, 33.

The officers elected January 1, 1880, were: H. M. Whitney, N. G.; G. Guyer, V. G.; H. Corning, Sec.; Charles Schroeder, P. S.; N. Van Alstine, Treas. Lodge meets every Monday evening.

Alpha Encampment, No. 48, I. O. O. F.—Instituted December 6, 1871, with I. F. Friend, George Lintner, George Ribenaek, George Smith, Allen Wright, H. R. Snider and Jonathan Bell as charter members. Now has 15 members, and meets the first and third Friday evenings of each month.

The temperance cause in this place has always had some very strong advocates—men and women who were willing to labor to “save the fallen and prevent others from falling.” As individuals, they have toiled; and in organizations, under various names, they have endeavored to inculcate temperance principles in the community. The Wisconsin Mirror, under the management of A. Holly, and the Kilbourn City Guard, edited by Wesley Moran, did much to advance the cause.

The first organized effort was that of the Minnehaha Lodge, No. 87, I. O. G. T.—A number of ladies and gentlemen of this place having petitioned the Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Good Templars of the State of Wisconsin, with authority and assistance to open a lodge, G. W. C. T. Hawley, of Madison, accompanied by Mr. Wilder, of Delton, came and effected such organization. The charter members of the lodge were J. M. Weber, L. D. Combs, H. McDonald, S. N. Merrill, W. H. Peabody, C. D. Woodruff, L. B. Noyes, W. Recker, John Springer, H. Clark, Thomas Coon, Frank Tanner, Emma Elmer, Ada A. Wheeler, Adaline Weber, Adelia Weber, S. A. Merrill, H. M. Peabody, Sarah Cronk and Sarah Smith. As first officers, were elected and appointed J. M. Weber, W. C. T.; Sarah Smith, W. V. T.; H. Clark, W. R. S.; Frank Tanner, W. T.; L. B. Noyes, W. F. S.; L. D. Combs, W. M.; Thomas Coon, W. I. G.; W. H. Peabody, W. O. G.; Ada A. Wheeler, R. H. S.; Emma Elmer, L. H. S.; John Springer, Chaplain; H. McDonald, P. W. C. T.; Adelia Weber, W. A. S.; Sarah Cronk, W. A. M.

The lodge flourished until the breaking-out of the war, when a considerable number of the members went forth to battle for their country. During the existence of the rebellion, regular meetings were sustained, but the interest was not great. In 1865, the membership again increased, and interest was well sustained until 1866, when a number of the members became dissatisfied and withdrew, and, the spring following, the lodge ceased to exist.

L. A. Squire M.D.

POYNETTE

Evening Star Lodge, No. 512, I. O. G. T., was instituted April 15, 1867, with eighteen charter members. The organization of this lodge resulted from the withdrawal of some of the members of the Minnehaha Lodge, who had become dissatisfied, and who felt they could better labor in the temperance cause in another organized body. The charter members and first officers were George W. Case, W. C. T.; R. Dudgeon, T.; John B. Markham, W. F. S.; Orvis M. Burnhans, W. Sec.; Chancey Doughty, W. M.; I. H. Chickering, W. O. G.; William Snoad, P. W. C. T.; Anna Bliss, W. I. G.; Durand B. Peabody, Frank Kingsbury, I. M. Strong, H. Taylor, Samuel Kaler, Misses N. E. Case, D. H. Dudgeon, S. Bennett, A. Murray and Miss Doughty. The lodge had a prosperous career for some five years, when the interest began to decline, and in August, 1875, it ceased to exist. April 7, 1877, it was re-organized under its old name and number, and from that time has been quite prosperous. During the month of January, 1880, initiations occurred at every meeting, and its working membership was thirty-nine, with G. A. Ramsay, W. C. T.; Hester J. Teare, W. V. T.; James S. McNeel, W. R. S.; Harry G. Markham, W. F. S.; Emma V. Drinker, W. T.; Frank H. Marshall, W. M.; Mrs. Helen B. Stroud, W. C.; Harry E. Hinnan, W. I. G.; William Brew, W. O. G.; William Gillespie, P. W. C. T.; G. E. York, L. D.

Kilbourn City Temple, No. 148, I. O. G. T.—Connected with Evening Star Lodge is a degree temple, which was instituted June 20, 1867, which continued to work until August, 1875, when it ceased, and was re-organized April 7, 1877.

Dell Temple, Temple of Honor.—This institution was organized May 16, 1876, by Col. Watrous, G. W. C. T., of Fond du Lac. The charter members, as well as its first officers, were P. F. O'Hare, W. C. T.; A. D. Lincoln, W. V. T.; J. H. Dunn, W. R.; S. Cady, W. A. R.; J. H. McNeel, W. T.; W. C. Hicks, Chaplain; H. O. Darling, W. U.; Fred. Hinnan, W. D. U.; James Hinnan, W. G.; J. M. Bilby, W. S.; J. B. Markham, P. W. C. T.; George F. Noble, D. G. W. T. The temple has had its seasons of prosperity and seasons of adversity. But three of the original number were living in the village January 1, 1880. The removal of the others has tended to weaken the order, but their regular meetings are still kept up. For the term commencing January 1, 1880, the officers were James Clapper, W. Y. T.; A. E. Drinker, W. V. T.; C. A. Thompson, W. R.; N. Van Alstine, W. T.; Henry Rich, W. G.; I. H. Chickering, W. S.; J. B. Markham, P. W. C. T. The temple meets every Thursday night in Temple Hall.

A Reminiscence.—"I came to Kilbourn City," writes A. Holly, "the last of October, 1855, and hastily prepared a house in which my family could live, and an office in which to print my paper; and issued the first number of the Wisconsin Mirror, the 1st day of January, 1856. The day was very cold, for a peculiarly cold winter, and our office was very open. I wrote my editorials in the house, and picked up dry wood about where the village now is, and hired green wood cut when I could not get dry.

"The day on which we published the first number of the Mirror, the mercury was 17 degrees below zero, at noon. The office boys were obliged to heat planks to stand on, to keep their feet from freezing, and to keep a kettle of hot water to prevent their hands from freezing. There were several of the officers of the 'Wisconsin River Hydraulic Co.' and others, present, and when the first paper was struck off, Mr. Noble, of Newport, now a resident of Kilbourn City, took it and put it up at auction, for my benefit, and Mr. Weaver, of Ohio, bid it off at $65, and immediately paid for it! The next copy was sold to John B. Vleit, of Newport, for $10, and the third to a brother of J. B. Vleit, for $5. This, of course, was all done for my encouragement, but it was all kept a profound secret from me, till the sale began. It was to keep me 'printing in the woods' till things thawed out, and it was a good way to do it.

"The present Kilbourn City was then covered with woods, and not a dwelling-house within a mile. Our provisions and other things for use in the house had to be brought from Newport, or other places abroad, and much of them were brought on my back, or on the backs of my boys. There was, that winter, a considerable quantity of game seen where Kilbourn City now is—deer, sometimes bear, rabbits, squirrels, partridges and quail. But the larger of these animals entirely disappeared on the appearance of the railroad, and considerable of the smaller ones. One winter, the northern bears got so hungry that they made us quite a long visit.

• The Dells of the Wisconsin River, when we came there, had scarcely been seen, except by raftsmen, and nothing was said about the canyons or gulches.

• The summer after we came there, we went frequently through the Dells in small boats, and to the canyons and gulches, in boats or on foot. But those canyons were so filled with brush and fallen logs that it was difficult to get through them. In 1856, I and the boy went to Cold Water Canyon, and it was so cold, in August, that I would not have our women try to go in. We afterward went to Witch's Gulch, not then named, and could not get through, because the water was so deep below the fall. Afterward I heard that some boys swam through; and because they imagined they saw something on the high wall at the lower end that looked like a witch, they named it "Witch's Gulch."

It remains to point out a few of the advantages of Kilbourn City, geographically, for pleasure-seekers. It is situated about midway between Chicago and St. Paul, being one hundred and ninety-three miles from Chicago, and two hundred and sixteen miles from St. Paul, and is in the immediate vicinity of the Dells, which have already been described. It is seventy-seven miles from Oconomowoc, fifty-seven miles from Madison, and sixty-two miles from Sparta. By the run of trains, one can leave Kilbourn in the morning, go to Sparta and fish for trout all day, and return in the evening; or go to Oconomowoc and dine, and have some four or five hours' amusements on the lakes, and get back to supper at Kilbourn; or go over to Madison, arriving there at 10 A. M., and see the capital and public buildings, take a sail on the beautiful lakes by which it is environed, and return to Kilbourn to supper, the same night; or take a carriage and pair of horses and drive through to Baraboo and Devil's Lake, seventeen miles, and dine and "take in" all there is of scenery there, and back to Kilbourn the same night; or take short runs out by trains to Mauston, Lisbon or Camp Douglas, and view the wonderful rock formations all along the line; or over to Delton, and take a sail on Mirror Lake, and back to Kilbourn.

Mirror Lake, located three and a half miles from Kilbourn City station, and four miles from the Dells, has hitherto been kept from public notice by the few lovers of good fishing and the beauties of nature, who were acquainted with its attractions. But its wonderful reflections, magnificent canyons, and entire difference from other places of interest, have at length disclosed its beauties to the tourist, and in 1879, a steamer was put upon its waters. Its proximity to "Congress Hall," and the mineral springs, and the well-known healthy climate of Delton, where it is located—the average mortality being only two deaths per year, out of a population of about nine hundred—make it one of the most desirable resorts in the Northwest.

Lake Mason, the fisherman's paradise, is a spot comparatively unknown, though one of the finest of the numerous lakes scattered over Wisconsin. The lake proper is three miles in length, and two in breadth, with several large bayous. The lake is situated partly in Marquette County, and partly in Adams County, about ten miles north of east from Kilbourn City. The drive from Kilbourn City to the little city of Briggsville, so cozily nestled in the valley at the foot of the lake, is undoubtedly the finest drive for the tourist visiting the Dells. The fishing is among the finest in the West. The favorite sport is trolling for pickerel. The lake is filled with them, and the best time to troll is during the months of May, June, September and October. Pickerel have been caught here weighing as high as twenty-five pounds. Still-fishing for perch, rock bass, black bass, sunfish, and other varieties, is good at all seasons of the year, whenever the lake is clear from ice. In the spring and fall, large flocks of ducks and geese float upon its bosom, and feed upon the wild rice that grows in wild luxuriance in the different arms of the lake. The lake is situated in a valley, where, in the springtime, the waters of the Fox, which flow into the great lakes, mingle with those of the Wisconsin, which enter the Mississippi.

As the traveler reaches the eastern edge of the plateau, about half-way between Kilbourn and Lake Mason, he beholds a landscape of green fields, and waving woods, and silver lakes, and distant hilltops, veiled in blue, that makes him think he has caught a glimpse of fairyland. Now all these attractions around Kilbourn City are in addition to the unique—the wonderful Dells!

CHAPTER XV.

TOWN OF OTSEGO—VILLAGE OF OTSEGO—VILLAGE OF RIO—VILLAGE OF DOYLESTOWN—TOWN OF PACIFIC—TOWN OF RANDOLPH—TOWN OF SCOTT—TOWN OF SPRINGVALE—TOWN OF WEST POINT—TOWN OF WYOCENA—VILLAGE OF WYOCENA—VILLAGE OF PARDEEVILLE.

TOWN OF OTSEGO.

At a meeting of the County Commissioners, held in January, 1849, all of Township 11, Range 11, was organized into a town, to which was given the name of Otsego, and the house of Edward Williams designated as the place for holding the first election. The name Otsego was chosen by the early settlers in honor of Otsego, N. Y., from which place a number had emigrated.

Wayne B. Dyer was the first man to make a home in the town. He arrived here in May, 1844, and erected a log house upon Section 22. In this house he entertained the weary traveler for a number of years, and Dyer's Tavern became a famous institution. During the summer and fall several others came in, among whom were Ulac Wilson and "Old Hans," Cyrus Root, Stephen James, Samuel Gibson, E. Lynn, Horace Dodge and Mr. Pellet. In 1845 and 1846, a large number came in, among whom were Frank Folsom, Isaac W. Spaulding, J. W. Stewart, Abram Van Aerman and Henry Ager.

In the fall of 1844, Horace Dodge returned East, where he was united in marriage with Miss Eliza Deck, being the first citizen of the town to be married. The first marriage occurring in the town was that of John Brown and Caroline Hughes, in the fall of 1847.

Mary Topliff, in the fall of 1848, taught the first school on Section 22. In the organization of the town into school districts, in the following year, this was made District No. 1.

Elder Wood, of Wyocena, in the spring of 1847, came into the town, and at the house of Stephen James on Section 23, preached the first discourse. With the exception of about four years spent in the East, Elder Wood, who is a Baptist minister, in the spring of 1880 had completed thirty-four years of service in this section of country. In 1849, Rev. Hanson, a Methodist Episcopal minister, organized a class in the schoolhouse on Section 23, which was continued in that neighborhood until 1853, when a church was built on Section 3, where religious services were afterward held.

In answer to a letter, Wayne B. Dyer writes: "In September, 1843, I settled on Fountain Prairie, on the farm known as the Baker farm (Section 34), and there built the first house in that town. Mr. Bushnell was then living in a small board shanty, where John Brown now lives. His house was built early in the winter, and John Brown built the next house on the Enos Grout farm. These three houses were all of Fountain Prairie until the next summer, except Smith Horton's, who built, during the winter, on the Hawkurst farm. Snow fell that year in October, and remained until about the 20th of February, when we had a thaw. The snow all went off, and the 10th of April plenty of feed for cattle. I have never seen grass as early since. In May, 1844, I sold out to E. J. Smith, and moved to the present village of Otsego, there being no settler between my place and Fort Winnebago. There I built the first house in that town, and I was the first settler there also. During the latter part of the summer and fall came several more settlers: Cyrus Root, Stephen James, Samuel Gibson, E. Lynn and others. My house, during the summer, was the stopping-place for people looking for land; also being visited by the Indians, who were sometimes troublesome. Once, during my absence, a drove of them came and undertook to make my wife and Mary Swift (now Mrs. John Swarthout) bring them water from the spring, which they refused to do. The women now became scared and left for the prairie where some men were at work, but before the men arrived the natives had left, and were never troublesome afterward. Snow fell about the middle of October, 1844, to a depth of six or eight inches, but soon left, and no sleighing that winter. The next summer people came into the country by hundreds, and my old log cabin became known far and wide. We were full all the while, and at one time had twenty-seven living in my house besides transient visitors. We then belonged to Portage County. In the winter of 1845-46, Columbia County was set off from Portage County, and the fall following elected county officers. T. C. Smith, Sheriff; Richard F. Veeder, Nathan Griffin and John D. McCall, County Commissioners; Major Dickason, Register of Deeds; John Swarthout, Treasurer; Nelson Swarthout, Clerk of the Board. N. Swarthout not qualifying, I was appointed Clerk--said meeting of the Board being held at my house. When I asked the Board where I should locate my office, the answer was, 'Carry it in your hat.' So you see I carried the county seat one year. The Board finally settled on Low's tavern for the county seat until the next Board was elected, and there was held the first court for Columbia County--Judge Irvin presiding. Being then under Territorial government, the jury were all paid in specie before leaving. Some of them coming without a cent, with their dinner and supper in their pockets, and leaving with several dollars, felt as if they had drawn a prize. The whole expense of the county that year was less than one county official receives now. If that old Low tavern could speak, you could hear of some fine doings going on there of nights, when John Smith, with Capt. Low's old uniform on, with three or four pillows stuffed in for filling up, with sword buckled on, and the old Captain running up and down stairs to find out what was wanting; and he had a cough so long his well had got low. Before this year, there were but three precincts for voting in the county--Fort Winnebago, Dekorra and Columbus. Four more were added at the first meeting of the Board--one at Langdon's, near Cambria; one at Wyocena; one at Lodi; one at Dyer's, comprising Hampden and Otsego, known as Dyersburg; and one at Lowville. The 9th day of June, 1847, there was a severe frost; the ground was frozen and all early corn killed. I planted over the 17th of June, and by the 25th of August had as ripe sound corn as I ever raised, which was the most remarkable growth I ever saw. About the 15th of June came a hurricane across the prairie which blew down Thomas Swarthout's log house, and took John and his sisters about sixty rods into a thicket. It also blew over H. Swift's house, where George Robinson's house now stands. The next year we became a State, and the judicial organization of our county commenced with the first court at Columbus, under Judge Larrabee. The first Norwegian settlers were Enlor Wilson and little Hans; the first Welshman, Stephen James. Some of the first settlers in Otsego were so hard up that they had to live on roast corn and potatoes. Times were hard, as no one wanted to hire. The first winter they had to go into Illinois to get pork; and no butter was to be had at any price. My own family never suffered for provisions. Always being fond of a dog and gun, I soon became a successful hunter, and always had plenty of venison, for deer were very plenty. Could sometimes see a hundred and fifty in a day. But those times are gone, and my rifle hangs up rusting."

The day of the hurricane, leaving his wife at the house of a friend, Mr. Dyer and his friend went to Columbus. Observing the storm coming on, they hastened home, and as it increased in fierceness, and they were hurrying on, the friend shouted to Dyer, "For God's sake, Dyer, can't you drive faster?" "No," was shouted back. "Then," said he, "I'll go afoot." Out he sprang from the wagon and was soon left far behind. Their families, however, escaped all injury.

The old log tavern, although a home for any that came that way, had not been properly roofed, and during the first summer often let in more than a little dampness. It is related that on one occasion a traveler drove up during a storm, intending to ask for dinner. He found the light-hearted mistress seated in a large rocking chair, with skirts tucked up and a baby on each knee, while she held an umbrella over them to keep dry, and was rocking and singing, while the rain washed off the dinner dishes and covered the floor.

Rattlesnakes were plenty in the early day, and, in the springtime it was considered dangerous to venture out without means to destroy them.

The habit of lost persons traveling in a circuit, was exemplified during the early years of Dyer's residence here. Mrs. Dyer had endured the toothache until she thought it impossible to longer stand it. Taking her horse and buggy, with her two little children, she drove over to Madison and had the tooth extracted. She reached there without trouble and in due time started for home; driving all day, at sunset she reached the same house she had stopped at the night before. Somewhat surprised, she put up for the night. The next morning, she started again only to repeat the previous day's experience, returning to the same house for the second time. She was now thoroughly frightened and began to think she never would reach home, but started with renewed courage on the third day, and was fortunate to reach home at night.

When Wayne B. Dyer "entertained man and beast," his old log tavern and log barn at Otsego was a famous resort for the early settlers for miles around as well as for travelers. That was the good old time when there was no whisky tariff, no illicit stills, no Government gaugers, whisky but three cents a drink, and when common drinking tumblers were used in dispensing that commodity. Though Dyer kept a bar, he was strictly abstemious in regard to drink, although it was well known that he sometimes smoked. One day late in the fall, two well-known men went to Columbus from Springvale on foot. Returning, they had buffeted a driving storm all the way from Columbus to Otsego. Leg-weary and somewhat chilled, with several miles yet stretching between the latter place and their cabin, one of them proposed to the other that they should revive themselves at Dyer's bar. The jug and the big tumblers were produced, filled to the very brim and emptied without a grimace, while Dyer looked silently on, in astonishment or admiration; the closest study of his face did not reveal which. A dime was thrown down, which was slipped into the till. Waiting a moment for his change, but not seeing it, the Springvale man remarked, "I thought whisky was three cents a drink?" Dyer replied "It is three cents a drink, but I just now was wholesaling."

The following are the names of the town officers elected since 1849:

1849—Orin Kincaid, Chairman; Henry Ayer, John Boutwell, Supervisors; Isaac N. Williams, Clerk; Samuel Gibson, Assessor; Stephen James, Treasurer; Christopher Hughes, Superintendent of Schools.

1850—Orin Kincaid, Chairman; Frank Folsom, Samuel Gibson, Supervisors; John A. Byrne, Clerk; Horace Dodge, Assessor; Simpson Marsh, Treasurer; Henry Ager, Superintendent of Schools.

1851—Orin Kincaid, Chairman; Isaac D. Gano, John Hughes, Supervisors; John A. Byrne, Clerk; George D. Mead, Treasurer; Henry Thornton, Assessor; E. R. Morris, Superintendent of Schools.

1852—Frank Folsom, Chairman; William Chamberlain, Asa Thornton, Supervisors; John A. Byrne, Clerk; G. D. Mead, Treasurer; Horace Dodge, Assessor; J. D. Gano, Superintendent of Schools.

1853—G. D. Mead, Chairman; Henry Thornton, William Chamberlain, Supervisors; Patrick Doherty, Clerk; Cyrus Root, Treasurer; Abram Van Aerman, Assessor; Asa Thornton, Superintendent of Schools.

1854—N. S. Green, Chairman; Asa Thornton, David Dwyer, Supervisors; Patrick Doherty, Clerk; Cyrus Root, Treasurer; Hans Oleson, Assessor; Christopher Hughes, Superintendent of Schools.

1855—Frank Folsom, Chairman; William Allyn, Abram Van Aerman, Supervisors; Patrick Doherty, Clerk; Horace Dodge, Treasurer; Levi Nelson, Assessor; E. W. McNitt, Superintendent of Schools.

1856—Abram Van Aerman, Chairman; Hans Oleson, C. S. Tompkins, Supervisors; Patrick Doherty, Clerk; John Boutwell, Treasurer; Isaac W. Spalding, Assessor; George Putnam, Superintendent of Schools.

1857—Frank Folsom, Chairman; Hans Oleson, Joel L. Burke, Supervisors; Patrick Doherty, Clerk; Daniel Daly, Treasurer; John Boutwell, Assessor; Edwin W. McNitt, Superintendent of Schools.

1858—Frederick G. Smith, Chairman; William F. Ide, John Anderson, Supervisors; Patrick Doherty, Clerk; Daniel Daly, Treasurer; Hans Oleson, Assessor; C. O. Pequin, Superintendent of Schools.

1859—J. L. Burke, Chairman; Cliff Wilson, William F. Ide, Supervisors; Edwin W. McNitt, Clerk; John Roche, Treasurer; Frank Folsom, Assessor; Thomas Doherty, Superintendent of Schools.

1860—C. S. Tompkins, Chairman; Thomas Henton, Peter Halverson, Supervisors; E. W. McNitt, Clerk; Philemon Root, Treasurer; J. W. Spalding, Assessor; John Sickles, Superintendent of Schools.

1861—J. L. Burke, Chairman; Annun Hanson, Charles C. Holly, Supervisors; E. W. McNitt, Clerk; Philemon Root, Treasurer; J. W. Spalding, Assessor; John Sickles, Superintendent of Schools.

1862—J. L. Burke, Chairman; Roswell Palmer, Levi Nelson, Supervisors; E. W. McNitt, Clerk; Philemon Root, Treasurer; C. S. Tompkins, Jabez Hunting, Assessors.

1863—Roswell Palmer, Chairman; William H. Robins, Halver Halverson, Supervisors; E. W. McNitt, Clerk; Henry Stevens, Treasurer; C. S. Tompkins, Henry Blenis, Assessors.

1864—Roswell Palmer, Chairman; Thomas Henton, Cliff Oleson, Supervisors; Patrick Doherty, Clerk; Halver Halverson Shelby, Treasurer; William F. Ide, Assessor.

1865—E. M. Rosenkrans, Chairman; L. G. Lloyd, William Bradley, Supervisors; E. W. McNitt, Clerk; Halver Halverson Shelby, Treasurer; Joseph W. Stewart, Assessor.

1866—L. G. Lloyd, Chairman; Thornton Thompson, J. W. Stewart, Supervisors; E. W. McNitt, Clerk; W. A. Pulver, Treasurer; A. W. Dodge, Assessor.

1867—J. L. Burke, Chairman; John Bently, Samuel Sampson, Supervisors; Alexander Rogers, Clerk; W. A. Pulver, Treasurer; F. A. Brewer, Assessor.

1868—Joel L. Burke, Chairman; Lester Curtis, L. H. Doyle, Supervisors; D. M. Hall, Clerk; Hans Hanson Towgen, Treasurer; James S. Scott, Assessor.

1869—Joel L. Burke, Chairman; Lester Curtis, L. H. Doyle, Supervisors; D. M. Hall, Clerk; Hans Hanson Towgen, Treasurer; D. J. Haines, Assessor.

1870—J. L. Burke, Chairman; James P. McMahon, Philemon Root, Supervisors; S. B. Curtis, Clerk; Gabriel Oleson, Treasurer; D. J. Haines, Assessor.

1871—J. L. Burke, Chairman; James P. McMahon, John E. McMahon, Supervisors; S. B. Curtis, Clerk; J. H. Ferguson, Treasurer; Hans H. Tongen, Assessor.

1872—John Boutwell, Chairman; Oliver Noble, John E. McMahon, Supervisors; S. B. Curtis, Clerk; O. A. Rustad, Treasurer; H. H. Tongen, Assessor.

1873—John Boutwell, Chairman; Hans H. Tongen, John E. McMahon, Supervisors; H. L. Stevens, Clerk; Philemon Root, Treasurer; D. J. Haines, Assessor.

1874—John Boutwell, Chairman; J. E. McMahon, J. H. Jurgerson, Supervisors; H. L. Stevens, Clerk; Philemon Root, Treasurer; D. J. Haines, Assessor.

1875—D. M. Hall, Chairman; Robert W. Williams, D. D. Fox, Supervisors; John Peterson, Clerk; M. J. Leffingwell, Treasurer; D. J. Haines, Assessor.

1876—Thornton Thompson, Chairman; Samuel Sampson, E. C. Palmer, Supervisors; O. A. Rustad, Clerk; M. J. Leffingwell, Treasurer; D. J. Haines, Assessor.

1877—Thornton Thompson, Chairman; Samuel Sampson, E. C. Palmer, Supervisors; O. A. Rustad, Clerk; M. J. Leffingwell, Treasurer; D. J. Haines, Assessor.

1878—Samuel Sampson, Chairman; Theodore Henton, William H. Gaskill, Supervisors; O. A. Rustad, Clerk; M. J. Leffingwell, Treasurer; D. J. Haines, Assessor.

1879—H. H. Tongen, Sr., Chairman; Andrew Anderson, Jr., John Roche, Supervisors; H. H. Tongen, Jr., Clerk; M. J. Leffingwell, Treasurer; D. J. Haines, Assessor.

1880—H. Phillips, Chairman; H. H. Shelby, Andrew Anderson, Jr., Supervisors; J. B. Meredith, Clerk; M. J. Leffingwell, Treasurer; O. H. Smith, Assessor.

VILLAGE OF OTSEGO.

Around the settlement of Wayne B. Dyer, grew up quite a village between the years 1846 to 1849. Being on the direct route between Milwaukee and Stevens Point, quite a number in search of a home were prevailed upon to stop here. A post office was here established in December, 1847, Cyrus Root receiving the appointment of Postmaster. During the first year, the entire receipts of the office was only a trifle over $4. Mr. Root retained the office for eleven years, being succeeded by Norman Mead, who held it a little less than one year, resigning in favor of Mr. Pulver. The latter gentleman continued in charge until the inauguration of Abraham Lincoln in 1861, when Edwin McNitt obtained the appointment. Mr. McNitt resigned in 1863, in favor of John Sickles. From that time until 1872, Mr. Sickles and Lewis Stevens filled the position. In 1872, W. A. Pulver was appointed, serving until the fall of 1878, when Henry Root was commissioned.

Wayne B. Dyer built the first hotel in 1844. The building was of logs, but in time was displaced by a large frame house. Mr. Dyer disposed of the property in 1853, to Abijah Stevens, and the hotel was discontinued.

In 1848, John Boutwell built a large dwelling-house, and one year later converted the same into a tavern which he named the "Otsego House." His spelling of the word "house" was unique. His sign read "Otsego Hous." When informed he should add "e" to the word, he replied, "Pshaw, you can't fool me; that would make it read hous-y?" The sign was put up as he spelled it, but travelers making so much sport of the spelling caused him to take it down and make the correction after a time. Mr. Boutwell only continued the house for one year, when he sold to Norman Mead, who ran it until 1857, when Philemon Root purchased it. From that time to January, 1880, it has passed successively into the hands of W. A. Pulver, Solomon Mead, Lot Mead, Josiah Loomis, Archie McDougal, Mr. Willard, Mr. Robbins, Mr. Thompson, Mr. Bodie, Samuel Slifer and Fayette Ashley, the present owner.

In 1854, Dennison Dunning erected a hotel known as the "Gothic House," and continued in charge until his death, which occurred in 1864. The widow then continued the business for about three years, when she was married to John Boutwell, who, as landlord, served his guests until 1873, when the business was abandoned.

The village attained a fair degree of prosperity before the completion of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, in 1864, which was located two miles north.

VILLAGE OF RIO.

The village of Rio is situated in the extreme northwestern part of the town of Otsego, and was laid out in 1864, by N. B. Dunlap, who owned the largest part of the land on which the village has been built. In the month of November, 1864, Mr. Dunlap engaged A. Topliff, County Surveyor, to lay out and plat a portion of his land. This survey was completed and acknowledged November 4. Previous to the 8th day of May, 1868, Mr. Dunlap made three small additions to the village plat, and Mosher, Buchanan, Van Aernam and Scott also added to the same.

N. B. Dunlap and Jacob Ulrich began the erection of business houses about the same time in November, 1864. There was quite a strife between them as to which should complete and first occupy his building. Sixteen years after, each party was confident he was the first. The only building that had previously been erected was that of a small warehouse built by Mr. Welch, for the storage of grain. This warehouse was also used by the railroad company, until the completion of their depot, in the fall of 1865.

The first lot sold was purchased by Jacob Ulrich, on which he erected a hotel, to which was given the name of Rio House. The house was opened in December, 1864, and continued in successful operation until May, 1875, when it was destroyed by fire. In July, following, Mr. Ulrich began the erection of another house, which was completed and opened for the accommodation of the traveling public, November 10, 1875. The new house was larger than the old, and more convenient, with ample room for twenty guests. In 1866, another hotel was erected by Rowland Morris.

The first dwelling-house was built by John Baw, a German shoemaker, who came here early in the spring of 1865. A daughter was born to him in May, of that year, being the first born in the village.

The village post office was first established in the northeast corner of Lowville, in the year 1852. It was given the name of Rio. When the new village was located, one-half mile from this office, it was thought best it should take the same name, as the office would undoubtedly be moved there. Delos Bundy at that time was running a small country store, and was Postmaster at Rio. In the spring of 1865, he moved his store and office into the village, and consequently was the first Postmaster. Mr. Bundy held the office for a few years, and was succeeded by Mr. Emerson, and he in turn, in 1872, by M. J. Leffingwell.

In the winter of 1864-65, Robert Williams and Kennedy Scott started here a lumber-yard, being the first to engage in the sale of lumber; Delos Bundy opened the first stock of general merchandise; Dr. Vincent was the first physician; John J. Brown the first legal adviser. In the fall of 1866, W. Davidson put in the first hardware store. In the spring of 1866, Warren Bundy, in company with Delos Bundy, put in the first drug store.

D. Buchanan, in July, 1865, commenced the erection of an elevator, with a storage capacity of 10,000 bushels of grain, which was completed and ready for use September following. Mr. Buchanan continued in the grain business for two years, when he sold the elevator, it passing through many hands, and in 1879, was purchased by F. R. Morris & Co. Mr. Welch, in the fall of 1865, also commenced to build an elevator, but before completion it was sold to Knowles & Binnie. It afterward passed into the hands of Samuel D. Curtis, and was destroyed by fire November 30, 1872.

The village cemetery grounds was donated, in 1848, by Samuel Dowd, and a son of Charles Dowd was the first burial therein.

A joint school district was organized in 1849, composed of a portion of the towns of Lowville and Otsego, the schoolhouse being erected in Lowville. Here the children of the village have been sent. They now have a graded school of two departments.

Methodist Episcopal Church.—A class was organized in 1863, at the schoolhouse in the northeastern part of the town of Lowville. Here religious services were held until the fall of 1868, when services were held in the Congregational Church in the village. In 1869, together with the Baptists, a small building was fitted up for church purposes. The greatest era of prosperity attending this church was in 1872, when they had thirty-two members on the class-book. In 1879, the number had been reduced to about ten, caused by removals, death and withdrawal.

Congregational Church.—This church was organized in 1863, at the house of David Palmer, two miles east of the village, with O. C. Howe, Juliet Howe, William Scott, Jane Scott, David Palmer, Mehitable Palmer and Catherine McKenna. For several years, the congregation worshiped in the schoolhouse. In the summer of 1867, they began the erection of a church building, which was completed and formally dedicated in October, 1868, Rev. S. B. Doe, Secretary of the Home Mission Society, preaching the sermon. Previous to this, a sermon was preached in the church on the occasion of the death of Abram Van Aernam, in the spring of 1868. This was the first sermon preached in the house. The church has had the services, as Pastor, of Revs. Donaldson, Thompson, Brown, Fairfield, Logan, Cheney, Powell, Demarest and Ball. In 1879, Kennedy Scott held the positions of Trustee, Deacon and Treasurer; Caroline C. Scott, Clerk. A union Sunday school was organized in 1865. In 1879, Kennedy Scott was Superintendent; Mrs. John Weyant, Assistant; Arabella Tift, Secretary.

Baptist Church.—This church was organized June 29, 1867, with D. Buchanan, Mrs. Buchanan, H. Blemis, M. E. Mosher, L. H. Palmer and wife, J. A. Eliot, Mrs. Wm. Gaskill, N. A. Palmer and wife, Mrs. Herring and Miss Buchanan. M. E. Mosher was elected Clerk. The organization was effected by Rev. Nathan Wood, of Wyocena, who, in 1880, had served thirteen years, being the first and only Pastor. The first meetings of the church were held in the school-house, and were continued there until the house was refused them for religious services, when they met in various halls in the village, and for a short time in the Congregationalist Church. In 1873, a building was purchased and fitted up for their use. In 1879, the officers of the church were: C. C. Holly, Clerk; Sylvester Noble, C. C. Holly, William Gaskill, J. B. Carter, Seth Allen, G. Palmer, Trustees; Roswell Palmer, Seth Allen, Deacons. A Sunday school was organized in 1868, which has had a flourishing existence. In 1879, Roswell Palmer was Superintendent.

VILLAGE OF DOYLESTOWN.

On the 16th day of March, 1865, Lemuel H. Doyle purchased of Damon C. Starr 120 acres off the southeast quarter of Section 11, and, on the 25th day of March, purchased of Eason Starr 115 acres off the northeast quarter of Section 14. The main object of the purchase was to locate thereon a village. On the 26th day of August, 1865, Alfred Topliff, County Surveyor, completed and had recorded the plat of the village of Doylestown.

David Metcalf, a former resident of Columbus, erected a store here in the summer of 1865, being the first in the village. He operated it for about four months, or until it was burned. From that time until 1868, no improvements were made in the place, and, in January of that year, only four families resided here. Mr. Doyle determined the place should have a start, and made a public offer to give a lot free to any who would build thereon. His offer was accepted, and during the year 1868, about thirty houses were erected. Eaton & Canfield built at the time a $2,500 elevator, with a storage capacity of 15,000 bushels of grain. Mr. Eaton died shortly after, and the elevator was burned in July, 1876.

The first lot sold was purchased by Thornton Thompson, who erected the first house in the village. This house was afterward sold to Joseph Doyle, who, in 1868, built an addition to it, and opened the first hotel.

The first freight was received by J. H. Davis September 19, 1865, consisting of two bundles of sash, the charges on which were 25 cents. The first shipment was two cars of bulk wheat to Curtis & Mann, Milwaukee, sent by Metcalf & Starr September 16, 1865. First ticket was sold May 22, 1866.

D. Metcalf was the first station agent, serving from September, 1865, to November 1, 1866. L. H. Doyle was then appointed, serving until November, 1873, when Charles A. Doyle received the appointment. From the building of the road to March, 1880, D. Reed, J. A. Doyle, F. W. Whitcomb, Julia Williams, C. A. Doyle, C. S. Bensted, L. W. Davis, D. E. Moore, J. W. Hancock, H. A. Doyle, S. C. Budlong, F. N. Mills, S. B. Morse, George C. Wright, L. H. Martin, J. O. Baker, P. Vandercook and E. J. Conner have served as telegraph operators.

The original plat was composed of nine blocks off the northeast quarter of Section 14. The first addition was made, June 13, 1868, and was also off Section 14. The second addition was made, June 18, 1869, and was off the southeast quarter of Section 11, and comprised about forty acres. Isaac B. Downs, about this time, also made an addition, of about fifteen acres, to the plat of the village, off southeast quarter of Section 11.

The first schoolhouse built near where the village was laid out was in 1859. In 1869, a larger and better house was erected, at a cost of $1,250. The first teacher in the new schoolhouse was Miss Emma L. Holmes. In the winter of 1879-80, Peter F. McMahon was the teacher.

First birth in the village was Martin, son of John Maloney, in the summer of 1866. The first death was Mrs. Thompson, July, 1866.

Catholic Church.—In 1865, Father McGurke organized a society in this place, and in 1866 a church was erected, at a cost of $1,500. The congregation increasing in numbers, the house became too small to accommodate those who desired to attend; therefore, in 1874, it was enlarged, at an additional cost of $700. In 1877, a parsonage was erected, adjacent to the church, at a cost of $750. A Sunday school has usually been maintained during the summer months. Fathers McGurke, O'Kiefe, Gray, Roche and Murphy, have ministered to the spiritual welfare of the congregation, from its organization up to 1880. At that time, eighty families were represented in its membership.

Methodist Episcopal Church.—A class was organized here at a very early day, religious services being held in private houses and in the schoolhouses in the neighborhood. The church having become numerically strong, in 1870 determined to erect a church edifice. In order to best carry out their intentions, David Edwards, David D. James, James S. Hallock, George Ormsbee, John J. Scott, George Young, Norman B. Dayton, Lester Hoard and Lemuel H. Doyle were elected Trustees, by the congregation. The first meeting of the Trustees was held in the shop of L. H. Doyle, January 8, 1871, Rev. B. M. Fullmer, presiding, all the Trustees being present. It was then voted to erect a church edifice, which was completed and dedicated Sunday, October 3, 1873, by Rev. Samuel Fallows, D. D., of Madison, Wis., Rev. J. B. Cole being then preacher in charge. The cost of the church was $2,000. L. H. Peck, Lester Hoard and L. H. Doyle were the building committee. The first funeral held in the church was that of an infant child of Ferdinand and Kate Pinkrou, in the fall of 1873, Rev. Oppen, of Columbus, a German preacher, officiating. The first marriage in the church was that of D. W. Edwards and Mattie James, October 21, 1874.

Protestant Episcopal Church.—Rev. F. C. Eldred organized the church here November 21, 1877, with the election of George Hall, Warden; J. G. Smith, Treasurer; Niels Rasmus, Secretary. Mr. Eldred discharged the duties of Pastor of the church, until the summer of 1879, when he was succeeded by Rev. Mr. Burlson. For the first two years, services were held every Friday evening, with occasional visits from the Minister at other times. In the fall of 1879, the time of services was changed to each Sunday evening.

Good Templars.—W. P. St. John, D. G. W. C. T., of Portage City, visited the place June 26, 1869, and instituted a lodge of twenty-nine charter members. Those composing its first officers and charter members were Lemuel H. Doyle, W. C. T.; Emma L. Holmes, W. V. T.; Delevan E. Moore, W. S.; Isaac B. Downs, W. C.; David Edwards, W. F. S.; Cora A. Downs, W. T.; D. W. Edwards, W. M.; Delia E. Doyle, W. D. M.; Ella Doyle, W. I. G.; Fulton R. Morris, W. O. G.; Mary E. Doyle, R. H. S.; Nellie Peck, L. H. S.; Lester Hoard, P. W. C. T.; Charles M. Morris, Henry A. Doyle, Joseph Doyle, Lettie C. Edwards, Norman B. Dayton, David D. James, Brigetta A. Waters, Ira C. Edwards, Clarence Peck, T. C. Hopkins, Charles M. Peck, Fannie Hopkins, James Hopkins, Mary Hopkins, Mary J. Doyle and John W. Hancock. For five years, the lodge continued in successful operation. In consequence of the removal of the greater number of the most active workers, it was compelled to suspend.

Patrons of Husbandry.—Union Grange, No. 430, Patrons of Husbandry, was organized March 5, 1874, by Deputy Kennedy Scott, assisted by John Sanderson, of Cambria. The first officers and charter members were Lemuel H. Doyle, Master; George Hall, Overseer; John J. Scott, Treasurer; Peter Morse, Secretary; Jerome R. Nasholds, Lecturer; Franklin Andrews, Steward; Charles Peck, Assistant Steward; Edward F. Palmer, Chaplain; F. C. Councilman, Gate Keeper; Mary V. Andrews, Stewardess; Ellen M. Titcomb, Ceres; Harriet Palmer, Pomona; Sarah Youngs, Flora; Cora A. Downs, Mary J. Doyle, Ida Andrews, George Youngs, Lyman B. Ward, Dexter Titcomb, George Williams, Sarah A. Hall, Mary E. Doyle, Thomas W. Davis, Demosthenes Nasholds, Anthony Snowden. The first meetings of the grange were held in Hoard's Hall, afterward in Methodist Episcopal Church. A grange store was started in 1877, but both grange and store were discontinued in 1878.

The Columbus Democrat, under date of March 22, 1872, thus speaks of Doylestown:

“In 1848, Owen Kincaid entered a tract of land about ten miles west of Columbus (it is now owned by H. A. Whitney) and is not far from the station and village of Doylestown, and was the first entry in that vicinity. Daniel James was the first settler adjacent to the present site of the little village, his duplicate bearing date May 9, 1848, though Mr. Moses Roberts, in 1847, entered forty acres, and built a cabin near where Joseph G. Smith lives. Damon C. Starr secured his land and arrived two weeks later, his patent, dated September 1, 1849, having the signature of President Taylor. He built a log house that year, which was the first structure in that locality. The frame building with which he replaced it was five years ago the only building near where the village now is. In the same year, William Chamberlain settled on land which is now owned by Daniel Tompkins. Eason Starr, in 1850, purchased of speculators a quarter-section adjoining his brother, and Dr. Edward Heath arrived the same year. Most of the village is situated upon which was originally bought by the former. The depot and water-tank were built in 1865. L. H. Doyle arrived in June, 1865, and purchased the lands of the two Starrs, between two and three hundred acres.

"A village was platted that year, and David Metcalf, a previous resident of Columbus and now general roadmaster of the La Crosse & North-Western Division, erected a store which he operated for four months, or until it was burned. No progress was made for two or three years. In 1868, there were but four families living on the village plat. That year, Eaton & Canfield built a $2,500 elevator.

"The village now has a population of 200. D. D. Fox and D. D. Jones have each a good general store well stocked with dry goods, groceries, etc. Hoard & Earle are engaged in the lumber trade, and they also purchase wheat and produce. The elevator has a capacity of 15,000 bushels of grain. Not long after its erection, one of its owners died, and it has since been closed. R. Elliot, of Milwaukee, holds a mortgage on it, and the building is for sale on favorable terms. Residents claim that 40,000 bushels of grain would find a market there, under favorable circumstances. Joseph Doyle, father of L. H. Dowle, is the proprietor of the Doyle House, the village hotel, which he manages successfully. John Bau is the boot and shoe maker of the hamlet, and does his work well. He runs a saloon in connection with his shop. I. Gormley, a new-comer, is also proprietor of a saloon. James Riley is the village blacksmith. Dr. Henry Allen is the resident physician, and, though he only came to Doylestown a few months ago, is acquiring an extensive practice. He went thither from Hartland, though for six years he was Superintendent of an eye and ear infirmary at Chicago. L. H. Doyle is the station agent, express agent and Postmaster. Becoming the owner of the village site, he has shown an irrepressible desire to build up the town, and has given away acres to persons desiring to become permanent residents. In connection with other business, he established a nursery in 1868, and he now has about eight acres set out with choice trees and shrubbery. Last year, he manufactured about three thousand brooms. It is not to be denied that he has shown much enterprise and liberality in promoting the growth of the village which bears his name. A lodge of Good Templars is in Doylestown; it has sixty members, and Dr. Allen is its Worthy Chief. A Catholic Church is the only building at present that has been erected for the purpose of worship. The priest at Columbus conducts services periodically. One of the best schoolhouses in the county was built here some years ago. The Baptist and other denominations have worshiped here. The Methodists are about to erect a new church, 30x40, and have the stone for the foundation already on the ground.

"It is now about three years since the lead excitement broke out in the vicinity of Doylestown. A point a few rods west of that station is, by survey, the highest elevation on the railroad between the Wisconsin River and Lake Michigan. To the northeast, the land is broken into hillocks of reddish clay, though lime and sandstone frequently appear. On the Hallock farm, two miles and a half away, men at the plow brought up rich fragments of ore, and, while building fences across the land, found very promising specimens of that material. Carpenter, of Rio, has made numerous excavations upon the farm, and has secured ore in paying quantities. He is still at work under a lease. About a year ago, the farm was sold to a company at Sparta, and they have been since sinking a shaft. It had reached a depth of eighty-five feet the other day when we visited the spot, and the work is still in progress. They have been constantly taking out good ore, but in very small quantities, yet the indications are that lead exists in large amounts, if it can only be struck. The State Geologist has inspected the locality and adds the weight of his opinion to this statement. The formation is peculiar, those clay hills being approached on both sides by sand or by prairie. It should also be stated that evidences have been found which lead to the belief that silver exists in those ledges. If the secrets of nature shall be successfully read in this vicinity, it would make Doylestown a busy station and give an impetus to the business of the county even."

TOWN OF PACIFIC.

This town is located in the central part of the county, its northwest corner adjoining the city of Portage. It comprises the east half of Township 12, Range 9, and a fractional part of Sections 4, 9, 16, 21, 28 and 33, of same township and range, lying to the east of the Wisconsin River, which river forms its western boundary. It is watered by the Fox River, which enters the town on the east through Swan Lake on Section 1, flows west and northwest to Portage City. It is also watered by Duck Creek in the central part. About one-half of the town is marsh land, the remainder is oak openings. The land is generally sandy and low, the surface altitude being from 200 to 250 feet. The town was set off in 1854 from Portage City, much to the delight of its inhabitants, avers a local writer, for the reason of the high assessment of its lands.

N. H. Wood, who had entered and purchased a large portion of the land lying within the present limits of the town, and had also established a store on Section 16, had the honor of naming the town.

The first election showed about fifty voters; the number has not since materially increased. Among the first settlers were Henry Jennings, who came in 1849, Stephen Calverly, H. Holden John W. Lawrence and Benjamin Dow, in 1850; N. H. Wood, 1851; William Bates, J. W. Porter, Moses Bump, Daniel Marston and Jonathan Pegg, in 1854; Amasa Porter, Joshua Calkins, J. L. Porter and Griffin Smith, in 1856.

There are no villages in the town, though numerous attempts have been made to establish one, and paper cities have flourished. On an old Territorial map, issued in 1837, on the north side of Swan Lake is marked the village of "Ida." The proverbial "oldest inhabitant," living in the spring of 1880, had never heard of its existence. In 1838, a magnificent "city" was laid out on the same site, which was given the name of Wisconsinapolis, and so well was it platted, the lake being crowded with such magnificent steamers, that in the East a large number of lots were sold at almost fabulous prices. The success of this venture encouraged the owners of the land on the south side of the lake also to plat a city which was to bear the name of "Winnebago City." Lots here brought good prices. Henry Merrell relates that upon one occasion a gentleman came into his store at the fort, and inquired at what hour steamboats left for Wisconsinapolis. He was told that at the time boats were very irregular, but he could direct him to the place. The man then inquired which was the best hotel. Mr. Merrill declined to answer that question, as he did not wish to injure his popularity as a business man by showing partiality in the case. A few hours afterward, when he returned from the "city," where no building larger than an Indian wigwam had ever been erected, and where twenty-five white men had probably never set foot, he drove rapidly by, neither looking to the right or left, his curiosity having been abundantly satisfied.

In 1838, an act was passed by the Territorial Legislature, incorporating the Marquette and Swan Lake Canal Company. James Duane Doty, Lieut. Hovey and others were the incorporators. It was the intention of the company to run a canal from Swan Lake into Lake George, and down Duck Creek to the Wisconsin River. A tavern was built at the west end of Swan Lake, and a ferry run across the neck of the lake. This canal was in opposition to the one connecting the Fox and Wisconsin Rivers at Fort Winnebago, and, it was thought by its incorporators, would tend to build up the villages of Wisconsinapolis and Winnebago City.

“ Baltimore City ” was another paper city which never had an existence in fact. It was laid out on Section 33, where Duck Creek empties into the Wisconsin River.

Says a local writer : “ Cities have not flourished in Pacific, but industry has, and no where in the county is there less ostentation or more promptness to meet obligations than Pacific. It is one of those towns where from a variety of agricultural resources, and a strict economy, its population seem to ‘ come out all right in the spring. ’ When its population quadruples, and the land is drained and occupied, Pacific will be a very prosperous and popular town, and to-day, for a high order of intelligence, morality, industry, and moderate thrift, it is at least a good average of the county. ”

The following is a list of town officers elected since the organization of the town :

1854—N. H. Wood, Chairman ; John W. Lawrence, Benjamin Dow, Supervisors ; La Fayette Dow, Clerk ; Thomas Dow, Treasurer ; Stephen Calverly, Assessor ; Rodney Loomis, School Superintendent.

1855—Benjamin Dow, Chairman ; Giles M. Packard, Henry Jennings, Supervisors ; D. Marston, Clerk ; R. O. Loomis, Treasurer and School Superintendent ; Stephen Calverly, Assessor.

1856—J. W. Porter, Chairman ; William Weir, Giles M. Packard, Supervisors ; James Wright, Clerk ; R. O. Loomis, Treasurer ; Stephen Calverly, Assessor ; J. W. Porter, School Superintendent.

1857—William Weir, Chairman ; Stephen Calverly, William Bates, Supervisors ; James Wright, Clerk ; B. F. Flowers, Treasurer ; A. D. Betz, Assessor ; Dan Marston, School Superintendent.

1858—Francis Wood, Chairman ; A. D. Betz, Andrew Weir, Supervisors ; George W. Marsh, Clerk ; Daniel Marston, School Superintendent ; Stephen Calverly, Assessor ; B. F. Flowers, Treasurer.

1859—Francis Wood, Chairman ; Andrew Weir, J. L. Porter, Supervisors ; George W. Marsh, Clerk ; George Osborne, Treasurer ; Stephen Calverly, Assessor ; J. L. Porter, School Superintendent.

1860—Andrew Weir, Chairman ; J. W. Lawrence, S. W. Porter, Supervisors ; George Marsh, Clerk ; William Bates, Treasurer ; Stephen Calverly, Assessor ; J. L. Porter, School Superintendent.

1861—Andrew Weir, Chairman ; Griffin Smith, B. F. Flowers, Supervisors ; Z. J. D. Swift, Clerk ; T. W. Dow, Treasurer ; Henry Jennings, Assessor ; A. D. Betz, School Superintendent.

1862—Francis Wood, Chairman ; A. Weir, Samuel Hoyt, Supervisors ; Amasa Porter, Clerk ; T. W. Dow, Treasurer ; Griffin Smith, Assessor.

1863—H. Jennings, Chairman ; Samuel Hoyt, Samuel Porter, Supervisors ; Amasa Porter, Clerk ; B. F. Flowers, Treasurer ; Stephen Calverly, Assessor ; 1864—Griffin Smith, Chairman ; A. Coapman, S. W. Porter, Supervisors ; Amasa Porter, Clerk ; Stephen Calverly, Treasurer ; William Bates, Assessor.

1865—Stephen Calverly, Chairman ; Samuel Murray, B. F. Flowers, Supervisors ; Z. J. D. Swift, Clerk ; Edward Smith, Treasurer ; J. L. Porter, Assessor.

1866—William Weir, Chairman ; William Bates, Moses Bump, Supervisors ; Amasa Porter, Clerk ; Z. J. D. Swift, Treasurer ; J. L. Porter, Assessor.

1867—H. Jennings, Chairman ; Lewis Evans, Samuel Murray, Supervisors ; E. Smith, Clerk ; Griffin Smith, Treasurer ; J. L. Porter, Assessor.

1868—Amasa Porter, Chairman ; J. F. Warren, Stephen Calverly, Supervisors ; J. L. Porter, Clerk ; William Bates, Treasurer ; J. L. Porter, Assessor.

1869—Edward Smith, Chairman ; Stephen Calverly, Henry Cutsforth, Supervisors ; H. Jennings, Clerk ; Stephen Calverly, Treasurer ; J. L. Porter, Assessor.

1870—B. F. Flowers, Chairman ; Lewis Evans, Moses Bump, Supervisors ; Z. J. D. Swift, Clerk ; Henry Jennings, Treasurer, J. L. Porter, Assessor.

1871—Stephen Calverly, Chairman; W. B. Cutsforth, Lewis Evans, Supervisors, Amasa Porter, Clerk; Frank H. Husbrook, Treasurer; J. L. Porter, Assessor.

1872—J. L. Porter, Chairman; D. B. Tompkins, H. Jennings, Supervisors; Z. J. D. Swift, Clerk; William Bates, Treasurer; J. F. Warren, Assessor.

1873—Stephen Calverly, Chairman; Henry Cutsforth, A. Weir, Supervisors; E. Smith, Clerk; I. Kershaw, Treasurer; A. Kershaw, Assessor.

1874—E. Smith, Chairman; E. A. Porter, Jonathan Pegg, Supervisors; W. S. Flowers, Clerk; I. Kershaw, Treasurer; J. L. Porter, Assessor.

1875—Lewis Evans, Chairman; Stephen Calverly, Henry Cutsforth, Supervisors; W. S. Flowers, Clerk; E. E. Smith, Treasurer; J. L. Porter, Assessor.

1876—Edward Smith, Chairman; Anson Coapman, Patrick Lehan, Supervisors; W. S. Flowers, Clerk; E. E. Smith, Treasurer; J. L. Porter, Assessor.

1877—J. L. Porter, Chairman; Benjamin Dow, W. Cutsforth, Supervisors; E. E. Smith, Clerk; I. Kershaw, Treasurer; E. Smith, Assessor.

1878—Henry Jennings, Chairman; Charles Lawrence, I. Kershaw, Supervisors; A. Bump, Clerk; William Bates, Treasurer; A. Kershaw, Assessor.

1879—E. Smith, Chairman; E. A. Porter, John Jarvis, Supervisors; E. E. Smith, Clerk; H. W. Cutsforth, Treasurer; J. L. Porter, Assessor.

1880—A. Weir, Chairman; Patrick Lehan, L. F. Dow, Supervisors; A. A. Porter, Clerk; E. E. Smith, Treasurer; H. W. Cutsforth, Assessor.

TOWN OF RANDOLPH.*

BY WILLIAM T. WHIRRY.

The first settler in this town was George Knowles, who came from the city of New York, selected his land in the fall of 1843, on Section 13, and entered it in February, 1844, and erected the first building in town at the same time, in the form of a board shanty, with white-wood boards brought from Fond du Lac; broke up some land in May, 1844, and claims it was the first land broken in town; planted the first crop, and raised a good one, without any fence; put up his log house in August, 1844, and resided on the same place until about 1860, when he removed to Milwaukee.

S. S. Torbert came from Illinois March 16, 1844, in company with John Langdon and Benjamin Williams. Mr. Torbert raised the first log house on Section 15. B. Williams being a single man, lived with him. They lived for a long time on succotash (green corn and beans), without anything else. He broke, as he claims, the first land, but that point is disputed by Mr. Knowles. His first crop of wheat was seventy bushels, from two acres, and two bushels in sowing, which had been dragged in with a wooden-toothed drag. At that time, there were only three log cabins at Fox Lake, and no building between there and Fort Winnebago, except Powderly's, near the latter place.

John Langdon put up his log house very shortly after Torbert, on Section 29, but finished it first, making it the first log house in town. He brought in the first span of horses, and as Torbert and Williams came with him, and as they all brought cattle, they must all have the credit of bringing in the first oxen and cows; and they were called a very superior lot of cattle. He also brought some hogs, and came fully equipped to break up land, and did break up a good deal for others. He started Cambria—built the dam and put up a saw-mill, in company with Samuel Langdon, in 1845, and for several years it was called Langdon's mill; but he became involved, and allowed a sharper, named Bell, to get hold of his property, who converted it to his own use, and changed the name of the place to Bellville (it was afterward called Florence, then Cambria). John Langdon was thus financially ruined; and the loss of his hard-earned property probably shortened his days. He removed to Bad Axe (now Vernon County), and died there in 1852.

*This sketch, with much additional, was written in 1871, revised in 1873, and published by the town.

Benjamin Williams located a piece of prairie on Section 32, but did not build right off. He sold to Joseph Kerr, who came here in the fall of 1846; he then built on a piece of land adjoining Cambria; was Sheriff for one term; now lives in the fruit region of Michigan.

Alvin B. Alden came from Connecticut in July, 1844, and put up a hay shanty, with wings for bedrooms, on a splendid quarter-section of openings, on Section 24, being the first land selected in town; built his log house in November, 1844; claims that he put in and harvested the first winter wheat. He was clerk of the Board of Supervisors for several years; now resides in Portage.

John Converse came from Connecticut in October, 1844; boarded about six months with his son-in-law, Alvin B. Alden; put up his log house in the spring of 1845, on a clay knoll, on Section 25; had a mill privilege, which nature had done a good deal for, except supplying it with water—if we except a few springs; but Uncle John, nevertheless, not to be balked by such a trifle, built a dam and a small mill, and put in a run of stones, bolts, etc. Feed is still ground there, when we have a wet time. Uncle John kept the first house of entertainment for man and beast, and scores are now living who remember with pleasure the kind, liberal and motherly attentions of Mrs. Converse; though not kept in the style of the Fox House, yet everything that was substantial was in abundance, and all left satisfied—style was not expected in a log house. He was the first Postmaster in town; kept the first post office, called Polk Prairie, a misnomer, as it was situated in the openings. The name was afterward changed to East Randolph.

He was the founder of the village of Randolph, in Dodge and Columbia Counties, for which he is entitled to the gratitude of the whole community, having labored almost single handed against the combined efforts of Cambria, Fox Lake and the railroad company. The opposition he encountered would, doubtless, have deterred almost any other person; but, after repeated refusals, in February, 1857, he obtained permission from the railroad company to put up a shanty on the prairie for the reception of grain, the company agreeing to stop the cars whenever he succeeded in getting a car-load, on being signaled, and providing the train was not detained over ten minutes. A poplar pole, with an old neck-scarf attached, was the signal used; now it is about the greatest wheat station on the line of the road. He built the Russell House, and when he removed there he took the post office and its name with him, which was the cause of the station being called Randolph. He was our first School Superintendent, and now resides at Portage.

The first Welsh people in this section of our State settled a few rods east of our town line, and the first in this town were the Rev. Thomas H. Roberts, David Roberts, and John Evans. The two former settled on Section 4, and the latter on a poor eighty acres, on Section 15, now used as a pasture by William Harris; his log house, with a stick chimney on the outside, stood near the road, on the north end; and the first sermon delivered in the town was preached there, in the winter of 1844 and 1845, by the Rev. T. H. Roberts, at which time the Welsh church of Blaen-y-cae was organized, and also the Sabbath school, and religious services were held alternately at James Evans', near Lake Emily, Catharine Roberts, Blaen-y-cae, and John Evans', on Section 15; the first is now living at the same place, and aged about eighty-four years, the second died in May, 1871, aged eighty-three years, and the last has removed to Iowa.

The said Thomas H. Roberts, immediately after his arrival here, wrote letters to his friends in Wales, describing the country and its advantages, which were read in the mines there, and created quite a furor; the result was that the next spring witnessed the departure of a great many families to Wisconsin, who settled at Lake Emily, and what is now Courtland, Springvale and Randolph, all brought here by these letters. Mr. Roberts, like most of the Welsh preachers, is also a farmer, and has resided, until a few years since, on his first location, and owns it now, but resides on the town line, in the town of Manchester, and is still a preacher and farmer, and very much respected by all. At one time, while he was in the woods splitting some rails, a noble-looking stag came near where he was at work, stopping under a tree and appearing to lean against it; Mr. Roberts, rightly conjecturing that he had been wounded by some hunter, went up to him and caught him by the horns and secured him; he had been shot. David Roberts, mentioned above, settled near Lake Sarah in 1844, and left in the spring of 1850 for California, and died just as he came in sight of it. He located the first settlers in Springvale, etc.

The most of our first Welsh settlers had spent what little money they had by the time they had become settled here; some paid their last shilling for their land, a yoke of oxen or a cow; one family paid out their last sovereign for an old lame sow, but which proved a good speculation afterward in the sale of pigs: but, with no money, or anything to exchange for groceries, they fared hard indeed; and some recollect well how thankful they were to receive from an acquaintance, who was fortunate to own a cow when they had none, a small piece of butter or a little milk occasionally, and they would go a long distance to get it, and live a long time on its recollections—for from that time they began to live, as they could exchange butter for what they needed, and, with the good pasturage the land afforded, they would make about nine pounds of butter a week from a good cow, and felt comparatively independent.

For a long time after they came here, not one of them owned a wagon; but nothing prevented them from attending their religious meetings regularly, week days as well as Sundays—and they went mostly afoot: and when the creeks were swollen in the spring, or overflowed the low bridges, the women would take off their shoes and stockings, wade through, and re-dress on the other side, and go on to meeting. Would any American woman do that? Some went to meeting with a yoke of oxen and a low, log sled, similar to a stone-boat, winter and summer, and some used, for several years, low truck wagons, with the wheels cut from the ends of a large log, the squeaking of which could be heard for a mile when they went to and fro to meeting. Now, some of those very individuals drive as handsome a turnout as any one.

Our Welsh people started the poultry business under rather discouraging circumstances. A friend of John Roberts (Bontnewydd), had brought with him a pair of chickens to commence with, but they proved to be both roosters, and, as there were no hens to be found anywhere, the prospect for fresh eggs or chicken pie was poor indeed: but a trade was struck up, by which John Roberts was to have one, if he would help to procure a hen: so they posted off together to Columbus, and, after a good deal of travel and more persuasion, and representing the very bad fix they were in, they procured two hens.

The following incident will give some idea of the loneliness of some of our early settlers (the neighbors being few and far between): The family of the above-named John Roberts had resided here nearly one year before they saw a single individual, excepting their own people, when one day, one of the boys came running in, shouting at the top of his voice, "Mother! mother! there's a man coming!" and they were almost as much astonished as Robinson Crusoe was when he discovered the footprints in the sand.

The first celebration of the anniversary of American independence, in town, was celebrated by the Welsh people July 4, 1848, on Section 4, by singing, and short lectures on temperance.

Job W. Perry, though not one of the earliest settlers in this town, yet located his land in 1844, and deserves notice here. He lived a short time a few miles beyond its limits; built a large, good log house on Section 12, in the spring of 1845; came originally from New York, then Ohio, then Walworth County; was a good specimen of the old-fashioned pioneers, who have done so much to build up this country; had always lived at the western end of civilization, and, as soon as land became improved, so that his cattle did not have a wide range, he was uneasy, and would sell out and be off further West. He had sold here in 1852, and had located in Minnesota, and was preparing to remove his family when death put in his veto. I am afraid there were Ku-Klux or Wide-Awakes in those days, although they did not go by these names; but, as Shakespeare says, "What's in a name?" The early settlers generally respected claims. Uncle Job had jumped some claim and refused to give it up; he was Ku-kluxed one night by a delegation disguised, and, after a bold resistance by the family, in which an old sword and hot water were freely used, he was taken off to Lake Emily, to be put under the ice, but at the last moment a compromise was effected.

S M Carr

DE KORRA

In this connection, an amusing incident occurred. Uncle Job, previous to the threatened lynching, had become alarmed, from information he had received, and, knowing the then customs of the country and the characters he had wronged, expected trouble. So, one day, he came to F. R. Roberts and represented that the settlers were going to kill him because he had shown land to the Welshmen. Roberts and his brother David thought, in their innocence, that it was too bad that Uncle Job should be killed on their account, and that even if they lost their lives in consequence, they ought, by right, to go and protect him. They went, but found no one there. David left, but the other remained, and, in a very short time, some men were seen advancing toward the house. Uncle Job ran up a ladder to the chamber, and, Robinson Crusoe-like, pulled it up after him. The old lady got out the old sword and put it into Robert's hands, and posted him near the door; she then hid under the bed, and the daughters left the house.

The men tried to come in, but Roberts brandished the sword so vigorously that the feat was impossible without the risk of losing a limb or two. They expostulated and explained in English, which was the only language they were masters of, and Roberts talked back in Welsh, for the reason that he did not know a word of any other language—but the old sword still threatened. In the mean time, however, one of the girls came around from her hiding-place to the door, and found out that these men were travelers, and innocent of any murderous designs. She also tried to explain to Roberts in English, but all to no purpose; the old sword still flourished menacingly. Roberts thought of nothing but saving the life of Uncle Job, which was placed in jeopardy on his account, and was determined to "fight it out on that line, if it took all summer."

Finally, Uncle Job heard enough to satisfy him that he had nothing to fear from these men: so he came down from his hiding-place, and the old lady from under the bed, and, after numerous motions and signs, Roberts was induced to give up the old sword, and the men allowed to come in.

Uncle Job, like H. Stevens and other speculators, made a business of locating settlers on Government land at any price they could agree on, and then go or send to the Land Office at Green Bay and enter it. This same F. R. Roberts, in 1845, had paid Uncle Job for his land and was preparing to build on his present homestead, when he found out by a friend, who had overheard the conversation, that Uncle Job had planned a trick to get his son-in-law to enter the eighty acres of prairie which he (Roberts) had paid Perry for—Perry having all his money, which had been delivered to him without any witness or receipt. Roberts had no alternative but to immediately squat on it and claim it under the pre-emption laws, and thus prevent it being purchased by others. As he happened to have a few boards, he immediately put up a small shanty on the prairie, and lived in it for four months, without any door to it, and by so doing he succeeded in saving his land, which he had previously paid for; but it was a very close thing—his pre-emption having been made at 9 o'clock in the morning, and Perry's money, which he had furnished, having arrived at the Green Bay Land Office at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of the same day. Uncle Job was like all the old pioneers, kind and good-hearted, and willing to aid anyone in sickness or distress: a good neighbor, though sharp at a bargain; he was our first Town Assessor, but would not stand a re-election.

The first German who settled in this part of our State was Dr. William C. Arch, a much-respected and well-informed man, who settled on Section 6, near the Fox River marsh, in 1848. He still resides there, in the old log house. Through his influence, most of the numerous Germans in this and the adjoining section of country were induced to settle here.

The first school ever kept in town was kept at the log dwelling-house of John Converse, in 1845. The first schoolhouse erected in town expressly for a school was made of logs, on Government land, on Section 11, by voluntary contribution of labor and material, and school taught there by Margaret Jones, of Springvale, in the summer of 1846. The writer lived there for a few months; but in December of that year, the forty acres it was built on had been exchanged for another forty, and a dispute arose about the ownership of the schoolhouse, and one night it was secretly torn down and carried away, and so ended the first schoolhouse.

The first schoolhouse built after the School Districts were organized was built of logs, on Section 25, in School District No. 1.

The first, and until quite recently, the only store in this town, was erected in 1846, by Elijah Dunlap and Milo E. Bradley, on the old Fort Winnebago road, and was the only one for a number of miles, and quite a business was done there for several years, by Dunlap & Scott, and it was considered the nucleus of a village, and called Centerville. Squire Patton, of Scott, used to hold there what was called the "High Court of Centerville;" said store and a one-horse tavern across the road, in the town of Scott, was all that ever came of it, excepting that a doctor set up there, for a short time, but it was so healthy that he had no practice, and left, and Centerville, though in a new country, was reckoned among the things that had been.

The first dwelling destroyed by fire was Mr. Blood's, on Section 36, which was built of hay—no insurance. Insurance agents had not arrived yet.

The first road in this town was laid out and the sloughs bridged by the soldiers, for the purpose of getting their supplies, and was called the Fox Lake and Fort Winnebago road; and, though no regard was paid to section lines, yet a part of it is still used as a road; another, and older military road, from Fort Winnebago to Fort Howard, was, and is now, located a little north of the town line.

The first election held in this section of our county, and in this town, was held in the house of John Langdon, in 1846, at which election M. W. Patton was elected Justice of the Peace, for the four townships now called Courtland, Springvale, Scott and Randolph. The old house still stands, in a good state of preservation, and can be seen any day, on the farm of Thomas Sanderson, between his house and the barn. The roof is shingled now, but for several years it was covered with bark, which was held in its place with poles.

The first white child born in the town was a child of Henry Dantz, who settled on Section 10, in 1845, who was W. W. Dantz, of Princeton, and who was the Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms in the Senate in 1871. Now deceased.

The first white death in the town was a child of James Lowell, who was buried on his farm, on Section 13, as there was no cemeteries at that time. The first public cemetery was donated to the public by Job W. Perry, on Section 12, and was, for a number of years, the only burial ground in town, and a great many were buried there, but the bodies have been mostly removed to the beautiful cemetery at Randolph Center, which was surveyed April 24, 1851.

All the first settlers avoided the prairies, having somehow, formed the erroneous idea that no one could live and support himself there, because there was no timber, and but little water or marsh—three very important requisites in a new country; also, that the land was considered too poor to grow timber; too cold for man or beast to live on in the winter, and only fit for cattle to range on in summer; and some men thought that it would never be settled, and that they would get the use of it for pasture as long as they lived; consequently, you would find all the first settlements in the openings, at the edge of the timber, and near some spring of water—water and wood being the principal things looked for; and when land was purchased on the prairie it was generally for speculation, and the most of that was done after the Mexican land warrants came into market. The first man, in this town, who was bold enough to venture clear out into the prairie was the late E. D. Hewit, in March, 1847, having been enticed there by a large spring of water and some marsh, on Section 34, and lived there for several years, and raised crops without any fence, or any fear of being annoyed by roving cattle—his own cattle being tethered on the marsh.

The first name given to the town was Luzerne, but a dispute arising as to its orthography, some contending that the third letter should be "c," some "s" and others "z," another meeting was called and its present name adopted. At a meeting of the County Commissioners, held at Columbus January 9, 1849, it was decided that Township No. 13, north of Range 12, east of the Fourth Principal Meridian, should constitute the town of Randolph. A strong effort had been made by a portion of the people of Scott to get the east half of the present town of Scott attached to Randolph, but we preferred to go it alone, believing that a town six miles square was large enough. The County Commissioners designated the house of Oscar F. Hamilton, on Section 23, as the place for holding the first town meeting. The first town caucus was held at the house of Willard Perry, on Section 22; a union ticket was proposed, but failed, and party tickets were nominated—Whig and Democratic. The first town meeting was held as stated above, on the 3d day of April, 1849, and at the election of moderator of that meeting the first party battle was fought, resulting in a Democratic victory, John Converse having been elected Moderator and George Knowles Clerk. That election was considered a test vote, and the Whigs tried to change the result and the Democrats to retain what they had gained, and we had lively times, and party feeling ran high; but the Democratic ticket was elected, as the Whigs alleged, by illegal voting, and because the Democrats had the best horses. A few Englishmen who were working here, but whose families resided in the town of Scott, were arrested for illegal voting, and had a trial at the "High Court of Centerville." They were defended by ex-Governor James T. Lewis, but nothing came of it excepting hard feelings, and a great deal of party animosity, for several years, in town elections.

At the first town meeting, in the town of Randolph, the whole number of votes cast was ninety-six; and, on Chairman of Supervisors, where the greatest effort was made, the vote stood fifty-six and forty.

The following were the first town officers elected:

Supervisors—William T. Whirry (Chairman), John W. Phillips, Powell Austin; Town Clerk, S. D. Hambleton; Assessor, Job W. Perry; Treasurer, Warren Campbell; School Superintendent, John Converse; Justices—Thomas H. Roberts, Francis Knowles, Powell Austin, John Converse; Constables—David R. Roberts, Lorenzo D. Farrington, James Knowles; Sealer of Weights and Measures, William T. Whirry.

The unsuccessful ticket was headed by Joseph Kerr, who was the first member of Assembly from Columbia County, representing the whole country in the two first State Legislatures of 1848-49.

The following poll is a list kept at the first general election, the fall succeeding the town meeting: John Converse, Frederick J. Converse, William Bradshaw, Frederick Schröder, Rufus Langdon, William H. Mack, Elam D. Hewitt, George Knowles, James Lowell, Isaac Holcomb, Charles A. Richards, John Whirry, John W. Phillips, Robert Andrews, Powell Austin, Hezekiah Dunham, Phillips W. Hartwell, Abraham G. Langdon, Meliah Sweat, William T. Whirry, Daniel P. Larkin, Edward Lewis, Richard H. Roberts, Ezra A. Doolittle, Robert Hamilton, Warren Campbell, Benjamin Williams, Isaac Harris, George W. Scott, Rodney Campbell, Richard Lewis, Elijah Dunlap, Aaron J. Gibson, Riley S. Richmond, William H. Torbert, Thomas Lewis, William M. Jones, William Harris, John N. Hardy, Hiram Perry, John Schröder, John P. Converse, Charles Presba, James Knowles, William B. Presba, Henry A. Crooker, Willard L. Perry, J. S. Langdon, Greenleaf Ide, Henry Dantz, Rowland Langdon, Job W. Perry, Hiram W. Perry, Henry Hanson, James Taylor, Oscar F. Hamilton, Thomas Williams, Stephen D. Hambleton, Joseph Thomas, Benjamin F. Stanton, Joseph D. Stanton, Samuel S. Torbert, Henry L. Bessac, John W. Hinton, Joseph Kerr, Lorenzo D. Farrington, E. B. Finney.

The total amount of tax on the first tax roll of the town was $706.48, and, on the last, $5,217.46.

The assessed valuation of the town in 1849, was real estate, $62,885; personal property, $1,672; total, $64,557. In 1872 it was real estate, $503,806; personal property, $104,336; total, $608,182. What is called Kelly's Addition to the village of Cambria is located in town, and includes forty acres of land north of the mill pond, and (including the buildings) was assessed in 1872 at $5,378. The largest tax ever raised in town was $8,930.28, in 1864, which included a war tax.

The Welsh Calvinistic Methodist society up to 1854 had held their religious meetings in the old Lake Emily log schoolhouse, and in private houses, but in the summer of that year, they built a church edifice on land donated by F. R. Roberts, on Section 12, in this town, and it was dedicated on the first Sabbath of December, 1854, the Rev. Thomas A. Roberts, Proscaron, and the Rev. John J. Roberts, of Columbus, officiating. The name of the church was declared to be Engedi, a Hebrew name, signifying a fountain of pleasant waters. The cemetery adjoining the church is called Machpelah, after the cave purchased by old Father Abraham. The first Trustees were J. W. Hughes, J. W. Jones and O. J. Jones. The Rev. John Daniels was their first and only Pastor. The church was enlarged in 1870.

There are two other societies of the above nomination partly in this town: one has its church just north of the town line, in the town of Manchester, and the other on the town line in the town of Scott, and a German Lutheran Reform Church is also on the town line in the town of Scott; but as they are not located in town, the plan of this sketch precludes any further remarks, excepting that in 1869 the latter society purchased five acres of land on Section 6, and built a parsonage on it.

The First Wesleyan Methodist society of Randolph Center organized June 17, 1858, and built a church on land donated by Z. W. Oliver, on Section 22, principally through the instrumentality of Rev. John Willis, who had seceded from the Methodist Episcopal Church. It was dedicated in October, 1858, by the Rev. A. C. Hand. The society is broken up, but its old members claim that they still own the church.

The Methodist Episcopal society organized a class and Sabbath school at Randolph Center, in 1849. They own no building, but for several years they have used the Wesleyan Church, and hold religious services there every Sunday.

The German Catholic Church, on Section 7, was built in 1861, on land donated by John G. Fisher. Religious services are held there occasionally by a priest from Beaver Dam.

The German Lutheran society, under the guidance of Rev. C. Diehlmann, worship a part of the time in the town hall.

In 1868, School District No. 3, having decided to build a new schoolhouse at Randolph Center, by mutual agreement the town built a stone basement under it for the purpose of a town hall, at a cost of $642.05; furniture, $77.50; total, $719.55.

In 1871, Parkinson built a small store for the sale of groceries, at Randolph Center, and it is the only store in town.

Randolph Center, at an early day, was platted as a village, but it never contained enough inhabitants for a set of village officers. In addition to what is mentioned elsewhere, it contains a post office, blacksmith and wagon shop.

What streams we have in town start from springs, except the one on the marsh, on Section 1, through which the small outlet of Lake Emily runs. We are pretty well up in the world, having a position on the boundary or divide between the Valley of the Mississippi and the Valley of the St. Lawrence, and on many farms the rain as it falls divides and finds its way to the ocean by different routes, a portion by the Gulf of Mexico and a portion by the St. Lawrence, so we have no fears of the greatest freshet doing us any damage. But I must not omit to mention that the celebrated Fox River takes its rise here at Lake Sarah, on the line between Section 4 and 5. It is not much of a lake, however, and once or twice, to my knowledge, during the time of our great droughts, it became perfectly dry, and at other times it is only a pretty good duck pond: but nevertheless, it has been honored with the name of lake. I presume it must have been a wet time when it was named.

One-half of the area of this township is prairie, the wooded portions occurring especially in the northern half. Marsh extends along the stream in Sections 15, 10, 11, 2 and 1, and also along the eastern side of the town. The surface is generally level, lying at an altitude of 350 to 400 feet. On the east sides are the heads of several small streams that pass eastward to Rock River. In the southwest quarter, the head-waters of Duck Creek make a deep ravine whose bottom has an altitude of only 240 feet.

The first entry of land in the town was made by Mary Perry, the west half of the northwest quarter of Section 12. Entered February 8, 1844; patented September 1, 1846.

TOWN OF SCOTT.

Among the first settlers in this town were Matthew W. Patton, Samuel McConachie, William Jones, John G. Evans, John Smith, John McConachie, George Payne, Edward Root, James Inglehart, Theodore Thomas, John Sawyer and John Dodge. The first mentioned moved on to his claim in the fall of 1845, the others coming in the following spring or soon after. At this time, neighbors were like angel's visits, "few and far between," while the nearest post office was Fox Lake. For their mill privileges they were compelled to go to Beaver Dam, or to Catfish mill, fifteen miles south of Madison. Mr. Inglehart, on one occasion, went to Beaver Dam with a load of wheat to be ground, and was informed that it could not be done inside of four weeks. Not wishing to be delayed so long, he prevailed upon the miller to exchange a small sack of flour for some wheat, and returned home, divided it between four families, and set out for Catfish mills. At this place he was more fortunate, being enabled to return home in about ten days with his flour. On the 30th of December at 11 o'clock A. M., rain began to fall and continued for two hours, when it commenced snowing, continuing all night, covering the earth to a depth of eighteen inches. This snow remained upon the ground until the following spring. The neighbors of Mr. Inglehart experienced great difficulty in procuring food, many of them during the entire winter living on buckwheat cakes, the wheat being ground by Inglehart in a small coffee-mill, and then run through a small sieve. Fifteen bushels of buckwheat were ground in this manner.

As in many other places, the Methodist "circuit rider" was the first to wend his way into this new country with the "story of the Cross." This was in 1847, since which time ministers of other denominations have presented their peculiar views for the consideration of those who would hear. Four churches have since been erected in the town, one on Section 12 by the Reformed Lutherans, another on Section 26 by Welsh Methodists, the third on Section 7 by the Methodist Episcopal brethren, and the fourth on Section 34 by the Presbyterians.

The first settlers were from the Eastern States, but at present many nationalities are represented among its citizens, the Americans predominating.

During the late war, the town showed its devotion to the Union in a prompt response to every call made by the national authorities, in no instance permitting a draft to be made.

Mark Barden and Freeman M. Ross, from this town, have represented the county in the General Assembly, serving with credit to themselves and honor to their constituency. Other men who became known outside of their own immediate neighborhood may be mentioned Squire Patton, Judge of the High Court of Centerville, and Edward Root, the honest man.

The south and east part of the town is prairie land, while the west and north part is timber land and openings. The northwest part has a sandy soil, while the south part is good heavy black loam.

The first death was that of a child of William Wilson, in 1847.

Jude Luning taught the first school in the winter of 1847-48, and boarded around among the scholars for the sum of $12 per month. The house was situated upon Section 1, and, in 1879, was still standing upon its original site, but for many years it had been used for storing grain raised upon the farm of Robert Beattie. A potato patch had also, for many years, adorned the school ground where the children formerly romped and played. The house was long used as a place of worship by various religious bodies.

In 1860, the Presbyterians built a house on Section 34, and continued to hold services therein until 1872, when the congregation disbanded, its members visiting with such congregations as was convenient for them to attend. The Methodists had, as early as 1847, a class in this neighborhood, but which ceased to exist after a few years. In 1872, when the Presbyterians retired from the field, the class was re-organized by Rev. Daniel Brown, a local preacher. In 1879, they had a membership of thirty-two, with Ervin McCall as Class Leader. From 1872, the congregation had enjoyed the ministerial services of Revs. Brown, Smith, Teel, Suffron, Bronson, Shepherd and Logan. A Sunday school was organized at the same time as the class, holding weekly meetings during the warm season of the year. In 1879, Ervin McCall was Superintendent.

John Dodge settled in this town in the fall of 1844, but went back the same fall to New Hampshire and returned in the latter part of the winter, stopping at Chicago to purchase a span of horses. Reaching Watertown, he bought a load of corn and oats and brought it through. He then sent his brother to Green Bay on horseback to enter the quarter-section on which he now lives. A little more than two years later, the horses were stolen and run off south, and John was left to mourn their loss, as he never found them. This was the first horse team owned in this section. In the fall of 1844, snow fell to the depth of four inches in October, which was his first season here. They did not get their shanty completed until the middle of November, and it was very cold, but John says they did not mind much about cold and storms then.

In October of that year, he went down on the marsh and cut a small stack of hay, which, of course, was nearly worthless. Sam Langdon sold him a little hay, and the rest of his supply he bought at the rate of $20 per ton from an ex-soldier, named Howey, who, after serving his time at Fort Winnebago, had embarked in a limited way in farming, about two miles north of the old Powderly place. This, with the small store of grain he brought from Watertown, tided his stock through that dreary winter; John avers that his steers in the spring "looked like delegates from the seven years of 'famine,' lean flesh and ill-favored." Powderly's house on the old military reservation was the only one between his place and Portage.

Deer and small game were plenty, and from time to time they replenished their larder with a buck or pheasant. He shot one buck from his dooryard. For two years or more, they were obliged to go to Beaver Dam or Columbus to mill, the trip occupying two days to go there, leaving their grist and returning for it in about a month, which required another day. In the fall of 1845, M. W. Patton, afterward known as the "High Court of Centerville," made his appearance at Mr. Dodge's, tired and hungry from land-hunting. The squire called for dinner, to which Mr. Dodge favorably responded. Patton says it was one of "his biggest meals," and John believed him. The squire first beheld John coming out of the woods with a gun and squirrel. He waited outside of the cabin while the culinary preparations were going on, the weather being fine, and fell to contemplating the scenery, thinking as his eye swept to the south that it was the finest panorama he had ever witnessed. Such a wealth of verdure, fertility and beauty reveling in its pristine glory he had never realized. Straight and lofty oaks clothed in their autumnal tints on the one hand, and the prairie with its rank vegetable growth on the other, bespoke the march of civilization and future wealth. After supper, Mr. Patton and Perley went down to the creek and held a short palaver with a band of Indians that were trapping along the stream.

In 1846, the first move was made in the United States to found a settlement by the English "Potters' Society," which pitched its tent in the town of Scott, there arriving here in May. John Sawyer, Hamlet Copeland and James Hammond. The society had grown from a very feeble beginning, six years earlier, to a powerful co-operative society, accumulating considerable funds. It was organized to protect the artisans of this extensive labor class from the frequent strikes, and provide homes in America for many of its members, thus keeping a demand for labor for those that remained. They published a journal devoted to the interests of the society. Each new settler was entitled to twenty acres of land, a house to be erected on the land, and the family to be provisioned for one year, at the expense of the society. Sawyer, Copeland and Hammond were made Trustees of the society to invest funds in this country. They sailed from England in January, 1846, and arrived at New York the following April. They were then instructed to erect cabins for the next year's installment out of funds in their possession.

At an early day, Theodore Thomas and Robert McConachie were together engaged in breaking land. In that neighborhood lived a family named Anderson. A fascinating young lady constituted one of the attractions of that household. It was always the custom to turn the cattle out to graze on the prairies through the evening and night, and they sometimes strayed a considerable distance. In the morning Robert would always say: "I will look around in the neighborhood of Anderson's," while of course Theodore would look in another direction, but could seldom find them, while Robert was nearly always successful. This fact after awhile aroused Theodore's curiosity, and he began to investigate the case, and discovered that his partner had furnished the salt, and induced the girl to salt them at her place. The treacherous plotter never could satisfactorily explain so palpable a deception.

In 1846, Samuel and John McConachie erected the "Blue Tavern," a roomy frame structure. They "bached" it there a short time, when they rented the house to Zenas Oliver, who lived there about three years, and who was succeeded by Stephen B. Gage, who kept the house several years more, doing a thriving business. He charged travelers a shilling a meal, and always treated his customers to a drink of whisky. Out of these moderate charges he made a good deal of money. It was on the regular stage line, and in those days all the commercial and business traffic between Milwaukee and Portage passed over this road, as it was the main thoroughfare between these two points. It was no uncommon affair to see thirty or forty teams in a day on the road, carrying grain to Milwaukee, and freighting back goods. Mr. Gage stuck to the tavern until the railroad, in 1857, heralded the dawn of a new era, and this common thoroughfare almost lost its identity as a theater of busy life. The long line of teams daily toiling wearily through sand, marshes, tenacious clay and the frightful corduroys, consuming from ten to fourteen days to make the round trip to Milwaukee; the jostling crowds at the wayside inns that dotted this great highway, the loquacious landlord who with a liberal hand dispensed ham, eggs and whisky to the teamster and the wayfarer, and then packed them away in his "prairie feather" beds, or sometimes, to meet the exigencies of the case, planted them on the floors; the endless jokes and fearful stories that passed around the bar-room, and robbed toil of its tedium, are things of the past. But they are still fresh in the memories of many of the pioneers who are yet working out their probation here, and who sometimes almost regret to see the modern innovation of steam breaking up the great social compact that bound them together as a band of brothers in common trials as well as in common joys.

All of Township 13, Range 11, was organized into a town by the Board of Supervisors, at their annual meeting, held November, 1849, and it was given the name of Scott. The town is bounded on the east by Randolph, on the west by Marcellon, on the south by Springvale, on the north by Marquette County.

The town of Scott lies directly north of Springvale, and like it presents eastward projecting points of high ground, with intervening sharply defined, and in part marshy-bottomed, ravines, which are occupied by the head-streams of Fox River. The points of high land are shorter toward the northern part of the town, the longest lying on its south line. On the west side and extending into Marcellon, is an isolated area of high land, some three miles in length, from north to south. The low ground has a general altitude of 230 to 280 feet, the higher about 400. The extreme points are on the north half of Section 35. The latter point is on a prairie, which occupies the high ground on Sections 25, 26, 35 and 36, being an extension of the large prairie area of Randolph.

The first entry of land in the town was made by John Dodge, and consisted of the east half of the southeast quarter of Section 34. It was entered February 11, 1845, and patent issued June 1, 1848.

The following are the names of the officers elected since the organization of the town:

1850—Board—Joseph Hewitt (Chairman), Freeman M. Ross, William Judd; Clerk, William Smith; Treasurer and Collector, Edward Tripp; Assessor, M. W. Patten; Superintendent, John H. Guptil.

1851—Board—John Guptil (Chairman), Edward Tripp, Truman Ross; Clerk, Marcus Barden; Treasurer, Andrew Lesbar; Assessor, Jas. Inglehart; Superintendent, Marcus Barden.

1852—Board—M. W. Patton (Chairman), David Clark, Elijah Sanderson; Clerk, M. Barden; Treasurer, Samuel McConachie; Superintendent, James Stebbins; Assessor, James Inglehart.

1853—Board—William Wiley (Chairman), John Cruckson, Samuel McConachie ; Clerk, M. Barden ; Treasurer, John Hamilton ; Superintendent, Stephen D. Hamilton ; Assessor, Elijah Sanderson.

1854—Board—M. Barden (Chairman), Hugh Martin, William Stebbins ; Clerk, James Stebbins ; Treasurer, J. G. Lyons ; Assessor, E. Sanderson ; Superintendent, J. Hamilton.

1855—Board—M. W. Patton (Chairman), M. C. Prescott, John McConachie ; Clerk, James A. Stebbins ; Treasurer, John Hamilton ; Assessor, John Sawyer ; Superintendent, Samuel McConachie.

1856—Board—M. W. Patton (Chairman), George Payne, William Judd ; Clerk, Marcus Barden ; Treasurer and Assessor, D. H. Langdon ; Superintendent, Samuel Barden.

1857—Board—M. Barden (Chairman), Major Woodard, Elbridge Clark ; Clerk, F. M. Ross ; Treasurer and Assessor, D. H. Langdon ; Superintendent, Elon Woodard.

1858—M. Barden (Chairman), C. H. Grover, William Wiley ; Clerk, F. M. Ross ; Treasurer and Assistant, D. H. Langdon ; Superintendent, Wesley Gibbs.

1859—Board—Marcus Barden (Chairman), John McConachie, C. H. Grover ; Clerk, F. M. Ross ; Treasurer and Assessor, D. H. Langdon ; Superintendent, Samuel E. Stebbins.

1860—Board—M. Barden (Chairman), John McConachie, Ervin McCall ; Clerk, F. M. Ross ; Assessor and Treasurer, Joseph Parkinson ; Superintendent, John Hamilton.

1861—Board—M. Barden (Chairman), W. H. Judd, John McConachie ; Clerk, F. M. Ross ; Treasurer and Assessor, D. H. Langdon ; Superintendent, Samuel McConachie.

1862—Board—M. Barden (Chairman), John McConachie, James Inglehart ; Clerk, F. M. Ross ; Treasurer and Assessor, D. H. Langdon.

1863—Board—M. Barden (Chairman), John McConachie, Joseph Sayers ; Clerk, F. M. Ross ; Treasurer and Assessor, E. G. Clark.

1864—Board—M. Barden (Chairman), William R. Jones, Samuel E. Stebbins ; Clerk, F. M. Ross ; Assessor and Treasurer, Archy Thom.

1865—Board—M. Barden (Chairman), William R. Jones, Samuel E. Stebbins ; Clerk, F. M. Ross ; Assessor and Treasurer, James Inglehart.

1866—Board—M. Barden (Chairman), John Sawyer, Wesley Gibbs ; Clerk, F. M. Ross ; Assessor and Treasurer, A. Thom.

1867—Board—F. M. Ross (Chairman), Theodore Thomas, Giles Langdon ; Clerk, M. Barden ; Treasurer and Assessor, Stephen Woodard.

1868—Board—F. M. Ross (Chairman), Julius Barker, Robert Beattie ; Clerk, Marcus Barden ; Assessor and Treasurer, D. C. Merrill.

1869—Board—Marcus Barden (Chairman), C. F. Roberts, Theodore Thomas ; Clerk, F. M. Ross ; Assessor, D. C. Merrill ; Treasurer, Isaac Hopkins.

1870—Board—M. Barden (Chairman), C. F. Roberts, William Sauer ; Clerk, F. M. Ross ; Assessor, D. C. Merrill ; Treasurer, William Owen.

1871—Board—M. Barden (Chairman), John Sawyer, C. H. Grover ; Clerk, F. M. Ross ; Assessor, D. C. Merrill ; Treasurer, Joseph Sayer.

1872—Board—M. Barden (Chairman), John Sawyer, C. H. Grover ; Clerk, F. M. Ross ; Assessor, C. F. Roberts ; Treasurer, Joseph Sayer.

1873—Board—M. Barden (Chairman), John Sawyer, C. H. Grover ; Clerk, F. M. Ross ; Assessor, C. F. Roberts ; Treasurer, Joseph Sayer.

1874—Board—M. Barden (Chairman), Charles Scharf, John Sawyer ; Clerk, Lester Woodard ; Assessor, G. W. Gorsuch ; Treasurer, Robert Evans.

1875—Board—John Sawyer (Chairman), William Owen, William Sauer ; Clerk, Lester Woodard ; Assessor, G. W. Gorsuch ; Treasurer, Robert Evans.

1876—Board—John Sawyer (Chairman), William Sauer, William Owen ; Clerk, Lester Woodard ; Assessor, G. W. Gorsuch ; Treasurer, George Stancer.

1877—Board—D. C. Merrill (Chairman), William Sauer, G. L. Keite ; Clerk, Virgil Barden ; Assessor, G. W. Gorsuch ; Treasurer, George Stancer.

1878—Board—D. C. Merrill (Chairman), William Sauer, D. C. Keith; Clerk, Virgil Barden; Assessor, Henry Slinger; Treasurer, J. C. Thomas.

1879—Board—John Sawyer (Chairman), William Sauer, G. C. Keith; Clerk, Mark Roberts; Assessor, Henry Slinger; Treasurer, William Ross.

1880—Board—Marcus Barden (Chairman), Wesley Gorsuch, D. C. Merrill; Clerk, Mark Roberts; Assessor, Henry Slinger; Treasurer, William Ross.

TOWN OF SPRINGVALE.

This town is bounded on the east by Courtland and Randolph, on the west by Wycocena, on the north by Scott, and on the south by Otsego. In 1857, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad was built through it, entering on Section 1, and crossing Sections 2, 3, 4, 5, and passing into Wycocena from Section 6. Duck Creek and its branches traverse the town in various directions. The territory comprising the town, Township 12, Range 11, was organized into a town by the Board of County Commissioners in 1849, and the name of Springvale given to it and the house of Edward Williams designated as the place for holding the first election.

Late in April, 1845, Ervin McCall came here from La Porte, Ind., in quest of a home. On the 1st day of May, he decided on the site of his present home, and, in the sub-land office at Fox Lake, immediately deposited the money for the entry of eighty acres of land. Mr. McCall stopped over night in the log tavern in that place, and, in the morning, long after sunrise, seeing no visible signs of a breakfast, he settled his bill and started for Oak Grove, a distance of fifteen miles, for breakfast. He arrived there late in the forenoon, got an early dinner, and while he was partaking of that meal a team passed the tavern; he jumped up, settled his bill, ran and overtook the team, and secured a ride to ten miles beyond Watertown. He stayed over night with a farmer and took an early start the next morning. He was soon overtaken by a young man with a double-seated buggy, who was going to Milwaukee, who agreed to carry him to that point for the consideration of $1. He made a quick trip back to La Porte, and, early in September, with his family and brother John, with a wagon, two yoke of oxen, half a barrel of pork, a limited supply of other provisions and household goods, he started for his new home. While fording Fox River in Illinois (the bridge being gone), he overturned the wagon while ascending the bank, which resulted in a fracture of his wife's arm. The broken arm was properly adjusted and they came on to Rock County, where his brother-in-law, M. W. Patton, lived. He left his family there, and, with his brother, pushed on with the team and stock, arriving here about the middle of September. The first night after their arrival here was spent at the log house of Sam Langdon. The next day, they commenced haying on the marsh near Cambria and got a winter's supply for their stock. They built a log house, and then Ervin returned to Johnstown, Rock County, for his family. Mr. Patton and family came back with them. While crossing the bridge over Rock River, a high and very narrow structure, the sides only protected by timbers laid along the edge of the bridge, a laughable incident occurred that might have been a lamentable accident. Mr. McCall was driving his two yoke of oxen, the wagon containing both families. The "leaders" were an exceptionally well-trained pair of old cattle, while the "wheel" oxen were a pair of skittish four-year-old steers. They had just got on the bridge, Mr. Patton following behind with a small herd of cattle, when a young heifer attempted to pass the team. It got by the wagon, but, getting frightened, turned in behind the steers and jumped astride the tongue. The steers snorted and plunged about in a very uncertain manner, and the risk of the whole load and teams going overboard seemed imminent. Perhaps they would, but for the nerve and coolness of Mr. McCall, who whipped up the head team and keeping the line straight, gave the heifer a free ride across the bridge and no harm was done, though all parties were badly scared. The squire, a terror-stricken witness of the scene from the end of the bridge, threw his hands over his head, assuming a most tragic attitude until the danger was passed, and then yelled out, "Well done." Had they been precipitated over the bridge, the result would likely have been fatal to the whole load. They came on the remainder of the way without further incident worthy of mention, and arrived at the hospitable residence of Sam Langdon on the 15th day of November, where they stayed all night, and the next day moved into the new cabin.

On the 27th of February, 1846, that winter, Janette Patton was born, being the first female child born in the town of Springvale. She afterward married William Gage, now landlord of the City Hotel, Portage.

During the first winter of Mr. McCall's residence here, after making the necessary purchases of provisions to last until spring, he took an inventory of his bank and stock account, and found that his total assets were two twenty-five cent pieces. A little later, two Methodist ministers, who are never out of hearing of the pioneer's ax, came through here on a kind of frontier missionary work, preaching and locating places to preach. The elder of the two was the Rev. W. G. Miller, afterward a presiding elder and an eminent preacher of great worth and great popularity, and I suppose to the pioneers, "like the voice of one crying in the wilderness." He delivered a sermon to the settlers at the log house of Mr. Langdon, before mentioned, and that night was entertained at the home of Mr. McCall. To his colleague, the Rev. Mr. Hanson, a young man, Mr. McCall gave one of his twenty-five cent pieces. This was the first religious service held in the town.

Among the first settlers of the town were Ervin McCall, Robert Closs, Hugh Edwards, John Edwards, Evan Edwards, Robert Lloyd, John Rowland, Robert Rowland, William Lloyd, John O. Jones, John Meredith, John Williams, Samuel Owens, Owen Samnel, Richard Owens, Alfred Cowley, John Morgan, David Roberts, John Leatherman and Mr. Jennings.

The first marriage was that of John Williams and Miss Margaret Owens.

The first death was Margaret Thomas, in 1847.

The first schoolhouse was built on the southwest corner of Section 1, in 1847.

The first male child born here was John Edwards, in the early part of February, 1846.

It was not until 1860, that a mill was built in the town. In that year, S. Ingram erected a small one, on the south branch of Duck Creek, on Section 20.

John Dodge, April 29, 1845, entered the west half of the southeast quarter of Section 1, and Lot 1 in Section 2, being the first entries in the town. He received his patents June 1, 1848.

Springvale lies on the Wisconsin side of the watershed. Three branches of Duck Creek traverse the town from east to west, running in flat, marshy, sharply defined valleys, which have an altitude of 230 to 260 feet, and are separated by tongues of high land which rise from 300 to 400 feet. The broadest marsh and valley are those of the north or main branch, the latter nearly four miles wide on the west line of the town. Prairie occurs on higher ground in Sections 11, 12, 13, 15 and 4, connecting with that in Courtland.

The Calvinistic Methodists, in the spring of 1849, erected a church building on Section 12, the first in the town.

Springvale was the name given to a post office established in 1852, on Section 28, Thomas Cowley being the Postmaster. It was discontinued in one year, but re-established in 1862, on same section, with Wilbur Kennicat as Postmaster, and again discontinued after a short time.

The following is a list of town officers since 1853:

1854—John O. Jones, Chairman; John Meredith, Alfred Cowly, Supervisors; Robert Rowland, Clerk; Thomas J. Hughes, Treasurer; Nathan D. White, School Superintendent.

1855—John O. Jones, Chairman; Nathan D. White, John Meredith, Supervisors; Robert J. Rowland, Clerk; Thomas Hughes, Treasurer; Robert Closs, Assessor; William Depuy, School Superintendent.

1856—Nathan D. White, Chairman; John R. Rowlands, Jr., Lewis H. Lloyd, Supervisors; Robert J. Rowlands, Clerk; Thomas J. Hughes, Treasurer; Robert Closs, Assessor; William Depuy, School Superintendent.

1857—John O. Jones, Chairman; Luke Martin, Henry Delaney, Supervisors; William Meredith, Treasurer; Thomas Ingram, Assessor; John B. Van Shaick, School Superintendent.

1858—Evan Meredith, Chairman; John R. Rowlands, Jr., Robert B. Sanderson, Supervisors; Robert J. Rowlands, Clerk; William Meredith, Treasurer; Thomas Ingram, Assessor; John B. Van Shaick, School Superintendent.

1859—Evan Meredith, Chairman; Robert B. Sanderson, Robert D. Owens, Supervisors; John Meredith, Clerk; Thomas Sanderson, Treasurer; John P. Rowlands, Assessor; Thomas Meredith, School Superintendent.

1860—Robert B. Sanderson, Chairman; Griffith O. Jones, John Leatherman, Supervisors; Robert J. Rowlands, Clerk; Evan Evans, Treasurer; John R. Rowlands, Assessor; Austin Cannon, School Superintendent.

1861—John O. Jones, Chairman; John Leatherman, John Edwards, Supervisors; John Meredith, Clerk; Alfred A. Cole, Treasurer; John R. Rowlands, Jr., Assessor; J. B. Van Shaick, School Superintendent.

1862—John O. Jones, Chairman; John Leatherman, John Edwards, Supervisors; John Meredith, Clerk; Robert Closs, Treasurer; John R. Rowlands, Assessor.

1863—John Leatherman, Chairman; William J. Rowlands, Alfred Cowley, Supervisors; J. B. Van Shaick, Clerk; Thomas J. Hughes, Treasurer; John R. Rowlands, Assessor.

1864—John O. Jones, Chairman; Owen D. Owens, Alfred Cowley, Supervisors; Evan T. Evans, Clerk; William Aiton, Treasurer; John R. Rowlands, Assessor.

1865—John O. Jones, Chairman; Owen D. Owens, George Hall, Supervisors; Morris J. Rowlands, Clerk; Lewis Lloyd, Treasurer; John R. Rowlands, Assessor.

1866—Thomas Meredith, Chairman; William W. Rowlands, J. B. Van Shaick, Supervisors; M. J. Rowlands, Clerk; Alfred Cowley, Treasurer; John R. Rowlands, Jr., Assessor.

1867—Thomas Meredith, Chairman; William W. Rowlands, E. P. Upham, Supervisors; John Meredith, Clerk; Alfred Cowley, Treasurer; J. R. Rowlands, Assessor.

1868—Thomas Meredith, Chairman; H. J. Rowlands, Alfred Cowley, Supervisors; John Meredith, Clerk; John D. Jones, Treasurer; Evan T. Evans, Assessor.

1869—John R. Rowlands, Jr., Chairman; A. C. Jennings, George W. Williams, Supervisors; John Meredith, Clerk; Owen D. Owens, Treasurer; Evan T. Evans, Assessor.

1870—John R. Rowlands, Jr., Chairman; William Stokes, E. P. Upham, Supervisors; Kennedy Scott, Clerk; William W. Rowlands, Treasurer; Evan T. Evans, Assessor.

1871—John R. Rowlands, Jr., Chairman; E. P. Upham, William Stokes, Supervisors; Kennedy Scott, Clerk; William Meredith, Treasurer; Thomas Meredith, Assessor.

1872—J. R. Rowlands, Jr., Chairman; John D. Jones, George Cowley, Supervisors; A. C. Jennings, Clerk; Lewis Lloyd, Treasurer; Thomas Meredith, Assessor.

1873—J. R. Rowlands, Chairman; James Adams, J. R. Jones, Supervisors; M. J. Rowlands, Clerk; Luke Martin, Treasurer; Thomas Meredith, Assessor.

1874—John R. Rowlands, Chairman; George Cowley, E. T. Evans, Supervisors; Morris J. Rowlands, Clerk; William W. Hughes, Treasurer; Thomas Meredith, Assessor.

1875—John R. Jones, Chairman; James N. Cowley, E. F. Palmer, Supervisors; M. J. Rowlands, Clerk; W. W. Huntley, Treasurer; E. T. Evans, Assessor.

1876—J. R. Jones, Chairman; E. F. Palmer, E. P. Upham, Supervisors; M. J. Rowlands, Clerk; W. W. Huntley, Treasurer; John R. Rowlands, Assessor.

1877—John D. Jones, Chairman; John H. Jones, H. D. Jennings, Supervisors; A. C. Jennings, Clerk; James Cowley, Treasurer; J. R. Rowlands, Assessor.

1878—John D. Jones, Chairman; H. D. Jennings, John H. Jones, Supervisors; A. C. Jennings, Clerk; H. J. Rowlands, Treasurer; J. R. Rowlands, Assessor.

1879—John Leatherman, Chairman; Robert S. Rowlands, Edward Roberts, Supervisors; David J. Edwards, Clerk; W. W. Huntley, Treasurer; J. R. Rowlands, Assessor.

1880—John Leatherman, Chairman; R. S. Rowlands, Edward Roberts, Supervisors; David Edwards, Clerk; Thomas Meredith, Treasurer.

TOWN OF WEST POINT.

This town lies in the extreme southwestern part of the county, and is bounded on the east by Lodi, on the north and west by Sauk County and on the south by Dane County. The first settlement in the town was made by Christian and David Dorsch, in 1845. Other early settlers of the town were Horace M. Ayer, Alonzo Waterbury, Simeon Ryder, Dr. Drew, James Thomas, Francis O. Sisson, Lewis Baldwin, Jeremiah D. Shumway, Ira Polly, Jesse Van Ness, Aaron and Philip Burlingame, Cyrus Hill, Mr. Arnold, Eldredge Northup, Simon Walker, John Chance, Orrin Hutchinson, Christian Ribblett, William D. Partridge, Enias Carncross, Isaac Richardson, Peter Van Ness, Joseph Lester, Otis A. Kilburn and Timothy Tirrill.

On the organization of the county, in 1846, West Point was made a part of the Pleasant Valley Precinct. In 1849, it was attached to Lodi, but, on the 8th day of January, 1850, the Board of Supervisors set off the town, fixing as its eastern boundary, commencing at the north-east corner of the quarter-line, and running through the center of Sections No. 5, 8, 17, 20, 29 and 32, in Town 10, Range 8, and including all of Town 10, Range 7, lying south and east of the Wisconsin River. The house of J. D. Shumway was designated as the place for holding the first election.

The first marriage was that of Horace M. Ayer and Sarah A. Ryder, October 4, 1848. They were married by Aaron Chalfant, Esq. The day before the event occurred, Mr. Ayer went to the town of Lodi, to engage the services of Rev. Henry Maynard; but, finding him absent from home, he engaged the Squire to perform the ceremony. A few minutes before the time set, the Squire, in company with a friend, was proceeding to the residence of the bridegroom-elect, when they noticed Mr. Ayer hard at work upon a house which he was erecting. Stopping, Mr. Chalfant called out, "Hello, young man! ain't you the one that engaged me yesterday to come this afternoon to marry you?" "Yes," replied Ayer, "I'm the man. You go on down to the house and wait till I come. Like the man that was going to be hung, there can't be anything done till I get there." After finishing his task, the young man brushed his clothes a little, washed his face and proceeded to the house, was married, and at once took his bride to the home which he had prepared for the occasion.

Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph Lester, was born in 1848, being the first white child born in the town.

In the fall of 1848, Miss Adula Jones taught a select school at the house of Otis A. Kilburn, in the south part of the town, it being the first. The next was in the Van Ness neighborhood, and was taught by Miss Sarah B. Van Ness, in the fall of 1850, at which time the district was organized.

The first death was that of Thomas Pratt, in the fall of 1849.

In 1852, on Section 13, Christian Ribblett erected a sign, bearing the inscription, "Public Inn," and, for a few years, entertained man and beast, this being the only hotel ever kept in the town.

The town of West Point, which includes all of Township 10, Range 7, south of the Wisconsin River, is skirted on the east and south by the edge of the high limestone country, which, from this part of its course, borders the Wisconsin all the way to its mouth. North and west of this edge, which is ragged, sending out irregular projecting points, the general surface is 200 to 300 feet lower, but the lowland includes a number of limestone-capped outliers, some of which have an area of several square miles, and reach as great altitudes as attained by the limestone country to the south and east—that is, 500 to 600 feet. Considerable areas of prairie occur in the central part of the town, including both lowland and high outlying bluffs.

In 1857, a post office was established near the central part of the town, to which was given the name of West Point, after the town. Jesse Van Ness was the first Postmaster, and was succeeded in order by Corilus Stone, Cyrus Hill, S. C. Kingon, J. N. Fellows, William H. Worthley and Mrs. R. A. Moran. Another office was established in the south part of the county in 1876, at a point known as Farr's Corners, which name was given to the office and J. L. Farr was made Postmaster.

The most noted point in West Point is Gibraltar Bluffs, on Section 13, Township 10, Range 7, and Section 18, Township 10, Range 8. One of the legends of this bluff, as related by the old settlers, is, that at an early day, a party of hunters, with their dogs, had started a deer, which ran directly for the highest point, and being unable to check itself, jumped off into the marsh below, a distance of over 600 feet. The dog which was closely following it also gave a jump, the result of which can easily be imagined.

A story is related of Christian Riblett, of whom mention has been made. One winter, a party came to his house, and wished to engage him to cut wood for them upon some Government land, which lay but a short distance from his place of residence. A bargain was struck and Mr. Riblett worked faithfully during the entire winter, and a large quantity of wood was taken off. His wife several times anxiously inquired of him, if he was certain where he was at work. O, yes, he knew what he was about. Time ran along, and, when the snow went off in the spring, his wife proposed, one day, they take a walk down where he had been cutting the timber. On arriving at the place the lady began to search for the corners, and soon found, as she feared, that her husband had all winter been stealing wood off his own land.

Wisconsin City.—While now there is neither city or village in the territory of West Point, there was a time when such was not the case. The State Historical Society, in 1872, published a report stating that: "Among the maps preserved by our Historical Society is an engraved plat of Wisconsin City; without date, but made in 1836, 19 x 28 inches in size, and certified by John Mullett, United States Deputy Surveyor. It shows that this paper city was located on the south side of the Wisconsin River, on Sections 8, 9 and 17, Township 10, Range 7, situated in the bend of the river, on a beautiful eminence, commanding a splendid view of the stream, with two long public landings fronting the river; a beautiful square for Territorial use, of two blocks; Franklin, La Fayette and Washington Squares, each four blocks—each block 260 feet square; three market places, three blocks in length, and 200 feet wide; streets from 60 to 100 feet wide. Isaac H. Palmer, of Lodi, confirms this description, adding that he visited the place in 1837, with view of purchasing the city—it was then, he says, in all its glory, with the stakes all standing, or enough to show the public grounds. The locality of Wisconsin City is in the southwestern part of the township of West Point, Columbia County, and must not be confounded with the paper place of the same name, mentioned elsewhere in this volume, located on Rock River, in Rock County; nor yet Superior City, embracing the old Black Hawk battle-ground, in Dane County, a little below Sauk City."

The war record of West Point compares favorably with any town in the county. Her quotas were generally filled, and but one bounty tax was levied, and that near the close of the war, for $5,000.

The West Point Dairy Association was organized March, 1875, with a capital stock of $2,000. Enias Carncross was elected President; Martin Van Ness, Secretary; William Morrissey, Treasurer. During the season of 1875, the association made 30,880 pounds of cheese, which brought an average price of 10 cents per pound. In 1876, 42,605 pounds were made, realizing 8½ cents per pound. In 1877, 55,102 pounds brought 10½ cents. In 1878, 57,904 pounds were made, which realized 7½ cents per pound. In 1879, but little was made, the price during the season being so low, the association abandoned the work temporarily, with the intention of at once resuming when the price would justify. In 1880, the officers were Enias Carncross, President; Martin Van Ness, Secretary; William E. Smith, Treasurer; W. B. Chrisler and George W. Nott, with the officers, forming a Board of Directors.

The following are the names of the officers elected since the organization of the town:

1850—Ira Polly, Chairman; Samuel Ring, David Dorsch, Supervisors; Joseph Lester, Clerk; Philip Burlingame, Treasurer; Leander Drew, School Superintendent.

1851—Jesse Van Ness, Chairman; Reuben Ring, James Thomas, Supervisors; Philip Burlingame, Clerk; Enias Carncross, Treasurer; O. A. Kilburn, Assessor; Horace M. Dyer, School Superintendent.

1852—Jesse Van Ness, Chairman; Reuben Ring, David P. Green, Supervisors; Samuel W. Walker, Clerk; Samuel B. Farrington, Treasurer; O. A. Kilburn, Cyrus Hill, Assessors; Timothy Tirrill, School Superintendent.

1853—Jesse Van Ness, Chairman; Volney Moore, Samuel Martin, Supervisors; Timothy Tirrill, Clerk; Peter Van Ness, Treasurer; Daniel P. Grow, Orin Hutchinson, Assessors; Timothy Tirrill, School Superintendent.

1854—Peter Van Ness, Chairman; Orin Hutchinson, Enias Carnecross, Supervisors; Timothy Tirrill, Clerk; Otis A. Kilburn, Treasurer; Samuel B. Johnson, School Superintendent.

1855—Samuel B. Walker, Chairman; Albert Wheeler, James Thomas, Supervisors; Samuel B. Johnson, Clerk; Otis A. Kilburn, Treasurer; Jesse Van Ness, Cyrus Hill, Assessors; John F. Madison, School Superintendent.

1856—Timothy Tirrill, Chairman; William S. Shears, Frederick Perry, Supervisors; Albert Lovering, Clerk; Samuel W. Walker, Treasurer; Ira Polly, Charles E. Odell, Assessors; Samuel B. Johnson, School Superintendent.

1857—Peter Van Ness, Chairman; Cyrus Hill, George Yule, Supervisors; Amos F. Abbott, Clerk; John W. Fisher, Treasurer; Jesse Van Ness, William H. Worthly, Assessors; Laroy J. Burlingame, School Superintendent.

1858—Joseph Pound, Chairman; Eldridge Northup, Otis A. Kilburn, Supervisors; Alonzo B. Avery, Clerk; John W. Fisher, Treasurer; Ira Polly, Assessor; Laroy J. Burlingame, School Superintendent.

1859—Ira Polly, Chairman; Frederick Perry, Orin R. Ingram, Supervisors; Amos F. Abbott, Clerk; John W. Fisher, Francis O. Sisson, Assessors; Timothy Colby, School Superintendent.

1860—Ira Polly, Chairman; Frederick Perry, William L. Austin, Supervisors; Amos F. Abbott, Clerk; John W. Fisher, Treasurer; Orin R. Ingram, Assessor; William T. Shurtliff, School Superintendent.

1861—George Yule, Sr., Chairman; William L. Austin, William H. Cook, Supervisors; Amos F. Abbott, Clerk; Silas W. Gofrey, Treasurer; Cyrus Hill, Melatiah Willis, Assessors; Isaac Van Ness, School Superintendent.

1862—George Yule, Chairman; William L. Austin, William H. Cook, Supervisors; Amos F. Abbott, Clerk; Silas W. Godfrey, Treasurer; Cyrus Hill, Assessor.

1863—George Yule, Chairman; Frederick Perry, J. L. Farr, Supervisors; Laroy J. Burlingame, Clerk; Silas W. Godfrey, Treasurer; William L. Austin, William J. Robinson, Assessors.

1864—Frederick Perry, Chairman; Otis A. Kilburn, Joseph Pound, Supervisors; Laroy J. Burlingame, Clerk; J. L. Farr, Treasurer; Isaac Van Ness, Assessor. Isaac Van Ness appointed Clerk.

1865—George Yule, Chairman; William B. Chrisler, David H. Fellows, Supervisors; Joseph Lester, Clerk; J. L. Farr, Treasurer; David Hesselgrove, Moses Smith, Assessors.

1866—Frederick Perry, Chairman; F. O. Sisson, William B. Chrisler, Supervisors; Joseph Lester, Clerk; J. L. Farr, Treasurer; J. N. Fellows, Assessor.

1867—William H. Sherman, Chairman; William H. Cook, William H. Dodge, Supervisors; George Grow, Clerk; J. L. Farr, Treasurer; Joseph Lester, E. Maloney, Assessors. Ira Smith appointed Supervisor in place of Dodge.

1868—F. O. Sisson, Chairman; William H. Cook, William B. Chrisler, Supervisors; H. J. Bullis, Clerk; J. L. Farr, Treasurer; Cyrus Hill, William Madison, Assessors.

1869—F. O. Sisson, Chairman; W. H. Cook, W. B. Chrisler, Supervisors; L. J. Burlingame, Clerk; J. L. Farr, Treasurer; A. F. Abbott, Assessor.

1870—F. O. Sisson, Chairman; William B. Chrisler, William H. Cook, Supervisors; L. J. Burlingame, Clerk; J. L. Farr, Treasurer; Amplus B. Avery, Assessor.

1871—J. L. Farr, Chairman; Isaac Van Ness, Merrill Johnson, Supervisors; L. J. Burlingame, Clerk; Alonzo B. Avery, Treasurer; Amplus B. Avery, Assessor.

1872—J. L. Farr, Chairman; William B. Chrisler, Merrill Johnson, Supervisors; Jacob Chrisler, Clerk; Alonzo B. Avery, Treasurer; J. N. Fellows, Assessor.

1873—J. L. Farr, Chairman; Albert Vanderpoel, Cyrus Hill, Supervisors; Jacob Chrisler, Clerk; Alonzo B. Avery, Treasurer; J. N. Fellows, Assessor.

1874—Julius A. Parr, Chairman; John Evans, George Yule, Supervisors; William B. Smith, Clerk; D. H. Fellows, Treasurer; William J. Robinson, Assessor.

1875—George Yule, Chairman; William E. Smith, John Evans, Supervisors; William B. Smith, Clerk; L. W. Carncross, Treasurer; Amplus B. Avery, Assessor.

1876—John Evans, Chairman; Amos F. Abbott; D. H. Fellows, Supervisors; William B. Smith, Clerk; L. W. Carncross, Treasurer; J. N. Fellows, Assessor.

1877—Alfred Vanderpoel, Chairman; William J. Robinson, John I. Newcomb, Supervisors; William B. Smith, Clerk; J. L. Farr, Treasurer; Amplus B. Avery, Assessor.

1878—A. Vanderpoel, Chairman; William J. Robinson, J. I. Newcomb, Supervisors; William B. Smith, Clerk; J. L. Farr, Treasurer; Amplus B. Avery, Assessor.

1879—Julius A. Parr, Chairman; L. J. Burlingame, John R. Scott, Supervisors; William B. Smith, Clerk; J. L. Farr, Treasurer; M. V. B. Van Ness, Assessor.

1880—William H. Cook, Chairman; Francis O. Sisson, John R. Scott, Supervisors; William B. Smith, Clerk; J. N. Fellows, Treasurer; W. H. Hill, Assessor.

TOWN OF WYOCENA.

The land is generally what is called oak openings, mostly of a sandy soil: but little of good land in town, but is well situated in regard to internal improvements.

The Fox River enters the town from Marcellon on Section 3, and runs southwest to the village of Pardeeville, where it forms a good mill site, thence northwest, emptying into Swan Lake. The north branch of Duck Creek enters the town from the east, on Section 13, thence west and southwest until near the east line of Section 21, where it forms a junction with the south branch, which enters the town from the east on Section 24, running in a nearly west course to the junction. From the junction the creek runs nearly west through the town. There is a valuable mill site on the south branch on Section 23, and one on the creek on Section 21, one-half mile below the village of Wyocena, both occupied by mills.

The first permanent settlement in the town was made by Maj. Elbert Dickason, who moved here in May, 1843, and located on Section 21, and built the first house in town. The Major raised the first wheat in town on Section 21, and gave name to the town and village. He died here August 9, 1848.

Benjamin Dey moved here in January, 1844, and spent the winter with Maj. Dickason, and the summer following made the first entry of land on Section 10, and raised the first corn in town.

Aaron Hodgson settled on Lot 4, of Section 3, in 1845, and was the first settler in the north part of the town. In 1846, many others came into the town and became permanent settlers, among whom were Charles and Chauncy Spear, Darius Bisbee, S. H. Salisbury, Harvey Bush, Dr. Rockwood, Philip Hipner, Willis W. Haskin, and others. Harvey Bush built the first frame house on the southwest quarter of Section 22, which was afterward removed to the northwest quarter of Section 27.

In the summer of 1851, John Hunter and A. B. Winchell commenced building a grist-mill on Duck Creek, one-half mile below the village of Wyocena. The mill was completed and commenced operations the next winter. It was burned down November, 1852, and rebuilt by Benjamin Dey in 1853.

The town is divided into eight school districts with a schoolhouse in each.

The religious denominations are Catholic, Methodist, Congregationalist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Universalists and Episcopalians. The Catholics have a church on Section 32.

Wyocena was organized as a town April 3, 1849; previous to that time it had been united with Marcellon and Springvale as Wyocena Precinct.

When the county adopted the county system of supporting the poor, the Commissioners purchased of Maj. Dickason's heirs the house and two acres of land with barn, at the village of Wyocena, for a county poor-house.

As an incident of the early settlement of the town, Benjamin Dey related to Henry Converse the following:

"After traveling around Wyocena for some time, I did not see any place that suited me any better than where the old log house stands on Section 10. I inquired of the Major if it was claimed by any one, and he told me it was claimed by Charles Temple, son-in-law of Capt. Low, so I went to Portage with the intention of buying it of him. He asked me if I wanted it for the purpose of selling it or to settle on and improve it. I told him I wanted to settle on it. He said I was welcome to the claim for that purpose. After I had built my house and moved into it, I received a letter from the claim society stating I was on C. Dinon's claim and I could accept of three offers: I could stay on the claim peaceably by paying $100, or I could give it up to them, or I must leave the country, as they would drive me out. I took the letter and went to the fort, as Portage was then called, to see my friend, H. Merrell. He sent for Capt. Jewett and Lieut. Mumford, and showed them the letter, which stated the time when they were coming to pay me a visit; that they had paid Mr. Lewis, of Columbus, a visit, and Mrs. Diefendorf, of Lowville, a visit. Capt. Jewett and Lieut. Mumford said they had six good wagons and teams, and they would be on the ground in one hour's notice with six wagon loads of regulars. I sent a letter back by the same man that brought it to me, to the reverend Claim Club Company, that I was not willing to capitulate on any of their terms: that the only proposal I had to make to them was an open-field fight, on said prairie, by their giving me two hours' notice, and the victors to hold the spoils; but I was never troubled with that party after that."

Samuel Wedge and Amanda White were the first couple, residents of the town, united in marriage—the event taking place in the fall of 1846. Another early marriage was that of Benjamin Yates and Eliza Ennis, in 1848. Miss Ennis, some time previous, had run away from home, and was working for Willis W. Haskin. One day, on looking out, she discovered her father coming toward the house with the evident intention of taking her home. Seizing some of her things, she started out of the back door, where she encountered Mr. Yates, and told him the trouble she was in. Mr. Yates proposed they should be married at once, the proposition was accepted, and together the couple started for a minister, and in less than thirty minutes the two were made one.

The first death was that of Mr. Sexton, who died in 1846, near the village of Wyocena.

Benjamin Cole taught the first school on Section 21, in 1846.

In 1847, Elder Wood, a Baptist preacher, delivered the first discourse in the town.

The first election, before the organization of the town, was held in 1846, at the house of Elbert Dickason. Harvey Bush, Benjamin Dey and Solomon Salisbury were the Judges. The first election, on the organization of the town, was at the house of Richard C. Rockwood. The town was organized by the Board of Supervisors January, 1849, and is composed of all of Township 12, Range 10. It is bounded on the east by Springvale, on the west by Pacific, on the north by Marcellon, and on the south by Lowville. The name Wyocena, Maj. Dickason claimed, came to him in a dream. In that dream it was determined that the village should be the county seat, the same being realized for a period of one year in which the county business was here transacted.

In 1857, the Northern Division of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad was completed through the town, entering on Section 1, and passing west through Sections 2, 3, 4, 5 and into Pacific from Section 6. Afterward the La Crosse Division of the same road was completed through the town, entering on Section 31, and passing in a northwesterly direction, into Pacific.

The town of Wyocena resembles Marcellon in lying wholly within the Potsdam area, in possessing generally a low sandy soil, and in being entirely without prairie. The Fox River crosses the northern row of sections in an easterly direction, being bounded for the most of the distance by a marsh one-half to one mile in width. Duck Creek crosses the middle sections in a similar direction, and is similarly bounded by marsh. The Fox River marsh has an altitude of about 210 feet; that of Duck Creek nearly the same. Between the two, there is a nearly level sand plain raised in its highest part not more than 20 to 30 feet above the streams. South of Duck Creek, the surface is much more broken, and near the south line are some quite high bluffs rising to an altitude of 350 feet.

A. Roblier
WYOCENA

The first entry of land in the town was made by Joseph W. Turner, June 17, 1836, and patented August 10, 1837, for Lots 5, 11 and 12, Section 5, containing 166 acres; also Lot 5, Section 6, containing 58 acres.

The following comprises a list of town officers since the organization of the town to the present time:

1850—Darius Bisbee, Chairman; Robert M. Haynes, David H. Everson, Supervisors; A. B. Alden, Clerk; Nathan D. White, Treasurer; John Carpenter, Jeremiah H. Heath, J. P. Kellogg, Assessors; M. W. Sargent, School Superintendent.

1851—Daniel S. Bushwell, Chairman; Joseph L. Sherman, Joseph Farrington, Supervisors; Alvin B. Alden, Clerk; E. H. Vaughn, Treasurer; John Carpenter, James D. Slackly, E. H. Rice, Assessors; A. B. Winchell, School Superintendent.

1852—Francis E. Whiton, Chairman; Joseph Farrington, Henry Ager, Supervisors; Henry Converse, Clerk; Yates Ashley, Treasurer; James D. Shackley, Assessor; J. D. W. Roberts, School Superintendent.

1853—Henry Converse, Chairman; James J. Pervis, A. E. Patchen, Supervisors; John Weiting, Clerk; William J. Towner, Treasurer; James D. Shackly, Assessors; J. W. Earle, School Superintendent.

1854—Henry Converse, Chairman; A. E. Patchin, R. M. Haynes, Supervisors; John Weiting, Clerk; James J. Purvis, Treasurer; James D. Shackly, Assessor; Seth A. Cooledge, School Superintendent.

1855—T. H. Briggs, Chairman; George Purvis, Lewis Kingsbury, Supervisors; S. E. Faurote, Clerk; John Farrier, Treasurer; James D. Shackly, Assessor; S. E. Miner, School Superintendent.

1856—William Blair, Chairman; R. M. Haynes, Ophir Leonard, Supervisors; S. E. Faurote, Clerk; John Farrier, Treasurer; James D. Shackley, Assessor; S. E. Miner, School Superintendent.

1857—Henry Converse, Chairman; J. W. C. Langworthy, M. W. Twitchell, Supervisors; Seth A. Cooledge, Clerk; I. I. Purvis, Treasurer; S. A. Mitchell, Assessor; H. W. Roblier, School Superintendent.

1858—H. H. Roblier, Chairman; Edwin Spear, E. B. Blaisdell, Supervisors; S. A. Cooledge, Clerk; N. B. Ellis, Treasurer; J. D. Shackley, Assessor; Erastus Taylor, School Superintendent.

1859—H. W. Roblier, Chairman; N. B. Ellis, E. B. Blaisdell, Supervisors; D. M. Hall, Clerk; J. D. Shackley, Treasurer and Assessor; J. W. Earle, School Superintendent.

1860—Norman Coapman, Chairman; E. B. Blaisdell, N. B. Ellis, Supervisors; William Dupuy, Clerk; E. S. Kellogg, Treasurer; Henry Converse, Assessor; J. W. Earle, School Superintendent.

1861—E. B. Blaisdell, Chairman; S. H. Salisbury, J. D. Shackley, Supervisors; A. D. Coapman, Clerk; E. S. Kellogg, Treasurer; James I. Purvis, Assessor; J. W. Earle, School Superintendent.

1862—E. B. Blaisdell, Chairman; S. H. Salisbury, George S. Mantor, Supervisors; Henry Converse, Clerk; John English, Treasurer; James D. Shackley, Assessor.

1863—Henry Converse, Chairman; Samuel Hovey, Thomas S. Stanley, Supervisors; Norman Coapman, Clerk; James D. Shackley, Assessor; John English, Treasurer.

1864—M. W. Twitchell, Chairman; R. M. Haynes, John Farrier, Supervisors; H. M. Blair, Clerk; Alexander Farrier, Treasurer; A. J. Robertson, Assessor.

- 1865—E. B. Blaisdell, Chairman; Seth Allen, O. D. Van Deusen, Supervisors; N. D. Cone, Clerk; H. D. Burrows, Treasurer; J. D. Shackley, Assessor.
- 1866—A. E. Patchin, Chairman; R. M. Haynes, P. Hibner, Supervisors; H. W. Roblier, Clerk; G. S. Manter, Treasurer; J. D. Shackley, Assessor.
- 1867—A. E. Patchin, Chairman; R. M. Haynes, Philip Hibner, Supervisors; H. W. Spear, Clerk; H. G. Britt, Treasurer; J. D. Shackley, Assessor.
- 1868—A. E. Patchin, Chairman; R. M. Haynes, S. H. Salisbury, Supervisors; Henry Converse, Clerk; R. Hawkins, Treasurer; J. D. Shackley, Assessor.
- 1869—E. B. Blaisdell, Chairman; Henry D. Burrows, Solomon H. Salisbury, Supervisors; Norman Coapman, Clerk; Henry C. Stanley, Treasurer; James D. Shackley, Assessor.
- 1870—Enoch B. Blaisdell, Chairman; Cornelius Phillips, Solomon H. Salisbury, Supervisors; James W. Coapman, Clerk; Peter C. Irvine, Treasurer; James D. Shackley, Assessor.
- 1871—E. B. Blaisdell, Chairman; Cornelius Phillips, O. D. Van Dusen, Supervisors; James W. Steele, Clerk; Albert Parmenter, Treasurer; James B. Shackley, Assessor.
- 1872—C. J. Pardee, Chairman; P. C. Irvine, A. E. Patchin, Supervisors; H. W. Spear, Clerk; A. M. Parmenter, Treasurer; J. D. Shackley, Assessor.
- 1873—Charles Spear, Chairman; Cornelius Phillips, C. S. Dowd, Supervisors; L. S. Rolleson, Clerk; A. M. Parmenter, Treasurer; J. D. Shackley, Assessor.
- 1874—C. J. Pardee, Chairman; George Purvis, C. S. Dowd, Supervisors; L. S. Rolleson, Clerk; D. C. Gilson, Treasurer; J. D. Shackley, Assessor.
- 1875—C. I. Pardee, Chairman; George Purvis, C. S. Dowd, Supervisors; O. C. Patchin, Clerk; M. W. Twitchell, Treasurer; J. D. Shackley, Assessor.
- 1876—C. I. Pardee, Chairman; R. M. Haynes, C. S. Dowd, Supervisors; N. Coapman, Clerk; John A. Bull, Treasurer; J. D. Shackley, Assessor.
- 1877—Stephen Calverly, Chairman; C. S. Dowd, R. M. Haynes, Supervisors; N. Coapman, Clerk; R. C. Falconer, Treasurer; J. D. Shackley, Assessor.
- 1878—S. Calverly, Chairman; C. S. Dowd, R. M. Haynes, Supervisors; H. W. Stanley, Clerk; J. I. Purvis, Treasurer; J. D. Shackley, Assessor.
- 1879—M. G. Tucker, Chairman; H. D. Burrows, J. Valentine, Supervisors; C. J. Pardee, Clerk; D. C. Gilson, Treasurer; J. D. Shackley, Assessor.
- 1880—Rus Falkner, Chairman; H. D. Burrows, Cornelius Phillips, Supervisors; C. J. Pardee, Clerk; W. S. Gardner, Treasurer; J. D. Shackley, Assessor.

VILLAGE OF WYOCENA.

Hotel of Dickeson.—One night, in the winter of 1844, Elbert Dickeson had a dream, so he affirmed, that upon the site of his farm, on Section 21, there would spring up a village called Wyocena, which should be the seat of justice for Columbia County. In the morning, he told his dream to Benjamin Dey, who was then stopping with him. The two talked the matter over and determined to put the plan into execution, for the fulfillment of the dream. To this end, Maj. Dickeson opened a public house, to "afford entertainment for man and beast." In 1846, the old log gave way to a large two-story frame building, which was duly dedicated with a grand dance the evening of July 4. Maj. Dickeson died in 1848; the hotel was not completed. Mr. A. A. Bull took a lease of the hotel for a term of years, completed the hotel; he occupied it for one year, and leased it to William Wolcott for one year. Wolcott sold out his interest to John Hunter. Hunter sold out to Becker; his time expired with the lease. Widow Dickeson, married to Dr. Singer, took possession of the hotel, kept it a short time, and sold out to Noah Dickeson. He, Dickeson, sold his interest to I. M. Carr; he sold to C. Hill, and he to W. Austin; that closes the hotel business. The county bought the property for a county house, for which purpose it is now occupied.

About 1850, Dr. Rockwood built a public house, which was purchased by John Lewis, by him sold to J. Hunter; he, in 1853, disposed of it to James Austin, who, in 1880, had been in charge of the same for twenty-seven years. The name given to the house was Boston.

Maj. Dickeson, who was a practical surveyor, laid out and platted the new village, in 1846. The Board of County Commissioners adopting it as a temporary county seat, and the prospect seeming good for its being made permanent, lots brought a fair price and considerable improvements were soon under way.

Jacob Rogers was the first to embark in the mercantile business in the place. In 1847, he opened a stock of general merchandise and commanded a fair trade.

In 1847, the citizens erected a small frame building, for school purposes, which was used eight years, when, becoming too small, the district erected a two-story frame building, 32x40. The school was now divided into two departments, the primary department occupying the lower room, and the high school the upper. In 1879-80, Henry Stanley and Nellie Hughes were the teachers.

Some two years before the completion of this building, Elder Miner erected a building for a select school, in which the higher branches should be taught, and students be prepared for college. Only moderate success attended his efforts. In 1847, the building was disposed of to the Methodists and Baptists, for church purposes.

A post office was established here in 1845, with Harvey Bush as Postmaster. Jacob Rogers was next appointed. He resigned in favor of David R. Meloy. Mr. Meloy, in 1852, resigned in favor of John Weiting, who was commissioned by the Post Office Department, under James K. Polk. Through the successive administrations of Polk, Taylor, Fillmore, Pierce, Buchanan, Lincoln, Johnson, Grant and Hayes, Mr. Weiting has served the people. In his proud boast that not a dollar ever mailed in this office has been lost, to the best of his knowledge.

In 1853, a grist-mill was erected by John Hunter and Chauncey Spear. In the fall of that same year, Benjamin Dey purchased the interest of Mr. Spear, the firm remaining Hunter & Dey for two years. In 1855, Mr. Dey purchased Hunter's interest, and, in the fall, the mill was burned. Mr. Dey immediately rebuilt, and on a more extensive scale. In 1865, he disposed of his interest to Mr. Sexton, of Milwaukee. Mr. Sexton continued sole proprietor for four years, when he sold to George Craig, who, in turn, in the spring of 1879, sold to Mr. Douglas.

Wyocena Cheese Factory.—In the fall of 1875, a stock company was organized for the purpose of manufacturing cheese. A paid-up capital of $1,600, composed of sixty-four shares, at $25 each, was immediately subscribed. During the summer of 1876, about forty thousand pounds of cheese were manufactured, and the same during 1877. In 1878 and 1879, the amount was reduced to about twenty-five thousand pounds per year, in consequence of the inability of securing a supply of milk.

Spear's Cheese Factory.—This factory is located about one mile east of the village, and began operations in the summer of 1878, making about twenty-five thousand pounds of cheese. In the summer of 1879, the same amount was manufactured.

Congregationalist Church.—In the spring of 1853, Rev. S. E. Miner organized a congregation of fifteen members. For two years, services were held in the schoolhouse, but, in 1855, a small, neat house of worship was erected, at a cost of $1,600. From the organization up to January, 1880, Revs. Miner, Barton, Jenkins, Hassell, Donaldson, Richards, Fairfield, Logan and Ball have served as Pastors. At this time, there were twenty-eight members, with James I. Purvis, George Hill and De Witt Gilson as Trustees; A. E. Patchin and John Wood, Deacons. A Sunday school was organized in 1853, which continued for three years, when, in connection with the Methodists and Baptists, a union school was organized.

Baptist Church.—The first religious services held in the town, at which there was preaching, was in the summer of 1846, Elder Wood, a Baptist minister, officiating. Elder Wood preached here occasionally for one year, and then returned East. In 1852, Elder Moses Rowley organized a congregation, with D. A. Vaughn and wife, Mrs. Electa Spear and Mr. Sherman and wife, in the organization. Elder Wood returned in 1853, and was called to the pastorate, serving for four years, when he went to Baraboo and remained three years, Elder Meredith, during that time, having charge of the Wyocena Church. In 1860, Elder Wood again resumed the pastorate, with a record of twenty years' continuous service in the spring of 1880. In conjunction with the Methodists, the schoolhouse erected by Elder Miner was purchased in 1857, wherein regular exercises have been held. About forty names were on the roll of church membership, January, 1880—R. O. Spear, clerk.

Methodist Episcopal Church.—A class was organized about the year 1852. In 1857, together with the Baptists, they purchased a house of worship. In the spring of 1880, they had a membership of twenty.

The Columbus Democrat, December, 1869, has the following to say of Wyocena:

“Wyocena is the remains of a once thriving and increasing village assassinated by the building of the old La Crosse Railroad. Seventeen years ago, it contained five stores doing a good trade. Now it has two. Pardeeville was erected upon its decadence; then the new division of the railroad was laid toward Portage; the seat of commerce again shifted; the glory of Pardeeville departed, and Rio was built upon its ruins. Wyocena is overgrown with the thin moss of the Western antiquity, and is ancient in appearance, as is permitted to any village of less age than a quarter of a century. It has a good schoolhouse, a tolerably commodious town hall (costing, perhaps, $1,500 more than the one in Columbus), and two churches. But we observed no new buildings and few evidences of the vigor generally found in Western villages. The railroad, upon which it scarcely impinges, came too late to benefit it much. Its settlement antedated Portage proper, though of course, Fort Winnebago was older. Maj. Dickason, the hardy pioneer of our own village, we are told, was the first settler also. He built the log cabin on the bank of Duck Creek, in which he afterward died. A man named Bush located shortly after the Major, about a mile east of the Columbus road, and Charles Spear, John Dalton and Benjamin Dey, are mentioned too as among the earlier settlers. They live here still, but the Major's descendants have sought newer camping grounds. We believe the old veteran himself was buried here and we meant to visit the spot of his repose, but time did not permit. It is about eleven years since the poor-house was located at Wyocena; previous to that date a temporary accommodation for the destitute had been provided at Portage. Three inmates were removed to Wyocena in 1858. During the first winter, the institution was kept in a small building a little east of the present one. The three persons with which it was founded were an old deaf man named Savage, who was afterward killed by the cars, a lad whose father sent him from Madison off to school, and who became dissipated, was expelled, and afterward sent up from Portage. The father came after the prodigal when he had been sufficiently punished. The third was a crazy Norwegian, who has since remained here. The buildings now occupied are pleasantly situated close upon Duck Creek. They consist of a two-story wooden building, and an adjoining two-story brick. The latter was built two years since by Messrs. Prescott & Carnagy of Portage, at a cost of about $4,000. The frame of the former was erected by Maj. Dickason, who had been dispensing his hospitalities from his log cabin on the other side of the creek, and had determined to put up a more modern hostelry. The old Major's light was put out as the frame went up, and it was leased for a term on condition of being completed. It soon passed into the hands of the county and has since been used for its present purpose.

“A little cabin on the Crawfish, in Columbus, was the first structure that the Major built in the West, and the mark of his hands ceased with the future poor-house building of the county. In the interim is the story of all his pioneer days.

“An almshouse is the depository of much sad personal history. It is a discolored, worn and faded volume, in which are bound as many pathetic and discreditable biographies as there are inmates; it is a charnel-house, where are laid the remains of missspent or unsuccessful lives; and there is instruction there, in turning over dead relics of the past, and in the study of the causes of their decay; it is a place where the brightness of life can be only a distant memory, and hope is but a specter of the irrecoverable. Few things can be sadder than the death of worn-out old age in the alms-house. We have talked with men of much experience in the management of pauperism, and they have invariably informed us that, in nine cases out of ten, it is directly, or indirectly, intemperance, that makes men public charges. It is very seldom that misfortune, unassisted, makes men paupers.

“The individual history of many of the inmates would not be uninteresting, did space permit. In this poor-house, two years ago, died Jonas Haywood, aged ninety-two years. He was a man possessed of much general information, and had fought with Wellington in the Napoleonic wars; he had many a tale of that stirring period that had never reached the historian’s page, and, doubtless, not a few of them were true. The aggregated individual experience of contending armies is the only complete annals of war. It was too large and too frequent drinks that finally beat the old veteran.

“Here also died Gabriel Rongie, at the age of eighty-four, after living here four years. He came to Green Bay fifty-nine years ago, being a French Canadian. He was an Indian trader, and one period had amassed considerable property. During his life he formed three matrimonial alliances with dusky aborigines, and bequeathed to the Territory an unrecorded number of half-breeds. His personal experience and knowledge, properly compiled, would make a most readable volume. He was blind before he died, and used to aver that one eye was sick and that the other was scratched out by a wild cat, while he was climbing a tree for coon. He too succumbed to his cups.

“Edward Lahey, a former Catholic priest, was once an inmate here. It was he who was pardoned from States prison, where was sent for the shooting of a man, eighteen years ago, in Pardeeville. He was comparatively rich, but claims brought against him after the pardoning beggared him.”

VILLAGE OF PARDEEVILLE.

In the fall of 1848, John S. Pardee, then merchandising in Milwaukee, sent out Mr. Reuben Stedman to build a store in this neighborhood, and in December following, Yates Ashley came out with goods and commenced trading for Mr. Pardee, and getting out timber to build mills. In 1849, the saw and grist mills were built and commenced operations. This was the beginning of Pardeeville.

In July, 1850, John S. Pardee platted a portion of his land, and Willis S. Haskin did likewise. In 1855, Dr. Lake made an addition to the village of some forty acres on the south.

The first frame house built on the site of the village was by Mr. Haskin, but Joseph Utley built the first after it was laid out. Killian Hepler built the second.

In 1852, Reuben Baughman erected the first hotel, giving it the name of “Diamond Hall.” In 1855, he sold the same to Mr. Turner, who in turn disposed of it to Mrs. Johnson, who assumed management for awhile, and then leased it to various parties until September, 1879, when it was purchased by George Briffett, who immediately took charge of the same. The house is roomy, with accommodations for twenty guests.

Killian Hepler built the Hepler House in 1860, and leased it to John Benedict, who ran it three years, when Mr. Hepler took personal charge.

J. S. Pardee commenced the erection of the large grist-mill, in 1849; in the same year he transferred his interest in Pardeeville to Joseph Utley, who, about the year 1853, turned the whole property over to John Pardee, father of the original proprietor, who took possession of the property (the mill being unfinished), and completed the mill in the latter part of 1856.

About that time he disposed of a quarter interest in the mill property to Yates Ashley, the copartnership being continued till the death of Mr. John Pardee, which occurred June 26, 1873.

The site of the village is embraced within School District No. 3. A schoolhouse was erected in the district as early as 1847, which soon gave way for a better one, and it in turn by a still better one, erected in the village limits in 1868. This latter building is a large two-story brick. In the winter of 1879–80, Miss Nora C. Waters was Principal, and Mrs. Blaisdell, Assistant.

Presbyterian Church.—This society was organized in 1857, with six members—Alanson Hughson, Phila M. Hughson, Lebbuns H. Gilbert, William J. Ensign, Leona Ensign, and Sarah Burechecker. Rev. S. H. Barteau was the officiating minister in its organization. A. Hughson was elected Deacon and William J. Ensign and L. H. Gilbert, Elders. Rev. S. Barteau was the first occasional and then stated supply till January 1, 1862. Rev. E. F. Tanner preached one year, from August 1, 1862. Rev. E. F. Waldo, as his successor, supplied the pulpit for one year from October, 1863. After being without a regular minister for nearly a year, Rev. E. F. Tanner became the second time the stated supply from September, 1865. The house of worship was commenced in the summer of 1863, and completed at a cost of $2,500. It was dedicated March 30, 1864. Rev. Charles Richards succeeded Mr. Tanner, and was followed by the Rev. Joseph Rossiel.

Methodist Episcopal Church.—The church building was erected in 1861. John W. Falconer and Samuel Cannon were the most active in its construction. Its cost was $1,800. Revs. Boschee, Parker, Joseph Bolton, T. M. Ross, M. Peck, Edward Bronson, Jabez B. Cole, O. B. Clark, William Jones, William Cook, John Varty and W. F. Stright have each served as Pastor. The church forms a part of the Wyocena Circuit.

Pardee Lodge, No. 171, A., F. & A. M.—A dispensation was granted September 12, 1867, to organize at this place, which organization was effected by the election of Samuel B. Rhodes, W. M.; Charles J. Pardee, S. W.; David H. Langdon, J. W. A charter was granted to the organization June 10, 1868. It had a membership January 1, 1880, of thirty-two. There have been four deaths and ten dismissions since the organization.

Pardee Lodge, No. 126, I. O. O. F.—This lodge was instituted December 5, 1873, with Charles J. Pardee, N. G.; David Narracong, V. G.; F. A. Matthewson, Sec.; John Hartman, Treas. Its membership January 1, 1880, was twenty.

Post Office.—The first mail route was established here in 1849, from Madison to Fort Winnebago, thence to Pardeeville and Wyocena. Yates Ashley was first appointed Postmaster in 1849, served two years. In 1852, Joseph Utley, who served one year. In 1853, Hubble West, Sr., who served two years. In 1855, Darius Coman, who served four years. In 1860, John Pardee, who served one year. In 1861, Ira Atkins, who served six years; died in 1867, when Luman A. Gilbert was appointed, who served six years. In 1873, Newton W. Gilbert was appointed, served five years. In 1878, Mrs. Susan Falconer was appointed, who now holds the office as Mrs. Susan Van Schaick.

ERRATA.

Jas. D. Shuchly, page 453, should be Jas. D. Shackley.

Robertof Roberts, page 713, officers of 1852, should be Robert ap Roberts.

Saffron, page 717, M. E. Church, should be Suffron.

H. O. Jones, page 717, M. E. Church, should be H. O. Evans.

M. J. Rach, page 717, Good Templars, should be M. J. Roach.

Hattie Hughes, page 717, Good Templars, should be Katie Hughes.

Fred Miller, M., page 718, Cambria Lodge, should be Fred Miller, G. F.

Wm. Peterman, O., page 718, Cambria Lodge, should be Wm. Peterman, R.

Wm. Seeman, page 718, Cambria Lodge, should be Frederick Seeman.

G. D. Jones, page 719, officers of 1879, should be G. D. Meyers.

Adam Cudon, page 699, Town Treas. 1865 and 1866, should be Adam Culdow.

Jno. Campbell, page 700, Assessor 1877, should be Jno. Caldwell.

Adam Bogue, page 700, Chairman 1880, should be Alan Bogue.

Aaron Town, page 763, made claims in spring of 1842, should be Aaron Town made claims in spring of 1849.

On page 764, Elling Muhl should be made Male : George Windens should read Windus : Nels Paterson should be Peterson : Hans Lollinger should read Hans Tollackson ; Stephen Collenson should read Colbenson.

On page 765, Talbot Askinson should read Tollac Asbinson ; Edmund Cushing should read Edward : Nelson Van Wil should read Nelson Van Wie, and Andrew Baarnaman should read Boarnaman.

On page 767, Herman Brane should read Herman Brune, and William Mews should read Maves.

Hugh Mair, page 727, in election, 1849, should be Hugh Miner.

Jno. Sims, page 728, early settlers, should be John Lines.

Harver Curtis, page 729, officers 1854, should be Harvey Curtis.

Jno. Sims, page 729, officers 1856, should be John Lines.

Jas. L. Sims, page 730, officers 1860, should be Jas. L. Lines.

Jas. Hastie, page 730, Clerk 1872, should be William Hastie.

Page 731, "Village of Dekorra," far north as Madison, should read far south as Madison.

Since the article, page 752, on the Village of "Inch" was printed we are informed that there were lots sold, houses built, and some business was done in 1856 or 1857.—Ed.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

ABBREVIATIONS.

Co.....	Company or county	W. V. I.....	Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry
dr.....	dealer	P. O.....	Post Office
W. V. A.....	Wisconsin Volunteer Artillery	S. or Sec.....	Section
W. V. C.....	Wisconsin Volunteer Cavalry	st.....	street

CITY OF PORTAGE.

W. H. C. ABELL, dentist; born at Middletown, Genesee Co., N. Y. (now Wyoming Co.), May 25, 1827. When about 12 years of age, his parents removed to Ohio; lived there until he was 20 years of age. Educated in dentistry in Middletown, Conn.; commenced study with a brother in 1852; prior to that time, he was engaged in civil engineering, being Second Assistant Engineer of the Western Division of the Erie Canal during its construction in New York State. The Doctor was married at Skaneateles, Onondaga Co., N. Y., in April, 1854, to Angelina C. Lawton; she was born at Catskill, Greene Co., N. Y. They have three children—David Hunter, Fannie Jewett and Henry Russell. Mr. Abell is a member of the A., F. & A. M. Lodge.

MILES T. ALVERSON, real-estate and loan agent; was born in the town of Rodman, Jefferson Co., N. Y., Jan. 26, 1833; son of Almanson and Sylenda Alverson, who moved to Russell, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., November, 1848, where Miles T. lived until 1854, when he came to Wisconsin in October of that year, locating on what is now the town of Arlington, on Sec. 1, with his friend Ambrose Powers, remaining with him, more or less, until 1857, when he went to Southwestern Missouri, where he taught school a portion of the time, only remaining there a year, when he returned to Wisconsin to Lowville, working at the carpenter's trade. Married, March 23, 1859, to Melissa A. Low, only daughter of Hon. Jacob Low, of Lowville, who died Jan. 24, 1875; her mother, Catherine Low, is now living; they were among the early settlers of that place. Mrs. Alverson is probably the oldest settler now living within the corporate limits of Portage; she was born in the city of New York, March 28, 1841. They have two children—Charles Lewis, born Dec. 23, 1860, and Harry Bartlett, March 27, 1872. After marriage, Mr. Alverson was engaged in teaching and working at his trade as carpenter and joiner, but teaching principally, until 1864; one year of this time, he carried on his father-in-law's farm; in 1864, went to Milwaukee and took a course in commercial college, returning to Poynette, where he taught the higher department of the public school, that being his third term at this place; he returned to Milwaukee in 1865, and was employed as a teacher in Bryant & Stratton's College, where he remained until he came to Portage, Jan. 1, 1867; was Deputy Treasurer two years, then elected County Treasurer in the fall of 1868; re-elected in 1870. In 1872, in company with Thomas Yule, purchased abstracts of titles of lands in this county; was engaged in the abstract business and real estate, loans, etc., until November, 1878, when he sold out their abstracts, and since then has been in loan and real-estate business; since Aug. 1, 1879, has conducted business alone; was Town Superintendent of Schools in 1861, Town Clerk of Lowville in 1862; was Deputy County Treasurer two years after he went out as County Treasurer, and Deputy County Register at the same time. Mr. A.'s father died Aug. 29, 1879; mother now lives on the homestead, in Russell, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y. Mr. A. was one of the charter members of the I. O. O. F.; also a member of the A., F. & A. M., and was a member of the School Board two years.

WILLIAM ARMSTRONG was born in County Armagh, town of Drumminmadder, Ireland, June, 1824; came in 1839 to America, and located in the vicinity of Stevens Point, Wis.; engaged as head sawyer in Harper's mill for three years, then came to Marquette (now Green Lake)

Co.; was on a farm one summer; bought and run a saw-mill at New Lisbon for fifteen or sixteen months; came to what is now Portage; ran a lumber yard two or three years; took up the claim and entered property in that place; commenced brick making in 1847, which he has continued since, with the exception of two years. Mr. A. was married in Portage to Hulda Fish. They have had three children, of whom but one, William John, is living; William James, deceased; Sally Jane, deceased. Mr. A. was one of the first Aldermen of the city, serving several terms.

CHARLES J. ARNOLD, son of Josiah Arnold, was born at Columbus, Columbia Co., Wis., Oct. 24, 1817. Attended Portage High School and Racine College; came with parents to Portage in 1851; followed lumbering during ten years, up to 1879, when he engaged in his present business, that of freighting. He was married at Portage, June 30, 1870, to Mary F. Hutt, born in Canada. They have three children—Louis C., Robert H. and Carl S. Mr. A. is a member of the A. O. U. W. and A. F. & A. M.

JOSIAH ARNOLD, son of Sylvester Arnold, was born in the town of Washington, Berkshire Co., Mass., Nov. 1, 1820; moved to Stockbridge, Mass., with his parents, in 1824; his father died in that place Oct. 18, 1845; removed to Canaan, Columbia Co., N. Y., and resided there ten years; he lived afterwards for various periods in New York City, Stockbridge, Washington, Mass., Maryland, Virginia, and Hamilton, Madison Co., N. Y.; taught school in the latter place until he came west in the spring of 1843; he located first at Stoughton, but moved to Jamesville in the fall of 1843, where he remained two or three years, teaching the first public school; in the spring of 1844, after the close of his school, he clerked for one year in Jamesville; commenced general mercantile business in spring of 1845 with Daniel E. Bassett; they started a branch store at Columbus, in fall of 1845, closing out the business at Jamesville in the spring of 1846; continued in business at Columbus until 1847 with Bassett; then one year alone in trade; Mr. A. was appointed Clerk of Circuit Court in 1848, and elected to same position in the fall of same year; in 1850, elected Register of Deeds; held the office two years; came to Portage in 1851, where he has since resided (except during a few years at Germantown), and engaged in the hardware business with J. B. Fargo, from 1853 to 1857; continued in that business alone until 1861; then engaged in the lumber business, operating a large mill at Germantown, Juneau Co., Wis.; also associated with Carnegie & Prescott in a lumber yard and planing-mill at Portage; Mr. A. owns pine lands in Wood, Marathon and Clark Cos. Mr. A. was married in the town of Fulton, Rock Co., Wis., Dec. 20, 1846, to Mary Jane True, born in Perry, Wyoming Co., N. Y. They have five children—Charles J., born Oct. 24, 1817; William S., born Aug. 10, 1850; Samuel E., born Nov. 9, 1854; Harry E., born Feb. 1, 1859; Fred D., born March 23, 1864. Mr. A. was Postmaster at Columbus for two years; Alderman of Portage in 1854, 1855 and 1856; in the spring of 1877, elected Mayor, and is now serving his third year; in 1877, elected Assemblyman. He is a member of A. F. & A. M., Lodge No. 23, Chapter 14, and Commandery No. 4. Mr. A.'s grandfather, Timothy Arnold, served in the Revolutionary war.

JOHN ARTHUR was born in County Radnor, Wales, in November, 1821; came to America in 1845; lived in New Jersey until 1851; worked for a hosiery manufacturing company at New Brunswick, in that State; in 1851, Mr. A. came to Wisconsin, but returned to New Jersey for five years after 1853; came to Portage in 1858, and began dealing in furs, hides, wool, etc., with Evan Arthur and Samuel Brown. Mr. Brown retired from the business in 1867.

EVAN ARTHUR was born in County Radnor, Wales, in 1824; came to America in 1851, and settled first in New Jersey; in 1854, he began tanning and dealing in hides with Samuel Brown; John Arthur became a partner in 1858 in this business. He was married at Milwaukee, in 1863, to Elizabeth F. Remington, a native of New York State; they have four children—Evan R., Willie J., Grace and Nellie; Mr. Arthur's mother died at Ft. Winnebago, after living there about one year; father, John, died at Portage in November, 1862; his sisters were Mary, now Mrs. H. H. Beamor, of Canada; Ann, Mrs. Samuel Brown, who died in Milwaukee in 1872 or 1873; Sarah, a resident of Portage, and Elizabeth, now Mrs. O. J. Thomas, residing near Pewaukee, Wis.

CHARLES P. AUSTIN was born at Hamburg, Erie Co., N. Y., Jan. 5, 1836; when he was a child, his parents moved to Ohio; came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1845; located at Jamesville until 1850, when he came to Portage; Betsey Austin, his mother, died in Dodge Co., Wis., and his father, James Austin, died at Portage; Mr. Austin began clerking for John Gates, with whom he continued until enlisting in April, 1861, in Co. G, 2d W. V. I.; participated in the following battles: Blackman's Ford, Va., First Bull Run, Gainesville, Chancellorsville, Wilderness, Gettysburg, and Spottsylvania; he was wounded in the left foot at the battle of Gainesville, Aug. 28, 1862, for a long time disabled, and while on the skirmish line, the fifth day of the fight, at Spottsylvania, he was wounded in his left hip; this wound rendered him unfit for duty up to the time of his discharge; after leaving the army, he returned to Portage and again entered the store of Mr. Gates, with whom he had been prior to entering the service; in 1868, he commenced business for himself, the firm being Austin & Campbell; at the expiration of one year, John Gates purchased Mr. Campbell's interest, and Mr. G. continued in business until the time of his death; Mr. Austin was appointed Postmaster in 1870; served in that position until December, 1871; since that time he has been with Loomis, Gallett & Breese, as salesman. He was married at Kilbourn City, Wis., Sept. 17, 1867, to Mary J. Campbell; she was born at Carlisle, England, Aug. 19, 1847; they have four children—Euphenes M., George G., Martha A. and Nellie May. Mr. A. is a member of the A., F. & A. M. Lodge and of the Presbyterian Church.

EDMUND S. BAKER, born in the town of Ft. Winnebago, Oct. 27, 1818; son of Charles and Priscilla Baker, who came to that town in April, 1848; mother died in 1862; father now lives on Sec. 2, where he first located; Edmund S. remained on the farm until he was 20 years of age; came to Portage; clerked for Mr. Bacon in the hardware business for a year, then entered the law office of Emmons Taylor; remained there about three years, and was admitted to the bar Dec. 6, 1870; then engaged in farming until 1874, when he commenced the practice of law; Justice of the Peace for three years. Married in town of Ft. Winnebago, Jan. 19, 1874, to Miss Isabel A., daughter of A. Z. Maltbey, of that town; she was born in the village of McLean, Tompkins Co., N. Y., March 10, 1837; they have three children—Emmons M., born April 52, 1875; Burchard H., born June 17, 1877, and Ada May, born Feb. 11, 1879; Mr. B. is a member of the A., F. & A. M.

LEVI W. BARDEN was born in Benton, Yates Co., N. Y., Sept. 3, 1820; lived in that town until he was 24 years of age; resided in Gorham, Ontario Co., N. Y., six years; was engaged in farming until the spring of 1851; in May of that year, he entered the New York State and National Law School, from which he graduated Aug. 11, 1852, at Ballston Spa, Saratoga Co., N. Y.; was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of New York State, at Rochester, in September, 1852; came to Portage, Wis., November, 1852, and entered the law office of Judge Dixon for four months, then entered into partnership with John A. Johnson, where he remained until the death of Mr. Johnson, in June, 1853; after 1861, looked after his private affairs, and was manager of the Green Bay Transportation Company, in which position he continued for several years, until about the time of the dissolution of the company; first admitted to practice in Wisconsin at Janesville, in November, 1852; afterward admitted to practice in Portage during the first term of court held there after he came; next admitted to the Supreme Court of Wisconsin; then to United States Court at Milwaukee; while a resident of Benton, N. Y., he was Town Superintendent of Schools two years; after he was 17 years of age, he taught in the public schools of his native county and in Ontario Co., every winter for eleven years; was Town Superintendent in town of Gorham two years; Justice of the Peace of same town, which office he resigned when he went to law school. He was commissioned Colonel of one of the uniformed regiments, New York State Militia; Captain also of a rifle company, in town of Benton; Captain of company in town of Gorham; afterward commissioned Colonel of regiment to which this company was attached; and, in 1857, he purchased property where he is now located; the property was owned by Moses Pauquette and his mother; part of the house he now occupies was owned and occupied by the Pauquette family; in 1865, Mr. Barden enlarged and improved the buildings considerably, and moved here to his present house in 1865; platted 100 acres, and Jerome B. Fargo platted 40 acres in 1857, known as Barden & Fargo's Addition to the city of Portage; he has since vacated the 100 acres, except a few of the streets which are retained as they were platted; the 40 acres is still a part of the city plat; since coming to his present location, Mr. B. has devoted his attention to farming. He has held offices of Justice of the Peace, District Attorney, Alderman of Second Ward, Supervisor, Chairman of the Board of Supervisors, member of Assembly and State Senator. He was married at Mentor, Lake Co., Ohio, Nov. 29, 1853, to Jane R. Corning; she was born in Mentor, Nov. 14, 1824; they have three children—William C., Marshall W. and Mary E.

P. J. BARKMAN is a native of Canada West; was born July 23, 1846; when about 5 years of age, he came to Wisconsin with his parents, Richard and Louisa Barkman; they located at Oshkosh, and he lived there until he was 16 years of age, then came to Portage; previous to leaving Oshkosh, he had been engaged in the tinsmith business; after coming to this city, he worked for I. W. Bacon until six years ago, when the firm of J. E. Wells & Co. was formed, of which he is a member. He was married in Portage Jan. 9, 1868, to Mary L. Pixley; she died Aug. 8, 1878, leaving two children—Fred, born Sept. 24, 1869; Harry, June 1, 1874. Mr. B. is a member of A. O. F. W.

ANTON BARTL was born in Austria Nov. 11, 1843; came to America in 1870 and located in Menasha, remaining there six months; prior to locating at Portage, in 1877, he resided in Appleton, Oshkosh and Beaver Dam. Mr. B. commenced the brewing business when 16 years of age, and has continued in it ever since. He was married at Beaver Dam to Anna Waldheir, who died in May, 1878, leaving two children—Frank and Ida. Was married in Portage May 21, 1879, to Julia Mettler. Mr. B. is a member of the I. O. O. F. Lodge, Leiderkranz Society and the Hook and Ladder Company.

IRVING BATH, editor and proprietor of Portage Democrat; was born in Charlton, N. Y., April 27, 1844. In 1863, his parents came from Michigan to Columbus, in this county, and the year afterward were followed by their son, Irving, who remained with them for three years, attending school, after which he took a course of medical lectures at Ann Arbor, Mich. Upon the completion of the course, he went to Beaver Dam, Dodge Co., and was engaged in the drug business until 1869, when he removed to Berlin, continuing there in the same business up to the year 1871, when he went to Cameron, Mo., and carried on the drug and jewelry business for about two years, when he returned to Beaver Dam; in 1875, he was appointed, by Attorney General A. Scott Sloan, Patent Clerk in the land office at Madison, and continued such under Gov. Taylor's administration; in 1878, he came to Portage and engaged as editor of the Portage Democrat, having the previous year purchased a third interest in that paper; in 1879, he became its sole editor and proprietor, which he has continued ever since. He has served as Hospital Steward of the 47th W. V. I. up to the close of our late civil war. He married Miss Emma L. Chatfield, daughter of George and Eliza Chatfield, of Beaver Dam, Dodge Co., Jan. 11, 1869. They have one child, a daughter—Leila.

JACOB BAUER, wagon-maker; was born in June, 1833, in Germany; came to United States in 1850, and worked six years at his trade in Oneida Co., N. Y.; in July, 1856, settled in Portage, and for awhile worked as journeyman, but has been proprietor for fourteen years; is now partner in firm of Bauer & Lewis, for manufacture of new work, but each has other business separate. He was married in 1855, to Miss Rosa Wagner, formerly of Germany. They have seven children—Caroline, born 1856; Fred, 1860; Albert, 1864; Anna, 1866; Otto, 1869; Minnie, 1872, and Emma, 1878. In 1864, he enlisted in the 11th W. V. I., and served till the close of the war. He has been member of City Council two terms, and served three terms in Board of Supervisors of Columbia Co. He has a residence on Superior street, but the shop is on Canal street. Business is in a healthy condition.

JACOB BEST was born in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, March 24, 1848; came to America August, 1867, locating at Milwaukee, where he remained until 1876, when he came to Portage, and has resided here ever since. While living in Milwaukee, was engaged in manufacture and sale of wines and liquors; since coming here, engaged in the brewery business. Was married at Portage, April 19, 1876, to Lizzie, daughter of Charles Hartel; she was born in this city. They have two daughters—Angusta M. and Ella M. Mr. B. is a member of the Leiderkranz and Turner Societies and Fire Department, Dramatic Association and Portage Business Men's Association.

DEABOLT BLASS, Jr., son of Deabolt and Lena Blass; was born in New York City Jan. 10, 1848; came with his parents to Portage in May, 1852. Father resided in this place eighteen years, then removed to Mauston; mother died at Mauston, Feb. 18, 1879; father is now engaged in mercantile business at Mauston. The subject of this sketch has resided in Portage since 1852; has been engaged in the barbering business for himself since the spring of 1866. Mr. Blass was married in Chicago, Oct. 22, 1873, to Anna M. Weber, a native of Richberg, Wurtemberg, Germany; she was born Dec. 19, 1852; came to America in 1872. They have three children—Anna L., born Oct. 6, 1874; Deabolt M., born Feb. 23, 1877, and Edwin J., born April 16, 1879. Mr. B. is a member of the Odd-Fellow Lodge. D. Blass, Sr., was born in Alsace (now Germany) in 1807; came to America in 1830; married in 1836, to Magdalena Kripe; she was also born in Alsace, July 22, 1813, and came to America in 1836. The parents of Mrs. D. Blass, Jr., Joseph and Theresa Weber, were married in 1849—both natives of Germany; her father was born in 1822, died April 16, 1859; mother's maiden name was Theresa Shurr; she was born in 1831, and died March 17, 1863.

ERNEST BOTHIN, retired carpenter and joiner; born in Germany on the 27th of September, 1811; came to the United States in 1852, and stopped two years in Ohio, and then, in the spring of 1855, settled in this city, where he now lives. Soon after coming into Columbia Co.,

he bought a farm of 220 acres in Lewiston Township, which he carried on till 1877, when he sold the farm and returned to city life. Was married, in 1835, to Miss Rozena Laveranz in Germany; have six children—Ottella, Amelia, Emma, Minnie, Julius, Henry; has buried two children; the daughters are married. Himself and wife are members of the Evangelical Church, of which he is a class leader, and to whose welfare he is devoted. He has retired from active life, and is enjoying the fruit of industry and economy; lives in a fine brick house on Cook street; also rents another house near the depot, and owns other real estate in the city.

MRS. SAMUEL S. BRANNAN was born in Georgia, Franklin Co., Vt., on the 24th of April, 1837; she is the daughter of Joseph and Rhoda M. Prentiss; she came West in 1856, and made her home with her brother, Judge G. C. Prentiss, then of Portage, now of La Crosse, Wis. On the 27th of August, 1861, she was married to her late husband, Samuel S. Brannan, whose extended biography appears in this volume, with others of the illustrious dead of the county; her entire married life has been passed in Portage, and most of it also in her present home; she has four children—S. Prentice, born June 2, 1862; William R., Feb. 24, 1864; Lucy C., known as "Kittie," Aug. 5, 1865, and Jackson T. Brannan, Oct. 24, 1868. Her husband's mother, aged 75, widow of William Brannan, formerly of this city, resides with the family, and is still active and vigorous. One son, Willie, is Assistant in the post office at Portage; and the other, S. Prentiss, is mail agent on the Madison & Portage Railway.

LL. BREESE was born May 13, 1833, at Abernethy, in the parish of Malwyd, Merionethshire, North Wales; he is the son of Edward and Mary Breese; he immigrated with his parents to this country in the month of May, 1846, and settled in the town of Randolph, this county; his education was academic; up to the age of 25, he was engaged most of the time with his parents in cultivating the farm. In the fall of 1858, owing to impaired health, he accepted the position of Deputy Sheriff of Columbia Co., hoping thereby to improve his health and extend his knowledge of business, and the circle of his acquaintance. Previous to this, he held the office of School District Clerk, Town Supervisor, Justice of the Peace, and Town Treasurer. In the fall of 1860, he received from the Republican County Convention the nomination for County Treasurer, and was elected the following November. He held this position for three consecutive terms, in all six years, having no competitor for the office, except in the first instance. In January, 1867, at the close of his third term as Treasurer, he entered as a partner the dry-goods firm of N. H. Wood & Co., the firm being composed of N. H. Wood, R. O. Loomis, C. R. Gallett, and himself. This connection was continued until 1869, when Mr. Wood disposed of his interest to the other partners, and retired from the firm, which thereafter stood and was styled Loomis, Gallett & Breese. In the summer of 1869, at the urgent solicitation of friends, he became a candidate for the office of State Treasurer at the State Convention held that fall. On the first informal ballot, he received a plurality of votes, but, owing to local combinations, the nomination fell to his competitor. In about a month after this convention, the nominee for Secretary of State, resigning his position upon the ticket, made it necessary for the State Central Committee to fill the vacancy by appointment. Without solicitation on his part, or even knowledge of the vacancy, the committee tendered him the nomination for that place, communicating their action by telegraph. Had it not been for the persistent entreaty of a few intimate friends, the appointment would have been declined. He was elected the following November. Under the organization of the State Government of Wisconsin, the office of Secretary of State is by far the most important of the State offices; besides involving the duties of Secretary of State proper, this officer is also ex officio Auditor of State, and School Land Commissioner, and also ex officio Commissioner of Insurance. In May, 1870, he represented Wisconsin as Commissioner of Insurance at the National Insurance Convention held in the city of New York. This convention was composed of those officers in the different States who had charge of the different departments therein. He was elected Vice President of the convention for the term of one year; re-elected the second year, and elected President the third, and presided at its fourth annual session. After the expiration of his second term as Secretary of State, he returned to Portage and resumed his former occupation as merchant. In addition to this, he also held the positions of President of the City Bank of Portage, President of the Portage Iron Works and President of the Board of Education. He has been engaged in farming more or less extensively throughout his life. Religiously, he is a member and Elder of the Presbyterian Church, professing Christianity at the age of 14 years. He is an active worker in the church and Sunday school. Mr. Breese was married, June 9, 1853, to Miss Mary E. Evans, of Milwaukee, by whom he has had six children, three boys and three girls, one of the latter dying in infancy.

VOLNEY E. BREWER, jeweler; was born in Otego, Otsego Co., N. Y., May 16, 1841; moved from there to Lisle, Broome Co., N. Y., when 10 years of age, lived there eight years; Mr. Brewer traveled in Western New York for several years selling patent medicines, musical instruments, etc.: was one year in the oil regions of Pennsylvania, spent a year in Illinois, Iowa and Missouri before coming to Portage, where he arrived in 1868; he learned the jewelers' trade in Lisle, N. Y., and has been engaged in that business ever since coming to Wisconsin; he is a member of the I. O. O. F.

JOHN BRICKWELL was born in Highwicombe, Buckinghamshire, England, Dec. 8, 1813; came to Wisconsin from Uxbridge, England, locating at Ft. Winnebago in 1843; made a claim in Lewiston on Secs. 1, 2 and 11 (only one section); lived there until 1857, then removed to Portage; Mr. B. was first Justice of the Peace of Ft. Winnebago and organized all the schools before the town was organized or surveyed, and was the first School Superintendent of that place; he came to Portage, was admitted to the bar March 1, 1856, and to the Supreme Court Nov. 9, 1877; his naturalization papers were issued Sept. 11, 1856. Mr. Brickwell was married in Uxbridge, England, to Sarah Barton, a native of Highwicombe. They have two children—Joseph and Sarah Ann. Mr. B. has held the office of Alderman several times, President pro tem. of the Council, etc., Justice of the Peace for several years, Clerk of District School Board when he first came to Portage, Acting Mayor one year, and was elected Supervisor April 6, 1880. His son is now living on the land which his father first entered in this county; he was elected Justice of the Peace in Lewiston in April, 1880.

HARVEY BRIGGS was born in Benson, Rutland Co., Vt., May 17, 1818; educated at Castleton Seminary, read law in the town of Whitehall, Washington Co., N. Y., admitted to the bar of Vermont in 1842; he then practiced law in his native place until 1854; came to Portage June 4, 1854, has resided in Wisconsin ever since; he purchased a farm on Sec. 6 in the town of Lewiston, lived there one year; in 1858, removed to Packwankee, was appointed County Judge of Marquette Co. July 16, 1858; in the spring of 1859, was elected to the same office on the Republican ticket by a majority of 500 in a Democratic district, served until 1862, when he resigned; was also Justice of the Peace and Assessor while in that county; removed to Briggsville, was there until 1874; then in Montello one year, and took charge of the office of County Judge. Came to Portage in 1875, where he has remained ever since; has been Justice of the Peace for four years. Mr. Briggs was married at Cornwall, Vt., May 2, 1844, to Francis L. Peck, a native of Cornwall; they have three children—Carlton W., now at Grand Rapids, Wood Co., Wis., born April 21, 1845; Cloe Anne, now Mrs. Fred Davis, of Lewiston, born September, 1851; Ella May, now Mrs. James S. Gay, of Douglas, Marquette Co., born July 13, 1858—lost one son, Amasa, born March 19, 1847, died in Michigan in 1867, aged 20 years; Carlton enlisted as a private in Co. K, 18th W. V. I., in January, 1862; was Captain of the 44th W. V. I. when he was mustered out, after close of the war; was Acting Assistant Inspector General of the post at Paducah.

JAMES R. BRODIE was born in Renfrewshire, Scotland, about seven miles from Glasgow, August, 1836; came to America in 1866, and to Portage in the fall of the same year; learned the trade of shoemaking when he was 10 years of age, and has been engaged in that business since arriving here, and in trade alone for the last six years. Married in the town of Ardris, Scotland, June, 1863, to Margaret Leeds Potter; she was born in Scotland; they have three children—Bella, Willie and James; lost two, one infant son James, and Maggie, who died in February, 1877. Mr. and Mrs. Brodie are members of the Presbyterian Church.

L. WALTER BROWN was born on Fox Island, Me., June 1, 1850; came with his parents to the town of Dekorra, Columbia Co., Wis., in the fall of 1854; engaged in farming there until 1865, when he removed to Jackson Co., Minn.; his mother, Mary Green Brown, died in the town of Dekorra, April 16, 1865, leaving six children—Eurena J., now Mrs. S. T. Keller, residing in Jackson Co., Minn.; Frank M., now a resident of Maine; Roscoe G., Quinnesec, Mich.; Flora E., now Mrs. D. H. Haggard, of Winnebago Agency; L. Walter (the subject of this sketch), of Phillips, Wis., Register of Deeds for Price Co., dealer in pine lumber, real estate, etc., and Harvey H., mineral explorer at Quinnesec. Mr. B. enlisted in Co. E, 50th W. V. I. in January, 1865, mustered in Feb. 22 of the same year; mustered out in June, serving three months and twenty-five days; lived in Wisconsin most of the time since 1854; a resident of Price Co. since 1876; local agent about three years for Senator Price, one of the largest individual lumber operators in America; since then, operating on his own account principally; his brothers and sisters are all natives of Maine, except Harvey L. who was born in Columbia Co.; father and mother both born on Fox Island, Me.

ARCHIBALD BRYCE was born Aug. 25, 1801, near Glasgow, Scotland; his parents came to America the April after his birth, and settled in Stamford, Delaware Co., N. Y., where he resided till 23 years of age; the well-known cares and duties of a thrifty farmer's son were his till attaining his majority. He was married Dec. 1, 1824, to Miss Jannette Frazer, formerly of Inverness, Scotland; he lived twelve years at Little Falls, Herkimer Co., N. Y.; was engaged seven years of the time as overseer of repairs on a section of the Erie Canal; and five years was engineer in a paper-mill at Little Falls; he lived four years in Oswego Co., N. Y., and then about six years in Steuben Co., engaged in the lumber trade; he was a farmer four years in Ontario; and then in May, 1849, he came to Columbia Co. and bought a farm in Marcellon Township; this was his home till 1870, when he sold this farm and soon afterward moved to Portage; his fine brick residence is but a block from the court house, and on the corner of Clark and Pleasant streets; they have raised ten children—Thomas, Margaret; Chauncey, who died in the army; Jeanette, Mary, Ann, Sarah; Daniel, dead; David, dead, and Carrie; one of the widowed daughters, Mrs. Sarah Tarbell, resides with the parents in their pleasant home; she was married to George L. Tarbell in 1860, and his death occurred in 1868. Mr. Bryce, although nearly fourscore, is still hale and vigorous; himself and worthy helpmeet have trod the reliable path of industry and economy which almost inevitably leads to an old age of happiness and competency. "Uncle Bryce" boasts that he "never speculated, never went to bed hungry and never had a lawsuit."

WILLIAM W. BULLARD, the subject of this sketch, is a native of Vermont; is the son of Derreck and Sibley Ballard; was born in Weybridge, Addison Co., Vt., Aug. 23, 1845, lived there until he was 2 or 3 years old, when his parents moved to Martinsburg, Lewis Co., N. Y.; remained there about twelve years; during the next two years lived in Kingston, Canada, when he removed to Rutland, Dane Co., Wis.; resided there about eight months. Feb. 10, 1861, enlisted in Co. A (Lient. Nobles commanding), 8th U. S. Infantry; served in that regiment until May 12, 1862; on account of disability, did guard duty at Ft. La Fayette and Ft. Hamilton; re-enlisting in July, 1862, in Co. E, 23d W. V. L., and was mustered out August, 1865; moved to Baraboo and resided there until coming to Portage, in 1876. Married Miss Isabelle Elgie, daughter of Mathew Elgie, who came to Caledonia thirty years ago, and is now living there, March 18, 1866; she was born in Guelph, Canada; they have one daughter—Belle, born Dec. 25, 1866.

WILLIAM G. BUNKER, son of Levi and Maria Bunker; was born in the town of West River, Randolph Co., Ind., Aug. 17, 1834; his parents moved to Wayne Co., Ind., in 1841; learned his trade at Richmond, Ind., and commenced business for himself in 1853, in Wheeling, Delaware Co., Ind.; remained there six years; then went to Logansport, where he remained until 1861, when he moved to Galveston, in Cass Co., and remained there four years, when he came to Portage in spring of 1865 and engaged in harness-making, which business he has since followed, with the exception of two years that he resided in the town of Ft. Winnebago. Was elected Justice of the Peace in 1874, and was re-elected in 1876 and 1878. Mr. B. was married in Jonesboro, Grant Co., Ind., Dec. 17, 1857, to Ursula A. Mchatfey; she was born near Dayton, Ohio, May, 1840; they have two children—Adefine M. and Warren W. Mr. Bunker is a member of I. O. O. F. since 1862.

ALEX. CARNAGIE, a native of Cupeer, in Fyfe, Scotland; was born July 12, 1820, emigrating to America in 1840, and locating in Vermilion Co., N. Y.; remained there one year and a half; then going to Albany, N. Y., where he made it his home until 1848; then coming to Milwaukee, and remaining there until September, 1850, when he came to Portage; returning to New York City in 1853; living on Staten Island most of the time until 1855, when he returned to this city, which since has been his home. Mr. C. learned his trade before leaving Scotland. He married in the town of Hope, Hamilton Co., N. Y., June 3, 1842, Eliza Mills, who was born in the city of Edinburgh, Scotland, Aug. 12, 1824; they have four children, three sons and one daughter—Agnes, Alex., Jr., John W. and George. Mr. Carnagie has been City Assessor for two terms, also Alderman of the Second Ward two years.

FRED G. CASTLE, passenger conductor on the Northern Division of the C., M. & St. P. R. R.; born in Waukau, Wis., Sept. 2, 1851; his father was for several years proprietor of the Exchange Hotel at Omro, Wis. At the age of 14 years, he left home to seek his fortune, and spent four years in the pineries, part of the time as cook and the last portion as lumberman. When 18, he began railroading as brakeman on the Northern Division of the C., M. & St. P. R. R.; after one year's experience, he was promoted the charge of same train—the "Winneconnee Freight"—which he ran four years; then for a year, he was an "extra passenger man," and, in the spring of 1875, he was appointed conductor of a passenger train on the same road, and he has been in continuous service to date—summer, 1880. He was married, Sept. 5, 1877, to Miss Frankie Gould, of Beaver Dam, Wis.; they have one son, named Guy Wilkinson, born on the 5th of February, 1879. Mrs. Castle is a member of the Baptist Church at Portage; she is a graduate of the high school at Lincoln, Neb.; she is a niece of B. F. Taylor, the well-known author—America's gifted word painter; she herself wields a ready and graceful pen. Mr. Castle is one of "the boys" who has hosts of friends; is a genial and popular conductor; he will be recognized in Portage by his constant attendant, "Don," the noblest dog in the city, a pure-blood St. Bernard.

MRS. JULIA E. CHRISTOPHER, née Waters, was born on the 11th of April, 1832, in Massena, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y.; her early education was in her native town, and afterward with her brother in Canada; she and her brother Daniel came West in the fall of 1855, and the winter following, they together engaged in teaching the public school in Portage. In the summer of 1856, she taught school in District No. 5, township of Wycena, and boarded with David Reynolds, an old pioneer. Eighteen years afterward, 1874, her stepdaughter, Mary Christopher, taught in the district, same schoolhouse, boarded at same house and in the same family. In the summer of 1879, her oldest daughter, Susie E. Christopher, taught in same district, in same schoolhouse and boarded at the same house, but the old pioneer, David Reynolds, had gone to his last home. Mrs. C. taught in Ft. Winnebago before her marriage. In 1857, she taught in the First Ward School, and for the last five years, her stepdaughter, Mary, has been teaching in the same building, which has been moved nearer the present center of business, and now her daughter is teaching in the same building. Mrs. Christopher is one of a family of ten children, of whom seven have been successful teachers in Wisconsin. She was married on the 2d of October, 1859, to Thomas Christopher, of Portage; they had six children—Susie E., Daniel T., who is dead; Daniel J., George M., Julia B. and Willie J., all of whom live at home. Her husband was one of the earliest settlers in Portage—came in 1848; he was a useful and leading citizen, and contributed largely to the building-up of the city; he was a liberal Catholic, as is also Mrs. Christopher. He was seven times honored with the office of Assessor, and on the first Tuesday of April, 1872, he was again elected to that difficult position, but on the 30th of April—the day before his official duties were to begin—he passed from earth's toils and triumphs to the rewards of the righteous.

JOHN TILLOTSON CLARK was born in what was then the town of Wolcott, now the town of Huron, Wayne Co., N. Y., on the 16th of April, 1861; he was the son of the Rev. William Clark, a Presbyterian clergyman, and Sophronia Tillotson; resided in Huron until 1835, when he removed with his father to the town of Danby, Tompkins Co., N. Y. When 18 years of age, he purchased his time of his father, paying therefor $150. Naturally a close student, losing no opportunity to acquire information while in the service of his father, he now took measures calculated to increase his facilities for gaining knowledge; his time being his own, he applied all leisure moments to study, entering Owego Academy, Tioga Co., and Grotton Academy, Tompkins Co., for brief terms during the winter seasons, and laboring in the harvest field during summer, in order that he might earn the price of his tuition; in September, 1843, he entered Hamilton College, where he graduated in 1845; in the fall of that year, he went to Camden, Oneida Co., N. Y., and taught a private school until July 5, 1848; during the latter part of this time, he studied law out of school hours; from Camden he went to Lyons, N. Y., and was there engaged as Principal of the Lyons Union School for three years; in the mean time he continued his study of the law, and was admitted to the bar in September, 1850, in Rochester. He was married at Lyons, N. Y., on the 24th of September, 1851, to Harriet Louise Holley, daughter of John M. Holley, M. C. In April, 1853, he commenced practicing law with his eldest brother, William Clark, with whom he had studied; in September of that year, he removed to New Brunswick, N. J., and soon took charge, as Principal, of the public school, remaining there until the spring of 1857, when he came to Wisconsin, locating at Portage, and engaging in the practice of his profession. In the spring of 1861, he was elected County Judge of Columbia Co., serving until the 1st of January, 1866; in the fall of this year, he was chosen District Attorney, and held that office two years; in 1870, he retired to his farm in the town of Roxbury, Dane Co., Wis., where he lived with his family until the fall of 1875, removing to the city of Madison, that his children might enjoy the advantages of the State University. In February, 1878, he purchased of Messrs. Brannan & Turner the Wisconsin State Register, soon afterward admitting B. F. Goodell as a partner, and removing his family from the State capital in July, 1879; Judge Clark has sole control of the editorial columns of the Register. Seven children have been born to Judge and Mrs. Clark—Mary Holley, born in Lyons, N. Y.; Elizabeth Sophronia, and John Tillotson (died Nov. 19, 1863), born in New Brunswick, N. J.; Helen Louise, Julia Kirkland, Sarah Amelia and William Henry, born in Portage.

RES. OF I.W. SCHULZE PORTAGE WIS.

RESIDENCE & BUSINESS BLOCK OF J.O. EATON LODI WIS.

W. G. CLOUGH, Principal of the high school, was born in Portage, May 20, 1853; son of Wm. R. and Mary A. Gowey Clough; parents settled in Delavan, Wis., in 1846; afterward removed to Portage; father died Feb. 8, 1869; Mrs. C. is still a resident of Portage; Mr. C. was educated in the public schools of Portage, and also a graduate of the State University at Madison in 1875; taught district schools three winters prior to entering the State University; afterward appointed Assistant Principal of Portage High School, and held the position one year; since that time has been Principal in the same school.

ROBERT COCHRANE, miller and grain dealer, was born April 25, 1822, in Westfield, Chautauqua Co., N. Y.; his mill is in Westfield, Marquette Co., Wis., and his residence is in Portage; in 1842, came west, and remained nearly three years in Joliet, Ill.; about 1845, he, with three brothers, bought fully a thousand acres of land, near Waupun, and farmed unitedly on a large scale; in 1850, himself and two brothers went to Marquette Co. and bought a large tract of land, and laid out a village, which, in honor of his birthplace, he named Westfield; there they erected a grist-mill and saw-mill, and store and dwelling, and thus founded the village. He was married on the 12th of January, 1859, to Miss Lucy R. Emerton, of Ft. Winnebago; she was born on the 21st of September, 1838, in Columbia, Coos Co., N. H.; during the war, the Cochrane brothers divided their respective interests, Mr. Robert C. retaining the Westfield property; he also has a farm in Dodge Co., besides the improvements at Westfield, and a large brick residence in Portage. One child died in infancy, and four are living—Jennie E., Lula A., R. Livingstone and T. Harry. Mr. C. has held town and county offices, and was a member of Legislature in 1863; is a member of the Odd Fellows and of the Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons; he votes in local elections for the "best man," but in State and National affairs is of decided Democratic proclivities. Mrs. C. is a Presbyterian; the family are highly respected.

J. COLE was born in the town of Cherry Valley, Otsego Co., N. Y., Nov. 15, 1815; worked in cotton mills in Oneida Co. until nearly 21 years of age; then went to Lockport, N. Y., and remained about three years; returned to Rochester, and worked in the cotton-mills for eighteen months; in the fall of 1839, removed to Newton Falls, Ohio, residing there eleven years; he subsequently resided in Painesville one year, Cleveland one year, town of Bristol two years; Mr. C. came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1854, and located at Oconomowoc, residing afterward at Milwaukee and Hartford; in the fall of 1858, was employed by railroad company, as machinist, running stationary engines, etc.; remained in their employ for twelve years; in September, 1871, engaged in flour and feed business, and has continued in that business ever since; he also deals in wooden pumps. Mr. C. was married in Rochester, N. Y., in the fall of 1839, to Mary A. McDonald, a native of Watertown, Jefferson Co., N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Cole are both members of the M. E. Church; Mr. C. is Steward, Recording Secretary and Class Leader in the church.

CONRAD COLLIPP. [An autobiography]. I was born Feb. 21, 1822, in the village of Obersuhl, in the middle Werra Valley of Northwest Thuringia, near the city of Eisenach, and the renowned castle of Wartburg, where Dr. Martin Luther in the years 1522-23 translated the Bible into the German language; my birthplace, Obersuhl, belonging at that time to the Electorate of Hesse-Cassel, now to Prussia; I was brought up under stern Protestantism—the German Reformed Church—vigorous Zwingli-Calvanism. My father, John Collipp, was a very severe and stiff military gentleman, of strict morality and of very few words; he was a manufacturer of worsted and other fine white woolen yarns; he owned quite a wealth of real estate. My mother's name was Christina Mohr, of old German stock, tough and wiry all her lifetime; she died in Philadelphia in 1873, 77 years of age. I was the only son of five children, having four sisters; I went to school about fourteen years, from my 4th to my 14th year, in what we call in regular school, and four years in extra preparatory school for higher studies, mostly three times a day, till I was 18 years old. My mother becoming a widow through the sudden death of my father, and she intending to use me for other purposes than book studies, took me away from school against my most obstinate remonstrances and wishes, and put me in apprenticeship to a damask-weaver, and afterward to plush and velvet weaving. After the death of my father, my mother, who had given up my father's business, commenced a commercial business of selling table-linen, damask and general hosiery, besides carrying on our farming; from my 18th to my 22d year, I have always considered the worst four years of my life, because being compelled to engage in employments against my inclinations and wishes; I rather would have liked to be a soldier from my 20th year, but even that could not be, for I was the only son of a widow, and therefore exempt by law and the circumstances; but thank God! the year of 1844 came on, the year of my majority—22 years old according to German laws; yes, dear mother—22 years old, now I can do something for myself: and straightway I prepared to go into the great universe, wheresoever I might get to, to the East Indies or elsewhere, no difference to me.

The 17th of March, 1844. I left the old domicile of my mother and my native village of Obersuhl amidst copious shedding of tears and great sorrow of my dear mother, sisters and hundreds of friends: per foot, knapsack on my back, cane in hand, the legal papers and passports, and necessary cash in my pockets: going to Göttingen in pretty bad weather, and rather footsore, I took the mail coach for Bremen; arriving in Bremen the 22d of March, 1844. I noticed a large poster, stating that in a few days a ship would sail for America: I went to the office and asked what it would cost to go to America: the man asked me what I had, I told him nothing but myself and a knapsack; he told me if I paid 19 thalers in gold, I could go, I paid right away and took my passage ticket: after looking around the city of Bremen, and buying some maps of America and other stationery, I finally left the old foggy place in a schooner on the Weser River for Braka some miles seaward. On the night of the 24th of March, 1844, I left dear old Fatherland in the brig Louisa, Capt. Claus Weneke, for far-off America: in the morning, when I got out, I could see nothing more of land, only dreary fog, and once in awhile a dangerous looking buoy in dismal waters. Adieu. After a stormy and terrific voyage of eight weeks in despair, suffering in the meantime almost every conceivable misery and discomfort, I arrived hale and hearty the 21st of May, 1844, and about 9 o'clock A. M. set my feet on dry land at Spruce street wharf in Philadelphia, thanking God and kissing the very dry soil on terra firma. I advanced a few rods upon my "sea-legs" to the corner of Spruce and Water street, to a barrier post, made of an old cannon, and gazed with delight in the balmy bright May morning up Spruce street, with its gilt-lettered behung signs. While I was standing there in wondrous admiration and meditations of many sorts, a middle-aged, tall, palefaced and lank gentleman of a pleasant countenance approached me and asked, whether I had come with yonder ship, pointing with his finger toward the brig Louisa, with the Bremen flag flying in the breeze in the Delaware River: I understood so much, that I assented with nodding of my head: for with the remembrances of the voyage, I had no desire to look toward the ships. The gentleman spoke a few more words to me, but I shook my head in the negative: a few moments afterward, he said, you stay here a few minutes: I understood that also partially, and again assented with my head nodding: scarcely five minutes had elapsed and the same gentleman appeared in company with a youngish man: this youngish man stepped toward me, and bade me very pleasantly good morning in German, and asked me further in the German language whether I had just come with that ship, over there in the river, and whether there had not come some person I knew of who could manufacture such material as my cap was made of (I had a plush cap on my head). I answered that I had learned to make such stuff at Marksuhl in Saxe-Weimeingen: they both appeared very much pleased, but I did care much about it, for I was very hungry, having scarcely eaten anything within sixty hours of the miserable food on board the ship: though I was enchanted with the handsome landscapes, the crowing of roosters, lowing of cattle, sights of towns, orchards and fields on both sides of the grand Delaware Bay and River, slowly coming up with the ship, in delightful May weather: the old gentleman soon left, but the youngish man stayed with me, took me to an adjacent hotel, where a bountiful table was set with everything the heart could wish for, such as I only had seen at grand festivals: I thought by myself, Collipp, you have it: there is surely a great festival on the go here: no doubt of it, for all the people are dressed so well and everything looks so gay: the reader may depend on it, I did eat at that time with great comfort, and to my entire satisfaction.

An incident occurred during my first American meal, which I may relate: While I was studiously eating away, the landlady of the house came in—a middle-aged woman: she asked me where I came from in Germany. I answered, "From Obersuhl in the Werra-Valley." "What is your father's name?" I said, "I am the only son of Johannes Collipp; my name is Conrad." "O dear God!" she exclaimed, "my dear young man, I nursed you while you was a little boy. I have known your father very well; you must stay with me as long as you please." I looked at the woman with great pleasure, and asked who the good lady was who addressed a stranger so kindly (for I could not remember ever seeing the person). She told me her father's name, and other things, well known to me in Europe, etc. I recognized at once that I was not altogether in a strange land, without friends.

After having finished my meal, the youngish man, whom we will call now Mr. Hess, foreman of Mr. Woodruff's millinery, hat and cap manufactory, took me with him in an omnibus, and we rode that first half-day over many parts of the opulent city of Philadelphia, he treating me with many kinds of luxuries, such as oranges, ice cream, coconuts, ginger beer, etc., and showing me some of the arts, sciences, fine architecture and memorable places of that great city. I thanked God in the evening, that in reality I had now come to a place where I could for awhile learn a great deal, and be happy. Mr. Hess treated me for several days in the same manner, till I told him that now I had enough of sight-seeing, and we would go to business henceforth. We procured the necessary machinery, twisted mohair and other properly dyed yarns, etc., and went to work. I taught at that time about sixty girls to make plush for the manufacture of hats, caps, etc., Mr. Woodruff, the proprietor of the establishment, paying me well for my services, and treating me with all the good graces of a gentleman while I was with him. Naturally for me, I applied my mind right away with an intense assiduity to the learning of the English language. I remained with Mr. Woodruff about half a year. Afterward, I apprenticed myself to become a printer in a newspaper printing office. An editor—a fine man—Mr. Miskey, addressed me once thus: "Dear young man," he said, "I get $2,000 a year, but I have to work almost day and night like a slave, in a room like a prison; take my meals in a hurry; only a few hours on Sunday I can see my family, and when the year is around, there is nothing left of my hard-earned wages; besides, I have almost daily to write down, to my utmost disgust, the manifold truths and mendacities of commonplace men and hypocrites. I am sick of this business. If I were young yet, I would go to the West. Dear young man, I advise you to give up learning this business, and go West.* I assure you, you will live happier if you work as hard there as I must do here." I took the hint—and quit; or, I saw the reason in the advice, and quit.

After the printing experiment, I went to learning weaving ingrain carpets, for which art I had to pay $80. With this business I could, and really did, make good wages during four days of the week, and so had three days for muse and studies while I remained in Philadelphia. The years, and parts of years, I lived in Philadelphia, were of great blessing to me, and added much to my future career. I learned the English tongue, some of the English literature, and various good manners and Americanisms. Late in the fall of 1844, I got acquainted with a very good, common-sense, reasonable and pious man, Rev. Daniel Berger. Through the grace of God, this good man and my zealous efforts, I found peace of mind religiously, in the Christian fundamental truth or principle; and my motto was henceforth, "Entire negation of the negative."

My mother's great love of her only son induced her to sell her property in Europe, and follow me, with my four sisters, to America, in the year 1846. They arrived safely at Philadelphia, and mother bought some real estate there, and I helped to get them in tolerably good condition, in the way of living to their satisfaction.

In the year 1848, being now additionally a little better prepared for the great world, I started off again—for the West and wilderness—to the infinite sorrow of my dear mother and sisters. But who could help it? I went via New York, Hudson River, Erie Canal, Buffalo, per steamer Globe over Lakes Erie and Huron, Straits of Mackinaw and Lake Michigan, to Wisconsin, and finally arrived, in the beginning of August, 1848, at Chicago, Ill. There I got, the first day, employment as a clerk in a large dry-goods and grocery store. In April, 1849, I obtained the excellent situation of clerk on the steamboat Indiana, which was towing at that time vessels in and out of Chicago's poor harbor, in boisterous, bad weather; also the many canal and packet boats of the Illinois Canal, from Bridgeport up and down the Chicago River—an arduous, dangerous and dashing business for me; among primitive, chaotic Western wickedness, putrid water, mud and quagmire, pestilential cholera, numerous and terrific deaths, and black clouds of tormenting mosquitoes at night-time, but plenty cash rolling around me, in the general havoc going on at that time in Chicago. I came out all hale and hearty; no impression made on me of any particular hurt, then or afterward.

In the beginning of August, 1849, I started from Chicago, per steamer, well equipped with gun, pistol, ammunition, etc., and some cash, for Milwaukee. From there, per foot, to the Indian lands, beyond Fox and Wisconsin Rivers, having at Chicago set my eyes for the wilderness and utmost limits of civilization, to try progress. I had for company, on this adventurous route, Mr. Samuel Slifer, who afterward became my father-in-law, and another—a youngish Yankee he was, I think. At Oak Grove, a little westward of poverty-stricken Watertown, at that time, I saw the last poor habitation of quasi-civilization. Further on toward Fort Winnebago, I saw nothing but inane expanse of grassy, wild, rolling prairie and woods. About ten miles eastward of Fort Winnebago, we struck an apparent wagon-track through the woods, which, I afterward found, had been the military road to the fort. I came up to Fort Winnebago about half an hour in advance of my weary comrades, it being now about 9 o'clock A. M., middle of August. I sighted the consoling and well-arranged frontier military barrack and building of the fort with much pleasure, and was delighted with the fine view toward the west and Baraboo hills. While I sat there waiting, I soliloquized: "Precious castle of comfort to the pilgrim seeking an earthly home; a watch-house of our glorious Government for the protection of advancing civilization and wealth, versus barbarism." As soon as my comrades came up, I walked again in advance down to a bridge across a small stream. A grassy ditch, thought I. All at once I noticed what appeared to me a half-breed Indian in the big grass near the bridge. "What is this?" I asked, pointing to the water. He said, "Fox River." O Poseidon!* said I to myself—Fox River. I asked, "Where is the Wisconsin River?" He said, "Over there," pointing with his finger southward, "great big river, that." My comrades now came up to the bridge; I told them, "This, you see, is the great Fox River;" but they were so weary and worn-out, they had nothing to say. In the mean time, the individual down in the grass came up to us. I asked him, "Is there any tavern round hereabouts?" He said, "Little way over there—the Cap'n's place," pointing southeasterly across the bridge. I said then to my comrades, "Let us cross the Niemen, and now into—Russia." As soon as we were a few rods across the river among the tall willow brush which at that time covered the whole flats to the Wisconsin River, we saw everywhere groups of horrible-looking Indians, old and young, lying among the bushes on the ground. Alas! wild-looking creatures to behold. In a little while, we came to the Franklin House—a cozy resting-place for weary men in this wilderness. Old Capt. Low had built this hospice a few years back, in this dreary marsh, for the coming of "advancing civilization" westward. We got something to eat, and rested for that day.

*Horace Greeley, it seems, did not originate this familiar expression.

The next day, I equipped myself with fighting tools, plenty of dry powder, round lead and pocket compass, for an expedition into the Indian lands. I walked toward what is now called Ketchum's Point, kept along the dry land toward Mud Lake, turned a little north, to the marsh below what we now call Silver Lake, crossed the quagmire northward, and went to the westerly side of the lake. Here I found a splendid woods and pretty good soil, north and west of this fine sheet of clear water. Why not pitch on this spot? thought I to myself. I wandered till toward evening round about the woods, meeting some Indians and wild game, and returned finally, wet and tired, to the hospice in the marsh.

Next day, Mr. Slifer, the young Yankee, and I started out prospecting into the Indian land, and stayed several days in the woods. We got pretty deep into it, finally astray, about the big slough and general chaos thereabouts. We slept in the woods and went next day in a southerly direction, across a seemingly endless marsh, miry swamps and low, thick woods. At last we came, toward midnight, about twelve miles above the portage to the Wisconsin River, but did not know at that time where we were. It must be the Wisconsin River, and sure enough it was. It was the first time I got sight of the grand river of much movable sand. We had shot two raccoons during the day, and I tried to eat some nasty coon's flesh, but could not get it down. Early next day, I marched down along the shore of the river through the awfullest woods, slough, abominable quagmires and tall cutgrass, which was swarming full of hungry mosquitoes. My hands, face and neck became one smear of blood, sweat and black mud in the struggle. At last, about noon, I reached dry land, at what we now call Prospect Hill. Passing along this eminence on the shore of the river, I came to that heavy-timbered infernal corner, where now old Mr. Leach resides, and where Mr. William Armstrong's brickyard is. There in that wild nook of hill, slough and morass, I noticed a clamorous smell, some human hair, rags, traces of clotted blood and a grave of recent date in the dark woods. I felt somewhat uncomfortable, shivered some, and with fleet steps made my exit from the dismal place. Coming pretty soon to that other dark nest of timber and slough, where now Mr. Valentine Helman's house is, I came again into the mud. The big timber reached in a slough, at that time, to where now John Burchhard lives, on Wisconsin street. Finally I came to dryer land covered with young black-oak woods, and met, about the place where now Peter Neiss' brick house stands, a few boards stuck up, behind which I discovered a woman, an old stove and a few barrels. No doubt I looked like a hard case, for the poor woman was much scared when she got sight of me. I told her not to be afraid. "Have you anything to eat?" I asked. She said, "Yes, I have some pork in that barrel there, and some bread." I told her to quickly cook some, for I was very hungry. I ate about three pounds of half-raw pork and some doughy fresh bread. I offered her some money, but she refused to take it. This good woman was Barney Cook's first wife, afterward the wife of Peter Neiss. I asked the woman how far it was to Fort Winnebago. She said, "I don't know, but I think, it is only a few miles." I could not see far for the heavy

*The Grecian water god.

Wisconsin River slough-timber full of drifted logs, slabs, lumber and all kinds of muss, about ten feet high in some places, reached about to where now Main street meets the canal at Portage. Somewhere along the hills, in the neighborhood where Hettinger's brewery now stands, I got sight of the fort buildings. I felt relief. In a short time, I entered the comfortable hostelry, the old Franklin House. "O, my God!" exclaimed Ashlum, the keeper of the house, "I thought you were dead." I said, "I guess not yet." "Where is Mr. Slifer and the other young man?" I said, "The young man is a little behind me, but he may soon turn up." And he did after awhile. Mr. Slifer came another route through the woods, and appeared also toward evening.

Next day, being the third time of my going out in the woods, I went to Silver Lake again, taking an ax with me, and made then and there at the very place where I now reside my claim, with a settled determination of the black hussar sort—"victory or death." I marked out what I called 160 acres, cutting my name on the trees. I chopped one tree down (which blistered my hands), cut some underbrush away and knelt down and passed through my mind the Lord's Prayer. Meanwhile, a beautiful bird flew over my head—of good omen, thought I. Subsequently, I built me a tight and snug log house, 14x18 feet, with one door and one window, sash 8x10 inch glass. I built my log house all alone. Nobody would nor could help me. Now and henceforth, I commenced work in earnest, chopping, digging, roofing, burning and clearing up general chaos around; frequently went hunting for game, of which there was plenty, and for other provender.

When I came to the Indian lands in 1849, I had cash, $150. My dear mother sent to me, in the years 1849 and 1850, $130 cash, and, in May, 1850, a chest containing tools and clothing from Philadelphia. Late in the fall of 1849, I surveyed the town line from the southeast corner stake of Sec. 33, Town 13, Range 9, and ran it westward into the Indian land four miles, or four sections, for the purpose of getting my claim fixed as near as possible according to the Government survey. I found it to be nearly correct, when finally the lands of the Menomonee Purchase were surveyed by order of the Government in the summer of 1851. I had already, in 1851, about 40 acres fenced and 20 under good cultivation, which can be seen marked on the original maps of the United States survey of 1851.

In December, 1849, I measured the depth of the water of Silver Lake, and found the westerly part, deepest measurement, sixty-two feet; and the easterly part, deepest measurement, twenty-two feet. During the first years of my living here, Silver Lake used to be lower in summer-time than it is now. The marsh at the easterly end of the lake was of a very loose and swampy nature—a perfect quagmire; high wire-grass and reeds grew there. When the road was built across this marsh, in 1851 and 1852, it took large quantities of log timber, brush and earth to make it passable. Still it sunk and remained very aqueous for years, needing fixing and filling up. It dammed Silver Lake up considerable, I think in the summer-time over two feet; for I could go on my marsh westward, joining Silver Lake, safe with a horse-team in the summer time, before the road we now call pinery road was there. The waters of Silver Lake were full of fish of fine quality. I caught some weighing thirty-two pounds. In the spring and fall time, its surface was sometimes covered with various kinds of wild ducks and other water-fowls. At times, I would throw a stone into the lake, and a cloud of wild ducks would rise above me to fire into, and sometimes a dozen or so would come down with a bounce to my feet, on dry land—plenty of fun.

In the fall of 1849, some prospectors, travelers and some actual settlers appeared at Ft. Winnebago and vicinity. Some traders put up at the fort, and a few, with a very small stock, built shanties at the portage in the woods. Next year and henceforth, dickering and merchauting improved considerable. The place at present called the city of Portage was nicknamed "Gaugeville" for awhile, because a "hard set" had gathered there. In 1850, a good many excellent settlers came to the Indian lands and made homes; also a lot of quasi and sham settlers made their appearance whereabouts—the worst kind of settlers in a new country. But, after all, all of them together, myself included, made up a population good enough for this wilderness; and the consequences were and are, what you see now, dear reader—grand city of Portage, with first-rate people therein and thereabouts.

I cannot give you an adequate representation of the privations and pleasures of frontier settler life, or an understanding of its reality. Still, I will give you a little of my experience. We hear of military and pinery roads. Where do they lead to? Green Bay and the pinery. Just as good, as far as you are concerned, as leading to nowhere; they are only tracks through the dark, wild woods and grassy wilderness, scarcely recognizable when you see or meet them. There were some Indian trails, but leading to nowhere in particular. Wherever you went into the woods, swamps, etc., you came in contact with big grass, underbrush, rotting debris, water and mire, very uncomfortable to get through in wet weather. Lucky was he who had an ax, handsaw and hatchet to build a hut for shelter; and also a gun and plenty of ammunition. There was danger of ugly Indians; there was also plenty of wild game to be had. Fish, wild-fowls, deer and coons were abundant. I sometimes met with eight or more deer in one drove. Such common things as salt, bread and potatoes were luxuries if you could get hold of any, but to do so was not very easy. You had to eat the wild, natural provender in the best way you knew how to prepare it; sometimes in a very insipid way, with yellow marsh or lake water for drink, and nothing else most of the time. At night-time you heard all kinds of queer noises of wild animals, and sometimes the terrific screeching of Indians. Red foxes were plenty around here. Oftentimes they used to bark at night around my log house. One time, early in the morning, I went hunting and came on the ice of the Wisconsin River, a little above prospect Prospect Hill, near a heavy-timbered island, where I found myself at once surrounded by nine or ten big red foxes barking at me like ugly dogs. At another time, I came to a part of my claim which I called the Hirsch Dell; there, only about six feet from me, arose from out of the underbrush a monstrous deer, heavily built, the size of a stout three-year-old heifer, with very short, strong legs, enormous antlers and large, fierce eyes. The beast stared at me with defiance, and did not budge for some time. I had with me a double-barrel gun—one barrel rifle, loaded with bullet, and the other barrel being for shot, was loaded with big shot. Instantly, I was ready for battle, the triggers cocked, and sharply facing the wild beast. By-and-by, it moved a little backward from me. I also moved a little backward. So we continued moving from time to time further apart, till the deer was about five rods distant from me, when it turned around and trotted off. I felt relieved when I got so easily rid of the monster. There were various kinds of snakes—rattlesnakes included. I have killed thousands in the spring and summer time, often averaging a few hundred a day. The worst pests were the different species of ants. My land was full of these troublesome insects. Numerous ant-heaps stood like large beehives in every direction. By burning out their haunts, I finally subdued that tormenting animal in some degree. Countless gophers, who would root out my new-planted crops, had also to be destroyed; but the greatest danger to the frontier settler were the unexpected and disastrous wood and prairie fires when they came with a strong blast of wind.

Among the oldest, permanent and solid settled men of the city of Portage, whom I now call to mind, were and are, including some that are dead—Henry Merrill, William Armstrong, Dr. Prentice, J. J. Guppy, H. T. Haskell, Valentine Helmann, James Collins, W. R. Clough, Solomon Leech, John Graham, Anton Kleinert, Bemos Pixley, George Thakell and Alex. Carnagie.

The 12th day of February, 1850, I married Miss Louisa Slifer (the marriage taking place on her 20th birthday); she was born at the village of Trappe, Montgomery Co., State of Pennsylvania; her father, Samuel Slifer, had taken up the next claim, westward of my claim on Silver Lake, for a homestead, on the Indian land. My wife's parents, Mr. Samuel Slifer and his wife (her maiden name being Esther Scholl) of Pennsylvania, were descendants of the Palatinate emigrants of the seventeenth century, in the time of Louis the XIV. ("Grand Louis," His Most Christian Majesty, King of France, devastating poor South Germany with his infamous infernal dogs, like Turenne, Melac and Montelus, at a fearful rate; worse than the Huns and Mongolians.)

Squire S. Van Slyke, a young man, tied the "connubial knot," a little, young lawyer, a Mr. Soop, being witness. It happened in front of Mr. Slifer's log house, at Silver Lake, on the sod (being very fine weather), and under the "canopy of heaven." Here is the statement of the genuine document:

STATE OF WISCONSIN,) COLUMBIA COUNTY,) ss.

Be it Remembered—That at Fort Winnebago, in said County (being in the Woods), on the 12th day of February, 1850, Mr. Conrad Collipp and Miss Louisa Slifer were duly joined in marriage by me.

S. VAN SLYKE,
Justice of the Peace.

This, our marriage, was, I believe, the first legal marriage of white man and woman kind on the Indian lands, hereabouts. Momentous destiny! Glorious, independent bachelorhood now gone—evaporated to zero. The desperate plunge of life had now been made forever. I must confess I dreaded, in an uneasy, anticipative way, the so-called burden, care and slavery of married life. But be it said by me, the very reverse became the fact in my case: happiness, success, and entire contentment henceforth to this day.

God blessed our marriage with eleven children: eight girls and three sons; all born at Silver Lake. Jennie Octavia, was born the 8th of December, 1851, and was married to W. W. Lloyd the 27th of August, 1873; Louise Anna was born the 29th of January, 1854, and was married to D. C. Treadway the 15th of September, 1875; Sophia Augusta was born the 3d of November, 1855; Lydia Amanda was born the 24th of November, 1857, and was married to W. A. Krause the 22d of November, 1876; Katie, or Catharina, was born the 9th of December, 1859; Christine Elise was born the 20th of March, 1861; she died at the age of 12 years and 4 months, the 20th of July, 1873; she was a highly gifted girl. (I took the shock as calmly as possible, but it commenced to turn my hairs gray. Grim death had shot the center out of my dear children.) Lilly Ruth was born the 22d of January, 1863; Washington was born the 21st of February, 1865; Horace was born the 13th of May, 1867; Platon was born the 9th of May, 1869; Hildegard was born the 31st of May, 1871.

September the 9th, 1852, I received one part of my land, as a first actual settler, according to the pre-emption laws of 1842, at the Menasha land office. The other part, Oct. 20, 1852, under the same law, at the Oshkosh land office; it being 160 acres, more or less, in Sec. 31, Township 13, Range 9, and the east part of Lot 2, Sec. 6, Township 12, Range 9. In 1854, I rented land to Jurgens & Dreyer, for the manufacturing of brick. In 1855, they started the brickyard and ran it till 1865. In 1866, I took the brickyard myself and ran it, with good success, till 1875. Since 1878, the brickyard has been run by Adelt & Gonten.

In April, 1855, a wood fire swept like a hurricane in a terrible devastating manner over my land. I lost 90 cords of newly chopped wood, 110 rods of rail fence and many large trees, which stood like burning spires, and would come down at last with an awful crash. All my land, except the cultivated parts, looked like a black, dreary waste. I felt pretty rough at the time. The season of planting had arrived, but now my fields lay open. Matters, however, mended, and everything went on as smoothly as ever. In July, 1856, I laid out a road, four rods in width, over the center of Collipp's Point, from the narrowest part of Silver Lake northward to the town line, and from thence westward four rods in width on the town line to the one-quarter line, meeting there the land I had sold to Hon. J. J. Guppy, through which we had formerly fixed the road more westward. In the Spring of 1859, Hon. J. J. Guppy, Charles Haertel and I built a bridge, about twelve rods in length, over the narrowest part of Silver Lake. The first team drove over the bridge May 11, 1859. My part of the expense was $250 and one month's work with team. In 1874, the city of Portage took charge of the bridge as a public highway, and, in the winter of 1875, built an earth dam across the same place, where the bridge had stood. In 1875, I dedicated the same road I had laid out in 1851 to the city of Portage as a public highway. It was named Collipp avenue.

In the years of 1853 and 1854, I built a frame house, 14x22, and, in 1855, a barn, 20x30 feet, on my land on Lot 2, Sec. 6, Town 12, Range 9. A little east of these buildings, I built, in 1858, a convenient, solid brick house, two stories high above ground, and basement and cellars below. This building is 32x32 feet, with wing 20x22 feet. Since August, 1858, we have resided in this house.

Since 1854, I have planted a great many fruit trees, vines, ornamental trees and shrubbery, and we have had, since 1858, most every year plenty of apples, grapes, berries, etc. In 1869, I built, on Cook street, in the city of Portage, a brick store, twenty-two feet wide by seventy-five feet long, two stories high, with cellar under the whole building. In 1875, I built an addition of forty feet in length thereto, making the store now 115 feet long, now rented to Parry & Muir, who keep a large dry-goods establishment. I have been several times Assessor of the city of Portage, and have been of late years one of the city School Commissioners and County Supervisor of the Fifth Ward, and been elected to the last named offices again, this spring of 1880.

Dear reader, God has blessed all our family (excepting the sickness and death of one of our children) since our commencement, and onward till now with good health and plenty, thank God!

JONAS CONKLIN, son of Samuel and Margaret Conklin, was born in the town of Conklin, Broome Co., N. Y. His grandfather was the first settler there; his parents came to Fox Lake, Dodge Co., Wis., in the fall of 1846, remained there one year, and in 1847 removed to Courtland, Columbia Co., where his father died May 11, 1861; his mother is now living, and resides with a daughter, Mrs. Matilda Rockwell, at Fox Lake. Mr. Conklin came to Wisconsin in 1845, to Fort Winnebago; he spent seven months in the pineries of Portage Co., in 1846, then coming back, he worked for Henry Merrell, in the stone and lumber business, most of his time for seven years; he bought land in the town of Courtland, Sec. 3, Township 12, Range 12, 40 acres, and 40 acres of timber in Sec. 26, the first purchased in that township in 1846, next spring buying 40 acres more on Sec. 3, and at the present time he owns 100 acres located on Sec. 3, 20 acres on Sec. 26, and 40 acres on Sec. 33, all in the same town. Mr. Conklin was engaged in buying produce and furs most of the time for about fifteen years; he had charge of the canal here for about five years, and was engaged winters in freighting between this point and Milwaukee, while he had charge of the canal; although at present a resident of Portage, he owns and carries on his farm in the town of Courtland. He was Assessor of that town nine years in succession, and held various other offices in that town; he was elected Sheriff in 1878. He was married in the old Fort Winnebago, to Frances L. Shipley; she was born at Potsdam, N. Y.; they have three daughters—Frances J., Ella E. and Lula Belle.

W. W. CORNING, son of Warren Corning, Jr., and Rhoda (Prouty) Corning; his father died at Mentor, Lake Co., Ohio, in September, 1834; his mother is still living in Mentor, aged 78 years. The subject of this sketch was born in Mentor Aug. 29, 1829; in 1848, he went to Newark, Licking Co., Ohio, where he resided two years, going thence to Hebron in 1850, and remaining there until 1854; from there he removed to Columbus, Ohio, where he lived until 1856; going to Nashville, Tenn., in this year, he remained until the spring of 1857, returning to Licking Co.; in October, 1858, he came to Portage, and in March, 1859, engaged in the hardware business at his present location, corner of Wisconsin and Cook streets. Mr. Corning has been Mayor of Portage City two terms, and served as Alderman for many years; in 1872, he was a member of the Assembly, and is now a County Commissioner. He was married at Loveland, Ohio, Dec. 20, 1854, to Cornelia E. Smith; she was born in Cincinnati Dec. 3, 1836; they have five children—Anna M., born in Hebron, Ohio, now Mrs. S. E. Arnold, of Germantown, Juneau Co., Wis.; Nellie R., William Smith, Mary L. and Bella T., born in Portage. Mr. Corning is a member of the A., F. & A. M. Lodge, Chapter and Commandery, and of the A. O. U. W.

AGNES N. CORNWELL, born in Windsor, Vt., in 1820; her life-work has been teaching; she was educated in the Amherst Female Seminary and at Wilbraham Academy, Massachusetts; her first teaching was with her two brothers in a select school at Newton, Sussex Co., N. J. She was married in 1842 to Elijah C. Butz, who died in 1842, at Southport (now Kenosha), where he was in mercantile business; they had one daughter—Carrie A., who is now married and living in New Jersey; in 1847, Mrs. Cornwell taught the first school in Columbus, Wis.; in 1850, she came to Portage and opened a select school with seven pupils, in the old McFarland warehouse. In 1853, she married Lyman Cornwell, and soon afterward went to California and returned in 1857, on the death of her brother; before returning to California, they built the house where she now resides. Mr. Cornwell died in California in the year 1869; she owns her cozy home and also has considerable unimproved land in the State. She is a member of the First Presbyterian Church; she was a competent and conscientious teacher, and her faithfulness is attested by many grateful pupils.

MISS ANNA CROAK, chief dining-room girl at the Corning House, was born in Portage in 1858, and has lived all her life in this county. She is a Catholic; she is the veteran employe of the hotel, having worked under the Fox administration about three years; her quick step and pleasant smile are remembered by myriads of well-fed patrons of the Corning House.

G. J. COX was born in Minnisink, Orange Co., N. Y., Aug. 4, 1832; when G. J. was 5 years of age, his father, Calvin Cox, moved to Montrose, Susquehanna Co., Penn., where he died when the subject of this sketch was a small boy. His mother, Margaret L., now 75 years of age, still resides at Montrose. Mr. C. came to Wisconsin, locating at Wyoceua, in 1854; he remained there a little over a year, when he came to Portage and engaged in teaching until the year 1858; having studied law before coming West, he commenced the practice of his profession in 1858, and has since continued the business of lawyer. In 1861, he was elected County Judge, of Marquette Co.; from 1862 to 1868, was Assistant Assessor of Internal Revenue; in the years 1874 and 1875, was City Superintendent of Schools, and Alderman of Third Ward in 1879 and 1880. Mr. Cox was married at Wyoceua, Oct. 31, 1855, to Eliza A. Wood, daughter of Rev. Nathan Wood, who came to Wyoceua in 1846, and still resides there; her mother, Harriet Wood, died there Sept. 4, 1847, being the first person ever interred in the cemetery of that place; they have five children—Edward E., Hubert H., Margaret C., Mabel A. and Mary Alice. Mrs. Cox was born at Stockbridge, Madison Co., N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. C. and son are members of the Presbyterian Church, and Mr. Cox is a member of the lodge of I. O. O. F. of this city.

GEORGE CURTIS, Jr., attorney at law, was born at Brecksville, Cuyahoga Co., Ohio, Dec. 18, 1851; followed the business of farming and teaching school until November, 1876, when he began the study of law at Madison, Wis. Mr. Curtis has been in the practice of his profession at Portage since July 1, 1877. He was married at Lindina, Juneau Co., Wis., Dec. 24, 1876, to Alysia M. M. Gregory, daughter of Ezra and Martha Gregory, now residents of Glendale, Monroe

Co., Wis. Mr. and Mrs. Curtis have two children—George G., born May, 1878, and an infant son, born in February, 1880. Mr. Curtis was elected Justice of the Peace in April, 1880.

HENRY HALE CURTIS, attorney at law, was born at Brecksville, Cuyahoga Co., Ohio, Dec. 15, 1848; removed from there with his parents, George and Elizabeth Curtis, in 1856, to Mauston, Juneau Co., Wis., where they still reside. In 1875, he entered the law office of Winsor & Veeder, at Mauston. Mr. C. followed farming and school teaching; in 1867, he entered the Law Department of the State University, at Madison, from which he graduated in the class of 1870, and in July of that year came to Portage and began the practice of law; while in Juneau Co., Mr. C. was Court Commissioner, Justice of the Peace, Town Clerk and the incumbent of other local offices. He was married at Lemonweir, Juneau Co., Oct. 11, 1871, to M. E., daughter of John McNow, who was killed at the battle of Shiloh; they have three children—Alfred S., born September, 1871; Norman P., born February, 1875, and Nathan, born December, 1877.

DANIEL J. DALTON was born in the town of Springvale, Columbia Co., Wis., Aug. 14, 1853; son of Thomas J. and Mary A. Dalton, residents of Juneau Co., Wis.; entered Mauston High School at the age of 17; afterward attended the commercial college and State University at Madison; began teaching school winters at the age of 18; studied law while teaching, and afterward read law with J. B. Tayler, and was admitted to the bar in May, 1879. Mr. D. began practicing law in Portage in August, 1879; he is also in the insurance business; he is a member of the Guppy Guards, and attorney for the company.

JOHN R. DALTON was born at York, England, in January, 1835; came to America in 1849, locating at Buffalo, N. Y., for six months, after which he settled at Milwaukee, where he resided until 1854. In Milwaukee, Mr. D. attended school and learned his trade, that of a mason. In 1854, he came to Portage, which has since been his home. He was married, in Portage, to Emily Ellis, born in England; they have two children living—Reginald G. and George C. Mr. D. is a member of the lodge of A. F. & A. M. They have lost one infant child.

HENRY J. DARTON, freight engineer, C. M. & St. P. R. R.; born September, 1852, at Hartford, Wis.; his father was one of the earliest settlers of Hartford, his nearest neighbors then being nine miles distant; began railroad life in the summer of 1869 as fireman on C. M. & St. P. R. R., and was promoted to charge of engine in August, 1876, and has "run" continuously to date. Was married, July 21, 1878, to Miss Alice Dean, a niece of R. E. McMillan, a leading lumberman of Oshkosh, Wis.; they have one son—Harry Irving, born Jan. 4, 1880. On the 27th of April, 1879, he was seriously injured by an exploding torpedo on the track, near which he was standing. A fragment of the shell is still in the wounded leg. His run is on the Northern Division. He is well spoken of by "the boys."

JOHN B. DASSI was born in Lombardy, Italy, Feb. 11, 1825; emigrated to Germany in 1840, and to America in 1850; located in Milwaukee, and engaged in peddling two years; removed to Portage Nov. 6, 1854, having purchased property here in 1851; erected a residence in 1856; returned to Milwaukee in 1863, and engaged in clerking until 1869; removed to Portage, and, in 1870, engaged in present business. He was elected Justice of the Peace from 1876 to 1880; Alderman, from 1871 to 1878; member of and organized the Leiderkranz Singing Society; was President of that society, and is now Secretary; was connected with the I. O. O. F. from 1856 to 1873. Mr. D. was married in Milwaukee, Nov. 15, 1852, to Barbara Dofmeyer, a native of Bavaria, born Feb. 2, 1835; came with her parents to America in 1847. Mr. and Mrs. Dassi are members of the Irish Catholic Church. Mr. D. was organist of St. Mary's Catholic Church.

WILLIAM W. DATES. The subject of this sketch was born in the town of York, Racine Co., Wis., April 19, 1845; is the son of Abram and Polly C. Dates, who were early settlers of Racine Co.; they moved to the town of Ft. Winnebago, Columbia Co., in 1852; the father died in October, 1875, and his mother still lives on the homestead. William W.'s life was passed on a farm until he came to Portage in October, 1877, when he engaged in the flour and feed business, which business he still continues; also is one of the proprietors of the Dates' Flouring Mill, water and steam combined; owns a farm of 75 acres in Marcellon; he and his brother, George D., own the old homestead; George D. and William W., with their mother own the mill. Married Lizzie Jones in the town of Ft. Winnebago December, 1876; they have two sons—George E. and Fred.

WILLIAM M. DAVIE, machinist, was born 1820, in State of New Jersey; served his apprenticeship, as machinist, in New York City; from age of 12 to 18, was a seafarer, and made several voyages as a "whaler." He was married, in 1846, to Miss Mary L. Van Sands, of New Jersey. He has been connected with the N. Y. C. and the N. Y. & N. H. R. Rs.; he came West in 1854 and was master mechanic on the C. & M. R. R. ; this was the second railroad built in the State ; in 1873, he settled in Portage, where he still resides ; has worked for many different railroads, but is now in employ of C. M. & St. P. as machinist. Has three children—Mary E., William C. and Winnefred E. ; his daughter is now wife of T. T. Rhodes, and resides in Kansas. Owns a pleasant residence next to the "little brown church on the corner," situated on Wisconsin street ; he is a natural mechanic and a genial citizen.

MORTON E. DAVIS, freight conductor on St. P. R. R., was born in Madison Co., N. Y., in 1848 ; came West in 1856 and lived three years in Walworth Co., Wis. ; in 1859, moved to Hardin Co., Iowa ; his father was a real-estate speculator ; in 1860, he made Beloit his home ; spent nearly four years in Milton College, and graduated therefrom in 1864 ; in 1867 and 1868, he tried the business of buying, training and selling horses ; for the work he has taste and ability—seldom misjudges the capabilities of a horse. In 1868, he married Miss Euphemia L. Vincent, daughter of Christopher Vincent, of Rock County. He tried the livery business first in Edgerton, and then in Chicago ; the fearful epizootic in 1873 found him at 609 and 611 Cottage Grove Avenue, Chicago, in livery, with large stock of fine horses,—the result was bankruptcy ; his railroad life began as brakeman in the fall of 1874, on the Wisconsin Division of the C. & N. ; this he continued till the fall of 1875, when he tried his hand at the horse business again ; bought some fine Kentucky stock and trained them, and did well, until a mishap in September, 1876, set him back again ; then immediately went to braking again, on Sept. 15, 1876, for the C. M. & St. P. R. R., and after one year's experience, was given charge of the same train, which he still retains ; no accident has ever happened to his train ; he has had even another "horse experience," in 1865, he had a first-class training stable at Milton, Wis. ; had seventeen horses in charge, and all of them "fast ;" with the best of these, he made the eastern circuit two seasons ; his affliction this time was that of having "two much partner ;" he is now confining his attention to the "iron horse ;" has three children—Minnie E., born in 1872 ; Jesse M. in 1875, and Susie Burdick, called "Birdie," born in 1878 ; his parents live with him ; Mr. Davis is an Ancient, Free & Accepted Mason and a Knight of Pythias ; although a thoroughbred horseman, he was never intoxicated ; is devoted to his family, but has a lingering love for the "horse ;" is social, popular and respected.

CHAS. L. DERING. The subject of this sketch was born in Sumbury, Penn., Dec. 3, 1836, and came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1849, locating at New Diggings, LaFayette Co. ; lived there until the fall of 1863 ; is the son of Charles and Maria M. Dering ; his mother died at New Diggings in 1859, and his father died in Texas in 1875 ; the year 1863, he came with his father to Columbus, this county ; April 19, 1861, Chas. L. enlisted in Co. I, 3d W. V. I., at Shullsburg, entering the service as a private ; was first Color Sergeant of his regiment, and afterward Sergeant Major ; then promoted to 2d Lieutenant of Co. I ; again promoted to 1st Lieutenant, and mustered out as 1st Lieutenant of Co. B, July 24, 1863 ; was in all the battles his regiment participated in, until he was wounded at the battle of Cedar Mountain, Aug. 9, 1862 ; Mr. Dering was educated at Platteville Academy, Wis., graduating from that institution in 1855 ; also spent one year at Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y., and on account of ill health was obliged to leave college before completing his course ; had taught school several terms before entering college, and one term afterward ; then commenced the study of law in Shullsburg, in the spring of 1858, and admitted to the bar in the fall of 1859 ; engaged in the practice of his profession, at Columbus, with Gerry W. Hazleton, and remained with him twelve years ; in 1875, dissolved partnership ; in November, 1878, in connection with Mr. Smith, purchased the abstract business of Myerson & Yule, and continued his practice in Columbus, until the spring of 1879 ; still continues to practice here ; also engaged in abstract and insurance business ; was U. S. Assistant Assessor of Internal Revenue from 1864 to 1866 ; was Village Clerk from the organization of Columbus, in 1864, to the time of city incorporation ; then served one year as City Clerk ; Supervisor of Second Ward one term ; afterward, Supervisor from Third Ward one term ; winter of 1867, was Assistant Sargeant-at-Arms of State Senate ; member of School Board four years before the city incorporation ; three years member of Board of Education ; elected to State Senate in the fall of 1878. Mr. Dering was married at Waterford, Erie Co., Penn., Oct. 7, 1874, to S. Ada Maxwell ; she was born in Chenango Co., N. Y. ; have two children—Jesse G. and Irma.

CHARLES DEVLIN, engineer on C. M. & St. P. R. R., was born Nov. 4, 1840, near Dublin, Ireland ; when a mere lad, he had a great desire to travel, and studied navigation with enthusiasm ; he went to Canada in 1854, clerked nearly two years, and in 1856, began work in the machine shop of the Great Western Railway of Canada ; he was afterward a fireman, and was promoted to the charge of an engine in 1861, which he ran until 1867 ; for a year and a half he represented Neyland & Co., Jefferson, Texas, as salesman for all leading kinds of country produce; afterward he ran a stationary engine, at Sedalia, Mo.; then was with the A. & N. R. R. about a year and a half, and then the same length of time with the P. & Ft. W. R. R.; was then a year in the C. & N. W. Ry. shops; in July, 1873, he engaged as engineer on the C. M. & St. P. R. R., and has been in continuous service to date; he was married on the 3d of January, 1876, to Miss Lucy Horning, a resident of Portage, born in 1848; they have one child, Kitty Maud, born Oct. 31, 1876. The family are Catholics. She was fifteen years in the employ of W. D. Fox, at the Railroad House, as chief cook; he is a member of the "Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers;" no one was ever injured on his train; he is a Liberal Democrat; this season he has erected a fine brick residence on the corner of Dunn and Marion streets.

CHARLES C. DOW, Postmaster; was born in Piermont, Grafton Co., N. H., June 2, 1836; lived in New Hampshire until he came to Wisconsin in 1856, and located in Portage, engaging in clerking in a hardware store for Josiah Arnold about one year, and clerked in other stores until April 9, 1861, when he enlisted as a private in Co. G, 2d W. V. I.; was in the first and second battles of Bull Run, battles of the Wilderness, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, and all the other engagements that his regiment was engaged in, except South Mountain and Antietam; was wounded and disabled at the first and second battles of Bull Run, and was mustered out June 30, 1864, as First Lieutenant commanding the company, having had command of the company more than a year prior to this time; returning to Portage, but remaining only a few weeks; went to Gulf Department with the 21st Iowa; in the fall of 1865, he returned to Portage, and clerked in the County Clerk's office for a year; he then clerked in a dry goods store, until 1867; then with W. W. Corning until he went to Madison with Secretary of State L. Breese; remained with him four years; returned to Portage, and has been connected with the U. S. postal service since, on the C. M. & St. P. R. R., until he received an appointment of Postmaster, in the spring of 1880. He was married in Portage, Dec. 16, 1867, to Annie E. Jones; they have three children—W. Corning, Carrie Louisa and Charles Homer. Mr. Dow is a member of the A. F. & A. M., and a Knight Templar.

THOMAS W. DREW was born in Portsmouth, Hampshire, England, July 4, 1839, and resided there until coming to Portage in the spring of 1855; in 1856, he commenced clerking for O. Ward, with whom he remained three years; then going into the grocery business himself, which he continued until the breaking-out of the war of the rebellion, when he enlisted in Co. A, 2d Ill. L. A., in April, 1861, and served four and a half years in the same company and regiment; was in all the battles his regiment participated in; was with Gen. Grant when he was a Colonel; participated in the Vicksburg and Red River campaigns, serving as a private; was mustered out in the fall of 1865, and returned to Portage and resumed business as a grocer, which he continued alone until March, 1879, when Mr. Pugh was admitted to partnership in the grocery business, Mr. Drew dealing in farmers' produce in addition to his other business. He was married in Portage, Feb. 1, 1868, to Minnie Williamson; she was born in Canada; they have four children—Jennie, Minnie, Della and Lillie.

GEORGE W. DUSENBURY was born in Canaan, Columbia Co., N. Y., July 27, 1851; son of Morgan H. and Almira Dusenbury, who came to Pardeeville when the subject of this sketch was about 8 years old, and where his boyhood days were passed upon his father's farm, located four miles east of Pardeeville, also lived in the village a short time; then coming to Portage, he attended school for a year, when he went into the employ of the C. M. & St. P. R. R., and has continued with the company to the present time, with the exception of one year. Married Morgia A. Thompson, a native of Rhode Island, Oct. 22, 1873, at Pardeeville; they have two children—Ovie V. and Bartie. Mr. D. is a member of A. F. & A. M., with the degree of Knight Templar.

JOHN DULLAGHAN was born in County Louth, Ireland, Nov. 23, 1831; came to America in 1850; was in New York City for a short time; removed to South Carolina in 1851, and to Charleston, S. C., in the spring of 1852, and returned to New York same spring; he then went to the Isthmus of Panama and worked for the Pacific Mail Steamship Co. at what is known as Navy Bay, working for the company eleven months, building piers, etc.; April, 1853, he went to California and remained there mining until 1858, when he returned to Europe, where he was married July 5, 1858, to Ann McShean, County Armagh, Ireland, a native of that county; they have seven children—James Joseph, Stephen M., John, Mary Ann, Margaret, Edward and Elizabeth; was engaged in Newry, County Armagh, Ireland, in the grocery and provision business, there ten years; when he came to Wisconsin in 1868 and located in Portage; engaged in the business of grocery and liquor dealer, etc., since coming here, and has remained in it ever since. Mr. and Mrs. D. are members of St. Mary's Church, and of St. John's Literary and Benevolent Association.

WILLIAM MARSHAL EDWARDS (drug clerk with John Graham); was born in Milwaukee, March 15, 1850; son of Samuel and Sarah (Keene) Edwards; came to Portage with his parents in 1851; in 1860, removed to Winona, where he lived until 1867; commenced learning the drug business with his father in Winona in 1864; has been with Mr. Graham since 1867. Married in Portage, Sept. 5, 1875, to Lizzie J. Baxter, daughter of D. R. Baxter, of Sauk Co. Mr. Edwards is a member of three branches of the Masonic Order, the Lodge, Chapter and Commandry.

WILLIAM EDWARDS, lock-tender on the Portage Canal, which connects the Wisconsin and Fox Rivers; he was born in Wales Oct. 15, 1830; his parents came to the United States in 1832, and settled in Deerfield, Oneida Co., N. Y., where they resided until their death. He was married in March, 1855, to Miss Johanna C. Gray, of Deerfield, N. Y.; in March, 1855, they came to Portage, and this county has been their home to present date, 1880; he lived seven years on a farm near Portage; on Sept. 22, 1864, he enlisted in Co. B, 22d W. V. I.; he was on detached duty until the close of the war; soon after the war, was nearly two years in railroad service as foreman at the yards in Portage, of C. M. & St. Paul R. R.; he was then night watchman in Portage for eight years, and was then City Marshal two years; has been nearly two years in charge of Government interests on the canal, with the nominal appointment of lock-tender; he has been thoroughly identified with the growth and improvement of Portage. He is a Republican, but has held office ten years in Portage, which is a Democratic city; they have no children. Himself and wife are members of the M. E. Church. Owns an attractive home on Cook street.

HENRY EMDER is a native of Prussia, born Aug. 27, 1831; came to America May 1, 1850; was in New York and Boston until he came to Milwaukee, in 1851, where he remained until 1853; then removed to Madison, where he resided until 1855, when he came to Portage. Was engaged in the railway business before coming to this city. From 1855 to 1858, was clerk in a grocery; since in the hotel business; was proprietor of the National Hotel for ten years. In 1870, erected his elegant hotel, which he has successfully managed up to present time. Mr. E. was married in Milwaukee, July 23, 1854, to Pauline Arsand; she was born in Prussia. They have five children—Louisa, Emma, Pauline, George W. and Charlie H. Is one of the oldest members of the I. O. O. F.; also member of Leidekrantz Society.

MRS. REBECCA L. EMERTON, widow of Thomas J. Emerton; was born May 15, 1810, in Northfield, Merrimac Co., N. H.; she is daughter of Benjamin and Lucy Hoegg Rogers. She was educated in the public schools of her native town, and taught several terms before her marriage. She was married Feb. 23, 1833, to Thomas J. Emerton, of Grafton Co., N. H. He was born March 15, 1805; he was a successful farmer in the East, and enjoyed the confidence of his fellow-citizens; held several town offices, and was several times elected to the Legislature. In 1851, the family came to Fort Winnebago and bought the farm which he carried on seventeen years; in 1868, he moved to Westfield, Marquette Co., where he died on the 14th of January, 1870, leaving one daughter and two sons—Benjamin J., born Jan. 19, 1835; Lucy R., born Sept. 21, 1838, and Andrew J., born Aug. 24, 1841. Her daughter married Robert Cochrane, and lives in Portage; her sons are married, and are farming in Fort Winnebago. She owns some real estate in Wisconsin and a pleasant home on Conant street; her young granddaughter resides with her. She is a Presbyterian. She is threescore and ten, and is cheerfully nearing the sunset land.

FRANK B. ERNSPERGER, merchant, Opera House; born Oct. 14, 1838, in Rockford, Wood Co., Ohio. His parents are of Swiss ancestry. Began commercial life as a dry-goods clerk, at age of 14; after 1841, his parents lived in Sandusky Co., Ohio; at age of 20, he located in Fulton Co., Ind., and continued as salesman; in 1861, he went into trade for himself, at Rochester, Ind., with a large stock of general merchandise. He was married in May, 1861, to Miss Mary A. Lyon, formerly of Pennsylvania. He had a large trade for many years, being the leading house of the city, and doing both a retail and a jobbing trade; he closed his business there in 1879, and opened business in Portage on 1st of January, 1880, in the elegant Opera House Store; keeps good stock of dry goods, boots, shoes, and hats and caps. Has four children—Lillie V., Cecil R., Laura M. and Edgar B. He is a member of I. O. O. F., and is a Royal Arch Mason. Is a thorough temperance man and an active Methodist. Previous to 1880, his history was connected with another State, but he is rapidly becoming identified with the city wherein are his commercial interests and his chosen home.

CHRISTIAN P. ETTEN was born at Muffendorf, Rhine Prussia, March 31, 1839; was educated as a musician, and served in the military band of the Prussian Third Grenadier Guard. After leaving that, he played one year at home, and then came to America, arriving in Chicago in March, 1864, where he remained three years; lived at Rockford two years, and then came to Portage, where he has since resided, except one year spent in Madison, teaching music and as organist of St. Raphael's Church, which position he still holds. He teaches vocal and instrumental music. He was married at Kenosha, Wis., March 5, 1866, to Amelia Toemmel, who was born in Mering, Prussia, Nov. 1, 1847. They have six children—Fannie, born in Rockford; Lizzie, John B., Mary B., Albert, and Emma L. M., born in Portage; Joseph, died in Chicago, aged 5 months. They are members of the Catholic Church.

MARTIN FARRAR, passenger engineer on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway; was born in April, 1836, in Vermont. He began railroad life at the age of 19, as fireman on the Rutland & Washington Railway, and he continued with that road eight years, the last one of which was as engineer. He was married, in 1862, to Miss Hannah Driscoll, of Vermont; came West in May, 1863, and engaged as engineer for the St. Paul Road, and lived in Milwaukee till 1866, when he moved to Portage, where he still resides and continues in the engineer service. He has one son, born October, 1865, and named George. Mr. Farrar belongs to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; his neighbors report him as a reliable, candid man; his residence is No. 28 Franklin street.

EDWARD FINK was born in Prussia Jan. 19, 1839; came to America in 1854; located in Cleveland, Ohio, one year, Sandusky two and a half years, Norwalk one year; came to Portage, Wis., April, 1859, and has since been engaged in the bakery, restaurant and confectionery business, which he began in 1854, most of the time since. Mr. F. was married at Portage, March 24, 1861, to Teresa Kettler, who was born in Prussia. They have six children living—Amarudie H., Henry L., Anna M., Willie C., Freddie E., Edward Daniel Emil; Carl, born June 19, 1872, died at the age of 4 months and 11 days.

ALEXANDER D. FORBES, deceased, was born in Madrid, N. Y., in 1823. He early engaged in the mercantile business in Waddington, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., where he remained till he came to Wisconsin in 1856. He and his brother, W. W. Forbes, engaged in general merchandising in Portage till 1870. He was married on the 7th of August, 1860, to Miss Carrie E. Baxter, of Prairie du Sac, Wis. They had four children—Frederick, born Feb. 18, 1863, and graduated, in 1880, from the high school in Portage; William R., born June 22, 1865; Carrie A., born Dec. 17, 1867; Frankie, born March 13, 1870, and died April 9, 1871. He owned a farm of 320 acres, and one of 170 acres, both in township of Arlington, Columbia Co., and a fine brick residence on Conant street, besides other real estate in the city. This property Mrs. Forbes still retains. When Mr. Forbes began business here, only three stores were in Portage. He was a careful, quiet, successful business man, attended closely to his business, and was devoted to his family. He took but little interest in politics. He was a patient sufferer for five years with consumption, and he died Jan. 12, 1871. The residence on Conant street was built and fitted up in 1865, and Mrs. Forbes and family continue to live in their pleasant homestead. No family is more highly respected.

J. C. FORBES was born in Aurora, Erie Co., N. Y., July 8, 1828; lived there and in the vicinity until coming to Kingston, Green Lake Co., Wis., in July, 1861, where he remained for seven years; removed to Portage in 1867, and engaged in his present business, which he still continues to follow, that of watchmaker and jeweler, the same business he has been engaged in for the last thirty years. Married in the town of Marilla, N. Y., Aug. 7, 1851, to Betsey M. Ells; she was born in Evans, Erie Co., N. Y.; they have six children living—James S., Melissa M., Henry M., Samuel L., Frederick J., and George C.—lost two children, one daughter, Amelia, who died at the age of 4 years and 5 months, and one son, Sherman, at the age of 10 months. Mr. F. is a member of the Temple of Honor.

CHARLES FOSTER was born at Fox Lake, Dodge Co., Wis., May 10, 1855; son of Lucius and Margaret Foster. His father was born in Watertown, N. Y., and settled in Jefferson, Jefferson Co., before the admission of Wisconsin as a State; in 1848, located at Fox Lake, and engaged in mercantile business; removed to Melrose in 1859, and carried on hotel and lumber business for seven years; then went to Sparta and engaged in the mercantile business for several years, since which time he has been farming in La Fayette, four and one-half miles from Sparta. Charles, the subject of this sketch, remained with his parents until 1875, then became connected with the railroad eating-house at Sparta, remained there one year; since that time, until Jan. 12, 1880, with W. D. Fox in the Corning House at Portage, and at present with A. E. Smith in the same house. He is a member of the A. O. U. W. Mr. Foster's mother was a native of Great Bend, Penn.

JOHN FOSTER was born in County Antrim, Ireland, March 16, 1820; came to the town of Jackson, Washington Co., N. Y., in the spring of 1847; lived there until the fall of 1850, then came to Buffalo, Marquette Co., Wis., and engaged in farming, dealing in live stock, butchering, etc.; resided there until the fall of 1869, then came to Portage in the fall of 1869; in the spring of 1870, commenced dealing in general produce and dressed meats for the mining regions of Wisconsin and Michigan, which he discontinued six or seven years ago; he has been dealing in live stock since 1870, which business he still follows, also extensive dealer in wool; while a resident of Buffalo, was Supervisor and Justice of the Peace. Mr. Foster was married in Portage, May 2, 1861, to Margaret Galloway, a native of Fyfehire, Scotland; they have three children—James A., Jennie H., George G. Mr. Foster and his partner, Mr. Reid, own a large ranch in Saline Co., Neb., on which they have 275 head of cattle.

W. D. FOX was born in Richmond, Ontario Co., N. Y., Dec. 6, 1824, and lived there until 1843; then went to Black Rock, Erie Co., N. Y., remained there until 1845; then to Ohio near Wooster, Wayne Co.; came to Milwaukee in the spring of 1847, lived there a few months, then came to Watertown and lived two years, where he was engaged in the milling business; from Watertown he moved to Kingston and continued in the same business until spring of 1857; in May, 1858, came to Portage and engaged in the hotel business being virtually proprietor of the Veeder House, hotel was burned two years later; in April, 1860, went to Faribault, Minn., September, 1860, and took charge of the depot and eating-house, until it burned in the winter of 1862-63; early in 1868, took charge of the railroad eating-house and hotel at Milwaukee until 1870, and was for a portion of the same time partner in the Plankinton and Newhall Houses of Milwaukee; after returning to Portage in June, 1870, he took charge of the railroad eating-house and hotel here; in 1873, sold out the Milwaukee Union Depot eating-house business; in 1876, opened the Corning House, remodeled it and ran it until he sold it to A. E. Smith, Jan. 1, 1880; he took possession of the Cameron House at La Crosse, Wis., March 1, 1880, which he now conducts; he owns and runs seven farms in Martin and Faribault Cos., Minn. Married in Fond du Lac, Dec. 19, 1855, to Alvina Smith, daughter of Asa Smith, who settled in Fond du Lac in an early day. Mr. A. Smith died in St. Paul three years ago; Alvina Smith was born in Mansfield, Ohio. Mr. F. is the son of George and Hulda (Sheldon) Fox; both parents died in New York State at Richmond; they have one child, Hattie M., now attending Bishop Whipple's school at Faribault, Minn.

MISS DORA FRUND, pastry cook at the Corning House; was born in 1857, in Germany; came to United States in 1865. Her parents are farmers. She has worked out since she was 14 years of age, and has been in the hotel nearly four years. She is a Methodist. She is responsible for the "pies and things" which are "taken" so freely from the tables of the Corning House.

WILLIAM FULTON was born in Keighley, Yorkshire, England, May 12, 1843; educated to the drug and grocery business in Skipton, England; came to America Feb. 22, 1866, and to Wisconsin same year, and located in Portage about March 1, 1866. For some time after coming here, was employed by the C. M. & St. P. R. R. Co.; clerked for N. H. Wood & Co.; also for John Fulton; purchased present business Dec. 26, 1872, with Alex Thompson; buying Thompson out in 1889, he has since carried on the business alone. Was married Jan. 22, 1869, in Waukesha Co., Wis., to Agnes T. More; she was born in Glasgow, Scotland. They have two children—Agnes A., aged 10 years, and Mary H., aged 5 years. Mr. and Mrs. F. are members of the Presbyterian Church, and Mr. F. belongs to the Temple of Honor. Mr. Fulton carries on the business which was originally established by T. M. McMillan.

JAMES FYFE, born in Scotland Aug. 8, 1837; came to America in 1854, and located in Chicago, where he remained until 1860; then going to Davenport, Iowa, where he was employed in the C. R. I. & P. R. R. shops (then the Miss. & Mo. R. R. Co.) From Davenport, he went to Bloomington, Ill., working for the C. A. & St. L. R. R. Co.; then returning to Chicago in 1864, and remaining there until 1865, when he came to Portage, where he started a general jobbing and repair shop (iron work); commenced the manufacture of plows in the fall of 1877; his step-son is at present associated with him in business. Married Marion Crow at Davenport, Iowa, Aug. 22, 1860; she was born in Dumfrieshire, Scotland. They have four children—George C., Fannie McD., Marion C. and James L.; Mrs. Fyfe has a son by a previous marriage—John C. Anderson. Mr. F. has been Supervisor of Second Ward, and City Engineer; he is a member of the A. F. & A. M., and is also Secretary of the Curling Club.

STEPHEN P. GAGE (deceased) was born in Vermont in May, 1813; he removed to Pennsylvania at the age of 14. He was married, Jan. 1, 1831, to Miss Lavinia Maria Baird, of Crawford Co., Penn., who was born in Massachusetts in 1814. Mr. Gage was a successful farmer, and a natural mechanic; he lived on the old homestead in Crawford Co., Penn., till November, 1858, when he sold out, came West, and bought a farm in Medina, where he lived two years, and then rented the farm and began hotel life; in 1860, he was keeping hotel at Beaver Dam, and afterward was four years at the "Blue Tavern," in Scott Township, Dodge Co., Wis.; they had large patronage from the line of stage coaches running between Portage and Beaver Dam—was often called upon during the night to get supper for as many as thirty teamsters and travelers; in 1865, he exchanged his farm for the City Hotel at Portage, which is now the property of Mrs. Gage. Mr. Gage died on 31st of May, 1873; at time of death had begun preparations to build a large brick hotel—much of the material being already on the ground; a fire in 1877 destroyed the barn and a portion of the hotel; by rebuilding and repairing, the property has been placed in better condition. Mrs. Gage and her son carry on the business. The hotel is favorably located, being on a corner near the business center. She also owns 60 acres of woodland. They had nine children—Wheeler W., Myron M., Richard, Julia (dead), William, Oliver, Stephen, Lavina and Lucy (dead). The family affiliate with the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Gage was Alderman at time of his death; his neighbors speak of him as a good man in all the relations of life.

C. R. GALLETT was born in town of Benton, Yates Co., N. Y., Jan. 6, 1833; lived there until 12 years of age, then moved to Petersburg, Rensselaer Co., N. Y.; remained there two years; then went to Penn Yan, N. Y.; after remaining there a short time, he entered Lima Seminary, at Lima, Livingston Co., N. Y.; after completing his studies there, he was engaged as a teacher of public schools of his native county; came to Wisconsin in 1854; came to Portage in 1855; his first business was surveying and engineering, which he followed until 1860, when he entered the mercantile establishment of N. H. Wood & Co., as clerk; afterward with the firm of Wood, Loomis & Osborn; in 1863, he commenced business for himself; member of the firm of Wood, Loomis & Co. about two years; afterward N. H. Wood & Co., until 1869, Mr. Gallett being the only partner of Mr. Wood in 1869, when the present firm of Loomis, Gallett & Breese was formed. Mr. Gallett has given some attention to his farming interests since 1865. Married at Portage May 5, 1865, to Lydia V. Wells; she was born at Pittsfield, Mass.; they have five children—Sarah, Henry W., Anna, Robert M. and Charles H. Mr. Gallett is a member of the I. O. O. F., A. O. U. W. and A. F. & A. M.; for two years he was President of the Curlers' Club. He served as Bridge Commissioner two years, Alderman several terms, Mayor three terms, member of the Assembly in 1879; while he was Mayor he held positions as follows: President of the Portage Manufacturing Company, President of the Waterhouse Manufacturing Company, C. P. of the I. O. O. F. Encampment, N. G. of I. O. O. F. Lodge; all these offices, together with his business interests, demanded more attention than it would seem possible for one man to devote to them, but in every position to which Mr. Gallett has been called, he has been found capable of discharging the duties thereof satisfactorily.

GEORGE N. GATES was born in Portage Sept. 18, 1852; son of John and Almira (Austin) Gates; his father died here Aug. 2, 1872; mother now resides in this city; father carried on the grocery and livery business; he came to Portage in the spring of 1851; when he first came, he carried on the dry-goods and grocery business for a time. He also held some positions of trust—Assessor, etc. George succeeded his father in business; was in the grocery business for two years and sold out, and has since continued in the livery business.

FERDINAND GERSTENKORN, blacksmith, in machine-shops of C. M. & St. P. R. R., at Portage; born Jan. 1, 1835, in Germany; served an apprenticeship in the old country and reached the United States in 1854; spent a year and a half in Milwaukee; then in fall of 1855 went into the employ of old Horicon Railroad, at Horicon Junction, under foreman Alexander Thomas; in summer of 1861, began work at Milwaukee, for C. M. & St. P. R. R.; in January, 1866, was transferred to Portage, Ed. Kilbridge being in charge; and through all the changes of administration, he has remained continuously to date. He was married at Horicon on June 13, 1858, to Miss Bertha Jesse; have buried four children; three are living—Earnest, born in 1862; Bertha, born in 1866; Paul, born in 1873. Since 1859, he has been a member of the I. O. O. F.; has a fine brick residence, No. 444 Wisconsin street.

B. F. GOODELL was born in Ashtabula Co., Ohio, July 12, 1843; when about 7 years of age, he removed with his mother to Marquette Co., Wis., where he was married, May 16, 1865, to Mary L. Waldref; two children have been born to them—Mary A. and Guy F. Mr. Goodell has been in the newspaper business for many years, being now one of the proprietors of the Wisconsin State Register.

PHILIP GOODMAN, dealer in ready-made clothing and merchant tailoring ; was born in Bavaria Feb. 2, 1846, and came to America in 1861 to Pontiac, Mich., where he remained only a short time, moving to Port Huron, where he lived one year ; he then went to Rochester, N. Y., where he remained three years. Married Sarah N. Cardoza in Rochester in 1866 ; she was born in London, England ; they have two sons—Morris W. and Louis.

DARIUS A. GOODYEAR was born in Sopronius, N. Y., Aug. 9, 1822 ; is the son of John and Julia (Bradley) Goodyear ; when an infant, his parents removed to Genesee Co., N. Y., near Batavia ; lived there only a year or two, when his parents died, and the children were taken back to Cayuga Co., where he remained until about 6 years of age, then to Chemung Co. ; remained in that county two years, when he went to Ft. Defiance, Ohio, where he remained until a lad of about 15 years of age ; during the next five years, was in Brooklyn and New York City most of the time up to 1841 ; was employed as clerk and collector for a large lumbering and commission house. In the year 1846, he engaged in business with his brother-in-law, C. C. Waterhouse (lumber-yards in Brooklyn and commission house in New York). Mr. Goodyear took charge of the lumber-yard in Brooklyn, and continued there up to the time of coming to Portage ; in the spring of 1858, engaged in the lumber business, and has continued in it ever since, manufacturing now at Mather, or Goodyear's Mills. He is the owner of large tracts of pine lands in this State. Mr. G. has been engaged in the lumber trade most of the time alone ; his son, Charles A., is now associated with him, and has been since 1876 in the mercantile business, which has been carried on in connection with his mills ; manufactures annually between four and five million feet. Mr. G. was married at Johnson's Settlement, near Havana, Schuyler Co., N. Y., in the spring of 1848, to Mary Ann Waterhouse ; she died in Brooklyn Dec. 7, 1849, leaving one son—Charles A., born Sept. 22, 1849 ; present wife was Sarah Holmes, married near Ithaca, N. Y., April 16, 1851 ; she was born in Solon, Cortland Co., N. Y., daughter of Linus and Mary (Lindsey) Holmes ; her father now resides with them ; he is a native of Colerain, Mass., and was born in 1797 ; her mother died in September, 1877, aged 81 years. Charles A. married Fannie, daughter of Alva Stewart, Sept. 11, 1872 ; they have three children—Alva, born April 18, 1875 ; Mary Bell, Sept. 19, 1877, and Ella Josephine, born at Tomah Feb. 23, 1880. Mr. Goodyear has made two trips to California. He has been Alderman one term.

HOMER S. GOSS, a native of Vermont ; born in Randolph, Orange Co., Vt., Nov. 30, 1838, and remained there until coming to Portage in April, 1861, and engaged in clerking for O. Ward in the dry-goods business ; remained with him a year and a half ; afterward with A. D. Forbes, dry-goods merchant, also remaining with him a few months, when he engaged with Miles & Co., and their successor, John Graham, where he still remains. Mr. G. is a member of the A., F. & A. M.

JAMES GOWRAN was born in Ft. Ann, Washington Co., N. Y., Oct. 13, 1833, and resided there until he enlisted in the 16th N. Y. Heavy Artillery, Co. I, at Troy, N. Y., Sept. 7, 1864, was mustered out of the United States service at Alexandria, Va., Aug. 1, 1865, and out of State service at Hart's Island, near New York City, same month ; came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1865, locating on a farm in the town of New Haven, Adams Co., when he came to Portage ; was in business one year with H. O. Lewis, and in trade by himself for last six years, selling agricultural implements. Mr. G. was married at Ft. Ann, April, 1856, to Mary Ann Stephens ; they have two children—Edward A. and Carlton C. Mr. G. is a charter member of the Temple of Honor and of the A. O. U. W.

ROBERT GRACE, passenger engineer, C. M. & St. P. R. R. ; born in Hyde Park, Dutchess Co., N. Y., in July, 1841 ; he is a son of Patrick and Catherine Grace ; his father was 21 years and 6 months in the employ of one man, James H. Wilkes, in Dutchess Co., N. Y. ; Robert is one of a family of sixteen children, of whom fifteen were boys ; only three are now living—Joseph, Oliver and the subject of this sketch ; he came West in the fall of 1855 ; began working for the railroad company, in 1857, as engine wiper, then as fireman, and, since 1864, as engineer. Was married, June 15, 1868, to Miss Louisa Dall ; she is a native of Wisconsin, and was twelve years chief dining-room girl at Fox's Hotel, in Portage ; have four children—Willie, born 1870 ; Oliver, 1875 ; Myra L., 1877, and Horace Greeley, 1880. He is an earnest and consistent Temperance man ; was a leading organizer, and is a loyal supporter of the Headlight Temple of Honor, No. 163, in Portage ; he owns a neat brick residence near the depot.

JOHN GRAHAM, a native of Scotland, son of Alexander and Jane (Duncan) Graham ; his father was born at Mullbrin, parish of Skerlig, county of Peebles, Scotland, March 22, 1800, died May 16, 1850, dying on his passage to this country ; his mother was born April 1, 1805, at Fordal, parish of New Battle, Scotland, and is still living and resides here. The subject of this sketch was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, April 14, 1833; came from Europe to Portage in the year 1850; was employed at Ft. Winnebago in the post office for a short time; afterward in the employ of Samuel Edwards as clerk; in the fall of 1856, he commenced business for himself—drugs and groceries—under the firm name of Miles & Co., W. K. Miles being his partner; they continued business together until the time of Mr. M.'s death, which occurred in 1867, since then Mr. Graham has been in business alone; he has one brother, James T., who resides at La Crosse, Wis. Mr. Graham married Fannie M. Edwards, a native of Pennsylvania. Mr. G. has been Alderman of Second Ward several years; Mayor one term, Supervisor, etc. Member of A. F. & A. M. Lodge and Episcopal Church.

R. O. Looney
PORTAGE, CITY.

ALPHEUS S. GREEN was born on the Atlantic Ocean, twenty-seven miles from Boston, in American waters, Nov. 8, 1812; son of Wells and Abigail (Ballard) Green, natives of London, England, they located at Gill, Mass., where they resided twelve years; removed to Utica, N. Y., remaining there four years; then to Rochester, N. Y., resided there eight years; removed to Buffalo, where they resided ten years; came from Buffalo to Portage, Wis., in 1852, where they have lived ever since. Mr. G. learned the baker's trade in Utica, and after coming to Portage worked one year for others, then commenced business for himself, which he carried on for five years; afterward served as Deputy Sheriff, two years under Robinson, two years under E. F. Lewis, and as Deputy Marshal for one year under Daniel Gindner; returned then to New York for ten months, but during the last seven years has been night watch. He was married at Utica, N. Y., Nov. 20, 1834, to Mary A. Jaques, born in Oneida Co., N. Y., in 1814; they have had three children, one of whom is living—Mary Jane, now Mrs. John Brown, of Portage.

LUCIUS E. GREENLEAF was born at Elyria, Ohio, Dec. 8, 1843; in 1845, he came with his parents to Markesan, Green Lake Co., Wis.; remained there one year; at Manchester one year; Kingston two years; Marquette two years, and then returned to Kingston, where the family resided twenty years; his father, Albert Greenleaf, resides at Kingston; his mother, Mary Greenleaf, died at Chicago in 1873. Mr. G. was in the employ of the American Express Co., at Milwaukee and elsewhere, thirteen years; engaged in dry-goods business at Kingston from 1869 to 1871, and since 1878 has resided in Portage; at present with Schulze Brothers, hardware dealers; while in the employ of the American Express Co., Mr. G. was at Hannibal, Mo., Quincy, Ill., Kansas City, Mo., and in other places, many years acting as route agent for that company. He was married at Randolph, Columbia Co., in 1870, to Isabella, daughter of George B. and Cynthia Willington; they have four children—Mary Belle, Jennie, Samuel George and Lucius Albert. Mr. G. is a member of the Odd Fellows' Lodge at Milwaukee.

REV. GEORGE P. GUILD, A. M., Pastor of Baptist Church, Portage; was born in Amherst, Mass., Jan. 19, 1832; he was born totally blind. His father, George Guild, was the first architect and builder who settled in Milwaukee; in 1835, he built the first church in Milwaukee, and was killed by accident in 1842, while building the First Unitarian Church, on Spring street; in June, 1843, his mother died, leaving six children, all of whom were provided for except the "blind boy;" "nobody wanted him;" by earnest personal effort and the aid of a few friends, he secured a place in the Institution for the Blind, in New York City, where he remained six years, leaving in 1850; that year, at the Eye Infirmary, he had performed an operation for an artificial pupil, which resulted in giving partial sight to one eye; he graduated from Shurtleff College, at Alton, Ill., in 1856, and immediately settled as Pastor of the Union Baptist Church, at Jerseyville, Ill.; he remained five years in that place, and was then five years Pastor at Waverly, and afterward two years in Jacksonville, followed by three years at Pittsfield, Ill.; he was four years agent for the American Printing House for the Blind, after which he was Pastor five years at Ahnapee, Wis.; in May, 1878, he became Pastor of the First Baptist Church of Portage. He was married June 30, 1859, to Miss Mary Moore, of Jerseyville, Ill.; the widowed mother, Mrs. Hannah Moore, aged 75, is a member of the family, and an example of Christian serenity. Mr. Guild has two children living—Leah and Betsey—and one, Jesse, died in childhood. He was a member of the first Republican State Convention ever convened in America, which was at Madison, Wis., in 1854; his only political speech was at Upper Alton, in 1856, when Republicanism was dangerously unpopular; he was acquainted with Abraham Lincoln; was one afternoon driving slowly past Lincoln's home, who hailed him and inquired who he was searching after; the reply was, "a Baptist Deacon;" to Lincoln's inquiry of what they were good for, Guild said it was their duty to keep the preacher over night, and take care of his horse. Lincoln says, "I'll be Deacon," and suiting the action to the word, began unhitching the horse, and both preacher and horse were welcome for the night; years afterward, at the White House, in Washington, Mr. Guild called to pay his respects to the Chief Magistrate, and Lincoln, instantly remembering the incident, asked, "Well, Elder, have you found a Deacon yet?" Mr. Guild is an earnest temperance advocate; while in Jerseyville, he was County Commissioner of Schools; during his pastorate he has built six churches, and baptized fully one thousand persons; like all the blind, his touch is exceedingly delicate—he will easily read his Bible through eight folds of handkerchief; one eye is still in darkness, and the other very dimly reveals the outer world, but happy sunshine dwells ever in the inner world, lit by the smile of God.

GEN. JOSHUA J. GUPPEY, of Portage, was born at Dover, N. H., Aug. 27, 1820; graduated at Dartmouth College, Class of 1843; was Captain of the college military company; was admitted to the bar at Dover, N. H., in April, 1846; settled in Wisconsin, at Columbus, Columbia Co., in the fall of 1846, and commenced practicing law; was appointed Colonel of the militia of Columbia Co., Feb. 6, 1847; was appointed Judge of Probate Sept. 29, 1849; was elected County Judge in Sept. 1849, for four years from Jan. 1, 1850; removed from Columbus to Portage in 1851; was re-elected County Judge in 1853, for four years from Jan. 1, 1854; was Superintendent of the public schools of the city of Portage, from 1858 to 1861; was commissioned Lieutenant Colonel of the 10th W. V. I., Sept. 13, 1861, and was in active service as such thereafter until July 25, 1862, when he was promoted to Colonel of the 23d W. V. I., and held that position till the end of the war. He participated in the first assault on Vicksburg, in December, 1862, and took part in the capture of Fort Hindman, Ark., and all the important battles around Vicksburg which resulted in the capture of that stronghold; his regiment was then transferred to the Department of the Gulf, and while in that department, on the 3d of November, 1863, at Carrion Crow Bayou, La., he was wounded and taken prisoner, but was exchanged in a short time; he was breveted Brigadier General from March 13, 1865, "for gallant and meritorious services during the war." In April, 1865, while absent in the military service, he was re-elected County Judge for four years, from Jan. 1, 1866, and has held that office ever since by successive elections, his present term closing Dec. 31, 1881. In 1866, he was again elected Superintendent of the public schools of the city of Portage, and held that office by successive elections till 1873.

CHARLES HAERTEL, son of Charles and Barbara Haertel, was born in Portage May 6, 1860; brought up in the brewing business with his father, whose family consisted of four girls and one son—Margaret, now Mrs. Fred W. Schulze; Lizzie, now Mrs. Jacob Best; Mary, now Mrs. Fred C. Starke, of Milwaukee; Emma and Charles. The subject of this sketch, Mr. H., is a member of the Turners' Society; also of the Hook and Ladder Company.

MRS. MARIA P. HASKELL, widow of Hon. H. S. Haskell, whose extensive biography appears in this volume, in the list of the "Illustrious Dead" of this county. She is the daughter of Sayles and Hannah (Hubbard) Hawley, of Vermont, and a native of Waterbury, same State; she was educated in the public schools of her native town, and in the Academy at Montpelier, Vt. Her first husband was William Pride, who died of consumption in 1846, leaving one daughter—Martha M., who married Emmons Taylor, of Portage; both the daughter and her husband are now dead. Mrs. H. was married in 1850 to Mr. H. S. Haskell, and soon after they removed to Columbus, where he practiced law nearly four years; previous to marriage, he had studied one year in the law office of Judge Noggle, and had previously read one year, in the office of Ex. Gov. Dillingham; he was a law partner of Judge Guppy. By her last marriage she had two children, both of whom died in infancy. Mr. Haskell died Feb. 13, 1879. She has no blood relatives in Wisconsin; she lives in her fine brick residence, on Howard street, which was erected by her husband not many years before his death; she is a member of St. John's Episcopal Church in Portage; she is a lady of culture and refined tastes, also of a quiet, retiring disposition, and, while attractive socially to friends, she is, nevertheless, more thoroughly attached to home than to society.

GEO. E. HELMANN was born in Prussia, Germany, Feb. 26, 1837; came to Portage, Wis. in April, 1853; engaged in carpentering for a few years; then clerking, until he commenced the grocery business, in which he has continued for the last fifteen years. Mr. Helmann was married, in Portage, to Johanna Schwartz, a native of Prussia. They have seven children—George, Lizzie, Willie, Anna, Emma, Otto, and an infant son. Mr. H. has been a member of the Odd Fellows' Lodge.

VALENTINE HELMANN, born at Snaledde (now Prussia), Sept. 29, 1831; came to America Aug. 1, 1847, landing at New York City; came to Richwood, town of Shields, Dodge Co., with his uncle, Sept. 15, 1847; came to Portage May 10, 1850; worked at the carpenter's trade most of the time, until the spring of 1864, although he engaged in insurance business in 1863; he served as Justice of the Peace several years; in the spring of 1864, he was elected City Clerk; again elected to that position in 1874; spring of 1875, once more elected Justice of the Peace; elected City Clerk in 1876 and 1877; City Treasurer from 1878 to 1880. Married at Portage, Nov. 2, 1851, to Margaret Ward; she died April 8, 1873, leaving nine children, all now living—George P., Wm., John V., Lawrence F., Chas., Lizzie, Henry, Katie and Anna. Married for second wife, Catharine Koberstein, at Milwaukee, Aug. 26, 1875; she was born in Bavaria; by this marriage there are two children—Rosa and Barbara; Mr. H. is a member of the Board of Education, from Fourth Ward; also a member of Leiderkranz Society.

NICHOLAS M. HENRY, born on the Isle of Guernsey March 1, 1831; came to Portage in 1866; in 1867, he spent nine months at Oxford; balance of the time has been engaged in flour, feed and grocery trade in Portage. He was married in New York City, July 6, 1868, to Caroline LePage; she was born on the Isle of Guernsey Jan. 30, 1833. Both he and his wife are members of the Baptist Church.

WILLIAM HENSEL, wagon-maker, born in Schleswig, Germany, on the 1st of March, 1835; he, with his parents, came to the United States, and settled in Milwaukee, in 1849; in 1856, he went to California, and was with his uncle in business; in 1859, returned, and lived in St. Louis till 1861, when he enlisted in the 2d Mo. V. I.; was Sergeant of Company H; served three years, and then, 1864, came to Portage. Was married, Oct. 4, 1865, to Miss Paulina Elterman, of Portage; had six children—Louis, born in 1867; Willie, born in 1869, now dead; Henry, born in 1870; Sophia, born in 1872; Willie, born in 1874, and Lizzie, born 1876, and lately dead. He was Chief Engineer of the Fire Department four years, and Assessor two years; belongs to "Ancient Order of United Workmen," also to Independent Order of Odd Fellows; has been representative to the Grand Lodge and to the Grand Encampment of Wisconsin; is partner in firm of Collins & Hensel, wagon-makers; business is prosperous.

JOHN HETTINGER was born near Buffalo, Erie Co., N. Y., Aug. 2, 1839; located in Freeport, Ill., in 1844; came to Portage, Wis., with his parents, Michael and Frances Hettinger, May 12, 1849; Mr. H. began hotel business in Portage, March 20, 1865, in which he has continued ever since; also engaged in speculating in horses, real estate, etc.; his father, Michael Hettinger, commenced brewery business at Portage, in 1849, and continued it until his death, Oct. 20, 1862; his mother is still living, now Mrs. Zetz, of Freeport, Ill. Mr. H. was married in Portage, April 22, 1861, to Wilhelmina Eberline, a native of Hesse-Darmstadt; they have six children living—Lizzie J., Clara F., Anna, Josephine, Minnie, Emma F.; lost three sons—John, aged a little over 5 months; one infant, Willie; Johnnie, aged less than 5 months.

DRAYTON A. HILLYER was born in Granby, Hartford Co., Conn., Dec. 21, 1840; came, with his parents, Andrew A. and Nancy Holcomb Hillyer, to Portage, Wis., Feb. 1, 1857; associated with his father as clerk in the drug business, until the time of his father's death, Dec. 27, 1862; he then continued the business alone until 1868; has not been engaged in active business since; his mother is now a resident of Portage. Mr. H. was married at Green Bay, Wis., Sept. 21, 1871, to Alice W. Hickox, born in Pottersville, Warren Co., N. Y., daughter of Rev. Hickox, an Episcopal clergyman, who located in Wisconsin about 1857. Mr. H. is a member of the three A., F. & A. M. bodies here, and also belongs to the Milwaukee Consistory.

ED C. HINMAN was born at Battle Creek, Mich., March 1, 1852; received his education at Michigan University, graduating as civil engineer in January, 1874; appointed Assistant Engineer of Fox and Wisconsin Rivers improvement, and has been stationed here since Aug. 4, 1874. Mr. H. was married at Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 25, 1876, to Carrie L. Rison; she was born at Ann Arbor; they have one child—Gertrude R., born April 1, 1879.

WILLIAM HOLDEN is a native of Rochester, England; born Aug. 16, 1829; lived there until he came to America, coming to Milwaukee in August, 1849; remained there until fall of 1850, when he came to the town of Pacific, Columbia Co., and was occupied in farming there for two years; he then removed to Portage and worked at wagon-making about three years, when he returned to his farm, where he remained until enlisting in Co. G, 2d W. V. I., May 29, 1861; was in every battle the regiment participated in until he was discharged, Feb. 24, 1864, on account of disability caused by ill-health; entered the service as a private and was mustered out as First Sergeant of same company; returning from the army and living on the farm a year, he then came to Portage; on account of illness, was not engaged in active business for a number of years; engaged in cabinet work for the last five years. Married in Wyoena March 16, 1851, to Harriet Ann Corsten; she was born at Wrotham Heath, county of Kent, England; she died Oct. 30, 1876; present wife was Mrs. Elmira R., widow of John Gates; was married Sept. 28, 1877; she was born in New York State. Mr. H. has two children by adoption—Helen E. (Wright), adopted when an infant only 12 weeks old, and is now aged 23 years; Wm. Henry (Whitam), adopted when 6 weeks old, and is now 15 years old.

JULIUS G. HOLSTEN, brakeman on freight, C. M. & St. P. R. R.; born in Cedarburg, Wis., July 27, 1851; his parents moved to Portage when he was a child; with the exception of three years spent in La Crosse, this has been his home ever since; began as brakeman in 1868 on St. Paul road, and in fall of 1870, he got a train as conductor and run till 1877; then, as result of "running against flags," he was set back to braking, which he still continues. He was married in September, 1868, to Mrs. Minerva A. Clemens, who was born in Burlington, Essex Co., Vt., on the 15th of February, 1848; she is one of thirteen children, eight of whom are living; they have no children. Charles F. Monroe is her son by a former marriage; he works on the river; two of her brothers have been killed by railroad accidents. She is a Presbyterian; they own property south of the canal, but live on De Witt street, near the St. Paul depot.

R. E. HOLSTON, station agent, Southern Division of the W. C. R. R., at Portage; born in 1849 in Wauwautosa, Milwaukee Co., Wis.; lived in his native town till 1868, then moved to Delavan, Walworth Co., where he lived till 1874; most of his labors prior to this were on a farm; in fall of 1874, began railroading at Elkhart Lake, Sheboygan Co., Wis.; then to Saukville, Ozaukee Co., in 1875; then to Westfield, Marquette Co., in 1877, and came to Portage in June, 1879; in each and all of these places he was the station agent. Was married in March, 1873, to Miss Edith E. Barlow, of Delavan. Himself and wife are Baptists; they have two children—Grace, born in 1874, and Eugene, born in 1876. Takes no active part in politics, but is a reliable Republican; residence is on Conant street.

M. HUBER is a native of France; born in Alsace Sept. 28, 1835; came to New York City in 1854; commenced working at the business of baker in New York City; May 11, of same year, came to Portage and engaged in the bakery trade; erected his present hotel, eating-house and bakery on the same spot where he first located when he came here. Married in Portage, Sept. 9, 1858, to Dora Erhart; she was born in Saxony; they have six children—Sarah, Emma M. C., Georgianna, Charles T., Samuel J. T. and Nellie May. Mr. Huber is a charter member of the fire department—diploma given him for serving his term of ten years as foreman; he also is a member of A. O. U. W.

JOSEPH R. HUEBL, was born in Austria, March 19, 1845; came with his parents to Portage, Wis., July, 1861; was in the employ of the M. & St. P. R. R. Co. for four years, one and a half years with Charles Haertel, of Portage, brewer; one year at Madison in a brewery; returned to the employ of Haertel; afterward in the mills of Waterhouse, and also awhile with Wells & Craig; Mr. H. went to Oregon, and remained one year; returned and worked on the Government improvement of the Fox and Wisconsin Rivers a short time. He was married in Portage in 1869, to Louisa Haertel, a native of Hesse-Darmstadt. They have three children—Joseph, Charles R. and Eliza Mary. Mr. H. is a member of the Leidekrantz Society. Father died in Portage, and mother is living with her son, J. R. He has held the office of Alderman, and was elected City Treasurer April 6, 1880; has been employed in hardware store of W. W. Corning for the last seven years.

JOSEPH HUEBNER was born in Prussia Jan. 22, 1815; came to America in 1871, and lived in New Orleans, La., three years; then came to Chicago for a few months, and in the summer of 1874 came to Portage; has worked at the tailor's trade twenty-two years. Married in Portage April 13, 1875, to Miss Helena Swanz; she was born in Prussia. They have three children—Charles, born March 24, 1876; Mary, born Jan. 13, 1877, and Paul, born Nov. 8, 1878. Mr. H. is a member of I. O. O. F. Lodge and Encampment. He is now employed as cutter in the extensive tailoring establishment of Ph. Goodman.

MRS. MINNIE L. HURLBUT, M. D., born Oct. 30, 1835, in Defiance, Ohio, daughter of Jacob and Minerva Kniss. Her father was a merchant. In 1853, she, with her parents, came to Wisconsin and settled in New Lisbon, Juneau Co. She had enjoyed the advantages of the public schools in her native city, and afterward attended one year at Delton Academy in Wisconsin; she taught the first school in New Lisbon. She was married on the 7th of October, 1856, to Roderick W. Coe, of Delton, who died Dec. 15, 1857. She had, from early life, an aspiration for the medical profession, and much of her reading and study had that end in view, several years before beginning her systematic course of preparation. On the 20th of January, 1859, she was married to Hiram H. Hurlbut, of Delton. They have two sons—Wendell Phillips, born Dec. 24, 1859, and John Fremont, born Sept. 29, 1861 : W. P. is in Wayland Academy, at Beaver Dam, Wis., and the other is at home. Mrs. H. studied medicine three years in the office of Dr. Woodruff, of Lima, N. Y.; she attended two full courses of lectures at Hahnemann Medical College in Chicago, and graduated in 1872; she remained in the college as Assistant House Physician, and spent one season in hospital work. For nearly three years after graduation, she practiced her profession in Delton, and then located in Portage, where she has a well-established and increasing patronage. They have a spacious home, which, in connection with their bathing establishment, is known as the "Portage Sanitarium;" a few boarding patients are accommodated: in 1878, they purchased and fitted, at the expense of $1,000, the celebrated "Moliere Thermo-Electric Bath;" this, they claim, is the only one of the kind between Chicago and San Francisco. Her husband, Hiram H. Hurlbut, is quite enthusiastic in proclaiming the efficacy of these baths, and in their use he is said to be experienced and skillful; electricity is closely allied to life, and the specific virtues of this over the ordinary bath are unquestioned: the philosophical construction and revivifying power of these baths are well attested. Mr. H., who has chief care of them, is a man of diversified attainments, having studied music, medicine, theology and law; he was born April 30, 1814, in LeRay, Jefferson Co., N. Y.

EVAN H. HUGHES, merchant tailor; was born in Bangor, North Wales, June 19, 1838; came to America in May, 1850, settling with his parents at Racine, Wis., where he resided seven years; removed to Chicago for three years, and, after working in various places in Wisconsin and Illinois, came to Portage in 1864, where he has been engaged in business for himself most of the time since. Mr. Hughes was married at Cambria, Wis.—where he resided one year—June 8, 1861, to Sarah E. Roberts, born in Wexan, North Wales. They have eight children—William, Minnie, Maggie, Walter, Fannie, Robert, Byron and Sarah. Mr. H. is Senior Warden of the A., F. & A. M. Lodge. His parents, Evan E. and Mary Hughes, are living, and reside at Racine.

JOSEPH HURST, round-house carpenter at Portage for the C. M. & St. P. R. R.; is of English parentage, but was born in Ireland on Feb. 15, 1833; he came to the United States in May, 1849, and served an apprenticeship as carpenter in New Haven, Conn.; after five years' service, he came to Portage in 1854, and has been in the employ of the railroad company ever since the road ran into this city. He was married Feb. 8, 1849 (when at the age of 16), to Miss Elizabeth Boardman, who was but 15 years old; she is of Quaker parentage, but was born in Dublin, Ireland. They have had nine children, two died in childhood; the living are named—Benjamin, who is a fireman; George T., an engineer; Abigail M., Joseph W., a fireman; Hannah M., Fanny and John E. are in school; the sons and daughters all live at home. Himself and wife are members of the Episcopal Church. While in New Haven, his main business was church building. He is a Royal Arch Mason.

GEORGE C. JACKSON, a native of New York State, was born in East Bloomfield, Ontario Co., N. Y., Feb. 13, 1825, and lived there until 1846, when he went to Chicago, where he resided until 1850; he then made an overland trip to California, was there eighteen months, came back, only remaining three months, when he again went to California where he remained until 1851, working as overseer at Sacramento of a wagon manufactory and employed as general superintendent of the business; he then went to Orange, N. J., and went into wagon manufacturing for himself, selling his wagons to the California firm which he had been formerly connected with; remained in Orange two years, then lived in Newark six months, when he came to Wisconsin, locating at Portage in June, 1857, and engaged in his old business of manufacturing carriages, wagons, sleighs, etc., and is now engaged in the sale of agricultural implements. Married in Buffalo, N. Y., to Rosina I. Day, she was born in England; they have had nine children, six now living—James C., William H., Ella A., Charlotte V., Walter L. and Percy E.—lost three who died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. J. and two daughters are members of the Baptist Church.

OLE JOHNSON, son of John and Julia Johnson, was born in Norway, Sept. 5, 1854; came to Lewiston, Columbia Co., in 1869, where his parents are farming; came to Portage in 1873, where he has since been engaged as salesman with Schunnaecher & Schulze. Mr. Johnson was married at Lewiston, June 17, 1879, to Amelia, daughter of Andrew Jackson. Both are members of the Lutheran Church.

SILAS S. JOHNSON, born in Boston, Mass., March 19, 1809; when about 10 years old, went to Leicester, Addison Co., Vt., with his parents, Silas and Abigail (Rhodes) Johnson; resided in Vermont, two years of the time in Montpelier, then returned to Leicester and kept hotel for a time until he came to Wisconsin in 1845, to Eagle Prairie, Milwaukee Co. (now Waukesha Co.), where he lived for six years, then coming to Portage, where he engaged in blacksmithing and the manufacturing of breaking plows; continued that business for six years; during the next six years, was Under Sheriff, and at the expiration of that time, engaged in the grocery and provision trade, which he still follows. Married in Leicester, November, 1836, to Sarah T. Tower; she was born in Shoreham, Addison Co., Vt.; have one son, Albro S.

MICHAEL R. KANE, born in Ireland Sept. 29, 1805; came to New York in September, 1830; settled in Milwaukee in September, 1837. On the 8th of September, 1837, he was married to Miss Mary Cox, of Pennsylvania, who is of Scotch parentage, but was born in Armagh, Ireland, in 1820. Mr. Kane served three years and six months in Co. D, 19th W. V. I.; held rank of Sergeant; he was commissioned Brevet Captain by Gov. Lucius Fairchild, "for meritorious conduct on the battle field," on the 27th of April, 1864; he was jailer of the first jail built in Columbia Co., and afterward was gate-keeper at Waupun Penitentiary. They had seven children, five of whom died in childhood, and a son, James, died in St. Louis Nov. 23, 1870, of intermittent fever, aged 23 years; one daughter survives, named Mary J., who is a native of Portage; was educated in the public schools of Portage, and for several years has been an acceptable teacher in intermediate departments of the city schools. On the 8th of January, 1877, Mr. Kane suffered a compound fracture of the leg as a result of a runaway accident. He is now at the Soldiers' Home in Milwaukee. The family own a pleasant brick residence on Wisconsin street. Mrs. K. is an Episcopalian.

REV. THOMAS KEENAN, born in County Tyrone, Ireland, April 15, 1829; lived in Ireland until 1841, then emigrated to Philadelphia with friends; received his education in part in the old country, studying mathematics, grammar, Latin, etc., to some extent. After coming to Philadelphia, was a student of Rev. P. Raftery, a priest, receiving instructions from him for three years. Then entered the seminary of St. Charles Borromeo, located on Eighteenth street, Philadelphia; was a student there for two years, but on account of ill-health, was compelled to leave the institution. At the solicitation of his friends, he came West (as he had acquired a thorough German education) to this State in 1852; ordained for the Diocese of Milwaukee July 19, 1854. Prior to his ordination, since coming West, had been engaged in teaching and being taught. One of his teachers was the present Bishop of La Crosse. Attended lectures, studied theology and attended school while he remained in Milwaukee. In 1855, he went to Brighton, Kenosha Co., and remained there a year and a half; from there, went to East Troy, Walworth Co., staying there one year and a half, when he removed to Oshkosh, where he remained nine years until coming to Portage in October, 1867. Has paid many of the debts of the numerous churches he has been connected with. Built the church at Omro and Payden; commenced the church at Oshkosh. Had charge of a mission that now has nine priests. While at Oshkosh, in that city there are now three parish priests, when there were none there but himself. He now has several missions that he attends to—one permanent at Lodi. In 1871, he traveled over six countries of Europe—France, Belgium, England, Holland, Scotland and Ireland. His father and mother, Patrick and Bridget (Owens) Keenan, came to Philadelphia in April, 1847; his father died in 1848, and mother in 1876, both dying in Philadelphia.

ALONZO C. KELLOGG was born in Clinton, Vermillion Co., Ind., July 8, 1845, son of Orrison and Theodosia Kellogg; he came with his parents to Calamus, Dodge Co., Wis., in 1852; received his medical education in Chicago, and engaged in the practice of his profession at Portage in 1870. In 1875, he was elected a member of the Democratic State Central Committee, and is still a member of that body; in 1877, he was elected Superintendent of City Schools, and still occupies that position. The Doctor was married in this city to Harriet B. Ackerman in September, 1874; she was born at Three Mile Bay, Jefferson Co., N. Y.; they have three children—Alonzo F., James Rossiter and Harriet Ruth. Mrs. Kellogg, before marriage, was engaged in the Hungerford Collegiate Institute at Adams, Jefferson Co., N. Y., as a teacher of oil painting, and afterward taught in the Wesleyan Female Seminary at Wilmington, Del.

T. L. KENNAN, attorney at law; was born in Morristown, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., Feb. 22, 1827, where he lived until the age of 20, when he went to Norwalk, Ohio, and studied law with his uncle, Jairus Kennan; came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1851, and located at Oshkosh; was admitted to the bar of Wisconsin Oct. 23, 1851; removed to Portage about Oct. 1, 1855. At the breaking-out of the rebellion, he enlisted Aug. 22, 1861, in Co. D, 10th W. V. I., and was commissioned First Lieutenant, and recruited half of his company; resigned July 12, 1862; the following summer he was appointed Deputy Provost Marshal of Marquette Co., serving until near the close of the war, resided at Pewaukee about ten years; going then to St. Louis, where he was employed as general agent for the Northwestern Life Ins. Co.; then for a short time practicing law there, and returning again to Portage in March, 1873. He was married at North Fairfield Huron Co., Ohio, Sept. 30, 1850, to Lea Brown; she was born in Borodino, Onondaga Co., N. Y.; they have six children—K. Kent (a lawyer of Milwaukee), Chester T. (in college at Ripon), Lea B. (in college at Ripon), Mary B. (at home), Charboth J. (at home) and Thomas L. Jr. Thomas L. Kennan, Sr., was admitted to the bar of the United States Supreme Court Nov. 6, 1876, having been admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of Wisconsin many years earlier, also to the United District and Circuit Courts several years prior to 1876.

FRANK KELM was born in Prussia April 2, 1835; came to America in October, 1857, and lived in the State of New York for nearly one year; then came to Wisconsin, and lived in Oshkosh and also in Waupaca Co. until the war broke out. In the fall of 1861, he enlisted in Co. C, 9th W. V. L., and served until the fall of 1864; was in Co. A of some regiment for one year of this time; he never went to the hospital, nor was he ever absent from his regiment a single day, and participated in every battle they fought. After leaving the service, he went to Oshkosh and resided there until he came to Portage Sept. 29, 1869. He has been connected with one lumber-yard ever since coming here. He was married in Portage to Miss Wilhelmina Fischer; she was born in Saxony; they have two children—Lena and William. Mr. Kelm is a member of the Hook and Ladder Co., and of the Leiderkranz Society.

ANDREW KIEFER, the subject of this sketch, was born in the Grand Duchy of Baden, Germany, April 28, 1830; came to New Orleans Dec. 1, 1845; in February, 1846, went to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he learned his trade of barber, remaining two years, when he returned to New Orleans, where he spent at portion of the time for several years; he then removed to St. Louis, and was engaged in business on board Mississippi River steamboats for three years, spending about seven years in the South; he then lived for two and a half years in Buffalo, N. Y., prior to removal to Portage, May 1, 1856; Mr. Kiefer has been engaged in present business ever since he came here. He was Alderman of the Fourth Ward in 1860-61; City Treasurer of Portage in 1874-75; connected with the Fire Department from its organization to the present time, and has been of material assistance in maintaining its efficiency, holding the office of Secretary for ten years, Secretary of the Hook and Ladder Co. since its organization; President and Secretary of Leiderkranz Society several times; Secretary of the German Cemetery Association since its organization. Mr. Kiefer was married at Watertown, Wis., to Henrietta Arenburg; she died July 14, 1864, leaving two children—one now living, Andrew J., born July 20, 1862; lost one son, George Henry, born July 3, 1864, died Sept. 10, 1870. His present wife is Wilhelmina Anacker, and was married Feb. 23, 1868, at Portage; she was born in Hesse-Cassel, Germany; they have three children—Charlotte E., born Nov. 1, 1868; Emma Louisa, Feb. 13, 1873, and Fred W., September, 1878.

H. L. KIND was born in Prussia June 23, 1814; came to Chicago in June, 1854, and to Portage in September of that year; he has been in the grocery business twelve years, but worked eight years in elevators before going into business for himself. Mr. K. was married first in Germany, February, 1836, to Maria Spangberg, who died in 1847; in June, 1848, he married Susanna Fredericka Kind, by whom he had ten children; the children are all dead but Ida; Mr. Kind's second wife died March 30, 1875, and he married his present wife, Henrietta Brick, Aug. 28, 1875; she was born in Kolberg, Germany, and came to Milwaukee in 1849, and to Portage in the spring of 1855. Both are members of the German Lutheran Church.

ALOIS KLENERT, of the firm of Klenert & Son, was born in Portage July 23, 1856, resided a short time in Minnesota, but this city has been his home since the time of his birth; he is the son of Anton and Catharina Klenert. Alois was married in Portage Aug. 1, 1878, to Mary Wurst; she is a native of Austria; they have one son, Fred, born July 6, 1879. Mr. K. is a member of the I. O. O. F., Leiderkranz and Turner societies.

A. KOENIG, merchant tailor, and dealer in clothing and gents' furnishing goods; was born in Prussia, July 13, 1823; engaged in tailoring at the age of 15 years; came to Milwaukee in 1854, and to Portage in 1864. Mr. K. was married at Portage July 29, 1865, to Louisa M. Blass, who was born in New York City; they have two children—Clara Augusta and Laura Louisa.

GEORGE KRECH, a native of Germany, born in Saxony, Oct. 8, 1838; came to New York City, landing there Oct. 7, 1857; came directly to Beloit; resided there four years, then came to Portage, and has been engaged in the butchering business since the fall of 1861; was dealing also in stock for several years; at present not engaged in that business. Married Catherine Duman in Portage, June, 1866; they have one child, Kittie.

OTTO KRISCH, born in Bohemia, Oct. 4, 1831; came to America in the latter part of September, 1854, and in November of same year came to Portage; commenced saloon business here in 1855; in 1856, he was employed by Charles Haertel, and remained with him two years and two months; since then he has been in business for himself. Mr. K. was elected City Treasurer for two years, 1870-71. Was married to Madeline Sibblin in Portage, Feb. 7, 1857; she was born in Kleinwetzheim, Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany; they have four children—Alois, Anna, Ida and Otto. Mr. K. is a member of the Leiderkranz and A. O. U. W. societies.

MRS. MARY J. LA ROWE, nee Bryce, was born Jan. 5, 1834, in Albany, Oswego Co., N. Y. Mrs. La Rowe was born Aug. 2, 1831, in Amwell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.; the family came West in 1848; before her marriage, she taught school several years in Columbia and Marquette Cos. She was married Aug. 14, 1854, to S. Hamilton La Rowe, of Kingston, Marquette Co., where he was engaged in general merchandizing; he removed his business to Portage in 1862, and kept the express office in connection with his mercantile business; he died in 1868, leaving three children—S. Hamilton, born Feb. 5, 1856, in Kingston; Mary Estelle, born at Kingston Dec. 16, 1857, and Frank F., born on Dec. 25 (Christmas), 1867; the oldest son has bought land and is farming near Sioux Falls, Dak.; the other two are at home. The family affiliated with the Episcopal Church; she still owns a pleasant home on Conant street, but has disposed of all other real estate; she is the daughter of "Uncle Archie Bryce," of Portage.

JAMES M. LAWSON was born at Glasgow, Scotland, March 28, 1849; came to America with his parents in 1852 and located in Packwaukee, Marquette Co., Wis.; in 1868, moved to Kingston, Green Lake Co.; two years later moved to Washington, Mich., where he was general salesman for the Washington Mining Co.; six months afterward, moved to South Saginaw, Mich., where, for three years, he was book-keeper, general salesman and paymaster; came to Portage in 1873, where he has since been with Schumacher & Schulze. He was married to Sarah P. Smith, at Portage, Oct. 11, 1876; she was born at Racine; they have one child—Fred S., born Oct. 5, 1878. He is a member of the A. F. & A. M. During the past ten years, Mr. L. has been engaged in the fire-insurance business, representing five of the leading companies—Fire Association, Boston Underwriters, St. Paul Fire and Marine, Continental, of New York, and Westchester, of New York.

ALFRED LEE, carpenter; was born in London, England, March 25, 1843; came to America in 1850, and located in Portage, where he has since resided; he worked three years in the car-shops, and has followed carpenter work and lathing the balance of the time. He was married at Portage Oct. 24, 1868, to Mrs. P. A. Harmon, born in Germany; she died Feb. 8, 1880, leaving one son—Frank T. W., born Oct. 27, 1869. Mr. Lee is a member of the M. E. Church.

PATRICK LENNON was born in County Armagh, Ireland, March 17, 1817; came to America and landed in New York City; spent seven years in Upper Canada; then resided at Crown Point, N. Y., until he came to Wisconsin, in May, 1849, locating on Sec. 31, town of Ft. Winnebago. Mr. L. was married at Crown Point, N. Y., March 8, 1849, to Julia Ruddey, who was born in Ireland; they have had ten children—Catharine, Terrence, John, Mary Ann, James, Margaret, Patrick and Edward, now living; James, aged 1 year and 1 month, deceased; Bridget, aged 15 years, deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Lennon are both members of the St. Mary's Catholic Church. Mr. L. was Town Treasurer of Fort Winnebago six years, Supervisor three years, School Director and Clerk of the School Board for several years; he owns 240 acres of land—200 on Sec. 31, town of Ft. Winnebago, the balance on Sec. 24, town of Lewiston, being still the owner of the land on which he first located in Columbia Co.

FRANKLIN H. LEWIS, lumber dealer; was born in Hopkinton, Washington Co., R. I., Jan. 9, 1848; came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1865, locating at Werner, Juneau Co.; was engaged in lumber business, having his residence there until 1876, when he came to Portage; since 1872, has been in business for himself, manufacturing at Werner; since coming to Portage in 1876, has continued his manufacturing at Werner; he has large lumber-yards at Portage, and is owner of extensive tracts of pine lands on Yellow River, Wood Co. Mr. Lewis deals in salt, cement, sash, doors, blinds, etc., in connection with his lumber business. Was married in Werner, Juneau Co., Sept. 17, 1874, to Miss Virginia L. Bacon; she was born in Lee, Penobscot Co., Me.

HENRY LITTLE was born in the town of Gardner, near Augusta, Me., May 19, 1848; moved to New Orleans in 1857, and attended school in that city until he came to Wisconsin with his father, William Little, to Fairfield, Sauk Co., in February, 1861; his father died there in 1863. Henry lived in Fairfield most of the time until he came to Portage in 1865, and was engaged in farming; and since coming to this place has been engaged in the livery and omnibus business. Mr.

Little married Mary Bolting, a native of Portage, Sept. 22, 1865; they have had two children, one living, Henry Wm.; lost one son, died in infancy. Is a member of the I. O. O. F.

R. J. LLOYD, horseshoer and jobber; was born in Wales in 1839, and came to America in 1846, and settled in Oneida Co., N. Y., where he remained nine years; in 1855, he came to Oxford, Marquette Co., where he lived till 1866, when he located in Portage, which is still his home. On the 20th of May, 1860, he was married to Miss Jane Watkins, formerly of Pennsylvania; they have six children—William, Wallie, Robert, Lillie, Daisy and Lawrence. He has been proprietor of one shop ever since he came to Portage; he owns his shop on Main street, and his house on Conant street; employs one journeyman, and has a good run of patronage. Himself and wife are members of the First Presbyterian Church of Portage.

SAMUEL S. LOCKHART is a native of Ayrshire, Scotland; son of John and Agnes Lockhart, who came to America with their family in 1853, locating first at Williamsburg, L. I.; in 1854, they removed to Caledonia in this county, locating on Sec. 3; they now live on Sec. 9, in the same town, engaged in farming. Samuel S. was born Nov. 20, 1850; he passed his early life on his father's farm; attended the high school of Portage, where he graduated the summer of 1874; prior to this had attended the district school of his own town, and had also taught some; his first graded school was at Pardeeville, where he taught the summer of 1876; in the fall of the same year, entered Randolph public school, and had charge of that as Principal, until the summer of 1878; during vacations studying law in the office of James B. Taylor; was elected Clerk of the Court in November, 1878, which office he now holds. Married in the town of Randolph, March 29, 1879, to Hallie L. Marvin, daughter of Hon. G. G. Marvin; she was born in the town of Randolph. Mr. L. is a member of the A., F. & A. M.

RODNEY O. LOOMIS, is a native of German Flats, Herkimer Co., N. Y.; born Sept. 17, 1833; came to Pacific, Columbia Co., Wis., in September, 1852, and has resided in this county ever since; was employed in the store of N. H. Wood as clerk until 1857, when he became a member of the firm of Wood, Loomis & Osborn; at the expiration of one year, Mr. Osborn retired, and the business was conducted under the firm name of Wood & Loomis for one year; then the firm of N. H. Wood & Co. was formed, which consisted of N. H. Wood, R. O. Loomis, Geo. H. Osborn and Frank E. Wood; in 1861, the firm name was again changed to Wood, Loomis & Osborn; from 1863 to 1865, the business was carried on by Wood, Loomis & Co., Mr. C. R. Gallett becoming a member of the firm; from 1865 to 1867, the firm was N. H. Wood & Co.; in the spring of 1867, L. Breese became associated with them, but the style of the firm name was not changed; in 1869, the present firm of Loomis, Gallett & Breese was formed. Mr. Loomis married Susan Wood, Sept. 8, 1856, at Dubuque, Iowa; she died Oct. 5, 1865, leaving two children; one, an infant eighteen months old, survived the mother but a short time; one son, Fred W., was born March 30, 1859. Mr. L. was married the second time at Lyons, N. Y., to Isabelle H. Cole, Oct. 23, 1867; she was born in Lyons; there are three children by this union—Isabelle Chester, Mary Emily and Frank Breese.

JOSEPH LEDWIG, born in Bohemia Dec. 25, 1825; came to America in 1848, worked in New York City from June to October of the same year, then came to Milwaukee; December to May, worked in tannery; in the spring of 1849, commenced buying hides, wool, etc., running a small tannery a short time before coming to Portage; he learned the tanner's trade in Europe; in 1851, he came to Portage and engaged in buying hides, which business he is still engaged in, besides carrying on the tannery ever since he came here; he commenced the boot and shoe business in 1857, and has been in his present location since 1859. His present wife was Mary Rohn; she was born in Germany; they have five children, two girls and three boys. Mr. L. has two daughters by a former marriage.

ALEXANDER McDONALD, one of the four oldest settlers of Columbia Co., was born in the parish of Kilmarnock, near the bridge of Spean, Inverness-shire, Scotland, April 23, 1817; parents both McDonalds. Mr. McD. came to America in July, 1836, and for a year traveled in Canada and the United States; in 1837, engaged with the Government survey in Michigan; in December, 1838, he came to Madison, Wis., where he was ill about a year; in June, 1839, removed to Ft. Winnebago, and was present when Gen. Scott had a conference with the Winnebagoes to induce them to remove to a reservation; in 1840, he joined the Government survey in Wisconsin; took up 160 acres in Caledonia, a portion of which he still owns; was a contractor in the C. & N. W. Ry. at "Tunnel I." and other points; was Sheriff of Columbia Co. in 1851-52, and is now giving his attention, in addition to carrying on his farm, to an agency for the sale of sewing machines. Mr. McD. married in the town of York, Livingston Co., N. Y., April 5, 1853, to Mary A. Crawford.

born in Freedom, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., who died May 25, 1861, leaving four children—Jane Elizabeth, born Feb. 9, 1854; James Alexander, born Nov. 11, 1856; Mary Ann, born Feb. 14, 1859; John C., born April 22, 1861. Mr. McD. married Margaret Robertson, of Caledonia, June 13, 1862; They have three children living—Jeanette M., born April 9, 1863; Elizabeth, born Jan. 10, 1865, and Glengarry W., born Dec. 26, 1872, and have lost two. Mr. McDonald has seen Columbia Co. and Wisconsin changed from an Indian hunting ground to a cultivated, thickly settled and wealthy State. He was appointed by Gov. Dodge as Major of militia; has been Supervisor and Chairman of the County Board; was proprietor of the Ellsworth, now Corning House, for eight years.

DEWITT C. McDUFFIE, express messenger between Portage and Ashland, on the Wis. Cent. R. R.; born in Lafayette, Wis., on the 15th of November, 1848. He came into Columbia Co. with his parents in 1853; they settled on a farm in Springvale, where they lived twenty years; in 1873, they sold the farm and moved into Rio. Dewitt began railroad life as clerk in station office at Rio, on the C. M. & St. P. R. R., in 1870; he was express messenger in 1871 between Portage and Horicon, and then he was two years at Portage as telegraph operator and express agent; he served a year and a half as engineer of a quartz-mill at Silver City, Nev.; since fall of 1876, he has been express messenger on Wis. Cent. R. R. He was married on the 28th of August, 1879, to Miss Harriett S. Race, of Portage. He is a Republican. Lives in brick house near St. Paul depot.

P. MCGINN was born in County Monaghan, Ireland, in 1829; came to America in 1846; resided in Vermont, New York, Ohio and California, prior to locating in Portage in 1857; was engaged in mining while in California; learned the molder's trade in Vermont; began the grocery business in 1857, in which he has continued ever since. His present wife, Catherine Gaffney, is a native of East Canada. They have five children—Mary, aged 11; Catherine, aged 10; John T., aged 8; Margaret Celia, aged 7, and James, aged 4. Mr. and Mrs. McGinn are both members of St. Mary's Catholic Church.

MICHAEL McKENNA, coppersmith, at Portage machine-shops of the C. M. & St. P. R. R.; was born in January, 1818, in Dublin, Ireland; served a seven-year apprenticeship in Dublin; he came to the United States in 1849, and settled in Buffalo, N. Y., where he remained five years, working at his trade; then spent five years in Detroit, and after that two years for M. C. R. R. at Marshall, Mich.; spent one year in Chicago, and located in La Porte, Ind., where he remained eleven years in the employ of the M. S. R. R.; in fall of 1872, he came to Portage and began work for C. M. & St. P. R. R. Co., and has been in their employ continuously to date. Before leaving Ireland, he was married, December, 1843, to Miss Mary Dolan, who died in 1878, leaving one daughter, Catherine D. McKenna, who is established as milliner and dressmaker on Cook street, Portage; she also keeps a stock of fancy notions; she has "more than a dozen employes;" before starting her business this season, she made a visiting tour of England and Ireland. The family affiliate with the Catholic Church. He belongs to no society except the "Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Insurance Association." He is the only coppersmith in the employ of the railroad company at Portage, and is reported as a first-class mechanic.

D. A. McKENNEY was born in Malone, Franklin Co., N. Y., July 13, 1836; resided there until he was 18 years of age, then came to Berlin, Green Co., Wis.; remained there until he came to Portage in the fall of 1861; while at Berlin, he was employed as a clerk in a store; after coming to Portage, he was in the photograph business until 1863, when he went to Washington, D. C., where he remained until 1864—in the Government service one year—connected with the construction of buildings there and in that vicinity. In 1864, he returned to Portage, and has been, most of the time since then, with P. S. Hollenbeck, furniture dealer, being employed as finisher and salesman. Mr. McKenney was married at Berlin, Wis., Jan. 1, 1859, to Miss Elizabeth Behan; she was born in Syracuse, N. Y. They have four children—Charles T., Wm. D., Clara and George.

FELIX McLINDON, son of James and Sarah McL., was born in the town of Annalioist, County Armagh, Ireland, Oct. 31, 1812; came to Peru, N. Y., in May, 1831; lived there six years, and in Franklin and Chemung Cos., until the fall of 1845, when he came to Shullsburg, Wis., in April, 1849; moved from there to Portage. Mr. McLindon has been engaged in various pursuits; was Postmaster of the Assembly in 1853; has been Constable twenty-seven years, Justice of the Peace during the last four years; was Sergeant-at-Arms of the Assembly in 1849. He was married in Peru, Clinton Co., N. Y., Jan. 28, 1838, to Margaret, daughter of Wm. and Elizabeth Watson, born in Scotland; she died Dec. 16, 1877, leaving three children—Martha J., now Mrs. D. L. Beardsley, of Odessa, Minn., born July 1, 1842; James, of La Crosse, born July 19, 1844, who is an engineer on the Southern Minn. R. R., and was married in September, 1874, to Ellen McLaughlin.

Robert E., born at Fort Winnebago, April 16, 1851, is an engineer on the M. & St. P. R., and was married June 25, 1879, to Teresa McSorley. Mr. McLendon was for several years President of the St. Joseph's Total Abstinence Society, and is now its Vice President.

JOHN H. MADDEN was born in County Galway, Ireland, Aug. 25, 1839; came with his parents, Michael and Mary Madden, to America in 1847; located in Racine Co., resided there until 1851, and then removed to Buffalo, Marquette Co. His mother died in May, 1877; his father is now a resident of Portage. Mr. Madden is carrying on his farm of 240 acres on Secs. 20 and 29, in the town of Buffalo, and is also engaged in the mercantile business at Portage. He was married in Montello, Marquette Co., Wis., Jan. 11, 1864, to Maria Eagan, a native of County Roscommon, Ireland; her parents, who were old settlers of Columbia Co., now reside in Marcellon. Mr. and Mrs. Madden are members of the Catholic Church. Mr. M. was a member of the Board of Supervisors for three years; also Roadmaster in the town of Buffalo. They have nine children—Mary Ann, Martin James, John, Wm. Henry, Catherine, Thomas Francis, Margaret, Clara and Estella.

THOMAS C. MADDEN came to Wisconsin, in 1850, with his father, Michael Madden, who located in Buffalo, Marquette Co., Wis., and who is now living with his son, Thomas C., in Portage. Mr. Madden was engaged in the dry-goods and grocery business at Lyons, Iowa, for nine years, from 1860 to 1869; enlisted in Co. K, 18th W. V. I., and served until discharged on account of disability caused by sickness; engaged in farming from 1869 to 1872; traveling salesman three years; in business at Portage one year; at Montello one year; then on a farm one year. Mr. Madden married Hellen Hendricks, who died in 1873, leaving one daughter—Mary Ellen. He married his present wife, Mary A. Ogle, a native of Wisconsin, Sept. 17, 1879.

PETER E. MAHON, born in Meath Co., Ireland, Dec. 4, 1846; came to America with his parents, Edward and Mary Mahon, who settled in Milwaukee, where they resided six years; came to Portage in May, 1855; father died Jan. 31, 1871; mother is still resident of Portage. The subject of this sketch has worked at carpenter and joiner's trade the past sixteen years; is carpenter, contractor and builder. He was married in Portage, Jan. 24, 1876, to Elizabeth O'Brien; they have two children—Mary, born March 4, 1878, and Edward, born Nov. 15, 1879. Mr. and Mrs. Mahon are members of St. Mary's Catholic Church. Mr. M. has been Chairman of the First Ward Board of Supervisors three years, and is now serving his fourth year as Alderman of the same ward.

DR. EDWIN C. MAINE, homœopathic physician; born in North Stonington, New London Co., Conn., July 26, 1821; came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1850; made it his home for a year and a half in Dane and Rock Cos.; in Madison for about four years; came from Madison to Portage in October, 1856; engaged in student practice with Dr. J. B. Bowen, at Madison, and ever since coming here has practiced homœopathy strictly, being one of the oldest physicians of that school in Wisconsin. Married at North Stonington, June 13, 1852, to Ellen L. Wheeler; she was born at North Stonington; they have three children—Lilla M., Clinton Dewitt and Thurlow Wheeler. Dr. M. was for five years member of the Board of Aldermen; is a Mason, an Odd Fellow, also belongs to the Temple of Honor, Good Templars, etc., and member of the State Medical Homœopathic Association.

THOMAS MALOY, born in Vermont; came to Wisconsin in 1855, locating at La Crosse; he was in the employ of the C., M. & St. P. R. Co. until about five years ago; after leaving the railroad business, he entered into partnership with Mr. Sanborn in the brick and ice business; he has been in the brick business six years and the ice business two years. He was married at La Crosse, in June, 1859, to Mary Quinn, who died in January, 1874, leaving two children—Amice H. and George M. Mr. M. and his daughter are members of the Episcopal Church.

ESTHER F. MARSH, widow of Darius Marsh, a former physician in Portage; she was born on the 2d of August, 1802, in the town of Brookfield, Otsego Co., N. Y.; her deceased husband was born on the 25th of December, 1798, in Litchfield, Conn.; on the 1st of April, 1815, when a mere lad, he enlisted as bugler, in the United States Army, and he served until his honorable discharge, on the 1st of March, 1819; Mrs. Marsh's grandfathers, on both sides, were Revolutionary soldiers, and of the old English Puritan stock. They were married Feb. 1, 1820, in Broome Co., N. Y. He was educated as physician, and practiced the healing art several years in the East; came West in 1846, and settled in Galesburg, Knox Co., Ill., where he practiced his profession; after residing in other places in Illinois, he came to Columbia Co. in 1856, and located at Ft. Winnebago, near Portage; in 1861, he enlisted in Capt. Coffin's company, to try the fate of a second war; he was honorably discharged in April, 1862, because of injuries received at Bowling Green.

Ky.; for some time after the war, he practiced his profession in and about Portage, but lived on his farm in Ft. Winnebago; he applied for a pension, and on the day that he received his pension papers, he was seated in the City Hotel playing his life to an admiring group, while waiting for his conveyance home; suddenly, in the midst of a martial strain, he dropped lifeless, and thus the veteran of two wars passed away on the 8th of May, 1871; the family then moved into Portage, where they still reside; they had eight children, two of whom died in childhood; the living are—William L., born Jan. 11, 1821; George W., born Sept. 21, 1823; Andrew J., born Feb. 28, 1826; Esther M., born Aug. 11, 1832; Mary E., born Feb. 13, 1834, and Clarissa A., born Oct. 20, 1840; all the children are married. Dr. Marsh was a "Seventh Day Adventist," and that is the faith of Mrs. Marsh. Her youngest daughter, Clarissa, was married on the 3d of October, 1859, to Samuel Crouch, Jr.; on the 26th of September, 1861, he enlisted in the 10th W. V. I.; he died on the 17th of March, 1862, as a result of exposure, at Nashville, Tenn.; he left but one child, Albert S., born Aug. 11, 1862; Mrs. Marsh and this widowed daughter, Mrs. Crouch, live in one home; Mrs. Marsh draws a pension, as a widow of soldier of 1812, and Mrs. Crouch draws a widow's pension for her sacrifice in the rebellion; the old lady, though nearly fourscore, retains use of all her faculties; she is still cheerful, and is only waiting till the shadows be a little longer drawn; only waiting till the Father calls: "My child, come home."

GEORGE W. MARSH was born in Lisle, Broome Co., N. Y., Sept. 21, 1823, and resided in Broome and Chenango Cos. until 1847, when he went to Boston, Mass.; spent six years in that city, and studied short-hand; removing from Boston, he came to Pacific, Columbia Co., in December, 1854, and remained there until he enlisted in 1861; was the first man who enlisted in Portage, in the Portage Light Guards at first, afterward Co. G, 2d W. V. I.; served until Aug. 2, 1861, when he was discharged for injuries received at the first battle of Bull Run, July 21, 1861; Oct. 7, 1861, he was commissioned Second Lieutenant of the Fremont Rifles of Portage City, afterward Co. D, 10th W. V. I.; served about two years in this company, on detached duty most of the time; Post Adjutant at Louisville, Ky., and afterward detailed as Commissioner of claims at Humisville, Ala., and on Gen. Rosecrans' staff, detailed to do duty at Louisville, Ky., in charge of discharge office; resigned after about two years' service, and coming to Columbia Co., where he has lived most of the time since; after resigning, he spent several years in teaching; was afterward Deputy County Clerk for two years; Coroner from 1858 to 1862; Town Clerk in Pacific for five years; janitor of the court house now, and in the insurance business with L. S. Rolleston. He was married in Smithville, Chenango Co., N. Y., March 12, 1848, to Maria Pick; she was born in the town of Green in that county; they have four children—Ellen A. (now Mrs. Gabriel Rudal, of Lodi), Emma J., Esther A. (now Mrs. W. R. Kenyon), and George A. While in the army, Mr. Marsh was the accredited correspondent of the Milwaukee Sentinel, writing under the nom de plume of "Agawan."

JOHN MARSHALL, boot and shoe maker, was born in Lenarkshire, Scotland, in 1837; his father was a shoemaker, and John served an extended apprenticeship at home—calls himself an apprentice for the past thirty years, and has not learned it all yet. He was married in 1860 to Miss Ellen Phelan, of Manchester, England; came to America in 1865, and ever since has been a resident of Portage. He has nine children, all living at home—Robert, born in 1861; James in 1863; Nellie in 1865; John in 1867; Thomas in 1869; Henry in 1871; Willie in 1873; Annie in 1875; and George in 1877. His two oldest sons are his assistants in the shop. Since the exhibition of his work at the fair, some years ago, he is often called the "Premium Shoemaker."

WILLIAM MEACHER, M. D. The subject of this sketch, a native of Bungay, Suffolk Co., England, was born on the 27th of May, 1833, and is the son of William and Sarah Ann (Brown) Meacher. At the age of ten years, William attended part of a winter term of school and one summer term of the same length in Monroe Co., N. Y.; later, he spent a little less than two years in school in Wisconsin, whither he moved with his father in the summer of 1844; at the age of 22, he conceived a desire for literary culture, and, giving himself with avidity to the work, at once began the arduous task of educating himself; beginning with grammar, arithmetic and spelling, he spent the forenoon in study and devoted the afternoon to work on the farm, or carpentering, during the summer, and in the winter employed his evenings and Sundays with his books. After one year's diligent study, he spent two months in a select school in the city of Portage, and in the following winter taught the school of his district, receiving a compensation of $18 per month and boarding himself; in early life it had been his desire to become a physician, but it seemed beyond his reach. During this winter, however, he determined to accomplish his purpose and gratify his desire. Accordingly, in the ensuing spring, with the encouragement of Dr. O. D. Coleman, of whom he borrowed books, he began his studies at home, dividing his time between them and his work to support his family. At the expiration of two years thus spent, he mortgaged his farm of 40 acres for $250, and with this money pursued a course of study at Rush Medical College of Chicago, and in the following summer began practice in Waushara Co., Wis.; meeting with little success, he sold his land in the fall for $500, paid his former loan, and with the balance attended another term at the college, and graduated in the spring of 1862, six years from the time when he first began his private study of grammar and spelling. It had been a long and tedious work, but as he compared his condition now, the master of a noble profession, with his former state, when, as a boy, he was obliged to toil as a day laborer, or when, as a sailor upon the lakes, he was thrown into the company of those whose influence tended only to degrade, he did not regret his course, and felt that he had made a noble sacrifice, and what he had gained repaid him a thousand-fold for all that it had cost him. It is worthy of mention that during all his former varied career, though at times associated with reckless and abandoned characters, he had never contracted any of the habits of drinking, gambling, or using tobacco. After his graduation, without means, Dr. Meacher began his practice in the village of Pardeeville, and, by the aid of his friend and benefactor, Dr. Coleman, managed to make a living. He engaged in this work because it was his natural preference, and he considered it the noblest of all professions; beginning at the bottom, his career has marked a gradual growth, and each year has added to his practice and reputation. Thoroughness in his professional work has always been his motto, and to this may be attributed his remarkable success. Of late years, he has devoted himself especially to surgery, and in all his surgical operations, his constant practice is to make a careful study of his case, both by reading and observations, before beginning it. During the war, Dr. Meacher was commissioned Assistant Surgeon of the 16th W. V. I., and later, served for four months as contract surgeon. He was at the siege of Atlanta, and participated in the famous march to the sea. Aside from his professional duties, he has shown a public spiritedness, and been honored by his fellow-citizens with positions of trust. His ambition, however, has never led him to desire political honors, he finding in his profession ample scope for his best talents. His political views are Democratic, though he is not a partisan; in his religious sentiments, he has always been a "free thinker." He is a prominent member of the Masonic Fraternity, having taken thirty-two degrees, and makes the principles that underlie this brotherhood his religion. Dr. Meacher was married in the winter of 1854 to Miss Jane E. Clayton, an orphan, of Oak Creek, Milwaukee Co., and by her he has had two sons and three daughters, of whom the eldest, a son, died in infancy.

GORDON H. MERRELL was born in Utica, Oneida Co., N. Y., July 24, 1807; resided in Utica, Sacket's Harbor and Oswego until 1830; then removed to Geneva, N. Y., and carried on the drug business until 1840, when he came to Ft. Winnebago, Wis., and engaged in merchandising and farming, with his brother Henry, six or eight years; then came to Portage and purchased his present location, where he has lived ever since; he is real-estate agent, and is also agent for various property owners of the city. Mr. M. was married, at Geneva, N. Y., to Mary C. Tippetts, who died at Portage in 1841; they had two children, both of whom died before the mother. His second wife (deceased) was Alvin Tompkins, of Fox Lake, Wis.; born in Canada; they had three children, all deceased. Mr. M. was married again, in 1862, to Mrs. Milo Pettibone, nee Eliza Dibble, born in New York City; came to Portage in 1852; she had three children—Frank R., now a resident of Chicago; Jessie, deceased, and Flora E., living at home.

HENRY L. MERRELL was born at Ft. Winnebago July 22, 1848, in the same house in which he now lives (the same having been removed to Portage); son of Henry and Elizabeth (Low) Merrell; mother died when Henry was 5 years of age. A portion of Mr. Merrell's farm is a part of the old homestead; he was engaged in the drug business up to the time of his father's death, May, 1876; since then attended to matters pertaining to the settlement of his father's extensive estate; in 1875, Mr. M. purchased an orange grove of 15 acres and 1,100 trees at Orange City, Fla.; spends winters there with his family. Mr. M. was married in Portage, Sept. 5, 1872, to Ida M. Miller, born in Portage, daughter of Dr. Fred K. and Amanda Miller, early settlers of Portage, having located here in 1850; they have one child—Frederick H., born May 17, 1873.

JULIUS METTLER, butcher and stock-dealer; was born in Switzerland Jan. 4, 1830; settled in Newark, N. J., when he first came to America; then coming to Sauk City, Sauk Co., Wis., where he remained eleven years, when he came to Portage and engaged in present business ever since coming here. Married, at Newark, N. J., in the fall of 1854, Barbara Abboth; she was born in Baden, Germany; have nine children—Thecla, Amelia, Julia, Emma, Bertha, Julius, Jr., Carl, August and Joseph. Mr. M. is a member of I. O. O. F. and A. O. U. W.

JOHN METZLER, boot and shoe maker and repairer: born in Baden, Prussia, in 1848; came to America in 1867, and settled in Portage in spring of 1870; has carried on the business since 1876; employs one journeyman. Was married, on the 20th of March, 1871, to Miss Paulina Daup, formerly of Erie, Penn.; has three children, named Carrie, Charley and Johnny. The family affiliate with the Catholic Church; his shop is on Cook street, and his house on Bronson avenue.

CHARLES MOHR is a native of Germany; was born in Hesse-Cassel Oct. 15, 1836, and came to America in 1853; engaged in steambotting on the lakes four years before coming to Wisconsin; in 1857, he located in the town of Caledonia on a farm, and remained there until 1860; he commenced teaching school in this county, and taught most of the time for four years; went then to Milwaukee and clerked in a wholesale grocery for nine months, after which he was employed in the office of the Banner & Volksfreund, attending to their collections; he then was engaged in lumber manufacturing one year, also made a business of raising hops one year; then traveled for the Banner & Volksfreund one season; then coming to Portage September, 1869, he commenced his present business of merchant and dealer in hops. Mr. M. was married in Portage, July 1, 1862, to Mary Amtz; she was born in Prussia; they have one son—Charles, Jr., aged 17 years. Mr. and Mrs. Mohr are members of the German Methodist Church.

GEORGE W. MORRISON, son of George T. and Harriet T. Morrison, who settled at Southport, Wis., in 1845, and came to Marcellon, Columbia Co., in 1849; remained there until 1857; from there removed to Portage; mother died in June, 1860, and father in October, 1878. Mr. Morrison was born in Jordan, Onondaga Co., N. Y., April 26, 1839; engaged in farming while living in Marcellon; was in the City Hotel here for five years, his father being proprietor; lived in Brandon, Fond du Lac Co., for three years, in mercantile business; from there went to town of York, Dane Co., and again occupied his time in farming; thence to Lowville, and farmed there for three years, then coming back to Portage, where he entered the store of Gates & Austin as a clerk, remaining with them six years; he then went into business with his brother, James G., and has continued it to the present time. Married in Portage July 6, 1863, to Miss Z. E. Mays; she was born in the town of Paris, Edgar Co., Ill., Sept. 5, 1839 (daughter of Sylvanus R. Mays, who was among the early settlers of Portage); they have four children—Arthur J., Stephen F., Marion E. and George W., Jr. Mr. M. is a member of the A. O. U. W. and Temple of Honor. Mrs. Morrison's father died in Portage March 17, 1851; her mother also died here Nov. 11, 1868; they were both natives of Clark Co., Ind., and came to Watertown, Wis., in 1849, and came to Portage in 1850.

JOHN MUELLER, the subject of this sketch, was born in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, June, 1838, and came to New York City in 1862, remaining one year there, when he came to Portage, and engaged in the coopering business ever since; worked alone at first, and now employs three men; manufactures all kinds of cooperage. Was married in Portage, October, 1867, to Anna Schleisman; she was born in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany; they have four children—Anna, Charles, Louis and Fannie.

DAVID G. MUIR, a native of Dunbar, Scotland; was born July 11, 1840, and is the son of Daniel and Ann Muir, who came to America in 1819, coming directly to Marquette Co., Wis., and engaged in farming; lived there until 1861, when they came to Portage, where they now reside. D. G. Muir commenced business here as a clerk, and continued as such until 1865, when he went into the mercantile business with Parry & Bebb, under the firm name of Parry, Bebb & Muir, which firm existed for four years, when the present firm of Parry & Muir was organized. Married in the town of Buffalo, Marquette Co., Wis., Oct. 20, 1863, to Catherine H. Cairns; she was born in Peebles, Scotland; they have four children—Carrie, Annie, Wilberforce D. and John D. Mr. M. is a member of the Presbyterian Church; he has been one of the choir singers in that church for sixteen years. He is a charter member of the Temple of Honor.

GEORGE MURISON was born in Aberdeen, Scotland, March 17, 1833; moved to Montrose when 3 years of age, and lived there until he came to America, locating at Milwaukee, in 1850, where he remained until October, 1853, when he came to Portage; in 1858, engaged in business in the manufacture of furniture, undertaking, etc., which he still continues. Mr. M. was married in Portage, July 3, 1864, to Jane Dalton, a native of the city of York, England; she died July 17, 1866, leaving one child—Richard W.—born July 8, 1866; he was married again, Nov. 26, 1868, to Fannie E. Wallace, a native of Essex Co., N. Y.; they have two children—Wallace, born Sept. 7, 1869; Mary E., born July 29, 1876. Mr. M. is a member of the I. O. O. F. Lodge.

BRYAN MURPHY was born in County Carlow, Ireland; came to America in the fall of 1865; located and engaged in the fruit business in New York City; resided there about ten years; removed to Richmond, Va., and continued the same business; was in business for himself six years; came to Portage, Wis., from Richmond, August, 1879; commenced the grocery business in this place in November of the same year. Mr. Murphy was married in Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 6, 1870, to Catherine Sheehan, a native of County Limerick, Ireland; they have had six children—Mary Ellen, born July 13, 1876; an infant son, born March 8, 1880; Edward Emmett, born Oct. 1, 1871, died Sept. 2, 1875; John, born July 19, 1873, died Aug. 2, 1875; Bernard, born Sept. 21, 1874, died Aug. 19, 1875; Annie, born April 12, 1878, died Aug. 29, 1878. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy are members of the Catholic Church.

HENRY NEEF, the subject of this brief sketch, was born in the town of Black Rock, near the city of Buffalo, N. Y., July 21, 1838; when he was 18 years of age, he came to this county, locating in Marcellon, May, 1856, and engaged in farming; he commenced farming on his own account in 1860. He was married at Jefferson, Wis., December, 1861, to Helvetia L. Reese; they have seven children—Clella R., William J. J., Carrie L., Della May, Henry Alden, John H. and Sarah. During his residence in Marcellon he was Town Clerk about eleven years; he was elected County Treasurer in the fall of 1876, and re-elected in 1878. Mr. N. enlisted in March, 1865, in Co. F, 194th O. V. I., and was mustered out Oct. 24, 1865. Is a member of Pardee Lodge, A. F. & A. M.

DAVID M. NEILL was born in Perthshire, Scotland, Feb. 2, 1852; son of John and Margaret (Moreland) Neill, who came to New York in 1859; remained there one year, then removed to Caledonia, Wis., and located on Sec. 36, where they now live; when 10 years of age, he left home; attended high school in Portage two years; commenced clerking in the grocery store of John Fulton, March 19, 1871; remained there until July of the same year; Aug. 10, 1871, he entered the employ of Purdy & Merrell, druggists, in which store he has remained ever since. Mr. Neill was married at Fox Lake, May 20, 1875, to Alice A. Purdy, daughter of Edmund and Harriet Purdy, born at Fox Lake; they have one child—Edmund—born at Portage, July 26, 1877. Mr. N. is a member of the Odd Fellows' Lodge.

HENRY NEILL, County Superintendent of Schools; was born in the parish of Kincardine, Perthshire, Scotland, March 26, 1849; came with his parents, John and Margaret Moreland Neill, to New York in 1859, remained there one year; in the spring of 1860, they located on Sec. 36 in the town of Caledonia, Columbia Co., Wis.; engaged in farming until 21 years of age; taught school until 23 years of age; spent three years at Thayer College, in Kidder, Mo., from the spring of 1872 to June, 1876; entered Beloit College, September, 1876, graduated July 3, 1878, with degree of A. B., full classical course; he taught district school in Caledonia in the winters of 1878 and 1879; commenced teaching in the Portage High School in September, 1879; elected County Superintendent of Schools, November, 1879; taught the high school until the holidays; resigned his position in the school Dec. 24, 1879, to assume the duties of the office which he now holds. Mr. Neill is a member of I. O. O. F. lodge.

WILLIAM NIEMEYER was born in Hanover, Germany, Jan. 2, 1830; came to New York and engaged in tailoring in 1850, remained there one and a half years, then came to Milwaukee; removed to Portage in 1854; carried on the tailoring and clothing business until 1861, then engaged in the grocery business, which he has carried on ever since. Mr. Niemyer was married in Portage, July 11, 1857, to Caroline Wentzel, a native of Prussia; they have seven children—Albert J., Lizzie, Charles, William, George, Henry and Emma. Mr. N. is a member of the Lutheran Church, and of the I. O. O. F. lodge.

JOHN J. O'KEEFE, born in North Hadley March 29, 1852; removed from there with his father, John C. O'Keefe, in May, 1853, and came to Wisconsin, locating at Pacific, near Portage, where he remained for about two years, then moved to Portage, and has resided in this vicinity ever since. Mr. O'Keefe engaged in Government surveying for a number of years and steamboating part of two years. He was elected City Clerk in the spring of 1878; re-elected in the spring of 1880; member of the Board of Education from the Third Ward. Mr. O'Keefe received his education in Portage.

M. DE WITT OLDER, son of Amos and Ann Older, was born at Farmersville, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., Dec. 20, 1831; came to Walworth Co., Wis., in 1838, his parents being the third family in the town of Darien; moved to Boone Co., Ill., in 1852; two years afterward removed to Marquette Co., Wis., then went to Minnesota, where he aided in the organization of Martin County and towns; left Minnesota on account of the Indian massacre in 1862; returning to Marquette Co., enlisted in Co. H, 5th W. V. I., Aug. 23, 1864, and was mustered out June 20, 1865, when he again returned to Marquette Co.; in 1869, Mr. O. moved to Lincoln, Adams Co., Wis., where he remained until coming to Portage, March 3, 1880. He was married at Nevada, Martin Co., Minn., April 26, 1859, to Elizabeth A., daughter of James B. and Jane A. Clark, born in Ontario, Canada, June 19, 1839. They have six children—Clark, born Oct. 29, 1860; James Amos, July 26, 1862; Edna, June 25, 1866; Nellie, April 24, 1869; Bert, July 18, 1875, and Cliffe, Nov. 17, 1876. Mr. O. is a member of a lodge of A. F. & A. M.

MRS. MARY A. OWENS, nee Parrish, wife of John T. Owens; she was born July 12, 1828, in the city of Peterborough, England; he is a native of Wales; she sailed from Liverpool in the good ship Milan, on the 14th of May, 1848, and reached New York on the 13th of June, 1848, which was the shortest passage of sailing vessel recorded up to that date; she lived twelve years in Utica, N. Y. She was married in 1850; in the spring of 1860 they came West, and bought land in Caledonia Township, where they lived till 1873; since which date she has resided in Portage. Had four children; three are dead; the other, Anna, is married to a son of Thomas Walker, of Caledonia, and now lives in Bremer Co., Iowa. She keeps a stock of fancy notions, and also does stamping. She is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and is a reliable and useful member of society.

ABRAHAM PADLEY is a native of England; was born at Staley Bridge, Lancashire, Oct. 27, 1828; came to America with his mother in the fall of 1840; lived at New York Mills until he came to Wisconsin, February, 1857; acquired his musical education at Utica, N. Y. When first coming to this State, he settled at Lodi, in this county, where he resided one year; then moving to the town of Dekorra, where he remained six years, in the hotel business and owner of the ferry; moving from Dekorra to Poynette, he engaged in the mercantile business, where he lived for seven years; was Postmaster for about five years during his residence in this place, and then, coming to Portage in the fall of 1871, he engaged in the music business, dealer in pianos, organs and all kinds of musical instruments, and teaching vocal and instrumental music. Mr. Padley was married in Whitestown, Oneida Co., N. Y., August, 1849, to Miss Mary A. Walker, a native of Rome, N. Y. They have two children—Viola J. (now Mrs. J. H. Rogers, of this city) and Julia E. Is a member of the Presbyterian Church; also belongs to the I. O. O. F. Society.

WILLIAM T. PARRY, son of William and Catharine Parry; was born in Bangor, North Wales, May 17, 1837; came to America in 1849; to Wisconsin in September of the same year, locating at Manchester, Green Lake Co.; lived there until 1858, and engaged in farming; in 1859, came to Portage; clerked for about six years with A. D. Forbes; in 1865, the firm of Parry, Bebb & Muir was formed; they were together about four years, when the firm became Parry & Muir, and has continued to present time. Married Margaret Williams June 30, 1857, at Randolph, this county; she died June 30, 1866, leaving two children—Mary A. (now Mrs. Thomas Moss, of Hudson, Wis.) and William. Present wife's maiden name was Annie R. Roberts; were married Aug. 27, 1867, at Westminster Church, Utica, N. Y.; Mrs. P. was born near Bala, North Wales; they have four children—Lemuel R., Floy, Richard and Pierce. Mr. Parry is an Elder of the First Presbyterian Church, and has been Superintendent of Sabbath school for the last eleven years. William Parry, father of William T., died in Cambria; mother is still living; she resides at Randolph, in this county.

JAMES PATERSON was born in Dumfries, Scotland, Sept. 27, 1827; came to America in 1851; spent one year at Athens, Penn., two years in Steuben Co., N. Y., and the balance of the time, until coming to Columbia Co. in 1857, at Franklinville, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y. In the fall of 1860, Mr. P. entered the store he is now connected with; spent the summer of 1870 in Scotland. He was married at Portage, June 5, 1868, to Agnes Reid, born in Hamilton, Scotland. Both are members of the Presbyterian Church. They have one son—James, born in April, 1869. Mr. P. is a member of the Curling Club.

ROBERT C. PIXLEY was born in London, Canada West, Oct. 14, 1832; lived there until the spring of 1850, then came with his parents, Bemus J. and Mary Pixley, to Portage, Wis., arriving April 15, 1850. Father died in the house where he settled, August, 1879; mother died May, 1879, leaving four children—William B., of Stockton, Cal.; Jonathan B., now in Minnesota; Harriet M., now Mrs. Philo M. Plumb, of La Crosse, and Robert C., the subject of the sketch. Mr. P. was engaged in teaming for six or seven years; in the fall of 1856, he went to New Lisbon, Wis., and carried on grocery, livery and express business, until 1861; he then spent one year in California; has been a resident of Portage ever since, dealing in hides, furs, etc., since 1862, with Arthur

M. C. Hobart

FOUNTAIN PRAIRIE.

Bros., with the exception of two years spent in the store of Loomis, Gallett & Breese. Mr. Pixley was married Jan. 20, 1856, to Elizabeth O. Blanchard, a native of Oneida Co., N. Y. They have two children—Charles R., born Jan. 13, 1857, and Minnie L., born Oct. 25, 1860. Mr. P. is now serving as Alderman.

SHERMAN L. PLUMB, the subject of this sketch, was born in Monroe, Fairfield Co., Conn., July 20, 1841; when a lad 16 years of age, he went to Galesburg; was there about four years, then came to Milwaukee, where he remained, most of the time engaged in railroading, until 1866, when he came to Portage and engaged in his present business since coming to this city. Married in Portage, Aug. 27, 1872, Alice I. Stanton; she was born in Lake Co., Ill. Mr. Plumb is a member of the A., F. & A. M.

CHARLES PREHN, carpenter; was born in North Prussia Sept. 23, 1839; came to Milwaukee in 1853; in 1855, he came to Portage and began working at his trade, which business he has since followed. He was married at Portage, Feb. 3, 1861, to Emma La Clair, who was born in Prussia; they have six children—William L., born July 17, 1863; Charles G., born March 18, 1865; Bertha A., born Aug. 6, 1867; Gustav C., born Oct. 15, 1869; Louis, born Jan. 8, 1872, and Augusta D., born Sept. 25, 1876. Mr. P. is a member of the Temple of Honor, and has served as Alderman of the First Ward; his father, John Prehn, died in 1857, but his mother, Minne Prehn, is still living, being over 80 years of age.

LOUIS PREHN, blacksmith; was born in Mecklenburg, Germany, on the 19th of January, 1843; when he was of the age of 10 years, his parents emigrated to America, and located at Milwaukee; his father was a farmer named John Prehn; has lived in Portage since 1855. Was married in January, 1866, to Miss Bertha Neimats, who was born in July, 1846, in Prussia. He has been Supervisor two terms; is connected with the I. O. O. F. Has three children—George, born in 1867; Emma, born in 1872, and Lizzie, born in 1876. His widowed mother lives with him; he is reported as a substantial, reliable citizen; he reports business prosperous.

JAMES PRENTICE, physician and surgeon; was born at Aurora, Erie Co., N. Y., Nov. 15, 1820; came from Erie Co., with his brother, to Milwaukee, in 1844; remained there six months, when he removed to Antioch, Lake Co., Ill., living there one year; then went to St. Charles, Kane Co., Ill., where he studied medicine with Prof. G. W. Richards; he graduated at Indiana Medical College, at La Porte, Ind., in 1847, his preceptor being Professor of Theory and Practice in that institution; came to Fort Winnebago in 1849, and has since made this his home. Was Surgeon of the 23d W. V. I., entering the service in August, 1862, and resigned in February, 1863, on account of ill health, and has since been engaged in the active practice of medicine up to the present time. Was married at Bellefontaine, Columbia Co., Wis., in 1848, to Emma Bonney; she was born in Maine; they have three daughters—Alice (now the wife of R. J. Flint, an editor at Menomonee), Anna and Emma. The Doctor was a Justice of the Peace at Fort Winnebago in an early day.

JAMES O. PRESCOTT, of the firm of Carnegie, Prescott & Co., lumber dealers, and manufacturers of sash, doors and blinds; was born in the town of Sanbornton, Belknap Co., N. H., March 16, 1829; when 16 years of age, he went to Massachusetts; lived in Worcester one year, and then went to Lowell, where he remained until 1855, when he removed to Westfield, N. Y., where he resided until coming to Wisconsin, in May, 1856, locating at Portage, where he has lived ever since; engaged in building, contracting, etc.; soon after coming here, he became associated with A. Carnegie in building operations, and they were together in that business for fifteen years, until 1872; they erected the Veeder House in 1857, the high-school building, the Columbia Co. Court House and Jail, and also built several of the principal blocks of this city; was appointed Under-Sheriff Jan. 1, 1873, and did the business of Sheriff during the term for which William W. Drake was elected; in the fall of 1874, Mr. Prescott was elected Sheriff; has been Under Sheriff all the time since he was Sheriff, with the exception of a few months of the first part of Mr. Conklin's term; was Alderman, from 1864 to 1871, of the Second Ward; was President of the Council two years, and a member of the School Board one year. Was married in Lowell, Mass., Oct. 20, 1851, to Sophia T. Mass; she was born at Fairfield, Me.; they have two children—Allie L. and Laura E.

EDMUND S. PURDY is a native of the city of New York; was born Sept. 6, 1845; is a son of Edmund and Harriet Purdy, who came to Wisconsin, locating at Fox Lake, Dodge Co., in 1846, and have resided there to the present time; E. S. lived there until the fall of 1868; has been engaged in the drug trade since he became 13 years of age; with Frances Ibberson, of Fox Lake, for ten years; then in Ripon one year; engaged in business for himself several years; took charge of the business for Waterhouse & Davis since April 9, 1871; Henry Merrell was a partner with him until his death, in May, 1876; Mr. Merrell's heirs were interested in the business until Dec. 8, 1879; is also engaged in the manufacture of the Vacuum Cream Extractor, for the last two years. Married at Portage, Sept. 13, 1871, to Helen M. Merrell, daughter of Henry Merrell; she was born at Ft. Winnebago July 1, 1850, and was probably the first one christened in the Episcopal Church of Portage; they have two children—Henry Edmund, born October, 1872, and Hattie Elizabeth, born Nov. 5, 1874. Mr. Purdy has been Alderman of the Second Ward four years; is at present member of the School Board.

JOHN D. PUGH, of the firm of J. D. Pugh & Co., grocers; born in North Wales, February, 1847; is the son of David and Laura Pugh, who came to America when John D. was an infant, 11 months of age, locating in Green Lake Co., where they still reside; Mr. Pugh lived in Green Lake Co. most of the time, until 1868; during the next three and a half years, was engaged clerking for J. M. Darling; returned to Green Lake Co. and was employed in farming, up to the fall of 1877; has been in business for himself since March, 1879, associated with Thomas W. Drew.

JOB PURNELL was born in Trowbridge, Wiltshire, England, Dec. 1, 1819; came to America in 1841, and located at Norwich, Conn., remaining there until 1853, when he moved to Ohio, where he resided one year before coming to Wisconsin, to Portage, where he located in 1854, and has resided here ever since, and engaged in present business, dealing in stoves, tinware, etc., up to present time, with the exception of two years that he worked for Bacon & Atkins. Mr. P. was married, at Norwich, Conn., Oct. 23, 1844, to Emma Osborne; she was born in Somersetshire, England; they have five children—Eliza E., now Mrs. Arthur O. Stevens, of Milwaukee; Mary A., now Mrs. J. F. Coss, of Milwaukee; Susan M., now Mrs. Alex. Thompson, of this city; Sarah O. and Minnie A.; lost one daughter, aged 14 months, died in 1858. Mrs. Purnell died here Jan. 3, 1879.

GEORGE S. RACE, route agent on the C. M. & St. P. R. R.; born at Mineral Point, Wis., on the 15th of October, 1843; lived with his parents until his enlistment in the United States service at Portage, on the 15th of September, 1861, in Co. E, Capt. Geo. N. Richmond, of 2d W. C., under command of Col. C. C. Washburn; the company went in barracks at Cold Springs, Milwaukee, during the winter of 1861 and 1862, for drill and discipline; in April, 1862, the regiment was removed to Benton Barracks, St. Louis, Mo., where it was mounted, armed and equipped, and thence ordered to Helena, Ark.; while there, he was Chief Clerk in Post Provost Marshal's Office; afterward, he was Commissary Sergeant; was appointed Commissary Sergeant of the regiment on 1st of September, 1863; he "veteranized" on the 1st of January, 1865, and on the 30th of same month, he was commissioned First Lieutenant and made Regimental Quartermaster, in which capacity he served till mustered out at Austin, Texas, on the 15th, 1865; the regiment was in the Army of the Southwest, serving in Missouri, Tennessee, Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas and Texas, and took part in several battles; since the war, he has been clerk, bookkeeper, mechanic, and is now in railway mail service between Chicago and La Crosse. He was married Sept. 27, 1866, to Miss Agnes Carnegie, of Portage; they have four children—Earl, Harry, Fred and Ralph. He is a Mason and member of Temple of Honor; lives on Pleasant street.

SYLVENTUS RACE, son of William N. and Vienna Race, was born on the 28th of February, 1814, in Berkshire Co., Mass. He lived with his parents several years after they removed to Lorain Co., Ohio; he came West in the fall of 1836, and settled in Mineral Point, Wis. He was married May 6, 1841, to Miss Sarah Van Ornum, who was born Nov. 12, 1823, in Chautauqua Co., N. Y. He is a carpenter and joiner, and has worked many years at his trade. While living in Mineral Point in 1840, he went to New Orleans with five boat loads of copper ore, as a speculative experiment. After marriage he took charge of a hotel for three years, and afterward farmed for three years; he tried mercantile life three years at Dodgeville. In 1850, he settled in Portage, and has been a continuous resident to date. They have had six children; two died in childhood; the living are named George S., Earl, Frank A., and Abner H.; and Harriet S. Green, who from early childhood has been as a daughter, and is thoroughly identified with the family. The five are married, and four have settled in Portage, and one, Earl, is in Idaho Ter. For nearly twenty-five years, Mr. Race worked at his trade in Portage; his wife excels as a landlady; for several years they have owned and kept a large boarding house on the corner of Mack and Emmett Streets; they have an average patronage of forty; sometimes sixty to seventy per day take meals with them, and they have rooms to accommodate fifty boarders. While at Mineral Point he was Jailer and Under Sheriff; he is a Free-thinker; is a kind, social man and good citizen. Mrs. Race's father was a prominent Spiritualist, and she, from childhood, has professed the same faith: she is a lady of good executive ability, and the "Race House" is well patronized.

MRS. MARTHA S. REED (nee Brooks) was born Aug. 30, 1830, in township of Hancock, Vt.; she was married in November, 1855, to D. F. Chandler, of Vermont, and soon afterward came West and located in Milwaukee. He was a passenger engineer on the C. M. & St. P. R.; he was killed April 28, 1857, by his engine running off the track at Beaver Dam; his injuries were internal, and he died that day at the residence of the Hon. Scott Sloan, where he had been immediately taken. He was born Dec. 24, 1829, in West Randolph, Vt.; he left one son, Wallace B., born November, 1855; he is now ticket agent and telegraph operator at Portage, for the C. M. & St. P. R. R. Mrs. Chandler was married in January, 1863, to Theodore Reed, who had been for several years ticket agent and telegraph operator at Portage, for the C. M. & St. P. R., which position he held until his death in 1873; his only surviving son, by a former marriage, Oliver T. Reed, succeeded him in that position, and held the same until his death, in March, 1879; and he, in turn, is succeeded by Mrs. Reed's son, Wallace, the present incumbent of the office. Mr. Reed left three children, all of whom are living—Martha H., born in 1865; Angie E., in 1868; and Julia Maud, in 1872; the oldest is at school in Massachusetts; Mr. Reed and his son, Oliver T., were Masons; Mrs. Reed's pleasant home is located on the corner of Dunn and Emmett streets.

JOHN REID, son of Andrew and Janet Reid, was born in Paisley, Scotland, Feb. 24, 1835; came to Buffalo, Marquette Co., Wis., with his parents, in 1850, where his father died, in 1854, and where his mother still resides. Mr. Reid came to Portage in 1865, and engaged in the stock and produce business, which he has since followed. He was married in Buffalo, Marquette Co., in December, 1860, to Margaret H. Muir, born in Dunbar, Scotland; they have five children—Anna G., Jessie S., Henry D., Maggie May and John J.; a son died in infancy. The firm of Reid & Foster are the heaviest dealers in wool in Wisconsin.

DR. RICHARD C. ROCKWOOD was born in Utica, N. Y., Nov. 23, 1814; came to Milwaukee in May, 1836, but returned to Utica in the fall. In May, 1837, he again landed at Milwaukee, and soon after visited Madison, Mineral Point, Blue Mounds and Dekorra, returning to the East via Chicago, in September. On the journey home, he rode, for the first time, after a locomotive, from Adrian, Mich., to Toledo, Ohio. In April, 1845, Dr. Rockwood returned to Spring Prairie, Walworth Co., where he entered land, in August, 1837; one year later, he moved to Wyocena, Columbia Co., where he lived until coming to Portage, in 1872; assisted in rolling up the first log house at Oconomowoc. He has been in practice thirty-six years, being at first the only physician between Wyocena and St. Paul, and also engaged in farming. Dr. Rockwood was Justice of the Peace, at Wyocena, twelve years and has been Alderman, Street Commissioner and Supervisor, at Portage. He married Mahala Packard, in Otsego Co., N. Y., who died in 1860, leaving two children—Helen A. and Charles S. The Doctor married his present wife, Rosa Conlon, a native of County Louth, Ireland, at Madison, in September, 1860; they have four children—Ernest S., Louis, Mellie A., and Edward. The Doctor is Treasurer of the Chapter of Royal Arch Masons; at Wyocena, he kept the "Cottage Inn," from 1847 to 1859; was President of the Columbia County Agricultural Association in 1876.

J. H. ROGERS, District Attorney, was born in Oshawa, Ontario, July 27, 1841; educated in Canada; graduated from Victoria University in the spring of 1866; entered Osgood Hall August, 1866; was articled to attorneys at Oshawa, and afterward graduated from the Law Department of Michigan University, at Ann Arbor, in the spring of 1868, and came to Wisconsin immediately afterward, locating at Poynette, residing there one year and a half, practicing his profession; he then went to the State of New York, where he spent one year, returning to Wisconsin and locating in Portage, in the spring of 1871, when he engaged in the practice of law, which he has continued ever since; has been District Attorney since 1874, having been elected three times to this office. Married, at Portage June 12, 1872, to Miss Viola J. Padley, daughter of Abraham Padley, who located at Lodi, about twenty years ago; she was born at York Mills, Oneida Co., N. Y.; they have two children—Edith Ethelyn, born Sept. 19, 1875; Selden Wallace, Sept. 1, 1877. Mr. Rogers was one of the charter members of the A. O. U. W. of this city.

LEONARD S. ROLLESTON is a native of Nottinghamshire, England; was born Sept. 19, 1834. Married, in Leicester, England, Jan. 22, 1857, to Maria Newton; she was born in Leicester Dec. 21, 1835; they have twelve children—Elizabeth A., Florence E. and Flora L. (twins), Maria L., John P., Ida Fannie, Arthur Septimus, Ada F., Leonard William, Alice Maud, William Launcelot and Beulah Octavia. Came to Wisconsin March, 1857, and located in the town of Lowville, on Sec. 5; was there six years, then moved to the adjoining town of Wyocena, on Sec. 32, still retaining his property in the town of Lowville; resided in Wyocena until Jan. 1, 1875, when he came to Portage, having been elected County Clerk in November, 1874; he was re-elected in 1876 and 1878. While residing in Wyocena he held the offices of Town Clerk two years, Justice of the Peace two years, and several times member of the School Board. Mr. Rolleston is a member of the A. F. & A. M. Lodge. In 1854, he graduated from Rossal College, at Lancashire, England, he being in the first class, fourth form. During the Crimean war, he served as Lieutenant of Co. No. 6, 57th Regiment Royal Sherwood Foresters.

JAMES RUTHVEN was born in Glasgow, Scotland, Sept. 8, 1814; when 1 year of age, his parents moved to Kendall, Westmorelandshire, England, where he lived thirty-two years; came to America, and first located at Albany, N. Y.; resided there until 1856, then came to Chicago, where he remained until he came to Marcellon in September, 1865; resided in the latter place until the spring of 1878; worked at shoemaking when 15 years of age; while in Kendall was employed in a wholesale grocery store for fifteen years. Mr. R. was married, at Kendall, Westmoreland, England, Nov. 28, 1838, to Agnes Sandford, a native of Westmorelandshire, England; they have three children living—Isabella S., now Mrs. Walter Riddell; John and Alan, and have lost five—Mary Ann, 4 years; Edwin, 9 months, and three infant children. Mr. R. is a member of the Temple of Honor, Good Templar, and Sons of Temperance societies.

PIERCE RYAN, son of Chief Justice Ryan and Caroline Willard (Pierce) Ryan; was born in Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 9, 1851, and resided there until early in 1865, when he went to Boston; lived there and in that vicinity about four years; two years of this time at Dummer Academy, and two years with a Calcutta importing house in the city of Boston; he then returned to his native city, and was with the Milwaukee Iron Company eight or nine years. Since the summer of 1876, has been in the employ of the C. M. & St. P. R. R. Co.; in January, 1877, came to Portage, and remained three months, and settled here permanently in October, 1877. Was married, at Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 1, 1879, to Miss Isadore M. Risdon; she was born in Ann Arbor.

JAMES S. SANBORN, ice dealer and brick manufacturer; born in Grafton Co., N. H., Nov. 14, 1837; is the son of Martin L. and Emeline Sanborn, his early life was passed on his father's farm; at the age of 24, he took a full course in Eastman's Commercial College, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., after which he clerked in a grocery store three years in Boston; then he spent nearly two years at Bristol, N. H., with Jason C. Draper, learning the Plymouth Glove business; in September, 1868, he came to Boscobel, Wis., where he clerked till January, 1871, at which time he took a contract to saw the wood on the Northern and La Crosse Divisions of the C. M. & St. P. R. R., and the contract has been in continuous force to the present day. He was married June 12, 1872, to Miss Anna E. Estabrook, of Brunswick, Me.; they have since resided in Portage; he has manufactured brick since 1873; will, in 1880, make 2,000,000 brick in Portage; last winter he put up 10,000 tons of ice at Fox Lake and Waukan, for the Milwaukee market; the ice used here is harvested at Silver Lake, near Portage; they have three children—Ellen D., born May 7, 1873; Dwight A., born Sept. 12, 1875, and Anna L., born July 6, 1877. He aims to vote for the best men, is not active in politics, but is of Democratic proclivities; he is a Methodist, and his wife is a Congregationalist; she is a member of the local Shakespearean Club; they have a pleasant home on Prospect Hill.

JOHN M. SANDERSON was born in Newburg, N. Y., Sept. 17, 1838, and lived in Albany from his youth until he came West; enlisted in Albany, N. Y., August, 1862, in Haverlock Battery, and served until the close of the war; was in all of the engagements his command was in after he enlisted; the principal battles he was in were Cold Harbor, second battle of Bull Run, Petersburg, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg; came to Portage in 1866 and engaged in the business of cigar-making for himself, which business he still continues. Married in Portage to Helen Augusta Linseott; she was born in Utica, N. Y.; they have have two children—Warren F. and Harry.

JOHN W. SARGENT, freight engineer on main line P. & M.; born in Lake Village, Belknap Co., N. H., Oct. 21, 1838; his father, William T., was proprietor of the hotel at Lake Village; at the age of 14, he began railroad life as a water boy on a gravel-train on the B. C. & M. R. R.; at the age of 16, he was given the position of fireman on the same gravel-train; after a year's experience, he was sent on to a passenger train, and continued there until fall of 1856, when he came West; he landed in Milwaukee on Christmas, 1856, and, on Dec. 28, he began firing on a freight running between Milwaukee and Fox Lake, on C. M. & St. P.; in spring of 1857, the road was opened through to Portage; he was for awhile engine-dispatcher at Portage, and afterward the same at Milwaukee; in the fall of 1858, while on a visit to New Hampshire, he came near death's door with typhoid fever; this detained him till spring of 1860, when he returned and took his old position of fireman, and that fall he was given an engine, which he ran till the time of his enlistment; Co. F, 2d W. V. I., was formed entirely of railroad men. He enlisted in that company Aug. 21, 1862, and was honorably discharged on surgeon's certificate of disability after about one year's service; on his partial recovery, he was given his old situation on the railroad; he was four years on the W. W., two of which was while the St. P. ran it, and the last two years by request of W. W. and consent of St. P., and he has been in continuous engineer service to date—part time freight, and sometimes passenger. Mr. Sargent has been longest in engineer service of any now living in the county. He was married Feb. 22, 1868, to Miss Julia B. Snow, of Watertown, Wis.; they have no children; he belongs to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; they have boarded since marriage until this season. Mrs. F. N. Snow, his wife's mother, lives with them; the family are social and respected.

CHARLES SCHARIEN was born in Mecklenburg, Germany, Dec. 5, 1852; came to Portage, stopping three weeks in New York on his way from Europe, in March, 1878, where he has since been engaged as book-keeper for Haertel's brewery. Mr. S. is a member of the Odd Fellows' Lodge, Turner's and Leidenkranz Societies and Hook and Ladder Company. He was married in Mecklenburg Feb. 15, 1875, to Carolina Kopeke, born in Mecklenburg; they have three children living—Amelia, Charles and Louis, and have lost one—Hulda, who died at Portage in July, 1878, aged 2 years; before engaging with the Haertels, Mr. S. was with Schumacher & Schulze two months.

MISS MARIA SHaub, first cook at the Corning House; was born in Waterford, Racine Co., Wis., in 1855; her father is a furniture dealer in Waterford; has worked several years in private families, and two and a half years in the hotel. She is a Catholic. To her skillful hand can be traced the well-prepared substantial which so attract the hungry traveler to the Corning House.

FRANK SCHERBURT was born in Prussia March 12, 1856; is the son of Christoph and Mary Schubarth, who emigrated to America when Frank was 11 years of age, locating in Portage, where they still reside; has worked at cigar-making for about eight years, and has been in business for himself during the last four and a half years as manufacturer of cigars and dealer in tobacco and smokers' articles. He is a member of the Turner Society and Hook and Ladder Company.

BENJAMIN SCHULZE was born June 9, 1801, in Taura, Saxony, where, when he had reached a suitable age, he was apprenticed to learn the art of butchering, the mysteries of weaving, and the rudiments of music, all from the same master; Mr. Schulze remembers having seen, when he was 13 years old, Napoleon Bonaparte's army as it passed through his native town en route to Russia, and was soon afterward employed with the Prussians in making fortifications for the purpose of retaking Torgau, on the Elba—which place the French had captured in 1810—and was present during the fight that followed, and saw the town set on fire; he also witnessed the shooting by Russians of three French soldiers for horse stealing, the victims being placed upon the edge of a lake, and pushed backward into the water when killed; after finishing his apprenticeship, he went to Schmannewitz, where he engaged in his various avocations, applying himself more particularly to the study of music. Here it was that he met and married Johanna Rosina Wagenknecht, the matrimonial event taking place April 25, 1824; Schmannewitz was the home of Mrs. Schulze's parents; she was born Jan. 2, 1804, and also bore witness to the French invasion; when the news was received that the army was approaching, her father, who was a farmer, collected his small flock of cattle and ran them into the woods, to save them from being carried off by the advancing foe, while Johanna, then but 9 years of age, gathered together her younger brothers and sisters, and marched them into the village of Schmannewitz, where, a few days later, she heard the roar of cannon in the historical battle of Leipsic. In 1830, Mr. Schulze removed to Tamenheim, a small Saxon hamlet, and there engaged in hotel keeping in addition to his three professions; in 1833, he went to Sitzenroda, and purchased a farm and tavern for $1,600, living there until 1850, when he came to America, crossing the Atlantic Ocean in the sail-ship "Amalia," and bringing with him his wife, eight sons and one daughter, the eldest son, who was then 25 years of age, remaining in the fatherland, in the service of the Emperor as bugler in one of the national bands; the family arrived in Portage, by way of Quebec, Buffalo and Milwaukee, July 28 of the same year, stopping at the old Franklin House; a settlement was soon after made on the east side of Silver Lake, on a quarter section of land, which was soon placed under cultivation; and here, for thirty years, they have made their home; Mr. Schulze is 79 years of age, and his wife but three years younger. There have been born to this now aged couple ten children, as follows: Frederick (now Secretary of a National Telegraph Bureau, in Bautzen, Saxony), born May 15, 1825; Charles (drowned in the Mississippi River, April 17, 1865), born Aug. 20, 1829; Henry (now in Chicago), born Nov. 13, 1831; Frank (died May 22, 1879), born Jan. 14, 1833; Hermann (now living in Oregon), born March 9, 1836; Ferdinand, born July 20, 1839; Frederick W., born March 6, 1842; Samuel, born July 22, 1845; Minnie, born Feb. 17, 1847; Benjamin, born Jan. 7, 1849. Mr. and Mrs. Schulze celebrated their golden wedding April 25, 1874, the occasion being appropriately observed; the famous Schulze Band was, of course, present; the old gentleman once more taking part in the musical exercises; there were seven children present; a very touching poem, fifty verses in length, commemorative of the occasion, written by the absent son in Germany, was read, also one of the same length, composed by the family pastor, the Rev. A. Klein; both were published in the Columbia County Wrecker; Mr. and Mrs. Schulze are apparently in as good health as ever, and have not yet outlived their usefulness.

MRS. BARBARA SCHULZE, nee Schwartz, widow of August Frank Schulze; she was born May 1, 1840, in Wittenburg, Germany; her deceased husband was born on the 14th of January, 1833, in Prussia; he came to the United States in 1850, and settled in Portage, where he was for many years a hardware merchant. He was married, Feb. 5, 1860, to the estimable lady who survives him. From early boyhood, he was a member of "Schulze brass band," organized by his father, and composed mainly of the Schulze family. He died on the 23d of May, 1879; they had eleven children, six of whom died in infancy; the living are Louis, born Dec. 6, 1860; Oscar, born Dec. 13, 1868; Herman H., born Nov. 12, 1872; August Frank, born Feb. 2, 1875, and Samuel A., born Dec. 15, 1877. All the children reside at home. Louis is salesman in the store in which Mrs. Schulze still retains an interest. She has a small place of about 20 acres near Portage, and her pleasant home on corner of Howard and De Witt streets. Mrs. S. is a member of the Evangelical Church, and so also was her husband. He was a social gentleman, and a good citizen. The family are all highly respected.

FERDINAND SCHULZE, the subject of this sketch, was born in Saxony, Prussia, July 20, 1840; came to America in 1850, and located at Portage, and spent his time until 1861 on his father's farm; he then went across the Plains to Nevada, and for five years was engaged in mining and music business; returned to this county in the spring of 1866, and occupied his time in farming for two years in the town of Hampden, in this county; then came to Portage, and engaged in the mercantile business, which he has continued ever since. Mr. S. was married in Milwaukee, March 2, 1880, to Minnie A. Dent; she was born in St. Mary's Co., Md., near Washington, D. C.; is a daughter of Dr. Walter Brewer and Margaret (Fowler) Dent. Mr. Dent was born in Charles Co., Md.; he came to Milwaukee in 1852; returned to Maryland in 1854, and remained until 1859, when he again came to Milwaukee, and came to Portage in 1861; died July 31, 1867. Mrs. Dent is a native of Charlotte Hall, St. Mary's Co., Md.

FRIEDRICK W. SCHULZE, a native of Saxony, Prussia; born March 6, 1842, and came to America with his parents, Benjamin and Johanna R. Schulze, in 1850, locating in the town of Portage, where they still reside. Mr. S.'s early life was spent on his father's farm until the age of 21, then worked three years at the carpenter and joiner's trade, when he went to California, spending five years there. From 1863 to 1867, while in California, his whole attention was devoted to instrumental music and the composing of music; returned to Portage in 1867; he was a member of the firm of Schumaecher, Schulze & Bro., for a few years; then, in 1873, for about ten months, he carried on mercantile business at Minneapolis, Minn.; afterward returned to Portage and engaged in banking business, which he has continued ever since. Married in Portage, Aug. 9, 1872, to Miss Margaret A. Haertel; she was born at Portage; they have three children—Clara, Anna and Carl. Mr. and Mrs. S. are members of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, and Mr. S. is a member of the A. F. & A. M.

LOUIS SCHULTZ was born in Portage Sept. 25, 1856; son of Christian and Maggie Schultz, both residents of Portage; engaged in surveying, etc., on government improvements from 1871 to September, 1878, running engine in connection with the river improvements and Wisconsin River steamboats; engineer in Haertel's brewery since September, 1878. Mr. S. was married in Madison, Wis., Dec. 25, 1878, to Mary Uphoff; they have one child—Carrie Dora. He is a member of the Hook and Ladder Co.

SAMUEL SCHULZE, son of Benjamin and Johanna Schulze; born in Saxony, Prussia, July 22, 1845; came to America in 1850, arriving in Portage on the 28th of July of that year. In 1863, commenced learning his trade—tinsmith—with I. W. Bacon, with whom he remained six years, with the exception of about seven months while in the army. He entered the United States service Feb. 14, 1865, as a member of Co. D, 46th W. V. I., and was mustered out Sept. 27 following. At the expiration of his six years' service with Mr. Bacon, he went to Virginia City, Mont.; returning, he was with his brother Henry for awhile in Chicago; then purchased a stock of hardware of Charles Goodyear and commenced business in 1876, in Portage, in partnership with his brother Frank, who died May 22, 1879. Is now carrying on an extensive hardware store. Has been a member of the I. O. O. F. since 1868.

GERHARD SCHUMACHER was born in Cologne, Prussia, April 12, 1840; he emigrated to America in 1854, locating in Milwaukee; remained there about two years, and then came to Portage, and engaged in clerking for N. H. Wood & Co., and continued to clerk for about eleven years; has been in business for himself since April, 1869, under the firm name of Schumacher, Schulze & Bro., for three years, when Fred W. Schulze withdrew, the firm name then became Schumacher & Schulze, and has remained so up to the present time. He was married at Portage on March 4, 1857, to Wilhelmina Schulze; she was born in Saxony; they have five children—Fred W., Samuel M., Milton, Benjamin and Ferdinand.

GUSTAVUS A. SELBACH was born in Prussia May 1, 1838, and came to America in 1857, locating at Columbus, Ohio, where he resided until the breaking-out of the war, when he enlisted in Co. F, 13th O. V. I., served six months, and eight months in the 9th O. V. C., and in August, 1862, he enlisted in Co. M, 9th O. V. C., and was in all the engagements of Kilpatrick's cavalry. After the war, he remained in Columbus about a year; in the fall of 1869, he located at Appleton, Wis., and engaged in publishing the Appleton Volksfreund, the first German paper published there, and continued its publication for three years, when he again returned to Ohio, and started the Mansfield Courier, the first German paper at Mansfield, conducted that paper a year and a half, when he returned to Appleton, spending eight months there, when he came to Portage in 1874, and has been conducting the Columbia County Wecker ever since. Mr. Selbach was married at Columbus, Ohio, in the fall of 1868, to Mary Buerkle; she is a native of Baden, Germany; they have six children—Matilda, Lizzie, Charles, Lydia, Gerhart and Lotta. He is a member of the A. O. U. W.

GEORGE SHACKELL, son of Thomas and Mary (Tyrrell) Shackell, was born near Banbury, Oxfordshire, England, June 15, 1821; came to Portage in 1853, making a contract to build a house for Judge Dixon, the first brick house erected in Portage; he was the first mason in Portage; he has followed the contracting and building ever since, and has been a master mason forty-five years—the leading mason of Portage. Mr. Shackell was married in Southery, Oxfordshire, England, Oct. 17, 1843, to Elizabeth Bishop, daughter of Richard and Rachael Gough, born at that place Sept. 3, 1822; they have five children—William, born in England, July 15, 1846, who is a mason in Portage; Elizabeth, born July 17, 1850, in England; George T., born Jan. 9, 1856, at Portage; Richard G., born Sept. 7, 1859, and Francis W., born Sept. 6, 1861. They have lost three children—John Gough, born in England, Aug. 2, 1844, and died at Portage Jan. 29, 1855; Mary, born in England, June 25, 1843, and died June 28, 1843, and Edgar Gough, born in Portage Jan. 9, 1858, and died Aug. 24, 1858. Mr. Shackell is serving a second term as Supervisor; he is a member of St. John's Church; Vestryman of that church for six years, the corner-stone of which he assisted Bishop Kemper in laying. His children have all completed a full course in the high school.

NOEL K. SHATTUCK was born in Bakersfield, Franklin Co., Vt., May 9, 1822, and lived there until 1845, then moving to Hamburg, Erie Co., N. Y., where he taught in the academy, as Principal, two years; he then went to Moundsville, Va. (now West Virginia), and engaged in teaching there from 1847 to 1872, in the academy, a classical school; was proprietor and Principal of the institution, which was known as Moundsville Academy. Mr. Shattuck received his education at Bakersfield Academy, Bakersfield, Vt.; he came to Wisconsin in 1872, locating at Portage; he engaged in a commercial college a few months, then engaged in general insurance business; Mr. S. has held the office of Superintendent of City Schools in Portage. Married at Moundsville, Va., July 12, 1853, to Emily S. Purdy; she was born at Moundsville Aug. 31, 1833; have five children—Elizabeth Lucelia, Louis L., Emily J., Laura V. and Charles B.

PATRICK SHEEHAN was born on Prince Edward Island, British North America, in April, 1827; came to Wisconsin in June, 1851, locating at Watertown, eighteen months, after which he came to Portage. Mr. S. was bridge-tender four years; worked at the carpenter's trade; has been a contractor and builder; was Alderman, and is now serving as Marshal. He was married at Portage June 26, 1854, to Margaret H. Maloney, who was born in County Tipperary, Ireland, Dec. 15, 1834; they have seven children—William, born Feb. 11, 1857; Johanna A., March 2, 1860; John H., May 4, 1863; Thomas G., Feb. 24, 1868; Patrick E., Sept. 12, 1870; Mary E., April 30, 1873, and Clara, Feb. 28, 1876. They have lost two children—Mary, aged 1 year and 7 months, and Frank, aged 4 years and 10 months. They are members of St. Mary's Church.

ALEXANDER SHERET was born at Ft. Winnebago Oct. 9, 1850; in 1860, he commenced clerking for D. Ferguson, in Portage; was with him nearly two years; afterward, was at Green Bay for a short time; for the last eight years, he has been with E. L. Jaeger, as salesman; in the spring of 1880, he commenced his present business, carrying on business with a partner; they deal in fancy goods, notions, hosiery, furnishing goods, etc.; a fine assortment of goods in their line will always be found at their establishment, which is located near Bard's jewelry store. Mr. Sheret's parents, Alexander and Margaret Robinson Sheret, were born at Montrose, Scotland; his father was engaged in the hardware trade in Portage for several years prior to his death; his widow is still a resident of Portage. The subject of this sketch was married in Portage Nov. 1, 1876, to Miss Emma E., daughter of J. B. Wood, now a resident of Ft. Winnebago. Mr. S. is a member of the I. O. O. F. Lodge and Encampment; he and his wife are members of the Presbyterian Church.

A. E. SMITH, the subject of this sketch, was born in the town of Cabot, Vt., Sept. 25, 1820; he moved to Massachusetts and lived there about nine years prior to his coming to Wisconsin, when he came in May, 1857, locating at Plover, Portage Co.; he remained there three months, then went to Waupaca, Waupaca Co., Wis.; was engaged in the hotel business there for eleven years, removing from there to Beaver Dam; he kept the Clark House for four years; rented the Silver House and kept both houses; sold out there and kept the eating-house at Minnesota Junction for a year and a half, and from there went to Elroy Junction, and was proprietor of the eating-house there for six years; owned a farm in Columbia County for a number of years, and lived there in 1879; in 1880, purchased the Corning House, of which he is at present proprietor. Mr. Smith was married in Cabot, Vt., June 10, 1844, to Sarah O. Warner, a native of Cabot; they have three children—Clinton E., Edna and Eddie W.; lost one daughter, who died at about the age of 3 years.

SILAS M. SMITH was born in the town of Bastard, County of Leeds, Upper Canada, Sept. 27, 1815, and is the son of Silas and Phoebe Smith, who were natives of the State of Vermont. He came to Michigan in 1837, locating at Orion, Oakland Co.; came to Watertown, Wis., in May, 1842; remained there one year; then going to the town of Aztalan, where he stayed about a year; from there, removed to Portland, Dodge Co., where he erected the first house in the town, which was about 1844; then moving again, he came to Fountain Prairie, Columbia Co., in 1846; was the first Town Clerk, and held that office for several successive years; was elected Justice of Peace in 1849, and held that office for a number of years; worked at the carpenter and joiner trade for a time; was engaged in merchandising with Mr. Brayton for two or three years, and in business alone for some time, until the fall of 1857 or 1858, when he sold out, and removed to Randolph, and carried on the mercantile business over the line in Dodge Co., living, however, on this side of the line; was appointed Clerk of the Court in December, 1871; November, 1872, elected to the position of Clerk of the court, and re-elected in 1874 and 1876; then buying the abstract business of Alverson & Yule, in connection with C. L. Dering—the business being carried on at the present time by them under the firm name of Smith & Dering. Silas M. Smith was married at Brockville, Canada, Jan. 31, 1837, to Mary Ann Campbell; she died in the town of Portland, Dodge Co., Aug. 5, 1845, leaving three children. One son, George A., now at Lanark, Ill.; is agent for the W. U. R. R. Co.; has been stationed there for the last ten years, and twenty years with the same company; he also served in an Iowa regiment for two years during the late rebellion. Mr. Silas M. Smith married for his second wife, Cynthia M. Bennett, in Fountain Prairie, Oct. 2, 1847; she died in Portage, June 16, 1876, leaving one daughter, who is now Mrs. Azelia M. Wilde. His present wife was Ann Jeannette Gallett, a native of Penn Yan, Yates Co., N. Y.; married Aug. 28, 1877. Mr. S. was Supervisor of Fountain Prairie in 1857; served three years as Supervisor from Randolph, Columbia Co., in 1870, 1871 and 1872.

REINHART A. SPRECHER was born in Madison, Wis., Sept. 24, 1857; resided at Madison, until 1868, when he came to Portage. His father died in 1860, and his mother in 1868, and being a nephew of Carl Haertel, who became his guardian, he came here to live with him. He owned the Sprecher Brewery at Madison until October, 1879, when he sold it, and engaged in banking since March, 1875, and has remained in it ever since, except the summer of 1879, which he spent in Europe. Mr. Sprecher received his education in the public school, and the high school of Portage, Commercial College, etc. He was the son of Frederick Reinhart and Margaretta (Hollenback) Sprecher; his father came to Madison in 1847, and mother came in 1848, the year they were married. His father was one of the first brewers of Madison; established his brewery in 1848; put up the first permanent building in that year, and continued the business up to the time of his death. There were ten children in the family, and Reinhart is the only one who survives.

HON. ALVA STEWART is a native of Morrisville, Madison Co., N. Y.; was born Oct. 24, 1821, and came to Ft. Atkinson, Jefferson Co., in the fall of 1847, and came to Portage in the summer of 1853; while in Jefferson Co. he was a member of the Assembly in 1850; also a member of the Senate, and member of the Court of Impeachment which tried Judge Hubbell. Mr. Stewart commenced to read law with Hon. Nathaniel Foote, of Morrisville, afterward with J. C. Curtis, of Canastota, and finally with Whipple Jenkins, of Vernon, Oneida Co., N. Y.; admitted to the bar in Wisconsin in 1847. The Judge practiced law until February, 1865, when he was appointed Circuit Judge and has been elected several times since, never having any opposition. He is now serving his third term. Was married, at Munsville, Madison Co., N. Y., Aug. 24, 1845, to Miss Ann McPherson; she was born at Munsville, N. Y.; they have three children—Ellen L., now Mrs. O. M. Clark, of Winona, Minn.; Clara Belle, now Mrs. A. W. Walters, of Denver, Colo.; Fannie, now Mrs. C. A. Goodyear, of Tomah.

JOHN W. ST. JOHN was born in Utica, N. Y., April 13, 1841; son of William P. St. John; came with parents to Portage May 18, 1855; was in office of Clerk of Court one and a half years; several years engaged as a clerk in the lumber business, and for eleven years took the entire charge; was engaged in mercantile and lumber business at Neillsville, Clark Co., for two years; with a lumbering company on Chippewa River three years, since which time he has resided in Portage. Mr. St. John was married, in Portage, May 23, 1864, to Martha E. Harriman, a native of Clinton, Me. William P. St. John, father of J. W., was born in Madison Co., N. Y., in 1809, and was an extensive dealer in grain and wool until 1868; died November 1876, leaving one child—John W., the subject of this sketch.

Z. J. D. SWIFT was born in Delhi, Delaware Co., N. Y., Jan. 1, 1835; son of Joseph and Susan Swift; his parents moved to Greene Co., N. Y., when he was but 1 year old, lived there until 5 years of age, when they removed to West Point, N. Y.; remained there until moving to Wisconsin, in the year 1855, settling in Wyocena; before coming West, Mr. Swift learned the trade of painting, and served a partial apprenticeship as carpenter in New York City. Was married to Lydia A. Dow, daughter of Benjamin Dow, a farmer of Wyocena, who came there in an early day, Jan. 1, 1859; she was born in Cattaraugus Co., N. Y.; they have three children—Edwin J., born Jan. 1, 1860; Charles R., Dec. 25, 1863, and Edith G., Oct. 15, 1869. Mr. S. is a member of the A. F. & A. M., Secretary of the Agricultural Society for the last three years, Coroner of the county for a number of years, Justice of the Peace, since 1860, with the exception of one or two years Postmaster at Pacific since 1861, has been Town Treasurer, and has been Town Clerk several times; he has also kept the plank-road toll gate since 1860.

ANDREW TARNUTZER was born in Switzerland Nov. 22, 1834; attended school there until 1846, when he came to Sauk Co., Wis., among the first settlers; his father and mother both died in Sauk Co., and were buried at Little Prairie, or Black Hawk, in the town of Troy, in the Evangelical Cemetery, opposite the old homestead, which Mr. T. still owns; he is a self-made man in every sense of the word. Mr. T. entered the ministry of the Evangelical Association in 1855, and was on probation in the Cedar Rapids Mission, traveling all the time; there one year; then in the spring of 1856, the present conference was formed, of which he was one of the founders; he is now Presiding Elder.

JAMES B. TAYLOR is a native of Rupert, Bennington Co., Vt., born Aug. 15, 1840; was educated at Burr Seminary, Manchester, Vt., and Union College, situated at Schenectady, N. Y., where he took a four years' course, and graduated from that institution in June, 1865; came to Portage the same year, and commenced the study of law with his brother Emmons Taylor, who came to Portage in 1857, and died here April 13, 1874; after reading law with his brother for a year and a half, he was admitted to the bar, and has been engaged in practice here up to the present time, and has acted as City Attorney the most of the time since. Was married at Portage, Sept. 16, 1873, to Miss Julia A. Davidson; they have one child, Emmons Haskell, born April 7, 1875.

EZRA K. THAYER, born in Orwell, Addison Co., Vt., Jan. 3, 1812, where he resided until coming to Wisconsin, town of Green Lake, Green Lake Co., in 1853; lived there for eleven years, then removed to the town of Marcellon, Columbia Co., where he remained up to the time of coming to Portage in the spring of 1877; has been engaged in grocery business since November, 1879. Married at Sudbury, Rutland Co., Vt., March 12, 1845, to Angeline E. Wallace, a native of Vermont. They have two children—Wm. W. and Isabella.

HENRY C. THEDE, born in Milwaukee, Wis., July 15, 1849; his parents, W. H. and Catherine Thede, moved to Sauk City, where they now reside, in 1851; Mr. T. learned his trade, that of a harness-maker, in Madison and Mazomanie, and followed it in various places before beginning for himself at Portage in 1877. He was married at Sauk City, Aug. 23, 1877, to Josephine Sturm, born in Tyrol. They have one child, William, born May 31, 1878.

ALEXANDER THOMPSON, born in Glasgow, Scotland, May 26, 1848; came with his parents, Nimian and Mary Thompson, to Ft. Winnebago in August, 1850; father worked at carpenter's trade for fifteen years, then engaged in farming in the town of Dekorra, Columbia Co., which he still continues. Alex. T. worked at carpenter's trade three years, but in 1870 engaged in grocery business, and dealing extensively in clover, timothy and field seeds generally, which business he still continues. Mr. T. was married in Portage, Dec. 18, 1872, to Susan M. Purnell, a native of Norwich, Conn. They have one child, Mary Emma, born May 9, 1874. Mr. T. is a prominent member of the I. O. O. F.

A. B. THOMPSON, born in Smithfield, Providence Co., R. I., Aug. 6, 1825; came to Pardeeville in November, 1864, resided there ten years, then removed to Portage. Was married in Smithfield, R. I., November, 1846, to Thankful Handy, a native of that place; they have four children living—Morgie A., now Mrs. Geo. W. Dusenberry, of Portage; Philip F., Alice G., now Mrs. Frank A. Mathewson, of Pardeeville, and Frank B., living; Sarah, deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson are members of the Presbyterian Church, and of the temperance society.

MISS JENNETTE THOMPSON, at Corning House; was born in Buffalo, Marquette Co., Wis., in December, 1857; her parents are farmers, and were counted of "pure blood in the land of Burns." She has been for six years a member of the United Presbyterian Church; has been a year in the hotel.

WERT F. THOMPSON, deceased, was born in Colchester, Vt., in 1834; lived in Ohio before coming to Wisconsin; settled in Portage in 1858; was married in 1860, to Miss Cornelia E. Reed, formerly of Seneca Co., N. Y.; her father, Warren S. Reed, came to Portage in 1858, and died in January, 1867. Mr. Reed started the restaurant business, at the depot, which, with enlargements, is now conducted by Mr. Fox. Mr. Thompson died in May, 1865, and at the time of his death, was in charge of the railroad shops; he has been a railroad man most of his life; he was a 32d Degree Mason, and was buried with Masonic honors; Mrs. Thompson and her brother reside in the "Reed Homestead." The brother, Samuel, was born Jan. 10, 1844; he has been a resident of Portage since the age of 14. In June, 1873, he was married to Miss Julia Crane, of Mauston, Wis.; they have one child, born September, 1874, and named Wert Thompson Reed; Mr. Reed is a railroad engineer.

EPHRAIM B. TRADEWELL, farmer; born in the city of Baltimore, Md., in 1822; in 1840, he came to Wisconsin, and settled in Kenosha, which continued his home until the spring of 1851, when he came to Portage. In 1853, he was married, in Kenosha, to Miss Harriet Dana; in 1860, he bought a farm, 200 acres, in Marcellon, Columbia Co., Wis., which he still owns and rents; since 1874 he has lived in Portage; has two children—Frances, born in December, 1856; and Major D., born in 1858; both live in the county; his wife died in 1876; he was crippled in the knee, by the cut of an ax, on patella, when a child; Government was making the canal when he came to Portage, and water was let into the canal that same year; muscle and grit were the elements of success then, for those were rough pioneer times.

A. J. TURNER was born in the town of Schuylers Falls (then Plattsburg), N. Y., Sept. 24, 1832, where he lived until 1853, removing to Grand Rapids, Mich., where he took his first lessons in the art of type-setting in the Eagle office; returning to his native town, in 1855, he "set up" the first number of the Plattsburg Scout, a paper still in existence, teaching school for a short time, and returning to Grand Rapids early the same year; in September, 1855, he came to Portage, and was employed as a compositor in the Independent office the second day after his arrival, and worked there until the spring of 1856, when he went to Madison, and was engaged at his trade in the office of the State Journal for six months; at the end of that time, he was promoted to the position of city editor of that paper, and this event marked the beginning of his journalistic career; in the spring of 1857, he returned to Portage, and became one of the editors of the Record; in the fall of that year, he returned to Madison as a clerk of one of the legislative committees, and, in the following spring, he made the trip, on foot, with that remarkable genius, "Shanghai" Chandler, to Friendship, Adams Co., where he assisted in establishing the Adams County Independent, remaining there four or five months; returning to Portage, he resumed his former connection with the Record. In the fall of 1860, he was elected Clerk of the Circuit Court, and served one term, at the expiration of which he was chosen to represent his district in the State Assembly; returning from the State capital, he again took his place upon the Record, which he soon afterward purchased and consolidated with the Wisconsin State Register, founded a few months previous by S. S. Brannan, upon the ruins of the Badger State; he continued with Mr. Brannan, as publisher of the Register, for seventeen years, selling, in 1878, to Judge J. T. Clark. Mr. Turner has been prominently before the people of Columbia Co. for nearly a quarter of a century, having filled various county offices; he was a delegate to the National Convention which nominated Lincoln, was Chief Clerk of the State Senate three years, and now holds the office of State Railway Commissioner. To Mr. Turner is due the credit of establishing the "Blue Book" upon its present plan, and he was for several years its compiler; he was the first Secretary of the Wisconsin Central Railway Company, afterward one of the Directors of the Portage & Stevens Point Railway, and, still later, President of the Portage, Friendship & Grand Rapids Railroad, which was consolidated with the present Madison & Portage road. Mr. Turner was married at Friendship, Adams Co., Wis., May 29, 1860, to Mary O. Hanford, a native of Walton, Delaware Co., N. Y.; they have three children—Fred J., Rockwell F. and Ellen B.

STEPHEN TURNER was born in Nelson Co., Va., Dec. 14, 1813; came to Portage May 3, 1858; engaged in peddling one year; in 1860, commenced mercantile business, dealing in groceries and fruits; continued in that for four years; then engaged in auctioneering and speculating, in which he has successfully continued ever since; owns two-thirds interest in the jewelry establishment of Turner & Parsons. Mr. Turner was married at Union Hill, Nelson Co., Va., December, 1849, to Eliza Jane Hill, born at Union Hill; they have had nine children, three of whom are deceased—Samuel died in 1861, aged 3 years and 3 months; Annie died in 1872, aged 5 years; Charles died in 1872, aged 3 years and 3 months; the children living are Bluford B., Stephen, Jr., Elizabeth, Lucretia, Willie and Jessie. Mr. T. is in every sense a self-made man.

EUGENE A. VAUGHAN, son of Samuel K. and Lavina Vaughan, who came to Wisconsin, locating at Waupun, at an early date; his father died in Portage, in September, 1872; his mother is now living and a resident of this city; Eugene was born in Wyocena, Feb. 28, 1853, and has been employed in John Graham's drug and grocery house for the last ten years. He was married in Portage March 24, 1875, to Sarah A. Padley; she was born at Lodi; they have one son—Samuel K.—born March 12, 1876. Mrs. V. is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and Mr. V. is a member of the I. O. O. F.

MRS. RICHARD F. VEEDER, widow of the earliest settler on this side of the canal; her maiden name was Winopher Veeder, and she was born near Albany, N. Y., April 2, 1812; Mr. Veeder was born Jan. 11, 1812, in Montreal, Canada, where his parents were temporarily stopping; from the age of 10 he lived with an uncle in Boston, Mass.; he came to Wisconsin June 26, 1835, but stopped a while near Green Bay, as he had relatives connected with the pineries; he came to Portage several years before his marriage, which was on March 10, 1844; when a "bach," he kept travelers at his cabin, and after marriage he kept open house for many years; they built the first dwelling in Portage (since destroyed by fire), and there was nothing here when they built in the summer of 1845; they first spent nearly a year at the Indian trading-post; the Wisconsin River now flows over the site of the trading post, and also over the site of their first pioneer dwelling near "the Post;" the house built by them and now occupied by Mrs. Veeder is the oldest building in the city; it was built for a storehouse, but has been used for nearly everything. They have had four children—Elizabeth, born in 1845, in the first dwelling in Portage (she is dead); John S., born Feb. 4, 1847 (he is now a railroad conductor); Hannah, born in 1849, is dead; Richard T., Jr., born Jan. 1, 1851 (he is also a railroad conductor). Mr. Veeder is remembered as a kind-hearted man and good citizen, and was universally known as "Uncle Dick," and his widow is still called "Aunt Dick;" he died Jan. 19, 1870; he was not a church member, but affiliated with the Episcopalians. Her son, R. F., still lives with his mother on Sec. 5, where Portage is mainly built, and which Mr. V. bought at government price ($1.25 per acre); Mrs. V. owns two blocks in Portage beside her old home.

JOHN VERSEN, deceased, was born in Paderborn, Province of Westphalia, Prussia, Nov. 8, 1814; came to America and landed at New Orleans, December, 1847; remained there about one year; removed to St. Louis, and worked at carriage trimming; was in Galena, Ill., for some time, where he made the acquaintance of U. S. Grant : afterward a resident of Madison : came to Portage, Feb. 1, 1851, engaged with his partner in harness-making, with credit sufficient to obtain material for a single harness, having landed at Portage with only five cents ; at the time of his death, May 24, 1872, he carried on the largest harness manufactory in Central Wisconsin, doing business where Purdy's drug store is now located ; leaving a large estate at his death.

JOSEPH A. VERSEN, son of John Versen, was born in Portage June 9, 1857 ; educated at the High School ; served an apprenticeship of three years in the harness and saddlery business ; has been engaged in mercantile business for some time, being now in the employ of D. Fischbeck & Son, of Milwaukee, wholesale dealers in saddlery hardware and leather. The Portage Register of Oct. 3, 1874, contained the following complimentary notice of young Versen : " Joseph Versen, of this city, a boy of 17, entitled himself to the 'reward of merit,' if not to the 'first premium,' by the manufacture of a set of single harness which he had on exhibition at the county fair. Though he is but a yearling in the business, his work would do no discredit to a much more experienced workman. He will, no doubt, make his mark in his particular line of business, if in no other direction. We take pleasure in saying a word of encouragement to him, as we do to all boys who pursue the rightcourse."

SAM WAH & BROTHER, laundrymen : Sam was born in China in 1863, and Charley was born in 1856 ; Charley came to San Francisco in 1870, and Sam in 1878 ; both have lived in Red Wing, Minn. ; they came to Portage nearly a year ago, and are doing a good business on Conant street ; are law-abiding, prosperous Chinamen.

MRS. ELECTA WARD, widow of Orlando Ward, who was one of the earliest merchants in Portage ; she was born Dec. 17, 1812, in Lee, Berkshire Co., Mass. Mr. Ward was born Jan. 22, 1812, in Vermont ; they were married in Carlton, Orleans Co., N. Y., on the 23d of June, 1836 ; came West in 1849, remained two years in Milwaukee, and then settled in the house where Mrs. Ward now lives in Portage ; he died in October, 1871, leaving one child, Helen—now Mrs. Winne—living in Iowa ; Mr. Ward was a member of the Masonic Order, and of the Odd Fellows ; she is a member of the First Presbyterian Church ; is still an active worker.

MARVIN WATERHOUSE, M. D. (deceased), was born in Alden, Erie Co., N. Y., on the 19th of September, 1827 ; when at the age of 14, he was bereft of father, and, soon afterward, he and his widowed mother removed to Darien, Walworth Co., Wis. ; in 1850, he moved to Packwaukee, Wis. ; his early life was passed amid the scenes and duties incident to farming. On the 1st of January, 1852, he was married to Miss Maria A. Older, who survives him ; they had no children. A broken leg, in October, 1853, caused him to study medicine, and he graduated from Rush Medical College, in Chicago, in 1860 ; he had practiced medicine, in response to local calls, since 1855 ; in August, 1864, he was commissioned Assistant Surgeon of the 1st Regiment Wis. Heavy Artillery ; was in the army one year ; located in Portage in September, 1865, and practiced his profession in the city and surrounding country until prevented by his last illness ; in July, 1867, he became a member of the Wisconsin Medical Society ; was elected Vice President in 1871, and President in 1873 ; was delegate four years to the American Medical Society, and contributed several valuable papers to the society ; he was a successful physician, and had a lucrative practice ; his broken limb never fully recovered, and finally amputation was necessary ; this was done Jan. 10, 1878, and the wounded limb rapidly healed ; but in the summer it broke out with ulcers, and an abscess formed, caused by taking cold ; he endured the intense pain with remarkable fortitude, until his iron constitution yielded, and he died on the 19th of October, 1878 ; he had been an active member of the I. O. O. F., and was one of the original Patriarchs of Excelsior Encampment, at Portage ; the brotherhood conducted his obsequies, according to their impressive ceremonies. He was a public-spirited citizen ; at the time of his death, he was a member of the Board of Education, also, Examining Surgeon for Pensions ; he was financially comfortable ; he was naturally cheerful, but firm and tenacious ; all declare him to have been an honorable, high-minded gentleman, and one who acted well his part in all the varied relations of husband, citizen and healer of the afflicted.

ANDREW WEIR was born in Harthill, Lanarkshire, Scotland, April, 1821 ; he came to Ft. Winnebago, Wis., May, 1851 ; remained there until November of the same year, then went with his brother, John Weir, to California, where they spent fifteen months in mining, etc. ; then went to Australia, where he spent fifteen months ; he then sailed for Scotland, where he arrived October, 1854. Mr. W. was married at Causewayhead, Sterlingshire, Scotland, May 9, 1855, to Margaret Kincaid, a native of Bowhouse, Sterlingshire, Scotland ; they sailed for America, landing in New York in June, 1855; came direct to Ft. Winnebago; engaged in real-estate and grain business; he now lives where he first settled. Mr. W. was one of the founders of the City Bank of Portage; was Chairman of the Board of Supervisors several terms, and is now in that position.

ELISHA A. WELLS, farmer; born in Hartford, Conn., on the 9th of September, 1801; his parents removed to Berkshire Co., Mass., when Elisha was quite young, and there the "old folks" resided until their death; the father was a soldier in the war of the Revolution. Mr. Wells remained with his parents during their entire life. He was married on the 25th of June, 1828, to Miss Anna Martin, of Massachusetts; they have had nine children; the living are Ann C., Martha E., Horace E., Lydia V., Lemuel M. and Mary A. He came to Portage on the 5th of May, 1855; present house was first brick made in Portage; lost a large residence May, 1879; has a small place in Portage, also land in Lewiston; has documents dated 1704, signed by Ichabod Wells, a Sheriff of Connecticut at that date; he was a town official many years in his New England home. Their "golden wedding" was celebrated on the 25th of June, 1878; kind friends and valuable gifts made it a memorable occasion.

HORACE D. WELLS, retired farmer, was born on the 2d of January, 1798, in the city of Hartford, Conn.; he is the son of Elisha and Clara Deming Wells, of Connecticut; the family trace their ancestry for 800 years, and show connection, by intermarriage, with nobility and royalty. The "Magna Charta," signed by King John, in 1215, was delivered at Gummymede to "Bishop Hugode Wells, of the Cathedral of Lincoln." The ancestral tree is traced generations beyond the "Bishop," and its branches are in a connected line with the Wells family in Portage. The original "coat of arms" of the Wells family bore the motto, "Christ's Cross is my Light." Gov. Thomas Wells, of Connecticut, was among their earliest ancestors in America; real estate near Hartford, Conn., has been in continuous ownership of the Wells family for 200 years; the subject of this sketch was married at Rye, N. Y., on the 30th of April, 1834, to Miss Mary S. Barker, daughter of James Barker, a retired merchant of New York City; Mr. Wells was in the mahogany business at Yonkers, N. Y., from 1828 to 1843; thence he went to Owego, and engaged in mercantile business, together with lumbering; in 1848, he went to Hartford, and remained until coming West; his residence in Hartford was once the home of Gov. Morgan of Connecticut, and when Mr. Wells left the State, he sold it to Gov. Richard D. Hubbard. Mrs. Wells died Oct. 6, 1852, leaving two sons—James B., born March 7, 1836, and Lemuel H., born Dec. 3, 18—; the latter is an Episcopal Clergyman in Walla Walla, Washington Ter. Mr. Wells first made a tour of the West in 1854; in the spring of 1855, he bought a large tract in Sauk Co., of which he still owns 1,000 acres; he came to Portage in 1862, and his present beautiful home of 20 acres was purchased soon afterward; this is also the home of his son James B., who was married on the 20th of April, 1859, to Miss Anna P. King, daughter of the Hon. O. B. King of Watertown, Conn.; they have two children—Mary A., born May 24, 1860, and James H., born November, 1862. The Wells families are all Episcopalians; the old gentleman, past fourscore and two years, is in delicate health, but still retains the genial air and quiet dignity of the "old-school gentleman." He has always been a worthy citizen, and is blest with competency and hosts of friends.

JOSEPH E. WELLS was born in Birmingham, England, March 22, 1842; came to Wisconsin in 1851, with his father; his mother and other children came to Wisconsin in April, 1852; his father located at Twigg's Ferry, in Columbia Co., on the Fox River. Rev. William Wells, father of J. E. Wells, now living at Fort Winnebago, located a farm in that town at about that time, and still owns it; has been engaged in preaching at different points until fifteen years ago, regularly; now preaches every other Sunday, as he is called upon. Joseph E. worked upon the farm until the age of 21, when he came to Portage and attended school for about a year; then commenced clerking for I. W. Bacon, a hardware dealer, and remained with him between eleven and twelve years, then purchasing the business of the Bacon estate; he has been in partnership with H. W. Williams for the last six years; they also run a branch store at Waupaca. Mr. W. married in Portage, June 7, 1871, Addie E. Forrest; she was born in New Hampshire; they have four children—Mary E., Cora A., Maud S. and Josie A. He is serving his fourth year as Alderman of the Third Ward; is member of the Temple of Honor and A. F. & A. M.

DANIEL WELLS, son of Walter Wells, who died in Yates Co., N. Y., was born in Hamilton, Madison Co., N. Y., Sept. 24, 1829. In 1858, he removed to Yates Co., N. Y., and resided in Penn Yan and vicinity, until 1859; in December of the same year, he settled in Wisconsin, purchasing a farm on Sec. 26, town of Randolph, and engaged in farming until he sold out in September, 1868, and in November, 1868, removed to Portage; in February, 1870, engaged in flour and feed business, and also that of an auctioneer. Mr. Wells was Chairman of the Board of Supervisors while at Randolph; has been City Marshal of Portage, and also held the office of Under Sheriff for two years. Mr. Wells was married in the town of Jerusalem, Yates Co., N. Y., Feb. 15, 1859, to Martha Gallett, a native of that place. They have three children—Susan, Elizabeth, John W., Daniel G. Mr. Wells is a member of the Odd Fellows' Lodge.

ROBERT B. WENTWORTH was born in the town of Buxton, York Co., Me., Jan. 18, 1827, and resided there until he came to Wisconsin in 1848, locating at Madison. He learned the trade of printing in Portland, Maine, when a boy, and while living at Madison, worked as a journeyman printer. He published the first paper that was ever issued in Dodge Co.—Dodge County Gazette—which was published in Juneau, and continued the publication of that journal for about four years; the last two years he issued it as the Burr Oak. He came to Portage in 1857, and bought the Portage City Record, published it just four years, and then sold out to A. J. Turner. In 1861, he erected a grain elevator, and engaged in the grain and lumber trade; he also carried on steambotting between this point and Green Bay; in the latter business ten years, from 1864 to 1874. He is now interested in the City Bank of Portage; he and his son own one-third of the stock of that institution. Mr. Wentworth was married at Fryeburg, Me., Oct. 9, 1850, to Lydia H. Pike; she was born in Fryeburg, Me., April 1, 1825. They have three children—Ella Augusta, Winfield Scott and Florence. He has been Alderman of the Second Ward four years, and member of the Assembly from Dodge Co. in 1857, and Justice of the Peace one year.

W. S. WENTWORTH was born in Juneau, Dodge Co., Wis., Oct. 15, 1853; received his education at the public schools of Portage, and at the Lawrence University at Appleton, Wis.; was connected with McGregor & Co., in the lumber and grain business, as clerk for one year; afterward one year for his father until January, 1875, he was then appointed assistant cashier of City Bank, and held that position until July 1, 1878, when he was elected cashier, which position he has since held; stockholder and Director of the bank since January, 1876.

CHARLES H. WILLIAMS, freight engineer on the C. M. & St. P. R. R.; was born in Vermont Jan. 14, 1843. His parents came West in 1855, and settled in Beaver Dam, Wis.; his railroad life began in 1860, as fireman on the old La Crosse & Milwaukee R. R.; he enlisted in August, 1862, in the 24th W. V. I., and was mustered out on the 22d of June, 1865, having served nearly three years. His regiment was in the Army of the Cumberland during the entire war, and he was in eleven regular battles, besides skirmishes and raids unnumbered. Some of the engagements are familiar in history—Resaca, Kenesaw Mountain, Atlanta, Jonesboro, Franklin and Nashville; he had several "close calls," but came out without a scratch. He enlisted from Milwaukee, and at the close of the rebellion, he returned to his old position and "fired" until 1867, when he took charge of an engine, and has run as engineer to date. He boards at the Fox House; belongs to the Temple of Honor. "Charley is well liked."

REV. MATTHIAS WITTENWYLER was born in Switzerland Aug. 9, 1840; came to America in June, 1853, locating in the town of Washington, Green Co., Wis.; resided there until 1862; then entered the holy ministry; was ordained in 1864; his first charge was the church at Lomira, Dodge Co.; remained there for five months and was then stationed at Waupaca Mission, embracing five counties; while in charge there, he traveled every day and had to preach about every other day; remained until 1863; the conference then sent him to Fox River Circuit; was one year connected with that; in 1864, was sent back to Waupaca Mission, where he remained two years; in 1866, was sent to Two Rivers Mission, and was located there two years; in 1868, came to Winnebago Circuit, was also two years in that place; then sent to Dunn Co. Circuit and was there three years; then, in 1873, to Buffalo Co. Circuit; was Pastor there for two years; then, in 1875, appointed Presiding Elder for four years, and now has charge of Portage Church, and has a number of other appointments; has made this city his residence since 1875. Mr. W. was married in Portage Oct. 17, 1865, to Augusta M. Mella; she was born in Prussia; they have eight children—A. R., Lydia W., Martha M., Hulda S., Eddie E., Julia E., Fredrick F., and Henry H.

EDWARD L. WILCOX, foreman of the round-house, C. M. & St. P. R. R., at Portage, Wis.; born Nov. 6, 1829, in New Hartford, Oneida Co., N. Y.; is a son of Samuel W., who built the arsenals for the Government at Batavia, N. Y.; the mother, Abigail (White) Wilcox, still lives in Whitestown, Oneida Co., N. Y., which was named after her grandfather, who was the founder of the town; she is aged 91, in 1880. The subject of this sketch learned the trade of machinist at Willow Vale, N. Y., of the firm of Rogers & Spencer; about 1850, he began work for N. Y. C. R. R., at Schenectady, where he remained three years; then was at La Porte, Ind., for the M. S. R. R.; afterward at Chicago, with the C. & R. I., and then at Bloomington, in employ of C. A. & St. L. R. R.; was for some time in charge of the round-house, at North Milwaukee; was afterward foreman of the round-house at Davenport, Iowa, on the M. & M. R. R.; he ran an engine nine years between Milwaukee and La Crosse; and he has been in continuous charge of the round-house at Portage for the past ten years; there may be several other railroads with which he was at some time connected, as he could at any time procure work on any railroad; in various capacities he has served the C., M. & St. P. Co. twenty-five years. He was married in 1863 to Miss Mary McCauley, a native of Milwaukee; they have had five children, four of whom died in childhood; have one son—William Henry, born Nov. 21, 1870; his residence is on Emmet street; is a member of A. O. U. W.; he is President of the Wisconsin Milling and Mining Co., of the Black Hills, D. T.; they own four claims together with a water-right and a mill-site; when the balance of their stock is sold, the company will enlarge their facilities for developing the mines.

JOHN A WITTER, photographer; was born in Manchester, Boone Co., Ill., April 20, 1857; resided there until 18 years of age, when he moved to Janesville, Wis., and to Portage Oct. 1, 1878. Mr. W. learned the photographic art at Janesville, and began business Oct. 28, 1878. He is a Good Templar and a member of the Presbyterian Church.

ADDIS L. WITTER was born in the town of Manchester, Boone Co., Ill., Sept. 19, 1859; removed thence to Clinton Junction, Wis., in 1876; removed to Janesville for a few months in 1878, and to Portage Oct. 1, 1878, where he has since resided; and is associated with his brother, John A., in the photographing business.

N. H. WOOD. The subject of this sketch was born in Ashfield, Mass., Feb. 21, 1820; his father, Nathan Wood, was born in Phillipston, Mass.; he was an orphan at 12 years of age, with only one brother, William, who was afterward engaged in the South American trade, and died in London in 1820, with quite a fortune; the father emigrated to Ashfield in 1800, and married Lucy Ranney, daughter of Francis Ranney, fifth descendant of Thomas Ranney, who settled in Middleton, Conn., in 1669. From 1838 to 1844, when he married Harriet J. Luke, of Hamilton, N. Y., and opened a store in Little Falls, N. Y., Mr. Wood was a wholesale peddler, supplying the stores with small wares; his route was from Troy, N. Y., via Syracuse, to Watertown, generally journeying through the Mohawk Valley westward, and returning through Cortland, Madison, and the counties along the Cherry Valley turnpike; in 1848, Mr. Wood visited Wisconsin, and, with a bundle of land warrants, located lands about Portage City, then Ft. Winnebago; in the spring of 1849, he shipped a considerable stock of goods to Chicago, as a venture; he arrived there about June 1, with the cholera raging and the population very quiet; most of his merchandise arrived in a single vessel, a perfect avalanche of goods, which obstructed the sidewalk, resulting in a fine imposed by a petty magistrate, complaint having been made by a jealous competitor in trade; the fine was placarded on the door, and brought him both sympathy and notoriety; having only two younger brothers with him, and disliking to employ those who would offer their services most readily, he adopted, from necessity, the novel plan of handing out goods to the customer who would first reach up his money; the plan took like wildfire, and in this manner he disposed of his whole stock of general dry goods, fancy goods, and many articles in the grocery line, which included 100 chests of tea and 300 boxes of raisins; the next arrival brought an immense stock of books, stationery and engravings, bought at the New York trade sales, obliging him to close his store for three days to examine; the opening hour of 10 o'clock, which had been placarded, brought a throng of people which filled both sidewalk and street for a block; the openings of the counters were barricaded and the merchandise placed beyond reach; on opening the doors, the rush of the crowd was like a stampede of Texan steers; jumping upon the counters, they commenced handing books to the first man who got the money up; lawyers and business men came in by scores; book after book accumulated in their arms, until, loaded, they would journey home, to return again; a clearance of the room for dinner was facilitated by the sale of thirty medium-sized mirrors, which reflected the suggestion of the propriety of improving the appearance by journeying home for ablutions and dinner; the afternoon so far exceeded the morning, that we lost all knowledge of time, forgot our supper, sold thicker and faster, until we observed the room was thinning; they were easily dismissed—it was past 11 o'clock; they had sold that day, stationery in small parcels and books in single volumes, mostly, $1,461, a feat which retailers of books and stationery—the slowest of all merchandise—will appreciate; the stock was soon exhausted, and Mr. Wood must replenish at the seaboard; no one could keep up the system he had introduced, nor did he ever attempt it himself again. He sent to Little Falls for George S. and Chauncey T. Bowen, aged 16 and 18 years : they succeeded him in 1853, and, as the firm of Bowen Brothers, were for many years one of the leading wholesale firms of Chicago, and known throughout the United States ; Chauncey T. Bowen was afterward one of the City Fathers of Chicago ; George S. Bowen is the celebrated railroad President and dairyman of Elgin, Ill., and is interested in its extensive watch manufactory ; their wisdom and ability have increased with years, but they were " beautiful in their youth ;" so thought Mr. Wood when C. T. Bowen, at 16, took his books in charge : in a week he knew the cost and price of every article in the store : in three weeks he knew the amount of credit each customer was entitled to, and in a month he was authority on the amount of credit every Jew in the clothing trade of Chicago might have, and the management of collections : and so wisely and well did he do all these things, that he maintained his position : Mr. Wood never had the least idea of failing in business : his bark was always near shore ; he would never owe, or suffer others to owe him, more than he was worth : with his caution, he would never enter the lists of a large and hazardous wholesale trade. The miasma of Chicago in those days was disagreeable to him, and he determined upon the economical life of a tax-payer upon unproductive property in Wisconsin ; perhaps thirty years of this experience has tried his ever-hopeful nature, but the future of Portage City is assured, and his last days may brighten.

J. D. WOMER was born in Philadelphia, Penn., March 8, 1848 ; resided there until 13 years of age ; lived then in Pittsburgh until enlisting in February, 1863, in Co. B, 100th Penn. V. L., in which he served from the battle of the Wilderness to Lee's surrender : was mustered out at Harrisburg, Penn., in August, 1865. On leaving the army, Mr. W. went to New York City, where he remained until 1872 ; moved from there to Springfield, Ill. ; two years later, he went to Grand Rapids, Wis., and in December, 1876, removed to Portage, which has since been his home. Mr. W. was married at Jamestown, N. Y., March 16, 1869, to Sarah A. Wood, born near Westfield, Chautauqua Co., N. Y. He is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and Captain of the Guppye Guards.

E. J. S. WRIGHT was born at No. 2 Phoenix Court, Newgate street, London, England, July 26, 1848 : came with his parents, Edward and Tamar (Kay) Wright, to Wisconsin in January, 1855, and located in the town of Moundville, Marquette Co. ; resided there one year : removed with his parents to Portage in 1856. Mr. Wright, Sr., was engaged in the mercantile business in Portage for several years previous to his death, Sept. 26, 1875. Mrs. W. died April 8, 1877. E. J. S. Wright has been engaged as clerk in the dry-goods business since 1861 : was four years with A. D. Forbes, and for the last fifteen years with the present firm of Parry & Muir, and its predecessors. Mr. W. was married at Portage, in St. John's Episcopal Church, by Rev. Walter F. Lloyd, Dec. 17, 1868, to Jennie M. Taylor, a native of Tillicoultry, Clackmingshire, Scotland, born Sept. 19, 1847 ; they have two children—Nellie Margaret, born Dec. 5, 1869, and Collette, born July 13, 1879, both born on Cook street in city of Portage. Mr. and Mrs. Wright are both members of the Episcopal Church, of which Mr. W. is Vestryman, and has been Treasurer for ten years (with an intermission of ten months). He has been Secretary of the Columbia County Bible Society for the last two years : he is a member of Ft. Winnebago Lodge, A. F. & A. M., No. 33 ; Ft. Winnebago Chapter, No. 14 ; Ft. Winnebago Commandery of Knights Templar, No. 4, and is Secretary of Ft. Winnebago Lodge at the present time : he has held the office of Senior Warden of the same lodge, and is one of the Stewards of the Grand Lodge of Wisconsin. Mr. Wright's father was born in London, England, Aug. 1, 1814 ; his mother was born at St. Noets, Huntingtoushire, England, July 5, 1824 ; her father, Thomas Kay, was born at Barnard Castle, Durham, England ; her mother, Ann Shryves, was born in St. Noets, England.

FRANK YANKO, grocer : was born in Bohemia March 14, 1844 ; came to Chicago in 1854 : one year later removed to Portage, where he resided until 1865, when he removed to New Lisbon and engaged in clerking : in September, 1877, Mr. Yanko returned to Portage, and engaged in the grocery and liquor business. He was married in Portage, May 16, 1870, to Amelia Hanule, born in Bohemia : they have four children living—Edith, Anna, Louis and Clara, and have lost two—Willie and Emma. Mr. Y. is a member of the German Catholic Church ; was elected Alderman of the First Ward in April, 1880. His father, Frank Yanko, died at Kilbourn June 27, 1858, and his mother is now a resident of Portage.

GEORGE YULE was born in Northumberland County, England, May 3, 1837 ; he came to America in the spring of 1853, with his parents, George and Elizabeth Yule, who settled at West Point, in this county, on Sec. 18, where he lived until 1877, when he was elected Register of Deeds, and was re-elected in 1879 ; he had been Chairman of the Town Board and Assessor prior to his election to the present office. He married Isabella Summers, at West Point, Dec. 25,

A. H. Proctor

FOUNTAIN PRAIRIE

1861; she was born in Northumberland Co., Eng.; they have seven children—Albert, Willie, Anne J., Fred., Addison E., George, Jr., and an infant son.

REV. JOHN IGNATIUS ZAWISTOWSKI was born in Russian Poland, Aug. 11, 1822; he was educated at the University at Warsaw; he finished his theological education in Paris, France, remaining there from 1841 to 1845; his first ordination for minor orders was at the Polish capital in 1840; he frequented the University at Paris, and repeated, also, his studies to a private instructor there; he left Paris July 27, 1845, and went to Bavaria; was ordained priest Dec. 19, 1846; was in the convent at Wurzburg. In 1847, he was called to the convent at Ratzburn, Bavaria; he went to Rome in 1851, and was sent to the East Indies as an apostolic missionary, by the Propaganda; he arrived at Bombay, E. I., April 4, 1851; he remained there until June 13, 1855, when he returned to Bavaria, and remained there until 1857; he then came to Buffalo, N. Y., and remained there until May, 1866, then removed to Long Island, N. Y.; he came to Wisconsin Sept. 21, 1869; he lived in various places in this State before locating at Portage, which he did July 12, 1879.

TOWN OF SPRINGVALE.

ABSALOM BROWN (deceased), died at his residence in Springvale, Columbia Co., Wis., March 23, 1880, 77 years old. He was born in Cecil Co., Md., Nov. 5, 1803, being the third son of Josiah and Margaret Brown; six years after this, his father and family crossed the Susquehanna River into Harford Co., Md., where he bought a large tract of land lying between Bellair and Abingdon, on the Baltimore road; his father sickened and died in a few days after he went there, leaving his mother and six children in a part of the country poisoned with slavery; care and hard work soon wore on his mother, and seven years after his father's death, his mother died; Absalom was then put to the hatter's trade, and, being misused, he left there and went to Brown Co., Ohio, where he had relatives, where he married, at 21 years of age, Miss Abby, daughter of Tobias Woods, of Allen Co., Ohio; she was born Aug. 27, 1810, in Brown Co., Ohio, and died June 6, 1874. They had five daughters and one son, as follows: Mary Ann (married Mr. Leatherman, on Sec. 31; Josiah, born Oct. 7, 1828, and died in California thirteen years ago (married there and lost his wife and had no children); Maria M., born July 5, 1832 (married Seth Allen, of Wyocena); Adaline M., born Aug. 28, 1837 (widow, with one son, Howard Stokes), and now on the farm; Martha Jane, born Oct. 4, 1840 (now Mrs. Wm. Stokes); Elvira (unmarried), on farm with her sister, who is also sister-in-law. Mr. Brown bought a farm in Brown Co., Ohio, and lived there a few years; being an adventurous spirit, he sold his farm and moved to Allen Co., Ohio, in a very early day, where he helped lay out a town, built the first house on it, and called its name Lima—it is the city of Lima, Ohio, now; then, thinking he would like to see more of the Far West, he and his family, in the year 1847, came by land with team to Wisconsin, where he again bought a new farm. His son went to California and died there. Mr. Brown was a good husband, a beloved father and a kind neighbor; always benevolent, he was ever ready to help the poor; always cheerful and happy, he had a good word for everybody, and he died a sincere Christian. His family reside on the farm, on Sec. 30; P. O. Rio.

ROBERT CLOSS, farmer, Sec. 11; P. O. Cambria; was born Feb. 4, 1803, at Llanberis, Carnarvonshire, North Wales; son of Robert and Ellen (Hughs) Closs. (Robert Closs, Sr., was born Nov. 12, 1766, and Ellen Hughs was born in 1769.) He came to America in 1845, and was married Feb. 10, 1832, at Llanheblig Church, near Carnarvonshire, by Rev. Wm. Bailey Williams, to Eleanor Evans, who was born March 10, 1810, daughter of Evan and Eleanor (Evans) Evans. Eleanor Evans was born near Dinorwig, and died March 20, 1861, on Sec. 11; she had twelve children—Ellen, born Jan. 15, 1833 (and was married Feb. 10, 1860, by Rev. Griffith Jones, to Wm. J. Rowland, who died in May, 1864, leaving three children, namely, John C. Rowland, born in 1860, Nellie Rowland, born in 1861, and Mary Rowland, born in 1863 and died in 1864; she was then married, May 1, 1870, by Rev. Rees Evans, to Robert Thomas, by whom she had one son, Llewellyn; see biography of Robert Thomas); the second daughter, Elizabeth, was born Jan. 18, 1835, and is home (unmarried); Robert R., born July 28, 1836; John, born Sept. 13, 1838 (married Jane Roberts Jan. 6, 1871), and living on Sec. 11; Humphrey, born July 20, 1840 (married Ellen Hughs Nov. 27, 1867), and living at Blue Springs, Neb.; Evan, born Nov. 5, 1842, and died at thirteen weeks of age; Jane, born Oct. 9, 1845, and died the same year; Ann and Evan, twins, born April 17, 1847, Evan died in 1853, and Ann is now at home (unmarried); Jemina Amelia, born Sept. 16, 1849 (unmarried); Thomas, born Dec. 16, 1851, and died at nine months of age; Thomas Baldwin, born Sept. 3, 1854, and is at home (unmarried). The Closs estate is very productive and well managed, with one of the finest residences in the town. Mr. Closs was a whole-souled, generous gentleman; had held, at different times, all the offices in town, and some of the time, two or three at once; was a Magistrate before the formation of the town; he had long contemplated publishing a history of the Welsh settlement, which enterprise was necessarily abandoned by reason of his death. The following notice, from the Wisconsin State Register, dated Dec. 21, 1872, will be read with interest by surviving friends: "Many will regret to learn of the very sudden death of Robert Closs, Esq., of the town of Springvale, which took place on Sunday, 8th instant. As he was returning home from the afternoon meeting, he was struck with palsy, which terminated his life in less than thirty minutes from the time he first complained. Mr. Closs and his family emigrated to this country in the summer of 1845, and settled in Springvale in the fall of the same year. He at once took an active part in looking after the welfare of his town, took the lead in its organization, and, undoubtedly, great credit should be given him for the strong Republican opinion formed, especially among the Welsh element therein. He was elected to two, if not three, offices at the first town meeting held in the town, and since, he has filled every office in the town for more or less time, with one exception. He possessed a great stock of what is called "roundabout common sense." Honesty and integrity were his motives in all his dealings. He shared the sufferings of the pioneer without a murmur, and also greatly enjoyed the many funny incidents of the early settlement. A large circle of friends and acquaintances will greatly miss him. He died in the 69th year of his age, leaving quite a considerable amount of property to a family of grown-up children. Peace be to his dust." Mr. Closs' farm consisted of 600 acres.

N. G. COULTER, farmer, Sec. 31; P. O. Rio; born Nov. 9, 1830, in Delaware Co., N. Y.; came to Wisconsin March 6, 1862; spent nine years lumbering, with home in Fond du Lac; for some time dealing in real estate, and two years in merchandise; store on Second and Main streets; came to this farm in September, 1859. Married, Dec. 30, 1875, by H. B. Moulton, of Empire, Fond du Lac Co., Vina N. Hayes, daughter of Jonathan Hayes and Sarah (Morrison) Hayes. Mrs. Coulter was born in Aronstock Co., Me.; have two children—Mary Helen and Mattie A. Mr. Coulter has a fine farm, with good buildings; 40-acre grove nicely seeded with grass; also a half-mile trotting course; farm in good state of cultivation, and well fenced; will sell for $10,000; 285 acres in Secs. 31, 32 and 12, in Otsego; 230 acres cultivated.

LEMUEL HASTINGS DOYLE, farmer, Sec. 35; P. O. Doylestown; born on Mount Washington, town of Bath, Steuben Co., N. Y., Nov. 26, 1832; at about 6 years of age, went with parents Allegany Co., and, at 20 years of age, to the town of Otsego, this State; June 23, 1853, came to his present home. Married, at Arkport, Steuben Co., N. Y., Dec. 3, 1856, Amanda J. Hall, who was born in South Danville, N. Y., Feb. 13, 1833, and died in Whiting's Valley, Allegany Co., N. Y., Sept. 16, 1857. Married, Sept. 27, 1858, Mary Jane Edwards, at Fountain Prairie, by Rev. Isaac Searles; second wife was the daughter of David and Mary H. (Alling) Edwards, of New England; had two children by second wife—Edward Joseph Doyle, born at city of Waterloo, Iowa, Nov. 16, 1863; Lemuel Hobart Doyle, born at Doylestown, Wis., June 15, 1868. Mr. Doyle was the son of Joseph Doyle, who was born in Bath, Steuben Co., N. Y., June 4, 1805, and Hannah (Seger) Doyle, who was born in Dryden, Tompkins Co., N. Y., May 7, 1807, and daughter of German parents from the valley of the Rhine, who were married Jan. 10, 1832, and came to New York in 1837. Mr. Doyle's mother died Oct. 5, 1839, and his father came to Doylestown, Wis., in January, 1866. The grandfather of Mr. Doyle (Samuel Doyle) was born in Providence, R. I., in 1757, and went to Bucks Co., Penn., with his parents. He enlisted in 1776 in the Pennsylvania Rangers, and served until the close of the war, being at Valley Forge during the memorable winter, and his father was killed by Indians near the present site of Doylestown, Penn. After the war, he (the grandfather of L. H. Doyle) married Mary Arbor, who was born in Monmouth Co., N. J., her parents having moved to Pennsylvania. In 1790, they went with a colony from Pennsylvania, and founded the village of Bath, Steuben Co., N. Y., where he died in 1817, his wife having died in 1836, aged 84. The great-grandfather of Mr. Doyle came to Rhode Island with Roger Williams in 1636. The father of Mrs. Doyle (David Edwards) was born in Amherst, Mass., Jan. 12, 1820, and her mother was born in New Haven, Conn., Oct. 5, 1821. Mr. Doyle was Supervisor of Otsego in 1868 and 1869; went to Waterloo, Iowa, in November, 1859, and returned in 1865, and purchased 235 acres on the present site of Doylestown; laid out the town in August, 1865; was the first Postmaster in town, and sent out the first mail Aug. 1, 1865; resigned Jan. 1, 1880; was railroad and express agent from Nov. 1, 1866, until 1873, and resigned that also, naming successor in both cases; he also distributed gratuitously 100 lots to induce settlement; he established a nursery at Doylestown in 1866, and sold in 1878 about 100,000 trees. Attends the Methodist Church, and is a Republican. Owns 280 acres in Secs. 5, 26, 34, 35; 90 acres improved; balance timber and pasture.

MICHAEL M. GREEN, farmer, Sec. 4; P. O. Cambria; born Jan. 23, 1827, in Saratoga Co., N. Y.; son of David H. and Ovandah (Quivey) Green; came here in July, twenty-six years ago. Married, Nov. 25, 1849, at Moravia, N. Y., by Rev. Albert S. Graves, Sophia E., daughter of William and Vovilla (Familia) Wilde, born April 5, 1832; have eight children—Charles M., born June 23, 1856; Sophia O. R., born April 12, 1858, died May 11, 1859; Mary E., born Sept. 16, 1860, died Oct. 3, 1862; Rosetta A., born Sept. 15, 1862; George W., born Dec. 8, 1864; Everett A., born Dec. 12, 1866; Alice M., born Jan. 5, 1869, died Sept. 10, 1869; Willie L., born March 20, 1870. He owns 180 acres, 70 acres of which is cultivated.

GEORGE HALL, farmer, Sec. 35; P. O. Doylestown; born in Kent, England, March 24, 1826; engaged in farming and hop-growing until he left London, Sept. 5, 1848; landed at Hamilton, Canada, Nov. 5, where he remained one year, engaging in farming and milling; came to the town of Lisbon, Waukesha Co., Wis., and remained fourteen years, farming and hop-raising; came to this county in March, 1863, where he cultivated about 300 acres of land, balance of land being timber and pasture; making a specialty of hops and barley. Married about April 1, 1848, Elizabeth Russell, of Maidstown, county seat of Kent, who died in Waukesha Co., March 16, 1859. Had four children—George Edwin, born in 1850; James S., born in 1852; Carrie E., born in 1854; Alfred T., born in 1857; his son George married Frances Cowles, of Waukesha, and is now living at that place; James S. married Florence N. Henry, of St. Louis, Mo., in 1878, and is now practicing medicine at Jamestown, Dakota; Carrie married (in June, 1877), George Williams, who is farming on Secs. 36 and 25; in December, 1860, married Sarah A. Russell (consin of first wife), in Lisbon, Waukesha Co., Wis., by whom he has five children—John E., born in 1862; Mary I., born in 1864; Laura A., born in 1866; Charles William, born in 1868; Frederick E., born in 1875; all home except one daughter, who is at boarding-school. Mr. Hall is a liberal Democrat; attends Protestant Episcopal Church. Was one year on Town Board, and Treasurer of the Farmer's Mutual Insurance Company, of Otsego, Lowville and Springvale, since its organization; his father, Thomas Hall, was Register and Relieving Officer in Kent, England, about sixteen years, and died in 1851, at about 60 years of age; he was born in Westmoreland Co., and removed to Kent at 26 years of age. Owns 80 acres on Sec. 2, in Otsego, and 80 acres on Sec. 23, in Wyocena, also 20 acres on Sec. 27, in Courtland.

JOSEPH WALTER HEALY (deceased), born in Leicestershire, England, March 26, 1813; came to America in 1845; settled at Markesan, where he built the first mill in that place about thirty-two years ago. Married at Hudson, Walworth Co., Wis., Feb. 4, 1851, by Elder Chenev, to Miss Sarah Downs, daughter of Josiah and Amelia (La Gotte) Downs; had eleven children—Francis A., born Aug. 11, 1852, married and living at Medford, Clark Co., Wis., and has one child; Richard B., born Jan. 2, 1855; Walter, born Oct. 10, 1857; Charles E., born March 12, 1859, and died Jan. 15, 1863; Oscar E., born May 26, 1861; Charles, born Feb. 12, 1864; John, born Oct. 29, 1865; Edwin, born July 1, 1868, died Jan. 27, 1879; Sarah M., born May 10, 1870, died Jan. 28, 1871; Robert, born Nov. 14, 1876; one daughter died at birth. Mr. Healy died Jan. 26, 1879, of congestion of the lungs. Josiah Downs was in the war of 1812; was 87 years of age last December, and is living in Story Co., Iowa. Family resides on Sec. 5; P. O. Pardeeville; own 450 acres of land; 180 acres cultivated.

WILLIAM W. HUGHES, farmer, Sec. 21; P. O. Cambria; born March 21, 1828, in Carnarvonshire, North Wales; son of William and Margaret (Owens) Hughes; came to America in 1846. Married in New York City, by Rev. E. Roberts, Nov. 19, 1859, to Margaret Davis, daughter of Ellis and Mary (Roberts) Davis. Mrs. Hughes was born in Carnarvonshire; had nine children—William, born Aug. 12, 1858, died when 12 hours old; Mary E. and Maggie, twins, born Aug. 2, 1859, Maggie died at birth, Mary E. died Jan. 22, 1874; Ellis E., born Aug. 20, 1861, died at birth; Hugh W., born Dec. 17, 1862; Ellis E., born April 9, 1864; Jane L., born Oct. 5, 1865; Maggie Ann, born Dec. 18, 1868; Batchy, born Oct. 6, 1871, died same day. Mr. Hughes was Town Treasurer one year, about 1875; his father died Dec. 14, 1873, aged 77; his mother died March 2, 1877, aged 69 years and 9 months. Owns 220 acres; 150 acres cultivated.

SIMEON HUNTLEY, farmer, Sec. 36; P. O. Doylestown; born Dec. 9, 1828, in Franklin Co., N. Y.; came here in 1848. Married at Portage, by J. J. Guppy (County Judge), Jan. 30, 1877, to Ellen Holverson, daughter of Holven Holverson; had two children—Lottie Imogene, born Feb. 10, 1878; Henry Seymore, born Oct. 10, 1879. Owns 160 acres of land; 115 acres cultivated.

JOHN O. JONES (deceased), born March 14, 1823; came to this country at 7 years of age from Angleseyshire, North Wales, with his parents, Owen and Elizabeth (Morgan) Jones. Was married, April 28, 1856, to Judith Jones, daughter of Evan and Ella (Roberts) Jones. Had four children; all at home and unmarried—John O., born June 26, 1857; Maggie Adelia, born Nov. 12, 1858; Evan N., born May 31, 1860; Owen Franklin, born Nov. 24, 1862. Hon. John O. Jones died Nov. 10, 1871, after a long and painful illness (which he endured with remarkable fortitude), from the effect of a surgical operation, performed by Dr. Cody, of Watertown, rendered necessary by an enlargement of the cheek-bone. Mr. Jones was several years Chairman of Town Board, and represented his district in the Legislature in 1859; later in life, declined all official preferment, choosing a retired life and the comforts of his home (which was peculiarly adapted to the requirement of a nature such as he possessed); he was widely known and universally respected for his honesty of purpose, benevolence, and upright manly course through life; his was a singularly spotless reputation, and his heart a heart that knew no guile; no man in the county has been so generally and so deeply lamented by his many friends; and enemies he had none. His estate contained 480 acres; 280 acres cultivated, balance in timber; Cambria is the post-office address of family.

REV. JOHN R. JONES, farmer, Sec. 15; P. O. Cambria; Pastor of Welsh Presbyterian Church of Jerusalem, on Sec. 15; born in Dolwyddelan Parish, in Wales, April 29, 1841; son of Owen G. Jones and Ann (Jones) Jones, she being a daughter of John Roberts; came here in 1847. Married, Feb. 12, 1870, by Rev. Rees Evans, to Maggie Jones, daughter of John W. and Elizabeth (Jones) Jones, and who died July 29, 1870. Commenced preaching in 1875 to a congregation of forty-five; which now numbers fifty-five; Side Supervisor two years; Chairman two years; charter member of Jerusalem Lodge of Good Templars (organized Jan. 26, 1875, with nineteen members, and now numbering thirty-five), and is also State Deputy. Owns 160 acres.

JOHN J. JONES, farmer, Sec. 2; P. O. Cambria; born in Anglesea, Wales, March 20, 1830; son of John and Catharine (Williams) Jones; came to this country in 1867. Married, by Rev. Mr. Edwards, Anglesea, Feb. 13, 1852, to Elizabeth, daughter of William and Elizabeth Hughs, born May 6, 1826; had seven children—John, born May 1, 1853, died Sept. 8, 1864; William, born June 1, 1857, died Nov. 17, 1859; William J., born Oct. 9, 1859; Owen, born March 12, 1861, died April 11, 1861; Libbie E., born Aug. 9, 1865; Edward C., born April 18, 1867; John J., born April 12, 1871. Mr. Jones' father was killed in Anglesea, about fourteen years ago, by accidentally slipping against the cylinder of a thrashing-machine, mangling both legs in such a manner as to produce almost instant death. John Hughs (joiner), brother of Mrs. Jones, aged 31 years, was killed by the bursting of a boiler in a house which he had built and was living in at the time (Dec. 25, 1871), at Fairfield, England.

RICHARD JONES, farmer, Sec. 16; P. O. Cambria; born in Carnarvonshire, North Wales, in September, 1823; came to America in April, 1851; settled in Welshtown, Lehigh Co., Penn. (now called Slatington); in December following, moved to Lobarth, same county; after one year, went to town of Lynnport, same county; then to town of Westford, Dodge Co., Wis., where he followed farming fourteen years; then came to present location. Married in February, 1842, in Carnarvon, by Rev. William Williams, to Ann Huxly, daughter of Hugh and Jane (Parry) Huxly. Parents of Mr. Jones were John and Laura (Evans) Owens. Had nine children—Laura, born 1844, died 1847 in Wales; Jane, born 1847, married Daniel Morris; John, born 1849, married to Agnes Griffin, of Randolph; Hugh H., born 1851, at home unmarried; Richard, born 1854, died in 1860 in Pennsylvania; William R., born 1857, is in Chicago; Samuel, born 1859, is in Chicago; Laura, born 1861, and Maggie, born 1864, both at home, unmarried. Owns 165 acres; 5 acres in Sec. 21; 140 acres cultivated; balance timber.

JOHN LEATHERMAN, farmer, Sec. 31; P. O. Rio; born Aug. 22, 1823, in Tuscarawas Co., Ohio; son of David L. and Sophia (Steeley) Leatherman; settled here June 12, 1847. Married, Aug. 10, 1845, in Allen Co., Ohio, by Edward Hartshorn, Magistrate, to Mary A. Brown, daughter of Absalom Brown (see Brown); no children. Mr. Leatherman was Chairman of Town in 1863, and is now in same office; was also Side Supervisor five years; has been District Treasurer, School Director, Constable, and a Magistrate six years; also now President of the "Anti-Secret Society" organization of southwest Springvale, with forty or fifty members. Owns 587 acres; 300 acres cultivated.

LEWIS LLOYD, farmer, Sec. 1; P. O. Cambria; born June 12, 1828, in Denbighshire, North Wales; son of Lewis and Jane Lloyd; came to Rock Co., Wis., at the age of 21; lived there six months, and removed to present location on Sec. 1, on northwest quarter of southeast quarter, which was the first 40 acres entered in the township. Married, Sept. 15, 1854, to Catharine Williams, by Rev. William J. Jones; had seven children, all living—William E., born Aug. 1, 1855; Jane, Aug. 15, 1857; Kate J., Dec. 2, 1859; Annie, June 18, 1863; Lewis, Feb. 24, 1866; John, Aug. 6, 1868; Baldwin, Jan. 21, 1871; wife was born in Carnarvonshire, North Wales. Mr. Lloyd attends Calvinistic Methodist Church; is Republican in politics; has been Treasurer of town two years; one year Supervisor; also member of State Agricultural Society; is a practical farmer, with extensive knowledge of agricultural chemistry; a man of acknowledged ability, and widely known and respected for his good qualities, exemplary life and scholarly attainments. Owns 190 acres; has 100 acres under cultivation.

ERVIN McCALL, Sec. I; P. O. Cambria; was born Oct. 8, 1815, in Hebron, Washington Co., N. Y.; son of John and Nancy McCall; his mother died in 1831, and in the fall of 1836, his father removed to Indiana with his family and settled in La Porte Co., where he died two years after, aged 61, leaving a family of ten children. Ervin was married May 18, 1838, in Indiana, to Harriet Griffin, who was born April 14, 1817, in Schoharie Co., N. Y., town of Boone (now Conesville); daughter of Seth Griffin. In the spring of 1845, Mr. McCall came to Wisconsin to look at the country, and located some land in Springvale, Columbia Co., where he now resides; after securing his land, he returned to Indiana for his family, and came on the farm the next September. His brother John D. came to Wisconsin with him, bought land in company with him, and lived with him till his death, Feb. 26, 1851, aged 40, and unmarried. Mr. McCall's first wife died Aug. 11, 1854, aged 37, leaving four children—Nancy A., now Mrs. Richard Mason, of Almon, Allegany Co., N. Y.; Susan M., who married Henry Ellis, and died Jan. 1, 1873, leaving three children—George, Effie and Ida; Mary E., now Mrs. Richard Gage, of Marinette, Wis., and Almira, now Mrs. Samuel Wileox, of Portage City; had lost four—Orpha, Alice and Harriet, and one died in infancy, not named; was married the second time April 2, 1855, to Louisa Ann Wells, who was born April 20, 1829, in Chenango Co., N. Y.; daughter of Asa Wells, who came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1850, and died Nov. 2, 1869, aged 79; has four children by the second marriage—Asa Ervin, born Dec. 22, 1856; John S., Sept. 12, 1860; Sanford H., April 3, 1863, and Harriet V., Nov. 23, 1865; all now living at home with their parents. Has 201 acres of land in Springvale and Scott. In June, 1865, his dwelling-house (then standing on the north side of the town-line road in the town of Scott) was destroyed by fire, with about one-half of his furniture and wearing apparel; immediately after, he rebuilt on the south side of the road, in Springvale, where he now resides. Mr. and Mrs. McCall are both members of the M. E. Church, in which he has held several official positions, and was Sabbath-school Superintendent for about three years; Democrat.

JOHN MEREDITH, farmer, Sec. 21; P. O. Cambria (or Rio); born May 27, 1817, in the parish of St. Harmon, county of Radnor, South Wales; his parents' names were John Meredith and Anna (George) Meredith, both born in the same parish. He was married, Sept. 29, 1843, in parish of Nantmeal, county of Radnor, by James B. Evans, Episcopal Minister, to Elisabeth Scott, daughter of Andrew and Elisabeth (Davis) Scott, of the parish of Nantmeal. He left there April 9, 1845, and arrived at Racine, Wis., June 11, 1845; lived there three years, engaged in farming; came to his present location in May, 1848. Have no children. He was elected Constable at the first election in the town, in 1847, and also in 1850; was Supervisor several years, and Town Clerk 1856-57-59-61-62-67-68-69; was Justice of the Peace fourteen or sixteen years. Enrolled militia in 1863. Owns 120 acres in Secs. 21 and 16.

WILLIAM MEREDITH, farmer, Sec. 21; P. O. Cambria; was born March 2, 1827, in Radnor; brother of John Meredith; came with his parents at 16 years of age, and settled at Racine, Wis., where he lived nine years, and removed to this town. He was married, March 12, 1851, by Elder Dye, in the town of Raymond, to Julia A. Blackman, daughter of Eleazer and Lucretia (Conklin) Blackman; his wife was born July 2, 1826, in Erie Co., N. Y.; have two children—Mary Jane, born Jan. 15, 1854, in this town, and married March 31, 1878, to Sumner Jennings, on Sec. 29, by the Rev. Evan Meredith, now of the town of Otsego, brother of her father, he being a Baptist minister, who preached the first Welsh sermon in this State; Delia A. was born March 2, 1859, and was married to H. D. Jennings, on Sec. 29, Oct. 21, 1878, at Otsego, Wis., by her uncle, Evan Meredith. Owns 160 acres of land, 50 acres cultivated.

HUGH D. OWENS, farmer, Sec. 23; P. O. Cambria; born in Carnarvonshire, North Wales, in June, 1840; came to America with his parents at 5 years of age; is a brother of Morris D. Owens. He was married, March 5, 1879, by Rev. Wm. J. Jones, to Kate Howell, daughter of David G. and Margaret (Owens) Howell, who were from Drefaldwyn, Carnarvonshire, North Wales. Has 540 acres, 240 acres cultivated.

MORRIS D. OWENS, farmer, Sec. 14; P. O. Cambria; is a son of David Owens and Jane (Roberts) Owens; born in April, 1838, in Carnarvonshire, North Wales; came to this town with his parents at 7 years of age. He was married, Feb. 3, 1873, by Rev. John H. Jones, at Rome, N. Y., to Ellen J. Pritchard, daughter of William and Jane (Hughes) Pritchard, who were from Carnarvonshire, North Wales; have had three children—David W., born Dec. 14, 1873, died Dec. 27, 1873; William D., born Jan. 30, 1875; David, Dec. 3, 1877, died March 24, 1879; his wife was born Jan. 29, 1841, at Carnarvonshire. Has 260 acres of land, 200 acres under cultivation.

ROBERT OWENS, farmer, Sec. 28; P. O. Cambria; born Nov. 6, 1840, in the parish of Corwen, North Wales; son of Robert and Elizabeth (Hughes) Owens, who lived near Stanfer, Wales. Married, in Liverpool, at St. David's Church, Brownlowhill, by Rev. Mr. Davidson, to Jane Williams, who was born in February, 1835; daughter of Thomas and Louisa Williams, of Ffynongnoeuw, Wales; was married May 21, 1866, and came here June 13, 1866; had two children—Edward, born May 3, 1867, at Cambria, and a son born July 31, 1869, at Sun Prairie, and died at birth.

HUMPHREY J. ROWLANDS, farmer, Sec. 15; P. O. Cambria; owns 180 acres of land, 110 being under cultivation.

JOHN R. ROWLANDS, farmer, Sec. 15; P. O. Cambria; born at Llanberris, Carnarvonshire, North Wales, Feb. 19, 1827; came to this country in the summer of 1845, and settled at his present location. Married, April 2, 1853, by Robt. ap Roberts (Magistrate), to Winnefred Owens, daughter of David and Jane (Roberts) Owens, who came to America from Dalryddelen, North Wales; had three children—David O., born Sept. 3, 1857; Jane W., Oct. 2, 1860; Ellen W., May 25, 1864. Mr. Rowlands' parents were J. R. Rowlands and Jane (Closs) Rowlands. Mr. John R. Rowlands was elected Town Treasurer at the first town meeting held in the town, in 1849; has held the office of Supervisor several years; was elected Assessor in 1859, and held it ten years; was Chairman of the Board eight or nine years; represented his district in the Assembly in 1875 (then the Second District, there being at that time three); has held the office of Assessor for the past five years; is a Republican, and attends the Calvinistic Methodist Church. Mr. Rowlands is essentially a self-made man, and to him we are indebted for much that is of importance in connection with the history of this county; owns 130 acres of land.

WILLIAM W. ROWLANDS, farmer, Sec. 14; P. O. Cambria; born July 2, 1834, in the parish of Llanberis, Carnarvonshire, North Wales; came to America with his parents at about 12 years of age, in 1846, and settled in Springvale. Married, March 23, 1859, at Portage, by magistrate, to Jane Jones, daughter of John J. Rowlands and Catharine (Jones) Rowlands. Mr. Rowlands' parents were Owen W. Rowlands and Ellen (Jones) Rowlands, all of Carnarvonshire. Had six children—Mary, born June 7, 1860, died Aug. 17, 1869; Ellen J., born June 29, 1861; John O., Oct. 3, 1863; Catharine, Sept. 24, 1866, died July 13, 1867; Maggie J., born Dec. 14, 1873; Fannie, Nov. 23, 1878, died. Mr. Rowlands was Supervisor two years, Treasurer of the town one year, Clerk of School District No. 1 eight years; owns 160 acres in Secs. 14 and 15, 130 acres being under cultivation.

JAMES SCOTT, farmer, Sec. 6; P. O. Pardeeville; born April 11, 1819, at Sparta, Livingston Co., N. Y.; son of Mathew and Anna (Gilman) Scott; came to Racine in 1846; kept the Fox River Hotel at Waterford two years, then kept a public house at Yorkville one and one-half years; then removed to Marcellon, where he kept a hotel for a short time. Married, October, 1847, by Ira A. Rice, at Waterford, Wis., to Phebe Maria Crippen; they had six children, of whom two are living—Ada Maria (now wife of Russell Falconer, of Pardeeville), and Fred. L. C. Married the second time, Oct. 4, 1870, by John A. Young, to Phebe C., daughter of Jeremiah King, and widow of Morris Williams (who kept the "Jenny Lind House," near Portage, and was a noted musician. Mr. Scott has by his second marriage one child—Minnie May, born Dec. 28, 1872. He has 420 acres of land, 270 of which are under cultivation.

SAMUEL SCOTT, farmer, Sec. 31; P. O. Rio; born in the north of Ireland May 14, 1826; came to this county thirty years ago (at the age of 28 years). Married in Otsego by Mr. Foster, a magistrate, Dec. 31, twenty-eight years ago, to Clarrissa C. Palmer, daughter of David and Mehetable (Hawley) Palmer; they had seven children—Harriet M., born Nov. 12, 1852, now wife of Theodore Lintner, of Noble Co., Minn.; Jane, born Feb. 17, 1854, wife of Monre Bushnell, and living at home; Mehitable P., born Jan. 11, 1856, attending school at Oshkosh; William, born Oct. 31, 1857, died Dec. 15, 1860; David Brainard, born Sept. 5, 1861; Samuel J., born Feb. 4, 1867; Carl C., born July 30, 1869; he owns 323 acres of land (200 cultivated) in Secs. 31, and Sec. 1 in Lowville and 36 and 25 in Wyocena. The father of Mr. Scott was William Scott, who died at the age of 75 years, and the following extract from an obituary published at the time of his death shows the estimation in which he was held: "The eye that beamed in kindness is sealed in darkness, and the voice we so much loved to hear is dumb forever. We have lost a friend, but we know that what is our loss is his gain. The name of friend is one which many usurp, and which few deserve; but he was a friend indeed." Who in Springvale and the surrounding country does not feel that in losing 'Uncle Billy' they have lost a friend in the truest sense of the word? Coming to his late residence when the country was somewhat new and sparsely settled—when men seemed to think they had broken loose from their fellows, and almost from their God—his influence, advice and reproof were always on the side of Sabbath-keeping and right, thereby showing his interest in the welfare, present and future, of his neighbors, and in upholding God's law. Uncle Billy is dead, but his "works do live after him;" his example and precepts will be cherished by all who knew him. The deep respect and affection in which he was held by his neighbors and friends was manifest by the large and tearful gathering at his funeral. Yes, we have endured a loss. His children have lost a tender, honored and invaluable parent, while ours is the loss of an instructive acquaintance, and in days gone by an edifying friend. We would not claim for him perfection, for "defects through nature's best productions run." Our friend had spots, and spots are on the sun; but we believe he tried honestly to do his duty to God and to man, trusting only in the merits of his Redeemer for pardon and grace, and such are never deceived. The miniature sheaf of full, ripe wheat which he held in his lifeless hand was a fit symbol of his ripeness for heaven; that our loss is his gain, none can doubt. For nearly five years, he had been crippled in mind and body by reason of paralysis, and for thirteen weeks he only waited, patiently waited, never murmuring. When in the strength and vigor of life, his prayer had been that he might be allowed to wear out, never to rust out. But as he acquiesced in the will of the Lord and so reverently said: 'His will be done,' so must we; dear Father Scott and Uncle Billy, may we all, children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, neighbors and friends so live as to be permitted to reach that 'shining shore' and join you around that 'great white throne' you have so often in public and private consoled us to do."

WILLIAM STOKES, farmer, Sec. 30; P. O. Rio; born in Tuscarawas Co., Ohio, Aug. 30, 1833; came here about twenty-five years ago. Married twenty-two years ago, to Martha Jane Brown, daughter of Absolom; born in 1840. (See biography of Absolom Brown.) Had ten children, three living—Helen, Emma and Maggie. Those dead are Mary Ann, Josiah, Rosetta, Abby, William, James, and Bertie May. Has 160 acres of land.

ROBERT THOMAS, farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. Cambria; son of Hugh and Jane (Jones) Thomas, of North Wales; wife born in Carnarvonshire, Jan. 15, 1833; daughter of Robert Closs, deceased, and Ellen (Evans) Closs; came here at 13 years of age, was married Feb. 10, 1860, by Rev. Griffith Jones, to William J. Rowlands, who died in 1864; she had three children by him—John C., born 1860; Ellen C., Oct. 27, 1861, and Mary, deceased. She was married, by Rev. Rees Evans, to Mr. Thomas, May 1, 1871; has had one child, Llewellen, born Oct. 17, 1871. Has 160 acres of land.

EDWARD WILLIAMS, farmer, Sec. 15; P. O. Cambria; son of William Edwards, and Jane (Owens) Edwards; was born Sept. 28, 1814, in Carnarvonshire, North Wales; came to America in July, 1846. Married, February, 1849, by Rev. William J. Jones, to Ellen Evans, widow of Robert Evans and daughter of Thomas Edwards and Margaret (Jones) Edwards; had four children—Jane E., born Dec. 6, 1850, and married to William Pugh, at Eau Claire, Wis.; Thomas E., born Aug. 8, 1852, unmarried; William and Catherine, twins, born Aug. 8, 1854; both died October following; wife had one child by first husband, Margaret Evans, now wife of Griffith O. Jones, at Augusta, Wis. He has 224 acres of land, 100 acres under cultivation.

HUGH WILLIAMS, farmer, Sec. 25; P. O. Cambria; born June 5, 1811, in North Wales; came to Rome, N. Y., 1837, and to this town, 1849. Married Aug. 12, 1832, by John Lloyd (curate), to Jane Williams, who was born in Wales Sept. 15, 1812; had nine children—Richard H., born Aug. 9, 1833, now in California, unmarried; Catharine J., born Oct. 24, 1836, married to John P. Jones, on Portage Prairie; Evan H., born Aug. 9, 1841, married Carrie Curr, and living in Minnesota; John Henry, born Oct. 14, 1844, married Mary Perry, and living in Minnesota; Thomas B., born June 24, 1846, died in hospital in Arkansas in 1864; Ellen, born June 6, 1848, died Aug. 9, 1850; Ellen Grace, born April 8, 1851, unmarried; Jane Ann, born April 10, 1853, died Oct. 15, 1868; George W., born March 19, 1855, died Oct. 24, 1869; Mary Perry, wife John Henry, died at Granger, Filmore Co., Minn., May 8, 1876. Evan H. was in Co. I, 18th W. V. L., enlisted for three years, and served three years and ten months; was taken prisoner twice, once at battle of Shiloh (his Colonel being killed), and also at Sherman, Georgia, where the block-house in which he was stationed, guarding a railroad bridge, was demolished by artillery. He has 160 acres of land, 65 of which are cultivated.

TOWN OF MARCELLON.

HIRAM ALBEE (deceased) was born Feb. 15, 1812, in Windham Co., Vt.; his parents removed to Montgomery Co., N. Y., in 1828; he worked at farming during the summers, and taught school winters for several years in that vicinity. May 27, 1838, he married Miss Mary Jane Barrett, of Fulton Co., N. Y., daughter of Sylvester and Ann (Cummins) Barrett; she was born April 30, 1817; he remained in New York till 1846; and then came West and lived one year at Fort Atkinson, Jefferson Co., Wisconsin, and, in the fall of 1847, came to Columbia Co., and settled in the town of Marcellon, where he lived most of the time till his death, May 8, 1878; he was one of the first settlers in the town, which he helped to organize, and was the first Town Superintendent, which office he held for three years; he was also Deputy Provost Marshal during the war, and was Justice of the Peace for over twelve years; was also Deputy Sheriff one term; he took an active part in educational matters, and taught the district school twenty terms in Wisconsin. He was a member of the Close Communion Baptist Church, and in politics a Republican. He left eight children—William C., of Marcellon; Emily A., wife of Henry Ross, of Barron Co., Wis.; Euretta, wife of Marion McDonald, of Furnas Co., Neb.; George W., of Benton Co., Iowa; Marietta, wife of Charles Dean, of Barron Co., Wis.; Deane J., of La Crosse, Wis.; Guidetta, wife of Irvin Herreman, of Marcellon, and Fayette, who was married, March 26, 1878, to Ella Campbell, who was born Feb. 8, 1857, in Marcellon; have one child, Lorena M., born Jan. 25, 1879; he lives on the homestead (160 acres); P. O. Marcellon. Mrs. Mary Jane Albee is also living on the homestead. George W. enlisted in the 2d W. V. C., Co. E, and was in the service over two years.

WILLIAM C. ALBEE, farmer, Sec. 4; P. O. Bellefountain; born Aug. 1, 1840, in Fulton Co., N. Y., son of Hiram Albee, who came to Wisconsin in 1847; lived one year in Jefferson Co., and came to Marcellon in the fall of 1848; was the first Town Superintendent of Marcellon; was Chairman six years, and was Deputy Provost Marshal during the war; taught school twenty-five terms or more; he died May 8, 1878, aged 66. William C. was married, Feb. 11, 1866, to Clarissa S. Dean, who was born Aug. 26, 1842, daughter of Hiram Dean, who died in 1865. Mr. Albee enlisted in the fall of 1861, in the 2d W. V. C., Co. E, and was in the service four years and three months; was with his regiment most of the time, except three and one-half months he was a prisoner in Alabama; was captured near Yazoo City; was with Custer in Texas and Louisiana. Has three children—Hiram, Aliee and Eliza; has 80 acres of land. He is a Republican in politics. Mrs. Albee is a member of the Free-Will Baptist Church.

GEORGE W. ALLEN, farmer, Sec. 10; P. O. Bellefountain; born July 4, 1862, in Otego, Otego Co., N. Y. His parents removed to Erie Co., Penn., when he was only 18 months old. He was first married in Genesee Co., N. Y., Nov. 2, 1842, to Jane Van Dusen, who died in December, 1855, in Wisconsin, aged 34, leaving three children—Emily (now Mrs. Emmet, west of Marcellon), Lawrence G., who died Oct. 10, 1874, in his 28th year; and Susan J. (now Mrs. George Mahaffey, of Fillmore Co., Minn.), Feb. 3, 1856. He was married to Paulina Smith, who died Feb. 6, 1862, leaving one daughter—Prudy (now living at home). Was married the third time, Aug. 27, 1862, to Permelia E. Cook, who was born April 9, 1843, in Trumbull Co., Ohio; have five children by the third marriage—Arthur, Addie, Clothier, Esther and Edmund; have lost two—Nettie, died at 10 months old, April 6, 1864; and Lester, died March 19, 1873, aged 2 months; also lost two children of the second wife—Mary, died June 12, 1857, 2 days old; and Luman, died Jan. 27, 1862, aged 14 months. Mr. Allen came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1851, and came on his present farm on the 1st day of May, in a fearful snowstorm; he learned the shoemaker's trade before he was 21, and followed that business till he came West; has worked at it some in Wisconsin; has held the office of Supervisor three years, and in politics is a Reformer. Mr. and Mrs. Allen, and his daughter, Prudy, are members of the Seventh-day Adventist Church; they believe (as the name indicates) that the seventh day of the week should be kept as the Sabbath; also in the personal coming of Christ, and the total annihilation of the wicked. Has 140 acres of land.

WILLIAM BARRY, carpenter and farmer, Sec. 6; P. O. Portage City; born May 15, 1821, in Paisley, Scotland; son of John and Jane Barry; came to America in 1841, and lived in the city of New York fourteen years; learned the carpenter's trade in New York, and followed it while living there. Was married in New York in the fall of 1846, to Isabella Smith, who was born July 9, 1830, in McDuff, Banffshire, Scotland; daughter of William Smith, who came to America in 1839, and settled in New York; came to Wisconsin when 60 years of age, and died Sept. 1, 1879, aged 87 years; her mother, whose maiden name was Margaret McIntosh, died March 27, 1866, aged 73. Mr. Barry went to Washington in the spring of 1847, and worked on the Smithsonian Institution three years, then returned to New York, and in June, 1855, came to Wisconsin and settled in the town of Buffalo, Marquette Co.; lived there five years, then went to Portage City and worked at his trade there till the spring of 1864, then bought his present farm and has since resided on it; has three children—August (lives in Plattsburgh, Neb., married to Mary Heley, of Marcellon), John and Henry (both at home). Mr. Barry is Supervisor, now on his second term, and has been Clerk of the School District three years, and is a Republican; was in the Quartermaster's Department ten months, at Helena, Ark.; in Gen. Buford's command during the last of the war. While in Portage he worked for Alexander Carnagie, and was employed on the court house and jail, high-school building and Fox House. Has 140 acres of land. Mrs. Barry is a member of the Baptist Church.

ISAAC BEACH, farmer, Sec. 36; P. O. Marcellon; born April 9, 1835, in Saratoga Co., N. Y.; son of Nathan and Sarah Beach, who came to Wisconsin in 1846; lived one year in Walworth Co.; then came to Columbia Co. in the spring of 1847; settled in Marcellon, and started the first blacksmith-shop in the town. Mr. Beach was married March 18, 1856, to Clarissa Lipe, who was born Feb. 22, 1835, in the State of New York; daughter of Abram Lipe, a native of New York State; her mother was a native of Vermont; maiden name, Clarissa Richmond; they came to Wisconsin in 1854, and settled in Marcellon; he died July 20, 1871, aged 64 years, and Mrs. Lipe died Aug. 21, 1867, aged 58; in the fall of 1872, Mr. Beach went to California, and spent about six months visiting friends and looking over the country; his father, three brothers and one sister, are living in that State, and one brother, Frank, is railroading in Oregon; his brother, Cormi, lives in Oakland; Tyler and his father at San Jose, and Geo. D. in San Francisco; Mr. and Mrs. Beach have had two children, and lost both of them—Maria was born April 22, 1859, in Marcellon, and died in January, 1868; Roland was born Oct. 31, 1866, and died in January, 1872. Mr. Beach is a Republican, and has held the office of Supervisor one term; has 360 acres of land.

JOHN CAMPBELL, farmer, Sec. 1 and 2; P. O. Portage; born Jan. 29, 1848, in Dane Co., Wis.; son of John Campbell, who died when John was only about 1 year old; his mother afterward married John Bryan, of Portage City, and went to Iowa; lived there seven years; then came back to Cross Plains, Dane Co., Wis., and for the last eleven or twelve years has lived in Portage. John was married, Aug. 5, 1875, to Jane Smith, who was born March 16, 1850, in New York City; she was a daughter of Daniel Smith, who came to Wisconsin with his family in 1855, and was killed in January, 1864, in Chicago, by a boiler explosion; her mother is still living in the town of Buffalo, Marquette Co. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell have two children—John, born Dec. 20, 1876, and Nina Belle, born Nov. 4, 1877. Has 80 acres of land; is a Republican.

LEWIS H. CASS, farmer, Sec. 17; P. O. Bellefountain; born April 2, 1836, in Belknap Co., N. H.; son of Moses F. Cass, who came to Wisconsin with his family in 1850, and lived one year in Walworth Co., and in the spring of 1851, came to Columbia Co. and settled on the farm now owned by his son; he died Dec. 7, 1861, aged 57; Mrs. Cass, whose maiden name was Nancy A. Smith, died Sept. 1, 1879, lacking only 17 days of being 70 years old. Mr. Cass was married, Dec. 26, 1865, to Ellen Haynes, who was born Nov. 7, 1840, in Walworth Co., Wis., town of East Troy, daughter of William and Caroline B. Haynes, natives of New Hampshire, who came to Wisconsin in 1838, now living in Pardeeville, Wis.; Mr. and Mrs. Cass have only one child, Nancy Evalene, born Aug. 22, 1870. He enlisted March 3, 1865, in the 52d W. V. I., and was discharged May 20, for disability. Is a Republican, and has held the office of Supervisor; has 160 acres land.

O. D. COLMAN, M. D., Sec. 13; P. O. Pardeeville; was born Aug. 1, 1821, in Otsego Co., N. Y., town of Springfield; son of Franklin Colman, who was a farmer; spent his early life on his father's farm; read medicine with Dr. Menzo White, of Cherry Valley, Otsego Co., N. Y.; his father, Dr. Joseph White, was an eminent physician and surgeon, and had a reputation second to none in the State; he was the father of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, of Western New York, located in Herkimer Co., and had a more extensive personal acquaintance than any other medical man in the State. Dr. Colman came West in 1848, and located in the village of Marcellon April 1, 1849; he received his diploma in 1850, at Rush Medical College of Chicago; he remained in Marcellon till 1857, then went to Pardeeville, where he practiced about twenty years, then located on his farm in the town of Marcellon in 1877, where he continues to practice his profession, his farm being carried on by his son. He was married, April 23, 1851, in Marcellon, to Miss Kate Sheffield, who was born Oct. 3, 1831, in Warren Co., N. Y., daughter of Simon Sheffield; they lost their first child, Florence, who was born July 25, 1854, and died in October, 1856; have one son living, Charles D., born July 13, 1856, and married Aug. 12, 1877, to Miss Eva Cook, now living on the homestead, which consists of 450 acres of land, with first-class farm buildings; the Doctor came into this county when there was plenty of hard work, long rides and poor pay, his nearest neighbors in the medical profession being at Portage City, Kingston and Fox Lake. He is a Democrat, and has held the office of Town Superintendent of Schools, and Chairman of the town, and was a member of Assembly in the Legislature of 1853.

RUFUS COMSTOCK, farmer, Sec. 16; P. O. Bellefountain; born May 2, 1818, in Ontario Co., N. Y., town of Gorham; came to Wisconsin in September, 1845, and lived in Rock Co. till the next March, then went to Marquette Co. and from there to Fond du Lac, Oshkosh, Appleton and Green Bay, then returned to New York, and was married, Feb. 10, 1848, to Irene Blodgett, who was born Feb. 27, 1823, in Gorham, N. Y., daughter of Benjamin Blodgett; in the fall of 1848, again came to Wisconsin and lived in Brookfield, Waukesha Co., two years, then went to Green Lake Co., and lived near Little Green Lake one year, then sold out and removed to his present location; has six children—Charles, Edwin, Rosa, Adelia, Mary and Alice; Charles is at Warren's Mills, Wis., and Edwin in Miner Co., Dakota. Mr. Comstock is a Republican, and has been Town Clerk two years, and Assessor and Treasurer one year, and has 116½ acres of land. Mr. and Mrs. Comstock and all the children are members of the Free-Will Baptist Church, except Charles, and he is a Methodist.

WALTER W. COMSTOCK, farmer, Sec. 9; P. O. Bellefountain; was born June 17, 1822, in Ontario Co., N. Y., town of Gorham; son of Jonathan Comstock; came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1849, and stayed through the winter near Milwaukee, and in May, 1850, located land in the town of Marcellon, where he remained till the next September; then returned to the State of New York, and stayed there till the spring of 1852; then came back to Wisconsin, and has resided on the same farm ever since. He was married, Sept. 28, 1858, in Marcellon, to Susan H. Dean, who was born Oct. 5, 1839, in Livingston Co., N. Y., daughter of Harvey Dean. (See his biography.) Mr. and Mrs. Comstock have seven children—Truman O., Clara E., Ettie L., Wallie, Phebe S., Frank C. and Edith May. Mr. Comstock is a Republican, and has held the office of Supervisor several years. Mr. and Mrs. Comstock and the three oldest children belong to the Free-Will Baptist Church. He enlisted in February, 1865, in the 49th W.V. I., Co. I, and was discharged on account of sickness, the 1st of the next August; was stationed at Rolla, Mo., all the time he was in the army. He has 200 acres of land in his farm.

MARTIN A. COOK, farmer, Sec. 27; P. O. Pardeeville; was born in Rodman, Jefferson Co., N. Y., July 14, 1822; spent his time on a farm till he was 21 years old, then followed a sailor's life on the lakes about ten years. He was married, March 19, 1848, in Jefferson Co., N. Y., to Emeline C. Griffin, who was born Oct. 12, 1828, in Columbus, Chenango Co., N. Y., daughter of Dr. John W. Griffin. After marriage, Mr. Cook concluded to settle down to a more quiet life, and in November, 1848, came to Wisconsin and settled in Burnett, Dodge Co.; lived there three years, then returned to New York, and lived six years in Rushford, Allegany Co. In the spring of 1858, he again came to Wisconsin, lived one year in Metomen, Fond du Lac Co., and one year in Buffalo, Marquette Co. He then came to Columbia Co.; lived two years in the town of Scott, then came to Marcellon, where he has since resided; bought his present farm in 1862. He enlisted in September, 1864, in the 1st Wis. Heavy Artillery, Co. F, and was discharged at the close of the war. Have had five children, three of whom are still living—Ada, is now the wife of George Clark, of Rockford, Floyd Co., Iowa; Anson Wirt and DeForrest Grant, are living at home. Georgiana Gertrude died in Burnett, Dodge Co., Sept. 29, 1851, aged 2 years 5 months and 14 days; Adelbert Eugene died in Marcellon, Aug. 25, 1859, aged 7 years 3 months and 2 days. Mr. Cook is a Republican, and owns 80 acres of land.

JOHN DAILY, farmer, Sec. 33; P. O. Pardeeville; is a native of County Westmeath, Ireland, and came to America in 1847, when about 17 or 18 years old. He settled in Chenango Co., N. Y., where he was married in August, 1855, to Ann Fagan. The next fall, he came to Wisconsin; lived in Waukesha Co. till spring, then went to Illinois and stayed till fall, then his wife returned to New York, and he went to New Orleans, where he stayed through the winter, and went back to New York the next July. In the spring of 1864, he enlisted in the 5th N. Y. Heavy Artillery, and was mustered out at the close of the war. He was in Virginia most of the time, and participated in six or seven battles. After the war closed, he returned to New York, and in October, 1865, again came to Wisconsin, this time to stay, and the same winter bought his present location, where he has since resided. Mrs. Daily died Oct. 10, 1876, aged about 45, after an illness of a year and a half, leaving four children—Thomas, Mary Ann, Jane (now Mrs. William Robert Shaw, of Scott), and Julia. Mr. Daily is a Democrat and a member of the Catholic Church. He has 200 acres of land.

HARVEY DEAN (deceased), was born in the State of New York, May 21, 1814; son of Samuel Dean; was married, Sept. 23, 1836, to Eliza A. Wilkins, who was born Feb. 27, 1819, in the town of Sussex, England, daughter of Charles and Susan (Hobden) Wilkins, who came to America in the fall of 1829 and settled in Monroe Co., N. Y.; lived there three or four years, then sold out and went to Victor (same county), and lived there till May, 1862, then came to Wisconsin. Mrs. Wilkins died in New York State Feb. 9, 1862, in her 73d year, and Mr. Wilkins died April 3, 1878, in Wisconsin, in his 82d year. Mr. Dean came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1850, lived in Racine till the next fall, then came to Columbia Co. and located on Sec. 14, and afterward bought more land on Sec. 15 and resided on the same farm till his death, Jan. 14, 1865, of pneumonia, after an illness of nine days, leaving five children—Susan H. (now Mrs. W. Comstock), of Marcellon; Clarissa L. (now Mrs. William Albee), of the same town; Caroline S., born Dec. 3, 1843, in Monroe Co., N. Y. (now Mrs. Nelson Thwing, of Waseca Co., Minn.); Charles, born Sept. 25, 1847, in Greece, Monroe Co., N. Y., lives in Barron Co., Wis., and Martin H., born March 20, 1863, in Marcellon, Wis., now living on the homestead with his mother; P. O. Bellefountain. Have 140 acres of land. Mr. Dean worked at the carpenter and joiner's trade in New York, and most of the time after coming to Wisconsin. The sons are all farmers. Mrs. Dean and youngest son are members of the Free-Will Baptist Church.

JOHN M. FRENCH, farmer, Sec. 7; P. O. Portage City; was born May 4, 1791, in Essex Co., Vt.; son of Hains French, who was a Revolutionary soldier, and was in the battle of Quebec, when Gen. Montgomery was killed; was the first Clerk of the Court in Essex Co., Vt.; he was a member of the first Council, and remained in both offices till 1813; the county was organized in 1800; in 1812, he helped raise a volunteer regiment in Vermont; took a major's commission, and died in November, 1813, at Chautauqua Corners, State of New York. John M. enlisted in July, 1812, in a New Hampshire volunteer regiment and served one year; then enlisted in the 4th Regulars and served till the close of the war; was in seven or eight engagements; once got shot through the leg below the knee and had two ribs broken; his oldest brother, Homer, enlisted in a Maine volunteer regiment, served one year and then re-enlisted in the 4th Rifle Regiment, in the regular army, and was killed Nov. 17, in the battle of Fort Erie; his youngest brother enlisted in a Vermont volunteer regiment, served one year, then re-enlisted and served through the war. He is now living in Canada East, aged 85 years. After the war, Mr. French returned to his native place and was married, Dec. 25, 1815, to Tirzah Day; came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1844; lived in Dodge Co. two and a half years, and, in the fall of 1846, built the first saw-mill in the county, on French's Creek, in the town of Fort Winnebago. He removed to his present location in 1868; his first wife died April 1, 1863, in the 67th year of her age; she was the mother of eighteen children, only six of whom were living at her death; had lost nine before coming to Wisconsin, and three died in Wisconsin before her death and one since; those who are still living and those who died in Wisconsin are as follows: Ovid, born Nov. 3, 1816; John M., Jan. 3, 1818, and died Jan. 16, 1868; Tirzah, born Feb. 19, 1820, died Sept. 27, 1856; Haines, born April 21, 1822, died April 21, 1842; Olive, born June 9, 1824, died Nov. 3, 1854; Ann, born Sept. 21, 1827; Homer, born June 9, 1829; Volney V., Aug. 22, 1832, and William W., Jan. 8, 1824. Homer was in the Mexican war, through the whole of it, and also served in the 32d W. V. I., through the war of the rebellion; William W. was in the 2d W. V. C., and served three years during the rebellion; a grandson, William, son of John French, also served during the war, in the 2d W. V. C. Mr. French was married the second time, Sept. 13, 1863, to Malvina Barrows, who was born Oct. 25, 1824, in Oneida Co., N. Y.; was educated at the Wesleyan Female College, of Cincinnati, and graduated June 29, 1849; has one daughter by the second marriage—Lillie, born Sept. 9, 1867. Mr. French has had nineteen children; now has forty grandchildren and fifty great-grandchildren living. Although nearly 89 years old, he retains all his mental faculties, and gives names and dates readily from memory; he still plays the violin and seems to enjoy it as well as ever, and can dance as well as most of the boys. He was an old-time Jefferson Democrat and still acts with the Democratic party. Has 52 acres of land, which he rents, as his failing eyesight prevents active labor.

FRANK FULLER, farmer, Sec. 10; P. O. Bellefountain; was born Nov. 26, 1827, in Erie Co., N. Y. Was married in Allegany Co., Dec. 31, 1850, to Esther Ann Aldrich; came West in 1852 and settled on the farm he now owns, and has resided on it ever since; has eight children living—Albert, William, Homer, Andrew, Edwin, Arthur, Millie and Mina Ann; Albert and Homer live in Lake Co., Dakota; William in the town of Marcellon, and all the rest at home; have lost three—Ernest, died May 29, 1877, aged 16; Theodore, died in August, 1861, aged 1½ years, and one, an infant, died in 1862. Mr. and Mrs. Fuller are members of the Free-Will Baptist Church. He is a Republican in politics, and has 200 acres of land.

WILLIAM GOODMAN, farmer, Sec. 7; P. O. Portage City; born Sept. 17, 1819, in Somerseshire, England, son of William Goodman. Was married, March 24, 1840, in Ware, England, to Eliza Carter, who was born in 1816, in Ware, England, daughter of Thomas Carter; Mr. Goodman was a farmer in England; came to America in 1849, and located in the town of Marcellon in July of that year. Has four children living—Jane (lives in Portage), William (lives in Mower Co., Minn.), Henry and Mary, at home; has lost two—Robert enlisted in 1864 in the 3d W. V. C., Co. K, and died about two months after his enlistment from an accidental discharge of his own carbine, while passing through some timber in charge of a lot of horses; the hammer of the gun was caught by some bushes and the gun discharged; he died two weeks after the accident, aged 24; Ellen died, aged 28, Nov. 25. The family attended the M. E. Church, but are not members; he is a Democrat. Has 370 acres of land, and at the present writing there is a Portage company mining for silver on his farm on Sec. 7.

DEXTER S. HEATH, farmer, Sec. 25; P. O. Marcellon; born Sept. 30, 1831, in Caledonia Co., Vt., son of John Heath, who came to Wisconsin in 1851, and settled in Marcellon on the farm now owned by his son, and died there Dec. 31, 1876, aged 85; Mr. Heath has lived on the same farm ever since he was 20 years old. He was married, Sept. 18, 1864, to Mrs. Mariette, widow of Asa Langdon, and daughter of Hugh Barker; she was born June 29, 1837, in Genesee Co., N. Y.; her father came to Wisconsin when she was 7 years old, and died in Packwaukee, Marquette Co., in October, 1857, aged 64; Mr. and Mrs. Heath have three children—Allen, born Sept. 10, 1866; Julius, Jan. 29, 1869, and George, born July 17, 1873. Mr. Heath has 255 acres of land, and a first-class farm building.

H. T. HENTON, farmer, Sec. 9 and 10; P. O. Bellefountain; was born Feb. 24, 1823, in Ripley, Chautauqua Co., N. Y. His parents removed to Erie Co., Penn., when he was 11 years old, and came to Wisconsin in 1850; his father, Thomas Henton, died in 1860, and his mother died in 1832. He sailed on the lakes from 1838 to 1850; commenced, at the age of 15, on the old steamer Thomas Jefferson, running between Buffalo and Chicago. Sept. 14, 1846, he was married, near Cresco, Fond du Lac Co., Wis., to Evaline, daughter of Capt. Francis Dorchester, a native of Chautauqua Co., N. Y., and one of the first settlers in Fond du Lac Co., having located there in 1844. After his marriage, Mr. Henton returned to Erie, Penn., and lived there one year; then came to Milwaukee, where he resided five years. In October, 1852, he removed to Fall River, Columbia Co., Wis., and was engaged in the mercantile business three years; then he went to Ripon, Wis., and July 13, 1855, bought an interest in the Ripon and Gothic Mills, and removed his family to that place in October of the same year; was in the milling and produce business in Ripon until April 1, 1873; then went to Winneconne and bought the "Lake View House," and an interest in the Winneconne flouring-mills; remained there till March, 1878; then removed to his present location. Mrs. Henton died, Oct. 19, 1879, of hemorrhage of the brain, without a moment's warning, leaving one son—Henry Freemont, born Feb. 8, 1856; had lost three sons—Francis D., died Aug. 19, 1869, aged 16 years; Harvey Howard, died in September, 1869, aged 13 months, and one died in infancy unnamed. Mr. Henton is a Republican, and was one of the delegates to the convention that organized the Republican party in the summer of 1854, and was one of the committee to appoint permanent officers for the organization; has been a staunch Republican ever since, and is "determined to fight it out on that line;" was nominated and elected Mayor of the city of Ripon in the spring of 1865, while away from home, and, on returning, his first official act was issuing a proclamation calling a meeting of the citizens of Ripon to take action on the death of Abraham Lincoln. He held the offices of Chairman, Supervisor, Superintendent of the Poor, and several other offices in Ripon, and represented the village of Winneconne in the County Board. He has 240 acres of land in his home farm, and a farm of 146 acres in Clark Co., Wis.

DWIGHT B. HERREMAN, farmer, Sec. 11; P. O. Bellefountain; was born Aug. 12, 1835, in Euclid, Cuyahoga Co., Ohio; son of William Herreman, who came to Wisconsin in May, 1849, and settled in the town of Farmington, Jefferson Co., and lived there two years; then came to Columbia Co., and settled in the town of Marcellon, where he has since resided; was Postmaster in Marcellon eighteen years, and resigned in October, 1879. Dwight B. lived at home until he was 20 years old; then went to Rice Co., Minn., and lived there one summer, returning to Marcellon in the fall. He was married, Nov. 11, 1857, to Polly Aldrich, who was born June 29, 1839, in Allegany Co., N. Y., daughter of Gideon P. Aldrich, who came to Wisconsin in 1841, and now lives in Wycocna, Columbia Co. Mr. and Mrs. Herreman have four children—Warren, Cara, Prudy and Wallace, all at home. He has held the offices of Justice of the Peace and Supervisor; he learned the blacksmith's trade of his father, when a boy, and now has a shop on his farm and carries on that business in addition to his farming. He enlisted March 13, 1865, in the 49th W. V. I., Co. I., and was discharged at the close of the war; spent most of his time in Missouri hunting "bushwhackers." He has lost two children—Esther Ann, born March 29, 1863, and died Dec. 16, 1863; Alvin Eugene, born Feb. 11, 1872, and died April 1, 1874. He has 120 acres of land, and is a Republican.

WILLIAM HERREMAN, merchant, Marcellon; he was born March 21, 1803, in Livingston Co., N. Y.; his parents removed to Meadville, Penn., when he was 16 years old, and he started out at that age to do battle with the world on his own account; spent about five years on the St. Lawrence River and in Canada; then went to Meadville and stayed three years; then went to Ohio and lived in Geauga Co. till 1849, and in May of that year, came to Wisconsin; lived two years in Jefferson Co., and in the spring of 1851, came to Columbia Co. and settled in the village of Marcellon, where he has since resided; learned the blacksmith's trade in Ohio when 27 years old, and worked at that business till 1870, since which time he has been engaged in farming and selling goods; had the post office in Marcellon from 1864 to 1879, and then resigned the office. Was married, June 12, 1828, in Geauga Co., Ohio, to Caroline Parsons, who was born June 27, 1811, in Hartford, Conn., daughter of Warhem Parsons; have nine children living—William L., Oscar H., Celia M., Dwight B., Orlando A., Cassius M., Irvin T., James F. and Alice L.; have lost three—Chloe M., Myron S. and Alonzo A.; had five sons in the army during the rebellion. Alonzo A. was in the 2d W. V. C. about two years, and died July 25, 1865, from the effects of a wound received at Vicksburg, while in a scouting party; Dwight B. and Oscar H. were in the 49th W. V. C., Co. I.; the last nine months of the war, Myron S. was in a New York regiment; Orlando A., in Government service in Nashville, Tenn., and Cassius in the permanent corps, in Madison; also had a son-in-law, T. M. Lockwood, in same corps as Cassius; Alonzo was a prisoner about two months, being taken April 21, 1864. Mr. Herreman is a Republican and held the office of Town Treasurer five years; reads without glasses at the age of 77.; has a farm of 120 acres adjoining the village.

JAMES HODGMAN, farmer, Sec. 2; P. O. Bellefountain; born in Rutland Co., Vt., Oct. 5, 1825; son of Latt C. and Mary Hodgman; he came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1850 and settled in Lowville, Columbia Co.; remained there till the spring of 1866; then sold out and purchased the farm he now owns, and where he has since resided. Was married, March 16, 1856, to Sarah Jane Evarts, who died May 16, 1857, leaving one child—Frederick Lorenzo, now living in Lowville, Wis. Was married the second time, July 4, 1864, to Fanny Lucina Jerome, who was born in the State of New York, Feb. 7, 1852, daughter of Daniel Jerome; has three children by the second marriage—James W., born Jan. 1, 1867; Emma Viola, born Nov. 15, 1872, and Charles Nelson, born Aug. 26, 1875; has 160 acres of land. Republican.

W. H. HORTON, farmer, Secs. 5 and 6; P. O. Portage City; was born May 17, 1835, in Ashtabula Co., Ohio; son of Loren Horton, who came to Wisconsin in 1847, and lived in the town of Herman, Dodge Co., till his death, in April, 1839; was killed by a falling limb from a tree he was chopping. Mr. Horton was married, Oct. 8, 1857, to Sarah Whittaker, who was born Oct. 7, 1837, in Worcester Co., Mass., daughter of Robert Whittaker, a native of England; have two children—William, born Oct. 2, 1858, and Mamie, born Aug. 9, 1866; the maiden name of Mrs. Horton's mother was Mary H. Cheney, and she was a native of Massachusetts. Mr. Horton's parents were both natives of Washington Co., N. Y.; his mother's maiden name was Lucy M. Kingsley. Mr. Horton is a Republican and has 153 acres of land.

DANIEL JEROME, Jr., farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. Bellefountain; born Aug. 23, 1844, in Livingston Co., N. Y.; son of Daniel Jerome, who came to Wisconsin in 1847, and came into the town of Marcellon in the fall of that year, and is still living in the town, aged 80; Mrs. Jerome is also living, at the age of 71. Mr. Jerome was married, Feb. 22, 1866, to Katie Ann Cobb, who was born Feb. 10, 1847, in Canada; daughter of Leonard Cobb, who settled in Wisconsin when she was a child; have two children—Nellie, born June 29, 1869, and Wallace S., born Feb. 6, 1877; he is Republican, and has held the office of Constable; has 160 acres in his home farm, and 160 acres in Waushara Co. He enlisted Aug. 15, 1862, in the 23d W. V. C. Co. C; was with his regiment one year, participating in four battles during the time; was then transferred to the 5th V. R. C., stationed at Indianapolis, Ind., and was discharged July 5, 1865.

F. B. LANGDON, or "Uncle Frank," as he is called, was the first permanent settler in the town of Marcellon; he came here from Tuscarawas Co., Ohio, in the fall of 1845, arriving with his family on the 3d day of November, having selected his land about ten days before; he took off his wagon-cover and used it for a tent, living in it till he got his house built; his nearest neighbors at that time were Samuel and John McConochie, of the town of Scott; has lived on the same farm ever since; helped to organize the town of Marcellon, and was a member of the first Town Board; he was born Jan. 27, 1810, in the town of Wilbraham, Hampden Co., Mass.; son of Christopher Langdon, who removed to Geauga Co., Ohio, in 1814, and died there in 1822. Mr. Langdon was married in Tuscarawas Co., Ohio, on Sept. 1.

1833, to Lydia Hamblin, who was born Nov. 9, 1812, in Grand Isle Co., Vt.; daughter of Asa Hamblin, who removed to Ohio when she was 7 years old. Mr. and Mrs. Langdon have had four children, but the only one living is Rosellia, who was born June 11, 1834, and married to John Braden, who died in the army from a gun-shot wound, received in battle in Missouri; he belonged to the 14th Iowa V. I., and his death occurred Oct. 31, 1864; he left five children—Alma, Julia, Erwin, Datus and Herbert; she is now the wife of S. R. Peck, and has one child by the second marriage—a daughter, named Mandania. Mr. and Mrs. Langdon have lost three children—Christopher, enlisted in the 32d W. V. I., was under Sherman, and died in North Carolina in the 27th year of his age; Asa, died Jan. 10, 1862, in his 24th year, and Marinett, died Dec. 20, 1841, aged 1 year. Mr. Langdon has 191 acres of land on Sec. 24; P. O. Marcellon; is a Republican.

BARNEY LOVELL, farmer, Sec. 10; P. O. Bellefountain; born Dec. 2, 1820, in Cayuga Co., N. Y. Was married Sept. 11, 1842, in Livingston Co., N. Y., town of Sparta, to Elizabeth Spiecer, who was born May 3, 1826, in Sparta, daughter of Asa Spiecer; Mr. Lovell came from New York to Michigan in 1851, and lived in Cass Co. till August, 1865, then sold out, came to Wisconsin and bought the farm he now owns and occupies; have four children living—Nathan V., lives in Berrien Co., Mich., Henry C. and John T. are living on Sec. 11, in Marcellon, and Mary Elizabeth is now Mrs. Alman Inglehart, of Cambria, Wis.; have lost one, Frances Adel, died March 6, 1875, aged 16. Nathan V. spent four years in the army; belonged to the 7th Mich. V. I., Co. B, almost a year; was taken prisoner at Murfreesboro and taken to McMinnville, Tenn., where he escaped, and reported at Camp Chase, Ohio; his regiment being badly cut up, what there was left of it was disbanded, and he re-enlisted in the 7th Mich. V. C., Co. B; spent three years with Sheridan and Custer; was with Grant when he took Richmond, and was discharged at the close of the war; had nine horses shot under him, and was once shot through the heel, but never left his regiment, and never spent a day in the hospital. Mr. and Mrs. Lovell were both members of the Christian Church, in New York, but are not members of any church at present; he is Republican, and has 80 acres of land.

PELEG L. PECKHAM, farmer, Sec. 13; P. O. Bellefountain; born May 24, 1819, in Madison Co., N. Y.; his parents removed to Monroe Co. when he was in his 16th year; he remained at home till he was 21 years old; came to Columbia Co., Wis., in August, 1844; lived near Columbus till January, 1846, then came up and located the land he now owns in the town of Marcellon, and has lived on it ever since. Was married, April 19, 1846, to Minerva Austin, who was born Oct. 4, 1825, in Mexico, N. Y.; daughter of Lyman Austin, who came to Wisconsin in 1845, and settled near Lake Maria, then in Marquette Co. Mr. and Mrs. Peckham have five children—John lives in Harrison Co., Dakota; Lucretia is now Mrs. Thomas Vining, of Faribault Co., Minn., and Elizabeth, Charles and William are still living with their parents; lost one child, which died in infancy; has 280 acres of land.

E. R. PERRY, farmer, Sec. 29; P. O. Pardeeville; born Dec. 28, 1830, in Riga, Monroe Co., N. Y.; son of W. L. Perry, who came to Wisconsin in 1845, and lived in Dodge Co., town of Clyman two years, then came to Columbia, and lived in Randolph ten or twelve years, and died in Marcellon May 30, 1874, aged 73 years; Mrs. Perry died in June, 1835, in Riga, N. Y., aged 34. E. R. Perry was married, Sept. 17, 1856, in Monroe Co., N. Y., to Mary Richmond, daughter of Joshua Richmond (see biography of H. J. Richmond); she was born in Ogden, Monroe Co., N. Y., and died March 26, 1876, aged 43 years, leaving two children—Charles E. and Ella D. Was married the second time, Nov. 27, 1878, to Mrs. Maria Brown, daughter of Killian Hepler, of Pardeeville; she was born in Medina Co., Ohio, April 28, 1845; had one daughter by her first husband, Addie E. Brown. Mr. Perry is a Democrat, and held the office of Constable in Randolph, and Justice of the Peace in Marcellon; has 160 acres of land.

A. W. RESSEGUIE, farmer, Secs. 1 and 12; P. O. Bellefountain; born Oct. 30, 1848, in Susquehanna Co., Penn.; son of Lewis Resseguie, who came to Wisconsin, and settled in Berlin in the spring of 1850; he died Jan. 15, 1879, aged 69; Mrs. Resseguie died in 1151. A. W. Resseguie was married, Oct. 29, 1872, in Berlin, to Miss Lutie Leonard, of that place, and followed farming three and one-half miles southeast of Berlin till March, 1877, then sold out and removed to his present location; has 216 acres in his farm, with good brick residence. In politics, Republican.

H. S. RICHMOND, farmer, Sec. 34; P. O. Marcellon; born Aug. 20, 1838, in Monroe Co., N. Y.; son of Joshua Richmond, a native of Vermont, who raised a family of fifteen children, three boys and twelve girls; all grew up to maturity and all married and raised families except one girl; his first wife was a Miss Sprague, the second, Nancy Creasey, and the third, Nancy True, all of Monroe Co., N. Y.; he died Dec. 13, 1868. H. S. Richmond was married in Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 23, 1858, to Mary Robbins, who died Aug. 16, 1870, aged 35, leaving three children—Harriet, Nona and Riley. Was married the second time, March 19, 1872, to Mrs. Maria Gibbs, widow of Almon Gibbs, and daughter of R. P. McGlashan, a native of Scotland; Mrs. McGlashan, whose maiden name was Sarah Holmes, was a native of Connecticut; they came to Wisconsin in 1845, and settled in Trenton, Dodge Co.; he died in 1848, and Mrs. McGlashan died May 12, 1877; they left seven children—James, living in Beaver Dam; Mary Ann, now Mrs. John Brown, of Beaver Dam; Sarah, now Mrs. Ezra Parker, of Dartford; Edwin, living in Beaver Dam; Catharine, now Mrs. Hiram Hubbard, Dakota; Maria, now Mrs. H. S. Richmond, and Frances, who married Mortimer Clark, and died April 16, 1878; Mrs. Richmond was born Aug. 3, 1839, in Cattaraugus Co., N. Y. Mr. Richmond is a Democrat; has 160 acres of land.

MERRILL H. SMITH, farmer, Sec. 24; P. O. Portage City; was born in Danbury, Grafton Co., N. H., May 5, 1823; son of James and Rachel (Hoyt) Smith; in 1852, went to California, and was gone between two and three years; then returned to New Hampshire. Feb. 24, 1854, was married to Rosanna Sanburn, who was born Aug. 25, 1824; daughter of Jonathan and Mary C. Sanburn; in the fall of 1855, he came to Wisconsin with his family, and settled on his present farm in Marcellon, and has since resided there; was a locomotive engineer and followed railroading while in New Hampshire; went South during the rebellion and ran an engine in the Government service during the last year of the war; altogether followed that business about fourteen years. Has five children—Leonora (now Mrs. Daniel Damuth, of Fort Atkinson, Wis.); Viola, Winfield S., Ulysess Grant and Minnie Eva; all at home except Leonora. He is a Republican, and has held the office of Assessor and Justice of the Peace. Has 615 acres of land in Secs. 20, 21, 28 and 16.

ABEL STRONG, farmer, Sec. 20; P. O. Bellefountain; was born Dec. 17, 1822, in Nova Scotia; son of Stephen Strong; came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1845, and worked out in Walworth Co. four years; came to Columbia Co., in November, 1847, and bought 160 acres of land in what is now Marcellon; then returned to Walworth Co.; and in the fall of 1848, came up and commenced fencing his land; returned to Walworth Co. again in the spring; in the fall of 1849, located on his land, and has resided on the same farm ever since. Was married in Portage City, Aug. 31, 1862, to Julia Dee, who was born May 1, 1844, in County Tipperary, Ireland; daughter of Lawrence Dee, who came to America in 1847, and settled in Milwaukee; lived there one year; then Portage City one year; then five years in Marcellon; then removed to Fort Winnebago, where he died Aug. 18, 1865, aged 73. Mrs. Dee is still living at the age of 68. Mr. and Mrs. Strong have three children—John Gaylord, born Aug. 14, 1863; Stephen Eaton, born April 3, 1865, and Sarah Jane, born March 11, 1867; all at home. Mr. Strong enlisted March 8, 1865, in the 194th N. Y. V. L., Co. B, and was discharged about the middle of May. Is a Republican. Has 320 acres of land. Mrs. Strong is a member of the Catholic Church.

HIRAM J. STRONG, carpenter, Sec. 7; P. O. Portage City; born March 9, 1827, in Livingston Co., N. Y.; son of Amos Strong, who came to Michigan in 1831. Hiram Strong was married in Michigan, Aug. 28, 1851, to Mary Morgan, who was born July 10, 1830, in Miami Co., Ohio. Mr. Strong worked at carpenter work in Michigan; was on the Michigan Central R. R., three years, and was division foreman on the N., L. & S. M. R. R., two years; in August, 1855, he came to Wisconsin and located in the town of Buffalo, Marquette Co.; lived there seven years working at carpenter and joiner and millwright work; in March, 1862, removed to his present location, where he has since resided, except one year in Sparta, Monroe Co., Wis., in 1863; still works at his trade. Has only one child—Carlton Delos, born April 13, 1859; now living at home; one daughter, Emma Amelia, was born Feb. 19, 1855, and died Sept. 2, 1863. Mr. Strong is a Republican, and has held the office of Justice of the Peace two terms, and some school district offices. Has 17 acres of land.

CASPER TURK, farmer, Sec. 17; P. O. Portage City; born June 6, 1837, in Nassau, Germany, son of Joseph Turk, who came to America in 1845, or thereabouts, and settled in Utica, N. Y. He died Sept. 10, 1854, aged 54; was run over by a train on the New York Central Railroad, and died a few hours after the accident. Mr. Turk learned the machinist trade in Utica, of "Hart & Munson," and worked at the business twelve years; before that, had worked for the same company about eight years, running a stationary engine six years of that time. He was married Feb. 3, 1861, to Mary Harny, who was born Jan. 8, 1835, in France, daughter of Sabastian Harny, who came to America in 1836, and now lives in Utica, N. Y. Mr. Turk came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1869, and settled in the town of Marcellon, where he still resides; has ten children—Mary, Frank, Samuel, George, John, Louisa, Clara and Clarissa (twins), Joseph and William, all at home. Members of the Catholic Church, and in politics, Republican. He has 160 acres of land.

ANDREW WAITE, farmer, Sec. 1; P. O. Bellefountain; was born June 25, 1831, in the town of West Hawksbury, Canada; son of William Waite, a native of Boston, Mass. Mr. Waite came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1857, and lived in the town of Buffalo, Marquette Co., about three years, then came to his present location in the town of Marcellon. He was married in September, 1862, in Portage, to Mary Jane Smith, daughter of Harry Smith; she died Nov. 27, 1866, aged 24, leaving three children—Rachel, born Aug. 7, 1863; Abigail, born Dec. 21, 1864; and Mary Jane, born Nov. 27, 1866. He has 160 acres of land. Republican.

SYLVESTER WALKER, farmer, Sec. 11; P. O. Bellefontain; was born in the town of Truxton, Cortland Co., N. Y., June 20, 1821; son of Phineas Walker; came to Wisconsin in 1844, and lived in Kenosha Co. till the fall of 1850, then came to Columbia Co., and has lived in Marcellon ever since. He was married Dec. 31, 1848, in Racine Co., Wis., to Magdalen A. Vandy. Mr. Walker was in the 22d Wis. V. I., Co. C, about four months, in 1865. Have two children—Clarence D., born April 18, 1861, and Minnie, born Feb. 18, 1864, both at home. He has 120 acres of land and is a Republican.

ZADOCK WAITE, farmer, Sec. 30; P. O. Portage City; born Aug. 1, 1825, in Canada West; son of William Waite, a native of the State of New York. Mr. Waite left home when 19 years of age, came to Wisconsin and lived five years in Walworth Co.; then went to Marquette Co. and bought land in the town of Buffalo; lived there till the fall of 1874, then sold out and removed to his present location; was married in Walworth Co., in 1858, to Emily Jane Carpenter, who was born July 8, 1831, in Chautauqua Co., N. Y.; daughter of William Carpenter. Have only one child—Sarah Jane, born Jan. 1, 1850, married to John Cuff, and living in Butler Co., Iowa. She has six children—Justin, Ernest, Oscar, Lillie, Mertie and Elsie Jane. Mr. Waite is a Republican; was Supervisor of Marcellon two years, and has been District Clerk and Postmaster several years. He has 200-acre farm in Marcellon, and a 120-acre farm in Butler Co., Iowa.

DANIEL S. WOODWORTH, farmer, Sec. 5; P. O. Portage City; born July 9, 1827, in the town of Essex, Chittenden Co., Vt.; son of Jabez and Melitable Woodworth, who removed to Niagara Co., N. Y., in 1849; lived there two years, then came to Wisconsin and lived nine years in Racine Co. (now Kenosha), then in July, 1854, came to Columbia Co., where they both died—Mr. Woodworth, May 3, 1867, aged 83; Mrs. Woodworth, May 15, 1868, aged 79. Mr. Woodworth has lived on his present farm ever since he came to the county in July, 1854. He married in Marcellon, Feb. 18, 1859, to Melissa Hart, who was born Jan. 6, 1841, in the town of Forestville, county of Norfolk, Canada West, daughter of George and Eliza Ann Hart, who came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1856. Mrs. Hart died July 18, 1864, aged 45; Mr. Hart is still living in Lincoln Co., Dakota, aged 64. Mr. and Mrs. Woodworth have five children—Emma, Albert, Eliza, Cora and Fannie, all at home. Mr. Woodworth is a member of the M. E. Church and a Republican; has 411 acres of land, 150 is in his home farm, 160 acres in Marquette Co., one and a half miles from home farm, and 101 acres in Sauk Co. Mrs. Woodworth is a Baptist.

TOWN OF COLUMBUS.

JOHN Q. ADAMS, was born in Franklin Co., Mass., in 1816; son of Charles Adams, who came to the town of Fountain Prairie, Columbia Co., Wis., in 1846, where his wife, nee Mary Howes, died soon after, and some time during the following year he returned to the State of Massachusetts, where he subsequently died. John Q., our present subject, received his education in the common schools and academies of his native State. He came to Wisconsin in 1844 and located on a farm, in the township of Fountain Prairie, Columbia Co., and made that his home for about twenty-three years. He then removed to the city (then village) of Columbus, where he has since resided, retaining, however, his farm of 350 acres. Mr. Adams was elected one of the first County Commissioners of Columbia Co., in 1846, and was re-elected in the fall of 1847, serving in 1848. He was elected Chairman of the Town Board of Fountain Prairie in 1851 and 1852 and has several times been re-elected to that office. He also held the office of Town Superintendent of Schools of that town in 1849-50, and was one of the organizers of the town in 1849. Mr. Adams represented his district in the Wisconsin Assembly in 1853, and also his county in the Senate during the sessions of 1854-55-56; he was again returned to the Assembly in 1863. In 1858, he was elected Superintendent of the County Poor, and has ever since been kept in that office. He has been President of the Columbia Co. Agricultural Society several terms, and has held the office of Treasurer of the same for eleven years. Was member of the School Board of Columbus for seven years; was President of the same for three years. Politically, Mr. Adams is a Republican, and was a member of the committee on resolutions at the organization of that party, at Madison, Wis., in 1854. In Massachusetts, in 1846, he was married to Miss Lucy S., daughter of Erastus Pomroy. Their children are Louie P. (now a student at Ripon College); Clara and Lily (at home). Mr. and Mrs. Adams are members of the Congregational Church.

A. T. AUSTIN, farmer; Sec. 14; P. O. Columbus; was born in Grafton Co., N. H., in 1827, and with parents in 1835 he emigrated to Richland Co., Ohio. Ten years later (May, 1845), he came to Wisconsin and located on a farm in Jefferson Co. He entered a farm of 220 acres in the town of Elba, Dodge Co., in 1846, and settled there in the spring of 1847. Here he lived for twenty years and devoted his attention wholly to agriculture. Selling his interest in Dodge Co., in February, 1867; he bought a farm of 250 acres on Sec. 14, town of Columbus, Columbia Co., Wis.; where he has since resided. He was married in 1853, to Miss Sarah Hathaway, of Jefferson Co., Wis., but a native of Monroe Co., N. Y. Their children are Thaddeus T. (now in California); Mercy D. (at home); Abraham S., Gracie D., Frank, James W. and Charity S. Mr. Austin's family are connected with the Congregational Church.

CAPT. CALVIN BAKER, was born in the town of Georgia, Franklin Co., Vt., in 1808; when quite young, with his parents, Remember and Cynthia (Stannard) Baker, he removed to Genesee Co., N. Y., where his father devoted much of his time to the trade of millwright, but later removed to Michigan, where they afterward died. The family was composed of seven children, four sons and three daughters—Calvin, the oldest of these, devoted much of his time with his father, to the trade of a millwright and at building thrashing machines—but failing health forced him to quit the trade and seek some outdoor employment. He followed buying stock wool for the New York markets for several years. In 1824, he was married to Miss Susanna Blodgett, of Genesee Co., N. Y., who died in 1841. His second marriage was to Mrs. Ann Scofield, of New York City, a daughter of George and Betsey Hague. Her father was a native of England, her mother of France. Mr. and Mrs. Baker came to Wisconsin in 1857, and located on a farm in the town of Fountain Prairie, Columbia Co., where he followed farming for some time. In 1862, he was engaged in the detective business, with his brother, Col. Baker. He was appointed Captain of the Quartermaster's Department at Washington, in 1863, a position which he held till the fall of 1865. Returning then to his farm in Fountain Prairie, he devoted his time to farming till 1872, when they removed to the city of Columbus, where he has lived a more retired life. Mr. and Mrs. Baker are members of the Congregational Church.

HENRY D. BATH, deceased; was born in Schenectady Co., N. Y., in 1843; son of Levy and Agnes Bath. His father was a Baptist minister of New York, and came to Columbus in 1861, where he was Pastor of the church for a number of years. He died in this city in April, 1877, leaving four sons and one daughter, one of whom died in June, 1879, one having died in April, 1876. Mr. Bath was educated at the Grass Lake Academy, of Jackson Co., Mich. In 1861, he enlisted as private in Co. B, of the 7th Mich. V. I., under Col. Grovesnor, with the army of the Potomac; was promoted to the positions of Sergeant, Second and First Lieutenant; was severely wounded at the battle of Antietam, Sept. 17, 1862, after which he came home for four months, and early in 1863, he rejoined his regiment and with it was mustered out in 1864. He then came to Columbus and read law two years with Cook & Chapin, and was admitted to the practice at Portage in 1866. He went then to Milwaukee, and was city editor of the Daily News till July, 1868, when he returned to Columbus, purchased the Columbus Transcript, and converted it into the Columbus Democrat, of which he has since been editor. In March, 1877, he, with his brother, W. E. Bath, established the Portage Democrat, of Portage City, and were editors of the same till the death of his brother, which occurred in June, 1879. Mr. Bath was married in 1866, to Louisa T., daughter of Matthew T. D. and Theodate Nowell, of Columbus. Children are Paul T. and Dane. Mr. Bath died June 8, 1880.

RICHARD BARROW, deceased; was born at Hawkhurst, County Kent, England, in 1782, and was the son of John and Susan Barrow, with whom he spent most of his time till his marriage, in 1818, to Miss Lucy, daughter of Humphrey and Mary (Rogers) Wickham, a native of County Sussex, England. After marriage, they settled on a farm in County Kent, which was afterward their home till 1839. April 28, of that year, they sailed from London, and landed in New York (as emigrants to America) the last day of May following, locating at Oriskany Falls, Oneida Co., N. Y. They made their home there for three years; then removed to Chittenango, Madison Co., whence in June, 1845, they immigrated to Columbus, Columbia Co., Wis., and located on a farm on Secs. 22, 23 and 27, now consisting of 181 acres, and 11 acres in the town of Elba, Dodge Co. Here Mr. Barrow died in 1854. Their family consisted of themselves and nine children; the latter are as follows: Richard, born 1819, and now lives at Baraboo, Wis.; Frances, born 1820, now Mrs. John H. Valentine, and lives at Mason City, Iowa; John, born in 1825, now at Merrimac, Sauk Co., Wis.; Ann, born 1827, the late wife of George McCafferty, now deceased; James, born 1830, now at home; Seymour, born 1832, now deceased; Samuel, born 1834, now deceased; Thomas, born 1836, now at home; Lucy, born 1839, now deceased.

JOHN BEBOW, farmer; Sec. 16; P. O. Columbus; was born in Mecklinburg Schwerin, in 1828. He came to America in 1852; located in Erie Co., N. Y., where he followed farming for nine years. In 1861, he came to the town of Columbus, purchased a farm of 65 acres on Sec. 16, where he now owns 125 on Secs. 9 and 16, and also a farm of 90 acres on Secs. 8 and 17. He was married in 1852, to Miss Dorothea Minken, a native of Mecklinburg. Their children are Louisa, now the wife of Fred Prieri, and lives in the town of Leeds; Mary, now the wife of Henry Reider, of the town of Columbus; Matilda, Frank and Charles at home. They are members of the Lutheran Church.

NELSON C. BISSELL, merchant tailor, Columbus; was born in Susquehanna Co., Penn., 1823. His father, David Bissell, was a native of Connecticut; his mother, Hepsibeth Reynolds, was born in New York. When 15 years old, he began the tailor's trade in Montrose, Penn., and five years later, he went to New York City, where he continued his trade a year; returning then to Pennsylvania, he worked three years at his trade in Tunkhannock, Wyoming Co., and afterward at Lanesboro for a short time. Returning then to Montrose, he clerked in a hotel for two years. At Dundee, in May, 1854, he was married to Miss Elizabeth Ireton, and in August following they came to Wisconsin, and located at Columbus, where he has still continued the merchant tailor's trade. They have one daughter—Katie. Mr. Bissell was a member of the County Board of Supervisors from the Third Ward of Columbus, in 1877. Himself and family are connected with the Presbyterian Church.

DEXTER BLANCHARD, farmer, Sec. 21; P. O. Columbus; this pioneer of Columbia Co. was born in the town of Rochester, Windsor Co., Vt., in 1826; his father, John Blanchard, was a tanner by trade, and he worked much of the time with him at the same business in his younger days. In 1846, he and his father came to Columbia Co., Wis., and entered a farm of 247 acres, on Secs. 28 and 29, town of Columbus, where they built their log shanty, covered it with prairie hay and "kept bach" therein for about six months. They returned to Vermont in the fall, and in the following spring (1847) came again with family to Wisconsin, and located on the farm which was ever after their home till their death; Mr. Blanchard has always made his home on the original farm, and now owns 83 acres of it on Sec. 28. He was married in 1864, to Miss Emma J., daughter of Thomas and C. J. Sallsbee, a native of Ohio but an emigrant to Wisconsin in 1856; their children are John, William T. and Marietta.

HERMAN M. BLUMENTHAL, of the firm of Turner & Co., proprietors of marble works, Columbus, was born in Prussia in 1853, and came with his parents to America in 1868; they located at Columbus, Wis., where he began his trade in 1870, with Miller & Graham, and has since continued his trade in this city; he became a partner in the firm of Turner & Co. in January, 1878. He was married, in May, 1878, to Miss Mary, daughter of the Rev. F. Kluckhohn, of this city; they have one son, Edwin. They are members of the German M. E. Church. Mr. Blumenthal is a member of the I. O. O. F.

F. H. BOLTE, of the firm of Bolte & Eckoff, proprietors of the Columbus Foundry, manufacturers of the Eureka Windmill and pumps of various kinds; Mr. Bolte was born in the town of Columbus, Columbia Co., Wis., in 1856; was educated at the Northwestern University at Watertown, Wis., from which institution he graduated in 1871; he entered upon an apprenticeship at the carpenter and joiner's trade in 1872, with Charles Breyer, of the town of Elba, Dodge Co., and continued with him for three years; he invented and got patented the Eureka Windmill in December, 1878, of which he and his partner are now sole manufacturers; he also invented the Economist Churn in April, 1879. In December, 1879, he was married to Miss Minnie Eckoff, of Columbus, Wis. They are members of the Lutheran Church.

PROF. G. M. BOWEN, Principal of high school and Superintendent of the city schools of Columbus; was born in the town of Amsterdam, Montgomery Co., N. Y., in 1847; when 10 years of age, he, with his parents, M. H. and Matilda Bowen, removed to Fond du Lac Co., Wis., and located on a farm near Ripon: three years later, they removed to Auroville, Waushara Co., and settled on what is known as the "Indian land," where they now reside; Mr. Bowen received his earlier education in the public schools of Wisconsin. In 1864, he enlisted in Co. I, of the 7th W. V. I., at Auroville; was with the Army of the Potomac, and was wounded at the battle of Spottsylvania Court House, May 12, 1864, receiving two wounds, from one of which he now carries a ball; he rejoined his regiment at Petersburg, in August following, and was with it in all its principal movements and at the surrender of Gen. Lee, April 9, 1865; was mustered out at Madison, Wis., in July, 1865; returning then to Auroville, he spent two years attending the common schools and teaching; he entered the State Normal School at Whitewater, Wis., in April, 1868, and graduated from that institution with the first class in 1870; he was elected Principal of the West District of Jefferson, Jefferson Co., in the fall of 1870, and in the following year was elected Teacher of Mathematics in the Jefferson Liberal Institute; in 1872, he was elected Principal of the Wausau High School, and re-elected in 1873, to the same position; he was elected Principal of the Berlin High School in 1874, and in January, 1876, he was elected to the principalship of the Columbus High School, and has been re-elected to that position for four successive years. The Professor is a member of the Masonic Fraternity, and of the Universalist Church.

JOHN A. BOWEN, farmer, Sec. 36; P. O. Columbus; son of Joseph Bowen and Catharine Allison, natives of New Jersey; born in Morristown, Morris Co., N. J., Sept. 13, 1812; his father removed with the family to Seneca Co., N. Y., in May, 1833, and in November following went to Tompkins Co., where his mother died in 1834; his father then returned to New Jersey, and died there in 1836; John A., the oldest of a family of five children, was educated in the district schools of New Jersey; he followed teaching in New Jersey for ten quarters, and then returned to New York, and continued there for three winters. In December, 1836, in Morris Co., N. J., he was married to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of John and Mary (Todd) McCord; she is a native of that county; they removed within a fortnight after marriage to Tompkins Co., N. Y., where they lived on a farm until 1842; immigrating thence to Wisconsin, they located in the town of Richmond, Walworth Co.; six years later, they removed to the town of Columbus, Columbia Co., and located on Sec. 10, where he now owns 280 acres; nearly twenty years after, he removed to a farm of 80 acres on Sec. 36, where he has since lived; he also has 10 acres in the town of Portland, Dodge Co. Mr. Bowen has been Assessor of the town for ten years, and member of the Town Board for two terms. They had five children, as follows: Mary C. (now deceased), Edward and Mary I. (twins, the latter deceased; the former now lives on Sec. 10, of this town), Erastus (now with his brother on the farm) and Eliza E. (now the wife of Ezra W. Richmond, and lives in the town of York, Dane Co.). Mr. and Mrs. Bowen are members of the Presbyterian Church.

A. LOUIS BRAUCKLE, brewer, Columbus; was born in Wurtemberg, Germany Feb. 2, 1814, and is the son of an extensive farmer in that country, Thomas Brauckle; at the age of 20 years, he began the brewer's trade in Wurtemberg, and continued the same there till 1845, when he emigrated to Milwaukee, Wis., and there worked at his trade for Mr. Brown, till 1847; he then went to Racine, where he followed his trade till the fall of 1848; he then came to Columbus, where he worked for Mr. Jussen nearly a year; then bought the brewery of him, and has since been its proprietor. He was married March 1, 1851, to Mrs. Mary, widow of John Erhart, and a daughter of August Nussar, a native of Wurtemberg; they have one son—Peter, and have lost three children. They are members of the Catholic Church.

GUSTAVUS BREUNING, manufacturer and dealers in boots and shoes, Columbus; was born in Prussia in 1843; he emigrated, in 1854, with his parents, Gotlieb and Henrietta Breuning, to America, and located at Watertown, Wis., where his father died, about four weeks after their arrival; his mother soon removed to Columbus with the family, and made it her home till her death, which occurred in 1875. Mr. Breuning entered upon a three-years apprenticeship at the shoemaker's trade, with Julius Fox, at Columbus, in 1858, and continued with him a year as a journeyman, after his apprenticeship. In 1866, he opened a shop of his own, in this city, and has since been engaged in the manufacture as well as dealing in boots and shoes. He was married in 1866, to Miss Louisa Diamond, a native of Columbus, Wis. Their children are George and Carl. Mr. B. is a member of the Lutheran Church, his wife of the Episcopal.

WILLIAM BUTLER, carpenter, Columbus; was born in Wiltshire, England, in 1819; he was educated in the common schools of his native country; when quite young, he began the carpenter and joiner's trade, with his father, and continued the same there till 1841. He was married in 1840, to Miss Hellen Taylor, with whom he sailed for America early in 1841, and landed in New York City in March of that year, continuing his trade in the city for fourteen years. In June, 1855, they emigrated to Wisconsin, and located in the village of Columbus, where he has since followed his trade, and has been connected with the erection of many of the prominent buildings of the city and surrounding country, among them the public school buildings. Mr. and Mrs. Butler have seven children, as follows: William Thomas, James and George, all three of whom are now in Colorado; Charles, now in Nebraska; Nellie, now the wife of Lintou McNeel, and lives at Neillsville, Wis.; Sadie, at home with her parents. Mrs. Butler is a member of the Baptist Church.

R. W. CHADBOURN, banker, Columbus; was born in York Co., Me., in 1819, and is the son of Nathaniel and Ruth Chadbourn, with whom he spent his earlier life, on a farm, in his native county, completing his studies at the academy at Gorham, Cumberland Co., in 1841; he then went to the State of Virginia, where he devoted his time to teaching till 1846, returning then to Maine, whence, in 1849, he emigrated to Columbus, Wis. For the first few years, he was interested in making land entries for emigrants, and otherwise aided them in securing homes; he gradually worked into the business of money loaning, and in 1855, secured a charter and began a regular banking business. He was married in 1866, to Miss Catherine, a daughter of Thomas C. Atwater, a native of Catskill, N. Y.; they have one son—Frederick A. Mr. and Mrs. Chadbourn are members of the Congregational Church.

EMMONS E. CHAPIN was born in the town of Venice, Cayuga Co., N. Y., July 14, 1829, and in 1837, with his parents, removed to the town of Aurelius, near the city of Auburn, in the same county, where he remained until October, 1854, when he came to Wisconsin, first settling at Oconomowoc, and removed to Columbus in January, 1856, where he has since resided; he received an academic education; he is a lawyer by profession. For many years, he was a member of the Democratic State Central Committee, and in that capacity has frequently entered into State and national canvasses with speech, pen and purse, to reclaim the State and nation from the theories and aims advocated by the Republican party as opposed to the broad Democratic principles of government early established and advocated by Jefferson and the fathers; he attended as a delegate from Columbia Co., and participated in every Congressional and State Convention from 1857 to 1879; his political course has been liberal and progressive; in the convention held at Milwaukee in 1869, by which Hon. C. D. Robinson, of Green Bay, was nominated for Governor, Mr. Chapin, in connection with a number of other prominent Democrats, insisted upon and succeeded in laying down a platform of principles indicating the new departure that ultimately overthrew the Republican party in Wisconsin, or, as Mr. Chapin put it, "With these principles, and these alone, Wisconsin must and shall be Democratic"—and it was Democratic for the next four years. During the war of the rebellion he contributed time, money and efforts to sustain the Government, and not the political party in the ascendancy, firmly believing that military force must be met by military force, and a rebellion against the Government must be promptly met and surely suppressed. He was opposed to any act indicating a repudiation of the national debt, or of an assumption of the rebel debt, or any part thereof, by the United States. He has ever held an aversion to the present mode of the few combined to run an "available" for office, and he insists that the country wants and demands intelligent, straightforward, honest, good, practical, common-sense business men for official position—or that "the office should seek the man and not the man the office." Mr. Chapin has seldom permitted his name to be placed upon a ticket for any office, although often nominated and urged by his friends to do so; yet he has held various local offices of a non-partisan character, and was placed in those positions by the aid of Republicans; he was one of the Trustees, and also Supervisor of the village during the years 1872-73. In the fall of 1873, when it was determined to incorporate the city of Columbus, he was appointed by the Trustees of the village to draft a charter and procure the necessary legislation for its enactment. The city charter was drafted by him, and it was passed by the Legislature and approved by the Governor Feb. 26, 1874, and Columbus thereby became a city—but not without some opposition. In April, 1874, he was appointed by Gov. Taylor as a member of the State Board of Charities and Reform, and was chosen by the Board its Vice President; he held this office till May 1, 1876; he was chosen attorney by that Board to conduct the examination of witnesses in the investigation of the management of the State Prison and the Institute for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, in behalf of the State. He was one of the Commissioners named by the Legislature of 1874-75 to consider the feasibility of the removal of the State Prison, and presented a report in opposition to such contemplated change; he had much to do toward inaugurating the present system of prison management and discipline. Mr. Chapin was appointed to and did represent the State at the National Prison Reform Congress held at St. Louis, Mo., May 13 to 16, 1874, inclusive, and prepared and presented to the Governor (of Wisconsin) a report of the proceedings of that Congress, which report may be found on pages 54 to 78 of the "Fourth Annual Report of the State Board of Charities and Reform of the State of Wisconsin." March 5, 1875, the Legislature of Wisconsin enacted a general law authorizing the establishment of free high schools; the city of Columbus availed itself of its privileges under the act, and the free high-school system was adopted Aug. 9, 1875, by a vote of the electors of Columbus; Mr. Chapin was elected President of the Board of Education, and in the month of January, 1876, the Columbus Free High School was fully organized and running under the new law to the satisfaction of all. The first class of seven young ladies were graduated from the high school into the university grade on the 21st day of June, 1878, as the first-fruits of this system, and at this time Mr. Chapin, as President of the Board, in presenting the diplomas, took occasion to make a brief speech, which, as he says, was the best and happiest effort of his life, for his heart was really in the work—and having been a teacher in his early life, he was master of the situation; he has been Corporation Counsel ever since the city of Columbus was organized, and is now City Attorney; he was appointed Dec. 24, 1870, United States Court Commissioner, and still holds this office; he has been a Free and Accepted Mason for over a quarter of a century; he was one of the charter members of the Columbus Lodge, F., & A. M., No. 75, chartered in June, 1856, and subsequently its Worshipful Master; in 1875, he was Deputy Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of the State of Wisconsin, and in 1876 was elected one of its Trustees for the term of three years, and was re-elected in June, 1879, for a second term.

A writer for the "History of Wisconsin," in speaking of Mr. Chapin, says: "He does not allow his public duties to interfere with his professional labors, and consequently he enjoys an extensive and lucrative practice as a lawyer; he stands among the first of the profession, and is held in high repute as a citizen." He is often invited to deliver lectures, orations and speeches, both at home and abroad, and complies, if, as he says, "any one can gather any comfort or happiness therefrom." Mr. Chapin was married, Dec. 28, 1853, at Aurelius, N. Y., to Miss Emily J., youngest daughter of Nathaniel and Mercy Blanchard. Mrs. C. is a sister of the late Col. H. W. Blanchard, a pioneer of 1836 to Wisconsin, and late proprietor of the Blanchard Mills at Watertown, Wis.; Mrs. C. has in her parlors many pieces in oil, crayon and pastel—the work of her own hands—which would do credit to a more pretending artist. They have two sons—Herbert B., now in the employment of the C., M. & St. P. R. R. Co., and Clarence E., at home attending school.

DR. E. CHURCHILL, dentist, Columbus; was born in Erie Co., N. Y., in 1836; he received an academic education at Springville, Erie Co., after which he began the study of dentistry with Dr. Streight, of Buffalo, N. Y., and later he continued his studies with Dr. Main, of New York City, where he completed them in 1860; he practiced his profession in the village of Concord, Erie Co., N. Y., for nearly two years; in 1861, he went to Washington City for a short time, and in February, 1862, he located at Columbus, Wis., where he has since practiced his profession. In 1868, he was married to Miss Harriet L. Winch, of this city (Columbus). The Doctor is a member of the Masonic Fraternity.

JOHN B. CLEVELAND, farmer, Secs. 15 and 22; P. O. Columbus; was born in Saratoga Co., N. Y., in 1819; he spent much of his time in Schuylersville, Saratoga Co., till 9 years old; then removed with his parents to Sandy Hill, Washington Co., N. Y., where he lived until 1837; he then removed to Ashtabula Co., Ohio, where he was engaged in the mercantile trade till 1856; removing from there to the town of York, Dane Co., Wis., he located on a farm and followed agriculture there till 1873; disposing then of his farm in Dane Co. he bought his present one of 120 acres on Secs. 15 and 23, town of Columbus, Columbia Co., where he has since resided. He was married in 1845 to Miss Julia Coleman, a native of Ashtabula Co., Ohio, who died in 1865, leaving seven children—Louisa, Fannie, Oliver C. and Horace W., both deceased; Julia, Nettie and Mary. Mr. Cleveland was Chairman of the Town Board in the town of York, Dane Co., for one term.

CHARLES A. COLONIUS, of the firm of George Link & Co., dealers in dry goods, goods, etc., etc., Columbus, was born in Prussia in 1837. He came to America in 1855; worked on a farm in Orange Co., N. Y., for nearly a year; in 1856, he went to Cincinnati, Ohio, and enlisted in Co. I of the 6th United States Infantry, of the regular army; was employed most of the time for five years in the Quartermaster's commissary department, and in the Adjutant General's office; was mustered out at Fort Mojave, Lower California, in 1861. Returning then to Germany for two years, in 1864, he came a second time to America, and located in Watertown, Wis.; engaging in the commission business there, with his brother, for a short time, and in the winter of 1867-68, he came to Columbus, and clerked for Fuller Brothers, for five years. He then began business for himself, but in January, 1874, he joined as a partner in the firm of George Linek & Co. He was elected a member of the City Council, from the Third Ward, in 1874; in April, 1876, he was elected City Treasurer; re-elected in 1877-78-79 and '80. He was married, 1866, to Miss Josephine Brayer, a native of Prussia, but emigrated to America with parents when 3 years old, and settled in the town of Elba, Dodge Co., Wis. They have had three children, all of whom are deceased. They adopted two—Josie, deceased, and Jessie. Mr. and Mrs. Colonius are members of the German M. E. Church.

BERNARD CONLIN, deceased, was born in County Sligo, Ireland, in 1811; he was the son of Thomas Conlin, with whom he lived, in his native country, till about 1830; emigrating then to America, he was employed in the construction of railroads and mining, in Massachusetts, for a number of years, and was afterward employed on the Erie Canal. He was married in 1848, to Miss Hannah, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Hart) Clark; also a native of County Sligo, Ireland, but an emigrant to America, with her parents, in 1847, and located, first, to Worcester, Mass., later, removed to Fitchburg, Mass. Mr. and Mrs. Conlin came, in 1848, to Columbus, Columbia Co., Wis., and located on a farm on Section 25, where he first bought a farm of 100 acres, and afterward increased it to 140 acres. He died, at his home, June 22, 1876, leaving a wife and seven children. The latter are as follows: Mary, now the wife of John Dargan, and lives in Mitchell Co., Iowa; Ella, now in Dubuque, Iowa; Catherine, now at Eumettsburg, Md.; Thomas, Bernard, Elizabeth and James, at home. The family is connected with the Catholic Church.

AMASA G. COOK, attorney at law, Columbus; was born in the town of Norwich, Chenango Co., N. Y., in 1823. His father, Sylvanus Cook, was born in Rhode Island in 1787, and removed to Chenango Co.; N. Y., with his parents in 1798. His mother, Mary Green, was also a native of Rhode Island, born 1790. Mr. Cook spent his earlier life on a farm in his native county, with his parents; at the age of 17, he entered the Oxford Academy, and later the academy at Norwich, where he completed his studies in 1844. He then began teaching in the public schools of Honesdale, Penn., and afterward taught in select schools at Laurens, Otsego Co., N. Y.; in 1845, he entered upon the study of law, with Fuller & West, of Honesdale, Penn., and pursued his study as much as circumstances would permit while teaching. He next read with Charles A. Thorp, of Norwich, for two years, and later with Hon. L. S. Chatfield, of Laurens, Otsego Co., N. Y. Mr. Cook was admitted to the practice of law in September, 1849, and in October following he removed to Wisconsin, and in March, 1850, he located at Columbus. He soon formed a copartnership with Gov. Lewis, in the practice of his profession, which lasted a year; after which he continued the practice alone till 1862, when he took in as a partner, Mr. E. E. Chapin, and the firm was known as Cook & Chapin till May, 1869; since which time he has had no partner. He was appointed District Attorney, by Gov. Dewey, in 1850, and in the fall of that year was elected to the same office, for a term of two years; he was Postmaster of Columbus from 1856 to 1861, and has held various other offices in the city. He was at one time the Democratic candidate for the Wisconsin Assembly, and in 1869 was candidate for the office of Secretary of State; was also a candidate for Congress in 1870 and again in 1874. In 1853, he was married to Sarah J. daughter of Ard. S. and Betsey Rockwell, of Otsego Co., N. Y.; who afterward removed to Elkhorn, Walworth Co., Wis., where Mr. Rockwell died in 1865. Mrs. Rockwell afterward died in the city of Columbus. Mr. and Mrs. Cook have five children—three sons and two daughters. They are as follows: Hobart, (a graduate of the State University, now a law student with his father); Henry (now at home); Charles, Bertha and Mary (students at the State University). Mr. C. has been a member of the Masonic Fraternity for nearly twenty-five years. His family is connected with the Episcopal Church.

HORACE C. COOPER, Columbus; was born in Onondaga Co., N. Y., in 1815, and is the son of Chauncy Cooper and Annie Candee; his grandfather, Daniel Candee, emigrated from New Haven, Conn., to Onondaga Co., N. Y., as an early settler; his father was a native of New Haven, Conn., also, and after marriage removed to Onondaga Co., N. Y., where he and his wife both afterward died; Mr. Cooper is the oldest son of a family of four children, two sons and two daughters, two of whom now live in Wisconsin. He began the trade of a cabinet-maker at Manlius, Onondaga Co., when quite young, and continued the same there till 20 years of age; in the autumn of 1836, he emigrated to Detroit, Mich., where he worked at his trade during the winter; in the spring of 1837, he entered a farm in Macomb Co., Mich., but spent the summer at Rome in the grocery trade, and in the fall of that year he entered some land near Grand Rapids, and spent the winter at his trade in Kalamazoo, and the summer of 1838 was spent at his trade in Niles, going to La Porte, Ind., in the latter part of 1838; he was there, in 1839, induced by a friend to go to peddling; this he continued for several years through Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin, dealing largely in furs; in 1841, he opened a store at Aztalan, Jefferson Co., Wis., though he continued his peddling wagon, and in the spring of 1843, he built and opened a store at Lake Mills, Jefferson Co., to where he afterward removed, located and built a hotel; passing through Columbus, Wis., in the autumn of 1849, he made a trade with Mr. Eaton, a dry-goods merchant, and exchanged his hotel at the Lake Mills for a store and dwelling in Columbus; he soon removed to Columbus and began merchandising, which he continued here till 1865, and was in the trade elsewhere till 1872, since which time he has been proprietor of the Cooper House of Columbus. He was married in 1845 to Miss Julia, a daughter of James Williams, of Le Roy, N. Y.; their children are Horace C., William (now a merchant at Streator, Ill.), Charles F. (now at Chicago), Alice C. (now the wife of C. F. Rogers, of Lake City, Minn.), Etta C. (now the wife of Willard Scott, Jr., of Naperville, Ill.), Helen (now the wife of H. M. Brown, of this city), Julia A. (now the wife of H. C. Williams, of Chicago).

O. E. CORNWELL, station agent for the C., M. & St. P. R. R. Co., Columbus; was born in the State of New York in 1840; he came to Wisconsin with his parents in 1848, and located at Oconomowoc, Waukesha Co.; in 1863, he was employed by the N.-W. R. R. Co., and stationed at Watertown for two years; he was employed by the C., M. & St. P. R. R. Co. in 1865, and stationed at Columbus, where he has since remained. Mr. Cornwell was elected Mayor of this city (Columbus) in 1877, re-elected in 1878, '79 and '80. He was married in 1865 to Miss Katie Atkins, a native of Maine; their children are Ada B., Ella M. and Bessie D. They attend the Congregational Church. Mr. Cornwell is a member of the Masonic Fraternity.

LEONARD G. CROSWELL, farmer, Sec. 36; P. O. Columbus; is the son of Harman and Louisa Crosswell; born in Livingston Co. in 1835, and lived with his parents on a farm in that county, till his marriage, in 1860, to Miss Delia, daughter of William and Percilla Rosenkrans, of Wayland, Stenben Co., N. Y.; in 1861, they emigrated to Wisconsin, and located on his present farm of 124 acres, on Sec. 36, town of Columbus, Columbia Co., 80 acres of which he bought in 1861. Mr. C. was a member of the Town Board in 1877. Their children are Irene, Emily, Delia and Lois. Mr. and Mrs. C. and two daughters are members of the Congregational Church.

JOHN CROUMBIE, farmer, Secs. 5 and 6, town of York, Dane Co., and Secs. 31 and 32, town of Columbus, Columbia Co.; P. O. Columbus; was born in County Westmeath, Ireland, in 1813, and is the son of William and Esther Croumbie, with whom he spent much of his early life on a farm. At the age of 17, he began the stonemason's trade, and continued the same there till his emigration to America in 1847; he worked at his trade on Staten Island for two years, and in June, 1849, came to Dane Co., Wis., bought a farm of 80 acres on Secs. 5 and 6, town of York; he devoted most of his time to his trade for the first eight or ten years after his settlement in Wisconsin, but since that time has strictly adhered to farming and stock-raising; he now owns 160 acres of land in Secs. 5 and 6, town of York, Dane Co., upon which his residence is built, and 240 on Secs. 31 and 32, town of Columbus, Columbia Co. He was married in 1842 to Miss Esther, daughter of James and Mary Rooney, of County Westmeath; their children are William, now a resident of the town of Columbus; James, now in Topeka, Kan.; John and Mary, at home. They are members of St. Jerome's Catholic Church.

DAVID C. DAVIS, M. D., Columbus; was born in Cardiganshire, South Wales, Dec. 25, 1833. The Doctor received his literary education at Newcastle, Emlyn, Wales; at the age of 18, he entered the Bartholomew Medical College, of London, but owing to an aversion to the dissecting-room, he gave up the study; his uncle, being then a member of the British Parliament, secured for him a position in the Government Printing Office, where he remained two years; during a three-months vacation given him in 1854, he came to visit America and an uncle at Utica, N. Y.; such inducements were offered him to remain in America, that he never returned to Europe, but was connected with the Morning Herald, of Utica, for two or three years; he was next publisher of the Mirror, a well-known Welsh paper of Utica, for three years; in 1861, he removed to Milwaukee, Wis., and was there connected with a publishing house for nearly a year; he located at Cambria, Columbia Co., Wis., in 1862, and there engaged in merchandising for one and a half years; there, in 1863, with Dr. J. H. Williams, he again took up the study of medicine; he attended lectures at Rush Medical College during the terms of 1865-66, but took his diploma from the Columbia County Medical Society in 1866, and from the State Medical Society in 1868; he began the practice of his profession with Dr. Waterhouse, of Portage, and continued there from 1867 till near the close of the year 1868; he removed to Columbus in November, 1868, where he has since successfully practiced his profession. While in Cambria, he served as Town Clerk, as Justice of the Peace and Police Justice, and was at one time a member of the Wisconsin Assembly from that district, and was the author of the bill that was passed by that body and the Senate, legalizing dissection; the Doctor has been a member of the State Medical Society since 1868. He was married in 1858 to Miss Dorothy, daughter of Richard and Gwen Roberts, of Lewis Co., N. Y. Their children are Julia M., now the wife of the Rev. L. H. Mitchell, and lives at Portage City, Wis.; Charles M.; John H.; Lemuel T.; Robert W.; George W. The family is connected with the Congregational Church. The Doctor was a charter member of the Masonic Lodge of Cambria. He was a member of the City Council of Columbus in 1876, 1877 and 1878; has been President of the School Board during the years of 1879 and 1880.

URIAH DAVIES, of the firm of Bassett & Davies, dry-goods merchants; Columbus; was born in Merionethshire, North Wales, in 1823; is the son of John and Mary Davies, his mother dying when he was only 3 years old; in 1845, with his father and stepmother (his father having married again), came to America, and located at Union, Rock Co., Wis., where his stepmother afterward died; his father now lives with him in this city. Mr. Davies came to Columbus in January, 1846, and began clerking for Arnold & Bassett, dry-goods merchants, and remained with Mr. Bassett eight years, Mr. Arnold having sold out to Mr. Bassett during that time; May 1, 1855, he formed a copartnership with Mr. E. P. Silsbee, under the firm of Silsbee & Davies, and as such continued the business till Aug. 20, 1855, Mr. S. Axtell purchased the interest of Mr. Silsbee, and the firm was then Davies & Axtell till 1861, when he bought out Mr. Axtell; continued the business alone four years. In 1865, Mr. Bassett became an equal partner with Mr. Davies, and in 1866 they took in Mr. J. M. G. Price, but Jan. 1, 1873, Mr. Bassett bought back the interest of Mr. Price, and since that time the firm has been Bassett & Davies. Mr. Davies was married to Jane, daughter of Ellis and Elizabeth Roberts; their children are Jane A.—now the wife of Wm. J. Edwards, and lives in this city—Mary and Luther. Mr. D. and family are connected with the Welsh Methodist Church.

JOHN R. DECKER, proprietor and publisher of the Columbus Republican, was born in Chautauque Co., N. Y., in 1842; his father, Stephen Decker, was a native of Troy, N. Y., but his mother, Sylvania Richmond, was born in Connecticut; at the age of 2½ years, he, with his parents, removed to Erie Co., N. Y., where his father followed farming till 1855, when they came as emigrants to Wisconsin, and located at Waupun, Fond du Lac Co., where his father now resides; Mr. Decker was educated in the public schools of Waupun, and in that city in 1859, he entered upon his apprenticeship at the printer's trade; a year later, he went to the city of Fond du Lac, where for four years he was employed in the job office of which Edward Beeson was proprietor; in 1867, he returned to Waupun, purchased the Waupun Times, and was its editor for one year; he came to Columbus in 1868, established a printing office where he made a specialty of job work, and where he has since edited the Columbus Republican; Mr. Decker was elected Chairman of the County Board of Supervisors in 1877; was re-elected in 1878 and 1879; he was married in 1866 to Miss Harriet, daughter of Abram and Lucy Shelmadine, of Waupun, who died in 1869, leaving two children—Minnie J., and Ray—the latter of whom is now deceased; he was again married, in 1870, to Miss Susan Hawxhurs, of Columbus, who died in three years after; his third marriage was to Miss Emma L. Holms, of Portage City, Wis., in 1875; Mrs. Decker is a member of the Episcopal Church; Mr. D. is a member of the I. O. O. F., P. of H., and also of the Masonic Fraternity.

JOSEPH DERR, farmer, Sec. 31; P. O. Columbus; was born in Bavaria April 16, 1841; his parents, Joseph and Magdaline (Schmidt) Derr, immigrated with their family to America in 1846; they stopped a short time at Detroit, Mich., and in the spring of 1847, came to the town of Hampden, Columbia Co., Wis., where his father entered one-half of Sec. 36, and made that his home till his death, which occurred in August, 1879; his mother died in June, 1877; Joseph, the youngest of nine children, made his home with his parents until 24 years of age; he then bought 66 acres of his present farm, which now consists of 217½ acres, on Secs. 31, town of Columbus, and 25 and 36, town of Hampton; he was married in 1864 to Miss Rosina, daughter of George A. and Dorothea (Long) Thine, a native of Bavaria but an emigrant to America with her parents in 1848, and to Dane Co., Wis., in 1849, where her mother died in 1862; their children are Mary M., Matilda B.; Frank J., John, Anna D., Lizza A., Josephine R., Catharine E. They are members of the Catholic Church; Mr. Derr has been a member of the Town Board for two terms, 1879 and 1880.

G. T. DODGE, dry-goods merchant, Columbus; was born at Greece, Monroe Co., N. Y., Sept. 22, 1834; his father, Rev. H. B. Dodge, was born at Hanover, N. H.; graduated at Dartmouth College, and soon after at a theological college in the District of Columbia, and afterward entered the work of the ministry as a Baptist preacher in the State of New York; his mother, Eliza Beckwith, was a native of Plattsburg, N. Y.; was married to the Rev. Mr. Dodge, June 13, 1830. Five years after marriage, they removed to Ohio, where Mr. Dodge continued his ministerial labors for a few years, and then returned to Plattsburg, where he died Nov. 11, 1865. Mrs. Dodge came to this city (Columbus) soon after the death of her husband, and made this her home till her death, which occurred Nov. 3, 1878; the family was composed of four sons and two daughters, three of the former were for several years merchants of this city. Harvey K., was a soldier in the 1st W. V. I., under Gen. Starkweather, and was connected with the general pay department of the army from 1862 to the close of the war. He was married to Miss Nellie Dudley, of Naperville, Ill., who died in six months after marriage. He was afterward married to Miss Julia Manning, of Columbus. Rufus S., was in the 16th N. Y. V. I., and was in the battle of Bull Run, and remained with and engaged in all the principal battles and movements of his regiment till after the second battle of Fredricksburg; he came to Columbus in 1863, and was a member of the firm of Dodge Brothers till 1879; he is now in business at Sparta, Wis. He married Miss Fannie Cotton, of Beaver Dam, Wis.; they have one daughter, Nellie. G. T., the subject of this sketch, came to this city (Columbus) in 1855, and has since been engaged in the dry-goods trade. He was married in 1864 to Miss Julia I., a daughter of M. Meade, of Columbus, who died in six weeks after marriage. His second marriage was at Le Roy, N. Y., Sept. 11, 1866, to Miss Franc P., daughter of Dorus Hinkston, a native of Clarkson, N. Y.; their children are Bessie A. and Ruth M. Mrs. Dodge is a member of the Episcopal Church.

WILLIAM W. DRAKE, farmer; P. O. Columbus; was born in Herkimer Co., N. Y., June 20, 1819. His father, Col. Jeremiah Drake, was a native of Ulster Co., N. Y.; his mother, Lurinda Brockett, was born in Connecticut. Mr. Drake was educated in the common schools of his native county; he came to Wisconsin in June, 1843, and located at Columbus in September following; he, with his father, rented the flouring-mill at this place (then the only one in this section of the country), and were its proprietors for three years; he removed to a farm near the village, and there followed farming for awhile; returning to the village two years later, he began the wagon manufacturing, which he carried on, for nearly twenty years, and then resumed the business of a farmer, which he has followed most of the time since; he now owns a farm of 200 acres in the town of Columbus. Mr. Drake has been Chairman of the Town Board for several terms; was elected Sheriff of Columbia Co. in the fall of 1860, for a term of two years, and re-elected in 1872; politically, he is a Republican. Dec. 24, 1845, he was married to Miss Helen, daughter of Jacob and Marie Miller, a native of Onondaga Co., N. Y., but who, when quite young, removed with her parents to Albany Co., and made that her home till 1843, when she came to Columbus Co., Wis.; they have two children—Lurinda M. and George L. Lurinda is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

ROBERT W. EARLL, M. D., Columbus; was born in Onondaga Co., N. Y., in May, 1823; his parents, Marcus and Calista Earll, were both natives of that county; his mother died there in 1839, and his father afterward removed to Coldwater, Mich., where he now resides. The Doctor received his literary education in the Academy of Onondaga Hollow; he came to Wisconsin in 1840; he pursued the study of medicine in Syracuse, N. Y., for two years, attended lectures at Rush Medical College of Chicago during the terms of 1847-48, and graduated from that institution in February, 1853; he located at Columbus, Wis., in 1851, and practiced his profession in company with Dr. Axtell for three years, and since that time he has continued the practice alone. He was married in August, 1850, to Miss Angeline, an adopted daughter of Henry Finney, of Lowell, Dodge Co., Wis., who died in April, 1872, leaving four daughters—Dora, Coie, Hattie and Ann. They attend the Congregational Church.

ABRAM S. ECKERT, farmer, Sec. 36; P. O. Columbus; was born in Ulster Co., N. Y., Feb. 14, 1815. Mr. Eckert lived with his parents, Solomon and Margaret, on the farm in his native county till their death, and afterward remained on the farm till 1854; emigrating then to Wisconsin, he settled on a farm in the town of Columbus, Columbia Co., which he made his home for one or two years; selling out his farm in 1856, he returned to New York for the winter, and, in the following spring, came again to Columbus; in 1868, he bought a farm of 36 acres on Sec. 36, which he has since made his home. He was married in 1836 to Miss Sarah A. De Graff, of Ulster Co., N. Y.; their children are Sarah M., now Mrs. Jeremiah Marshall, and lives at Lanesboro, Minn.; Oliver, now at Northwood, Iowa; Solomon, now at McGregor, Iowa; Henry, now in Winneshek Co., Iowa; Emery, now at Northwood, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Eckert are members of the Presbyterian Church.

JAMES ECKERT, farmer, Secs. 20 and 21; P. O. Columbus; was born in the town of Esopus, Ulster Co., N. Y., in 1837; he came with his parents, Hiram and Sallie Eckert, to Wisconsin in 1855, and located on a farm of 80 acres in Secs. 20 and 21, town of Columbus, Columbia Co., where his father died April 28, 1876; his mother now lives with him on the farm. He was married March 16, 1876, to Miss Viola Parker, a native of Steuben Co., N. Y., but immigrated with her parents, William and Sarah Parker, to Wisconsin in 1856; they have three children—James C., Troup and Adella.

JOSEPH EDWARDS, farmer, Sec. 9; P. O. Columbus; was born in Delaware Co., N. Y., in 1804, and made that his home till 17 years old, then, with his parents, he removed to Lewis Co., N. Y.;

where he followed farming until 1837; emigrating then to Wisconsin, he located at Milford, Jefferson Co., on a farm; six years later (June, 1843), he entered a farm of 160 acres in Secs. 4, 9 and 17, in the town of Columbus, Columbia Co., he being the second man to make a land entry in this part of the town; he moved his family up from Milford Jan. 18, 1844, and has since made it his home; he now has a farm of 280 acres. Mr. Edwards distinctly remembers of being summoned as a juror, at Portage, in an early day, when, upon the calling of the court, the docket showed not a single case for trial; his house was used for the church and schoolhouse for more than a year after his settlement there; the first minister to hold service there was the Rev. M. Jones, of the M. E. Church. Mr. Edwards was married in 1824 to Miss Maria Bill, of Delhi, Delaware Co., N. Y.; their children are Mariette, now the wife of S. S. Loveless, and lives in Clark Co., Wis.; Olney, now in the city of Oconto, Wis.; James J., Norfolk, Monroe Co., Wis.; Eliza, at home; Lorilla, now Mrs. Bennett, of Luddington Mich.; Antha, now Mrs. C. S. McKinzie, of Oconto, Wis.; Maria, now Mrs. George Butterfield, lives in Oconto, Wis.; Joseph, Jr., now living at Waupun; Theron, at home on the farm. Mr. and Mrs. Edwards are members of the M. E. Church.

JOHN A. ERHART, manufacturer and dealer in harness, etc., Columbus; was born in Saxony Sept. 1, 1834. His father, John R. Erhart, was born there in 1805, and died when John A. was only 4 years old; his mother, Louisa Erhart, was also a native of Saxony, born 1808, and, after the death of his father, she married Ferdinand Baerholdt, and with him emigrated to Columbus, Wis., in 1856, where they now live. Mr. Erhart began a three-years apprenticeship at the harness trade when 15 years old; in 1853, he emigrated to America and followed his trade in Milwaukee for a year; in 1854, he went to Fox Lake, Dodge Co., Wis., where he worked two years in a shop for J. R. Decker; in the spring of 1856, he, with a partner, bought Mr. Hosmer's harness-shop at Beaver Dam, and conducted the business there till the following fall, when he came to Columbus, and, in copartnership with Edward Vedder, carried on the trade two and one-half years; he then bought out Mr. Vedder, and has since carried on the business alone. Mr. Erhart was one of the Town Supervisors before the organization as a city; he was a member of the Village Board for two terms, and was elected a member of the City Council in the spring of 1880. He was married in October, 1858, to Miss Caroline, daughter of Andreas and Margaret Liebing, a native of Germany, born 1838, and came to Columbus, Wis., in 1853; their children are Annie A., born Sept. 9, 1861; Ida L., July 17, 1864; Charles A., born August 4, 1866; Oscar T., born April 20, 1870. Mr. E. and family born are members of the Lutheran Church; he has been a member of the Masonic Fraternity since 1859.

ELIJAH FEDERLY, farmer, Sec. 35; P. O. Columbus; was born in Jefferson Co., N. Y., in 1819; his parents, Daniel and Margaret Federly, were natives of Herkimer Co., but removed to Jefferson Co., N. Y., in 1815, where they afterward died. Mr. Federly was brought up as a farmer's son, and was educated at the district select schools of his native county; at the age of 24, he began the ship-carpenter's trade at Clayton, Jefferson Co., and continued that most of the time for six or seven years; he next turned his attention to the carpenter and joiner's trade, at which he worked much of his time for a number of years; he came to Wisconsin in 1848, and located on a farm in the town of Concord, Jefferson Co., and in the following year, he removed to the town of York, Dane Co., where he lived on a farm for fifteen years; in the winter of 1865, he located on his present farm of 180 acres on Sec. 35, town of Columbus, Columbia Co. He held the offices of Town Treasurer, Constable and Deputy Sheriff while a citizen of Dane Co. He was married in 1842 to Miss Sarah M., daughter of Edmund and Charlotte (Dickerson) Ingalls, a native of Vermont, but an emigrant to Jefferson Co., N. Y., with her parents when young; her parents afterward came to Wisconsin; both are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Federly have four children—Charles M., who enlisted in October, 1861, in Co. B, 16th W. V. I., under Col. Allen, of Madison, was taken sick, was brought home, and died Jan. 11, 1863; Charlotte M. (now the wife of F. W. Oatman, and lives in Jefferson Co., N. Y.), Albert E. and Sarah C., at home. They are members of the M. E. Church.

JOHN FICK, farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. Columbus; was born in Mecklinburg in 1827; he came to America in June, 1855, and located at Watertown, Wis., where he worked on a farm for six years; he came to the town of Columbus, Columbia Co., in 1861, bought a farm of 127 acres in Secs. 15 and 22, where he has since lived. He was married in 1855 to Miss Dora Scheibers, a native of Germany; their children are Henry, Frank, John, Joseph and Mary. They are members of the Lutheran Church.

HENRY C. FIELD, proprietor of livery stable, Columbus; was born in Onondaga Co., N. Y., in 1820; his father, Stephen Field, was born in Connecticut; his mother, Charlotte Berry, was also a native of Connecticut, died when he was quite young; he, with his father and family, removed to Kalamazoo Co., Mich., in 1833, and lived there on a farm till 1848, whence they emigrated to Columbia Co., Wis., and located on a farm in the town of Fountain Prairie, where his father died in 1852; Mr. Field lived on his farm in the town of Fountain Prairie till 1876, when he removed to the city of Columbus, purchased the livery stable of M. D. Misner, and has since been its proprietor. He was a member of the Town Board of Fountain Prairie for a number of years, and Chairman of the same for four years; he was elected a member of the City Council of Columbus in 1877. In March, 1850, he was married to Miss Theresa, daughter of Asa and Mercy Hicks, nee Robins; her father was a native of New York; her mother of Connecticut; she was born in Yates Co., N. Y., in 1821, and removed to Kalamazoo Co., Mich., with her parents in 1834, where they afterward died. Mr. and Mrs. Field have five children, as follows: Carry M. (now the wife of S. V. Potter, station agent at Calmar, Iowa), William (now in Redwood Co., Minn.), Charles (now on the farm in Fountain Prairie) Henry (an engineer on the Iowa Division of the Milwaukee & St. Paul R. R.), Louis, at home with his parents.

WALDO H. FIELD, farmer, Sec. 30; P. O. Columbus; was born in Cheshire Co., N. H., in 1796; his father, Waldo Field, was a native of Bridgewater, Mass.; his mother, Mary Atkins, was born in Waterbury, Conn., and removed to Cheshire Co., N. H., a few years before the Revolutionary war. At the age of ten years, Waldo H. removed with his parents to Washington Co., Vt., where they afterward died. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and took part in the battle of Lake Champlain. He was married in 1840 to Miss Lovisa, widow of Zebina Lyons, nee Carey, and daughter of Theodore and Silence (Cobb) Carey, a native of Springfield, Vt., but removed to Brandon, Vt., at the age of 5 years; in June, 1849, Mr. and Mrs. Field came to Columbia Co., Wis., and located on Sec. 30, town of Columbus, where they have since lived, and now own 31½ acres of land. Their children are Martha (now Mrs. Colville), Mary (now the wife of J. Folsom, and lives in Dane Co., Wis.)—these two are by Mrs. Field's first marriage, and by her second marriage they have two—Almira (now the wife of Hugh Twining, and lives in the town of Medina, Dane Co.), and Henry (now a resident of the city of Columbus). Mr. and Mrs. Field are members of the M. E. Church.

REV. ERNEST FITZNER, Pastor of the German M. E. Church, Columbus; was born in Prussia in 1839; he came with his parents, Charles and Christina Fitzner, to America in 1850, and located on a farm at West Bend, Washington Co., Wis., and made that his home for eleven years; Mr. Fitzner prepared for the profession of a teacher in the Academy of West Bend, Washington Co., Wis., from which institution he graduated in 1861. In October of that year, he enlisted in Co. D, 12th W. V. I., under Col. Bryant, of Madison, and was with his regiment in all its principal movements and battles for one and a half years; he was then detached and placed as member of the board, at the headquarters of Maj. Gen. Howard, where he remained until the close of the war, and was mustered out of service at Louisville, Ky., in 1865. Returning then to West Bend, in August, where he soon entered upon the work of the ministry, he was assigned to the Charleston Mission, and at the division of the mission, 1866, he removed to Green Bay, which was then added to the portion assigned him; joining the Northwestern Conference at St. Paul, in the autumn of 1867, he was then ordained Deacon, and appointed to the charge at Oconomowoc in 1868, of the German M. E. Church. During his stay at Oconomowoc, he was married, in 1868, to Miss Lizzie Horst, of Green Bay, and in the fall of that year he was sent to New Bremen, Cook Co., Ill., where he remained in charge of the church for three years; he was next at Plattville, Wis., for two years; in 1873, he removed to Galena, Ill., and by the Bishop was appointed Vice President of the Northwestern German M. E. Normal School, which position he resigned at the expiration of one year; in 1874, he was appointed to the charge at Fond du Lac, Wis., and, in 1877, to Madison, Wis., and, in 1878, to Columbus, where he now resides. Their children are Edwin, Charles, William Ernest, John and Robert Philip.

WILLIAM FRANZ, farmer, Sec. 7; P. O. Columbus; was born in Prussia in 1831, and is the son of Martin Franz, with whom he came to America in 1848, and located on a farm in the town of Lowell, Dodge Co., Wis.; eight years later, he purchased a farm of 80 acres in Sec. 17, town of Columbus, Columbia Co., and, in the fall of 1864, disposed of that and secured his present one of 208 acres in Sec. 7, of this township, and has since made it his home; he devotes his time to farming and stock-raising, making a specialty of sheep and cattle. He was married in May, 1855, to Miss Christina Schank, a native of Prussia; their children are Louisa, now the widow of the late John Boskil, deceased; Carrie, now Mrs. Rudolph Bankie, and lives in Lowell, Dodge Co.; Charles, Matilda, Fredrick and Mena, at home. They are members of the Lutheran Church.

JULIUS FOX, proprietor of the Fox House, Columbus; was born in Prussia Nov. 19, 1827; his father, William Fox, was a tailor in that country; his mother, Wilhelmina Kazloskie, was of Polish descent, her father, Carl Kazloskie, having escaped from Poland when he was a young man, and afterward made his home in Prussia. At the age of 14, Mr. Fox entered upon a four-years apprenticeship at the shoemaker's trade at Reetz, and after serving his time at the trade, he traveled in the interest of the trade for eleven years over various parts of Europe. Jan. 26, 1855, at Reetz, he was married to Miss Wilhelmina, a daughter of Godlieb and Caroline Breuning, a native of Prussia, born July 26, 1830; May 15, 1856, they sailed from Hamburg for America, and landed in New York Aug. 2, following; they came thence to Watertown, Wis., where they stopped a short time and then came to Columbus, where he began and carried on his trade for nine years, as a manufacturer and dealer; he next engaged in farming for a year; then in the grain trade for a short time; he bought the Whitney House in 1868, changed its name to the Fox House and has since been its proprietor; he also owns a farm of 400 acres in the town of Columbus. He has been a member of the City Council for two years. Their children are Charles (deceased), Clara, Robert (deceased), Henry, Bertha, Laura (deceased), Hobart and Ozisia. They are members of the Lutheran Church.

AUGUST FRITZ, farmer, Sec. 34; P. O. Columbus; was born in Prussia in 1841; his parents, Christian and Regina Fritz, emigrated with their family to America in 1857, and located at Watertown, Wis., where his father died in 1862; August, the subject of this sketch, enlisted in Co. E, W. V. I., in 1862, under Col. B. Pinkney, and partook in all the principal battles and movements of his regiment during the war; was mustered out at Galveston, Tex., in August, 1865; returning then to Watertown, Wis., he made his home on the farm till 1866, when he sold there and bought his present one of 124 acres, on Sec. 34, town of Columbus, where he has since resided. He was married, March 20, 1866, to Miss Mary Holsten, of the town of Farmingham, Jefferson Co., Wis., though a native of Geruany, and an emigrant with her parents to Jefferson Co., Wis., in 1849; their children are Edwin, Annie, Eleanora and William. Mr. Fritz and family are members of the Lutheran Church. His mother resides with him.

DANIEL S. FULLER, of the firm of Fuller Bros., dry-goods merchants, Columbus; was born in Oneida Co., N. Y., June 13, 1834; with his parents, L. and Rachel Fuller, he came to Wisconsin in 1857, and located at Columbus; he soon went to Berlin, Wis., where he spent one year, returning to Columbus in 1858, and in January, 1859, with his father, in the firm of L. Fuller & Son, he began merchandising, and continued the business under that name till July, 1866, when his brother, Mark R., took the place of his father, and the firm was changed to Fuller Bros. In the fall of 1866, he was married to Miss Frances, daughter of Frederick Ingersoll, and a native of Attica, N. Y.; they had three children—Agnes V., Alfred H. (deceased), and M. Roosevelt. Mrs. Fuller is a member of the Congregational Church.

LUSCIUS FULLER, retired, Columbus; was born in the town of Kirkland, Oneida Co., N. Y., in July, 1810; is the son of Daniel and Cynthia Fuller, who were natives of Connecticut; Mr. Fuller devoted his time to farming in his native county (excepting five years which was devoted to saw-milling), till 1857; emigrating then to Wisconsin, he located at Columbus, March 31, 1857; the first year after his arrival here was given to saw-milling at Berlin, Wis.; returning to Columbus, he began merchandising during the winter of 1858-9, and continued that business for several years; disposing of his merchandise in 1866, he has since spent his time looking after his farm of 170 acres in the town of Columbus. He was married in 1833 to Rachel Sanford, a native of England, who died in Columbus, Wis., in 1873, leaving three children—Daniel S., now a merchant of this city; Mark R., a merchant at Augusta, Wis.; and Alice V., who died in September, 1877; they had one son (Alfred E.), who enlisted in Co. G, 23d W. V. I., in August, 1863, and was with his regiment in all its principal movements, till March, 1864, when he died at Milliken's Bend, La. His second marriage was in February, 1875, to Mrs. Mary D., widow of the late E. Grover, of Madison, Wis.; Mrs. Fuller is a native of Monroe Co., N. Y., but came with her parents, C. H. and Mary A. Williams, to Dane Co., Wis., in 1846. She is a member of the Congregational Church.

ROBERT GARNIDGE, farmer, Sec. 23; P. O. Columbus; is a native of England. His parents, William and Jane (Richardson) Garnidge, were natives of Northampton Co., England; his father was born in 1777, and died there in 1860; his mother was born in 1787, and died in 1836; they raised a family of four children, of whom Robert, the second and subject of this sketch, was born at Spratton, Northampton Co., in 1816, and removed with his parents, when 4 years old, to Ravensthorpe, Northampton Co., where he lived till 1845, whence he emigrated to America; he stopped first at Avon, Lorain Co., Ohio, where he was employed at farm labor for about a year; April 2, 1846, he started for Wisconsin, and reached Columbus, Columbia Co., the 13th day of that month; he at once entered a farm of 40 acres on Sec. 22 of this town, made a few improvements, and sold it; he next bought 80 acres of his present farm on Sec. 23, in 1848, and has since made it his home; he now owns 200 acres in that section. In 1849, he was married to Miss Sarah E., daughter of John and Sarah Adler, a native of Northampton, England, but emigrated to Wisconsin with her parents in 1846, where they afterward died.

Mr. and Mrs. Garnidge have three sons and two daughters, as follows: Byron R., now in Mason City, Iowa; Jennie, at home with her parents; William H., now at Albion, Boone Co., Neb.; Charles R., at home; and Anna V., at home. Mrs. Garnidge is a member of the Congregational Church.

ROBERT GRIFFITHS, dealer in furniture and undertaker, Columbus; was born at Holyhead, Anglesea, North Wales, in 1829, he began the carpenter and joiner's trade when 18 years old; in 1856, he came to America and located in New York City, where he continued his trade for nearly nine years; he came to Columbus, Wis., in 1864, formed a copartnership with J. Colville in the furniture and undertaking business, and continued with him till his death; since that time, he has carried on the business alone, and now has the most extensive business in the city. In 1864, he was married to Esther Jones, of New York City, a daughter of the late Richard P. Jones, of Columbus, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. G. are members of the Welsh Calvinistic Church.

EUGENE S. GRISWOLD, dry-goods merchant, Columbus; was born in Salisbury, Herkimer Co., N. Y., in 1833; is the son of Amos and Phebe (Sherwood) Griswold, natives of Connecticut, but Mr. Griswold was educated at the Academy of Fairfield, N. Y.; completing his studies there in 1853, he went to New York City, where, for the next two years, he was connected with the Mercantile Library Association; he came to Columbus, Wis., in 1855, and was employed as clerk by his brothers in the mercantile trade for eighteen months; in 1861, he began dealing in grain, which he afterward followed for two years, and then began the dry-goods business, which he has since continued. He was married to Miss Hattie, daughter of Dudley Tyng, a native of Augusta, Me. They have three children—Florence, Ada and Edith.

WILLIAM M. GRISWOLD, Columbus, was born in Salisbury, Herkimer Co., N. Y., in 1823. His parents, Amos and Martha Munson Griswold, were natives of Connecticut. Mr. Griswold was educated at Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., from which institution he graduated in 1844; he studied law with A. Loomis, at Little Falls, Herkimer Co., N. Y., and was admitted at Schenectady, N. Y., in 1850; he at once began the practice of his profession with Judge Loomis, the father of the code, and continued with him for three years; he came to Wisconsin in 1853, located at Columbus, and for the first few years he was engaged in the mercantile trade; he next devoted his attention to farming for seven years, and since that time has lived more retired from active life. He has been Town Supervisor several terms; was elected a member of the Wisconsin Assembly in 1858, re-elected in 1859 and 1860; in 1868, he was elected to the Senate from Columbia Co., and filled that position so faithfully that he was again re-elected to the same in 1870. In July, 1868, he was married to Miss Mary, daughter of Alfred Scofield, of Yates Co., N. Y.; their children are William E. and Mary M. Mrs. Griswold is a member of the Universalist Church.

GEORGE GRISWOLD, Columbus, was born in Salisbury, Herkimer Co., N. Y., in 1816; was educated at Union College, of Schenectady, under Dr. Nott; read law with A. Loomis, at Little Falls, and later with Michael Hoffman, of Herkimer, N. Y.; he came to Columbus in the fall of 1850, and for nine years was engaged in merchandising; since that time he lived a more retired life.

HARMAN R. HANCOCK, farmer; Sec. 4; P. O. Columbus; was born in Jefferson Co., N. Y., in 1833; son of Isaac B. and Sally Hancock, with whom he emigrated to Columbia Co., in the spring of 1846, and located on a farm in the town of Columbus, where they lived for three years; his father then removed to Fall River, where he now resides. Mr. Hancock was married in 1856, to Miss Mary R., daughter of Danforth W. and Emily Stiles, a native of Vermont, but an emigrant to Wisconsin, in 1847, and located on the farm where she now lives and where her father afterward died with the cholera. Mr. and Mrs. Hancock have eight children, as follows: Nellie, Lydia, Edwin, Cora, Matilda, Herbert, Willis and Laura.

JOHN HASEY, Columbus; was born in the town of Londonderry, Windham Co., Vt., in 1817; is the son of John and Rhoda Hasey, who emigrated to Genesee, N. Y., about 1828, and to Wisconsin in 1844, and afterward died in Columbus, Columbia Co., Wis. Mr. Hasey came to Dodge Co., Wis., in 1845, and located in the town of Elba; two years later, he removed to the town of Columbus, Columbia Co., where he entered a farm of 160 acres, and made that his home till 1856; removing at that time to the city (then village) of Columbus, he began dealing in produce, and continued that line of business for nearly 20 years. Mr. Hasey has been a member of the City Council of Columbus since its charter as a city. In 1843, he was married to Miss Albina S., daughter of F. C. Farnham, of Alexander, Genesee Co., N. Y. They are members of the Universalist Church.

SAMUEL HASEY, P. O. Columbus; was born at Londonderry, Windham Co., Vt., in 1822. His parents, John Hasey and Rhoda Emmons, were also natives of Vermont, but were among the early settlers of Genesee Co., N. Y.; they came with their family to Dane Co., Wis., in 1844, and later, to Columbus, where they afterward died. Mr. Hasey, our present subject, came with his parents to Dane Co., Wis., in 1844, and in the following year, removed to the town of Elba, Dodge Co., where he followed farming till 1866, returning then to Dane Co., and, in 1868, removed to Columbus for a short time; thence to a farm of 240 acres on Secs. 9 and 10, town of Hampden, and made that his home for eleven years, and, in November, 1879, returned to the city of Columbus, where he has since lived. He was married in 1852 to Miss Mary E. Anderson, a native of Genesee Co., N. Y.; their children are James H., who was born at Danville, Dodge Co., Wis., in 1853, and lived with his parents till his marriage in 1879, to Miss Alice, daughter of Robert and Alice McBurnie, a native of the town of Hampden; they now live on the farm in that town; George E., also on the farm; Mary R. Mr. Hasey was Chairman of the Town Board of Hampden for three terms, and was elected a member of the Wisconsin Assembly from the Second Assembly District of Columbia Co., in 1874.

WILLIAM K. HOSKEN, photographer, Columbus; was born in London in 1836; is the son of James and Mary Hosken; when about 7 years old, he began the study of drawing and art in his native city, and devoted his attention to that study more or less of the time there till 1857; emigrating then to America, he located at Altoona, Penn., and there followed various kinds of business for awhile; he next resumed his travel, which he continued over many of the States; in 1862, he located at Madison, Wis., and there, in 1865, began work at photography; in the latter part of 1866, he removed to Oconomowoc and continued this business there till 1869, when he removed to Milwaukee; he came thence to Columbus in 1873, opened a studio and has since continued his profession in this city, doing work also in crayon, water-colors and pastel. He was married in 1866 to Miss Angeline Stowe, of Sun Prairie, Dane Co., Wis.; their children are Charles L., Edith A. and Emma J. They are connected with the Universalist Church.

CHARLES HOTON, farmer, Sec. 9; P. O. Columbus; was born in Yates Co., N. Y., in 1833; is the son of Aaron and Nancy Hoton, with whom he came to Wisconsin in 1843, and located on a farm on Sec. 3, town of Columbus, Columbia Co., where his father afterward died. Mr. Hoton spent most of his time with his mother on the farm till his marriage in September, 1874, to Miss Alice McBurnie, of the town of Hampden, this county; after marriage, he located on a farm of 120 acres on Secs. 3, 9 and 10, town of Columbus, which he bought in 1859, and has managed and controlled since that time; they have one son—Clarence.

WILLIAM K. HURD, farmer, Secs. 7 and 18; P. O. Columbus; was born at Bridport, Addison Co., Vt., in 1820. His father, William Hurd, was a native of Connecticut, but his mother, Mary Kendall, was born in Vermont. William K., the subject of this sketch, spent his early life on a farm in his native State, and, in 1839, removed to Akron, Ohio, where he was engaged in a flouring-mill for seven months, and then clerked in boatyard there for five months. He was married at Akron in 1840, to Miss Jane L., daughter of Calvin May, with whom, in the autumn of that year, he returned to his home in Vermont; after spending a year on his father's farm, they removed to Randolph, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., where he worked at the carpenter and joiner's trade for four years; in 1845, they removed to the town of Richmond, Walworth Co., Wis., where he bought a farm, built what was known as the old "Gravel House" and kept tavern in connection with farming for three years, removing then to the town of West Troy, Walworth Co., where he kept tavern a year, after which he continued the carpenter and joiner's trade till 1854; while there, he built twenty miles of railroad fence for the M. & M. road, it being the first for that company in the State; in the fall of 1854, he bought a farm of 120 acres in Sec. 7, town of Columbus, Columbia Co., Wis., which has since been his home, and where he now owns 196 acres in Secs. 7 and 18; here his wife died in March, 1855; their children are James E., who now resides in Schuyler Co., Mo.; Helen, now Mrs. Alonzo Chase, and lives at Wells, Faribault Co., Minn.; Achsa L., now the wife of Monroe Phillips, and lives in Brookfield, Waukesha Co., Wis.; Arthur C., deceased; Charles M., deceased; Renben S., living now at Kasson, Minn.; Oscar A., who now lives in Iowa; his second marriage was in August, 1855, to Mrs. Mary A. Murphy, nee Curtis, of the town of Hampden, Columbia Co., Wis.; she had two daughters by her first marriage—Frances M., the late Mrs. J. J. Sutton, now deceased; Sarah A., now Mrs. Isaac Thompson, and lives in the town of Columbus. Mr. and Mrs. Hurd have two children by their second marriage—William F., who married Miss Eliza Baker in March, 1879, and lives on his father's farm, and Fred W., at home; they have an adopted daughter—Mary. Mr. H. has been Justice of the Peace and Notary Public for several years.

ADOLPHUS W. INGALSBE, Columbus; was born in Washington Co., N. Y., in 1822; he was educated in the common schools of his native county; he went to California in 1849, and spent three years in the West; returning to his home in New York, in 1852, whence, in the fall of that year, he emigrated to Wisconsin, and located at Columbus in February, 1853, where he has since devoted his time to farming and stock-raising; he now owns a farm of 600 acres in the towns of Columbus, Columbia Co., and Elba, Dodge Co. Mr. Ingalsbe was a member of the Town Board for several terms, and Chairman of the same two years. In October, 1853, he was married to Miss Maria Butterfield, of Washington Co., N. Y., who died at her home in Columbus, Wis., in July, 1876, leaving three children, as follows: Burr, now living in Nebraska; Nora and Millie at home with father. Mrs. Ingalsbe was a member of the Baptist Church; Mr. Ingalsbee is an Ancient Odd Fellow.

E. E. JONES, Columbus; was born in Flintshire, North Wales, in 1828; is the son of Edward and Arabella Jones; he was educated according to the school system of his native country, and, at the age of 14 years, was apprenticed to the mercantile trade, which he continued there and in Liverpool till 1848, his father having died when he was not yet a year old; in 1848, he with his mother emigrated to America, and located at Columbus, Wis.; he engaged in teaching for a year, and then began clerking for Mr. Bassett, in the mercantile trade; after continuing with him for some years, he next became a partner with Mr. Hazelton, in the business, and, in 1861, he and Mr. Johnson bought out Mr. Hazelton, and continued the business for three or four years; disposing of his business, he soon became employed by Bassett & Davies, in the dry-goods and general merchandise store, and has remained with them since. He was married, in 1853, to Miss Elizabeth Jones, of the town of Elba, Dodge Co., but a native of Caernavonshire, North Wales, and an emigrant to Wisconsin with her parents, about 1845; they have one daughter—Katie. They are members of the Welsh Calvinistic Church; Mr. Jones is a member of the Temple of Honor.

THOMAS JONES, farmer, Secs. 23 and 26; P. O. Columbus; was born in Merionethshire, North Wales, Oct. 20, 1833; his father, Thomas Jones, was born in Merionethshire, and died in the town of Columbus, Columbia Co., Wis., Nov. 7, 1849; his mother, Elizabeth Gittings, was also a native of that shire, and died in Wisconsin in August, 1862. Thomas, our present subject, is the oldest of five children, with whom his parents landed in New York, as emigrants to America, July 8, 1845; they settled in the town of Macy, Oneida Co., N. Y., for nearly a year, and then removed to the town of Columbus, Columbia Co., Wis., where they arrived June 3, 1846, where they located on a farm on Sec. 27; Mr. Jones made his home on the farm till his marriage in 1861, to Miss Mary J., daughter of Dan and Hannah M. Tompkins, a native of Yates Co., N. Y., but an emigrant with parents to Wisconsin, in 1854, and located in the town of Otsego, Columbia Co., where her father died in 1876; her mother still resides in that town. Mr. and Mrs. Jones located soon after marriage on a farm of 170 acres, on Sec. 22, and made that their home till Feb. 8, 1876, whence he removed to his present farm of 135 acres, on Secs. 23, 25 and 26. He has been a member of the Town Board for two terms.

JOHN A. KITZROW, farmer, Secs. 16 and 21; P. O. Columbus; was born in Mecklenburg in 1838; he came to America in 1857, and located in the town of Columbus, Columbia Co., Wis.; he now owns a farm of 160 acres, Secs. 16 and 21. In 1866, he was married to Miss Augusta Prien, of the town of Arlington, Columbia County; their children are Otto, Edward, Charles and Mary. They are members of the Lutheran Church.

ALBERT EUGENE KOENIG, Columbus; was born May 2, 1848, in Berne, Switzerland, and came to America in April, 1867; located in Fayette Co., Iowa, and was in the law office of Mr. Goodrich for about nine months, and then went to New Orleans, and to Cuba, and was there till December, 1870; then he went to California, from there to Shanghai, China, where he contracted the yellow fever, and, on account of ill health, returned to California, and was in the employ of his brother for three years, and then he went to New York, and, in 1876, came to Columbus, Wis., where he still lives, and is now in the employ of J. Fox, Esq.; he has charge of the livery and feed stables at the Fox House.

REV. FREDRICK KLUCKHOHN, retired, Columbus; was born in North Germany in 1820; he was educated in the common and select schools of his native country; at the age of 14 years, he became apprenticed to the blacksmith trade, with his father, and continued that, together with farming there, till 1848; emigrating then to America, he located at Chicago, where he worked at his trade for nearly a year. There, in 1849, he was married to Miss Charlotte Friday, a native also of Northern Germany, after which he soon settled on a farm of 160 acres in Cook Co., Ill.; two years later, he removed to a farm in Lake Co., Ind., where he remained two years; during the time of his residence in Cook Co., Ill., and Lake Co., Ind., he devoted much of his time to the study of theology; he joined the Rock River Conference in 1854, and was appointed to the charge of Manitowoc, Wis., for two years, during which time he built the first German M. E. Church there; he was assigned, in 1856, to Fond du Lac, where he also built the first German M. E. Church, and remained there as its Pastor for two years, and, in 1858, to Wheeling, Cook Co., Ill.; two years later, he was appointed to the German M. E. Church, of Clybourne avenue, Chicago, where he remained for two years; in 1862, he was sent to La Porte, Ind., and, in 1864, to Bremen, Cook Co., Ill., where he remained three years, going thence to Peru, La Salle Co., for one year. In 1868, he removed to Galena, Ill., and was Presiding Elder of that district for four years, after which he was Pastor of the church there for one year. At the time of the division of the Northwestern Conference, in 1872, at his request he was transferred to Chicago German M. E. Conference, and by it was again appointed to the charge of Bremen, Ill., for two years. In the autumn of 1875, he came to Columbus as Pastor of the German M. E. Church, and remained as such for three years, when failing health forced him to resign. Mr. and Mrs. Kluekhohn have six children—Fred, Louisa (now the wife of L. Hersch, and lives at Lemars, Iowa), Mary (now the wife of H. Blumenthal, of this city), Josephine, Henry, Emma.

DAVID LASKEY, farmer, Sec. 33; P. O. Columbus; was born in the town of Greene, Chenango Co., N. Y., in 1841, and came with his parents, Richard and Dorothy Laskey, to Wisconsin in 1844; stopped one year in Walworth County; in 1845, came to the town of Hampden, Columbia County, where he made his home till 1865; then he bought a farm on Sec. 30, town of Columbus; disposing of that in 1868, he bought one of 120 acres, 87 of which lies on Secs. 33 and 34, town of Columbus, and 40 acres on Secs. 3 and 4, town of York, Dane Co. He was married Nov. 1, 1870, to Miss Susan, a daughter of Henry and Mary McNamara, a native of New York City, born in 1850; her parents were natives of Ireland, but emigrated with her to Dane Co., Wis., when she was quite young. Their children are Albert J., William H. and Uri D. Mrs. Laskey is a member of the Catholic Church.

RICHARD LASKEY, deceased, was born in Leicestershire, England, in 1784, and lived there on a farm till about 21 years of age; he then joined the British army as a soldier in the War of 1812, and served most of the time in Canada; at the close of the war, he deserted the army, crossed the Niagara River on the ice into York State, and located in the town of Greene, Chenango Co., where he made his home till 1844. He was married there, Feb. 9, 1826, to Miss Dorothy Johnson, a native of New Hampshire, where she was born Feb. 13, 1800, but emigrated to New York with her parents when 12 years old. In 1844, Mr. and Mrs. Laskey, with their family of twelve children, emigrated to Wisconsin, and located on a farm in the town of Lina, Walworth County; a year later (1845), they removed to Columbia Co., and located in the town of Hampden, where they were among the first families, and made that their home for about twenty-two years. In 1867, they removed to the town of Columbus, and settled on a farm, on Sec. 24, where he died in 1870, and his wife in 1875; they were members of the M. E. Church. Their children are Rhoda, born Nov. 12, 1826, the late wife of Thomas Smith, now deceased; John, born Dec. 13, 1827, who owns a farm of 60 acres in the town of York, Dane Co.; Albert, born Nov. 30, 1828, who, with his brother John, owns a farm of 390 acres in the town of Columbus; Lois, born Jan. 27, 1830, now the wife of Perry J. Kidder, and lives in the town of Columbus; Thomas, born Sept. 30, 1831, enlisted in Co. K, 18th W. V. I., and killed at the battle of Shiloh; Stephen, born April 13, 1833, and died in the town of Hampden; Asenath, born Dec. 13, 1835, now Mrs. Thomas Smith, of Columbus; Chloe, born March 7, 1837, now Mrs. L. B. Huntington, of the town of Fountain Prairie; Uri, born Feb. 14, 1839, enlisted in Co. A, 7th W. V. I., was wounded at the battle of Gainesville, Va., died at Alexandria; David, born Oct. 23, 1841, and he now lives in this town (Columbus).

PERRY LEE, deceased, was the son of Jesse and Jane Lee; born in the town of Eaton, Wyoming Co., Penn., in 1816; he was educated in the common schools of his native county, and devoted his time to farming there till his marriage, in 1840, to Miss Esther, daughter of Thomas and Polly Mitchell, of that town and county. After marriage, he, with a brother, turned his attention to milling (having purchased a grist-mill a short time before his marriage), and were its proprietors till 1844; emigrating then to Wisconsin, they located at Milwaukee for fourteen months, and in December, 1845, settled on a farm in the town of Hampden, Columbia Co., which was their home till 1850; removing then to Portage, he was proprietor of the Wisconsin House for two years, and then purchased the Lee House, of which he was proprietor till December, 1859, when it burned down. He was elected Sheriff of Columbia County in 1852, and served in that office during the years 1853 and 1854. He went to Denver, Colo., in 1860, and there, with a company of men, started South on a trip, but he was taken sick and died at Abiquiu, New Mexico, in November, 1860, leaving a wife and five children to survive him. The children are as follows: Wm. D., who now lives in Texas; Mary M., now the wife of Thomas Sanderson, and lives in the town of Hampden, Columbia Co., Wis.; Sarah, now Mrs. J. J. Sutton, of this city; Esther M., now Mrs. A. H. Whitney, of this city, and Lillian E., at home with her mother. Those who knew Mr. Lee knew well his many manly qualities, being a man who took interest in public affairs, and whatever seemed to be for the general good of the county or community he was ever ready to support. His acquaintance throughout the county was very extended, and all who met him honored him for his courtesy, his kindness, his manhood.

JOHN W. LEFFINGWELL, farmer, Sec. 33 ; P. O. Columbus ; was born in the town of Riga, Genesee Co., N. Y., Oct. 16, 1832 ; his father, Lemuel Leffingwell, was born in Connecticut, in 1798, and was a grandson of William Leffingwell, who emigrated from France to America in an early day, and was instrumental in rescuing some whites from the hands of the Indians ; as a reward for which the U. S. Government granted him the land where the city of Norwich, Conn., is now located ; his father, Lemuel, removed with parents to the town of Camden, Oneida Co., N. Y., when a mere boy. There, in February, 1820, he was married to Miss Ruth Preston, a native of that county, born April 13, 1803. Four years after marriage, they removed to Genesee Co., and made that their home until 1835, whence they emigrated to Monroe Co., Mich. ; in 1837, they returned to Oneida Co., N. Y., and settled in the town of Vernon, whence, in 1847, they came to Wisconsin and located on a farm in the town of York, Dane Co. ; he having come in the fall of 1846, and made preparation for the family, which arrived in the spring of 1847 ; he afterward purchased land near the town of Columbus, Columbia Co., to which he removed and made his home until his death, which occurred Sept. 6, 1877. He left a wife and four children to survive him ; the latter are as follows : Mary A., now the wife of Francis Smith, and lives in the town of Vernon, Oneida Co., N. Y. ; George, who lives with his mother on the farm ; John W. and Orrissa, now the wife of Daniel Peck, and lives in the town of York, Dane Co., Wis. John W., the third and subject of this sketch, was married Nov. 12, 1855, to Miss Amanda, daughter of Orlando and Thankful (Parker) Wiseman, a native of the town of Gainesville, Wyoming Co., N. Y. ; her grandfather, Thomas Wiseman, was a native of England, and came to America as a British soldier in the Revolutionary war, served his term under the King and then joined the American cause ; he was one of the men who watched for Maj. Andre at the time of his capture ; he afterward located in the town of Gainesville, Wyoming Co., N. Y., where he followed the weaver's trade, and made that his home until death ; he raised a large family, of whom Mrs. Leffingwell's father was the youngest but one, and came as a pioneer to Dane Co., Wis., and located in the town of York, where he died in the fall of 1876, and his wife two years later. Mr. Leffingwell has been Assessor of the town of Columbus for two terms, was elected Chairman of the Town Board, in 1878, re-elected in 1879 and 1880. He now has a farm of 230 acres, Sec. 33, town of Columbus. Himself and wife are members of the M. E. Church. Their children are as follows : Luella, now the wife of Calvin J. Fairbanks, and lives in the town of Hampden ; Ada E., now the wife of Franklin Feelyater, and lives in the town of Columbus ; Arthur L. and Milton F., at home.

HON. JAMES T. LEWIS. Searching the streets of Athens with a lantern, Diogenes illumined a truth of his own discovering, namely, that honest men are a nation's rarest as well as most precious jewels, and we have discovered that of those who shine in the crown of the republic, none have a higher worth than the faithful administrators of the law. Prominent on the roll of true and good men, we find the name of James T. Lewis, a native of Clarendon, N. Y. He was born on the 30th of October, 1819, and is the son of Shubael Lewis and Eleanor Robertson. His grandfather, Samuel Lewis, lived in Brimfield, Mass. His father, a native of New England, was born on the 27th of February, 1783, and grew up from a poor boy, with a spirit of self-reliance and strong hope, and by his sterling qualities commanded universal respect. He was a man of sturdy enterprise, and acquired large estates both in New York and Wisconsin. He was thrice married—first, on the 29th of January, 1815, and the second time on the 15th of April, 1835, to Parna Nichols, who was born on the 10th of April, 1798. She was a lady of the truest womanly qualities, a devoted wife and all that a mother could be to the children placed under her care. Her pure life was devoted to the welfare of her family, and to the influence of her teachings and example the subject of this sketch to-day feels himself largely indebted for the success of his life. His third marriage was to Mary Bugbee. He died at the advanced age of 78 years. The mother of our subject, a lady of Scotch descent, died on the 8th of October, 1834. Of Mr. Lewis' brothers and sisters, William L. was born Oct. 19, 1815, and was married Oct. 7, 1842, to Miss Eliza Ann Martin, of Clarendon, N. Y. ; Shubael R. was born Nov. 3, 1817 ; was a distinguished soldier in the Mexican War—the first to scale the walls of Chapultepec, and for his gallant conduct on the field was presented with a sword ; married, Aug. 18, 1839, to Mrs. Sarah Ann (Nichols) Brown, widow of Harvy Brown, M. D. ; died in August, 1856. Hiram W. was born January 13, 1823 ; married Sept. 2, 1847, to Miss Melissa P. Tousley. Mary Jane was born Sept. 6, 1825 ; married Oscar A. Harris. Andrew J. was born May 23, 1828 ; died January 20, 1840. Lydia A. was born Sept. 22, 1831 ; died Oct. 12, 1834.

James T., the third son, after receiving a common-school education, completed a course of English classical study in Clarkson Academy and Clinton Seminary, in New York, and, in 1842, began the study of law with Gov. Selden, of Clarkson. He afterward removed to Wisconsin, and, in 1845, was admitted to the bar of the United States District Court, and subsequently to the Supreme Court of the State.

Declining the gift of an eligible law office offered him by influential friends, if he would settle in Clifton, N. Y., he decided more wisely, and established himself in Columbus, his present home. At the age of 26, he was married to Miss Orlina M. Sturges, daughter of a prominent and successful merchant of Clarendon, N. Y., and by her had four children—Henry T., deceased at the age of 16 months; Selden J., named after Gov. Selden, of Clarksou, N. Y.; Charles R., named after Hon. Charles D. Robinson, of Green Bay, Wis., and Anna L. Mr. Lewis, a man of superior executive ability, rapidly rose to the successive positions of District Attorney, County Judge, member of the Constitutional Convention which formed the organic law of the State, member of the General Assembly, State Senator, member of the Court of Impeachment, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of State and Governor. As Secretary of State, it was truly said of him, "He has been prompt, methodical and systematic in all the departments of his office; a true man in every sense of the word, kind and gentlemanly in his department and possessing great executive ability." When elected to this office, he received every vote cast in the city of his residence, and, when elected Governor, in 1863, received a majority of 25,000, by far the largest ever accorded to any candidate for that office. The nation at this time being engaged in civil war, Gov. Lewis felt that for the time political divisions should cease; that all loyal men, forgetting party strifes, should rally around our country's flag, and save it from dishonor; that rebellion should be crushed by hearty co-operation and earnest sacrifice, and that peace should be restored. Sincerely impressed with this belief, he severed party ties and proclaimed: "He who is not a faithful friend to the Government of his country in this trying hour is no friend of mine," and spared neither time, talent nor money in sending troops to save the national capital.

Especially was his attention engaged in caring for the needs of the sick. He repeatedly visited camps and hospitals, making long and careful tours, and finally secured a special order from the Surgeon General of the United States for the transfer of all the sick and wounded soldiers from Wisconsin to hospitals within their own State, a privilege never before granted. Under his administration, hospitals were established, a soldiers' orphans' home was founded, and families of soldiers provided for. Through his influence, multitudes of suffering "boys in blue" were nursed back into life, in hospitals blessed with comforts, blessed by the prayers of mothers and wives at home; the dying hours of brave men were soothed, and men who had risked their lives for a great principle, and bereaved families, were provided with homes. The marked but not forgotten graves of our slain heroes dot the hillsides of the South; but, had it not been for the noble work of Gov. Lewis, hundreds who are among the living to-day would live only in the desolate, sorrowing hearts of those who loved them. By personal efforts, he obtained credit from the Government for soldiers furnished, and reduced the quota of Wisconsin at one time from 19,032 to 15,311, and was especially successful in securing the claims of his State against the Government, amounting in all to more than half a million of dollars. In 1864, by his wise adjustment of affairs, the State tax was reduced several hundred thousands of dollars; and, during his entire administration, he did not use one dollar of the Military Contingent Fund. At his request, the Legislature declined to vote the usual appropriation of $5,000 as a general contingent fund for the use of the Executive. He worked for the good of his State, and was economical, systematic and prompt in all his departments of duty. His large-heartedness and sympathy went out to all; yet, in the administration of justice, he was inexorable. As a man and public officer, Gov. Lewis possessed the unlimited confidence of the people, and through his varied career has maintained a name and character above suspicion or reproach. Figuring little in proclamations, orders and telegraphic communications, he performed his duties quietly and without ostentation; unselfish and self-denying in all his actions, he labored for the welfare of his State and nation. Standing upon noble principles, he felt that he needed no other platform; the ends which he aimed at were his country's, God's and truth's. A marked feature in the character of Gov. Lewis, and one worthy of imitation, is his generous benevolence. Possessed of a liberal competence, he devotes a large portion of his annual income to the building and support of universities, colleges, academies and educational interests, thus exerting a silent but lasting influence for good by developing the minds and morals of his country's youth. He has been a liberal contributor to churches and benevolent enterprises of various kinds, and in all that pertains to the welfare of his city, or the good of his fellowmen, he is ready to lend a cheerful support. In 1864, Lawrence University conferred the degree of LL. D., an honor which was justly bestowed and has been worthily worn. He recently received a dispatch from Washington tendering him the office of Commissioner of Internal Revenue; he, however, declined the honor, owing to other duties which require his constant attention. Mr. Lewis has been several times offered similar offices, but has uniformly declined.

WILLIAM L. LEWIS, Columbus; was born at Clarendon, Orleans Co., N. Y., in 1815; he is the son of Shubael Lewis and Eleanor Robertson, who are mentioned in the sketch given of his brother, Hon. James T. Lewis. Mr. Lewis received the greater part of his education in the common schools of his native State. In 1842, he began merchandising at Bergen, Genesee Co., and after continuing there two years he removed his business to Clarendon, Orleans Co., and there continued the same and also milling, for several years; disposing of his interest at Clarendon, in 1853, he removed to Hawley, Orleans Co., and was proprietor of the Hawley Mills for three years; he, with his family, emigrated to Wisconsin, in the spring of 1857, locating at Columbus; he has since been engaged in farming, lumbering and the grain trade. He was employed as clerk in the Secretary of State's office, in 1863, with his brother, during his term of office, and by Mr. Fairchild, in 1864. Returning to Columbus, in 1865, he has devoted his time to superintending his farm of 312 acres, in the town of Columbus. He was married in 1841, to Miss Eliza Ann Martin, of Clarendon, Orleans Co., N. Y.; their children are Martin J., who now lives in Dakota; Adella, now the wife of D. M. Inmann, and lives in Dakota; Anna E. now Mrs. M. D. Thompson, of Vermillion, Dakota; Jennie, deceased; Lillie, now at home with parents. Mr. Lewis' family is connected with the Baptist Church.

MATTHEW LOWTH, farmer; Secs. 10 and 15; P. O. Columbus; was born in County Meath, Ireland, May 6, 1819; when 7 years old, he, with his parents, Edward and Alice, nee McCabe, emigrated to America; they settled in Aug. 1826, in the town of Tinmouth, Rutland Co., Vt., where his mother died in the following December; his father followed mining there for a number of years; after the death of his mother, he and his brother were put out to live with American families of Vermont, and with them he made his home until 21 years of age; at the age of 18 years, he entered upon a three years' apprenticeship to the molder's trade, in the Grauger Stove Works, at Pittsford, Rutland Co.; he next came to Albany, N. Y., where he worked at his trade awhile, and later to Troy, N. Y., where he followed the same for a time; he emigrated to Wisconsin in 1844, and stopped a year with his cousin, John Lowth, at Troy, Walworth Co.; Nov. 9, 1845, he removed to his log house, in the town of Lowell, Dodge Co., Wis., where he made his home until the fall of 1849; disposing of his interest in Dodge Co. at that time, he entered a farm of 120 acres, in the town of Columbus, Columbia Co., and returned to Troy, N. Y., and continued his trade at Mechanicsville for two years; coming again to Columbus, Wis., in 1851, he settled on his farm, which has since been his home; he devoted the winter seasons of the first eleven years after his permanent settlement in Columbia Co., to teaching, and the summers in farming. Mr. Lowth was elected Assessor of the town or village of Columbus, in 1856; he has served three terms as Chairman of the Town Board, and in 1879 was elected a member of the Wisconsin Assembly, from the Second Assembly District of Columbia Co. He was married, in 1843, to Miss Mary Glavin, a native of Cork, but an emigrant to America with parents, when about 2 years old, and settled at Troy, N. Y., where she was afterward married; their children are Edward, Alice Francis, Catharine, Thomas H.; Josephine, now the wife of Charles Hall, and lives at Spencer, Marathon Co., Wis., and Emma, at home.

OLIVER RODNEY LUEY, farmer; Sec. 20; P. O. Columbus; was born in Windsor Co., Vt., in 1824; he had the advantage of the common school in his boyhood, where he received his education; he devoted his attention to farming in Vermont, until 1844, whence he emigrated to Wisconsin; he found employment at farm work at Mr. James' in the town of Richmond, Rock Co., for two summers; in November, 1845, he came to the town of Columbus, Columbia Co., bought a claim of 160 acres in the southeast quarter, Sec. 20; and in February, 1846, he obtained a deed to 40 acres of it and pre-empted the remainder; he at once built his pioneer log house, at first only 16x16, but was afterward enlarged, which was his home for fifteen years; his farm now numbers 250 acres, and instead of his log house, a commodious residence decorates his premises. Mr. Luey has been a member of the Town Board for two or three years. He was married, May, 1848, to Miss Sarah, daughter of Robert and Polly (Berry) Miller, a native of Windham Co., Vt.; her mother died there in 1870; her father came to Wisconsin in 1876, and now makes his home at Mr. Luey's. Mr. and Mrs. Luey have five children, as follows: Charlotte, now the wife of Frank Hopkins, lives at Gary, Dakota; Edwin, now at Rochester, Minn.; Cheney O., Walter R. and Cornelia, at home.

ADAM McCONNELL, Deputy Sheriff, Columbus; was born in County Armagh, Ireland, in 1824; he is the son of James McConnell, who came as an emigrant to America, in 1845, and located at Columbus, Wis., where he afterward died. Mr. McConnell, the subject of this sketch, spent four years in a constabulary in County Kildare, Ireland, and was on duty at the Clontarf when the notice was given by Daniel O'Connell to hold one of the monster meetings at that place, in 1843, and was present when he was arrested. Remaining there in that line of duty until 1847, he then resigned. May 3, 1847, he was married in the town of Kilcock, County Kildare, to Miss Anna Walsh, immediately after which, they sailed for America, and landed in New York City about the 1st of July following; they came thence to the town of Columbus, Columbia Co., Wis., and located on a farm, which was their home until 1865; then removed to the city of Columbus, where they have since resided. Mr. McConnell was appointed Deputy Sheriff of Columbia Co. for two years, by P. P. Pool; was re-appointed by Mr. H. A. Russell, during his term of office, and again appointed by Mr. Jonas Conklin, which position he now holds; he was a member of the Town Board of Supervisors for two years; was Village and City Marshal for Columbus, six or eight years. Their children are Anna M., now the wife of R. M. C. Turner, and lives in Philadelphia; Thomas H., now a clerk in R. W. Chadbourn's Bank, at Rochester, Minn.; Charles H., a clerk in the First National Bank, at Leadville; Morris J., now in a store at Birds' Island, Minn.; Jennie, at home. Mrs. McConnell is a member of the Congregational Church.

JAMES McTIERNAN (deceased), was born in County Leitrim, Ireland, about 1806; he was brought up as a farmer's son, in his native county; when about 30 years old, he emigrated to America, and lived in Vermont and Massachusetts for several years; in 1847, he with his family removed to Columbia Co., Wis., and located on a farm of 60 acres on Sec. 25, which he bought of William Drake, and afterward purchased 42 acres, making his farm 102 acres on that section; here he made his home till his death, Nov. 2, 1865. He was married in 1850 to Miss Mary, daughter of Thomas and Margaret Kelly; a native of County Wicklow, Ireland, born in 1828, and came to America in 1849. Their children are Maria, now the wife of Edward Lay, and living in Kansas; John, at home; Margaret, at home; Bridget, in Chicago; Thomas, at home; Annie (deceased); Katie and Ellen, at home. The family is connected with St. Jerome's Catholic Church.

JOSEPH S. MANNING, proprietor of flouring-mill; was born in Plainfield, N. J., in 1819; his father dying shortly after his birth, his mother soon removed with him to Middletown, Monmouth Co., N. J., where he spent much of his time at school till 14 years of age; he then went to New York City, and began with an uncle as clerk in a dry-goods store; remaining there till 1844, he came to Wisconsin, and located at Kenosha (then Southport), where he clerked in a dry-goods store for three years; he removed thence to the town of Courtland, Columbia Co., where he followed farming for two years, and then came to Columbus, purchased the Ludington mill, and has since been its proprietor. Mr. Manning was a member of the City Council for three years; he has been a member of the Masonic Fraternity for twenty-five years. In 1847, he was married to Miss Mary, daughter of James and Julia Campbell, of Southport (now Kenosha), Wis.; they have one daughter, Julia M., now the widow of the late H. K. Dodge, dec'd. Mrs. Manning is a member of the Congregational Church; Mrs. Dodge is a member of the Episcopal Church. Mrs. Manning's brother, Benjamin Campbell, enlisted in the 6th W. V. I., at Milwaukee, in 1861, and was with his regiment till it reached Baltimore, Md., where he died from physical exhaustion caused by the measles.

ISAAC MERRIAM, dealer in lime, coal, brick, plaster, etc., etc., Columbus; was born in Franklin Co., N. Y., in 1811; he is the youngest of a family of seven children, whose parents, Benjamin and Sally (Kendall) Merriam, were natives of Connecticut, but removed to Franklin Co., N. Y., about 1810; his father dying when he was quite young, he was soon compelled to earn his own living as best he could; and being thus early in life deprived of his home, he sought employment at farm work from friends and neighbors; coming to Wisconsin in 1847, he located at Watertown, where he followed the carpenter and joiner's trade, to which he became apprenticed in his native county at the age of 21 years; seven years later (1854), he removed to the town of Lowell, Dodge Co., where he followed agriculture for nearly ten years; in the spring of 1863, he came with his family to the city (then village) of Columbus, where, in 1866, he began dealing in lime, coal, etc., and has since continued the same. At Cornwall, Addison Co., Vt., in 1847, he was married to Miss Lucinda S. Goodrich, a native of that county; their children are: Mary H., a graduate of Wayland University, of Beaver Dam, Wis., and now a teacher in the public schools of Milwaukee; Lucy M.; Sarah I., a teacher in the public schools of this city; Jesse I., now a printer at Alexandria, Dak. Mr. Merriam and family are members of the Baptist Church.

HENRY MORSE, farmer, Sec. 24; P. O. Columbus; was born in the town of Halfmoon, Saratoga Co., N. Y., in 1814. His father, John E. Morse, was born in Dutchess Co., N. Y.; his mother, Rebecca Palmer, was also a native of York State. At the age of 18 years, he began the carpenter and joiner's trade, which he afterward continued in Saratoga and Genesee Cos. till 1859; emigrating then to Columbus, Wis., he stopped in the village one year, then located on a farm on Sec. 24, town of Columbus, where he and his son together own 240 acres. He was married in 1837 to Miss Minerva, daughter of F. C. Farnham, a native of Washington Co., N. Y.; her father came to Columbus, Wis., in 1858, and died here in 1879. Mr. and Mrs. Morse have two children—V. C., now with his father on the farm; Mary, now the wife of Eli Thaire, who lives in Minnesota. Mr. Morse was elected Assessor of the town in 1877, and re-elected in 1878-80.

STEDMAN S. NEWTON, dealer in musical instruments, sewing machines and jewelry, Columbus; was born in Tioga Co., Penn., in November, 1850. His father, Lewis Newton, was a native of Vermont; his mother, Emily Egbert, was born in New York; his father and grandfather John D. Egbert, came with their families as emigrants to Wisconsin, and landed at the house of Mr. Josiah Foster, in the town of Arlington, Columbia Co., in April, 1854; they soon located in that town, and Mr. Egbert was, for several years, a prominent citizen of that town; he died there about 1862 or 1863; he did much in the way of making deeds and drawing papers of various kinds for the early settlers, and was a man to whom all looked for counsel. Mr. and Mrs. Newton had a family of six children—three sons and three daughters; three of them now live in this County. Stedman S., the subject of this sketch, was the fourth child, and spent his time on his father's farm and at district school till 1868, removing then to Poynell, where, in 1870, he began clerking in a drug store, and also had charge of the post office at that place; in 1871, he entered the State University and completed his studies there in 1872; returning then to Columbia Co., he taught at Dekorra for a term of five months; in the spring of 1873, he began dealing in machines and musical instruments at Poynette and Lodi; in the fall of 1876, removed the main portion of his business to Columbus, though he still continues those points as branch houses to the business here; he added a stock of jewelry to his trade in the fall of 1878, and has since carried on the three lines of trade. In February, 1877, he was married to Miss Della, daughter of Lewis and Emeline Cave, a native of Staten Island, but an emigrant to Poynette, Wis., in 1854. Mr. and Mrs. Newton are members of the M. E. Church; he is a member of the Masonic Fraternity.

GERD H. NIEMEYER, farmer, Secs. 22 and 27; P. O. Columbus; was born at Hanover, Germany, in September, 1820. His mother, Dorothea Rolls, died when he was only 5 years old, and his father, Gerd H. Niemyer, when he was 8. An orphan boy at that early age, he was forced to leave off his studies and seek some employment by which he could earn his own living; he went to live with a neighbor farmer, where he learned that honest industry is the true source of wealth, and upon that principle he has ever acted; he emigrated to America in 1848, and located at Milwaukee, Wis., where he followed laboring for five years, and then removed to Portage, where he lived two and one-half years; he next removed to the town of Columbus, Columbia Co., and located on a farm of 40 acres on Sec. 16; a year later, he sold that farm and bought one of 120 acres on Secs. 17 and 20, where he lived for two years; disposing then of that, he bought another of 100 acres on Sec. —, and made his home there till 1876, whence he removed to his present one of 140 acres on Secs. 22 and 27, where he has since lived. He was married, in 1853, to Miss Mary Alfs, a native of Germany, but an emigrant to America in 1848; their children are Eliza Mary and Fred. They are members of the Lutheran Church.

ASA PERKINS, farmer, Sec. 19; P. O. Columbus; was born in the town of Ira, Cayuga Co., N. Y., in 1826; he was educated there in the common schools, and devoted his time to farming there till 1849, when he emigrated to Wisconsin, and entered a farm of 120 acres, on Sec. 19, town of Columbus, Columbia Co., in June, having just 2 shillings left after paying the purchase money; he returned to New York in the following fall for the winter, and a year from that time, came again to Wisconsin, and located at Janesville, where he worked by the month on a farm for two years, after which he made his home there most of the time for another year; he settled permanently on his farm in 1853, and has increased it to 166 acres. Mr. Perkins is one of the committee on the extension of the North-Western Railway from Granville to Lodi, Wis., and has taken an active part in the enterprise; in 1870, he took a trip to California, thence via the coast to Portland, Ore., and up the Columbia River to Waulula, and from there by stage to Walla Walla, Washington Territory, whence, after a fortnight's sojourn, he returned the same way to his home in Wisconsin. He was married, in 1853, to Miss Sarah C., daughter of Reuben and Nancy George, a native of Indiana, but an emigrant to Wisconsin with her father in 1847, her mother having previously died in Illinois; their children are: Mary A., born in 1854, and married to Stephen B. Marvin in November, 1875, and now lives at Redwood, Minn.; Randall K., born in 1856, and now at Redwood, Minn.; Francis F., born in 1858, now at home; Charles M., born in 1860, and Arthur R., born in 1866. Mr. and Mrs. Perkins are members of the M. E. Church.

JOHN PETERS, farmer, Secs. 22 and 15; P. O. Columbus; was born in Prussia in 1817; he came to America in 1853, and lived five years at Milwaukee, Wis., and, in 1857, he came to the town of Columbus, Columbia Co., where, in 1857, he bought a farm of 60 acres; selling that in 1866, he bought his present one of 120 acres in Secs. 22 and 15. He was married in 1850, to Miss Louisa Harms, a native of Germany; their children are Henry, Charles, William, Mary, and one adopted daughter, Emma. They are members of the Lutheran Church.

JOHN PRIEN, manufacturer of wagons and buggies, and agent for all kinds of agricultural and farming implements, Columbus; was born in Mecklenburg in 1824; at the age of 21 years, he began the wagon-maker's trade in his native country, and continued the same there till 1852; emigrating then to America, he located in Milwaukee, Wis., and followed his trade there for five years; he came to Columbus in 1857, and has since carried on the business of a wagon manufacturer. In 1853, he was married to Miss Ernestina Krentzfeld, a native of Germany. They have one daughter—Mary Charlotte. They are members of the Lutheran Church.

JOHN M. G. PRICE, of the firm of Price & Henderson, Columbus; was born in Norfolk Co., Upper Canada, in 1835; he received his earlier education in the common schools and academies of his native country, but completed his studies at the Lawrence University of Delaware Co., N. Y., in 1860; he came to Beaver Dam, Wis., in 1856, and clerked in a dry-goods store for two years; then, after completing his studies at the University, returned to Beaver Dam, and continued clerking for two years longer; in 1862, he began clerking for D. E. Bassett, at Danville, Wis., and, in August, 1864, came to Columbus, where, in January, 1865, he formed a copartnership with Bassett & Davies, in the firm of Bassett, Davies & Price, and continued business for about seven years; he removed to Milwaukee in 1873, and for three years was engaged in the wholesale tea trade; returning to Columbus in 1876, he formed a copartnership with J. T. Henderson, under the firm name of Price & Henderson, lumber merchants. Mr. Price has been a member of the City Council for two terms. He was married in November, 1865, to Miss Frances A., daughter of Thomas Egeleston, of Fox Lake, Dodge Co., Wis.; their children are George W. and Harry A. They attend the Congregational Church; Mr. Price is a member of the Masonic Fraternity.

GRIFFITHS ROBERTS, of the firm of Roberts & Thiede, manufacturers of wagons, farm machinery, etc., etc., Columbus; was born in Caernarvonshire, North Wales, in 1845, and began the blacksmith's trade when 11 years old. He came to America in 1868, and located at Columbus, Wis., and worked at the trade with Owen Jones for some time. In 1871, he formed a copartnership with Mr. Thiede, and established the present firm of which he is a member. He was married, in 1871, to Miss Sarah Williams, of Dodge Co., Wis. Their children are Rece and John. They are members of the Welsh Calvinistic Church.

GEORGE ROBINSON, Columbus; was born in Worcester Co., Mass., in 1824. His parents, John and Nancy Robinson, were natives of County Armagh, Ireland, but were early emigrants to Massachusetts, where his father afterward died. His mother died in Portage, Wis. Mr. Robinson came to Wisconsin, in October, 1843, and located at Kenosha. In May, 1844, he came to the town of Columbus, Columbia Co., and settled on a farm, which was his home for ten years; selling his farm at that time, he bought another in the same town, where he now owns 240 acres; this he made his home most of the time till 1878, when he moved to this city, where he has since resided. He is now one of the three first settlers of the town who now reside in this city. His brother, Isaiah Robinson, was a pioneer lawyer of Columbus, and died in New York City in 1856, while on a visit East. Mr. Robinson was elected Sheriff of Columbia Co. in the fall of 1854, served during the years of 1854 and 1856. Politically, he is a Republican. In September, 1855, at Wyocena, Wisconsin, he was married to Miss Elizabeth R., daughter of Charles and Charlotte Woodward; she was born in Pembroke, South Wales, and died in Columbus in March, 1878, leaving the following children—Nelson, Frances A., Bertha E., and an adopted son, George R. Mr. R. and family are connected with the Congregational Church.

NEWTON A. ROBINSON, Columbus; was born at Glens Falls, Warren Co., N. Y., Aug. 19, 1828. His father, William Robinson, was a native of Rhode Island, but removed to New York in an early day; his mother, Lydia Warner, was a native of York State. Mr. Robinson began clerking in a store at Glens Falls, when 15 or 16 years old, and remained there in that business till 1850; going then to Granville, Washington Co., N. Y., he clerked for five years. In 1855, he emigrated to Dodge Co., Wis., and stopped at the village of Randolph for the winter. In the spring of 1856, he went to Danville, Dodge Co., where he clerked two and a half years for D. E. Bassett, and one year for E. H. Silsbee; coming then to Columbus, he began clerking for Davies & Axtell in their dry goods store, and remained with that house till 1869. He afterward clerked one year for Fuller Brothers, and three years for Farnham, Allen & Co., grain dealers, and in January, 1879, he began as bookkeeper for J. S. Manning, with whom he remained till May, 1880. Mr. Robinson was Town Treasurer in 1869, Town Clerk in 1872. He was married, in 1860, to Miss Frances J., daughter of Daniel Malls, the proprietor of the first Columbus journal; she died Dec. 5, 1875, leaving one son—Newton F.

REV. FATHER HENRY J. ROCHE, Priest of St. Jerome's Catholic Church, Columbus; born in County Wexford, Ireland, in 1834. He received his early education in the common schools of his native county, and when 14 years old, with parents, he came to America, and located at Utica, N. Y.; three years later, they removed to the town of Fox Lake, Dodge Co., Wis. In 1852, he entered the University known as the "St. Mary's of the Lake," Chicago, where he pursued his classical studies for three years; after which he took up the study of philosophy, physics, and also theology at St. Francis, of Milwaukee, where he completed his studies in 1859. He was ordained to the priesthood by Bishop Henni, of Milwaukee, in December, 1859, and in 1860 entered upon the work at Beloit, Wis., as Assistant Priest of St. Thomas', Catholic; remaining there one year, he was next sent by the Bishop, as Priest of St. Andrew's, of Delavan, Wis.; three years later, he came to Richmond, Dodge Co., where he organized an entirely new society, built St. Joseph's Church, and remained there nine years. In December, 1872, he came as Priest of St. Jerome's to Columbus, and has since supplied the parish of St. Augustine's, at Wyocena, and St. Patrick's, of Doylestown, and also St. Mary's, of the town of Calamus, Dodge Co.

EMIL L. RUPNOW, farmer, Sec. 34; P. O. Columbus; was born in Prussia in 1819; his parents, John D. and Regina Rupnow, both died when he was quite young. Though early in life deprived of that good counsel which only comes from a parent, he resolved to gain an education that would fit him for any responsible position he might be called upon to fill. He began his studies at the public schools, and continued them at the College of Neuzelle—the State institution in the Province of Brandenburg—from 1837 to 1841, when he graduated in the teacher's course; he was then a teacher in the Government employ till 1856, when he resigned. He sailed May 1, 1857, for America, and landed in New York sixteen days later; coming thence direct to Watertown, Wis., he was engaged as a teacher in the Lutheran School there for nine months. In the spring of 1868, he went to Jefferson, Wis., where he was Pastor of the Lutheran Church for six years; coming then, in 1864, to Columbus, he clerked for Mr. Whitney in the hardware store for five years; having purchased a farm of 132 acres in Sec. 34, town of Columbus, in March, 1863, he located on it in 1869, and has since made it his home. He was married in Germany, in 1844, to Miss Augusta R., a daughter of Charles and Caroline Schultz, and their children are Mary R., now the wife of Herman Hehmeyer, and living at Lagrange, Mo.; Maximilian, now a civil engineer on the railroad from Chippewa Falls to Spencer, Wis.

HEMAN SHERMAN, farmer, Sec. 4; P. O. Columbus; was born in Essex Co., N. Y., in 1828. His father, Amos D. Sherman, was born in Waterbury, Washington Co., Vt., Oct. 17, 1789, and made that his home till about 25 years old, when he removed to Essex Co., N. Y.; he was a soldier in the War of 1812, and for his services as such, now draws a pension from the Government; he is now 90 years old. His mother, Millie Handy, was a native of Pittsford, Rutland Co., Vt., and came to Essex Co., N. Y., with her parents prior to her marriage; she died April 15, 1850. Mr. Sherman is one of a family of twelve children—six sons and six daughters—three of whom now live in the State of New York, and one in Iowa. He spent his time in farming in Essex Co. till 1849, when he removed to Steuben Co., N. Y., where he engaged in lumbering for three years. In 1852, he immigrated to Columbia Co., Wis., and located on a farm on Sec. 4, town of Columbus, where he now owns 103 acres on Secs. 4 and 5. He has been a member of the Town Board for two years. He was married in March, 1851, to Miss Laura E., daughter of Charles and Caroline Loveless, a native of Essex Co., N. Y.; born Dec. 15, 1836. They have five children—Orlin D., who married Miss Marian Link, of Randolph, Dodge Co., Wis., and now lives in this town (Columbus); Albert R., at home; Eliza, now the wife of Charles Oliver, and lives at Winnebago City, Minn.; Frank and Clinton, at home.

T. CLARK SMITH, farmer, Sec. 3; P. O. Columbus; was born in Seneca Co., N. Y., in January, 1811; when a mere infant, his parents removed with him to Yates Co., N. Y., and located on a farm near Seneca Lake, where he lived till near 31 years of age; he emigrated to Wisconsin in 1842, and in June of that year, entered and located on a farm of 160 acres in Secs. 3, 7 and 8, in the town of Columbus, Columbia Co., and in the following September he went to Illinois, purchased some land, and in October took the boat at Chicago, was joined by his family at Milwaukee, and returned, via Buffalo, to Yates Co., for the winter; he came again, with his effects, to Columbia Co., in the spring of 1843, and found his log house occupied by Mr. Bushnell, who received him kindly, and soon gave up his possessions to him; he at once began to make improvements, and has since made that his home; his farm now consists of 446 acres in the town of Columbus, and 40 acres in the town of Calamus, Dodge Co.; his log house has been exchanged for a commodious residence, with all the improvements of a model farm. Mr. Smith was elected the first Sheriff of Columbia Co. in the spring of 1846, and in the fall of that year was re-elected for another term of two years; he has also been Chairman of the Town Board one term. He was married in April, 1868, to Mrs. Angeline Carpenter, nee Compton; they each have two children by former marriages.

THOMAS SMITH, farmer, Sec. 14; P. O. Columbus; was born in the County of Suffolk, England, in 1809; he followed farming in his native country till 1832; emigrated then to America, and landed at Quebec, May 1st of that year, and afterward located in Upper Canada, where he worked at farm labor till 1836; coming then to Michigan, where he remained but a short time, on account of having, unfortunately, lost his arm; he next went to Rochester, N. Y., and there was engaged in keeping a restaurant, from 1837 to 1846, when he came to Columbia Co., Wis., and located on a farm in the town of Hampden, Columbia Co., where he followed farming till 1861, when he removed to a farm of 160 acres, on Secs. 14 and 23, town of Columbus. He was married in 1853, to Asenath Laskey, of the town of Hampden, Columbia Co., Wis., but a native of Chenango Co., N. Y.; their children are Jerome H., Ellen M., Jesse L. and Charles T. Mrs. Smith is a member of the M. E. Church.

JACOB SMITH, merchant tailor, Columbus; was born in Yates Co., N. Y., May 20, 1815; son of Col. J. J. and Nancy Smith; his father was a native of New York, but his mother was born in Philadelphia; when 16 years of age, he entered upon an apprenticeship at the tailor's trade, in Eddytown, Yates Co.; one and one-half years later, he went to Dundee, N. Y., and there continued his trade for ten years; in June, 1843, with his brothers, T. C. and Lewis Smith, he landed at Milwaukee, as an emigrant to Wisconsin, and came thence to Columbus, where they arrived a week later; he invested in real estate, and located on a farm near the village, and for three years devoted his time to farming; in 1846, he opened the first merchant tailoring establishment in Columbus, and has continued that business most of the time since. In May, 1835, he was married to Miss Nancy, daughter of Joseph and Catharine Iretton, of Dundee, Yates Co., N. Y.; they had an infant son, deceased. They are members of the Presbyterian Church; Mr. Smith is a member of the Masonic Fraternity.

JOHN SWARTHOUT, druggist, Columbus; was born in Yates Co., N. Y., in 1819; he emigrated to Wisconsin in the fall of 1843, and located at Kenosha, and a year later (1844), he came to Columbus, Columbia (then Portage) Co.; returning in September, 1848, to Buffalo, N. Y., he purchased the first stock of drugs ever brought to Columbia Co., Wis.; reaching Columbus again, he opened the first drug store of this place, and has ever since continued in that business. He was elected the first Tax Collector of Columbia Co. in 1847-48; he was appointed Postmaster at Columbus, by President Grant, in 1872, and has been re-appointed to that office at the expiration of each term since that time. In 1853, he was married to Miss Mary A., daughter of Hiram and Sarah Swift, a native of Vermont; they had one daughter, Eva, now deceased. Mrs. Swarthout is a member of the Universalist Church.

CHARLES H. THOMAS, farmer and horse farrier, Sec. 8; P. O. Columbus; was born at Alabama, Genesee Co., N. Y., in 1840, and came with his parents, Merrit A. and Julia A. Thomas, to Wisconsin in 1847, and located on a farm in the town of Columbus, Columbia Co., where his parents lived till 1876, and then removed to Albert Lea, Minn., where they now reside. Mr. Thomas made his home with his parents on the farm till 18 years old, and then began farming and trading for himself; in 1860, he began the profession of a horse farrier, and has successfully practiced it through this section of the country most of the time since; in 1863, he bought a farm of 55 acres on Sec. 8, town of Columbus, which has since been his home. He joined the United States service in 1864, and was on detailed duty through the Southern States as a veterinary surgeon till February, 1865, when he returned to his home in Columbus. He was married, in 1859, to Miss Martha E., daughter of Charles Loveless, of the town of Columbus, but a native of the town of Maria, Essex Co., N. Y., and an immigrant to Wisconsin in 1851; their children are—Merrit, Clara A., Edwin S., Melvin J. and Nellie.

ALFRED TOPLIFF (deceased); was born in Westfield, Mass., Nov. 11, 1799; he was the youngest of a family of eight children, whose parents were John and Susanna (Jacobs) Topliff. Mr. Topliff devoted much of his earlier life to teaching in his native State, and, in the spring of 1844, he came to Columbus, Wis., but soon after located in the town of Hampden, and there went to work making improvements, and preparing a home for his family, who were then East; in 1846, he went back for his family, consisting of a wife and three daughters, and when he returned with them he found that he had been elected County Surveyor, an office which he held till the year 1870, when he resigned, but the instruments which he loved so well were not allowed to become rusty for want of use; many were the lines run and the roads laid out by him. Scarcely a year before his death, did he give up the profession that he had followed so long and faithfully; in 1851, he was elected a member of the Wisconsin Legislature and re-elected in 1852, proving himself to be an active, intelligent and honest member of that body; in 1855, he removed to the City of Columbus (then village) and resided here till his death, which occurred Nov. 3, 1879; his wife having died eleven years before him; he left a family of three daughters—Mrs. Chadbourn, Mrs. Waterhouse and an unmarried daughter. A writer who knew Mr. Topliff says: "It was always pleasant to meet the good old gentleman, kind, intelligent, courteous, a good word for everybody; always appearing to look on the bright side of the picture, and with that quaint humor of which he was so fond, and ever at his command, he was sure to dispel the gloom which might be upon his auditor, leaving him, for the time being at least, a transformed being, feeling better for having conversed with the good old man. He was a religious man in the true meaning of the term, nothing egotistical or pharisaical about him, but a true, intelligent belief in God and his Savior, guided and controlled him in the latter part of his earthly career."

REV. M. G. TODD, Pastor of the Universalist Church at Black River Falls, Elkhorn, and the parish of Wyoceña; was born at Homer, Cortland Co., N. Y., in 1821; he is the youngest son of eleven children, whose parents were Dan and Sarah Todd, natives of Connecticut, but were among the first settlers of Cortland Co., N. Y., where they afterward died. The Rev. Mr. Todd completed his studies at the Cortland Academy of Homer in 1843, and afterward removed to Geneva, Kane Co., Ill., where he engaged in teaching for five years, and then followed farming there for six years. Reduced in health, he came to Wisconsin for recuperation and located on a farm in the town of Merrimack, Sauk Co. Regaining his health, he entered upon the work of the ministry at Prairie du Sac in 1856; in 1857, he preached the first Universalist sermon at Lodi, Wis.; organized the society and was settled as its Pastor for five years; in the spring of 1862, he removed to Mazo Manie, Dane Co., where he organized the society and was Pastor two years. He was called to the chaplaincy of the 23d W. V. I., under Col. Guppy, in 1864, and remained with his regiment till the close of the war. Returning then to Mazo-Manie, he resumed his ministerial work there, and also organized a society and built the Universalist Church at Prairie du Sac; in February, 1866, he preached his first sermon at Columbus; organized the society and was settled as its Pastor in the following spring. After a successful pastorate of twelve years, much worn with labor, he resigned. Soon forming a circuit, including the parishes of Black River Falls, Elkhorn and Wyoceña, he has since supplied these places with regular services. At Homer, N. Y., in 1845, he was married to Miss Margaret Williams, who died at Geneva, Ill., in 1849, leaving two sons—Lewellyn and Willard. His second marriage was in 1850, to Miss Helen Parker, of Geneva, Ill.; they have three sons and two daughters—W. E., a graduate of the State University in 1876, and has since been Principal of the Lodi High School; D. Charles, a farmer in Sauk Co.; Miles E., now a student at the Columbus High School; Evelyn, a student at vocal music under the instruction of Miss Fannie Root, of Chicago; Myrtie, a student in the public schools of Columbus. Rev. Mr. Todd is a member of the Masonic fraternity; also of the Order of Good Templars, Temple of Honor, and S. of T., and of I. O. O. F.; has been R. W. G. Chaplain of the Order of the State.

JOHN TOPP, of the firm of John Topp & Bro., general merchants, Columbus; was born in Mecklenburg in 1840; he came to America with his parents, John F. and Anna Topp, and located at Columbus, Wis., in 1852, where his father afterward died; his mother now lives with him. Mr. Topp was educated at the public schools of Columbus; he devoted two summers to farming near this city, and, in 1859, began clerking in a general store in Columbus for B. Stern, continuing as such four years; he was then placed in charge of the business at this place by Mr. Stern; two years later, he formed a copartnership with his proprietor in the firm, John Topp & Co.; in April, 1866, his brother Charles, who had been managing the farm, formed a copartnership with him in the place of Mr. Stern, and they have since continued the business as John Topp & Bro. Mr. Topp has been a member of the City Council for one term. He was married in 1864 to Miss Mona, daughter of Henry and Louisa Schwieson, of Columbus, but anative of Mecklenburg; their children are Charles J., Henry J., Rudolph O. They are members of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Topp is also a member of the Masonic Fraternity.

WILLIAM T. TURNER, farmer and stonecutter; P. O. Columbus; was born in the town of Leeds, Yorkshire, England, in 1819; when 12 years of age, he entered upon an apprenticeship at the stonecutter's trade, which he afterward followed in Scotland, the Island of Jersey and other British possessions till 1847, emigrating then to America and landing in New York in March, 1847; he worked at his trade in Lockport, N. Y., for a short time; he came to Wisconsin in December following, stopped for the winter in Milwaukee, and, in the following spring, came to Columbus, Columbia Co.; he entered a farm of 160 acres, part of which lies in the town of Fountain Prairie, and part in the town of Courtland, Columbia Co., and devoted his time exclusively to farming till 1870; removing then to the city of Columbus, he opened a marble-shop and resumed his trade, which he has continued most of the time since. He was married in 1847 to Anna Marston, of Yorkshire; they have seven children—John, now a farmer in the town of Courtland; Joseph M., now Principal of the High School at Watertown, Wis.; William R., now in marble-shop in this city; Alice A., at home; Mary A., a teacher in Dodge Co.; Angeline D., a teacher in Columbia Co.; Emily M. The family is connected with the Universalist Church.

RICHARD D. VANAKEN, architect and builder, Columbus; was born in Ulster Co., N. Y., in 1830; at the age of 15, he became apprenticed to the carpenter and joiner's trade at Kingston, Ulster Co., and continued there until his removal to Wisconsin in 1856; locating at Columbus, he has since devoted his time to the business of an architect and builder, and has had the contracts for the erection of many of the most prominent buildings of this city and surrounding country; among them are the Lutheran, Episcopal and Universalist churches, three store buildings for Lueders & Krause, two for John Topp & Bro., two for C. Leitch, two for E. S. Griswold, one for H. Brown, the Union Bank; among the dwellings are those of F. Farnham, A. Sexton, L. Fuller, D. Fuller, — Fay, Allen, Mr. Erhart, Mr. Brinkers and many others of the city, several fine farm residences of the town of Columbus—not less than two hundred and sixty in all. Mr. Vanaken has been and is at this time a member of the City Council. He was married in 1851 to Miss Charlotte Echert, a native of Ulster Co., N. Y.; their children are Wilson, now at the trade with his father; Mary, now the wife of Jefferson Smith, and lives in the town of Columbus; Richard, a student at telegraphy. Mr. and Mrs. V. are members of the Universalist Church.

REV. HENRY VOGEL, Pastor of the Lutheran Church, Columbus; was born at Hof, Bavaria, April 2, 1842; he came with his parents, George and Christiana Vogel, to America in 1855, and located at Dubuque, Iowa; in the following year, he entered the Wartberg College, of Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, from which, as a theological student, he graduated in 1863; he was ordained to the holy ministry at Toledo, Ohio, in February, 1864, and entered upon the work as Assistant Pastor of St. John's Lutheran Church, of Toledo, soon after his ordination; in the fall of 1864, he was called to the Lutheran Church, at West Bend, Iowa, where he remained till 1867, when he accepted a call and removed to Madison, Wis.; remaining there till 1875, he was called to the church of Charles City, Iowa, whence, in 1876, he came as Pastor of Zion's Church, of Columbus. He was married in 1865 to Miss Augusta Gropp, of McGregor, Iowa; their children are Herman, Sophia and Leonard.

ENST VON BRIESEN, attorney at law, Columbus; was born at Bromberg, Prussia, in 1841. He was a soldier in guard artillery of the Prussian army from 1860 to 1868, and was commissioned First Lieutenant of his company in 1866, and served as such till his resignation in 1868. He sailed from Bremen for America in April, 1868, and landed in New York City the same month; six months later (September, 1868), he went to Chicago, where he followed clerking, and various kinds of business, till June, 1869; he went thence to La Salle, Ill., where he was foreman of the rolling mills till December of that year; returning then to Chicago, he continued clerking till 1871, when he removed to Cambria, Columbia Co., Wis.; there was engaged in merchandising till April, 1873; June following, he removed to Columbus, where he has since resided. In April, 1874, he was elected Justice, an office which he has since held. He was elected City Clerk in April, 1875, and has been re-elected to that office every year since that time. In February, 1879, he was appointed one of the Court Commissioners of Columbia County by Judge Alva Stewart, and in May, 1879, he was admitted to the bar. He was married in 1872, to Miss Margarethe Klappenbach, of Chicago, but a native of Texas; their children are Elizabeth, Henrietta, Ernst, and Richard. They are members of the Lutheran Church.

ORIN D. VOSBURGH, farmer, Sec. 29; P. O. Columbus; was born in the town of Aueram, Columbia Co., N. Y., in 1816; is the son of Richard A. Vosburgh and Catharine Thompkins, both of whom were natives of Columbia Co., N. Y., and both died there. Mr. Vosburgh was brought up as a farmer's son, and spent his time at that vocation in that county till 1846. He then emigrated to Lake Co., Ill., where he leased a farm for four years; though soon after he arrived there, he came to Columbus, Columbia Co., Wis., and entered his present farm of 160 acres on Sec. 29; then returned to Illinois, and in 1850, came again to Wisconsin, and located on his farm. He was married, April 8, 1846, to Miss Mary, daughter of Arthur and Sarah (Jennings) Holmes, a native of Greene Co., N. Y.; her parents were natives of Massachusetts; her mother died in Clark Co., Wis.; her father now lives in Columbus, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. Vosburgh have eight children—Henry, born June 7, 1847, enlisted in Co. C, 51st W. V. I., in 1864, under Col. Martin, was with his regiment in all its principal movements and battles till the close of the war, and is now at home; Charles F., born in Lake Co., Ill., Feb. 22, 1849, and now at Copake, Columbia Co., N. Y.; William, born March 28, 1851, died Nov. 18, 1869; Cornelia, born April 8, 1853, married Mr. Daniel Bath, died Aug. 23, 1878; James E., born March 10, 1855, now in Dane Co., Wis.; Edgar M., born Jan. 21, 1857; Fannie, born Feb. 3, 1859; Martin H., born July 10, 1861; Frank, born July 4, 1863; Everett, born Nov. 22, 1868, died Dec. 23, 1869; George W., born Nov. —, 1871.

HENRY A. WHITNEY, hardware merchant, Columbus; was born in Windham Co., Vt., April 20, 1819; is the son of Warren and Caroline Whitney, both of whom died in Windham Co.; Mr. Whitney was educated in the common schools of his native State, and at the age of 14 years, began peddling Yankee notions, which he continued a few years through that State; emigrating to Illinois in 1839, he located on a farm near Peoria, and there devoted his attention to agriculture for two years; removing then to Rockford, Ill., he continued farming another year; he came to Columbus, Wis., in 1844, built a small frame house where the Fox House now stands, and began merchandising in one part of it, and keeping tavern in the other; after conducting his business in these somewhat cramped circumstances for a few years, he sold out his hotel and erected another building near the first one, and continued his mercantile trade and livery business; about a year later, he began buying produce and drawing it to the lumber regions of this State, and taking in exchange therefor lumber, which he would raft down the Mississippi to St. Louis, losing nearly all his lumber by the breaking of his raft, one day, at Alton, Ill., where he beheld all he had in the world floating down the river, with no apparent destination; returning then to Columbus, he began drawing provisions to Green Bay, and trading with the Indians, he next bought back the hotel, and was again proprietor of the same for nearly three years, after which he turned his attention to buying wheat and hauling it to Milwaukee, returning either with his wagons loaded with goods for the merchants of his village, or emigrants for this section of the country; much of his travel being done with ox teams, it would require from ten to fourteen days to make a trip to Milwaukee and return; a few years later, he began dealing in live stock, and shipped the first car load from this part of the country; after filling Government contracts for stock two or three years, he then took up the hardware trade and livery business; he also built the Whitney House (now the Fox House), the roof of which was put on just eighteen days after the foundation was laid, and he was its proprietor for the next eight years; disposing of the hotel at that time, he has since continued the hardware trade. Mr. Whitney was Postmaster at Columbus in an early day; he has several times been a member of the Village Board and City Council. He now owns a farm of 300 acres in the town of Columbus; four farms in the town of Fountain Prairie—one of 280 acres, another of 308, a third of 130 acres, and the fourth of 120 acres; he also has three farms in the town of Otsego—the first contains 300 acres, the second 260, the third 130 acres; two in Dodge Co.—one of 200 acres, near Loss Lake, the other of 180 acres, in the town of Calamus; he also has two farms, of 120 acres each, near Augusta, Eau Claire Co., Wis., and one of 160 acres at Fairmount, Minn. Mr. Whitney was married to Miss Helen M., daughter of John and Nabby Pierson, of Rockford, Ill., but a native of Vermont. Their children are Alonzo and Orlina (now the wife of Mack Lee). Mr. W. has been a member of the Masonic Fraternity for twenty-five years.

JOHN WARNING, farmer, Sec. 28; P. O. Columbus; was born in Mecklenburg-Schwerin, in 1828, and came to America in 1854; located in the village of Columbus, where he worked four years for Mr. Edson; he then bought 45 acres on Sec. 8, where he lived till 1875, when he bought his present farm of 80 acres on Sec. 28, and has since made his home. He was married, in 1857, to Miss Mena Reilkneck, a native of Germany; they have one daughter—Eliza. They are members of the Lutheran Church.

JOHN WILLIAMS, druggist, Columbus; is a native of Breconshire, South Wales, born in 1842; his parents, John and Mary Ann (Davis) Williams, had a family of sixteen children, of whom he is the sixth; his father was a farmer in Wales, but John early turned his attention to the drug trade, and has since continued in it; in 1860, with his brother Thomas, he emigrated to America, and located at Adrian, Mich., for a short time, and in 1861 they came to Columbus, Wis., where he has since lived and continued the drug business; his brother afterward went to San Francisco, where he died March 17, 1880. Mr. Williams was married in 1863, to Miss Martha B. Smith, a native of Yates Co., N. Y., born in 1841, and came to Columbus, with her parents, in 1843. Their children are Sidney H., George E., and Charles H. They are members of the M. E. Church.

JOEL WINCH, retired; Columbus; was born at Bethlehem, Grafton Co., N. H., March 28, 1808; he is the son of Joel Winch and Sarah Sessions, natives of Massachusetts, but emigrated to Bethlehem, N. H., shortly after their marriage, at Boston, which occurred about 1806. Mr. Winch, our present subject, was the oldest of a family of eight children; he received an academic education, after which he devoted a part of his time to teaching, from the time he was 20 until 30 years of age; the remainder of the time he devoted to farming there until 1847; emigrating then to Wisconsin, he located on a farm in the town of York, Dane Co., where he lived until 1872, when he disposed of his realty, and removed to the village of Columbus, where he has since lived a more retired life. Sept. 29, 1835, he was married to Miss Louisa Moore, of Lunenburg, Essex Co., Vt.; they have three children—George D., born May 19, 1837 (studied medicine with Dr. Earl, of this city, and graduated from the Rush Medical College, with the class of 1863-64, but during his course he was commissioned and was Assistant Surgeon of a Wisconsin regiment; he subsequently returned to college, completed his studies, and was commissioned, by Gov. Lewis, Surgeon of the 36th W. V. I., with which he served until the close of the war; returning to his home, he removed in 1865, to Blue Earth Co., Minn., where he successfully practiced his profession until his death, which occurred July, 7, 1877; he was a man whom all held in the highest esteem professionally and as a citizen); Harriet, now the wife of Dr. E. Churchill, of this city; Mary, born Dec. 13, 1853, and died Sept. 24, 1868. Mr. Winch was Justice of the Peace and School Superintendent, in the town of York, Dane Co., for ten or twelve years. Mr. and Mrs. Winch are members of the Presbyterian Church.

B. J. YULE, farmer; P. O. Columbus; was born in Oneida Co., N. Y., in 1832; in 1844, his parents, John and Elizabeth Yule, emigrated with their family to Wisconsin, landing at Milwaukee, June 1; they came thence to Watertown, where they stopped one year; in 1845, they removed to the town of Elba, Dodge Co., and located on a farm where his parents afterward died. Mr. Yule was educated in the common schools of New York and Wisconsin, and has always devoted his attention to agricultural pursuits. He was married in 1856, to Miss Lucy Pomeroy, a native of Ohio, but an emigrant to Dodge Co., Wis., with her parents in 1850; they located in Calumet Co., Wis., soon after marriage, and made that their home until 1860; returning then to Elba, Dodge Co., he resided there on a farm until 1877, when he disposed of that and bought his present one of 213 acres, in Sec. 12, town of Columbus, Columbia Co., where he has since lived. Mr. and Mrs. Yule have five children, as follows: Ella H., William H., Harvey E., Nellie May and Hobart. They are members of the M. E. Church.

TOWN OF HAMPDEN.

ROBERT BELL, farmer; Secs. 10 and 11; P. O. Columbus; was born in the town of Brookfield, Waukesha Co., Wis., in 1845, and is the son of Francis and Mary Bell, natives of Ireland, but emigrated to America in 1838; his father now lives in Waukesha Co.; his mother died there in 1853; Mr. Bell lived with his father on the farm in Waukesha Co. until 1861, when, June 12 of that year, he enlisted in Co. B, of the 5th W. V. L., under Col. Amasa Cobb; he was with his regiment in all its movements and battles (losing only one day), until mustered out at Madison, Wis., July 28, 1864; returning then to his home, he spent a year on the farm, and in 1866, he went to Nevada, where he engaged in various kinds of businesses until June 28, 1868; coming then again to Wisconsin, he with his brother, Stewart C., purchased a farm of 182 acres, on Secs. 10 and 11, town of Hampden, Columbia Co. He was married in February, 1864, to Miss Flora M., daughter of Levi and Hannah Nelson, of this town. They have one daughter—Kittie.

STEWART C. BELL, farmer; Secs. 10 and 11; P. O. Columbus; brother and partner of Robert Bell, whose biography appears above, was born in Brookfield, Waukesha Co., Wis., in 1847; he went with his brother to Nevada in 1866, and was a book-keeper at Austin and White Pine, Nev., until 1868; returned, and, with his brother, bought the farm on which they now live. He was married, Nov. 15, 1869, to Miss Merzia, daughter of Eli Phillips, of the town of Brookfield, Waukesha Co.; their children are Francis E. and Alma.

NICHOLAS HENRY BOCK, farmer, Sec. 16; P. O. Columbus; was born in Hanover in 1819; his parents, John Peter and Anna Maria Bock, both died in Germany. Mr. Bock was a farmer in his native country, and, in 1854, with his brother, A. T., came to America; they stopped a year in Milwaukee, and then came to the town of Hampden; bought a farm of 160 acres on Sec. 16, where they now own 240 acres. He was married in Germany, in 1841, to Miss Anna S. D. Waltmann; their children are Augusta, the late Mrs. F. Duebore; Christopher Henry; Matilda Sophia, now the wife of Fredrick Duebore, and lives in this town; Anna Sophia Dorothea, now Mrs. William Ladwig, and lives in Hampden, and John Peter; they are members of the Lutheran Church.

WILLIAM BRADLEY, farmer and stock-dealer, Sec. 16; P. O. Columbus; was born in Yorkshire, England, March 4, 1826; his parents, Ralph and Elizabeth Bradley, both died in England. Mr. Bradley spent his time at farming in his native country till 1854, whence he emigrated to America; he stopped for three months at Utica, N. Y.; he went then to Essex Co., N. Y., where he followed farm labor for a short time, and afterward followed teaming in an ironstone mine for the firm of Lee, Sherman & Welby; he came to Milwaukee, Wis., in 1858, thence to the town of Columbus, where he made his home with T. Clark Smith for two months, removing then to the town of Hampden for nearly a year; he next went to the town of Otsego, where he lived till March, 1866, when he returned to Hampden and located on his present farm of 245 acres on Secs. 16, 17, and 21, where he has since lived. He was married, Oct. 10, 1859, to Miss Lockey, a daughter of Levi and Lucy (Force) Nelson, of the town of Otsego; their children are William J., Delbert (deceased), Martha M. and Elizabeth.

HENRY R. CLARK, farmer, Secs. 8 and 9; P. O. Hampden; was born in the town of Springport, Cayuga Co., N. Y., Oct. 5, 1819; his parents, Henry R. and Sally (Craft) Clark, were also natives of New York. Mr. Clark is the third of a family of seven children, and with his oldest brother, Albert, came to Wisconsin and located in the town of Darien, Walworth Co., where his brother died in 1847 or 1848. In June, 1846, he came to the town of Hampden, Columbia Co., and purchased a claim to some land on Secs. 6 and 7, where he made his home for a few years; then removed to his present home on Secs. 7, 8 and 9, where he now owns 600 acres. Mr. Clark has been for several terms and is at present a member of the Town Board. He was married, Sept. 28, 1850, to Miss Luey J., daughter of Elias and Elizabeth Ives, a native of Cortland Co., N. Y., born March 19, 1832, and came with her parents to the town of Milton, Rock Co., Wis., in 1845, and to Columbia Co. in 1850; they now live at Leeds Center. Mr. and Mrs. Clark's children are De Witt C., born May 6, 1852, died Sept. 8, 1862; Harriet E., born May 12, 1854, died Nov. 24, 1854; Elias H., born April 26, 1858, now married and lives on Sec. 8 of this town; Hattie M., born June 1, 1863; Albert J., born April 2, 1866; Lucius L., born March 27, 1868; Ezra A., born Aug. 17, 1872.

WILLIAM H. CURTIS, farmer, Sec. 1; P. O. Columbus; was born in the town of Maria, Essex Co., N. Y., in 1840; his father, Austin Curtis, was a native of Massachusetts; his mother, Polly Conn, was born in Vermont; he came with his parents in 1851 to Columbia Co., Wis., and located on a farm in the town of Otsego, but soon removed to the town of Hampden. Mr. Curtis enlisted in Battery M, of the 1st W. H. A., in August, 1864, and was with his regiment in all its movements till mustered out at Milwaukee in July, 1865; he returned then to Columbia Co., Wis.; in 1869, he went to Bremer Co., Iowa, for a short time. He was married, Jan. 24, 1868, to Miss Emma J., daughter of James Ortha Montgomery, of this town; their children are Elida M. and Carrie D. Mr. Curtis owns a farm of 76 acres on Sec. 1, town of Hampden, and 38 acres on Sec. 6, town of Columbus, upon which he settled in the spring of 1870.

JOHN DERR, farmer, Sec. 36; P. O. Columbus; was born in Bavaria in 1828, and came, with his parents, Joseph Derr and Magdaline Schmidt, and eight brothers and sisters, to America in 1845, leaving three in the old country; they landed in New York in November, and came thence to Detroit, Mich., whence, in the spring of 1846, they removed to the town of Hampden, Columbia Co., Wis., and located on a farm on Sec. 36, where his mother died in June, 1877; his father in August, 1879, leaving seven children, three of whom now live in this county. John, the oldest, and subject of this sketch, made his home with his father till 28 years old. He was then married, in October, 1855, to Miss Mary R., daughter of Joseph and Caroline Rinck, a native of Bavaria, but came with her parents to the town of Bristol, Dane Co., Wis., in 1848, where her father died in March, 1874; her mother now lives there. Mr. and Mrs. Derr located on Sec. 36, town of Hampden, soon after marriage; have since made it their home; he now owns a farm of 260 acres on Secs. 35 and 36. Mr. D. has been a member of the Town Board for several terms and has served as chairman of that body for four or five terms; he has been elected to various other minor offices, but did not accept them; their children are John, at home; Annie, who was married in February, 1879, to Henry Schey, and lives in this town (Hampden). Mr. and Mrs. Derr's family are members of the Catholic Church.

INGERBRIGT EVERSON, farmer, Sec. 5; P. O. Hampden; was born in Norway in 1833; his father, Ever Johnson, was also a native of that country and afterward died there; his mother, Sarah Halverson, came with him to Wisconsin in 1859, and made it her home till her death. Mr. Everson began the life of a sailor at the age of 18 and followed sailing on the North Sea for nine years; he came to America in 1859, and located in Green Lake Co., Wis., and, in 1860, he came to the town of Hampden, Columbia Co., and located on a farm of 125 acres on Secs. 5, 8, and 9, where he has since lived. He was married, in 1862, to Miss Ingeborg Holstenson, a native of Norway, but emigrated to America in 1857; their children are Hawkin, born in 1863; Henry, 1865; Sarah, 1867, now deceased; Gena, born 1869; Ida, 1871; John, 1873; Elizabeth, 1875; Annie, 1877; Herman, 1879. They are members of the Lutheran Church.

EDWARD FAIRBANKS, farmer, Secs. 24, 25 and 26, 290 acres; P. O. Columbus. The subject of this sketch is the son of Reuben Fairbanks and Lucinda Fish, natives of Massachusetts, but removed to Clinton Co., N. Y., prior to the war of 1812, where his mother afterward died; his father afterward removed to Iowa, where he died. Mr. Fairbanks was born in the town of Champlain, Clinton Co., N. Y., in 1819, and spent his time on the farm there till 1838; he then secured the position of Overseer of the Vermont & Massachusetts Railway, and, after serving in that capacity for some time, he became a conductor on the Ogdensburg road. In 1852, he emigrated to Columbia Co., Wisconsin, and located on a farm on Sec. 25, town of Hampden, where he has since devoted his time to agriculture and stock-raising. Mr. Fairbanks has been Chairman of the Town Board for four terms. He was married, in 1850, to Miss Mary J., a daughter of Samuel and Dolly Long, a native of the town of Champlain, Clinton Co., N. Y.; their children are Ellen M., now the wife of H. Hall, and lives in this town; Calvin J., who married Miss Ella Leffingwell, and now lives on the farm; Florence E., now Mrs. David Jones, and lives at home.

IRA H. FORD, farmer, Sec. 13; P. O. Columbus; was born in the town of Granville, Addison Co., Vt., in 1828; his father, Capt. Caleb Ford, was born in Connecticut; was a soldier in the war of 1812, and was among the first settlers of Granville, where he died in 1852; his mother, Roxina Lamb, was born in Addison Co., and died in 1877. Ira H., our subject, went to California in 1852, where he engaged in mining a short time, then in the dairy business two and a half years; in October, 1855, he came to Columbia Co., Wis., bought a part of his present farm, and has since made this his home; he now owns 320 acres on Secs. 14 and 27. In the fall of 1862, he raised a military company in his neighborhood, which afterward became Co. I, 18th W. V. I.; he enlisted as a private, but was elected First Lieutenant, and was with his regiment in all the principal battles and movements until taken prisoner at the battle of Shiloh, April 6, 1862, and taken as such to Memphis, Mobile, Montgomery, and to a place in Georgia, where he made an attempt to escape, but was chased down by bloodhounds, and kept in chains five months; was taken to Andersonville, Madison, Ga., Columbus, S. C., and to Libby Prison, where he was paroled in November, 1862, and at once rejoined his regiment, though did not receive his exchange papers until the following March; he was promoted Captain of his company, in February, 1863, and served as such until August, 1864, when he resigned, came home and enlisted in Battery M, 1st W. H. A., was elected Captain and served with the Army of the Potomac, until the close of the war, and was mustered out at Alexandria, Va., in June, 1865. Mr. Ford was elected a member of the Wisconsin Assembly, from the Second District of Columbia Co., in 1867, and re-elected in 1868; he was appointed to fill a vacancy in the County Board, from his district, in 1869, and elected a member of the Board in 1870; member of Town Board and other minor offices.

DANIEL J. HAINS, farmer, Sec. 1; P. O. Otsego; was born in Westchester Co., N. Y., in 1831, and is the son of Sylvester H. and Jane Hains, both of whom were natives of New York. Mr. Hains came with his parents to Wisconsin, in September, 1839, and located on a farm in the town of Koshkonong, Jefferson Co.; in 1843, they removed to the town of York, Dane Co., where his father deeded the first piece of land in that town; his mother died there in January, 1850; his father lived there for twenty-five years, now resides in Turner Co., Dakota. Daniel J., our present subject, made his home on the farm in the town of York, until 1852, when he went to Placer Co., Cal., where he engaged in mining, until 1856; returning then to Dane Co., Wis., he continued farming there until 1863, then removed to the town of Hampden. He enlisted in 1864, Co. M, of the W. H. A., under Capt. I. H. Ford, and partook in all the principal movements of his regiment, until mustered out at Alexandria, Va., in June, 1865, when he returned to Hampden. He was married, in 1858, to Miss Mary, daughter of Hugh Kelley, of the town of Springvale, Columbia Co., Wis.; their children are Alberto, Viola, Clarence, Marian, Edith, Ellen. Mr. Hains has held the office of Assessor for nine years, and that of Justice of the Peace for fourteen years.

JAMES INGLIS, farmer, Sec. 24; P. O. Columbus; was born in Selkirkshire, Scotland, in 1828; his parents, Thomas and Elizabeth (Johnston) Inglis, died in his native country. Mr. Inglis was apprenticed to the weaver's trade in Selkirkshire, at the age of 14 years, which he followed until 21 years old; he came to America in 1849, and landing in New York, he went thence to Amesbury, Mass., where he continued his trade in the woolen-mills, until July, 1852; emigrating thence to San Francisco, and to the interior of California, where he engaged in mining until 1856, when he returned to Scotland, and in March, 1857, he was married to Miss Isabel, daughter of James and Mary Williamson, nee Hall; they started the day after marriage for America, sailing from Liverpool and landing in New York; they came thence via Philadelphia, to the town of Hampden, Columbia Co., Wis., where they located on their present farm of 130 acres; their children are Mary, Elizabeth, Jessie, Davina, Olive, Thomas, Jennie and James.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, farmer, Sec. 4; P. O. Hampden; was born in Nerway in 1833. He came to America in 1845, and located at Chicago for nearly ten years; he then came to the town of Otsego, Columbia Co., Wis., whence, in 1860, he removed to a farm on Sec. 4, town of Hampden, where he now owns 120 acres. He was married, in 1854, to Miss Caroline, a daughter of Olie Oleson; their children are John, Matilda, Annie, Olive, Martin, Estella, Caroline S. and Henry. Mr. Johnson and family are members of the Lutheran Church.

JOHN KLUPERDANZ, farmer, Sec. 35; P. O. Columbus; was born in Bavaria in 1816, and is the son of George F. Kluperdanz, a farmer of that county. He emigrated to America in 1846; stopped a short time in Chicago, and then came to the town of Hampden, Columbia Co., Wis., located on Sec. 35, where he has since made his home, and now owns a farm of 320 acres. He was married, in 1846, to Miss Vasula Derr, who died in 1847, leaving one son—John, who now resides on the farm. His second marriage was, in 1847, to Miss Margaret Scheingar, a native of Bavaria, but emigrated to Wisconsin in 1846. Their children are Magdaline, now the wife of Anton Naiser; Lawrence, now in this town; Henry and Andrew Joseph, on the farm; Maggie, now the wife of Fred Fox, and lives in the town of Columbus; Catherine, Mary and Elizabeth, at home. They are members of the Catholic Church.

ROBERT McBURNIE, farmer, Sec. 14; P. O. Columbus; was born in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1810. His father, Wm. McBurnie, was born in Ireland, and died at Glasgow about 1865; his mother, Alice Cleland, was also a native of Ireland, and died at Glasgow. Mr. McBurnie was apprenticed to the weaver's trade under his father at the age of 13 or 14, and continued the trade at Glasgow till 21 or 22 years of age. He went, in 1838, to Galicia, Scotland, and engaged in the manufacture of woolen goods till 1849, when he came to America, and located on his present farm of 160 acres. He was married, in 1839, to Miss Agnes, daughter of Thomas and Mary Rea Wilson, a native of Selkirkshire. Their children are Mary R.; William, now a resident of this town; Alice, now the wife of Charles Hoton, of the town of Columbus; Thomas, at home; Agnes, now the wife of Asa Baker, and lives in Blue Earth Co., Minn.; Christina, deceased; Robert, deceased; Elizabeth, now Mrs. James Hasey, and lives in this town (Hampden); Margaret, deceased. They attend the Presbyterian Church.

ISAAC MAURER, farmer, Sec. 1; P. O. Columbus; was born in the town of West Beaver, Snyder Co., Penn., April 7, 1822. He is the son of John Maurer and Elizabeth Smith. The former was born in that town and county in March, 1794; the latter was born in Dauphin Co. about 1787 or 1788, and died in Wisconsin, April 13, 1857. Mr. Maurer is the fourth of a family of eight children, and was brought up as a farmer's son in Snyder Co., Penn.; at the age of 11 years, he was hired to work for the farmers in that vicinity, and continued the same until 24 years old. He was married, Sept. 7, 1844, to Miss Polly, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Pontious, a native of Freeburgh, Penn., born May 7, 1822. Her parents were natives of Union Co., Penn.; her father was born in 1809, her mother in 1857. Mr. Maurer and family came to Columbus, Columbia Co., Wis., and located on Sec. 5, May 18, 1850; six years later, he removed to his present farm on Sec. 1, town of Hampden, where he now owns 200 acres. His first house in Hampden was of logs, without doors, window, roof or floor. It has long since been exchanged for a more commodious one. Their children—Mary A., born in 1845 (married, Feb. 8, 1865, to Daniel McKinley, and lives now in Minnesota—their children are William, Carrie, George and Ida); Matilda, born in 1849 (married Mr. Benton Sowards, Jan. 15, 1864, and has four children—Darwin, Laura, George and Wesley—they live now in Nebraska); Elizabeth, born in 1852 (married, Sept. 20, 1869, to Alexander Bowen, a native of Orange Co., N. Y., and their children are Harry and Arthur—they now live on the farm); Maria, born in March 17, 1862 (married Charles Kopplin Nov. 26, 1879), and now lives in Hampden.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, farmer, Sec. 25; P. O. Columbus; was born in Washington Co., Vt., in 1820; his father, Thomas Montgomery, was a native of Massachusetts, and was the son of a Mr. Montgomery, who emigrated to Massachusetts, from the Isle of Man, in a very early day; his mother, Lucy Blanchard, was born near Old Haverhill, Mass., and after marriage removed with Mr. Montgomery to Washington Co., Vt., where they both died—her husband about 1849 or 1850, at the age of 87 years, she about 1855. Our present subject was brought up as a farmer in his native county, and, in 1846, emigrated to Columbia Co., Wis., and settled on a farm on Sec. 30, town of Columbus, and, in the autumn of 1847, he removed to Sec. 25, town of Hampden, where he now owns 127 acres off the northeast one-quarter. Mr. Montgomery has held the office of Town Assessor for twelve years; was Deputy Sheriff under W. W. Drake, and member of County Board under the Supervisor system; that of Town Treasurer three years. He was married in Vermont, in 1842, to Miss Orpha M., a daughter of Reuben and Adeline Stiles, a native of Washington Co., born 1825; their children are Cyrus, now a resident of the town of York, Dane Co., Wis.; Mary A., now Mrs. A. Sanderson, and lives in this town; Sarah A., now Mrs. William McBurnie, of this town; Ella J., now the wife of Albert Welton, of the city of Columbus; Emma J., now Mrs. William H. Curtis, of Hampden; Hannah B., now Mrs. Milan Brewer, of this town; Adelia M., at home; Armelia, twin with Adelia, now deceased; Henry W., William, Adeline and James W., at home.

LEVI NELSON, farmer, Sec. 11; P. O. Columbus; was born in Genesee Co., N. Y., in 1823; his father, Levi Nelson, was a native of Massachusetts; his mother, Lucy Force, was born in New Jersey; they both removed to York State when young; Mr. Nelson spent his early life on a farm in his native county till the fall of 1849, when he emigrated to Jefferson Co., Wis., and, in the summer of 1851, to the town of Otsego, Columbia Co., and made that his home till April 8, 1865; he then removed to his present home on Sec. 11, town of Hampden, where he now owns 400 acres of land; his mother died in the own of Lowville, Columbia Co., Wis.; his father in New York. Mr. Nelson was Assessor and also a member of the Town Board of the town of Otsego. He was married, in 1853, to Miss Hannah, a daughter of Riley and Elvira Monger, a native of Attica, N. Y.; their children are Flora, now the wife of Robert Bell, and lives in this town (Hampden); Elvira, now a teacher of this county; Frank and Myrtie, at home.

JOHN E. PERKINS, farmer, Sec. 24; P. O. Columbus; is the son of Francis and Alice (Kelley) Perkins; his father was born in Bennington Co., Vt., and removed on foot to Cayuga Co., N. Y., which he afterward made his home; his mother was a native of Ireland, and came to Washington Co., N. Y., when only 7 years old. Mr. Perkins, our present subject, was born in Cayuga Co., N. Y., in 1830, and spent his time at farming there till 1852, when he came to Wisconsin and located on Sec. 24, town of Hampden, Columbia Co., in 1854, where he now owns 150 acres on Secs. 13 and 24. He has held the office of Town Treasurer one term. He was married, in 1856, to Miss Laura A., daughter of Loyal and Rhoda Morton, a native of Franklin Co., N. Y.; she died in Hampden May 26, 1879, leaving three children—Alice A., Warren M. and Ellen G.

CHARLES REMUS, farmer, Secs. 14 and 12; P. O. Columbus; was born in Prussia in 1842; is the son of Charles and Louisa (Hoffman) Remus; he came to America in 1862, and located at Watertown, Wis., where he followed farm work for two years; in 1865, he came to the town of Hampden and located on Sec. 15, and two years later, he bought 90 acres of his present farm, which now numbers 200 acres on Sec. 14 and 20 acres on Sec. 12. He was married, in 1862, to Miss Augusta, daughter of William and Charlotte Schulz, a native of Prussia, but then living in this town (Hampden); their children are Eddie, Clara, Annie, Martha, Paul, Mary and Delia; they are members of the Lutheran Church.

CLARENDON ROYS, farmer and stock-breeder; P. O. Columbus; is a native of Berkshire Co., Mass., and is the son of William Roys and Mary A. Hicoek, born Jan. 20, 1828; his father dying in the East about 1843, he, with his mother and four brothers, came as emigrants to Columbia Co., Wis., and located on a farm of 160 acres on Secs. 29 and 30, town of Hampden, where his mother died Jan. 18, 1879. Mr. Roys now owns between 1,600 and 1,700 acres of land in this town; he has been largely interested in the importation of the Percheron stock of horses into this county; he has been Chairman of the Town Board one term. His brothers are Edwin, born Nov. 13, 1836, and enlisted as a private in Co. B, 16th W. V. L., at Waterloo, Wis., in 1861, was elected First Lieutenant of his company, then promoted to the captaincy of his company, in which capacity he served till January, 1862, when he resigned; he now lives on the farm with his brother; Theodore was born in 1842, and makes his home on the farm; Martin D. and Tmis V. are deceased.

ARCHIBALD SANDERSON, farmer, Sec. 1; P. O. Columbus; was born in Selkirkshire, Scotland, in 1837; his father, John Sanderson, was a weaver by trade, and was born in Scotland in 1805; his mother, Isabel Trotter, was born in 1815; they came to America in May, 1849, and located in the town of Hampden, Columbia Co., Wis., where his mother died in 1854; his father now lives in this town. Our present subject spent the first twenty-one or twenty-two years of his life with his parents on the farm, after which he began business for himself. He was married in 1863 to Miss Mary A., daughter of James and Orpha Montgomery, a native of Vermont, born in 1846, but came with her parents to Columbia, Wis., when a mere babe. Their children are Ellen, born Sept. 6, 1865; Jennie, born May 1, 1868; William, born May 23, 1873; Thomas, born Feb. 7, 1875. They located on a farm of 164 acres, on Sec. 1, town of Hampden, in 1868, where they have since lived. Mr. Sanderson has been Town Assessor for two terms, Town Treasurer for three terms, and Town Clerk for five or six years, and was re-elected to that office in the spring of 1880.

SAMUEL SMITH, farmer, Sec. 14; P. O. Columbus; was born in the County of Suffolk, England, in 1822; his father, John Smith, was born in 1798. His mother, Rachel Barber, was also a native of that county, but died there when he was not yet 2 years old, leaving him and a younger sister; Mr. Smith was brought up as a farmer's son in England, and was married, March 21, 1846, to Miss Ann, a daughter of Thomas and Ann Jennings, with whom he sailed from London for America in May, 1853, and landed at New York after a five weeks' sail; they came thence to Hampden, Columbia Co., Wis., and located on Sec. 15; six and one-half years later, they removed to Sec. 28 of this town, and in 1866, to Sec. 14, where he now owns 200 acres. Mr. Smith has been a member of the Town Board for several terms, and Town Treasurer for one term. Their children are William, born in England, Nov. 4, 1846, died Nov. 24, 1853; Alfred, born in England April 1, 1849, now resides on Sec. 6 of this town; Thomas, born in England, April 2, 1851, now resides in the town of York, Dane Co.; Julia A., born Sept. 27, 1855, now a teacher of this county; Francis, born Nov. 1, 1859; John, born Sept. 3, 1861; Celia A., born April 11, 1864.

CHARLES D. STILES, farmer, Secs. 23 and 26; P. O. Columbus; was born in the town of Waterbury, Washington Co., Vt., in August, 1834; his father, Reuben, was the son of Peleg and Eunice (Wyman) Stiles, and was born in Washington Co., Vt., in 1799; his mother, Adeline Cobb, was born at Montpelier, Vt., in 1803. Mr. Stiles, with his parents, removed to Columbia Co., Wis., in 1844, and located in the town of Columbus, where his parents now live and where he spent most of his time at farming for fourteen years. He was married in August, 1858, to Miss Margaret, a daughter of Ephraim and Fannie Baker, a native of Franklin Co., Mass., born in March, 1839, but emigrated to the town of York, Dane Co., Wis., with her parents in 1843. Mr. and Mrs. Stiles located on a farm in the town of Columbus soon after their marriage, and in 1861, removed to his present home, on Secs. 23 and 26, town of Hampden, where he now owns 135 acres. Their children are an infant son, born September, 1862, deceased; Minnie, born June, 1871; Arlettie, born July, 1874; an adopted son George, born 1862, died February, 1867. Mr. and Mrs. Stiles are members of the M. E. Church.

CHRISTIAN STEINBACH, farmer, Secs. 23 and 24; P. O. Columbus; is the son of Charles and Susanna (Scheifle) Steinbach, born in Baden in 1831; he followed farming, and worked in a vineyard until 1853, when he emigrated to America and located at Buffalo, N. Y., where he worked as a laborer until the fall of 1855; he came then to Columbia Co., Wis., and in 1861 bought 40 acres of his present farm, which now comprises 120 acres. He was married at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1853, to Miss Christiana, daughter of Gotfried and Carolina (Pflum) Of, a native of Baden; their children are Catharine, now Mrs. Fred Siede, and lives in the town of York, Dane Co., Wis.; Charles G., Mary M., Joseph C., Caroline, Anna, Clara. They are members of the Lutheran Church.

JAMES H. SUTTON, farmer, Secs. 23 and 26; P. O. Columbus; this pioneer of Columbia Co. was born on the banks of the Hudson, at Haverstraw, Rockland Co., N. Y., Dec. 29, 1812; his father, Noah H. Sutton, was born in the town of Horseneck, Conn., in 1770, and died in New York City, in 1835; his mother, Rachel Lent, was born in Westchester Co., N. Y., and died in New York City, about 1865, at nearly 100 years of age. James H. is the eighth of a family of nine children—four sons and five daughters, only one of whom beside himself is now living, that is Clarissa, now Mrs. Quackenbush, of New York City. Mr. Sutton was apprenticed to the carpenter and joiner's trade, in Rockland Co., at the age of 14 years, where he served seven years. In May, 1832, in New York City, he was married to Miss Jane A., daughter of William and Mary (Wooding) Bentley, a native of Dutchess Co., N. Y., born in 1812; her father died in 1832; her mother now lives in that county. Mr. and Mrs. Sutton settled in Dutchess Co., N. Y., some time after marriage, and he continued his trade there until 1844, when they emigrated to Columbia Co., Wis., and settled on Sec. 26, where he made a claim of 160 acres, built a pioneer log shanty, and covered it with prairie hay, which sufficed for a home until 1845, when it burned, turning them out of doors with six children; he next built a log house, which was their home for many years; he has, however, exchanged that for a commodious frame house; he now owns 360 acres on Secs. 23 and 26. Mr. Sutton has been a member of the Town Board for three terms, and was Town Treasurer for three terms. Their children are William, deceased; Abraham, now at Cordova, Le Sueur Co., Minn.; George, deceased; John J., now a resident of Columbus; Daniel J., deceased; Mary, deceased; Frederick and Fletcher, twins, both deceased; Rachel L., now a student at the Normal School, of Oshkosh; Ellen M. and Tabor G., at home; Clarissa A., at the Norman School, of Oshkosh; also, Franklin P. and Charles H., at home.

GEORGE S. TILLOTSON, farmer, Sec. 10; P. O. Columbus; was born in Essex Co., N. Y., in 1828. His father, Richard Tillotson, was a native of Connecticut; his mother, Rosemond Carpenter, was born in Vermont. Mr. Tillotson was brought up as a farmer's son, and has always devoted his time and attention to that vocation. He emigrated to Columbia Co., Wis., in 1851, and located on a farm in the town of Otsego; two years later, he removed to the town of Hampden and settled on a farm, where he now owns 240 acres, 80 of which is on Sec. 3, and 160 acres on Sec. 10. He has been Town Clerk for one term, and also a member of the Town Board. January 1, 1851, he was married to Miss Prudence, a daughter of Austin and Polly (Conn) Curtis, a native of Essex Co., N. Y. Her father was born in Massachusetts, and her mother in Vermont. They emigrated with Mr. and Mrs. Tillotson to Columbia Co., Wis., in 1851; her mother afterward died in this town; her father, in the town of Columbus, in May, 1878, at the age of 86 years. Mr. and Mrs. T.'s children are Richard R., born in March 13, 1852, now living in the town of Otsego; Adelaide A., born March 28, 1854, died Feb. 12, 1879; James R., born May 17, 1857, now at home; Coriathia P., born Sept. 17, 1860, was married to Mr. James Dowd, in January, 1879, and now resides in the town of Wyocena; Henry S. born Nov. 9, 1866, died Dec. 19, 1869; Hattie J., born Nov. 8, 1870. Mr. and Mrs. Tillotson are members of the M. E. Church.

WILLIAM W. TILLOTSON, farmer, Secs. 3, 4 and 10; P. O. Columbus; was born in Essex Co., N. Y., in 1834. His father, Richard Tillotson, was a native of Connecticut; his mother, Rosemond Carpenter, was born in Vermont. Mr. Tillotson was brought up as a farmer in his native county, and in 1851, came to Columbia Co., Wis., and lived with his brother George in the town of Hampden for four years; he then bought a farm of 120 acres on Secs. 3 and 10, where he has since made his home and followed farming; he now owns 200 acres on Secs. 3, 4 and 10. He was married in 1859, to Miss Mary J., daughter of Samuel and Eliza (Smith) Sprague, a native of Essex Co., N. Y. Their children are Ida A., now Mrs. Elias Clark, and lives in this town (Hampden); Charles S., Jessie M., Harry J., and Alta M., at home. They attend the M. E. Church.

GEORGE W. TRIPP, farmer, Sec. 2; P. O. Otsego; was born in Tioga Co., N. Y., in 1821. His father, Elisha Tripp, was a native of Vermont, born in 1783, and early in life removed to Albany, N. Y., where he learned the shoemaker's trade, and continued the same there till 1818; then removed to Tioga Co., N. Y., where he devoted his time to farming during the summers, and to his trade during the winters; his mother, Polly Bebee, was born at Kingston, N. Y., in 1791. In 1847, Mr. and Mrs. Tripp came to Columbia Co., Wis., and located in the town of Fountain Prairie, where he died in 1856; his wife now lives in that town, and has reached her 88th year. George W., our present subject, began the blacksmith's trade at the age of 17½ years, at Binghamton, N. Y., and continued there until the spring of 1845, when he emigrated to Wisconsin. He stopped a few weeks at Columbus, Columbia Co.; then settled at Beaver Dam, where he was the second blacksmith, and the only one from July, 1845, to March, 1846. In 1847, he removed to Madison, where he continued his trade till 1854, with the exception of eight months that he was in business in Columbus. He was the first man to ring the first church bell in the city of Madison (1852). Removing to Columbus in 1854, he continued his trade till 1856, when he located on a farm on Sec. 9, town of Hampden, and followed farming for twelve years; removing then to the city of Columbus, where he lived (except the year 1870, which was spent in St. Louis Co., Cal.) till 1879, when he removed to his present farm of 80 acres. He was married, in 1856, to Miss Louisa C., daughter of William and Polly (Brown) Alexander, a native of Windsor, Ashtabula Co., Ohio, but an emigrant to Columbus, Wis., in 1855.

TOWN OF LODI.

EDWARD ANDREWS, proprietor of Lodi Mills, was born in the town of Solon, Cortland Co., N. Y., in 1836; he came to Lodi Jan. 1, 1858; purchased the mills in 1870. He was married to Miss Sarah J. Palmer, daughter of Judge Palmer, and they have three children—Henry E., Edward P. and Helen G.

HORACE M. AYER, Police Justice and Justice of the Peace, Lodi; was born in Vermont in 1822; he removed from Vermont to Sauk Prairie, Sauk Co., Wis., in 1843; came to Columbia Co. in the fall of 1846, and settled in what was then Sec. 19, town of Lodi, now West Point. He resided there till the spring of 1851, when he came to the village of Lodi; he engaged in the mercantile business till 1871; was Postmaster from the spring of 1853 until the spring of 1861; he has been Justice of the Peace since 1852, except two years, when he refused to serve as such. He was married to Sarah A. Rider, who was born in Ashtabula, Ohio, in 1827. They have had nine children, eight of whom are living—Edward A., Delia, Minnie, Susie, Douglass, George W., Horace M. and Nellie; the oldest son, Albert H., died suddenly in Denver, Colo., April 16, 1880, in his 31st year.

ARETAS BAILEY, Postmaster, Okee; was born in Trumbull Co., Ohio, in 1817. He came to Columbia with an older brother, April 8, 1854, and settled at Okee; was engaged in the saw-mill here for some time, and has also been engaged in farming, etc. He was married to Margaret Wolf, who was born in Trumbull Co., Ohio. They have two children—Cordelia M. and Mary E.

JAMES BAIRD, farmer, Sec. 14; P. O. Lodi; he is the son of Adam Baird, deceased, a native of Scotland, who came to the United States in 1850; he lived in Steuben Co., N. Y., about five years; came to the town of Caledonia, Columbia Co., in 1855, and he died on the place which his son now owns, July, 1879, aged 56 years. Mr. Baird's mother and sister, Joanna, live with him. The farm contains 160 acres.

G. M. BARTHOLOMEW, retired farmer, Lodi; born in Clarke Co., Ind., in 1812, where he lived till he was 21 years of age, when he removed to McLean Co., Ill., where he lived till April, 1845, when he came to the town of Lodi, and settled on Sec. 26, where he engaged in farming; Mr. Bartholomew is also a surveyor, and has been engaged in that occupation more or less for many years; in 1875, Mr. B. retired from farming, and has since resided in the village of Lodi. His wife was Miss S. C. Hefner, born in Virginia; they have seven children—C. Elizabeth, now Mrs. James McCloud; B. Jane, now Mrs. George Clegliorn, resides in Nebraska; Joseph M., by profession a lawyer, of Red Oak, Iowa; Mary A., now Mrs. E. B. Wait; Josephine, now Mrs. W. H. Chapin, resides in Nebraska; Ellen, wife of L. K. Luse, Esq., of Dane Co., and James I., a student at Lawrence University. Mr. Bartholomew has been Justice of the Peace for twenty years.

JOSEPH M. BARTHOLOMEW, express agent, Lodi; son of M. C. Bartholomew, one of the early settlers of the town of Lodi; he was born in Lexington, McLean Co., Ill., Dec. 26, 1837; he enlisted at Lodi, June 12, 1861, in Co. A, 7th W. V. I., enlisted for three years, but was discharged on account of disability Oct. 30, 1862; he re-enlisted Feb. 8, 1865, served till April, 1866. He was married to Miss Sarah C. Rathbun; they have three children—Harlow L., Marston A. and Molly. Mr. Bartholomew has been express agent since 1870.

R. N. BARTHOLOMEW, farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. Lodi; son of M. C. Bartholomew, who came to the town of Lodi in the spring of 1845. He (M. C.) was born in Clarke Co., Ind., in 1806; removed to Illinois in 1830; then to Columbia Co., Wis. His wife was Mary Hopkins, born in the State of Delaware. R. N. was born in McLean Co., Ill., October, 1834. He was married to Priscilla Eells, born in Hanover, Mass.; they have seven children—M. C., Martha E., Mary D., Ransom G., Albert G., Nellie M. and John B. Mr. Bartholomew now resides on farm of T. U. Warren; owns farm in Sec. 22, now occupied by Mr. S. Wells.

W. M. BARTHOLOMEW, druggist, Lodi; born in Indiana in 1821; he removed to Illinois in 1831; came to the town of Lodi in February, 1849, and purchased a farm of M. C. Bartholomew in Sec. 22, which was the first farm improved in the town of Lodi; this farm Mr. Bartholomew still owns. He was married to Frances M. Goddard, born in Cincinnati, Ohio; they have six children, one son and five daughters—Frances E., born Oct. 7, 1843; Julia B., Feb. 13, 1848; William A., Nov. 8, 1851; Annie M., April 27, 1854; Eva L., July 17, 1856, and Angelia D., March 5, 1860. Mr. Bartholomew engaged in business in Lodi in 1864.

REV. A. CONSTANTINE BARRY, Pastor of the Universalist Church, Lodi, was born in Delaware Co., N. Y., July 15, 1815. His parents removed to Victor, Ontario Co., when he was 2½ years of age, where he resided until 1836; his preceptor was the Rev. Jacob Chase, of Geneva; he began his labors in the ministry at Gaines, Orleans Co.; thence to Homer, Cortland Co., where he preached four years; thence to Fort Plain for five years; thence to Racine, Wis., in 1846, which was his home for many years. Although actively engaged in the ministry of the church with which he is identified, yet Dr. Barry has long been engaged in scientific pursuits, and prominently identified with the educational interests of the country; he was State Superintendent of Public Instruction during 1856 and 1857; he entered the army as Chaplain of the 4th W. V. I., in which capacity he served about one year; was then engaged in the recruiting service for about two years, and during this time was elected to represent Racine Co. in the Legislature of Wisconsin; he served as Chaplain of the 19th W. V. I., from the spring of 1864 till Feb. 10, 1865, when he was made Chaplain of the United States Hospitals by President Lincoln; was mustered out of the United States service Aug. 15, 1865. In the spring of 1864, Dr. Barry removed his family to Fond du Lac, which was his home for four years; he then went to Elkhorn, Walworth Co., where he established a church; he came to Lodi, in April, 1878. He was married in the fall of 1836, to Adelia Robinson, of East Bloomfield, Ontario Co., N. Y., and she died at Elkhorn, in May, 1877; his present wife was Helen Peterson, of Fond du Lac. He has three children by his first marriage—Malon P., who is in the service of the N. W. R. R. Co., at Chicago; Melville A., resides in Lodi; Bella B., now Mrs. Frank Warner, of Chicago. He has one child by his present marriage—Jennie A. Dr. Barry is well versed in the natural sciences, and enjoys the acquaintance of the most eminent naturalists of the State; has been for many years corresponding member of the Academy of Sciences, of Philadelphia, of the "Boston Natural History Association" and the Buffalo Scientific Association. Dr. Barry and wife were victims of the "National Hotel" poisoning on the occasion of the inauguration of President Buchanan, from the effects of which he has never fully recovered. He is still actively engaged in the ministry, where he has long labored to make men better, to prepare them more fully for the present and the higher life.

SAMUEL M. BLAKE, M. D., Lodi, born in Vermont, Feb. 15, 1835; he began the study of medicine with Dr. Ralph Rugg, of Compton, in the Province of Quebec; entered the Eclectic Medical Institute at Cincinnati, Ohio, in the fall of 1859; he attended a course of lectures, then returned to the town of Cannon, Vt., where he practiced medicine for six years; he then went to Eaton, Canada, where he remained two years; he returned to Cincinnati in the fall of 1867, and graduated the following spring; he then returned to Eaton, and practiced six months; in October, 1868, at the solicitation of Dr. A. P. Cummings, he came to Prairie du Sac, Wis., and practiced with Dr. Cummings for some time; he came to Lodi in the summer of 1877. He was married to Miranda J. Haynes; they have two sons—Wilbur F. and Austin M.

REV. JOSEPH BOWMAN, retired Baptist clergyman; resides in Sec. 4, in the town of Dane, Dane Co.; though a resident of Dane Co., yet Mr. Bowman has long been identified with the interests of Columbia Co., and especially of Lodi, which has been the field of his labors, for many years, in the ministry; he was born in Leicester, the county seat of Leicestershire, England, in 1816; he began his theological studies under Rev. S. W. Wigg and Rev. W. Finn, of his native town; he began his ministry in England; came to the United States in May, 1845, and settled in the town of Berry, Dane Co.; a Baptist church was organized in that town, in 1847; Mr. Bowman was called to the pastorate of this church in 1848; he was ordained 1849; he continued as Pastor of the church in Berry till about 1852, when he received a call from his Baptist friends of Lodi, to organize a church at that place and become their Pastor; he accepted this call, and remained the Pastor of the Lodi Baptist Church for about nine years; afterward, for three or four years, was Pastor of Middleton Baptist Church. Mr. Bowman was married in England, in 1814, to Miss Ann Sharman; she died Jan. 15, 1873; in May, 1874, Mr. Bowman visited his native land, where he was married to Miss Sarah S. Jordan; returned to his home in September of that year; he had eight children by his first marriage, only three of whom are living, viz., Mrs. Elizabeth A. Thomas, Mrs. Mary Riddle and Joseph J.; in 1875, Mr. Bowman became Pastor of the Baptist Church at Mazo Manie, Dane Co., which charge he held for two and a half years.

JOSEPH BROWN, farmer, Sec. 34; P. O. Lodi; was born in the State of New Jersey in 1817; when he was a child, his parents removed to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he lived till manhood; he was engaged in steambotting on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers for about nine years. He went to the State of Illinois, where he was married to Miss Emeline Newburry; she was born in New Jersey; her parents died when she was quite young; she lived a number of years in New York City; then returned to New Jersey, thence to Illinois, where she was married to Mr. Brown; after he was married, Mr. Brown removed to Missouri; returned to Illinois, and came to Columbia Co. in May, 1846; lived on Sec. 25, town of Lodi, for two years; settled where they now live in July, 1848; have six children—Cornelius, Richard K.; Maria, now Mrs. John Porter; Edwin; Emma, now Mrs. Milton; Freeman and Sylvester. Farm contains 100 acres.

REV. N. E. CHAPIN, Pastor of Baptist Church, Lodi; was born in Washington Co. N. Y., in 1815; in 1833, removed with his parents to Wayne Co.; he attended Florence Manual Institute; began his ministry in Randolph, Cattaraugus Co., in 1837; settled in Bradford, McKean Co., Penn.; was ordained in 1839; removed to Belmont, Allegheny Co., in 1840, where he remained three years; thence to Bennington, Wyoming Co., for two years; he came to Wisconsin in 1845; settled in Lancaster, Grant Co., where he remained till 1851; he settled in Beaver Dam in the spring of 1852; in the fall of 1857, went to Darlington, La Fayette Co.; thence to Aztalan, Jefferson Co.; in 1867, settled in Merton, Waukesha Co.; thence to Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.; came to Lodi in the spring of 1877. Mr. Chapin was married to Miss Sara L. Goiny, born at Rushford, Allegany Co., N. Y.; have two children—Mary L. Lindlay and George B.

JACOB CHRISLER, blacksmith and machinist. Lodi; was born in Montgomery Co., N. Y., February, 1837; his parents removed to Chenango Co.; thence to Madison Co.; they came to Wisconsin and settled in the town of West Point, Columbia Co., in 1856; Jacob came to the town of West Point the following year, where he worked at his trade about twelve years; he settled in Lodi in the spring of 1874. He was married to Mary H. Leigh, born in the state of New York; they have had eight children, five living—Alberta L., Harriet E., Margaret E., Minnie T. and Jesse J.; lost three daughters.

WILLIAM CROSS, farmer, Sec. 16; P. O. Lodi; was born in England, March, 1843; he came to this country with his parents in 1848; they lived two years in Racine, Wis.; came to the town of Lodi and settled on the farm where Mr. Cross now lives, in 1850; his father now resides in Walworth Co., Wis. Mr. Cross enlisted in February, 1864, in the 50th W. V. I.; served till the close of the war. Married Miss Mary Atkinson, born in Wisconsin; has one child—Thomas F.

JOHN COLLINS, harness-maker, Lodi; was born in Wales, January, 1846; he learned the trade of a tanner and currier, which business he followed for several years; he came to the United States in the spring of 1866; he lived in Albany, Green Co., Wis., for about one year; then went to Madison, where, for several months, he was engaged in driving stage between Madison and Fort Atkinson; came to Lodi in October, 1867; was engaged in driving stage till October, 1870; visited his native land in 1871, returning in the spring of 1872; served an apprenticeship to the harness-making business in Lodi; engaged in the business of harness-making in the fall of 1876. He was married to Miss Anstis A. Simons, daughter of Freedom Simons; they have three children—Mattie E., John F. and Richard J.

EVERET DAVIS, farmer, Sec. 15; P. O. Lodi; was born in Massachusetts in 1830; he removed with his parents to the eastern part of the State of New York; he came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1859; he lived in Vienna, Dane Co., for six years; located on his present farm in 1865. He was married to Elizabeth Haggard, daughter of William Haggard. They have three children—Amelia J., Edwin N. and William. Mr. Davis' farm contains 180 acres.

WILLIAM DUNLAP, farmer, Sec. 27; P. O. Lodi; was born in Trumbull Co., Ohio, Dec. 6, 1806; he came to Dane Co., Wis., in 1846, and settled in the town of Dane, in 1847, where he lived until 1853, when he came to the town of Lodi, and engaged in the lumber business, at Okee; in 1858, returned to his farm in Dane Co., which he sold in 1860, and purchased farm in Sec. 22, Lodi; bought farm where he now lives, September, 1865; he still owns his farm in Sec. 22. He was married to Phoebe Blachly, born in Ohio March 6, 1807, they have five children—Eben, Oscar, Sarah, James and William M.; lost one daughter, Melissa.

JOHN B. DWINNELL, farmer, Sec. 33; P. O. Lodi; was born in Worcester, Mass., in 1827; he came to Wisconsin in 1850, and settled in the village of Lodi; he established a stage route between Madison and Baraboo, via Lodi, in 1853, which he conducted for one and a half years; this was the first public conveyance running between Madison and Baraboo; since that time he has been engaged in farming; he bought his present farm in August, 1856, where he located in 1868. He was married to Maria C. Stanley, daughter of W. D. Stanley, who settled in Vienna, Dane Co., in 1847; they have six children—Lizzie I., George W., William S., John L., Mary L. and Bessie Y.; lost one son, Henry, who died July 17, 1879. Mr. Dwinnell was elected to represent the Third District in the Legislature, in the fall of 1874; has been Chairman of the Town Board for two years, and has held other local offices. Is a Republican politically. Farm contains 280 acres.

ADDISON EATON, merchant, Lodi; was born in Auburn, Mass., in 1821; he went to Ohio in 1844, where he lived three years, when he returned to Massachusetts; in 1856, he came to Lodi, and engaged in the mercantile trade. He was married to Miss Emily Garfield; she died February, 1869; his present wife was Miss Julia Palmer, daughter of Judge Palmer, of Lodi. Mr. Eaton was Chairman of Town Board from 1872 to 1875; has been County Supervisor since 1876, and was elected to the Assembly, in the fall of 1879.

JAMES O. EATON, Lodi; was born in Sutton, Mass., in 1818. He came to Walworth Co., Wis., in 1842, and engaged in the mercantile trade. He went to Racine in the fall of 1845, where he also engaged in the mercantile business. He came to Lodi in December, 1848, where he also entered the mercantile business, which he continued till 1860. Mr. Eaton was Postmaster at Lodi, during the administration of Presidents Taylor and Fillmore, also during the first administration of President Lincoln; was assistant U. S. Assessor for about five years. For the last thirteen years, has been engaged as a commercial traveler. His first wife was Miss Mary M. Dwinnell, born in Massachusetts; she died in March, 1862. His present wife was Mrs. Judith Fisk. Mr. Eaton has two children by his first wife—Mary E., now Mrs. B. S. Lewis, and Harlow. The latter was born May 24, 1854; he graduated at the Wisconsin State University in 1878; he is now a student of the University of Leipzig, Germany. Lost his oldest son, Herbert E., born June 3, 1844, died July 17, 1849.

HENRY R. EATON, Postmaster, Lodi; born in Massachusetts June 20, 1832. He first came to Lodi in April, 1853, but returned to Massachusetts in August of that year. He settled in Lodi in February, 1857, and engaged in the shoe manufacturing business; was appointed Postmaster Feb. 18, 1875. His wife was Miss Harriet A. Cadwell, daughter of Edward Cadwell, of Sauk Co. They have one child—Fred A.; lost their oldest son, Herbert, who was killed by the kick of a horse in 1871; aged 7 years.

JOHN FOOTE, farmer, Sec. 27; P. O. Lodi; was born in Ashtabula Co., Ohio, in 1820. He removed to Lee Co., Iowa, in the spring of 1844, thence to Hancock Co., Ill., where he taught school during the summer of 1844; in the winter of 1844-45, taught a school in Dane Co., Ill.; in the spring of 1845, removed to Dane Co., Wis.; engaged in farming during that summer, and taught school the following winter. In the spring of 1846, he came to Lodi, and entered 80 acres of his present farm in June of that year, where he settled the following autumn, and where he has since resided. His wife was Miss Elmira Fisher, daughter of Willard Fisher; married October, 1848; wife died Aug. 15, 1868. Mr. Foote has had nine children, five of whom are living—Laura R., John W., Emily B., Frank F. and Agnes M.

PETER L. FROLAND, farmer, Sec. 25; P. O. Lodi; was one of the earliest settlers of the town of Lodi. He was born in Norway in 1802, and came to the United States in 1837. He lived near Ottawa, Ill., for nine years, where he was engaged in work on a canal. He came to Columbia Co. in 1846, and settled near Columbus, where he lived three years, when he settled where he now lives. Mr. Froland is unmarried. His farm contains 70 acres.

EDWIN W. GARDNER, insurance agent, Lodi; was born in Panton, Vt., in 1829; he removed to Madison, Wis., in 1853, where he engaged in work at his trade, that of a carpenter and joiner, where he resided till the fall of 1859; then engaged in farming in the town of Dane, Dane Co., till the spring of 1867, when he came to Lodi. He was married to Miss Lucina Colburn, niece of Zerah Colburn, the mathematician; the latter was a cousin of the author of Colburn's Arithmetic, etc. Mr. Gardner is Justice of the Peace of the village of Lodi; also Secretary of Lodi Agricultural Society.

GEORGE C. GESELL, miller, at Lodi Center Mills, Lodi; was born in the Province of Hanover, Germany, Oct. 17, 1834; he came to the United States in the spring of 1861; came to the village of Lodi in the fall of that year, where he was engaged as miller in the Excelsior Mill for thirteen years and five months; then went to Wonewoc, Juneau Co., where he conducted a mill for one year, then engaged in the grocery business; came to present location in April, 1879. He was married to Mary Krueger; they have three children—Hannah, George L. and George C.

WILLIAM GOLDSPOHN, lumber dealer, of the firm of Vanderpool & Goldspohn, Lodi; born in Germany in 1828; he came to the United States in 1849; he settled in the town of Roxbury, Dane Co., Wis., in the fall of that year, where he was engaged in farming; in the spring of 1869, he came to Lodi; he engaged in selling lumber for Vanderpool & Clark in the fall of 1872; in the fall of 1877, he bought the interest of Mr. Clark; since that time has been associated with Mr. Vanderpool. He was married to Frederica Kohlmann, born in Prussia, Germany; she came to the township of Springfield, Dane Co., in 1847; they have four children—Albert, Mary, Emma and William.

CHARLES GOODALL, farmer, Sec. 25; P. O. Lodi; born in Steuben Co., N. Y., in 1830; his parents, Nathaniel and Fannie Goodall, removed to Ohio, near Cleveland, in 1836, then to Illinois, in the fall of 1840; the family came to the town of Lodi June 20, 1851; his father still resides where he first settled, Sec. 26; when the family came to Lodi, it consisted of parents, two sons and two daughters; youngest daughter now deceased; another son, L. K., was born in the town of Lodi. Mr. Goodall was married to Miss Caroline Tuller, daughter of John and Laura A. Tuller. Mrs. Goodall taught the first school in the town of West Point; they have two children—William Herbert and Eva C., both of whom are now students in junior class of Wisconsin State University; Herbert was born in 1857; Eva A., March 13, 1860. Mr. Goodall has been Chairman of Town Board two years, and member of Side Board three years; he resided in Crawford Co. from 1856 till 1861; settled on his present farm in 1861. Has 142 acres of land.

SAMUEL A. HOLDRIDGE, blacksmith, Lodi; born in Ithaca, N. Y., in 1847; he went to Crawford Co., Wis., in 1854; went to Kansas about 1856; returned to Wisconsin and came to Lodi in December, 1859; he enlisted in September, 1862, in Co. G, 23d W. V. I.; was at the battles of Arkansas Post, Yazoo Swamp, Grand Gulf, Champion Hills, and in all the battles in which his regiment was engaged up to the time of his discharge for disability in the fall of 1864; he returned to Lodi; was sick for two years; after his recovery engaged for his uncle in the blacksmith business till 1870; when he engaged in business for himself. He was married to Miss A. S. Woodley, daughter of John V. Woodley; has three children—Harry L., Clarence A. and Edith Maud.

E. HOWARD IRWIN, M. D., Lodi; born in Millin Co., Penn., July 1, 1833; he studied medicine in Pennsylvania, came to Lodi with his father, Dr. George H. Irwin, in June, 1854; he practiced medicine with his father in Lodi till the breaking-out of the rebellion, when his father enlisted as a private in Capt. Mansfield's company, 2d W. V. I.; he was made Hospital Steward, then promoted to Assistant Surgeon in the 2d W. V. I.; he was wounded in the first battle of Bull Run, in the charge of the Black Horse Cavalry; he resigned from disability, and died at his home, Lodi, Jan. 31, 1864. Dr. E. H. Irwin, in August, 1862, under authority of Gov. Salmon, raised a company which was mustered into the United States service as Co. H, 23d W. V. I., Aug. 30, 1862; he resigned to take position on regimental staff as Assistant Surgeon, and entered on duty as such Nov. 19, 1862, at Louisville, Ky., under orders of Gen. A. J. Smith, but was not mustered as such till Dec. 19, 1862, at Memphis, Tenn.; he resigned on account of disability at Milliken's Bend, La., April 25, 1863. His wife was Miss Sarah Pashley, daughter of Samuel Pashley, of Vienna, Dane Co.; they have had six children, five of whom are living—Annie E., now Mrs. Tim E. Lewis; Harris J., George H., Samuel P., and William Russell.

ERIK KNUTSEN, merchant, Lodi; born in Norway in 1834; he came to the United now lives in Minnesota; he resided in Madison for four years, where he was engaged as a clerk; he came States with his parents in 1851; the family settled in Dane Co., Wis., where his father died; his mother to Lodi and engaged in business in 1857. His wife was Miss Annie P. Brunserg; they have nine children, one son and eight daughters; Mr. Knutsen is engaged in general merchandising.

JAMES McCLOUD, merchant, Lodi; born in Gallipolis, Gallia Co., Ohio, Nov. 27, 1822; his father died when he was about 3 years of age; after the death of his father, his mother removed to Vermillion Co., Ind., where she was married, and removed to Joliet, Ill., in 1830, and to Van Buren Co., Iowa, in 1837; in the fall of 1839, he entered into the employment of the American Fur Co., and was engaged in trading on the frontier till 1844; he came to Mineral Point, Wis., in August, 1844; he came to the town of Lodi in the fall of 1845. He was married to Catherine E. Bartholomew, daughter of G. M. Bartholomew; they have had five children, four of whom are living—James W., Elizabeth, now Mrs. R. W. Jones, of Iowa Co., Wis.; Joseph B. and George; their daughter, Clara J., aged 19 years, a student of Lawrence University, Appleton, Wis., and just ready to graduate, was drowned in Lake Buttes des Morts, on June 10, 1871. Mr. McCloud has been engaged in the mercantile business since 1851; he has been very successful in business; has been in the lumber trade; is also a large land owner, and has been extensively engaged in farming for many years; is now engaged quite extensively in stock-raising and fish culture.

GILBERT E. McKEEBY, M. D., Lodi; born in 1844; his parents removed to Oregon, Dane Co., Wis., when he was 2 years of age, where his father died, and where his mother still resides. The Doctor enlisted in August, 1864, in the 1st W. Heavy Artillery; served one year; discharged July, 1865. He began the study of medicine at Evansville, Wis., with Dr. Smith; he was a student of the university at Madison for about three years; in the fall of 1865, he went to Ann Arbor, Mich., and attended a course of lectures at the medical department of the university of Michigan; in the spring of 1866, he resumed his studies with Dr. Smith; in 1867, he entered the Bellevue Hospital Medical College, at New York City, where he graduated in March, 1868; he began the practice of medicine in Iowa Co., Wis.; came to Lodi in the fall of 1868. His wife was Carrie M. Ansdell, daughter of F. T. S. Ansdell, an early settler of Sauk Co.; they have two children—Fred E. and Carrie L.

JOB MILLS, farmer and one of the proprietors of the Lodi Valley Cheese Factory, Lodi; was born in Lancashire, England, in 1840; he came to the United States with his father, William Mills, in 1842; they came to New York City, thence to Paterson, N. J., thence to Oswego, and to Walworth Co., Wis., in 1844, where the family lived about ten years, engaged in farming; thence to Dodge Co. for about two years; thence to the town of Scott, Columbia Co. Mr. Mills was married, in 1863, to Mary A. Dye, born in the State of New York; they have five children—Josephine, Mary, Esther, Albert and Elmer. Mr. Mills has a farm of 300 acres; residence in Sec. 26.

R. W. MILLS, Lodi, grain-buyer, firm of Mills & Albiston; was born in the State of New York in 1843; he is the son of William Mills, and brother of Mr. Job Mills, of Lodi; he engaged in the business of grain-buying with his brother Job in 1871; Mr. Albiston became a member of the firm in May, 1872; the firm was then known as Mills Bros. & Albiston; the firm became Mills & Albiston in 1876. Was married to Margaret A. Wells, daughter of Mr. T. S. Wells; they have two children—Nettie and Thomas A.

ROBERT MOSS, miller, Lodi; born in Sutton, Isle of Ely, Cambridgeshire, England, Feb. 22, 1822. Was married to Sarah Reed, native of the same town; she died in England. Mr. Moss came to the United States in May, 1854; lived in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., a few months; thence to Fox Lake, Wis., in the fall of 1854; thence to Fairwater, Fond du Lac Co.; lived for a short time at several other points in Wisconsin; came to Lodi in 1864; since that time has been engaged as miller for Mr. Andrews. His present wife was Mrs. Charlotte Haley, whose maiden name was Case; she was born in Herkimer Co., N. Y., in 1825. Mr. Moss had five children by his first marriage, two of whom are living—Alfred E. and Charles W.

EDWARD NICHOLS, of the firm of Wait & Nichols, hardware dealers, Lodi; was born in Jefferson Co., N. Y., Jan. 7, 1820, where he resided till July, 1853, when he came to Wisconsin; lived in Janesville till the fall of 1854, when he came to Lodi. He was Town Superintendent of Schools for the years 1856-57; has been Town Clerk for several years. He was married to Miss Mary A. Dunning, daughter of Samuel S. Dunning, from near Ithaca, N. Y.; they have one son—Charles E.—born March, 1866.

CHARLES E. ODELL, furniture dealer, Lodi; was born in Ohio, April, 1827; his father, William Odell, was a native of the State of Vermont, born Feb. 9, 1793; he was a volunteer soldier in the war of 1812; he removed from Ohio to Waukesha Co., Wis., in 1837, and to Dane Co. in 1849; he settled in the town of West Point, Columbia Co., September, 1855; he died August, 1879; his wife died in Waukesha Co. in 1847. Mr. Charles E. Odell was engaged in farming in West Point Township for about twelve years, residing on Sec. 27; he came to Lodi in October, 1867, and engaged in his present business in February following. He was married to Miss E. F. Burnett, of Ohio; they have two children—Edna (now Mrs. George H. Simons), and Edgar.

I. H. PALMER, Lodi; was born in Binghamton, N. Y., in 1809; his father was a Presbyterian minister, and when a young man was engaged as a missionary among the Indians, and elsewhere in the State of New York; he preached for several years at Binghamton; afterward removed to what is now Fulton Co., N. Y.; he died about 1850. Judge Palmer came to Madison from Fulton Co., N. Y., in 1837, where he lived till the spring of 1846, when he came to Lodi and settled on 40 acres of land in Sec. 27, which he had entered the previous February; in March and April of that year he entered more land in this section; on this land is located the present village of Lodi. He was married in 1836, to Miss Ann Thompson, of Fulton Co., N. Y.; they have had ten children, eight of whom are living—Elizabeth (now Mrs. John Slightam); Sarah J. (now Mrs. Edward Andrews); Mary; Julia (now Mrs. Addison Eaton); Helen; Clara (now Mrs. C. Clemens); Hattie and Herbert; has lost two sons—Henry and Edward. At the organization of Dane Co. Mr. Palmer was appointed Probate Judge; he was elected to the Legislature in 1842, and served several years. Judge Palmer has always been actively engaged in business, and by industry and economy has accumulated a fine property; he is a worthy representative of the pioneers of Columbia County.

JOSEPH E. PARKE, farmer, Sec. 26; P. O. Lodi; was born in Pennsylvania in 1821; his parents removed to Chenango Co., N. Y., when he was about 3 years of age, where he lived till 1845, when he removed to Michigan; in the spring of 1846, removed to Illinois; he came to Wisconsin in November, 1851, and settled in the town of Dekorra, Columbia Co., where he lived about three years; thence to the town of Lodi; in 1856, he removed to Winona Co., Minn.; returned to the town of Lodi in 1863; settled where he now lives Sept. 25, 1877. He was married to Marianna Kingsley, daughter of Darius Kingsley, who came to Lodi and settled on the farm where Mr. Parke now lives, in May, 1856; Mr. Kingsley died in 1878; Mrs. Kingsley died Oct. 6, 1875. Mr. Parke has two children—Emily M., now Mrs. Walter Lamont, of Dane Co., and Harry J.; has lost two children—Elisabeth and Henry D.; when the parents of Mrs. Park came to Lodi they had nine children, all but one of whom arrived at the age of maturity; of these nine children, only Mrs. Parke and Mrs. Sarah A. Pratt are now living; farm contains 140 acres. Mr. Parke has a farm of 110 acres in Secs. 29 and 32.

S. DANFORD PRATT, farmer, Sec. 33; P. O. Lodi; was born in the town of Long Meadow, Hampden Co., Mass., in 1822; when he was 10 years of age, his parents removed to Onondaga Co., N. Y.; he removed with his parents to McHenry Co., Ill., in 1843, where he was married, December, 1845, to Miss Sarah A. Kingsley, daughter of Darius Kingsley; they came to Columbia Co. in January, 1849, and settled in the town of Dekorra, where they lived till 1853, when they removed to the town of Lodi and settled on Sec. 25; bought present farm in the spring of 1856; has two children—Wolcott, who married Miss E. Walker (they have one child—Danford W.); Noah D., married Ada M. Thompson (they have two children—George S. and Lettie M.). Mr. Pratt's farm contains 290 acres.

JOEL M. PRUYN, merchant, Lodi; son of Joel Pruyne, born in Herkimer Co., N. Y., March 28, 1843; he came to the town of Lodi, with his father, in August, 1858. He was married in 1864, to Miss Sarah L. Richmond, daughter of Anson Richmond; born in Columbia Co., N. Y., in October, 1843; her parents came to the town of West Point in April, 1855; her father died in the summer of 1856; her mother lives with Mr. Pruyne. Mr. Pruyne engaged in the butchering business with his father in Lodi in 1868, which he continued until Jan. 1, 1879; engaged in the grocery business, March, 1880. Mr. Pruyne has had three children, only one of whom is living—Howard, born September, 1865; lost son and daughter in infancy.

GABRIEL REEDAL, farmer, Sec. 27; P. O. Lodi; was born in Michigan in 1833; his parents were natives of England; they emigrated to New York, in October, 1831; thence to Michigan, in May, 1832, and to Illinois, in 1837; they came to Columbia Co. from Illinois, in November, 1849; his father died Sept. 22, 1863, in the 76th year of his age. Gabriel Reedal was married to Miss Ellen A. Marsh, daughter of George Marsh, of Portage; they have three children—Mattie, Henry and Laura.

SYLVESTER REYNOLDS, farmer, Sec. 20; P. O. Lodi; was born in Columbia Co., N. Y., in 1816. He was married to Miss Hannah Elliott, who was born in Sharon, Conn.; her parents removed to the State of New York when she was but 1 year old; they came to Columbia Co., Wis., in the fall of 1853. Mr. Reynolds purchased his present farm soon after, though he lived in the town of West Point about one year. Mr. Reynolds learned the trade of a blacksmith, at which he worked for one or two years after coming to Wisconsin. His farm contains 175 acres; has two daughters—Ida S. and Cornelia; has lost two children—Gilbert, who was a member of 23d W. V. I. during the war of the rebellion, was afterward engaged on the police force of Chicago, where he was accidentally killed by the discharge of his revolver; lost another son, Albert.

PETER RICHARDS, editor and proprietor of Lodi Valley News, Lodi; born in Ohio Feb. 2, 1828; came to Wisconsin in March, 1855; he located in Fond du Lac; thence to Madison in 1856, where he worked at the printing business for ten and a half years; he went to Baraboo, in April, 1867; he was for sometime engaged as local editor of the Independent, of that city; was afterward associated with J. C. Chandler, in the publication of that paper; came to Lodi in April, 1874; his wife was Miss Mary Daniels; they have two children—Fred and Grace.

JOSEPH H. RIDDLE, farmer, Sec. 34; P. O. Lodi; was born in New York City, June, 1839; his parents removed to Delaware Co., N. Y., when he was a child; they settled in the town of Dane, Dane Co., about 1850, where they still reside. Joseph H. married Miss Cornelia A. Simons, daughter of Frederick H. Simons, who settled in Dane Co. about 1845, from Canandaigua, Ontario Co., N. Y.; Mr. Riddle settled where he now lives in the fall of 1869; has four children—Arthur H., Ernest H., Corie and Bertie E. His farm contains 174 acres; is engaged principally in dairying.

REV. B. GILBERT RILEY, Presbyterian minister, Lodi; was born in Otsego Co., N. Y., in 1810; he began his preparatory course at Hartwick Seminary, Otsego Co.; continued under Dr. Hazellius, and at Jefferson. Schoharie Co., under Rev. Wm. Salisbury; in 1831, he entered the sophomore class of Williams College, graduating in 1834; entered Andover Theological Seminary in the fall of 1834, where he remained one year, when he assumed the principalship of Oxford Select Seminary, New York; he entered the Union Theological Seminary, New York City, in 1837, graduating in 1839; he began the ministry as Pastor of the Congregational Church at Hartwick, N. Y.; thence to Livonia, Livingston Co., in 1843, where he remained till 1855, when he became Principal of Genesee Model School, Lima, N. Y.; resigned on account of failing health in the spring of 1856; thence to Horseheads, N. Y.; came to Lodi in September, 1857, where he was Pastor of the Presbyterian Church for six years, when he was appointed Synodical Missionary of Wisconsin; he served in this capacity for thirteen years, resigning in July, 1877. Mr. Riley was married to Anna Farrell, born at Detroit, Mich.; has had five children, three of whom are living, viz., Laura E., Edward F. and Dr. Charles P. Riley, of Prairie du Sac; Mary F. married Capt. George M. Humphry; died Feb. 29, 1880; Ellen S. died in Livonia, N. Y., in 1849. Mr. Riley began teaching at 14 years of age, and has always been an earnest worker in the cause of education.

CAPT. WM. RYAN, Sec. 17; P. O. Lodi; was born in County Kerry, Ireland, July, 1825; he served seven years in the English army; came to the United States, August, 1849; lived in Boston, Mass., two years; thence to Milford, Mass., where he learned the business of boot-treeing; thence to Worcester, Mass.; afterward went to Dayton, Ohio, where he was engaged on a railroad; came to Columbia Co., April, 1857. He was married in London to Ellen Sheehan, born in Ireland; Mr. Ryan served in the army during the rebellion as a gallant and faithful Union soldier; he enlisted in June, 1861, in the 7th W. V. I.; was mustered into the service as Orderly Sergeant of Co. A, in August of that year; was promoted to Second Lieutenant, January, 1862; afterward to First Lieutenant and Brevet Captain, commanding a company in several engagements; he was severely wounded at Fitzhugh Crossing, October, 1863, from the effects of which he has never fully recovered; settled where he now lives, April, 1872; has five children—John T., Kittie M., Margareta, Wm. W. and Edmond E.

FREEDOM SIMONS, retired farmer, Lodi; born in Cayuga Co., N. Y., in 1813. His father was a soldier in the war of 1812, and one of the first settlers of Cayuga Co. Mr. Simons was married to Elmira E. Dudley, born in Cayuga in 1817; her father was also a soldier of the war of 1812; in September, 1842, Mr. Simons removed to Sauk Co., Wis.; in September, 1843, he settled in what is now the town of Springfield, Dane Co., being the first settler in that town; he removed to the town of Dane, Dane Co., about 1845, this farm is on the line of Columbia Co., in Sec. 4; he leased his farm and removed to the village of Lodi, in the fall of 1874; Mr. Simons built a part of what is now the Briggs House in 1849, which he conducted as a hotel about two years; he has eight children—Mary L., now Mrs. M. D. Mann, lives in McLeod Co., Minn.; Lydia J., married E. F. Lee, also lives in McLeod Co.; Sardis D., who was the first white male child born in Dane Co., resides at Lake Crystal, Minn.; Levantia C., wife of E. K. Whiting, of Dodge Co., Minn.; George F., of McLeod Co., Minn.; Anstis A., now Mrs. John Collins, of Lodi; De Witt C., also of McLeod Co., Minn., and Elma A.; lost one daughter, Emily S.

GEORGE T. SIMONS, proprietor of Briggs House, Lodi; born in Montgomery Co., N. Y., in 1829; he came to the town of Lodi from the State of New York in October, 1846; the following winter he engaged in the business of rail-splitting at $6 per month, the following summer as a farm hand at $10 per month; he engaged alternately in farming during the summer season, and in rail-splitting during the winter, till the fall of 1850, when he returned to the State of New York; he came back in the fall of 1852; Mr. Simons has been engaged in various occupations; in 1854, he engaged at work in a cabinet-shop in Lodi, which he continued for several years; went into the livery business in 1860, also kept a hotel about that time for one year; was Deputy Sheriff of Columbia Co. for twelve years, also Constable for many years; he bought his present hotel in 1865, which he sold again in 1869, and re-purchased in October, 1879. His wife was Miss Melissa Burroughs; they have three children—Harley N., Jessie and Ettie.

W. G. SIMONS, farmer, Sec. 33; P. O. Lodi; was born in Montgomery Co., N. Y., in 1812; he emigrated to Madison, Wis., in 1837; he settled in Sauk Prairie, Sauk Co., 1839, where he lived till 1845. He was married to Caroline L. Skinner, born in Ohio. Mr. Simons has resided on his present farm since 1845. The father of Mrs. Simons, Mr. John B. Skinner, removed from the city of Columbus, Ohio, to Iowa Co., Wis., in 1830. Mr. and Mrs. Simons have had fourteen children, nine of whom are living—Caroline, John and Mary, the first named (now deceased) were born in Sauk Co.; those born in Columbia Co. are Jennie (deceased), Ada, Joanna (deceased), Sarah (deceased), William, Clara (deceased), Harper, Evelyn, Jesse, Margaret and Grace. Mr. Simons' farm contains 145 acres.

SAMUEL STAHL, farmer, Sec. 16; P. O. Lodi; was born in Columbia Co., Penn., in 1811; his father, Abram Stahl, died in Lyeoming Co., Penn., when Samuel was about 7 years of age; he was brought up in Union Co.; when 19 years of age, he returned to Lyeoming Co., where he served an apprenticeship to woolen manufacturing. He was married to Louisa Rodgers, daughter of Joseph and Hannah Rodgers. Mrs. Rodgers was born in the State of New Jersey; they came to Milwaukee in the fall of 1848, and to Columbia Co., Aug. 1, 1849, and settled in Sec. 5; settled on present farm in June, 1854; they have had ten children, eight of whom are living—Benjamin F., resides in California; Harriet J. Tallman, of Kossuth Co., Iowa; Mary E. Grover, of Kossuth Co.; J. C.; Almira A. Davison, of Kossuth Co.; Catherine R. Streater, of Kossuth Co.; William E. and Winfield S. John F., third child, enlisted in 23d W. V. I., and was mortally wounded at the charge on Vicksburg, May 20, 1863; lost youngest child, Louisa A., who died September, 1876, aged 20 years.

REV. O. O. STEARNS, retired Baptist clergyman, Lodi; was born in Monkton, Addison Co., Vt., in February, 1810; when about 11 years of age, he removed with his parents to the town of Panton, where he lived till 21 years of age, when he went to the town of Newton, near Boston, Mass., where he began his preparatory course; he returned to Monkton, Vt., where he continued his studies; he entered the freshman class of Vermont University in 1832, where he remained one and a half years; then he entered Brown University, Providence, R. I., where he graduated in 1837; he was ordained Pastor of the Baptist Church at Sturbridge, Worcester Co., Mass., where he remained about three years; thence to Hancock, N. H., as Principal of Hancock Literary and Scientific Institution, where he remained two years; resigned on account of failing health; was afterward Principal of Rockingham Academy, Hampton Falls, N. H., where he remained one year; thence to Deerfield, N. H.; thence to Milford and Manchester, N. H.; afterward to Thomaston, Me., where he remained about three years; he removed to Racine, Wis., in 1854, where he remained about four years; thence to Winona, Minn., for about three years; his health having failed, he settled on his farm in Vienna, Dane Co., in 1862; became Pastor of the Baptist Church at Lodi in 1864, where he removed in 1867, and where he has since resided. His first wife was Miss Ann C. Valentine, born in Massachusetts; her father was for many years steward of Harvard College; she died in 1849; his present wife was Anna Ashman, born in the State of New York; Mr. Stearns has five sons by his first marriage, all of whom have received a liberal education and occupy prominent and responsible positions; John W., now President of the Whitewater Normal School, graduated at Harvard College; James H., attorney, of Freeport, Ill., graduated at Harvard; George A., attorney, New York City, graduated at Harvard; Charles A., of Janesville, Wis., graduated at the Chicago University; Edward F., also a graduate of Chicago University, is Principal of the Collegiate Institute at Burlington, Iowa.

THOMAS STRANGWAY, farmer, Sec. 29; P. O. Lodi; is son of James H. Strangeway, who settled in the town of Dane, Dane Co., from the city of New York, about 1848; Thomas was born in New York Nov. 14, 1843; he enlisted in 7th W. V. I., Sept. 9, 1861; re-enlisted January 1, 1864, served until the close of the war; was at second battle of Bull Run, where he was wounded; was at Chancellorsville and Gettysburg; was taken prisoner at the latter place; was a prisoner about two months, then exchanged; was wounded at the battle of the Wilderness, and again in the siege of Richmond. He was married to Miss Eliza Lester, of the town of Dane, Dane Co.; they have five children—Jessie, Lewis, Marian, Irene and Lynn. Has 160 acres of land.

E. B. WAIT, of the firm of Wait & Nichols, hardware dealers, Lodi, was born in Montpelier, Vt., October, 1828; his father removed to Watertown, N. Y., when he was 2 years of age, where he lived until he was 21 years of age; he went to Oswego, N. Y., where he lived about five years; in the fall of 1855, he came to Madison, Wis., where he worked at the tin trade; thence to Prairie du Sac, for one year, when he returned to the State of New York; he came to Lodi in October, 1856, where he has since been engaged in business. He was married to Miss Mary A. Bartholomew, daughter of G. M. Bartholomew; they have one son, Benson E., born July 5, 1861.

J. W. WATSON, merchant, Lodi; was born in the town of Arlington, Columbia Co., Sept. 30, 1851; he is the son of Phineas Watson, who came to Columbia Co. in 1844, and died at Poynett Nov. 5, 1876. Mr. Watson engaged in business in Lodi in June, 1878. He was married, Oct. 17, 1874, to Miss Nellie McKay, of Buffalo Co., Wis.

S. H. WATSON, attorney, Lodi; was born in England in 1837; he came to the United States with his parents in 1847, and settled in the town of Dunkirk, Dane Co., Wis., where his father still resides; Mr. Watson attended the State university, at Madison, about four years; studied law with Richard Lindsay, Esq., of Lodi, with whom he began the practice of his profession in May, 1876. His wife was Miss Margaret Patton, daughter of Mrs. Patton, who came to the town of Lodi in 1848; they have two children—Ida F. and Edward J.

SYDNEY WELLS, farmer; resides on farm of R. N. Bartholomew, on Sec. 22; P. O. Lodi; Mr. Wells is the son of Mr. T. S. Wells, of the village of Lodi; he was born in Utica, N. Y., in 1839; his parents removed to St. Charles, Ill.; then to Columbia Co. in 1846. Mr. Wells enlisted in the spring of 1861, in the 2d W. V. I.; served three years and two months; was at the first battle of Bull Run, Antietam and Gettysburg; then served as wagon-master for balance of term of enlistment. He was married to Margaret Laughlin; they have five children—Orpha L., Clara, Pearley, Addie and Amos. Mr. Wells owns a farm in the town of West Point.

SAMUEL WOODLEY, Okee; was born in Pennsylvania in 1829; he came to Columbia Co. with his parents, John and Mary Woodley, in the fall of 1845; his father settled in Sec. 7, town of Lodi, where he died June 2, 1860. Mr. Woodley was married to Helen N. Shunwey, daughter of Jeremiah D. Shunwey; they have two children—George W. and Lily Belle. Mr. Woodley was engaged in the lumber business for twenty-six years, and in the mercantile business at Okee for seven years.

TOWN OF OTSECO.

EDWARD GOMER DAVIES, M. D., physician, surgeon, oculist and aurist, Otsego; born July 5, 1846, at Glanelydog, Llanidloes, Montgomeryshire, North Wales; son of David and Susanna (Thomas) Davies; arrived here April 14, 1865; served a regular apprenticeship at drugs in the old country, under David Williams, of Newtown; on his arrival here, he engaged with Dr. Godfrey, at Brooklyn, then spent some time at Whitestown Seminary, in Oneida Co., N. Y., fitting himself for the church by wish of his parents; his sister (Elizabeth Brown) resided there, and does at this date, teaching music and organist at Grace Church, Whitestown, N. Y. (she being the eldest, as the Doctor is the youngest, of thirteen children); then went to West Eaton, Madison Co., N. Y., and studied under H. P. Mead, of Morrisonville, N. Y., then to Clayville, where he was joined by his promised wife, on Aug. 12, 1868, who was born May 16, 1846, in Radnorshire, South Wales, at Castle Cottage, near Rhayadergwy; on Jan. 22, 1869, was married by Rev. W. H. Olin, to Jane, daughter of William and Margaret (Lewis) Warrington. William Warrington was an officer in the Crimean war, and died from the effect of wounds received at the battle of the Alma; the mother of Mrs. Davies died at Newtown, in Wales. They have five children—Alma Victoria, born at Clayville, N. Y., Feb. 7, 1870; David St. Idloes, born at Otsego, Wis., July 14, 1872; Autie Rose, born at Chicago Nov. 11, 1875; William Gomer, born at Doylestown Oct. 26, 1877; Susie Matilda, born at Otsego April 20, 1880. The Doctor got one of Greeley's books on farming, and concluded to try it in connection with medicine, but after a short time concluded he knew enough of that and not enough of medicine, so gave it up, and, at first for improvement, but now from necessity, devotes his whole time to practice in his profession; he graduated at Rush Medical College Feb. 25, 1879, after completing a course under Dr. Wm. Meacher, at Portage; he has also a certificate as to proficiency as an oculist and aurist, from the Illinois Charitable Eye and Ear Infirmary; having practiced four years before graduating (by permission), he has acquired a reputation for proficiency rarely equaled by those of his age.

CHARLES A. DOYLE, Doylestown; merchant, was born June 24, 1845, in the town of Almond, Allegany Co., N. Y.; came here in 1866, then went to Nashotah as station agent, from July 1, 1867, to July 1, 1871; then traveled six months; then to Lyndon, Juneau Co., was agent there from January, 1872, to Nov. 1, 1873; then returned to Doylestown, where he has been station agent from that time, and Postmaster since Jan. 1, 1880. Was married at Lyndon, Nov. 26, 1873, by Rev. Wm. Hamilton, of Kilbourn, to Inez E. Wright, who was born Sept. 8, 1847, at Forestville, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., daughter of R. S. and Anna W. (Holmes) Wright. Mr. Wright was born Jan. 18, 1818, in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., and Ann W. Holmes was born Dec. 6, 1828, at Rochester, N. Y.; they were married Oct. 6, 1845, at Versailles, Chautauqua Co., N. Y. They have had three children—Charles A., born Aug. 31, 1874; Dora Alice, born Feb. 24, 1876; Grace Elizabeth, born Jan. 14, 1879. Mr. Doyle is engaged in mercantile business with Niels Rasmus, from Parish of Gzerpen, Norway; he came to Dodge Co. in 1844, and here in August, 1876; commenced business with Doyle, and is unmarried.

WILLIAM HENRY GASKILL, farmer, Sec. 5; 80 acres; P. O. Rio; was born May 30, 1829, in Fayette Co., Penn.; son of Morgan and Sabrina (Lane) Gaskill. Mr. Gaskill, Sr., was from Crawford Co., Penn., and Mrs. Gaskill from Ohio. William came here July 13, 1854, and settled at Rio, where he followed the river and farming. He was married Dec. 14, 1859, by Justice J. W. Stewart, to Jane A. Stewart, who was born April 13, 1834, in Bradford Co., Penn., daughter of Joseph W. and Calista (Squires) Stewart; they have had four children—Stewart M., born October, 1860, died April 8, 1864; Helen F., born Feb. 23, 1865, died Feb. 11, 1867; Stella E., born March 18, 1868; Aliee J., born June 16, 1871. Mr. Gaskill has been Supervisor and Constable, Lodge Deputy in Good Templars, Worthy Patriarch in Sons of Temperance, several times W. C. T. in Templars, and is a member of the Rio Farmers' Club, of twenty members; he is a Republican in politics, a Baptist in religion, and is Treasurer and Trustee in the church; an ultra Prohibitionist, as was Mr. Stewart, the father of Mrs. Gaskill, who was born Jan. 23, 1809, at Hartland, Niagara Co., N. Y., and was the first white child born in that county. Mr. Stewart's father was in the war of 1812. He married Calista Squires in June, 1833; came here in 1851; was a farmer, and an active Temperance man thirty years; was a liberal, generous, honest man; for years a Justice of the Peace, and died Nov. 27, 1879, of heart disease; was a Republican, the father of twelve children; they all survive him; two of them were in the Union army; he was a man of good principles, and respected by all. Mrs. Gaskill was a teacher in New York and Wisconsin from 1852 to 1859. The father of Mr. Gaskill was Captain of the "Monongahela Blues," and was commissioned by Gov. Joseph Ritner, of Pennsylvania, about 1836; he was a steamboat builder in Pennsylvania and Ohio, and owned a farm and steam saw-mill.

C. C. HOLLY, farmer, Sec. 8; 190 acres; P. O. Rio; born in Greenville, Greene Co., N. Y., in 1829; is the son of John and Irene (Palmer) Holly; came here in 1852. Married at home in 1854; had four children—Frank, born July 5, 1853; Japhet Hull, born Sept. 8, 1855; Charles Irwin, born Jan. 28, 1863; Jessie H., born March 30, 1876. Republican in politics; attends Baptist Church. Was in Co. K, 22d W. V. I.; was out three years; is now Justice of the Peace. Mrs. Holly was born Feb. 28, 1834; was daughter of Henry and Hannah (Palmer) Blemis; her father died here December, 1877, aged 74 years, and her mother died in 1865. Mrs. Holly's parents went from New York to Michigan in 1844; remained there six years and came here; on the way, at Milwaukee, after taking teams off the boat, her brothers, John and William, aged 24 and 18 years, were both drowned in the lake in a strange and unaccountable manner; the young man Hoisington, who was with them, heard them struggling in the water, and got a lantern on the wharf; and the supposition was, that the pier-tender had something to do with their death, as he soon left the place (as also did a boy who worked for him), asserting that it (the wharf) was haunted, and it was believed he confessed the crime to his wife, but it was never proven; the pier-tender soon after cut his own throat in a fit of delirium tremens, at Waukesha.

STEPHEN JAMES, farmer, Sec. 23; 220 acres, 140 acres cultivated; P. O. Otsego; born Aug. 12, 1813, in Pembrookshire, Wales; son of Daniel and Dinah (Lewis) James, came here in 1839, and went to Erie Co., Penn., and worked at the carpenter trade, thence went to Waterford a short time, and went sailing on the lakes four or five seasons as fireman and engineer; then went to Racine Rapids, wagon-making, one season; then made a wagon for himself and bought a yoke of oxen, and loaded up his wife and their effects, and started to this town; got here Aug. 15, 1844; went on foot and alone to Green Bay, to enter land; struck a hollow Indian trail and old military route; had a compass to steer by, and was gone nine days; entered south half of Sec. 23, carried on farming ever since (also wagon-making), except two years at Beaver Dam. He was the first Treasurer in the town, and made the first wagon in the town; at that time, people came from Columbus to get wagons repaired; he built the first wagon in his house (where he made a bench), and when they went up-stairs had to put a chair on the work-bench and then climb; went to Beaver Dam and sold his wagon to procure some grub, as they called it, and lumber to build a house; on his way home, he pulled stakes out of the fences to make spokes for a new wagon; the fence was at a spring where he stopped to drink (it is now the celebrated mineral springs). Mr. James is a Baptist; Republican, naturalized at Green Bay. Was married April 13, 1843, at Erie, Penn., by Rev. M. Brown (Methodist), to Rachel H., daughter of Thomas and Jemima (Fisk) Henton, (see Cyrus Root); wife was born in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., April 16, 1825; their children are Thomas D., born Feb. 23, 1846, married Emily Henton, now on Sec. 23, and has a daughter Mary, aged 2 years; Benjamin W., born April 2, 1847, married Miss May Haines, of Lincoln, Ill., now lives at Wausaw, Wis.—two children were buried last summer, both boys—he is a leading lawyer of that place; Mary J., born March 7, 1850, died April 24, 1869; Hannah C., born Jan. 31, 1853, died March 5, 1863; Stephen E., born Dec. 7, 1854, married Miss Etta Haskin, of Fall River.

LEGRAND LLOYD, farmer, Sec. 36; 80 acres; P. O. Otsego; born in Oneida Co., N. Y., Nov. 21, 1828; is a son of Washington and Amy (Hungerford) Lloyd; came to Chautauqua Co., N. Y., at 6 years of age, and six years after to Springfield, Erie Co., Penn., with parents; at 20, he came to Westfield, and remained three years; then to Erie Co., Penn., two years; and in the fall of 1854, to Dodge Co., Wis. On April 3, 1856, was married by Rev. Mr. Smith, at Saybrooke, Ashtabula Co, Ohio, to Miss Ellen, daughter of Asa and Phila (Cass) Anderson; wife was born June 25, 1834; had four children—Watson, born April 23, 1857; Anice, born July 10, 1859, wife of James P. Goodman, of Hampden; Burton, born Jan. 29, 1862; Minnie, born June 10, 1866. Mr. Lloyd is a Methodist and a Republican; has been Supervisor two years, District Clerk, President of the Otsego and Springvale Insurance Company, and Secretary of the Hampden Cheese Manufacturing Association; had one brother (Albert), died in Memphis, Tenn., during the rebellion; also, two brothers (Henry and Loammi), in navy and infantry, latter in Indian service. Mrs. Lloyd also had a brother (Charles Anderson), in army three years. Mrs. Lloyd's father was born Feb. 15, 1804, and is living in Erie Co., Penn., and her mother was born March 2, 1811, and died 1872, at Geneva, Ohio.

F. R. MORRIS, of the firm of Morris & Co., Rio.; dealers in grain, produce, hides, salt, furs, etc.; was born in Livingston Co., N. Y., Nov. 21, 1845; son of Marshal and Sarah (Hoard) Morris; came to Wisconsin in 1866, settled at Tomah, and engaged in the lumber trade; then to Arlington, on the "Madison and Portage road," where he engaged in the lumber and grain trade; then went to Texas, with a view to settlement; came back in April, 1878, and went into business here with his brother, C. M. Morris, who is unmarried. They have, in connection with the elevator, a steam "feed mill"; also an elevator at Doylestown. The father of Mr. Morris was killed at the battle of Bull Run, Aug. 30, 1862, being a member of the 15th N. Y. V. I. He had three children—Harry, born Dec. 4, 1874; Mabel, born July 3, 1876; Paul Wm., born Dec. 20, 1879. His wife was Elnora Austin, daughter of Wm. Austin; she was born Sept. 15, 1856, at Hannibal, N. Y., near Syracuse, and married at Portage, Wis., by the Rev. Mr. Ritchie, Feb. 2, 1873.

REV. HENRY R. MURPHY was born at Forge Hollow, Oneida Co., N. Y., Sept. 17, 1852; he is the son of John and Margaret (Roche) Murphy, who were from the County Wexford, Ireland, and came to America in 1850. He resided for a short time at Elba, and went from there to St. Francis' Seminary, near Milwaukee, where he remained eight years, when he took charge of the "Rocky Run Church," in Wyocena, and also of St. Patrick's Church at Doylestown, where he resides; orders conferred June 24, 1877, by Archbishop Henni; his charge embraces 125 families (about 600 members), mostly Irish. Father Murphy is, physically and mentally, a man, and a genial, "liberal-minded" gentleman; is successfully conducting a good work, and is highly esteemed by all alike, regardless of political or religious faith.

OLIVER NOBLE, farmer, Sec. 8; P. O. Rio; 140 acres, 80 cultivated; was born in Steuben Co., N. Y.; son of Harvey and Sophia (Ely) Noble, of Herkimer Co., N. Y.; came here in 1850. He was married, April 16, 1850, by Elder Jarvis, at Richfield Springs, Otsego Co., N. Y., to Charlotte Ely (born in Herkimer Co., N. Y., July 25, 1823), daughter of Gad and Lydia (Bradley) Ely, and had eight children—Sylvester E., born Jan. 11, 1851; Helen L., born Jan. 14, 1853, died Sept. 3, 1854; Martha A., born Oct. 14, 1855, died Sept. 14, 1857; Frances L., born Dec. 29, 1857, wife of Thomas Batty, at Rio; Lydia M., born July 3, 1859; Harriet S., Sept. 23, 1861, died Jan. 11, 1879; Elmore N., died at about 5 months of age; Anna A. born Aug. 30, 1867. Mr. Noble was Supervisor, Clerk, Treasurer and Director several years. Gad Ely was a soldier of 1812.

OLSON & LARSON, manufacturers of and dealers in boots and shoes, hides, leather, etc., etc., Rio.; they keep a varied assortment in stock, and they do a square business, as their patrons can testify. M. D. Olson was born in Bergen-Stift, Norway; is the son of Ole Olson and Sygnelde (Johannes-son) Olson; was born March 3, 1849; came here in April, 1871; lived in the town of Leeds three years; worked for A. Jones three years; then worked for John Peterson four years, and then bought him out; went into partnership two years ago with Peter Larson, who was born Aug. 10, 1842, at same place, as partner, son of Lars Asb Jónsson, of Stenehjelm, where his father died in 1849; his mother is now at Otsego, Wis., wife of J. Johnson; he came to America in 1873, and worked for John Peterson until he went into partnership in 1878; married at his birthplace May 23, 1865, to Ingeri Pederson, and had eight children—Martha, born Jan. 8, 1866; Lewis, born Sept. 29, 1867; Peter, born Sept. 30, 1869; Andrew, born Dec. 15, 1871; Edward, born June 26, 1874; Emma, born Oct. 8, 1875; John, born July 20, 1877; Anna Maria, born April 23, 1879. Mr. Larson's wife was born July 12, 1841. Both members of the firm are Republicans, and members of the Lutheran Church.

GEORGE ORMSBEE, farmer, Sec. 3; P. O. Doylestown; 160 acres in Secs. 2 and 3; born Jan. 15, 1829, in the town of Windham, Greene Co., N. Y.; came to Wisconsin twenty-four years ago, and to this town in 1870. Was married June 6, 1849, at Lexington, N. Y., by Rev. William Gould (Methodist), to Harriet Hosford, daughter of Willis and Lucia (Osborn) Hosford; they have had five children—Lafayette W., born Feb. 28, 1850, married to Christina Palmer, now in Smith Co., Kan.; Marion, born Dec. 18, 1851, married Mattie Sage, and living in Smith Co., Kan.; Buel S., born Oct. 4, 1853—in Smith Co., Kan., unmarried; Brazilla B., born Oct. 4, 1855, died Sept. 12, 1874; Myron H., born Dec. 10, 1857, married to Abigail Parsneau, who was born in Carleton, Kenauwee Co., Wis., March 4, 1862. Mr. Ormsbee has a good farm, and wants to sell it and go West to join his children. Brazilla B. was killed by the accidental discharge of his gun, he having carried it along, as usual, to shoot squirrels while driving the cows from pasture, and left it at the fence while milking, which being done, he attempted to pull it through the fence, when the hammer caught, shooting him in the neck, causing instant death by severing the jugular vein.

ROSWELL PALMER, farmer, Sec. 5; P. O. Rio; born Jan. 18, 1821, in Lysander, Onondaga Co., N. Y.; son of Oliver S. and Chloe (Palmer) Palmer, who were from Greene Co., N. Y.; came to Wisconsin May 29, 1842, and settled in Lisbon, Waukesha Co., then came here; was married Sept. 4, 1847, in Waukesha (then Milwaukee) Co., Wis., by Elder Timothy Palmer, his uncle, to Loretta M. Pease, who was born Aug. 8, 1827, daughter of Samuel and Olivia Pease; her mother was a widow, and married Mr. Phillips; Mrs. Palmer died Oct. 30, 1878. They have had four children—Frances O., born Oct. 8, 1848, wife of James C. Stewart, of Lowville, and has one child; C. Elmira, born July 15, 1851, died April 23, 1871, wife of C. T. Jobbins; Clara Nell S., born Dec. 19, 1854, wife of C. T. Jobbins (husband of deceased sister), married June 29, 1873, has three children, viz., George R., born June 22, 1874, Clifford L., born Feb. 21, 1877, Loretta E., born Nov. 17, 1879, now on farm; James R., born Sept. 8, 1863, died Nov. 17, 1864. Mr. Palmer has been Supervisor and Chairman, and five years a Justice; is a member of the Baptist Church, as are also his two daughters, he being Deacon; he is a Republican in politics, and Anti-Mason; he owns 120 acres of land.

M. D. PARSNEAU, farmer, Sec. 24; 100 acres; P. O. Doylestown; born in Vermont Aug. 22, 1828; son of Gilbert and Mary (Legisa) Parsneau, of Canada; came to Fall River twenty-seven years ago, and after two years went to Kewaunee, Mich., where he remained twenty years; during the Peshtigo fire he lost most of his effects, and came near losing their lives; he returned to Fall River, then to Doylestown two years, and then to this farm. Was married Oct. 4, 1853, in Jefferson Co., N. Y., by Rev. John Thomas, Rev. H. Corbin assisting, to Judith A., daughter of Seneca and Abigail (Brown) Warner, from Aldburg, Vt.; they have had eight children—Alfred W., born July 23, 1854; Nelson G., born May 22, 1856; Mary A., born June 27, 1858; Harriet J., born July 18, 1860; Abigail E., born March 4, 1862, married to Myron Ormsby, Sec. 3 (see George Ormsby, Springvale); George M., born Oct. 16, 1863; Nettie Bell, born Aug. 11, 1865; Alpheus S., born Dec. 7, 1869. Mr. Parsneau is a Republican in politics, and a Methodist. He had two brothers, Jehial and William V., and several nephews were in the army. Mr. P.'s father was in the war of 1812, and was in jail in Montreal, sentenced to be hung, when peace was declared, and he was exchanged. Mr. P. had three brothers-in-law in the army.

WENDELL A. PULVER, merchant, Otsego; (16 acres); was born Jan. 3, 1827 in Ontario Co., N. Y.; son of John W. and Sarah (Sharpsteen) Pulver, who were born in Dutchess Co., N. Y.; came here in 1847; bought land and commenced farming in 1848; he lived on his farm some eighteen years, and then went into the mercantile line in a general way, which he has followed with more than an average success up to the present time. He was married in Niagara Co., N. Y., to Miss Helen M., daughter of George and Helen E. (Mersaroll) Van Vleet. She was born on Jan. 6, 1827, and died of typhoid fever July 3, 1861; left two children—Seward F., born Aug. 1, 1848, married Annie McKay, at Rio, on farm; Alice M., born May 28, 1853, wife of M. Tillotson, Sec. 22, Otsego Township. Married the second time, May 4, 1862, by E. Blaisdel, J. P., to Emely, daughter of Abijah and Martha (Bryan) Stevens. She was born Jan. 25, 1839, in Lorain Co., Ohio; her parents being from Litchfield, Conn.; she had four children—Charles L., born June 11, 1865; M. Dell, born Feb. 14, 1868; Estella, born March 18, 1872, died Jan. 16, 1874; Claud, born Sept. 21, 1873. Mr. Pulver attends the Baptist Church, as there is no other, and is a Republican, and has done his share of office work in town, but is not an aspirant for political honors.

JOHN B. PEASE, veterinary surgeon; P. O. Otsego; was born in Columbia Co. Dec. 20, 1853; son of Wm. C. and Angeline (McNett) Pease, of Somerset, N. Y. He was married, June 25, 1862, to Alice L., daughter of Jotham and Martha (Howarth) Stone; she was born June 29, 1851, in N. Y. They were married by Elder Meredith, at Otsego, and had one child—Birdie E., born April 18, 1865. His paternal grandfather was a Captain in the navy and merchant service, and his maternal grandfather was a Captain in the war of 1812; his brother, W. A. Pease, is in Rush Medical College. Mrs. Pease had a brother (Emerson) in the late war and died at Baton Rouge. Mr. Pease has followed his business four years at this place, and has acquired a good practice and a first-class reputation; he is also agent for all kinds of farm machinery.

N. RASMUS, President of the Doylestown Library Association; organized Dec. 20, 1878, with E. C. Staek, President; Mary E. Doyle, Vice President; C. A. Doyle, Secretary; J. S. Morris, Treasurer and Librarian. Started with twenty-two members; has now twenty-seven, and owns sixty-eight volumes. Present officers—President, N. Rasmus; Vice President, Mrs. E. Smith; the others, same as above. Life membership fee, $1, yearly; dues, $1, per year, quarterly. Books purchased of E. Quinn, of Milwaukee, who earned the gratitude of members by his generous treatment of the Association.

CYRUS ROOT, retired; P. O. Otsego; was born Sept. 26, 1811, in Onondaga Co., N. Y.; is the son of Cyrus and Esther (Loveland) Root; was married in Ripley, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., by Elder John Savin, to Hannah, daughter of Thomas and Jemima (Fish) Henton, born April 20, 1817, at Venango, Crawford Co., Penn.; they had six children—Clarissa, born March 4, 1838, died an infant; Mary Helen, born July 23, 1840 (widow of John Sickles, and has two daughters, viz., Edith May, 15 years of age, born Aug. 9, 1879, and Jessie C., born in March, 1866); Henry Thomas, born May 24, 1843 (married Jane Mitchell, and has five children, viz., Oliver H., Ralph M., Harry, Alma M., Curry, Henry Root is Postmaster, Justice of the Peace, and Clerk of School District); Erastus E., born Dec. 13, 1846, died in 1848; Abbey A., born Jan. 7, 1851, died Jan. 17, 1852; Charles W., born March 2, 1854, died April 9, 1855. The following was written by Mrs. R. H. James, sister to Mrs. Root, on the death of the three children:

The chain of Love that bound us here
Stern Death has three times riven;
Why should we mourn? Those three bright links
But form three ties in Heaven.

Mr. Root came to Sec. 24, and bought a claim, when W. B. Dyer was the only man in the town; farming until 1853, when he opened a store on Sec. 22, followed that business four years, and returned to the farm; then kept stage house for a time, and was the first Postmaster in town and held it eleven years: was Justice and Treasurer, etc., for several years. Henry was in the 32d Regiment, and transferred to the 16th. Mr. Root's father was a minute-man and Fife Major in 1812, and the father of Mrs. Root was also a soldier at that time. W. B. Dyer kept the first hotel in this place, in a log house. John Boutwell built the first frame hotel, now the Otsego House, kept by Fayette Ashley. Mason Deming started the first blacksmith-shop about 1850. The first Sunday-school was organized in 1852, in the new schoolhouse. When Mr. Dodge first came to Otsego, he thrashed 300 bushels of wheat by driving oxen over it, on the ground, and then fanned it out by hand.

MRS. J. W. STEWART, P. O. Rio; 80 acres; was born March 16, 1815, at Chemung, Chemung Co., N. Y.; came here May 29, 1852; married at Factoryville, Penn., Nov. 20, 1831, to Joseph Stewart, and had twelve children—Jane A., born April 13, 1834, wife of Wm. H. Gaskill; James C., born Oct. 11, 1836, married Frances Palmer, and is at Lowville; Joseph E., born July 16, 1838, married to Salinda Lamphere, now at Fillmore, Minn.; Harrison H., born May 24, 1840, living in Montana; Wm. Humphrey, born May 7, 1842, living at Gordonville, Minn., married to Mary Jane Doran; Ann Eliza, born June 13, 1844, wife of T. Price, of Springvale; Harley D., born March 30, 1846, married Libbie Learmonth, of Rio; Charlotte M., born April 1, 1848; Stella C., born Feb. 8, 1851; Sardius D., born July 20, 1853; Cynthia E., born Aug. 16, 1855; Grant S., born Sept. 8, 1864. Cynthia is a teacher. Harrison was First Sergeant in Co. K, 51st Mo. V. I., and was slightly wounded. Joseph E. was in the 30th Iowa V. I., and at Vicksburg, Mobile, Atlanta, etc. Both were in the army about four years.

HANS HANSON TONGEN, farmer and merchant; P. O. Rio; born Nov. 2, 1856, in Saude-Prestgjeld, Norway; came to America in 1850. Married, May 18, 1854, by H. A. Preus, at Portage, to Miss Martha Rustad; had five children—Anna, was born Oct. 22, 1855, now wife of H. G. Wilson, Sec. 16, has one child; Hans, born Sept. 30, 1857, now lives at Otsego, married Eunice Carney, has one girl; Pauline, born May 13, 1860, now the wife of John J. Baukuam; Annie, born Aug. 9, 1862, single, in store at Rio; Martha, born Aug. 9, 1866, at home. Mr. Tongen is a Republican, and a member of the Lutheran Church. He is by trade a mason, which he followed in the old country, and over in this State, until he began mercantile business, six years ago. He has been Supervisor, Chairman and Treasurer. Owns 280 acres of land.

TOWN OF WEST POINT.

AMOS F. ABBOTT, farmer, Sec. 16; P. O. West Point; was born in Lemington, Essex Co., Vt., in 1822; when about 10 years of age, he removed with his parents, George W. and Lucinda Abbott, to Lyman, Grafton Co., N. H.; his father was a millwright by trade; he died in 1852, in the town of Lyman; when 17 years of age, Mr. Abbott went to Montpelier, Vt., where he learned the trade of a printer, in the office of the Patriot of that city; this business he followed for seven years; a part of this time was engaged in publishing the Coos Democrat, of which J. M. Rix was editor; thence in 1846, to Pittsburg, Coos Co., where he engaged in farming; here he also represented three towns of the county in the Legislature of Vermont. He came to Wisconsin in May, 1855, and settled on his present farm. He was married, in 1844, to Miss Emily Elliott, daughter of Daniel and Susan Elliott, born 1822; they have three children—Edna A. Bliven, born May 23, 1845; Zoe A. Bliven, March 18, 1848, and Noel G., May 14, 1853. Mr. Abbott enlisted Feb. 14, 1865, in 49th W. V. I., Col. Fallows; he was mustered into service Feb. 22, 1865, at Madison; was transferred from the 49th to the 50th, and appointed First Sergeant of Co. E; he was discharged Oct. 31, 1865, at Sioux City, Iowa.

FRANK B. ABBOTT, farmer, Sec. 33; P. O. Farris Corners; son of Moses S. Abbott, who was born in the town of Bath, N. H., Oct. 22, 1806; his father, Josiah Abbott, removed to Lemington, Vt., when Moses S. was 5 years of age; he was a soldier of the Revolution; was an Adjutant in the army, and served five years in the war of independence; he died in 1837. Moses S. Abbott lived in Vermont till 1828, when he removed to the State of New Hampshire; he came to Wisconsin in June, 1854, and settled on the farm which his son, Frank B., now owns, and with whom he resides; his wife was Sophrona Ladd; she died in 1872; he has had seven children—Sewell W., Madalon M., Adeline D., Azro G., Adalaide A., Amanda M. and Frank B.; the latter was born, on the farm which he now owns, Jan. 22, 1857. He was married, March, 1879, to Mattie, daughter of Mr. J. Atkinson, born in Door Co., Wis., in 1863. Farm contains 54 acres.

WILLIAM A. BLACKMAN, farmer, Sec. 9; P. O. Merrimac, Sauk Co.; was born in Luzerne Co., Penn., in 1842; he came to Columbia Co. with his parents in 1858, they settled in the village of Dekorra; his father, a Methodist clergyman, now resides in Sharon, Walworth Co.; Mr. Blackman enlisted in February, 1862, in the 18th W. V. I., and served till the close of the war; was at the battle of Shiloh, siege of Corinth, second battle of Corinth, siege of Vicksburg, and in all the campaigns and battles in which his regiment took part; after the war, he worked at his trade, that of a carpenter and joiner, for several years. He was married to Mary Stanley. His farm contains 120 acres.

HUBERT BOEHMER, farmer, Sec. 29; P. O. Prairie du Sac; was born in Rhine Prussia, April 30, 1834; his father died in Germany; he came to this country with his mother and family in 1852; they lived three years in Racine Co., then to Dane Co., where they lived about ten years; Mr. Boehmer bought his present farm in 1867. He was married to Sarah Lauberty, from Germany; they have five sons and two daughters—Paul, Mary, Joseph, Hubert, John, Mathias and Lizzie. his farm contains 180 acres.

NELSON G. BURLINGAME, farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. West Point; born near Sandusky, Ohio, October, 1829. His parents, James L. and Sophia Burlingame, removed from Chenango Co., N. Y., to Ohio about 1825, but they returned to the State of New York about 1830; Mr. Burlingame came to the town of West Point, from the State of New York, October, 1850; after two years, he returned to the State of New York and was married to Miss Helen Weatherby, of Madison Co.; his first settlement in Columbia Co. was in Secs. 14 and 23; he bought his present farm in the spring of 1854, where he has since resided; has three children—Mrs. Mary Farr, Carrie and Nelson D.; has lost four children—Cynthia, Leonard, Edgar and Theresa; his farm contains 120 acres. Lery Burlingame, a brother of Nelson G. resides in Sec. 15; he was born in Chenango Co., N. Y., in 1833; came to the town of West Point, June, 1855; he returned in 1857, and was married to Arlina M. Slocum; they have three children—Everet H., Ada May, and Inez E.; lost one child, a twin brother of Inez, named Ira; 105 acres.

ENIAS CARNCROSS, farmer, Sec. 14; P. O. West Point; was born in Montgomery Co., N. Y., in 1817; when 17 years of age, removed to Oneida Co., where he lived until 1850, when he came to Columbia Co., and settled on his present farm. He was married to Miss Chloe Sailsbury; born in Oneida Co., N. Y. They have five children—Lysander W., John E., W. Irving, Mary A. Hill and Martha M. Smith. Mr. Carnecross has 220 acres of land; he has been a member of the Board of Supervisors two years.

OTHNIEL CARR, farmer, Sec. 25; P. O. Lodi; was born in the town of Plainfield, Hampshire Co., Mass., in 1819. He lived in Massachusetts and the State of New York until 1846, when he came to Wisconsin; he settled on the line of Green and Rock Cos., where he entered 205 acres of land. He is a mason by trade; he lived in Janesville twenty-five years, where he worked at his trade; he settled where he now lives in September, 1878. He was married to Rebecca A. Howe; born in the State of New York. They have had six children, three of whom are living—Oliver, Amanda and Emma. His farm contains 160 acres.

WM. B. CHRISLER, farmer, Sec. 24; P. O. West Point; was born in Schoharie Co., N. Y., in 1812. He went to Montgomery Co. when a boy, where he lived until he was 24 years of age; thence to Chenango Co., where he lived about fifteen years; thence to Madison Co., where he lived five years; he came to Columbia Co., and settled on the farm where he now lives in the fall of 1856. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Carnecross, sister of Enias Carnecross; she was born in Montgomery Co., N. Y., in 1813. They have eight children—Jacob, Catherine, John W., Armina, Austiu, James A., Talcott E. and Delia D.; lost their first child—Mary M., in infancy. Farm contains 137 acres.

GIDEON CLARK, retired farmer and lumber dealer, Sec. 7; P. O. Okee; was born in Yates Co., N. Y., October, 1813; he removed to Geauga Co., Ohio, when 21 years of age; he came to Columbia Co. in the spring of 1853, and purchased a part of his present farm, where he settled in the spring of 1854; he was engaged in the lumber business for many years, from which he retired in the fall of 1877; his farm contains 360 acres. His wife was Miss Louisa Odell, daughter of William Odell; she was born May 25, 1814; they were married Jan. 12, 1837; they have had two children, both deceased—Harrison, born Dec. 25, 1837, died March 21, 1855; Perliaett F., born July 4, 1844, died April 12, 1868.

WILLIAM H. COOK, farmer, Sec. 16; P. O. West Point; was born in Boston, England, in 1827; much of his life has been passed as a sailor; he began this business when but a boy; was for several years engaged on vessels plying between England and America; he came to the United States to reside in 1846; went to New Orleans, which he made his home about two years; he, however, a part of this time, was engaged in the quartermaster's department of the American army, the Mexican war being then in progress; he afterward went to New York; thence to Milwaukee in 1851; he was then engaged during the season of navigation on the lakes for several years; in the mean time he had made him a home in Dodge Co., Wis.; he came to Columbia Co. in the fall of 1858, and settled where he now lives. He was married to Marion Madison, formerly of the city of Lincoln, England; they have eight children—Francis A., John M., William, Albert H., Annie, George, Martin J. and Sidney C. Mr. Cook is present Chairman of the Town Board; he held that position for several years in his early residence in the county; his farm contains 160 acres.

LEANDER S. DREW, farmer, Sec. 35; P. O. Farr's Corners; son of Dr. Leander Drew, one of the pioneers of Columbia Co.; Dr. Drew was born in Corinth, Vt., June 13, 1815; he was a student of Hanover and Dartmouth Colleges, graduating from Dartmouth when 23 years of age. He was married to Miss Almira Shattnek, of Manchester, Vt.; they had two children—Leander S., born Aug. 23, 1842, and Frank F., born March 9, 1844. Mrs. Drew died when her younger son was born. Dr. Drew came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1846, and located in West Point, near Crystal Lake, purchasing of the Government 400 acres of land, on which he that season built a log house, which was, probably, the first house built in the town of West Point; this house is still used as a dwelling; here Dr. Drew lived alone for two years, engaged in the duties of his profession, among the sparsely settled regions of this part of the territory of Wisconsin; in the fall of 1848, he went back to Vermont, and returned with his mother, her daughter Emily, and his two children; the Doctor erected a new house nearer the lake, in 1850; this house is now occupied by his eldest son, here, he was for a number of years engaged in the manufacture of the oil of wormwood; he continued actively engaged in his business, and in the duties of his profession, though suffering severely, from a nervous difficulty, during the last years of his life; he died Oct. 30, 1857; his mother is still living at the advanced age of 89 years. Frank F. Drew was married to Miss Emma Shurtliff; he now owns and occupies half of the original homestead; they have two children. Leander S., was married, March 15, 1866, to Miss Harriet Riddle, adopted daughter of Gideon Clark, of Okee; they have two children—Harry, born April 19, 1868, and Lois A., born Sept. 16, 1872.

JONATHAN L. FARR, farmer, Sec. 34; P. O. Farr's Corners; was born in the town of Corinth, Orange Co., N. Y., July 23, 1817, where he lived until the spring of 1841, when he went to Boston, Mass. He was married in Cambridge, Mass., to Sophrona J. Parker, born in Vermont in 1816; he resided in Boston until August, 1855; he then removed to the city of New York; he came to Wisconsin in August, 1857, and settled at Prairie du Sac, Sauk Co.; settled on his present farm March, 1862, where he has since resided; has two children—Albert L., born in Boston Oct. 12, 1850, married Mary E. Farr, daughter of Nelson Burlingame; Henry O., born at Cambridge Sept. 1, 1852. Mr. Farr's farm contains 120 acres; Albert, whose farm adjoins his father's has 60 acres.

DAVID H. FELLOWS, farmer, Sec. 14; P. O. West Point; was born in Rensselaer Co., N. Y., Feb. 15, 1827, where he resided till spring of 1857, when he came to Columbia Co., and settled on his present farm, where he has since resided. He was married to Amanda Gardner, daughter of John and Elizabeth Gardner, who came to Columbia Co. from Rensselaer Co., N. Y., in the fall of 1856; her parents are deceased. Mr. Fellows has five children—Elbert, Frank, Herbert, Sidney and Chester; lost three children in infancy. His farm contains 285 acres.

D. P. GROW, farmer, Sec. 29; P. O. Prairie du Sac; was born in the town of Newbury, Orange Co., Vt., in 1813; he came to Wisconsin in 1850; he lived on Sauk Prairie, Sauk Co., from May till November of that year, when he settled on his present farm, purchasing the land from the Government. He was married to Comfort A. Highlands, born in Vermont; they have four children—George, Martha E., Mary A. and Charles F. He has 340 acres of land. His son George lives on Sec. 20; he was born in Vermont in 1841. He was married to Libbie Sherman, born in the State of New York; they have one child, Albert.

AMASA HATHAWAY, farmer, Sec. 17; P. O. Prairie du Sac; was born in the town of Adams, Mass., in 1800; his father removed to Rensselaer Co., N. Y., when he was a child; thence to Jefferson Co., where he lived till 25 years of age; he learned the trade of a blacksmith; worked at the trade of a cooper, also, for some time. Mr. Hathaway has been married three times; his present wife was Marcia Berry; he was quite an early settler of Wisconsin; he lived in Buffalo Co. about sixteen years; thence to Sauk Co.; he settled where he now lives about 1850. His farm contains about 140 acres.

JACOB HENRY, farmer, Sec. 19; P. O. Lodi; was born in Germany in 1826; he came to America in 1849; he lived in the State of New York about five years; came to Columbia Co., Wis., in 1854, and settled where he now lives. His farm contains 80 acres. He was married to Theresa Tropf, born in Germany; they have five children—Mary, Emma, Albert, Anna and Isabelle; Albert became deaf and dumb at the age of 6 years, from scarlet fever; he was educated at the asylum for the deaf and dumb, at Delavan, Wis.

LYMAN HILL, farmer, Sec. 14; P. O. West Point; was born at Hyde Park, in what is now Lamoyille Co., Vt., in June, 1804. Mr. Hill, though not an early settler of Columbia Co., is one of the pioneers of the State of Wisconsin; he came to Milwaukee via Whitehall and Erie Canals and the great lakes in the fall of 1836; he located in Waukesha Co., on the line of Walworth Co. Mr. Hill possesses an excellent memory, and it is both amusing and instructive to listen to incidents and anecdotes, as related by him, of his early experience in the wilds of Wisconsin. His home, from Milwaukee, was twenty-six miles; in the winter of 1837, being short of provisions—a not uncommon occurrence in those days—he repaired to Milwaukee with a handsled, and returned, after an absence of but forty-eight hours, with flour and groceries sufficient to subsist himself and family for several weeks. Mr. Hill's first wife was Edna Preston; she was born in Vermont, and died in Waukesha Co. in 1852. His present wife was L. Goldthwait, also born in Vermont. He had five children by his first wife, only one of whom is living—Mrs. Mary Ann Lester. Mr. Hill settled on his present farm in 1868.

WM. H. HILL, farmer, Sec. 23; P. O. West Point; son of Cyrus Hill, who was born in Vermont in 1813; he came to the State of Wisconsin about 1837; he came from Sauk Co. to Columbia Co., and settled where his son now lives, in 1850; his first wife, the mother of Wm. H., was Miss Rhoda M. Hill; she died soon after the birth of her son, Wm. H. His second wife was Betsy Polly, whom he married in the fall of 1849. He has two children by his first marriage—Maria Livermore and Wm. H.; the latter was born in 1848. He was married to Mary Carneross, daughter of Enias Carneross; they have two children—Arthur and Harlow H. Lost one child—Cyrus E. Farm contains about 230 acres. The father of Mr. Hill now lives in Jefferson, Greene Co., Iowa.

MERRILL JOHNSON, farmer, Sec. 20; P. O. Prairie du Sac; was born in the State of Maine Sept. 13, 1827. His parents removed to Northern New Hampshire when he was an infant, where he lived until 1850, when he came to Columbia Co. His father, Samuel Johnson, came at the same time; he now lives at Wyocena. Mr. Johnson settled on his present farm in 1860. He was married to Hannah S. Colby; born in New Hampshire. They have three children—Irving N., Ernest W. and Nellie I. Mr. Johnson's farm contains 80 acres.

REV. WARREN N. KING, Baptist minister, Sec. 36; P. O. Farr's Corners; born in Windsor Co., Vt., in 1809, where he lived till 19 years of age, when he went to Boston, Mass., and learned the trade of a cabinet-maker. He was married in 1830 to Cynthia Pennoek; he removed to Canada for two years; returned to Chelsea, Vt., where his wife died. He was married, 1833, to Jane Waldo; he began the ministry in Bridgewater, Vt.; in 1844, engaged as missionary among the Brotherhood Indians in Winnebago Co., Wis.; settled in Racine in 1846, where he lived three years; he started for California in June, 1860, but stopped at Nicaragua, where he labored as missionary among the natives for about one year, returning in 1862; has four children by second marriage—Walter M., George W., Cynthia J. and Sarah A.; the two sons were soldiers in the rebellion; Walter M. was a member of 3d W. V. I.; George, 23d W. V. I. Mr. King's present wife is his third, by whom he has one son, Warren; went to California in 1869; remained two years; settled where he now lives in 1878.

J. I. NEWCOMB, farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. Farr's Corners; was born in Vermont, but his parents removed to Manchester, N. H., when he was a child; they removed to Sank Co., Wis., town of Prairie du Sac, and came to Columbia Co., and settled on present farm in 1861; his father, Bethure Newcomb, lives at the homestead with his son; his mother, Hannah C., died March 22, 1871. Mr. Newcomb was married to Delia Chrysler, daughter of Wm. B. Chrysler; they have three children—Wm. B., Lizzie C. and Rosella M. Farm contains 160 acres.

G. H. OSTRANDER, farmer, Sec. 10; P. O. West Point; was born in Albany Co., N. Y., in 1808; he afterward removed to Montgomery Co.; thence to Denmark; he came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1865, and settled where he now lives in the spring of 1866. He married Polly Hurning; born in New York; they have five children—Wilson, Wilbert, Mary, Ann and Myron; lost two children. Farm contains 114 acres. Enos, aged 6 years, was drowned in the Black River, N. Y., at Brownville.

JULIUS A. PARR, farmer, Sec. 27; P. O. Parr's Corners; was born in Franklin Co., N. Y., June 15, 1834; he came to Wisconsin with his parents, Wm. H. and Catharine Babcock Parr, in May, 1850; his parents settled in the town of Dane Co., where they resided till the death of his father, December, 1857; his mother resides in Eau Claire Co.; Mr. Julius A. Parr purchased of the Government, a farm in the town of Maxwell, Buffalo Co., where he settled in 1861. He enlisted Aug. 7, 1862, in Co. E, 25th W. V. I.; his regiment went North into Minnesota, after the Indian massacre of 1862; went South, March, 1863; participated in siege of Vicksburg, Sherman's Atlantic campaign, where he was wounded on the 9th of August, 1864; he came home on leave of absence; rejoined his regiment Nov. 14, 1864; was promoted to First Sergeant, May, 1863; to Second Lieutenant, August, 1863; to First Lieutenant, September, 1864; in Sherman's march to the sea, he commanded Co. G, and commanded Co. D from Beaufort to Washington. He was married to Maria Welch, born in Canada East. Has 138 acres of land; settled on his present farm in the fall of 1867.

DALTON PECKER, farmer, Sec. 21; P. O. Prairie du Sac; born in Lynn, Mass., Jan. 7, 1810; his ancestors were from Scotland, but came to America over two centuries ago; the house in which Mr. Pecker was born, was also the birthplace of his mother, his grandfather and his great-grandfather. He was married to Sally Bartlett, of Marblehead, Mass.; came to Wisconsin in 1861, and settled where he now lives; has two children—Abner, who resides on the homestead, and Anna, now Mrs. Chas. H. Knight; has lost three children—Mary, Sarah and Frances Gardner. Farm contains 160 acres.

SAMUEL SCHRINER, farmer, Sec. 15; P. O. West Point; was born in Lycoming Co., Penn., in 1834, where his father still lives; came to Columbia Co. in the spring of 1855; in the fall of 1858, he went to Dane Co. where he lived one year, then returned to Columbia Co., and settled at Okee. He was married to Miss Melinda Woodley, daughter of Mr. John Woodley, who died at Okee Jan. 2, 1860. Mr. Schriner settled on his present farm in the spring of 1866; has seven children—Rachel, Samuel, Emma, Mary, Frances, George and John. His farm contains 80 acres.

JOHN R. SCOTT, farmer, Sec. 7; P. O. Okee; son of John L. and Charlotte Scott; his father was born in the State of New York; his mother is a native of New Jersey; the family came to Wisconsin from Lycoming Co., Penn.; they reached Milwaukee in June, 1854, where the father died, three days after their arrival; the remainder of the family, consisting of the mother, John R. and his sister Mary, settled at Okee, town of Lodi, July 22 of that year, where Mary died on the 27th of the same month; Mrs. Scott has since resided at Okee; she bought the farm where her son now lives in October, 1854. He was married in 1866, to Rebecca Morter, daughter of John Morter, of the town of West Point; they have four children—Winfield, Lottie J., John M. and Seth T. Mr. Scott enlisted Aug. 14, 1862, in Co. H, 23d W. V. I., he was at the battle of Arkansas Post and the attack on Vicksburg, from December 22, to the night of Jan. 1, 1863; discharged for disability April 3, 1863; re-enlisted Aug. 29, 1864, and served till the close of the war. Farm contains 83 acres.

JOHN SHARP, farmer, Sec. 30; P. O. Prairie du Sac; the eldest son of Michael Sharp, who was born in St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., in 1801; the family removed from St. Lawrence Co. to Illinois, and then to Sauk Co., Wis., in February, 1845; in 1847, they settled in the town of West Point; the parents had eleven children, ten of whom are living. John was born in St. Lawrence Co., in 1824. He was married to Lydia, daughter of Charles Evans, of Prairie du Sac; they have one child—William Bertie; he has 132 acres of land.

IRA SMITH, farmer, Sec. 25; P. O. Lodi; was born in New Lebanon, Columbia Co., N. Y., July 4, 1831; his parents are Richard and Sarah (Moshier) Smith; his father was born in 1795; his mother, in February, 1797; they still reside in Columbia Co., N. Y. Mr. Smith came to Wisconsin with his brother, William E., in May, 1855, and settled where he now lives; in fall of that year, he returned to New York and was married to Lucinda Moore; she died in March, 1876. Mr. Smith has had six children, five of whom are living—Isabella, Eli, Sarah A., Theron M. and Nellie; lost second child—Ida, who died May 10, 1876; farm contains 105 acres.

WILLIAM B. SMITH, farmer, Sec. 13; P. O. West Point; was born in Columbia Co., N. Y., in 1847; his parents removed to Rennselaer Co. when he was a child; he came to Columbia Co. with his parents, April, 1865; his father now resides on Sec. 24. Married to Martha M. Carneross, daughter of Enias Carneross; they have two children—Maurice and Edith. Mr. Smith has been Town Clerk since April, 1874.

WILLIAM E. SMITH, farmer, Sec. 14; P. O. West Point; was born in Columbia Co., N. Y., March 2, 1829; in 1855, he came to West Point, and, with his brother, Ira, bought a quarter of a section of land; his half of this land he still owns; he returned to the State of New York in the fall of 1859, where he remained two and one-half years, and where he was married to Miss Amelia Snyder; he bought the farm where he now resides in the spring of 1864, where he settled in 1865; his present wife was Dolly A. Moore, born in the State of New York. Mr. Smith has one child by first marriage—Emily V.; also one by present marriage—Walter E.; he has 220 acres of land.

MRS. CATHERINE M. STONE, Sec. 14; P. O. West Point; formerly Mrs. Polley, widow of Mr. Ira Polley; is a native of the State of New York, born in 1822, where she was married to Mr. Ira Polley, from St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., in 1846, and entered the farm which Mrs. Stone now owns; his family came in 1848, and have resided on the farm since that time. Mr. Polley died in 1862. Mrs. Stone has had seven children, only two of whom are living; these are her third and fourth children, and were born in West Point—Hiram E., born 1855, and Etta M.; names of children deceased were Royal H., Herbert, John, Ernest and Inez, twins. Mr. Stone is also a native of the State of New York. Mrs. Stone has about 300 acres of land.

ISAAC VAN NESS, farmer, Sec. 19; P. O. Lodi; was born in Columbia Co., N. Y., in 1835; son of Peter and Emma Van Ness; came to West Point with his parents in 1851. He was married to Adeline Richmond, daughter of Anson Richmond, who came to the town of West Point in the spring of 1855; he died the following year. Mrs. Richmond resides with her son-in-law, J. M. Pruyn, of Lodi. Mr. Van Ness has three children—Walter P., born June, 1859; Ella Edna, March, 1863, and Richmond, October, 1867. Mr. Van Ness works part of the homestead farm; also owns a farm of 61 acres, where he settled in March, 1859.

WALTER VAN NESS, farmer, Sec. 19; P. O. Lodi; son of Peter Van Ness, who was born in the town of Chatham, Columbia Co., N. Y., in 1801; when 18 years of age, he went to Washington, D. C.; was engaged for about five years as overseer of a company of men employed in preparing timber for the United States Navy; he returned to the State of New York, and was engaged in conducting his father's farm till the death of the latter, which occurred in February, 1833; he resided in the State of New York till the spring of 1851, when he came to Columbia Co., and settled in the town of West Point, where he resided till the spring of 1869, when he removed to the village of Lodi. He was married to Emma Reed, born in Columbia Co., N. Y., Jan. 11, 1807; they have four children—Isaac, Walter, Martha and Mary. Mr. Van Ness has been entirely blind since 1878; his general health is good for one of his age. Walter was born in Columbia Co., N. Y., April, 1837. He was married to Miss Clara Shurtliff, born in the State of New York; they have two children—Frank and Leonard. Mr. Van Ness resides on the homestead, where his father settled in 1851.

TOWN OF LEEDS.

CHARLES L. BROWN, farmer, Sec. 8; P. O. North Leeds; was born in Rutland, Vt., September, 1826; he came to Wisconsin with his parents, Charles and Alvina (Sellick) Brown, June, 1846; in July following, his father purchased the farm which his son now owns, buying the claim of Nathan Stafford, where he resided till his death, Feb. 5, 1850; he was born in Connecticut Nov. 3, 1781; Mr. Brown's mother was born May 24, 1792, and died Nov. 23, 1851; Mr. B. has one brother—Justin J.—who resides in the town of Leeds, and a half-brother—Andrew Brown—living in Rockford, Ill. Mr. Brown was married in 1852 to Harriet A. Greene, daughter of Abial B. and Fanny J. (Howard) Greene; they came to Leeds from the State of New York in 1849; Mrs. Brown was born in Washington Co., N. Y.; she taught the first summer school in the town of Leeds. Mr. B. has two children—Alfred L., born April 4, 1856, and Charles L., born Oct. 23, 1865. Mrs. Brown's father died Aug. 31, 1875; her mother still lives on the homestead.

OLIVER G. CHILSON, farmer, Sec. 14; P. O. Leeds Center; was born in the town of New Haven, Addison Co., Vt., Dec. 15, 1825; when he was about 7 years of age, he removed with his parents to Genesee Co., N. Y., where the family lived about three years, when they returned to Vermont; his father died suddenly during the return journey, but the body of the father was deposited in the wagon of the returning family, taken back to Vermont, and buried in his native town; in the spring of 1844, Mr. Chilson came to Wisconsin; in June of that year, he came to Columbia Co. and located his present farm, on which the following winter he erected a shanty, near the site of his present dwelling; Mr. Chilson is, therefore, one of the pioneers of the town of Leeds; in fact, he is the earliest present resident of the town. He was married to Lydia M. Howard, born in Vermont; her parents died at the residence of Mr. Chilson; they have one son—William O., born Oct. 30, 1860; have lost two children—Henry H., born Oct. 28, 1849, died Aug. 9, 1850; Etta, born March 28, 1857, died April 17, 1859. Mr. Chilson's farm contains 230 acres.

GEORGE CHIPMAN, farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. Leeds Center; was born in Windham Co., Vt., September, 1828; he came to Rock Co., Wis., in 1849; he returned to Vermont the following spring, came back to Wisconsin in 1852; purchased a farm in Dane Co. in the spring of 1853, also 80 acres in the town of Leeds; has been a resident of the town of Leeds since 1854. He was married October, 1860, to Martha A. Saylor, born in Vermont. Mr. Chipman's mother died when he was 2 years old; his father came to Wisconsin and resided with his son several years prior to his death; Mrs. Chipman's parents came to Columbia Co. from Vermont in the spring of 1855, and settled in the town of Leeds; they are still living—her father 86 and her mother 78 years of age. Mr. Chipman has two children—William, born May, 1863, and Mabel Inez, born March, 1867. Mr. C.'s farm contains 320 acres.

JOSEPH FAEBER, M. D., Sec. 21; P. O. Leeds; was born in Austria in 1839. He attended the medical department of the University of Vienna, graduating in 1862; he was Surgeon of the navy of Holland, from Feb. 1, 1864, to March, 1866, when he came to the United States. He came to Portage, where he remained till November of that year, when he located where he now resides, engaged in the practice of his profession. He was married in 1869, to Emily Koch, daughter of G. A. Koch. They have two children—Helen and Edward.

JESSE W. HELDIN, farmer, Sec. 32; P. O. De Forest, Dane Co.; was born in Armstrong Co., Penn., in 1818. He removed to Pittsburgh, thence to Steubenville, Ohio, thence to Cleveland; left the latter place in the spring of 1832; took part in the Black Hawk war; has been a resident of Wisconsin since 1839; he passed several years in the pinery region. In 1847, bought the farm of Wm. Lawrence, which lies partly in Dane Co. and partly in the town of Leeds, on which he has since resided. His present wife was Mary J. Borbridge; born in Dublin, Ireland. Has one daughter by the first marriage, and two children by the second marriage; the names of the latter are William and J. W. Present farm contains 80 acres.

ALONZO JONES, farmer and breeder of imported Spanish merino sheep, Sec. 1; P. O. Leeds Center; was born in Hubbardton, Rutland Co., Vt., Aug. 13, 1819. He was married Dec. 31, 1848, to Martha M. Howard, born in Washington Co., N. Y., in 1829. Mr. Jones came to Wisconsin, in October, 1847, and purchased his present farm, where he located in the spring of 1849. He has six children—Josephine, wife of Mr. John Lowe; Norman A., Edward H., Fanny C., John H. and Helen M. They lost their third child—Evangeline B. His farm contains 200 acres; he makes a specialty of breeding merino sheep; has a fine flock, a part of which are the pure Hammond, and the balance are descendants from the Jarvis and Humphrey importations.

G. ADOLPH KLEINERT, farmer, Sec. 17; P. O. North Leeds; is the son of August Kleinert, who was born in Prussia, Germany, in 1809. He came to the United States with his family in 1853, and settled on the farm where he now resides with his son G. A. He has three children; G. Adolph, who now owns the homestead and with whom the parents reside, was born in Prussia in 1840. He was married to Frederica Rennebohn; born in Brunswick, Germany. They have six children—Adolph, William, Alfred, Edwin, Otto and Herbert. Farm contains 280 acres.

WILLIAM C. KLEINERT, farmer, Sec. 29; P. O. Leeds; is the son of Mr. August Kleinert; he was born in Prussia in 1838; he came to the United States with his parents in 1853. He was married to Miss Louisa Lubiens, daughter of Mr. Fred Lubiens, who came to the town of Leeds, from Germany in the spring of 1849; Mr. Lubiens was the first German settler of the town of Leeds. Mr. Kleinert has been Chairman of the Town Board for six years, and Town Treasurer for three years. His farm contains 80 acres.

JOHN McQUEEN, farmer, Sec. 9; P. O. North Leeds; was born in Crawford Co., Penn., in 1818; he came to Wisconsin in 1842; was engaged about ten years in the pine region of the State, during which time his home was at Grand Rapids, Wis.; he located where he now lives about 1856. He was married to Catherine Birch; they have five children—Ada, H. B., John, Clarence and Martha. His farm contains 400 acres.

WILLIAM MORRISON, farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. Leeds Center; son of James Morrison; came to the United States from Scotland in the fall of 1842; the family lived about two years near Milwaukee; thence to the town of Windsor, Dane Co., where he resided till his death in 1877; his mother still resides at the homestead in Dane Co. Mr. William Morrison was born in Scotland in 1829. He was married to Agnes Dawson, daughter of James Dawson, who emigrated from Scotland to the State of New York in 1842; thence to Waukesha Co., Wis.; thence to Madison in 1852; her father died in 1862; her mother, in 1860. Mr. Morrison has lived in Columbia Co. about twenty-five years; he settled on his present farm in the fall of 1868. Has four children—William M., James D., Annie C. and Edwin. Mr. Morrison has 640 acres of land.

A. S. PACKARD, farmer, Sec. 15; P. O. Leeds Center; was born in Otsego Co., N. Y., Feb. 4, 1815; his father afterward settled in the city of Albany; in the spring of 1839, Mr. Packard came to the town of Milton, Rock Co., Wis.; in June of that year, he helped to raise the first house erected in Janesville, Rock Co.; he resided in Rock Co. for about fifteen years; he came to Columbia Co. and settled in the town of Leeds in the spring of 1854. He was married to Lydia L. Ives, born in the State of New York Oct. 3, 1829; she is the daughter of E. M. and Elizabeth Ives, who came from Cortland Co., N. Y., to Rock Co., Wis., in the spring of 1845, where they lived about five years, and then settled in Sec. 15, town of Leeds, where they still reside. Mr. and Mrs. Ives have four children—Norman M., born Jan. 4, 1826; Lydia L.; Lucy J., now Mrs. Henry Clark, born March 19, 1832; Eunice, wife of G. Hall, Rio, born July 3, 1838. Mr. Packard has three children—Elizabeth F., now Mrs. M. H. Wright, of Ashtabula, Ohio; Eugene M., now Mrs. Anna Boynton, also resides at Ashtabula, and Norman Edward.

JAMES W. ROBINSON, farmer, Sec. 1; P. O. Leeds Center; was born in Castleton, Rutland Co., Vt., Oct. 3, 1822, where he resided until June, 1846, when he came to Columbia Co.; his farm now contains 320 acres, 120 of which he purchased of the Government, at the time he made his location. His first wife was Maria Theresa Flagg; she was born in Rutland Co. Aug. 20, 1821, and died Dec. 2, 1855; his present wife was Sarepta Seville, born in Ontario Co., N. Y. Mr. Robinson has one son by first marriage, James F., he lives in Kansas; has two children by second marriage—Edward M. and Horton B. In the fall of 1856, Mr. Robinson removed to Columbus and engaged in the produce business; returned to his farm in 1861; he is engaged quite extensively in stock-raising.

THOMAS SANDERSON, farmer, Sec. 33; P. O. Leeds; was born in Yorkshire, England, in 1827; he came to this country with his parents, Thomas and Francis Sanderson, in September, 1851; his parents settled in the town of Randolph, Columbia Co.; his father died September, 1878, his mother died in 1853. Mr. Sanderson was married to Miss Margaret Stevenson, daughter of Mrs. Esther Caldwell, of the town of Arlington; they have one child—Ettie. Mr. Sanderson settled in the town of Leeds, in 1862; he purchased his present farm in 1865; he is one of the largest farmers of the town of Leeds, has 640 acres of land. He was a member of the Assembly for 1871.

SMITH J. SCOTT, farmer, Sec. 5; P. O. Lowville; was born in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., March 26, 1823; he came to Columbia Co. in the fall of 1845, and made a claim in Sec. 28, town of Lowville, where he lived seven years; located where he now lives in February, 1852. He was married to Mary Corbet, daughter of Mr. A. Corbet, of Chautauqua Co.; they have five children—Luella B, now Mrs. Ambrose Eynou, resides in Minnesota; William A., resides in Nebraska; Elliott C., resides at the homestead; Helen F. and Estella. Mr. Scott is one of the prominent farmers of the town of Leeds; his farm contains 525 acres.

C. EDWIN WOODFORD, physician and teacher, Sec. 36; P. O. Keyser; now teaching district school No. 6; born in Onondaga Co., N. Y., in 1838; he came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1860; he lived at Viroqua until the fall of 1862, when he returned to the State of New York; came back in 1867; since that time has been a resident of Leeds. He was married to Celestia Castner; they have three children—Truman, Walter and Edgar.

TOWN OF NEWPORT.

JOHN L. BAYERLEIN, proprietor of "Dell Saloon," Kilbourn City; born in Bavaria, Germany, in 1850; he came to this country with his parents in 1853; they lived in Schuylkill Co., Penn., about three years; thence to Adams Co., Wis., in 1856; he engaged in business in Kilbourn City in 1871; his wife is also a native of Germany; they have three children—Edward, Charles and Anna.

CAPT. J. BELL, Kilbourn City; born August, 1837; came from St. Clair Co., Mich., to Newport, Wis., in 1856; has resided in Kilbourn City since 1863. Mr. Bell is prominently known as Captain of the Dell Queen, which steamer he built in the fall of 1876, and was the first steamer of any importance that navigated the Dells of the Wisconsin River; this boat he owned and operated till it was burned, in June, 1878; the boat was rebuilt, of which he is still in command. He was married to Mary Christie, daughter of Col. James Christie, of Sauk Co.; have two children—Herbert and Ernest.

HENRY H. BENNETT, artist, Kilbourn City; was born in 1843; he came to Kilbourn City from the East with his parents in 1857; he enlisted in 1861 in the 12th W. V. I., served three years, was at the siege of Vicksburg and other important campaigns; was wounded at Paducah, Ky., by the accidental discharge of his own gun; was discharged at the expiration of his term of service, Nov. 5, 1864; he engaged in the photograph business at Kilbourn City in 1865; he now, however, makes a specialty of stereoscopic views, which he began publishing in 1868; the beautiful and romantic scenery of this part of Wisconsin has afforded him ample opportunity to pursue his favorite study, and the hundreds of beautiful views that he has produced attest his success as an artist. He was married to Frances Douty, whose parents settled in Adams Co., in 1858; has three children—Hattie, Ashley and Nellie.

HON. JONATHAN BOWMAN, attorney at law, Kilbourn City; is among the most prominent of the early settlers and those who gave shape to the future of this section; he was born at Charleston, Montgomery Co., N. Y., May 16, 1828, and is by profession a lawyer; he first read law in the office of H. & T. Fish, of Fultonville, in his native county, and afterward completed his studies and graduated at the State and National Law School of that State, at Ballston Springs, in 1850; he came to Wisconsin in May, 1851, and settled at Delton, Sauk Co.; soon after his arrival, he opened an office in Delton, and commenced the practice of his profession, and was soon enjoying the reputation of being one of the best lawyers of the county; in 1852, he started the village of Newport, of Columbia Co., in company with the late Gen. Joseph Bailey, who achieved notoriety as the builder of a dam across the Red River during the late civil war; in 1853, he moved to Newport, and, in 1862, he again changed his residence to Kilbourn City, where he has since resided. Mr. Bowman has occupied several positions of trust and honor; in 1860, he was an alternate delegate from this State to the National Republican Convention held in that year in Chicago, which resulted in the nomination of Abraham Lincoln for President; in November, 1861, he was elected to represent the First District of Columbia Co. in the Assembly; he was elected State Senator for the Twenty-fifth Senatorial District in 1862, which office he held for two terms, or four years; in 1864, he was chosen one of the Presidential Electors on the Republican ticket, and was Chairman of the Electoral College for that year; again, in 1874, he was chosen member of the Assembly from the First District of Columbia Co., by a handsome majority, there being only twelve votes cast against him in his own township. Mr. Bowman was also one of the Directors of the C., M. & St. P. R. Co., from 1875 to 1879, inclusive; in addition, he has been the attorney for nearly all the different corporations which have been formed to utilize the water-power, both at Newport and Kilbourn City; he was made President of the Bank of Kilbourn soon after its organization in 1867, which position he has held ever since, and still continues in the practice of his profession. In 1856, the subject of this sketch married Miss Hannah J. Davis, of Montgomery Co., N. Y.; he has five children—Ella D., Abram D., Asa, Jennie and Emma. Not among the least of this worthy gentleman's labors is the best young lawyers he has sent forth from his office; the first who achieved any note was James C. Edson, who studied with Mr. Bowman at Newport; he commenced the practice of law at Glencoe, Minn., at the same time founding and editing the Glencoe Register; he entered the army and returned a Colonel; he still practices his profession at Glencoe. The next student was Isaae A. Fancher, who afterward located in Isabella City, Mich., where he still continues in the practice of the law; he has been elected to both the Assembly and Senate of that State. Then follows Michael Griffin, who enlisted as a private in the 12th W. V. I., and attained the rank of Captain; at the close of the war, he entered the office of Mr. Bowman and remained there till his election to the Assembly, in 1875; then commenced the practice of law at Eau Claire, Wis., with Judge Ellis, and was elected to the Senate in 1879. Following Mr. Griffin was Henry P. Barlow, son of ex-Attorney General Barlow, and, at the present time, a promising young lawyer of Baraboo, Wis. Charles F. Crosby was the next; he first began to practice in Rock Co., Minn.; he was County Judge of this county for a time, and also a member of the Assembly of that State; Mr. Crosby is now practicing law at Wausau, Wis. W. H. Mybrea, the present Postmaster of Kilbourn City, is another of Mr. Bowman's students. About the same time, Thomas J. Connor, son of Thomas Connor, of Kilbourn City, also read law in the same office, and has since located at Jenny, Wis. The success of these various students indicates the excellences of the teacher.

JOHN W. BROWN, cashier of Bank of Kilbourn, Kilbourn City; he is the son of John J. and Esther E. Brown; his parents removed from the State of New York to Milwaukee in the summer of 1857, and came to Kilbourn City in the fall of that year, and engaged in the mercantile business; his father was appointed Postmaster during the administration of President Buchanan, which office he held till 1865; was also for some time engaged in the photograph business; his father removed with his family to Minnesota in July, 1865, returning in June, 1866; he removed to Chicago in 1877; the other children of the family are Robert L. C., Clarence T. and Francis R., all of whom reside in Chicago; John W. has been employed in the Bank of Kilbourn since 1869, was appointed cashier in 1870.

JANET CONE, widow of David Cone, Sec. 8; P. O. Kilbourn City; born in Albany, N. Y., in 1807. Married to David Cone, also born in 1807; after marriage, lived in Steuben Co., three years; thence to Wyoming Co., and to New Berlin, Wis., in June, 1849; Mr. Cone went to California in April, 1850, returned in October, 1851; purchased and settled on the farm now owned by Mrs. Cone, in June, 1852; Mr. Cone died in August, 1877, of cancer in the stomach; Mrs. Cone had ten children, six of whom are living—Persis, Janet, Elizabeth, Cornelia, Daniel and Alvah; Alvah is one of the three sons born at the same time; the other two died in infancy; they were born in August, 1857. Alvah was married to Mary Laffin, born in Columbia Co.; has three children—Harvey, Cora and Hubbard; Mrs. Cone had five children at two births, Elizabeth being one of twins. The farm contains 160 acres.

WILLIAM H. FINCH, proprietor of Finch House, Kilbourn City; was born in Greene Co., N. Y., in 1840; he enlisted in the fall of 1862, in the 144th N. Y. V. I., served till the close of the war, came West in 1865, and located at Reedsburg, Sauk Co., where, with his brother, he was engaged in the harness business for about seven years; he then purchased the Mansion House at Reedsburg, which he conducted for two years; he sold his hotel in the spring of 1875, and purchased his present hotel. He was married to Miss Mary L. Dwinnell, daughter of S. A. Dwinnell, of Reedsburg; they have three daughters—Eva, Essie and Marion. Mr. Finch is successful and popular as a hotel man, and the reputation of his house is doing much toward making the Dells of Wisconsin a popular resort.

M. H. HASKINS, farmer, Sec. 6; P. O. Kilbourn City; born in Allegany Co., N. Y., in May, 1837; came West with her parents in August 1847; lived in Beaver Dam some time; thence to Le Roy, Dodge Co.; thence to Adams Co. He enlisted in the 10th W. V. I., in 1861, served three years. Married Julianne Woodworth, native of Lower Canada; located on his present farm March, 1869.

FRANK HILL, proprietor of livery stable, Kilbourn City; was born in Ohio in 1838; came to Portage City in the spring of 1857; was for some time employed as foreman in surfacing on railroad, between Pardeeville and Portage City; went to Milwaukee, and was engaged one year on what was then the M. & M. R. R.; was engaged for some time in a flouring-mill at Fulton, Rock Co., thence to Pardeeville; came to Kilbourn City in 1862, where he was engaged in a flouring-mill for about three years; engaged in the livery business in July, 1864. He was married, in 1863, to Amelia Bunnell, a native of Ithaca, N. Y., whose parents are now residents of Mauston, Wis; they have two children—George W. and Ida May.

JOHN HICKEY. Kilbourn City; was born in County Clare, Ireland, about 1829; he came to the United States in 1856; went to Canada, where he remained one year; then returned to Ireland, but came back to the United States in 1866; he was in New Orleans and other parts of Louisiana for a few months; thence to St. Louis, and thence to Kilbourn City Aug. 28, 1866, which he has considered his home since that time. Mr. Hickey has been for twelve years in the employ of the W. W. R. R. Co.

STEPHEN HUNGERFORD, farmer, Sec. 3; P. O. Kilbourn City; born in Fulton, Oswego Co., N. Y., in 1818; his parents moved to Syracuse when he was a child; he lived in Onondaga Co. till he was about 17 years of age; he went to Livingston Co. in the spring of 1835; returned to Syracuse in the fall of that year; also lived about two years in Broome Co.; he went to California in 1850, and engaged in mining; returned in 1854; removed to Branch Co., Mich., in the fall of that year. He was married, in 1843, to Miss Lydia M. Root; resided in Michigan till the spring of 1864, when he came to Wisconsin, and located where he now lives; he has seven children—Mary A., now Mrs. Marcius A. Rublee; Henry Clay, resides in Iowa; Orville J., Charles Sumner, Fred R.; Frances A. and Louis. Mr. Hungerford's farm contains about 200 acres.

G. W. JENKINS, M. D., Kilbourn City; born in Schenectady, N. Y., in 1824; when 16 years of age, he removed with his parents to Schoharie Co.; in 1842, he engaged in teaching at Palatine Bridge, Montgomery Co., where he taught about three years; in 1846, he engaged in teaching in the town of Glen, Montgomery Co.; about this time, he began the study of medicine with Dr. Biggam; he graduated at the medical department of the University of the city of New York in 1851, after which he practiced for some time with his former preceptor, Dr. Biggam; he came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1851, and settled at the mouth of Dree Creek, afterward Newport; he located in Kilbourn City in the fall of 1861. He was married to Mary Markham, daughter of Sidney D. Markham; has one daughter, Kate, born August, 1863. The Doctor is a very popular and successful physician, and possesses a large and valuable practice; he is President of the Columbia County Medical Society, and a prominent member of the American Medical Association.

GEORGE P. JULSON, farmer, Sec. 19; P. O. Kilbourn City; born in Norway in 1840; he is a brother of Hans Peterson; his father settled on the farm where George now lives, in 1849. He was married to Helen Tofenson, a native of Norway; they have four children—Dene M., Hans, Andrew and Ann. His farm contains 119 acres. He is a member of the Lutheran Church.

EDWARD W. KINGSLEY, farmer, Sec. 19; P. O. Kilbourn City; born in Venango Co., Penn., in 1818; he came to the pineries of Wisconsin in 1837; in February, 1838, he went to Sauk Co., where Baraboo now stands; he assisted in building the first saw-mill at that place, where the first lumber was manufactured in the summer of that year; in the fall of the same year, he made a claim in what is now the town of Lyons, where he located in 1840; he came to his present location in the fall of 1851; his home has been within a radius of seven miles of where he now lives, for about forty-two years; for about twenty-five years of that time, he has been engaged during the summer season on the Wisconsin River; Mr. Kingsley is one of the earliest settlers of this part of the State; his most intimate associates during his early residence here were the Indians, who formed the principal part of the population of this part of Wisconsin at this time. His first wife was Miss Jane Gibson, who died in the spring of 1857; his present wife was Martha Ulson, a native of Norway; he had seven children by his first marriage, five of whom are living; Jefferson, the oldest son, enlisted in Co. K, 18th W. V. I.; he was killed at the battle of Shiloh; Mr. Kingsley has eight children by his second marriage. He has 180 acres of land.

CHARLES KLEMMÉ, merchant tailor and clothier, Kilbourn City; was born in Germany in 1853; came to the United States in 1871; lived at Franklin, near Milwaukee, for five years, engaged in tailoring; came to Newport Township with his parents in 1876; came to Kilbourn City and engaged in his present business in March, 1880.

B. KRECH, proprietor of city meat market, Kilbourn City; born in Saxony, Germany, in May, 1839; he came to this country in 1854; lived in Beloit, Wis., about three years; thence to Portage City, where he lived about six years; came to Kilbourn City in April, 1868; has been established in business here since that time. He was married to Anna Romal; has six children—George, Cora, Frank, Mary, Christina and Effa.

JULIUS LEUTE, proprietor of brewery and saloon, Kilbourn City; born in Germany in 1830; he came to the United States in 1853; lived in Philadelphia about two years; removed to Mineral Point, Wis., in 1856; thence to Newport, and to Kilbourn City in 1858, and engaged in the shoemaking business; engaged in the brewery business in 1861, in the brewery built by his brother, Andrew Leute, and Joseph Meehler. He was married to Francisca Stierley; they have six children—Charles, Julius, Andrew, Mex, Fannie and Mary.

MAJ. CHARLES MOELLER, proprietor of saloon, Kilbourn City; was born in Saxony, Germany, in 1821; served the army of his native land; came to the United States in 1852; lived in Waukesha Co., Wis., two years; removed to Milwaukee in 1854. Married Elizabeth Brahm; lived in Milwaukee till 1857, when he came to Kilbourn City; kept hotel till 1861, when he enlisted in the 4th W. V. I., and was made Orderly Sergeant of Co. D; as he had had experience in military service, he was soon after transferred to the Louisiana Artillery as Drill Sergeant; was afterward promoted to a lieutenantcy in the brigade of Gen. W. T. Sherman; being disabled, he resigned in January, 1864; he returned to Kilbourn City, and engaged in the hop business, which he followed for many years.

GEORGE C. McELROY, M. D., Superintendent of the "Kilbourn Hygienic Institute," Kilbourn City; was born in Beaver Co., Penn., in September, 1841; studied medicine in Philadelphia; attended lectures at the "Hygeo-Therapeutic College," at Florence Heights, N. J.; his wife, formerly Miss Amanda McMaster, born at Jamestown, Penn., Dec. 22, 1845, is associated with him in the superintendency of the institute, she having received the same preparation for her profession as her husband; they became connected with the institute April 5, 1879, and assumed their present position in February, 1880.

G. M. MARSHALL & SON, founders and machinists, Kilbourn City. Mr. George M. Marshall, Sr., member of this firm, was born in Canada East May 13, 1834, though his father was a native of the United States, and a cousin of the eminent Rufus Choate; his mother was a native of Scotland. Mr. Marshall was educated at Williston Academy, Vt., having removed with his parents to that State in 1842; he entered as an apprentice in a foundry and machine shop, at Burlington, Vt., in 1850, and commenced business as a carriage maker, at Shelbourne Falls, Vt., in 1856; came to Wisconsin in 1865, and settled at Big Springs, Adams Co. He served two years as Chairman of his town; as a member of Assembly two terms; he was appointed by Gov. William E. Smith one of the Commissioners under Chapter 273, Laws of 1877, to examine and test such steam or road wagons as may be presented, to compete for the $10,000 reward offered the State, for a cheap and practical substitute for the use of horses and other animals, on the farm and road. The subject of this sketch was Chairman of the Commission. Mr. Marshall was married to Julia A. Hoyt, a native of Vermont; has three children—Frank, Evaline and Ruth; lost four children in infancy. Frank, who is associated with his father in business, was born at Shelbourne Falls, Vt., April 12, 1856; this firm is building up a fine business in Kilbourn City; they are engaged in the manufacture of Marshall's patent blacksmith shears, upsets, power corn sheller, improved Jonvil turbine water-wheels.

CLARK D. MUNGER, deceased, formerly of the firm of Walker, Munger & Co., Kilbourn City; was born in Warsaw, Wyoming Co., N. Y., in 1827; he came to Kilbourn City in 1856. He was married to Miss Martha Pettibone, of Warsaw, N. Y.; he died Nov. 17, 1890. Mrs. Munger has one son—Ellis D., born Oct. 30, 1858; has lost three children—Charlotte, Frank and Henrietta.

WILLIAM H. MYLREA, attorney and Postmaster, Kilbourn City; son of Catharine Mylrea, was born in Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 1, 1853; his father came to this country from the Isle of Man in 1840; he returned to his native isle in 1849. He was married and returned to the United States in 1850. Mr. Mylrea's parents came to Kilbourn in 1856, where they still reside. They have three children—William H., Charles E. and Susan J. William H. was educated at Lawrence University, at Appleton, Wis., which he attended about five years; he entered the law school of Madison, in January, 1878; was appointed Postmaster at Kilbourn City, in March of that year; prepared himself for the practice of law, in the office of Jonathan Bowman, Esq., of Kilbourn City; was admitted to the bar, at Portage, Wis., May 13, 1879.

ANDREND NELSON, farmer, Sec. 5; P. O. Kilbourn City; has 250 acres in farm; born in Norway, October, 1828, came to the United States in August, 1848; he lived with Mr. Clark Young, in the town of Leeds, Columbia Co., for about five years; settled on his present farm in 1854. Was married the same year to Melinda Cone, born in Genesee Co., N. Y., in May, 1835. Mr. Nelson has been Supervisor several years; also Treasurer of the district several terms.

GEORGE F. NOBLE, retired; Kilbourn City; was born in Addison Co., Vt., in 1818; he came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1843, and settled in Walworth Co., where he engaged at his trade, that of a carpenter; he removed to Newport in the spring of 1855; he came to Kilbourn City in December of that year; he worked at his trade until about 1860; from that time until 1873, was engaged in the stock and produce business. Mr. Noble was the first Justice of the Peace in Kilbourn City; has served in that capacity for about twenty years; has also been Town Treasurer and Assessor of Township. He was married to Miss Angeline Cornwall; they have had three children, two of whom are living—

Andrew E., resides in Iowa, and Frank H., resides in Roseburgh, Oregon. Their daughter, Mrs. Cornelia Maria Sorrenson, died at Portage, December, 1875.

CHARLES A. NOYES, station and express agent, Kilbourn City; was born in New Hampshire in 1828. He removed to Milwaukee, Wis., in 1847, when he went to Two Rivers and engaged in the lumber business; came to Kilbourn City in December, 1863. He was married to Bessie Ely, born in Saratoga Co., N. Y.; her father, Ambrose Ely, settled in Milwaukee in 1840. Mr. Noyes has two children—Lilly and Mary P., now Mrs. Edward Perry, of Kansas City.

GEORGE OSWALD, proprietor of Oswald's Beer Hall, Kilbourn City; was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1832; came to the United States in the fall of 1865; lived in Milwaukee, where he worked at his trade, shoemaking; came to Kilbourn City in February, 1867, where he also worked at his trade until May, 1879, when he engaged in his present business. He was married to Louise Gohl; born in Germany. Has four children—Wilhelm, Gustave, Louise and Clara.

WILLIAM H. PEABODY, farmer and proprietor of stone quarry, Kilbourn City; born in Oneida Co., N. Y., in 1812. His father, Eliphalet Peabody, was a soldier in the war of 1812; he died in 1820 of disease contracted while in the army. His mother, with her family, removed to Otsego Co. about 1826. Mr. Peabody's first wife was Miss Sabrina Strong; they were married in 1841; Mrs. Peabody died in 1847. In 1854, he was married to Mrs. Harriet Washburne, formerly Miss Harriet Hungerford, born in Otsego Co., N. Y., in 1828; they came to Kilbourn City in June, 1857. Mr. Peabody has one son by his former marriage—Durant B., who resides in Paris, Ill. Mr. Peabody is an earnest champion of temperance, and a sworn enemy of intemperance, which he has been fighting all his life. His wife is a member of the M. E. Church.

HANS PETERSON, farmer, Sec. 17; P. O. Kilbourn City; was born in Norway Feb. 15, 1831; came to this country with his parents in 1849; his father made a claim in Sec. 19; his father died in Dane Co. in December, 1876; his mother died at the homestead, now owned by a brother of Mr. Peterson, George P. Julson, in 1870. Mr. Peterson was married in December, 1856, to Eliza Tufson, native of Norway; her parents came to Wisconsin in 1844, and to Columbia Co. in 1853. Mr. Peterson owned a farm in Sec. 20 for thirteen years; purchased his present farm in the fall of 1872; has 120 acres. Has seven children—Peter H., Mattie, Mary E., Hans J., Emma C., Augusta L., and Norah H. Members of the Lutheran Church.

JOHN J. PURCELL, telegraph operator, Kilbourn City; son of Joseph Purcell, native of Ireland, who came from Brooklyn, N. Y., to Milwaukee in 1855, and to Kilbourn City in 1857; has one son, John J., and four daughters; the former was born May 31, 1856. He learned the business of telegraphing in the office where he is now employed, beginning in January, 1873.

WILLIAM A. RAMSAY, hop-dealer, Kilbourn City; was born in the State of New York in 1832; he came to Adams Co., Wis., in 1855, where he resided till 1857, when he located at Kilbourn City; he was engaged in the grain business for several years; has been engaged in the hop trade since 1859; also owns farm near town, of 75 acres. He was married to Margaret A. Fay, native of Onondaga Co., N. Y. They have seven children—Olive C., George A., Minnie A., Lillian A., Wm. A., Ernest E. and Jennie C.

RICHARD B. ROSE, proprietor of Farmers' Hotel, Kilbourn City; born in Jefferson Co., N. Y., in 1823; came to Jefferson Co., Wis., in 1841, where he lived till 1849; engaged in the manufacture of lumber. He removed to Adams in 1849, and engaged in farming; went to California in 1852 and engaged in mining and the lumber trade; returned to Adams Co. in 1857; enlisted in 1864, in the 37th W. V. I., and served till the close of the war. From 1872 to 1876, was Superintendent of the County Poor Farm of Adams Co.; came to Kilbourn City August, 1876; had charge of the Commercial Hotel for one year; built the Farmers' Hotel in 1877. He was married to Miss Sarah E. Pike, a native of Ohio. They have one son, Harrison, who resides in Kansas.

GEORGE SMITH, grain dealer and proprietor of elevator, Kilbourn City; was born in Yorkshire, England, in 1818. He came to the United States from London in the fall of 1855. He resided in Milwaukee till the summer of 1857, when he removed to Kilbourn City. He began the grain business in the summer of 1860, which business he has since followed. His wife was Miss Susan Hales, also born in England.

CHARLES W. SNIDER, of the firm of "Hansen, Snider & Co.," hardware dealers, Kilbourn City; born in Fulton, Co., Ill., in 1850; married Miss Minnie Dunker, daughter of Henry H. Dunker. They have one child—Harry. His father, J. R. Snider, of Kilbourn City, was born in Clark Co., Ind., in 1822. His parents afterward removed to Yates Co., N. Y.; thence to Steuben Co.; thence to Fulton Co., Ill., in 1837. Mr. Snider came to Newport in 1850, and engaged in the lumber business; came to Kilbourn City in 1868. His wife was Miss Harriet Kelsy, born in Illinois. They have four children—Nettie, now Mrs. J. G. Wilmar; Charles W., Frank R. and F. B.

WILLIAM SNOAD, Justice of the Peace and Police Justice, Kilbourn City. Mr. Snoad is a shoemaker by trade. He was born in East Kent, England, in 1812. He came to the United States in the fall of 1832. He lived in Albany, N. Y., till the fall of 1834; then removed to Rochester, where he lived till 1851. He then came to Wisconsin; lived in Waukesha Co. for some time; thence to Dell Prairie in 1854. He came to Kilbourn City in 1858; was elected Justice of the Peace in 1866, which office he has held most of the time since; is also, at present, Police Justice. Mrs. Snoad is also a native of England. Has five children—Mrs. Sarah A. Armstrong, Mrs. Eliza J. Armstrong, Harriet E., William George, resides in Texas, Mrs. Victoria A. Blodgett.

ALONZO B. STEARNS, farmer, Sec. 17; P. O. Kilbourn City; was born in Worcester Co., Mass., April 17, 1824; his parents removed to Canada when he was a child; he returned to Massachusetts when 17 years of age, and attended school in Middlesex Co. till he was 21 years of age, after which he resided in Worcester till 1848, when he came to Wisconsin; he lived in Iowa Co. till the following spring, when he came to Columbia Co., and made a claim of his present farm, which he purchased when the land came into market, in the fall of 1853; Mr. Stearns has the honor of being the first settler of Newport Township; his parents came to the State in 1851, and resided with their son; his mother still lives with him; his father died Feb. 5, 1877, in his 88th year; his mother was born 1791. Mr. Stearns was married June, 1852, to Antoinette M. Calkins, born in Steuben Co., N. Y., in 1832; her parents removed to Illinois about 1836; thence to Iowa Co., Wis., in 1843; they have had eleven children, eight of whom are living—Lorenzo D., Levi A., Isabella M., Nettie, Orra R., Lorena, Willie N. and Adelaide; their first child, John W., was killed by the running-away of a team, when 11 years of age; the others, deceased, died in infancy. Mr. Stearns' farm contains 200 acres. He has served as Assessor, Treasurer and Collector of Newport Township several terms.

DR. JOSEPH F. STILLMAN, physician and druggist, Kilbourn City, was born in Rensselaer Co., N. Y., Oct. 31, 1831; his parents removed to Jefferson Co. and to Lewis Co., when he was about 8 years of age; he pursued the study of medicine and received his diploma from the Medical Board in the fall of 1855; he removed to Oxford, Marquette Co., Wis., in the spring of 1856, where he resided till the spring of 1875, when he came to Kilbourn City. He conducts a drug store in connection with his medical practice. His wife was Miss Susan S. Pierce, native of the State of New York. He has four children—Elmer A., Flora A., Harvey A. and Ernest J.

FRANKLIN C. STRAW, farmer; P. O. Kilbourn City; was born in Orange County, Vt., in 1832; he removed to Adams Co., Wis., September, 1856, and settled in the town of Dell Prairie, where he resided; engaged in farming till the spring of 1878, when he removed to Kilbourn City; Mr. Straw still owns a large amount of land in Adams Co.; he is owner of the "Kilbourn Hygienic Institute." Has built him a fine residence, and made other valuable improvements to the village of Kilbourn City. He was married to Mary A. Waugh, also born in Orange County, Vt.; they have two children—Celia and Frank W.

PERRY G. STROUD, attorney at law, Kilbourn City; was born at Clinton, Oneida Co., N. Y., Nov. 30, 1834, while his parents were temporarily living at that place, his father, Charles Stroud, at that time having been engaged in that locality as a contractor with the State for building the canal; the actual residence of his parents was at Canastota, in Madison Co., N. Y., where they have ever since resided; Mr. P. G. Stroud was educated at Oneida Conference Seminary, at Cazenovia, N. Y. He went to McHenry Co., Ill., in 1854, where he married Miss Helen M. Bishop; he came to Newport, in Sauk Co., Wis., in 1855, and engaged in the mercantile business there with his brother, A. B. Stroud; in 1857, he returned to Kilbourn City, where he has since resided, and in 1858, he engaged in the practice of law, in which profession he has ever since been and is now engaged; he has two children, a son and a daughter; his son, Wm. S. Stroud, is about 23 years of age; was educated at Lawrence University, at Appleton, Wis., and was admitted to the bar at the May, 1878, term of the Columbia Co. Circuit Court, after a thorough examination by ex-Chief Justice L. S. Dixon, ex-Attorney General A. Scott Sloan and Hon. E. E. Chapin, since which time he has been in his father's office; the daughter, May D. Stroud, is now pursuing her studies at Lawrence University; Mr. Stroud has taken an active part in the business and private affairs of the town; also been active in politics, but has never been an office-seeker; he was a strong Republican until the Greeley campaign, since which time he has acted with the Democrats; in 1876, contrary to his wishes, he was placed in nomination for State Senator on the Democratic ticket; at the election, his own town gave him a majority, while giving a majority for the rest of the Republican ticket, the Republicans carrying the district by about one thousand four hundred majority; in 1878, the Democrats again placed Mr.

Stroud in nomination for the office of District Attorney of Columbia Co.; he was induced to accept the nomination, though without any expectation of election, the regular Republican majority in the county being from 1,000 to 1,800; again his own town gave him a majority, he receiving 193 votes to his opponent's 60, while the Republican majority in the town was 47; at the time Mr. Stroud ceased to act with the Republican party, the town, county, assembly, senatorial and congressional districts, and also the State, in which he resided, were all strongly Republican, in which party he had a good standing, having frequently represented his town in county conventions, and his county in congressional and State conventions, showing that political preferment had no influence over his political views or actions. Mr. Stroud has a good reputation as a lawyer and a public speaker; enjoys the confidence and respect of the people where he is best known, and is highly respected by men of all political parties for his candor and fairness in his public discussions of political questions.

GILBERT B. VANALSTINE, farmer, Sec. 12; P. O. Kilbourn City; born in Onondaga Co., N. Y., Feb. 22, 1832; his parents removed to Buffalo when he was a child; from Erie Co., N. Y., to Erie Co., Penn.; thence to Ashtabula Co., Ohio, and to Newport, Wis., in 1853; Gilbert B. went to sea in 1849; he was engaged in a coasting vessel, between New Orleans and Boston, for one year; in February, 1850, shipped on board the Monongahela, a whaling vessel of New Bedford, for four years; in February, 1851, landed at the island of Juan Fernandez, where he remained about six weeks. A feeling of dissatisfaction existed between the officers and crew; Mr. Vanalstine engaged passage on a Spanish brig to Valparaiso, Chili, where they remained about two months; in May, 1851, shipped on board an American vessel, Capt. Wood, bound for Europe, which vessel Mr. V. and comrades left at Hong Kong, China; shipped thence to New York, where they arrived September, 1851; was afterward engaged on a coasting vessel between Charleston, S. C., and New York; returned home in December of that year; was afterward engaged on the great lakes for several years; came to Adams Co., Wis.; enlisted February, 1865, in 49th W. V. I.; served about a year. Was married to Amelia V. Rea, of Adams Co.; have six children—Florence E., Gilbert E., Mary C., Byron R., Walter C. and John F., the last two twins; located on present farm in 1870; number of acres in farm, 160.

NATHANIEL VANALSTINE, wagon-maker and blacksmith; born in Onondaga Co., N. Y., in December, 1826; learned his trade in Erie City. Married Nancy Hawes, of Erie City, Penn.; lived in Crawford Co., Penn., for six years; came to the village of Newport in 1854, and to Kilbourn City in 1856; was burned out in the fall of 1866. Mr. Vanalstine has three children—Eugene, Gilson and Lillian, now Mrs. Frank Durea, of New York City.

IRVING W. YORK, of the firm of Walker, Munger & Co., proprietors of flouring and planing mills, Kilbourn City; born in Brookfield, Madison Co., N. Y., in 1833; his parents removed to Warsaw, Wyoming Co., when he was 6 years of age. He was married to Eliza C. Munger, of Wyoming Co.; came to Kilbourn City September, 1856; all the members of the firm came from Wyoming Co., N. Y., about the same time; they were associated in the building of their planing-mill in 1858; in 1860, built the flouring-mill. Mr. York has three children—George E., Hattie M. and Ernest R.

TOWN OF LEWISTON.

OLE M. BENDIXEN, farmer, Sec. 20; P. O. Lewiston; born in Norway in 1833; he came to this country with his parents, Tollag and Anna Bendixen, in the fall of 1850; his father settled on Sec. 17, where he still resides; his mother died in the fall of 1861; Ole is the only child of his parents now living. He enlisted, November, 1861, in Co. D, 15th W. V. I., and served three years and four months; he participated in all the battles in which his regiment was engaged, including the siege of Island No. 10 and the battle of Murfreesboro, till the battle of Chickamauga, where he was wounded and sent to the hospital, where he remained about ten months, when he again rejoined his regiment, and was mustered out of service Feb. 13, 1865; he enlisted as a private, was made a Corporal, and Second Sergeant December, 1862; in consideration of his gallant conduct as a soldier, he was breveted Captain at the close of the war, to date Oct. 8, 1863. He was married to Julia P. Scott, a native of Norway; they have four children—Anna M., Josephine T., Ellen S. and Tollag B. L. He settled where he now lives in June, 1867; he has 220 acres of land.

DENNIS CANNON, farmer, Sec. 2; P. O. Portage; was born in County Donegal, Ireland, in 1812; he came to the United States in 1827; lived in Wilmington, Del., for about four years, when he returned to Ireland; returned to the United States, and locating in Wilmington resided there about six years; he came to Wisconsin and settled on his present farm in 1855. He was married to Celia McCurdy, born in Ireland; they have twelve children, nine sons and three daughters. Mr. Cannon's farm contains 120 acres.

JAMES AND WILLIAM CLARK, farmers, Sec. 10; P. O. Portage City; sons of Mr. James and Ann (Bain) Clark, who came to the United States from Scotland, in the spring of 1849; Mr. Clark made a claim of the farm now occupied by his sons, James and William, in the fall of that year, where he remained till his death, which occurred in September, 1873; his widow resides at the homestead. The parents had seven children, all of whom are now living—Joseph, Elizabeth (now Mrs. McFarland, of Dane Co.), James, Mrs. Ann Robbins, William, Susan and Mary Ann; James was born in Scotland, about 1840; William was born about 1846; Susan and Mary Ann reside at the homestead. The farm contains 240 acres. They are members of the Presbyterian Church.

J. P. COLBURN, farmer and cooper; P. O. Briggsville; son of A. W. Colburn, who came to Columbia Co. from Waukesha Co., and settled on Sec. 20, Newport Township, in the spring of 1855; he was born in Genesee Co., N. Y., and came to Waukesha Co. with his parents in 1846. He enlisted, Feb. 1, 1864, in the 23d W. V. I.; was in Banks' Red River campaign, at the battles of Sabine Cross Roads, La., Pleasant Hills, Cane River, Bayou Sara, Spanish Fort, etc.; was transferred to the 35th Regiment, and made a corporal of Co. C; was mustered out of service March 15, 1866. Mr. Colburn was married to Lucy C. Jacobs, daughter of Lester Jacobs; have four children—Frank L., Cora M., Lester and Lucy May. He settled on his present farm in February, 1877; he has 115 acres.

E. B. CRAIG, farmer and stock-dealer, and owner of Menomonee House, Marquette Co., Sec. 4; P. O. Briggsville; was born in Burlington, Vt., in 1821; his parents removed to Clinton Co., N. Y., when he was about 12 years of age; he went to California in the fall of 1849, and engaged in mining; returned to Clinton Co., N. Y., in the fall of 1850; he came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1851, and settled near Briggsville, Marquette Co., but purchased his present farm at about the same time; built his hotel in 1853, which, being on the old pinery road, did a large business, in the earlier history of the county; the hotel and farm have been successively in charge of L. V. Rich, William Robinson, William Treadwell and the present occupants, Jonathan and Asa Douglass. Mr. Craig has resided on the farm since 1854. He was married to Harriet Hayes, born in Clinton Co., N. Y. Mr. Craig is engaged in buying and selling of stock.

RICHARD DEMPSIE, student, resides with his brother-in-law, Mr. Joseph Hay, Sec. 26; P. O. Portage. Mr. Dempsie was born in Portage in September, 1855; his parents, Richard and Mary Dempsie, came to Portage in 1849; his father was thrown from his wagon and killed by the running away of his team, October, 1864; his mother, by a former marriage with Mr. John McDonough, had four children; of these, William McDonough, enlisted in 1863 in 19th W. V. I., served one year; she had five children by her marriage with Mr. Dempsie, all of whom are living. George Dempsie, brother of Richard, enlisted March, 1862, served three years.

D. D. EIGHME, farmer, Sec. 2; P. O. Briggsville; born in Buffalo, N. Y., July, 1838; his father, Daniel Eighme, native of the State of New York, removed from Buffalo to Pennsylvania; thence to Illinois, and to Lewiston Township in 1849; he is now a resident of Adams Co., Wis. Mr. Eighme was married to Ann Worden, born in the State of New York; they have three children; settled on his present farm in 1874.

DR. JOHN EWING, farmer, Sec. 4; P. O. Portage; born in Vermont in 1816; he removed to Chautauqua Co., N. Y., with his parents, in 1835. He was married in 1835, to Angeline Needham, born in Vermont; in the fall of 1849, he came to Columbia Co.; he lived in Lowell one year and came to Lewiston Township in the fall of 1850; settled on the farm where he now lives in the spring of 1854. He has four children—Mariette, Jasper, Malvina and Edgar A.; he lost two children—Oscar and Malvina, aged respectively 16 years and 14 months. Dr. Ewing has been Chairman of the Board of Supervisors one year, and Town Treasurer one term; his farm contains 160 acres of land. Besides attending to the business of farming, Dr. Ewing has practiced medicine, more or less, for many years.

JOSEPH G. HAY, farmer, Sec. 26; P. O. Portage; was born in Nunda, Livingston Co., N. Y., August, 1824; removed to Pennsylvania in 1849; came to Columbia Co. in 1851, where his father, Almon Hay, settled, locating on Sec. 17, Lewiston Township. Mr. Hay was married, March, 1866, to Harriet A. McDonough, whose mother, then Mrs. Richard Dempsie, came to Portage in 1849. Mr. Hay's farm contains 160 acres.

ANDREW ISAACSON, farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. Lewiston; was born in Sweden in 1835; came with his father's family to the United States in 1851; they came to Columbia Co. and settled on Sec. 22, where they now reside; his parents had three children, Andrew being the youngest. His wife is a native of Norway; has six children—John A., Henry, Charles, August A., Edward and Susan A.; lost one daughter, Mary C.

ANDERS JERTSON, farmer, Sec. 21; P. O. Lewiston; born in Norway in 1821. Married to Martha S. Jertson; came to the United States in 1850; lived a few months at Pine Lake, Wis., when he came to Columbia Co.; he settled on his present farm about 1866; has seven children—Swen, Hans, Nellie, Ann, Amelia, Martha, Sophia. Mr. Jertson and his oldest son, John Jertson, enlisted during the war of the rebellion in the 1st Regiment U. S. Heavy Artillery; John died at the hospital in Alexandria, June, 1865. Mr. Jertson's farm contains 190 acres of land; his improvements are good.

JAMES H. JERTSON, carpenter and builder, Sec. 22; P. O. Lewiston; born in Norway, 1844; he came to the United States with his parents, Hans and Aslang Jertson, in 1850; his parents soon after came to Columbia Co. and settled on Sec. 22, where they now reside; Mr. Jertson is, by trade, a carpenter and builder. His farm contains 160 acres; his improvements are good. He was married to Clara C. Isaacsen, daughter of Lars Isaacsen; has four children—Ann M., Herman L., George C., and an infant son.

E. F. LEWIS, farmer and manufacturer of knit underwear, Sec. 21; P. O. Lewiston; was born in New London Co., Conn., July 16, 1821; he removed with his parents to Cortland Co., N. Y., in 1830; then to Rock Co., Wis., in 1839, where they resided till their death; his father died in 1858; his mother died in the spring of 1874; in June, 1849, Mr. Lewis came to Columbia Co., and made a claim of the farm which he now owns. He was married, April 19, 1841, to Miss Betsey L. Barrett, born in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., March 29, 1819; her parents removed to Ashtabula Co., Ohio, when she was a child, then to Rock Co., Wis., in 1838; her father, Stephen Barrett, was a soldier of the war of 1812; was a member of M. B. Tubb's company, New York militia; he died Oct. 24, 1877, aged 86 years; her mother died March 10, 1879; they died at the residence of Mr. Lewis where they had resided since March, 1875; Mr. Lewis has had seven children, three of whom are living—Stephen B., Franklin F., and William L.; his oldest son, Judson A., enlisted August, 1862, in Co. C, 23d W. V. I. was made second Corporal of the company, afterward promoted to Sergeant, and was killed in the charge on the enemy's works at Vicksburg, May 22, 1863, at the age of 19 years and 8 months; Edward B., fifth child, born Dec. 28, 1852, died June 4, 1872; Charles L., second child, and George W., sixth child, died in infancy. Mr. Lewis, in honor of whom the town was named, made the third settlement in the town of Lewiston, and is the earliest present resident; he was elected Sheriff in 1856, and has served as Under Sheriff two years; has held various township offices, and was appointed Deputy Provost Marshal for Columbia Co. in July, 1863, served till the close of the war; during his long residence in Columbia Co., Mr. Lewis by his sterling qualities, has maintained the respect and esteem of the people, and is a worthy representative of that pioneer element of our country, which laid the foundation for our present success and prosperity as a State. Stephen B. Lewis, born July 12, 1848, graduated at the State Normal School, Whitewater, Wis., 1875, married Elizabeth Church, of Whitewater. Franklin F. Lewis, born Sept. 28, 1850, married Victorine Rockwell, of Whitewater; has one child, Mabel.

WILLIAM McDONALD, farmer, Sec. 10; P. O. Portage City; was born in Wayne Co., Ohio, in 1824; his parents removed to Jefferson Co., when he was about 8 years of age. Mr. McDonald was married in 1849, to Elizabeth Cannon, a native of England; they came to Columbia Co. in the spring of 1851, and settled on Sec. 26, Lewiston Township, on the farm now owned by his sons, David and John; he bought his present farm of Hans Osmundson in 1854, where he settled permanently in 1859; has twelve children—David, John E., Nancy, Samuel, William, Ann, Margaret, Elizabeth, James, Abraham L., Ulysses S. and Julia. Mr. McDonald enlisted in the 1st Heavy Artillery, September, 1864, served till the close of the war; his father, David McDonald, was a native of Inverness, Scotland; he came to this country and settled in Columbiana Co., Ohio, about 1811; he died in March, 1870; his mother was born in West Virginia; died November, 1878. His farm contains 484 acres; his improvements are second to none in the town of Lewiston.

CARL PHEHLER, farmer, Sec. 32; P. O. Lewiston; was born in Prussia, Germany, in 1825; he came to the United States in 1850; came to Lewiston Township and settled on his present farm in 1851. He was married to Wilhelmina Myer; they have five children—August, Carl, Ernst, Gustaf and Lizzie. His farm contains 200 acres. He and wife belong to the Lutheran Church.

PETER TENNISON, farmer, Sec. 17; P. O. Lewiston; born in Norway in 1842; came to this country with his parents in 1852; his parents settled in Lewiston Township, but now reside in Faribault Co., Minn. Mr. Tennison enlisted in 1861 in the 18th W. V. I.; served till August, 1865; he entered the service as a private; became successively Corporal, Sergeant, Orderly Sergeant and Second Lieutenant, receiving his commission as Lieutenant in the spring of 1865; he participated in many of the severest battles of the war; was at the battle of Shiloh on both days of that desperate struggle; at the siege of Corinth, battles of Corinth and Inka; was wounded at Jackson, Miss., and taken prisoner May 14, 1862; was a prisoner about three months when he was exchanged; he was also at the battles of Chattanooga, Altoona Pass, etc.; at the expiration of his term of service, he re-enlisted and served till the close of the war. Mr. Tension bought his present farm in 1867. He was married to Cornelia C. Olson, born in Wisconsin; has three children—Becca H., Oscar T. and Carl A.; his farm contains 120 acres.

ALBERT SHARP, farmer, Sec. 7; P. O. Briggsville; was born in Germany in 1833; came to the United States in 1851; has been a resident of Lewiston Township since that time; he settled on Sec. 27 in 1857; located on his present farm April, 1877. He was married to Lizzie Hilderbrandt; they have six children—Sophia, Frederick, Charles, Henry, William and Emma; farm contains 215 acres.

C. F. SIEWERT, farmer, Sec. 23; P. O. Colburn; was born in Prussia, Germany, in 1825; he came to the United States in the fall of 1850; settled on his present farm in 1851. He was married in 1854 to Henrietta Hickithier, born in Prussia; they have nine children—Wm. Gustaf, Elizabeth, Charles, Julius, Otto, Ida, Emma and Benjamin; farm contains about 300 acres. Mr. Siewert served as a soldier in the German army for two and one-half years; also served in the Union army during the rebellion for about nine months, in Co. D, 46th W. V. I. Mr. Siewert came to this country with his parents, who had seven children; his parents live on the farm of their son, C. F.

DEWITT C. STEPHENS, farmer and pilot on the Fox and Wisconsin Rivers, Sec. 17; P. O. Lewiston; born in Lamolle Co., Vt., in 1831; removed with his parents to Washington Co., N. Y., in 1842, where he resided till 1858, when he came to Columbia Co.; he was engaged on the Fox River, between Portage and Green Bay, from 1861 till about 1866; from 1866 till 1871, had charge of a boat running between Portage and Oshkosh; since that time, has been engaged as pilot for the Government on the Wisconsin River. Mr. Stephens purchased his present farm in 1858, where he resides during the close of navigation. He was married to Ella R. Bissell, born in Vermont; farm contains 85 acres.

B. H. WILMSEN, farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. Colburn; was born in Prussia, Germany, in November, 1822; he came to the United States in the spring of 1854; he settled on his present farm in the fall of that year. Was married, June 4, 1854, to Elizabeth Hebben, born in Germany; have ten children—Maria L., John G., Ernst A., Albert E., Matilda A., Bertha S., Napoleon J., Herman R., Charles and Cecelia; lost one daughter in infancy; farm contains 660 acres. Mr. Wilmsen has been Town Treasurer two years, and Town Clerk for about eight years.

TOWN OF ARLINGTON.

MRS. ESTHER CALDWELL, widow of the late John Caldwell, Sec. 7; P. O. Poynett. Mrs. Caldwell was born in Scotland, where she was married to James Stevenson, born March 15, 1808; they came to this country in 1853, and settled in the town of Dekorra, afterward removed to the town of Caledonia, where they lived about two years; then returned to Dekorra, where Mr. Stevenson died December, 1857; his widow married Mr. John Caldwell, who died May, 1879, in his 72d year. Mrs. Caldwell had eight children by her first marriage, six of whom are living—Jane, Ella, Maggie, Nettie, Andrew and Annie; has one son John, by second marriage. Andrew Stevenson, at present, has charge of his mother's farm; he was born in Scotland in 1849; he has lived quite a number of years in the town of Leeds; he has taught eleven winter terms of school; taught eight terms in District No. 5, town of Vienna, Dane Co.

WILLIAM CALDWELL, farmer, Sec. 17; P. O. Lodi; is the son of John Caldwell, who came to this country from Ayrshire, Scotland, 1850; the family consisted of father and five children; the mother having died in Scotland; they passed the first winter in the town of Caledonia; the following year removed to Arlington, and finally settled in Sec. 6. Mr. Caldwell, Sr., married Mrs. Esther Stevenson; he died in May, 1879, in his 72d year; his children by first marriage are living, except one daughter Janet. William Caldwell was born in Scotland in 1828. He married Miss Ann McIntyre, also born in Scotland; they have ten children—John, Ann, William A., Robert, Peter, Elizabeth R., Samuel L., Margaret, Jane O. and Katie May; lost one son, Andrew, in infancy. Farm contains 460 acres.

JOHN DUFF, farmer, Sec. 16; P. O. Poynette; was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, in June, 1819; he came to Columbia Co. from Delaware Co., N. Y.; he lived in the town of Lowville one summer; thence to the town of Arlington, Sec. 21, where he lived eight years; thence to his present location Nov. 26, 1863. He was married to Caroline Warren, born in England; they have eight children—Alexander, James W., Arthur E., George A., John A., Eliza, Frank E. and Edwin; lost their fifth child, Charles S., in his 14th year. Farm contains 280 acres. He is engaged principally in stock-raising.

P. H. GUNNISON, farmer, Sec. 21; P. O. Lodi; was born in Canandaigua, Ontario Co., N. Y., in 1832. He was married to Miss Frank More, born in the State of Michigan; came to Wisconsin in January, 1856, and purchased his present farm of Ephraim Hazlet April 17, 1856; his parents still reside in Ontario Co., N. Y., on the farm where they have lived for fifty years. He has eight children—Edna M., Irwin L., Charles N., George H., Emma A., William N., John H. and Alice F. His farm contains 160 acres.

IVER LARSON, farmer, Sec. 32; P. O. Lodi; born in Norway in 1829. Married Betsy Spoonam in 1853; came to the United States the same year; bought present farm in 1855; have nine children—Lars M., Edwin C., M. Lena, Clara, Sarah, Emma, Adolph, Herman and M. Riber. Mr. Larson has 88 acres of land. Members of the Lutheran Church.

LOUIS LINTNER, farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. Arlington; was born in Prussia, Germany, in 1834; his father's family emigrated to the United States in 1848, and settled in Erie Co., Penn.; they came to Columbia Co. in the fall of 1854; settled in the town of Randolph in 1855; afterward removed to the town of Courtland. Mr. Louis Lintner settled on the farm where he now resides in the fall of 1867. He was married to Margaret Mueller, born in Hesse, Germany; they have six children—Samuel, Frances, Henry, Benjamin, Louis and Theodore. Mr. Lintner has 324 acres of land; they are members of Evangelical Church. His father resides with him.

OLE J. LIONE, farmer, Sec. 32; P. O. Lodi; was born in Norway in 1820; came to this country in 1847; lived in La Fayette, Co., Wis., about seven years; then came to his present location. His wife is also a native of Norway; they have three children—Magdalena, John and Lars; their daughter, Martha, married and residing in Minnesota, died Aug. 30, 1879. Mr. Lione has 140 acres of land. He and family are members of the Lutheran Church.

HUGH McFARLANE, farmer, Sec. 10; P. O. Poynette; born at Plumb Bridge, County Tyrone, Ireland, in 1875. Mr. McFarlane is not only one of the earliest settlers of Columbia Co., but also of Wisconsin; he came to the Territory in 1835; he was for some time at the lead mines, in what is now Iowa Co.; he first came to Portage in 1837; he is one of the founders of that city, where he located permanently in 1843, where, for many years, he was engaged in lumbering and merchandising. He was a member of the last Territorial and first State Legislature of Wisconsin. He located where he now lives in 1859. His first wife was Sarah Dunn, born in Ireland; she died July 14, 1862; his present wife was Ann C. Wells, born in Berkshire Co., Mass.; he had eight children by first marriage, four of whom are living—Mary Ann, now Mrs. O. P. Williams; Matilda, now Mrs. P. L. Knappen; Sarah, now Mrs. T. F. Knappen; Lizzie D., now Mrs. A. Arthur Clark; his oldest son, Andrew J., enlisted August, 1862, in the 23d W. V. I., and was mortally wounded at the siege of Vicksburg May 19, 1863; he enlisted as a private; when wounded, was First Lieutenant, and in command of his company; he was a graduate of the University of Wisconsin; the other children deceased died in infancy; has two children by second marriage—Clara W. and Hugh. His farm contains 300 acres.

ANDREW MAIR, farmer, Sec. 15; P. O. Poynette; was born in Ayrshire, Scotland, in January, 1835; came to the United States in the spring of 1854; lived in Rock Co., Wis., one year; thence to Jefferson Co., one year; came to the town of Arlington in 1857; settled on his present farm in the spring of 1861. Married to Elizabeth Wilson, daughter of James Wilson; have seven children—Charles, Mary, Agnes, Margaret, James, Thomas and Robert. Mr. Mair's farm contains 240 acres.

THOMAS MAIR, farmer, Sec. 4; P. O. Poynette; was born in Ayrshire, Scotland, in September, 1821; he came to the United States in April, 1849, and settled in Rock Co., Wis.; located where he now lives in the fall of 1855. He was married in Scotland to Agnes Jemison, sister of Hugh Jemison, of Poynette; they have nine children—Charles, Janet, Hugh, Agnes, Jeanie, Mary, Sarah A., Minnie and Maggie; lost two children in infancy; the two oldest were born in Scotland. Mr. Mair visited his native land in the fall of 1874. His farm contains 177 acres.

MARK MEDDOWCROFT, farmer; Sec. 1; P. O. Poynette; was born in England in 1820; his father died in England; he came to this country with his mother's family in 1840; he remained in the East till 1847, where he was engaged in work at his trade—that of a mason; in June of that year he came to Wisconsin, and settled on his present farm. His wife was Sarah Rowley, born in England; she died in February, 1867; he has had eleven children, nine of whom are living—Irene, Amanda, Jesse, Ann, Reuben and Ransom (twins), Hannah and Sophia (twins), and Millie; lost oldest and youngest. His farm contains 315 acres; it lies in the three towns, Arlington, Dekorra and Lowville. He is engaged quite extensively in stock-raising. His mother had six children when she came to this country; only himself and a younger sister, now living in Iowa, survive.

REV. CHARLES SCHNEIDER, Pastor of Emmanuel's Church, of the Evangelical Association; born in the town of Girard, Clayton Co., Wis., in 1849, where he resided with his parents until about 19 years of age, when he entered the Northwestern College, at Naperville, Ill., where he remained about four years; he entered the ministry in the spring of 1872, at Beloit, Wis.; thence to Washington the following year, where he remained two years; thence to Madison for one year; thence to Whitewater for three years; came to his present location in the spring of 1879. He was married to Emma Thilke, daughter of John Thilke, of Prairie du Sac, Sauk Co.; have two children—Cora and Adda; lost second child, Reuben.

HUGH SLOAN, farmer, Sec. 15; P. O. Arlington; was born in Ayrshire, Scotland, about 1816. He came to the United States in 1841, and lived in Whitewater, Wis., till about 1847, when he came to Columbia Co., and settled in the town of Dekorra, Sec. 34, on the farm now owned by Mr. Newton; he purchased his present farm in the fall of 1868, of Mr. R. B. Sanderson. His wife was Miss Marion Freeland, born in Scotland. Mr. Sloan's farm, consisting of 160 acres, is one of the best of the many fine farms in the town of Arlington; his beautiful grove of evergreen trees, containing about five acres, is unsurpassed by any other in Columbia Co., if in the State of Wisconsin.

LEWIS H. SMITH, farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. Arlington; son of Augustus P. Smith, who was born in Connecticut, but removed to the State of New York, where his son Lewis H. was born, June 14, 1835. His father was engaged in teaching in one of the public schools of the city of Albany, for about eight years; his father's family afterward removed to Herkimer Co., thence to Oneida Co., and to Columbia Co., Wis., about 1848, and settled in what is now the town of Arlington. The family consisted of father, mother, two sons and two daughters. His father afterward removed to Poynette, and built the first mill and store of that town. He died in 1870; his mother died in 1854. L. H. was married to Adell P. Foster, born in Pennsylvania; they have four children—Lydia F., Lewis H., James E. and William F. Mr. Smith has been Town Clerk of Arlington, except two years, since 1861; he was also Town Superintendent of Schools one year. He is a Republican, politically, as was his father. His brother, James E., resides in Berlin, Wis.; his sisters, Sarah J. (now Mrs. William Morton) resides in Vernon Co.; Frances C. (now Mrs. D. Newton) lives in Barron Co., Wis.

INGLE E. SPOONAM, farmer, Sec. 29; P. O. Lodi; was born in Norway Jan. 12, 1826; he came to the United States in 1850; he lived in Lodi three years, where he worked at his trade, shoemaking; he bought his farm in the spring of 1854, where he has since resided. He was married to Ellen Moe, born in Norway; they have four children—Carrie C., I. Adelia, Edwin B., Ivor C. Mr. Spoonam's farm contains 173 acres. He has been a member of the Board of Supervisors three terms, and Constable seven years. He and family are members of the Lutheran Church.

WILLIAM STEVENSON, farmer, Sec. 17; P. O. Poynette; was born in Ayrshire, Scotland, April, 1836; he came to the United States with his parents, John and Margaret Stevenson, in 1856. The family settled in Illinois, and lived there four years; his father died there; the mother and six children came to Columbia Co. in the spring of 1860; his mother and four children are still living. Mr. Stevenson settled on his present farm in the spring of 1860. His wife was Agnes Wilson, daughter of James Wilson; they have eight children—John, James, Mary, Clark, Thomas, William, Margaret and Alexander. Mr. Stevenson has 440 acres of land. He is engaged quite extensively in stock-raising.

H. VEEDER, farmer, Sec. 8; P. O. Poynette; was born at Ogdensburg, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., Sept. 22, 1819; he came to Wisconsin in 1836, landing at Green Bay June 11 of that year, where he remained till July, 1837, when he came to Portage, thence to Mineral Point, thence to Wiota; in February, 1839, he went into the pinery region; returned to Portage in the summer of 1840, where he lived till 1849, when he located where he now lives. He was married to Mary Blood; they have five children—Frank, George, Emma, James and Lizzie. Farm contains 160 acres. Mr. Veeder is the only member of his father's family now living.

IRA WITTER, farmer, Sec. 34; P. O. Poynette; was born in Madison Co., N. Y.; his parents removed to Allegany Co. when he was 6 years of age. He was married to Elizabeth Swain, a native of England; came to Columbia Co. in 1858, and settled in Poynette; Mr. Witter is a mason by trade, which occupation he followed for a number of years; he settled on his present farm in the spring of 1861; his farm contains 90 acres; he has five children—Morris, Minnie, Annie, Eddie and Nettie.

ROBERT WILSON, farmer, Sec. 9; P. O. Poynette; is the son of Mrs. Janet Wilson, who was born in Scotland in 1816; married Robert Wilson, and came to this country in June, 1849; they first settled in the town of Dekorra, near Poynette; afterward removed to Buffalo, Marquette Co.; he afterward returned to Columbia Co., and settled in the town of Arlington, where he died March 3, 1873; he had seven children, six of whom are living—James, Hugh, John, Robert, Janet and Margaret; lost one child. Robert resides at the homestead with his mother. Farm contains 100 acres.

CLARK M. YOUNG, Sec. 1; P. O. Poynette; is a pioneer of Columbia Co.; he was born in Connecticut in 1810; his parents, Wm. and Clarena Clark Young, removed to the State of New York when he was a boy; Mr. Young traveled about considerably when a young man, in the days when railroads were unknown; he was at Chicago, or rather where that city now stands, in 1832; he went to Milwaukee in 1836, where he remained some time; spent a winter in the pineries of Wisconsin more than forty years ago; he settled on the farm where he now lives in 1838. He was married to Miss Janet Wilson, a native of Scotland; they have four children—James, Robert, Samuel and Mary J. Mr. Young has about 600 acres of land.

TOWN OF COURTLAND.

HENRY W. ACKERMAN, farmer, Sec. 27; P. O. Randolph; born Oct. 28, 1825, in the town of Franklin, Susquehanna Co., Penn.; son of Isaac and Elizabeth Ackerman, natives of Westchester Co., N. Y.; when 13 years of age, Henry commenced working at brickmaking and followed it in Susquehanna Co. till he was 21, then went to Connecticut and followed same business at Waterbury till September, 1855; he then came to Wisconsin and settled in the town of Courtland, where he has since resided. Was married, Dec. 31, 1849, to Louisa Peek, who died March 2, 1874, aged 39, leaving two children—Ella A., born Oct. 8, 1853, now Mrs. Charles W. Hinchliff, of Appleton, Wis., and Calvia Leroy, born Feb. 27, 1864, living with his father. Was married second time, Nov. 2, 1864, to Mrs. Maryette Tobey, daughter of Dennis and Eunice Wait; she was born Aug. 30, 1831, in the town of Rodman, Jefferson Co., N. Y., and was first married Dec. 25, 1849, in Jefferson Co., to Franklin C. Tobey, who came to Wisconsin in 1851, and died Oct. 21, 1863, aged 37, leaving three children—Charles O., born Jan. 13, 1853, lives in the town of Courtland; Harlow D., born Dec. 13, 1859, and Frank C., born Sept. 26, 1863, both living with their mother and stepfather; Nettie L. Tobey died Aug. 22, 1855, aged 3 years. By his second marriage, Mr. Ackerman has one child—Myron W., born May 15, 1871. Mrs. Ackerman is a member of the M. E. Church. He has 160 acres in his farm, and is a Republican.

JAMES H. BELL, farmer, Sec. 24; P. O. Randolph; was born in New Bedford, Lawrence Co. (formerly Mercer), Penn.; son of John Bell, who is still living in Pennsylvania, aged 85. James H. left home when 16 years old, came to Wisconsin and lived in Grant Co. some time, then went to Sauk Co. and still owns two farms there; was one of the first settlers in that county and helped survey it. When the Mexican war broke out, he enlisted in the 2d Dragoons, participated in a number of battles and was with Gen. Scott when he entered the City of Mexico. For the last thirty-five years, he has been a pilot on the Mississippi River a good share of the time. He was married in Magnolia, Rock Co., Wis., Dec. 7, 1854, to Sarah P. Townshend, who was born in Covington, Genesee Co., N. Y., March 24, 1835, daughter of Abel B. Townshend, a native of Windsor Co., Vt.; he died in Mercer Co., Penn.; Mrs. Townshend is still living in the town of Courtland, aged 69. Mr. and Mrs. Bell have six children living—Nettie M., John T., William J., Cora R., James W. and Frank E.; have lost three—Mary J., was married to Geo. Hardy, of Fountain Prairie, Nov. 23, 1875, and died April 5, 1876, aged 19; James H. T., was accidentally killed, Dec. 16, 1862, by a barrel of ashes falling on him, and George Emory, was also accidentally killed Jan. 6, 1876, aged 5 years, by falling while at play and running a stick in his mouth. Mrs. Bell's great-uncle, John Townshend, of Vermont, has twenty-four children, all living when last heard from. Mrs. Bell thinks herself, her husband and little girl were the first passengers on the M. & St. P. R. R. from Kilbourn City to Randolph. Her mother, Mrs. Townshend's, maiden name was Mary M. Tarrington. Mr. Bell has been a member of the Masonic Fraternity about thirteen years.

GEORGE M. BENNETT, farmer, Sec. 23; P. O. Randolph; born Aug. 20, 1836, in Jefferson Co., N. Y.; son of James Bennett, who came to Wisconsin in 1839 and lived in the vicinity of Milwaukee till July, 1847, then came to Columbia Co. and settled in the town of Courtland on Sec. 14; his mother's name was Elizabeth McMillan; she died in Courtland of consumption in June, 1851, aged 49, leaving fourteen children (two of them by a former husband); his father married again and is living in Kansas. When 20 years of age, George N. went to learn the joiner's trade and worked at that business nine years, then bought the farm he now owns and has followed farming ever since; has 235 acres of land. Was married, Jan. 21, 1864, to Samantha R. Sheffer, who was born March 13, 1846, in Morrow Co., Ohio; her parents started to Wisconsin when she was 5 years old, and her father died on the journey; her mother is now Mrs. Allen Gould, of Courtland, and is again a widow. Mr. Bennett has been Chairman of his town four years, Side Supervisor several years, and is now President of the Farmers' Mutual Insurance Co., of the town of Courtland. Has three children—Allison E., Frank H. and Nellie E., all living at home. Both members of the M. E. Church. Mr. Bennett has been Steward and Trustee in the church for thirteen years; Republican.

GEORGE H. BEYER, hardware merchant, of the firm of Woodard & Beyer, Cambria; was born Oct. 20, 1850, in Buffalo, N. Y., son of George and Catharine Beyer, natives of the German province of Alsace. His father died in the winter of 1863. In 1867, he came to Wisconsin and lived in Columbia Co. one summer, then returned to Buffalo and lived there two years; he then came West again, and was employed as clerk in Portage City about a year, part of the time in a dry-goods store, and a part of the time in flour and feed store; he then went to learn the tinsmith's trade when 19 years old, and has made Columbia Co. his home ever since, but during the time has worked in the States of Iowa, Minnesota and Nebraska. In January, 1878, he formed a partnership in the hardware, stove and tinware business with L. Woodard, under the firm name of Woodard & Beyer, in which business he still continues. Mr. Beyer's brother came West with him on his second visit to Wisconsin, and is now living in Cambria with him. He is unmarried.

PETER BICKELHAUPT, grain and lumber dealer, of the firm of Myers & Bickelhaupt, Cambria; was born Dec. 18, 1839, Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, son of Peter and Mary (Metzger) Bickelhaupt, who came to America when he was only 1½ years old, and settled in New York City, and followed gardening and the milk business for about twelve years; Peter, Jr., came to Wisconsin in 1857, and worked on a farm for two years; then returned to New York for his parents, who came to Cambria with him, and he, in company with his father, started the first brickyard in Cambria, which was in 1859, and run it about two years; he then worked for John ap Jones, buying wheat, until Nov. 10, 1863, at which time he was married in Cambria to Dorothy Weisel, daughter of Conrad Weisel, a native of Germany; he then started a confectionery and toy store in Cambria, where he continued in the business until 1870, then sold out; he then bought a stock of dry goods, groceries, etc., and ran a general store until 1872, then sold out again and removed to Austin, Minn., and started a wholesale soda and mineral water factory, the first in Austin; in the fall of 1875, he returned to Cambria and went into partnership with D. D. Jones in a general store, in which he remained till April, 1879; then formed a partnership in the business in which he is now engaged. He has five children—William G., Annie M., Mary, Emma and Ida. He has been on the Village Board six or seven years, and was a Justice of the Peace for two years; he is a straight Democrat in politics.

LEWIS BROWN, farmer, Sec. 23; P. O. Randolph; born June 2, 1805, in Orange Co., N. Y., son of Daniel and Susannah Brown. He was married, Nov. 9, 1829, in Orange Co., to Elizabeth Greer, who was born Oct. 10, 1811, daughter of James and Mary Greer. Mr. Brown came to Wisconsin in 1846, and lived in Dodge Co., near Fox Lake, till the spring of 1847; then located in the town of Courtland on the farm he now owns; he has 179 acres, worth about $6,000. Has been Supervisor two terms, and has always followed farming. Mr. and Mrs. Brown have raised a family of twelve children, all living—the oldest, Harriet E., is now Mrs. E. W. Cady, of Cerro Gordo Co., Iowa; Daniel, in Leadville. Hiram L. and Oscar in Blue Earth Co., Minn.; Mary Frances, now Mrs. Wallace Griffin, of Denver, Colo.; Emaline, now Mrs. Theodore Griffin, also of Denver; Benjamin W. lives in Eau Claire, Wis.; Luzern in Beaver Dam, Wis.; Lucinda is Mrs. Charles Coulter, of Courtland; George T. is traveling for a boot and shoe firm of Milwaukee (Atkins, Ogden & Co.); Emma is now Mrs. Frank Rust; her husband is in the employ of the St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co., and Sarah E., the youngest, is still at home. Mr. Brown, although nearly 75 years of age, reads and writes without glasses; has carried on his farm himself till the last two years. Both are members of the Baptist Church, and he is a Republican.

OWEN CORDY, farmer, Sec. 32; P. O. Cambria; born Aug. 16, 1839, in Gloucestershire, England; son of I. D. Cordy, who came to America in the spring of 1851, and located in the town of Scott, Columbia Co., Wis.; his family came the next fall, and the next spring they went to the town of Randolph and lived one year; then lived nine years in Springvale, and in the spring of 1861, came to the town of Courtland; Mrs. Cordy died April 4, 1876, aged 75 years, and Mr. Cordy is still living with his son, Owen, aged 79. Owen Cordy was first married to Sarah Mapson, who died in November, 1872, aged 23, leaving one child; was married again Dec. 25, 1874, to Mary Russell, daughter of John Russell, of Sussex, Menasha Co., Wis., and has two children by the second marriage—Walter J. and Franklin R. Mr. Cordy has 230 acres of land; is a Republican, and now holds the office of Supervisor. Both are Episcopalians.

PATRICK CHESTNUT (deceased); one of the pioneers of Columbia Co.; was born in the North of Ireland, in County Donegal, March 17, 1789; son of John and Sarah Montgomery Chestnut, natives of Scotland; he came to America in 1819, and engaged as clerk in the wholesale hardware store of Henry C. Delevan, of Albany, N. Y., where he remained over three years. April 12, 1822, he was married in Albany to Elizabeth Schermerhorn, who was born Feb. 22, 1800, in the city of Hudson, N. Y.; daughter of Abram Schermerhorn, whose father, John, came from Amsterdam, Holland, and was one of the many wealthy Hollanders who were the first to settle along the Hudson River, between Albany and New York; immediately after his marriage, Mr. Chestnut removed to New York City, and engaged in the wholesale hardware trade, which he continued till 1836; then removed to the city of Hudson, where he lived about five years; in 1841, he started West; came as far as Great Bend, Penn., remaining there till 1844; then on to Wisconsin; he first located in Trenton, Dodge Co., and lived there about two years; then sold out, and bought 400 acres of land in Courtland, Columbia Co., when there were but few families in the town; here he resided till his death, which occurred Nov. 24, 1878, of pneumonia; although nearly 90 years of age at the time of his death, Mr. Chestnut had the appearance of a man of 60, his form erect, and his mind as active as ever; he retained all his faculties till the last; he was a cheerful, generous, public-spirited man, taking a lively interest in politics and everything pertaining to the general welfare of mankind. Was a member of the Episcopal Church, and a Republican; in Ireland, he was in the coast trade, and owned a stock-farm of about 1,500 acres; when young, he was in the English army, belonging to the cavalry branch of the service, and his old English sword is still kept in the family; he had a remarkable business talent, but never became a first-class farmer; could scarcely manage a team when harnessed, but was at home in the saddle, and, when 70 years of age, could place his hands on the back of a horse and jump into the saddle with ease. Mr. and Mrs. Chestnut have had eight children, five of whom are living—John T. lives in California; Alexander P. and Mrs. James Lang live in Cambria, Wis.; Wm. S. and Anna Maria living on the homestead with their mother, on Sec. 3; P. O. Randolph.

JOHN W. DAVIS, farmer, Sec. 19; P. O. Cambria; was born in Merionethshire, North Wales, Dec. 30, 1842; son of Wm. Davis, who came to America in 1851; lived in Green Lake Co. about a year, and then removed to Springvale, Columbia Co.; he is now living with his son (the subject of this sketch); his mother, Eleanor (Jones) Davis, died in May, 1871, in Springvale; John W. went to Colorado in the spring of 1868, and followed mining and teaming there for three years, returning home in 1871. Nov. 27, 1872, he was married in Courtland to Eleanor Hughes, daughter of Hugh R. Hughes, the present Treasurer of Courtland, who came from the same place as Mr. Davis, in 1851. Mr. Davis has three children—Maggie Ellen, born Sept. 23, 1873; Wm. Centennial, born Oct. 18, 1876, and Mary, born March 18, 1880. He is a Republican, and has held the office of School District Treasurer. Both are members of the Presbyterian Church.

JOHN W. DAVIS, farmer, Sec. 19; P. O. Randolph; was born in Denbighshire, North Wales; came to America in 1848, and lived seven years in St. Lawrence Co., N. Y.; then, in 1855, came to Wisconsin, and has lived in the town of Courtland most of the time since. Was married in St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., in 1849, to Phebe Humphrey, from the same place he was; has five children—Wm. J., born Feb. 15, 1851; Catharine J., Feb. 54, 1853; Mary Ann, Oct. 26, 1861; Margeret Ellen, Aug. 15, 1865, and Hannah Elizabeth, Nov. 24, 1870. He is a Republican, and both are members of the Congregational Church. Mrs. Davis' mother, Mrs. Ann Humphrey, is now living with them; she is in her 72d year.

THOMAS A. DAVIS, blacksmith, Cambria; was born March 19, 1842, in South Wales; son of Thomas Davis, who went to North Wales when Thomas, Jr., was only 1 year old; when 18 years of age, Thomas went to learn the blacksmith's trade, of his cousin, John Jones, and worked in Wales and Liverpool, and Chester, England, till the spring of 1877; he then came to America, settled in Cambria and has carried on business here since in partnership with his brother, Edwin Davis; shop is on the south side of Main street, just west of the Cambria House. Was married, Oct. 18, 1871, in Portage, to Jane Jones, daughter of Robert M. Jones, a native of North Wales, and now living on a farm in Courtland; have three boys—Robert Thomas, Elmer and Edgar; lost one girl—Winnefred, died at the age of 1½ years. Mrs. Davis is a member of the Methodist Church; he is a Republican.

THOMAS W. DAVIS, farmer, Sec. 13; P. O. Randolph; born May 14, 1830, in Carnarvonshire, North Wales; son of Wm. Davis; he came to America in 1853, and settled in Utica, N. Y., where he lived four years. Was married there, June 17, 1856, to Mary, daughter of Humphrey Rees, a native of Montgomeryshire, North Wales; she was born April 22, 1829; in the spring of 1857, he went to Dubuque, Iowa; lived there till fall, then came to Wisconsin and settled in Cambria, where he worked at stone-cutting five years; then worked a farm on shares two years, near Columbus, and in the spring of 1865, removed to his present location, where he has 163 acres of land; has eight children—David, John D., Elizabeth, Rachel E., Mary, Nellie, William and Thomas, all born in the town of Courtland, except David, who was born in Utica, N. Y.; they are all living at home with their parents. Mr. and Mrs. Davis and six of the older children are members of the Calvinistic Methodist Church; he once held the office of Clerk of the School District, and is a Republican. The name of the farm on which he was born in Wales was "Cedrun."

HUMPHREY O. EVANS (deceased); was born in Carnarvonshire, North Wales, May 3, 1815; son of Owen Evans; his mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Jones; came to America in 1849, landing in New York June 12; came direct to Wisconsin and lived a few months in Marquette; then came to the town of Courtland, and, in the fall of 1851, bought the farm on Sec. 16, where he resided till his death, March 6, 1869, of typhoid pneumonia. He had been a member of the Welsh Methodist Church 29 years. He was married, Jan. 8, 1841, in Wales, to Bridget, daughter of Evan Robert Evans; her mother's maiden name was Jane Evans; left ten children living—Owen H., lives in Cambria; Jane A., is now Mrs. Hugh Lewis, of Washington, D. C.; Bridget H., Evan R.; Lizzie A., now Mrs. John Ketcham, of the town of Courtland; Ellen A., Margaret E., Mary Jane, Annie J. and Martha Ellen; they lost one son—Richard, died in 1842, in infancy; four of these—Evan R., Mary Jane, Annie J. and Martha Ellen—are living on the homestead with their mother. P. O. Cambria.

REV. REES EVANS, Sec. 6; P. O. Cambria; was born Oct. 24, 1817; in Cardiganshire, South Wales; son of Roderick and Catherine (Jones) Evans; Mr. Evans spent his early life on his father's farm, except when at school, till he was 24 years of age; in the fall of 1842, he came to America and settled in Racine, Wis.; he spent the first few years of his residence there in the mercantile business, in the hardware line; in the fall of 1848, he entered the ministry in the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church, but was not ordained till October, 1852; he removed to Chicago in 1853, and for four years was Pastor of the only Welsh church in that city; he then accepted a call from the Welsh Church of Cambria, and remained with them till July, 1879, being their first and only Pastor up to that time; he then resigned, for the purpose of visiting Europe, but, on account of sickness in his family, postponed the trip. Mr. Evans was married, in October, 1843, to Elizabeth Jones, daughter of Owen and Eleanor Jones, who came from Carnarvonshire, North Wales, in 1842, when she was about 20 years of age; have had seven children in all five of whom are still living—Mary J., Nellie, Katie (now Mrs. Richard D. Jones), of Courtland, Lizzie and Maggie; have lost two boys—Robert, died in 1852, aged 1 year, and Roderick, who died in August, 1847, at Virginia City, Nev., aged 32 years, leaving a wife to whom he had been married only one year; her maiden name was Jennie Evans. The daughters are all living at home, except the one married.

CONRAD FUHRING, farmer, Sec. 14; P. O. Randolph; was born July 28, 1808, in Westphalia, Prussia, village of Bovenburg; came to America in the summer of 1856, and settled on the farm he now owns, and where he has since resided; has 80 acres of land, worth about $2,000. Was married in 1836, in Prussia, to Gertrude Ruska, who was born same place as her husband, May 14, 1811; daughter of Conrad Ruska; have five children—Margaret (now Mrs. Jacob Heidt), of Los Angeles, Cal.; Anton lives in Humboldt Co., Cal.; Berndina (now Mrs. Fred Bickelhaupt), of the town of Randolph, Columbia Co.; Joseph, living on the homestead with his parents, and Helen (now Mrs. August Bischoff), of Portage Co., Wis.; have lost four—Ludwig, Caroline, John and Sophia. Catholics; Republican.

JOHN A. GILMORE, farmer, Sec. 4; P. O. Randolph; born in Washington Co., N. Y., March 3, 1817; was married in 1840, in Jefferson Co., N. Y., to Rachel Livingston, who was born March 12, 1823, in Jefferson Co., N. Y.; daughter of Daniel Livingston. Mr. Gilmore came West with his family in the fall of 1843, and lived in Waukesha Co. till 1847, then came to Columbia Co., and has lived in the town of Courtland ever since; has 154 acres of land, valued at about $6,000. Has five children—Abram L., lives in Randolph Village; Hiram, in the town of Courtland; Jane (now Mrs. Hiram Willard), of Courtland; Alice (now Mrs. Charles Toby), living on the homestead, and Charles Henry, at home with his parents. Members of the M. E. Church; Republican. Mr. Gilmore was one of the earliest settlers in the town of Courtland, there being only about a dozen families in the town when he came.

NATHAN GRIFFIN (deceased), one of the earliest settlers of the town of Courtland, was born in November, 1788, in East Haddam, Conn.; son of John and Huldah Griffin. He was married Nov. 17, 1813, in his native town, to Sarah B. Gallup, who was born Feb. 6, 1794, in New London Co.,

Conn., daughter of Capt. Gardner Gallup. Mr. Griffin came to Wisconsin in 1845, and settled in what is now the town of Courtland, where he resided till his death, which occurred Aug. 28, 1860, leaving ten children living at the time of his death—John Gardner, Sarah Ann, Edwin B., Betsy B., Henry C., Albert N., Carlos, Phebe S., Wallace F., George C. and Theodore. Mr. Griffin was one of the first Commissioners of Columbia Co., and was Supervisor and Chairman of his town; was a Major in an enlisted military company in Connecticut and a soldier in the war of 1812, for which his widow now receives a pension. John G. Griffin was born Oct. 30, 1815, in East Haddam, Conn.; was married March 27, 1841, to Ursula Mack, who was born Oct. 15, 1824; he came to Wisconsin in 1857, and now resides on the farm formerly owned by his father; his mother, at the age of 86, is now living with him. He was a member of the Assembly in the Legislature of 1876, in Wisconsin, and was once a candidate for the same office in Connecticut, on the Free-soil ticket; has also been a Justice of the Peace in Connecticut. He has three children—Kate, Jane and Edith; Kate was born in Connecticut, on the same farm where her father, grandfather and great-grandfather were born. He has 320 acres of land; is a Republican; both are members of the Methodist Church.

ALLEN GOULD (deceased); was born Dec. 12, 1825, in the town of Clayton, St Lawrence Co., N. Y.; son of Henry and Elizabeth Gould. He was first married, Oct. 27, 1847, to Jane Lee, who died Dec. 4, 1849, aged 22, leaving one child, Henrietta, who is now Mrs. Thomas C. Kune, of Waukesha Co., Wis. He was married the second time, Nov. 25, 1852, to Mrs. Alma Sheffer, daughter of Hiram and Betsy Channel; she was born April 2, 1825, in Richland Co., Ohio, and was married Oct. 5, 1843, to Henry Sheffer, who died July 12, 1857, aged 32, leaving one daughter, Samantha (now Mrs. George M. Bennett), of the town of Courtland. Mr. Gould came to Wisconsin with his mother and step-father, James Bennett, who settled in the town of Courtland, in July, 1847; in the fall of 1855, he went on the farm now occupied by his widow and son, Charles W., on Secs. 13 and 14, and resided there till his death, which occurred April 11, 1863, of smallpox; he left four children by the second marriage—Charles W., who was born Sept. 5, 1854, and married Jan. 27, 1879, to Anna L. Link, born March 17, 1855, living on the homestead; Mary M. (now Mrs. W. J. Chapman), of Davidson Co., Dakota; Frank Herbert, died April 22, 1863, aged nearly 2 years, and Jennie Luella, the 28th of the same month, aged 1½ years, both of smallpox; William Henry died Sept. 3, 1853, in infancy. Mr. Gould had been an active member of the Methodist Church since 1850, and had been Steward a number of years; was for a long time Sabbath-school Superintendent, and took a lively interest in all educational matters. He lived a consistent Christian life, and enjoyed the full confidence of his neighbors and associates. The homestead consists of 100 acres of land, occupied by Charles W. and his mother; P. O. Randolph.

G. G. HOPKINS, farmer, Sec. 23; P. O. Randolph; born Jan. 29, 1821, in Windsor Co., Vt. Was married, Dec. 3, 1843, to Alzina M. Boyden, who was born Jan. 13, 1818, in Pomfret, Vt., daughter of Otis Boyden. Mr. Hopkins learned the carpenter's trade before he attained his majority, and worked at it about twenty years in Vermont; came to Wisconsin in 1862; located on the farm he now owns, and has followed farming ever since; has 140 acres of land, with good buildings and well stocked. Has two children—Squire E. (who married Mary Bergman, of Galena, Ill., and now lives in Wichita, Kan.), and Alphon W. (who married Flora Beebe, of Courtland, and lives on the homestead). Republican, first, last and all the time.

JAMES I. HOPKINS, farmer, Sec. 29; P. O. Cambria; was born in Gloucestershire, England, Nov. 12, 1843; his father, Thomas O. Hopkins, came to America in the spring of 1851, and his family came the next fall; they came direct to Columbia Co., Wis., and lived in the town of Scott one winter; then in Randolph two or three years; then two years in Courtland, and back to Scott two years, and three years in Springvale; in 1861, came to the town of Courtland, and has lived there since. James I. was married March 9, 1871, to Anna Cornford, who was born Jan. 9, 1850, in Columbia Co., daughter of John and Mary Ann Cornford, natives of England, who came to America in 1840. Mr. Hopkins has three children—James Eugene, Robert Nelson and Henrietta. He has 80 acres of land; is a Republican.

THOMAS O. HOPKINS, farmer, Sec. 32; P. O. Cambria; was a son of William and Ann Hopkins, natives of England, who had been staying a short time in Wales, and he was born at a hotel in Wales, while on their return trip to England; his parents were born and lived in Wiltshire, and he was christened in Lee Church. Was married in Brinkworth Church in March, 1842, to Ann Collingborn, who was born Nov. 18, 1818, in the parish of Brinkworth, in Wiltshire, England, daughter of Isaac Collingborn; her mother's name was Mary (Dyer) Clark. Mr. Hopkins came to America in the spring of 1851, and his family came the next fall, and has lived in Columbia Co., Wis., ever since. Have eight children, of whom four, viz., William Thomas, James Isaac, John Nathaniel and Thomas Cornelius, were born in Edgeworth, Gloucestershire, England; Mary Elizabeth (now Mrs. Wm. R. Jones, of Courtland), was born in Brinkworth, England, soon after her father came to America; Ann P. (now Mrs. Ennis Huff, of Courtland) and Robert Caleb were born in Randolph, Wis.; and Leonard Washington, born in Springvale, Wis., and named Washington after the vessel in which his father came to America; lost three children, one in England and two in America—all died in infancy; John N. and Robert C. went to England in December, 1876; Robert came back in May, 1877, and John the next August. Mr. Hopkins was a "master farmer" in England and in good circumstances, but lost his property by a dry summer and a distemper that carried off his stock, and when he arrived in Wisconsin had but four dollars and fifty cents left; he now owns 592 acres of good farm land, which, with the stock, is worth from $10,000 to $12,000; when he first came to America, he thought it a disgrace to work on the highway, as none but paupers did that kind of work in England, but became reconciled to it when he learned it was the custom here. His family came over on the Queen of the West, he came on the Washington, both American vessels; the Washington had 1,010 passengers on board when she left Liverpool; had three deaths and three births on the passage, and was six weeks and two days making the trip to New York. Mr. Hopkins is a Republican.

DAVID G. HOWELLS, farmer, Sec. 19; P. O. Cambria; born Feb. 15, 1820, in Montgomeryshire, North Wales; came to America in 1845, and lived near Utica, N. Y., a couple of months, then came to Wisconsin in the fall and settled in Columbus, lived there two years, then one year in Dodgeville, Iowa Co., where he was married, Sept. 17, 1848, to Margaret Owens, a native of Carnarvonshire, North Wales, daughter of Owen Owens, who came to America in 1846, and settled in Springvale. Immediately after marriage Mr. Howells returned to Columbus, lived there six months, then came to Columbia Co. and lived in Springvale four years. In the spring of 1852, he came to Courtland, where he has since resided; has eight children—Kate (now Mrs. Hugh Owens, of Springvale); Griffith D., Robert R., David R., John R., Ben R., Jennie W. and Maggie Ellen (all living at home except Kate and Robert, who live in Minneapolis.) Both are members of the Calvinistic Methodist Church, of which he has been a Deacon eight years. He has 410 acres of land in his farm; he is a Republican.

MIL O HUFF, farmer, Sec. 23; P. O. Randolph; born June 2, 1821, in Orleans Co., N. Y.; son of Richard and Hannah Huff; he spent his early life on his father's farm, and was educated at the district school, except one term at the Albion Academy. At the age of 22, he spent one winter in Canada, then back to Orleans Co., one summer; then to Michigan and Indiana, then back to New York a few months and then to Illinois; in December, 1846, he came to Wisconsin and stayed a few weeks, in what is now the town of Courtland, then returned to Illinois and spent one summer, and in the fall of 1847, again came to Wisconsin and bought the land he now owns and where he has since resided. He married Nov. 15, 1850, Caroline M. Kenfield, who was born Oct. 13, 1830, in Windham Co., Vt., daughter of Elias and Susannah (Streeter) Kenfield. Mr. Huff has four children—Ennis E., Estella E., Chauncey Alonzo and Irwin E. (all at home except Ennis E., who is married). He has a farm of 200 acres; has been raising grain mostly, but is now working into stock. The first school in District No. 4, was taught in his old log house, and Elizabeth Alwood was the teacher. Mrs. Huff is a member of the M. E. Church; he is a Republican.

JAMES INGLEHART, retired farmer, Cambria: was born Oct. 16, 18—, in the town of Phelps, Ontario Co., N. Y., removed to Ohio in 1835, and lived in that State (most of the time in Ashtabula Co.) till the fall of 1845, then went to Boone Co., Ill., and in the spring of 1846, came to Wisconsin and settled in the town of Scott, where he now owns a 160-acre farm on Sec. 12. He resided on the farm till December, 1877, then came to Cambria and went into business with his son Almon, in a grocery and restaurant. When he came from Illinois, he moved with ox teams and was a week on the road; there was then only one house in what is now Cambria, and a saw-mill just started; there were only about half a dozen families in the town of Scott. He was married, June 16, 1836, in Lake Co., Ohio, to Rosina Streeter, a daughter of Truman Streeter, a native of Massachusetts; has six children—Clarissa (now Mrs. William Bullock, of Chickasaw Co., Iowa); Almon (living in Cambria); Edward (married and living on the homestead in the town of Scott); Mary, Almira, and Susan (living with parents in Cambria). Mr. Inglehart was a son of Henry Inglehart, whose father came from Germany, as Governor of the province of New Jersey; served through the Revolutionary war, and was accompanied by his son Henry, during the last four years of the war; Henry was only 14 years old when the war closed; he was in Washington's army most of the time. Mr. Inglehart was Justice of the Peace four years, Assessor, three or four years, and has been Treasurer and Collector; Republican in politics. Almon Inglehart was born Aug. 24, 1848, in the town of Scott, Columbia Co., Wis., and remained on his father's farm till 21 years of age, then went to farming for himself, which he followed till the spring of 1877; Feb. 1, 1878, went into business in Cambria, in restaurant and fancy groceries; was burned out April 26, 1879, but rebuilt in the fall following, and in January, 1880, took his father (James Inglehart) in with him as a partner; their place of business is on the south side of Main street, in Cambria. He was married in 1872, to Mary Lovell, of Marcellon, daughter of Barney Lovell.

JOB A. JESS (deceased) was one of the first settlers in the town of Courtland; he was a native of Nova Scotia, and came to Wisconsin in 1836 or '37; lived in Walworth Co. till 1845, then came to Columbia Co. and settled in the town of Courtland, but, being unmarried, spent a good deal of his time away, being in California from 1852 till 1858. June 8, 1872, he was married in Columbus, Wis., to Eliza Goodwin, daughter of Thomas and Jane Goodwin, who were among the oldest settlers of Dodge Co. After marriage, Mr. Jess resided on his farm on Sec. 11, till his death, which occurred Jan. 7, 1878, from injuries received a few days previous, by his team taking fright and running away with a load of lumber, while he was driving them. He was a son of J. L. P. Jess, who came from Nova Scotia to Wisconsin in 1845, and died in the town of Courtland, in January, 1879, in the 93d year of his age. Job Jess left a widow and one child, Albert A., born March 7, 1876. Mrs. Jess occupies the homestead, 240 acres. P. O. Randolph.

DAVID D. JONES, merchant, Cambria; was born July 29, 1836, in Cardiganshire, South Wales; son of David Jones, of Waukesha, Wis., who came to America and Wisconsin in 1846, when David D. was only 9 or 10 years of age, and has lived in Waukesha since that time; David D. remained on the farm with his father till he was 20 years old, then went sailing on the lakes one year; in July, 1860, he came to Cambria, and engaged in buying wheat, in which business he continued till 1868, then went into the mercantile business, which he still follows. Was married Oct. 22, 1866, in Milwaukee, to Miss Maggie Roberts, daughter of Rev. Wm. E. Roberts, now living in the village of Randolph; has three children—Minnie, Willie D. and Kittie E. Mrs. Jones is a member of the Congregational Church, and Mr. Jones Presbyterian, and is a Republican.

EVAN O. JONES, general agent for Minneapolis Harvester Works, Cambria; was born March 24, 1830, in Denbighshire, North Wales; son of Richard Jones, of whom mention is made in the biography of Elias B. Williams; he was 15 years of age when his father came to Cambria, where his early life was spent; in 1852, he went across the plains to California, being three and half months making the trip from the Missouri River to Sacramento; he spent about two years in the mines, then clerked a short time, and finally went into business for himself, keeping a general store till the spring of 1856; he then came home and engaged in selling lumber and farm machinery, which he continued about ten years; the next ten years he spent in several different kinds of business, farming included, and for the last four years has been traveling as general agent for farm machinery. Was married in January, 1857, to Mary Ann Roberts, daughter of Robert ap Roberts, a native of Denbighshire, North Wales; has three children—Richard E. O., Sarah A. and Mary R. Has held the office of Chairman of Supervisors and Clerk of the Town several years, was President of the village five years, and has been Village Clerk, Justice of the Peace and Police Justice; was a member of the Assembly in 1866-67, and of the Senate in 1873-74; he drafted the village charter of Cambria, and introduced it in the Assembly of 1866, and was the first President of the village. In politics, is Republican. Mrs. Jones is a member of the Presbyterian Church; Mr. Jones has one sister in Cambria, Mrs. E. B. Williams; has had four brothers, of whom three are living—John R., in town of Cumberland; Daniel R., is an architect in Madison, Wis., and Owen E., in Minneapolis; Wm. R. died in Neenah, Wis.

GRIFFITH S. JONES, farmer, Sec. 2; P. O. Randolph; was born in Anglesey, Wales, in the village of Llanerch-y-medd; came to America in 1858, from Liverpool, England, where he had resided for twenty-four years; arrived in New York May 24, and came direct to Wisconsin; lived first in Springvale, Fond du Lac Co., and in the fall of 1860 removed to Courtland, Columbia Co., where he still resides. Was married, Jan. 28, 1842, in Liverpool, England, to Jane Williams, who was born May 6, 1810, in the same county as her husband in the parish of Bodedeyrn, daughter of Joseph Williams. Mr. and Mrs. Jones have five children—Joseph S., born in Liverpool, England, now lives in Milwaukee, Wis.; Jane S., now Mrs. Richard Griffiths, of Randolph; Samuel, Griffith and William S.; the last four born in Birkenhead, Cheshire, England; Griffith is married and lives in Randolph Village; Samuel and Wm. S. on the homestead with parents; in 1878, Wm. S. took a trip to Europe, leaving New York Sept. 26, arrived in Liverpool Oct. 5, spent the winter in traveling through England and Wales, left Liverpool for home May 20, 1879, and arrived in New York May 30. Mr. and Mrs. Jones are members of the Welsh Congregational Church. Mr. Jones and all his sons are Republicans.

JOHN D. JONES, farmer, Cambria; was born Sept. 7, 1836, in Carnarvonshire, North Wales, near Conwery; son of David Jones (whose father's name was John Rowlands); his father died when he was only 7 or 8 years of age, and his mother (Sydnah Jones) came to America with her three children in 1848, and soon after she came, settled in Springvale, Columbia Co., Wis.; she is now living with her son John D., at the advanced age of 78 years, and in good health; her daughter Catharine died Dec. 6, 1861, in Springvale, aged 23; and David died Jan. 20, 1866, aged 31. John D. was married July 2, 1878, in Cambria, to Mary Breese, daughter of Edward Breese, and sister of Lieut. Breese, Ex-Secretary of State; has one child—David Breese, born Oct. 5, 1879 (and named March 17, 1880, while this biography was being written up). Mr. Jones held the offices of Treasurer, Side Supervisor and Chairman of the town of Springvale. Has a 160-acre farm in Springvale, on Sec. 27; 160 acres in the town of Arlington, Sec. 10, and 120 acres in Macon Co., Mo. Both are members of the Presbyterian Church, and he is a Republican.

JOHN AP JONES, farmer and grain dealer, Cambria; residence and farm on Sec. 5; was born Oct. 15, 1822, in Merionethshire, North Wales; son of John Daniel Jones; he came to America in 1846, and arrived in Racine about the 1st of September; was in the mercantile business there two years; he then returned to Wales, being gone about a year; in the fall of 1849, went into the mercantile business in Cambria (then called Florence), continued in that about a year, then went into the milling business, and, since 1860, has been engaged in buying grain, stock, &c. Was married in 1849, in the town of Springvale, to Miss Ellen Evans, daughter of Robert Evans, who died in Wales; her mother died in Cambria. Mr. Jones has six children—Robert E. (in company with his father in the grain business); John D. (buying wheat in Randolph); Richard ap (at home); Mary, Susan and Ellen; has lost four—John died when 1½ years old; Jane died same age; David died at the age of 13, and one died in infancy. Mrs. Jones is a Calvinistic Methodist, and he is a Presbyterian and Republican.

ROBERT J. JONES, farmer, Sec. 15; P. O. Randolph; born in North Wales in 1820; came to America in 1849 and settled in Lewis Co., N. Y.; lived there until 1859, then came to Wisconsin, and settled in the town of Courtland, where he has since resided. Was married, Oct. 10, 1862, to Ann Hughes, who was born in 1834, in Wales; daughter of Charles and Barbara Hughes. Mr. and Mrs. Jones have five children—Barbara, John, Charles, Margaret and Robert, all living with parents. Has 80 acres of land, and in politics, Independent.

RICHARD O. JONES, M. D., Cambria; was born July 14, 1850, in the town of Springvale, Columbia Co., Wis.; son of Owen G. and Ann (Roberts) Jones, natives of Carnarvonshire, North Wales. The name of his farm in Wales and Springvale is "Hendref." Richard read medicine with Dr. O. W. Blanchard, of Delavan, Wis., after being in the drug business in Cambria for six years as clerk in the store of his brother Griffith O. Jones; was also clerk in the store of Dr. G. W. Briggs in Delavan, for about a year and a half; he then went into the drug business on his own account in Dodgeville, Iowa Co., Wis., in company with James Roberts, firm name "Roberts & Jones;" also practiced there about two years; he then attended Ann Arbor University, Mich., one full term, and went from there to the Cincinnati College of Medicine and Surgery, and graduated June 19, 1876, and commenced practice at Cambria the July following, where he still continues. Dr. Jones has been awarded prizes by the "Eisteddfod," (a Welsh literary society), for the following poems: "Paul in the presence of Agrippa," "Solomon," "Destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah," and several other poems; his nom de plume is "Elewinfard," which is the Welsh for "Western Poet."

WILLIAM AP JONES, depot agent, telegraph operator and express agent, Cambria, and a member of the firm of "Williams & Jones," who own the only grist-mill in Cambria; was born in Carnarvonshire, North Wales, June 26, 1833, son of Rev. William J. Jones, who came to America in 1845, and lived in the State of New York, near Utica, one year; in the fall of 1846 he came to Wisconsin, and located on Government land, on what is now the town of Courtland; has 360 acres in his farm, which he has owned thirty-four years, and never had a mortgage on it; he is now living on the farm at the age of 79, and his wife 74, both in good health. William ap Jones remained on the farm with his parents till his marriage, which took place Jan. 31, 1862, in Cambria, to Miss Ann Williams, daughter of Gabriel and Jane Williams, old residents of Cambria; has two children living—John D. and Willie G.; has lost two (twins), died in infancy. After marriage, he worked one year, buying wheat for John ap Jones, and since that time (for seventeen years), has been ticket agent at Cambria for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad Co. Republican, and himself and wife both members of the Calvinistic Methodist Church.

REV. WILLIAM J. JONES (Snowden) farmer and preacher, Sec. 19, P. O. Cambria; was born Aug. 15, 1801, in Carnarvonshire, North Wales, in the parish of Dalyddelen, son of John and Ellen Jones; worked at farming some when young, was foreman in a quarry for some time and was in the mercantile business twelve years in Wales. He came to America in the fall of 1845, and lived in Rome, N. Y., till July, 1846; then came to Wisconsin and settled on the farm he now occupies; he has been in the ministry in the Calvinistic Methodist Church for fifty-five years, and has preached regularly during that time, in addition to his other business; still preaches in Welsh, as he has never learned the English language. He is one of the four brothers mentioned in the biography of Elias B. Williams; has preached in Courtland ever since he settled here, and held meetings in his own house till 1860, when Carmel Church was built on his land. He was married in Wales, Dec. 24, 1827, to Ann Griffith, of Carnarvonshire; have had eight children, of whom three only are now living—William ap (whose biography is given in another place), Ellen, born Jan. 7, 1838 (living with her parents), and Richard D., who was born Jan. 25, 1852, on the homestead where he now lives; was married May 2, 1878, to Kate B. Evans, daughter of Rev. Rees Evans of Columbia (see his biography); had one child, born March 21, 1879, and died March 3, 1880 (not named). Both members of the Calvinistic Methodist Church; he is a Republican. William J. Jones has lost five children: John J., was born Dec. 25, 1828; he enlisted at Fulton, Ill., in the 46th Ill. V. I., and went out as Colonel of the regiment; was in the service four and a half years, and when the war closed was a Brigadier General; he died in Chicago Feb. 13, 1868; Ellis E. was born Jan. 13, 1831, and died March 11, 1865; Jane was born Nov. 28, 1841, and died Sept. 10, 1869; Ann was born July 3, 1835 and died March 2, 1855; Mary M. was born May 6, 1847, and died in Wales, Aug. 15, 1872; all the children were born in Wales, except the two youngest. Mr. Jones has 365 acres of land and is a Republican. His brother John Jones (Taly-sarn) was considered the most eloquent pulpit orator in Wales, and is known wherever the Welsh language is spoken; another brother, David Jones, (Carnarvon) was also a celebrated preacher, and widely known; both died in Wales.

WILLIAM R. JONES, farmer, Sec. 32; P. O. Randolph; was born Jan. 20, 1844, in North Wales; son of Robert and Martha Jones, who came to America when he was only 6 years old; lived two years in Lewis Co., N. Y.; then came to Wisconsin and settled in the town of Courtland; his mother died in September, 1859, and his father is living with him on the farm, which consists of 120 acres of land. Was married Nov. 19, 1872, to Mary Hopkins, who was born in England, daughter of Thomas O. Hopkins, who now lives in the town of Courtland; has three children—Thomas O., Robert M. and William. Is a Republican.

JAMES W. KELLY, merchant, Cambria; was born July 24, 1821, in Jefferson Co., N. Y.; came West in 1854 and lived in Du Page Co., Ill., about a year and a half; then came to Wisconsin and settled in Cambria in the spring of 1856; the next fall, he bought out the general store of Daniel Post, and has carried on the business most of the time since; previous to his moving here, he came to Cambria (in 1855), and bought 40 acres of land on Sec. 31, in Randolph, adjoining the village, and platted about 30 acres of it, which is known as "Kelly's Addition to Cambria." He was appointed Postmaster at Cambria in the fall of 1856, and held the office until the spring of 1863. Was married, Nov. 5, 1844, in Jefferson Co., N. Y., to Isabel Jane Welch, who died Nov. 4, 1863, aged 38, leaving six children—Emma Jane, Mary Amelia, Frances E., Clark W., Ida B. and Minnie H.; had lost two—Charles J. and Carrie H. Was married second time June 17, 1866, in Dekorra, Wis., to Mrs. Fannie W. Irons, daughter of Luther Calvin Eastman, of Indiana, and widow of Francis W. Irons, who died March 28, 1863, in Dekorra, leaving two children—Violettie and F. C. Irons; have had one child by the second marriage—Maud S., died Jan. 21, 1870, aged 4 years. His store is on south side of Main street, and he keeps a general stock of dry goods, groceries, boots and shoes, crockery, glassware and notions. Is a Republican.

NATHANIEL KETCHUM, farmer, Sec. 20; born Feb. 18, 1816, in Steuben Co., N. Y.; son of James Ketchum, who removed to Orleans Co., N. Y., when he (Nathaniel) was a boy. He was married, Jan. 1, 1845, to Jane Penney, who was born Jan. 20, 1826, in Westmoreland, England; came to America with her parents when 5 years of age. Mr. Ketchum came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1851, and settled in the town of Courtland, on the farm he now owns; has five children, all boys, all voters, and all Republicans; his eldest son, George, was married to Edith Griffin, Nov. 26, 1874, and has one child living—Roy Elwood, and lost one; Lena Alfred (the second son) was married Feb. 27, 1877, to Elizabeth Rust, and has one child—Henry; John (the third son) was married Nov. 27, 1878, to Lizzie Evans; Wellington and Orson Phelps, both living with their parents on the homestead, and those married all living in the town of Courtland.

EVON W. LLOYD, merchant and member of the firm of Thomas & Lloyd, Cambria; was born in Racine, Wis., Jan. 1, 1844; son of John E. Lloyd, a native of Merionethshire, North Wales, who came to America in 1841 or 1842, and lived in Racine till 1846; then came to Caledonia, Columbia Co., and is now living in Howard Co., Iowa. Mr. Lloyd remained on his father's farm in Caledonia till 1860, then engaged as clerk in the dry-goods house of N. H. Wood & Co., of Portage City, till March, 1865; he then went to Fond du Lac, Wis., and clerked for C. J. Pettibone till the last of August, when he returned to Cambria, and, on the 31st of August, 1865, formed a partnership in general merchandising, with H. W. Thomas, which business connection he still continues. He was married in November, 1865, in Bangor, La Crosse Co., Wis., to Maggie Thomas, daughter of William W. Thomas, and sister of his partner in business; have three children—John T., Willie W. and E. Omen. Mr. Lloyd has been a member of the Village Board several years, and is a Republican. Both members of the Welsh Calvinistic Church.

JOHN J. LEWIS, farmer, Sec. 11; P. O. Randolph; is a native of the State of New York; son of John and Laura Lewis, natives of Wales, who came to Wisconsin, from New York, when he was an infant; his father died April 7, 1877; his mother is still living in Randolph Village. He was married, March 13, 1878, to Mary E. Thomas, daughter of William E. Thomas, who lives in the town of Randolph. Mr. Lewis lived in Dodge Co., near Watertown, till the summer of 1876, then came to Columbia Co.; has 72 acres of land which he bought in 1878; has one child—Walter C., born May 10, 1879. Mrs. Lewis is a member of the Welsh Methodist Church.

JOHN LLOYD, farmer, Sec. 11; P. O. Randolph; born Dec. 14, 1837, in Wales; son of Evon and Catherine (Jones) Lloyd; his father died in Wales when he was 8 years old, and a year after, his mother, with her three children, John, Ann and Catherine, came to America and lived in the State of New York, near Utica, till the spring of 1856; then came to Wisconsin and settled in the town of Emmett, Dodge Co., where he made it his home till the fall of 1875, then came to Columbia Co., and bought the farm he now owns in the town of Courtland (160 acres), where he has since resided. Was married, in the fall of 1860, to Catherine Lewis, daughter of John and Laura Lewis, natives of Wales. In August, 1862, he enlisted in the 29th W. V. I., Co. B, and was in the service three years, participating in fifteen or sixteen battles and skirmishes, being all in which his regiment was engaged during that time, except one, when he was prevented by a wound he had received at the battle of Port Gibson; was mustered out of service at Shreveport, La., and paid off at Madison, Wis.; after his return from the army, he lived on his farm in the town of Clyman, Dodge Co., till 1875; was Supervisor of the Town and member of Assembly in the Legislature of 1875. Republican, and has nine children—Ann, Mary, John, Laura, Ellen, Evan, Esther, Griffith and Catharine. Mrs. Lloyd is a member of the Methodist Church.

WILLIAM LLOYD, farmer, Sec. 2; P. O. Randolph; was born May 5, 1848, in Lewis Co., N. Y., son of John and Sarah Lloyd, natives of Wales, who came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1866, and settled on Sec. 2, in the town of Courtland; now living in the village of Randolph. Dec. 15, 1875, Mr. Lloyd was married to Miss Lizzie Roberts, who was born in New York City, Aug. 8, 1858, daughter of Joshua Roberts, now of Randolph, Wis., and whose biography appears in this work. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd are members of the Welsh Methodist Church. He has 62 acres of land which he bought in 1876. Republican.

RANSOM H. MEAD, farmer, Sec. 29; P. O. Columbia; was born Feb. 14, 1821, in Whitehall, Washington Co., N. Y.; came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1846, to see the country, and settle up the estate of his brother, Henry Mead, who died in August, 1845, which was the first death in the town of Courtland; was here a few weeks and then returned to the East; in the fall of 1848, he again came to Wisconsin, and has resided in the town of Courtland ever since, and followed farming most of the time. Feb. 14, 1865, he enlisted in the 46th W. V. I., Co. D, and remained in the service till October of the same year. Was married, Feb. 14, 1850, in the town of Courtland, to Hannah Conklin, who was born Oct. 18, 1828, in the town of Conklin, Broome Co., N. Y., daughter of Samuel Conklin who came to Wisconsin in 1846, and died in 1863, in Courtland. Mr. Mead is a Republican and has been Chairman of the town of Courtland ten or twelve years and has also been Side Supervisor, Treasurer and Justice of the Peace. Has five children—John F., Maggie C., Samuel C., George S. and Mariette, all living at home; lost one child, Henry, died Dec. 18, 1860, aged 13 months. Mrs. Mead belongs to the M. E. Church.

FREDERICK MILLER, dry-goods clerk, Cambria; was born Feb. 26, 1853, in the town of Leun, in Kreiswetzlar, son of Henry Miller, who came to America in about 1855, located in Columbia Co., and went into the butchering business in Portage City. His family came in 1857, and joined him in Portage. He died in 1859, and his family came to Cambria in 1862; lived here till fall of 1864; then went to Columbus and in the fall of 1869 came back to Cambria; his mother (now Mrs. Christopher Heinz) is still living in the town of Randolph; he has lived in Cambria ever since 1869, except one year in New Orleans, in boarding or coffee house. He was married, Oct. 11, 1877, in Randolph to Lizzie Weisel, who was born May 10, 1856, in Plover, Portage Co., Wis., daughter of George Weisel, a native of Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany; who came to America in about 1854, and now lives near Kingston, Green Lake Co., Wis. Mr. Miller is a Republican and has been clerking for Thomas & Lloyd, of Cambria, for the last four and a half years.

DAVID D. MORRIS, farmer, Sec. 16; P. O. Cambria; born July 25, 1825, in Montgomeryshire, North Wales, son of Robert Davis. His mother's maiden name was Jane Morris, daughter of Davis Morris, and he was christened David Morris Davis, as shown by the records in the parish of Llan-wddyo, Montgomeryshire; he came to America in 1850, and lived near Utica, N. Y., about seven years; came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1857 or 1858, and settled in the town of Courtland, where he now resides. Was married, March 21, 1860, in Rome, N. Y., to Jane H. Jones, a daughter of Humphrey Jones, a native of Wales; has five children—John D., Margaret D., Jane D., Robert D. and Thomas D., all living at home; has 539 acres in his farm and keeps about 200 head of sheep, 60 head of cattle and 9 horses. He is a Republican and is the present Chairman of the town; was Side Supervisor for about nine years previous to his election as Chairman; both members of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church.

G. D. MYERS, produce and lumber dealer, of the firm of Myers & Bickelhaupt, Cambria, was born Feb. 26, 1839, in Saratoga Co., N. Y. Was married in Troy, N. Y., Oct. 28, 1860, to Miss M. E. Kettell, daughter of John A. Kettell; was engaged in farming in Saratoga Co. till the fall of 1858; then came to Wisconsin, and lived in Waupun, Dodge Co., eight years; was engaged in the butchering business two years, and part of the time was buying wheat, in March, 1867, and has been engaged in the same business ever since; was first a member of the firm of Fairbanks, Stanton & Co., then John ap Jones & Co., Myers & Jones, and now Myers & Bickelhaupt. Has two children—Fred and Daniel. He has been President of the village of Cambria several years, and is now one of the Village Board of Trustees, and in politics a Democrat.

RICHARD E. OWENS, farmer and carpenter, Sec. 6; P. O. Cambria; was born about 1821, in Montgomeryshire, North Wales, son of Richard Owens; came to America in 1842, and worked at his trade (that of carpenter and joiner) for ten years in the State of New York, in Utica; in 1852, he came to Wisconsin, and lived a year and a half in Waukesha Co., then came to the town of Courtland, Columbia Co., and settled on the farm where he now resides. His first wife was Mary Davis, a native of Wales, to whom he was married in Utica, N. Y., and who died Sept. 5, 1857, aged 32 years, leaving four children—Charles R., Edward J., Eliza Ann (or Lizzie A.) and Mary Jane, who is now the wife of R. T. Thomas, of Milwaukee. Charles was accidentally killed by his team running away in July, 1868. He was married the second time July 8, 1871, in Cambria, to Mrs. Ann Jones, widow of Richard Jones, who left one child, Lizzie; she is living with her mother and step-father. By his second marriage he has one child, Richard Charles. Mr. and Mrs. Owens are members of the Pre-byterian Church, and he is a Republican.

J. LE ROY PARKINSON, photographer, Cambria, was born Jan. 26, 1851, in the town of Kingston, Marquette Co. (now Green Lake), son of Joseph Parkinson (see his biography). His mother died July 4, 1866, and soon after her death he went to live with Judge F. B. Hawes, of Green Lake Co., where he remained four years, attending school part of the time; in 1869, he went to Missouri with Judge Hawes, and stayed two winters and one summer, then came back to Wisconsin in company with the ague with which he had been acquainted for about eight months in Missouri; in 1871, he went into the photograph business in company with T. Cross, of Marquette, continued with him about four months, and then dissolved partnership, and went to Ripon, Wis., where he was employed as clerk in the dry-goods store of A. N. Anstaed for three or four months; in 1872, he went into the photograph business in Kingston for a short time; then went to Princeton in same business for a year and a half, then sold out and worked for William Lockwood, of Ripon, in the picture business two years; in October, 1877, he came to Cambria and opened a gallery in the brick block, where he carried on business till Dec. 15, 1878, then removed to rooms in Williams' Block, where he still continues business. Jan. 1, 1879, he was married in Hersey, Wis., to Carrie A. Smith, who was born Aug. 1, 1858, in Fond du Lac Co., Wis.

ISAAC PARY, proprietor of the Cambria Hotel, was born in Denbighshire, North Wales, town of Llrictar; son of John Pary, who was a farmer and tried to make an M. D. of his son Isaac, but only succeeded in making a horse doctor. He was married in Wales in May, 1850, to Mary Jane Edwards, daughter of William Edwards; immediately after marriage, he came to America, and lived in Lewis Co., N. Y., between seven and eight years; his first labor there was at mason work, for which he received $11 per month for four months, and took it in store pay; in the fall of 1857, he came to Wisconsin (a cripple from rheumatism), arriving in Cambria the 25th day of December with a wife and three children, and 25 cents in his pocket; he moved into a cabin twelve feet square, and paid out his last 25 cents for an old log for fire-wood; after paying one man for it, another man (and a wealthy one at that time) came along and laid claim to the log, and actually unhitched his team from the wagon and hauled the log away, but was afterward obliged to return it; he then worked at mason work about three years (having learned the trade in the State of New York), and made about $4 per day; since that time he has been engaged in horse doctoring, dealing in stock, butchering, etc., and for the last eight years has kept the Cambria Hotel (in addition to his other business), which he has owned and occupied for the last nineteen years, but not kept as a hotel till the last eight years. He has held the offices of Marshal, Constable and Supervisor. Has seven children—William H., Mary Jane, John D., Tillie, Homer, Minnie and Frankie. He is a Republican in politics. Mrs. Pary died April 9, 1875.

JOSEPH PHILLIPS, farmer, Sec. 31; P. O. Randolph; was born June 6, 1821, in Yorkshire, England, in the parish of Fewston; son of Joseph Phillips. Was married April 28, 1845, in the Parish of Fewston, to Martha Phillips, daughter of James Phillips. He came to America in 1855; came direct to Wisconsin; lived two years in Fountain Prairie, then removed to his present location, where he has since resided. Mrs. Phillips died in Courtland July 17, 1864, leaving four children—Elizabeth (now Mrs. Paul Hanson, of Hall Co., Neb.), Mary Hannah (now Mrs. Augustus Denman, of Nebraska), Samuel (living with Mr. Denman in Nebraska), and Joseph Alfred (at home). Was married the second time, Dec. 25, 1866, to Grace Waterworth, who was born Nov. 29, 1841, daughter of Thomas Waterworth, a native of Yorkshire, England; have three children by the second marriage—Sarah Jane, Andrew and Gracie. Mr. Phillips' mother's name was Mary Dagget, and his grandfather was a Welshman, named Jonathan Phillips; his great-grandmother lived to be over 100 years old. He is a Democrat, and has been Treasurer of the school district nine years. Has 308 acres of land.

JOHN QUINN, farmer, Sec. 32; P. O. Doylestown; was born Feb. 16, 1835, in County Wexford, Ireland, Parish of Gorey. His father died when he was a child, and his mother married Mathew Shirlock; they came to America in 1851. He was married in November, 1855, in Utica, N. Y., to Harriet A. Welter, who was born Sept. 12, 1838, in Herkimer Co., N. Y.; came to Wisconsin immediately after marriage, and settled in Columbia Co.; lived in Lowville three years, and eleven years in Otsego; in the fall of 1869, came to Courtland and bought his present farm; has eight children living—John, James, Dorothy, Mary, Eliza, Kate, Julia and Ellen; have lost two—Martin died in 1868, aged 4, and one died in 1855, in infancy. Has 93 acres of land, and although a Democrat, has been elected Assessor in a town where the Republicans outnumber the Democrats 7 to 1.

JOHN S. RANDALL (deceased), one of the first settlers of the town of Courtland; was born May 17, 1799, in German Flats, Herkimer Co., N. Y. His parents came to Orleans Co., N. Y., when he was about 17; his father died soon after; John S., being the youngest child, remained on the farm with his widowed mother. Was married, May 13, 1821, to Almira Fanning, who was born in Chenango Co., N. Y., Feb. 22, 1804, daughter of Joshua Fanning. Mr. Randall came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1844, and lived in Walworth Co. two years; then came to Columbia Co. and settled in what is now the town of Courtland, in the spring of 1846, and resided in the same town till his death, which occurred July 20, 1878, in the 80th year of his age. He was for years a Deacon in the Baptist Church, of which himself and wife had been consistent members for upward of fifty-five years. He was an earnest, conscientious, public-spirited man, and enjoyed the confidence and esteem of his neighbors and associates. Was Republican in politics, and held several town offices. Mrs. Randall survives him, and, although in her 77th year, her mind seems as active, and her memory as good, as ever. Mr. and Mrs. Randall had ten children, three of whom died in childhood, and seven are still living—Allen W., lives in Winona Co., Minn.; Adaline, is now Mrs. J. W. Peck, of Walworth Co., Wis.; Mary, is now Mrs. Jeremiah Williams, of Carroll Co., Mo.; Harriet R., is now Mrs. R. C. Penney, of Courtland; John Jay, lives in Washington Co., Kan.; Caroline, is now Mrs. Joseph Patton, of Walworth Co., Wis., and Joseph H., who was married in 1864 to Amanda, daughter of George Bliss, of Fountain Prairie; she died in 1868, leaving one daughter, Mattie A., born Aug. 13, 1866. He was married the second time, March 22, 1871, to Anna E. Conklin, who was born in Ohio City (now Cleveland), Ohio, Sept. 8, 1842, daughter of Joshua Conklin, a native of Herkimer Co., N. Y.; her mother (Rachel) was from Oswego Co., N. Y.; by the second marriage he has three boys. Both members of the Baptist Church. Has 100 acres of land, and is Republican.

WILLIAM REES (deceased); he was born in Montgomeryshire, North Wales; a son of Richard Rees, who died in Wales at the advanced age of 104 years; Wm. Rees went to Liverpool, England, before his marriage, and worked at carpenter work, which trade he had learned in Wales. He was married, in Liverpool, to Hannah Williams, a native of Flintshire, North Wales. Mr. Rees came to America in 1850, and lived in Utica, N. Y., till the fall of 1856, then went to Dubuque, Iowa, and lived there till the fall of 1861, working at his trade up to this time; he then came to Cambria, and went into the furniture business, in which he continued till his death, June 1, 1878, of heart disease. Mr. and Mrs. Rees had in all four children, of whom two are still living; one died in infancy in Liverpool, and Richard died in Cambria in 1874, aged about 35; Thomas is living in Oshkosh, Wis.; William was born November 30, 1848, in Liverpool, England, and is now in the drug business, and has been about fourteen years in a store on north side Main street. Mrs. Rees is still living with her son William, aged 68 years.

DAVID RICHARDS, farmer, Sec. 27; P. O. Randolph; was born Aug. 14, 1816, in the town of Radnor, Radnorshire, South Wales; he is a son of Evan and Elizabeth Richards, who came to America in 1819, as stated in the biography of Seaman Richards, a brother of David; he was engaged in farming and lumbering in Susquehanna Co., Penn., till Christmas, 1854; then started West, and arrived at the house of his brother Evan in Oak Grove, Dodge Co., Wis., Jan. 1, 1855; he soon after came to Columbia Co., and has resided in the town of Courtland ever since. He was married, Dec. 28, 1859, in Beaver Dam, Wis., to Ruth Bentley, who was born Jan. 23, 1826, in Kings Co., Nova Scotia, daughter of David and Abigail Bentley, who came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1848; Mr. Bentley died in Courtland May 13, 1852, aged 62, and Mrs. Bentley is still living in the village of Cambria, in the 90th year of her age. Mr. Richards has two children living—John Scott, born May 30, 1861, and Martha Ann, born April 21, 1866; Lucy Maud was born Oct. 3, 1862, and died July 28, 1864. Has 80 acres of land, and is a Republican.

GRIFFITH RICHARDS, farmer and stock-breeder, Sec. 19; P. O. Cambria; was born Nov. 13, 1844, in Racine Co., Wis.; son of Richard Richards, of Racine, one of the oldest stock-raisers in the State; he is a native of Merionethshire, North Wales, and was a member of Assembly from Racine in 1873. Mr. Richards was married, Jan. 4, 1871, in Courtland, to Laura A. Williams, daughter of William R. Williams; she was born July 24, 1850, in Courtland, on the farm now owned by her husband; has one son—William B. Has 264 acres in the farm, which is known as the "Sunnyside Stock Farm;" the Welsh name of the farm is "Fronhaulog;" he is breeding short-horn cattle, draft and trotting horses, Berkshire hogs and Spanish sheep. Is First Vice President of the County Agricultural Society, and was last year Second Vice President. He is a Republican; is now a member of the County Commissioners, and takes an active part in politics; has held the office of Supervisor. Mrs. Richards is a member of the Calvinistic Methodist Church.

JOSEPH L. RICHARDS, farmer, Sec. 2; P. O. Randolph; was born Feb. 4, 1845, in Merionethshire, Wales; came to America in the summer of 1869, and stayed a few weeks on the Hudson River, a few miles below Albany; then came to Columbia Co., Wis., and lived in the town of Courtland till the fall of 1872, when he went to Milwaukee and worked at the carpenter's trade till January, 1874; he then returned to Courtland, and, on the 19th of that month (January, 1874), was married to Ann Jane, daughter of William R. and Ann Roberts, of Portage Prairie, Columbia Co., Wis., natives of Wales, and born in the same place as Joseph L. Richards, as were also his father, Edmund Richards, and his mother, Ellen Lloyd. Mrs. Richards was born in the town of Clyman, Dodge Co., Wis., March 22, 1849. Mr. Richards spent his early life on a farm, and the last six years before leaving Wales, worked in a slate quarry. Purchased his farm of 120 acres in the fall of 1874, and went on it in the spring of 1876. Has four children—Willie E., Ellen Ann, Maggie and Laura. He is a Republican, and both members of the Welsh Methodist Church.

THOMAS RICHARDS, farmer, Sec. 29; P. O. Cambria; born Dec. 13, 1822, in Great Bend, Susquehanna Co., Penn.; son of Evan and Elizabeth Richards, natives of South Wales, who came to America in 1819, and settled in Great Bend, Penn. He was married, in Great Bend, Sept. 7, 1848, to Catharine M. Smith, who was born Dec. 25, 1829, in Orange Co., N. Y.; daughter of Samuel and Martha Smith; immediately after his marriage, Mr. Richards came to Wisconsin and settled in the town of Courtland, in which town he has resided ever since; has eight children, all living, and seven of them boys—Theodore S., Edward J., Maggie Jane (now Mrs. Thomas Bradley, of the town of Courtland), Frank L., George W., Charles J., Thomas L. and Fayette; all the boys are living at home, and all are Republicans who are old enough to vote. Has 100 acres of land, 80 in his home farm and 20 acres in timber.

SEAMAN RICHARDS, farmer, Sec. 27; P. O. Randolph; one of the pioneers of Columbia Co.; was a son of Evan and Elizabeth Richards, natives of South Wales, who came to America in 1819, taking passage on the sailing-vessel Importer, from Liverpool, England—Capt. Lee; when within three days' sail of New York, on the 20th day of July, 1819, a son was born, and the first mate, who was also born on the ocean, named the new arrival Seaman, after himself, and gave his mother a guinea to be invested for his benefit; on landing in New York City, they went to Broome Co., N. Y., and lived about a year with Richard W. Lewis, of the town of Conklin; they then went to Great Bend, Susquehanna Co., Penn., where Mrs. Richards died when he was about 17 years old. Seaman worked out by the month in that vicinity till June 1, 1839, when he was married to Hannah M. Ackerman, who was born Sept. 18, 1820, in the town of Franklin, Susquehanna Co., Penn., daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth Ackerman, natives of Westchester Co., N. Y.; after marriage, he worked at farming and lumbering most of the time for several years, but for the past year and a half of his residence there, was employed as foreman on the N. Y. & E. R. R., on the Summit section, east of Deposit; in the fall of 1848, having a severe attack of Western fever, he started with his family for Wisconsin, coming by canal from Binghamton to Buffalo, then by steamer Henry Hudson, from Buffalo to Milwaukee; he came direct to the town of Courtland, and, in the spring of 1849, bought the farm he now owns, and where he has since resided; has 260 acres all under cultivation, with good farm buildings and well stocked; in the fall of 1849, he left his wife at home with their three children and worked in the pinery on the Eau Claire River, in Wisconsin, during the winter, and in the spring, ran the Wisconsin River and down the Mississippi to Galena, Ill., where he was paid off, and came home on foot, after being away five months, with $160 in gold in his pocket as the result of his winter's work. Mr. and Mrs. Richards have had ten children, of whom eight are still living—Mortimer F., lives in Worth Co., Iowa; Charles Henry, lives in McLeod Co., Minn.; Julia Jane, is now Mrs. Charles F. Chapman, of the town of Courtland; Carrie M., now Mrs. Owen F. Jones, of the village of Randolph; Seaman, Jr., living at home with his parents; Susan E., now Mrs. John Seckerson, of the village of Randolph; Melissa A., now Mrs. Wm. Tompkins, of the town of Randolph; and Grant L., the youngest son, living with his parents; have lost two—Julia Jane, died Oct. 11, 1843, aged 7 months, and Hannah Elizabeth, died Jan. 11, 1851, aged nearly 2 years. Mr. Richards cast his first vote for Gen. Harrison, and has voted the Republican ticket ever since the party was organized.

THOMAS R. ROBERTS (Tunddarmen), farmer, Sec. 18; P. O. Cambria; was born Jan. 9, 1840, in Merionethshire, North Wales; son of Robert Roberts; Thomas R. came to America in the spring of 1865, and lived the first year in Oshkosh, Wis.; then came to Cambria and worked a farm on shares till 1874; then worked on a farm by the year for John ap Jones two years; in the spring of 1876, he bought the farm he now owns (80 acres), for which he paid $3,000. Was married Nov. 20, 1869, in Cambria, to Miss Minnie Davis, daughter of James T. Davis, a native of South Wales. Mr. Roberts has five children—Annie, Maggie, Robbie, Jennie and John. Both members of the Calvinistic Methodist Church. He is a Republican.

WILLIAM J. ROBERTS, deceased, was born in North Wales in July, 1802; son of John Roberts. Was married in September, 1841, to Elizabeth Davis, daughter of William Davis; she was born Feb. 13, 1817, also in North Wales; came to America in 1855, and lived in Utica, N. Y., one year; then came to Wisconsin and settled in the town of Courtland, where he followed farming till his death, June 3, 1877. He left one daughter, Mary, born Dec. 31, 1842, in Wales, and married, Feb. 27, 1863, to Griffith Gee Jones, and has three children—Ellen, Owen and William. Mr. and Mrs. Roberts lost three children on the passage to America, who died of cholera—Ellen, aged 11, Ann, aged 7, and John, aged 3—and one in Utica; William died in infancy. Mrs. Roberts is a member of the Congregational Church, as was her husband. Has 10 acres of land, and her daughter, Mrs. Jones, is living with her.

HORACE RUST (deceased), one of the first settlers of Courtland, was born Feb. 20, 1798, in Windsor Co., Vt., town of Rochester. His first wife was Lydia French, to whom he was married in 1821; she lived only about two years after her marriage and left one child (a daughter) that survived her but a short time. He was married the second time in Vermont to Roxana Mills, sister of Dr. J. C. Mills, of Walworth Co., who was a member of the First and Second Legislature of Wisconsin, and a State Senator in 1858. Mr. Rust came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1844, located land in what is now the town of Courtland in September, 1845, and came on it with his family July 4, 1847; he resided on this farm till his death, April 7, 1879, being a little over 81 when he died. He was the first Postmaster, one of the first Supervisors, and the second Assessor in the town of Courtland; the first caucus, first town meeting, first election and first school meeting were all held at his house in the fall of 1848; his first commission as Postmaster was from Andrew Jackson, and the office at Rochester, Vt.; he was also appointed Postmaster at Cambria in 1863, and held the office four years; was also appointed by Gov. Dewey as one of the Commissioners to lay out a State road from Columbus to Princeton. He was an old-time Jackson Democrat, but an earnest Republican ever since the party was organized; he took an active part in politics up to the time of his death, and the last time he ever went outside his own yard was to attend a caucus. Mr. Rust had in all eleven children, five of whom died in childhood, and one, Harvey H., died in California, April 7, 1876, aged 41; there are five still living—Mills lives on a farm adjoining the old homestead, and Henry B. is living on the homestead, and his mother, now in her 74th year, is living with him in good health and, to all appearances, good for another ten years at least. Henry was married, in October, 1850, to Julia Cameron, of Walworth Co., Wis., and has five children living—Frank G., Elizabeth A. (now Mrs. J. A. Ketchum, of the town of Courtland), Harvey H. (now now in Milwaukee, a printer by trade), Cameron R. and Flora L. He has been Chairman and Assessor, and is now Secretary of the town insurance company. In the spring of 1860, he removed to Missouri with his family, enlisted in the Home Guards and was elected First Lieutenant; afterward enlisted under Gov. Gamble's proclamation calling for six-months men, and was elected Captain of Co. C, 1st Battalion Mounted Rifles; was in the service about one year, then returned to Wisconsin and bought the homestead, where he still resides. Charles, the third son of Horace Rust, is now in Rochester, Minn., in the produce business; Mary P. is now Mrs. Orlando Ralph, of Brookfield, Vt., and Lucelia is now the wife of Geo. C. Griffin, living in Colorado, sixteen miles north of Denver.

ORANGE D. SCOFIELD, farmer, Sec. 1; P. O. Randolph; born Oct. 25, 1827, in Saratoga Co., N. Y. Was married Dec. 31, 1854, to Margaret McDonald, who was born June 9, 1829, daughter of Alexander McDonald, of Scotch descent. Mr. Scofield came to Wisconsin in 1856, and settled in the town of Richford, Waushara Co., and engaged in the mercantile business, which he continued in that place about five years; came to Pardeeville, Columbia Co., in the fall of 1861, and carried on the same business till the spring of 1866, then sold out his store and spent one year traveling with his family; in the spring of 1867, he returned to Columbia Co. and bought the farm he now owns in the town of Courtland; has 70 acres only three-quarters of a mile from the village of Randolph, which, with the buildings he put up himself, cost about $5,000. Has no children. Mr. Scofield and family are Congregationalists; Republican. His father, Harry Scofield, was born March 12, 1789, in the town of Stamford, Conn., and died Jan. 10, 1875, at Hadley, Saratoga Co., N. Y.

MYRON A. SHAW, M. D., Cambria; was born in Fairlee, Orange Co., Vt., March 11, 1837; migrated to Wisconsin with his parents when 18 years of age, making a temporary residence in Leon, Monroe Co.; he then entered as an apprentice in the printing office of the Sparta Watchman, commencing work on the fourth number of that journal; in the spring of 1856, he went to work on the first number of the Eau Claire Times; the following year he went to Oneida Co., N. Y., to study medicine with Dr. E. I. Baker, where he stayed one year, when Dr. Baker went to Eau Claire Co., Wis., and was soon followed to that place by Mr. Shaw, who continued his studies for a short time; but in 1861, went to Durand, Wis., and commenced the publication of the Home Mirror; the paper, though a success, as far as the paper was concerned, did not prove a very profitable financial venture; after a year's experience in this enterprise, he sold out and retired from journalism; his health much broken down by hard work, but enlisted soon after in Eau Claire, under the call for hundred-day men, but which order was countermanded before any of the troops were mustered into service; in 1863, he enlisted from Eau Claire in the 16th W. V. I., Co. C, then commanded by Col. Cassius Fairchild; he participated in the battle before Atlanta, Kenesaw Mountain, Lovejoy's Station, etc.; voted for Lincoln at Marietta, Ga., went through on the "march to the sea," and was severely wounded near Savannah; got his discharge in 1865; he then edited the Durand Times one year; after that, he resumed the study of medicine and took a course of lectures in Rush Medical College in 1868-69, and in 1870, located in Fall River, where he practiced medicine five years, then removed to Cambria, where he still resides. In 1866, he married Miss Blanche E. Dyer, daughter of Wayne B. and Ursula Dyer, residents of Durand, Wis., formerly early settlers in Columbia Co.; has three children—Paul Francis, Herbert W. and Edgar M. A. Shaw. In religion, liberal, and still holds a membership in the Eau Claire Universalist Society. Voted for Horace Greeley in 1862, and has since acted with the Democratic party. His parents, Josiah and Elizabeth Shaw, are now living in retirement in Eau Claire, at an advanced age.

HUGH W. THOMAS, merchant, Cambria; was born Aug. 11, 1836, in Carnarvonshire, North Wales; came to America with his father, Wm. W., in the spring of 1843, located in Oneida Co., N. Y., and lived there till 1858; Hugh W. left home at 18 years of age, and went to Utica, N. Y., where he lived two years, then in the fall of 1857 came to Wisconsin and lived in La Crosse Co. a year and a half, then in Sparta, Monroe Co., about four years, clerking in a dry-goods store; in 1863, he went into the mercantile business in Bangor, Wis., which he followed one year, and then again went to clerking in Portage City, Wis., till 1865; then came to Cambria and formed a partnership with Evan W. Lloyd (firm Thomas & Lloyd) in the mercantile business, keeping a general stock, where they are still doing a flourishing business. Was married May 14, 1859, in Bangor, Wis., to Jane P. Mann, daughter of Abram Mann, of Montpelier, Vt.; has two children—Hermie and Laura; has lost four—Carrie, Allie, Willie and Frankie. Is a Republican, and has been a member of the Village Board several years at different times; both Presbyterians.

PETER THOMAS, farmer, Sec. 10; P. O. Randolph; born in Flintshire, North Wales; son of Abel and Ellen Thomas; came to America in 1841; lived in Upper Canada till fall of 1843, then returned to Wales and stayed till the spring of 1844, when he again came to Canada and followed farming till 1854; then came to Wisconsin and located in the town of Courtland, where he has since resided; came on the farm he now occupies in August, 1854. Was married in Canada, July 7, 1851, to Ellen Williams, a native of Wales, daughter of Owen Williams; she died July 27, 1879, of pneumonia, aged 57, leaving two children—Edward and Ezra, both living on the homestead; lost five children—Owen, Abel and Ellen, all died within a week's time, of diphtheria, in June, 1863, aged respectively 8, 6, and 2; in 1865, another one, Ellen, died, 15 months old, and one died in infancy in 1863. Although having lived in Wisconsin over twenty-five years, Mr. Thomas has never ridden a mile on a railroad since he came here, and has never stayed over night away from his own house but once during that time, then stayed in Portage because it stormed so he could not get home. Is a member of the Congregational Church, and a Republican.

ROBERT B. THOMAS, farmer, Sec. 21; P. O. Randolph; was born Sept. 31, 1816, in Addison Co., Vt.; son of Isaac and Arathusa Matilda Thomas. He was married, in Vermont, May 31, 1848, to Julia Elizabeth Wells, who was born June 10, 1822, in Hinesburg, Chittenden Co., Vt.; daughter of Manton Wells. Mr. Thomas came to Wisconsin first in April, 1854, and bought a farm in the town of Courtland; he then returned to Vermont for his family; came on in June of the same year, and has resided on the same farm ever since. Mrs. Thomas died Aug. 29, 1879, of cancer, after an illness of seven months, leaving five children; Julia Elizabeth, Frances R. (now Mrs. Wm. R. Owen, of Randolph Village), Hannibal H., Isabell Ida and James Eugene, all at home with their father, except the one married. Mr. Thomas' ancestors came from Wales at an early day, and his father's uncle, Isaiah Thomas, founded the Boston Spy, a paper which was suppressed by King George III for disloyal sentiments, in 1772; it was afterward removed to Worcester, Mass., and is still published as the Worcester Spy; he also founded the Antiquarian Library of Worcester; his father's brother John was a Revolutionary soldier; he was in the battle of Bunker Hill, and was afterward killed in the service. Mrs. Thomas (whose mother's name was Clarissa Boothe) was a direct descendant of the Earl of Marl, England. Mr. Thomas has been Chairman of the town one year, Supervisor three years, Justice of the Peace, and was Treasurer six years. Has 223 acres of land, and is a Republican; Mrs. Thomas has been a member of the Methodist Church ever since she was 18 years old.

WILLIAM THOMAS, JR., farmer, Sec. 12; P. O. Randolph; born in Anglesea, Wales, Feb. 12, 1847; son of William and Elizabeth Thomas, who came to America with their family in 1849, and settled in Waukesha Co., Wis., where they lived till December, 1874, then sold out, came to Columbia Co., and lived in the village of Cambria a few months, and then bought a farm in Courtland, on Sec. 12, where they still reside. William, Jr., was married, March 24, 1870, in Oconomowoc, Wis., to Phebe Gudger, who was born in 1846, in Waukesha Co., Wis.; daughter of John and Lydia Gudger, natives of England; Mr. Thomas has two children—Willie and Frankie. Has 125 acres of land, worth $5,000. Republican.

JESSE P. TOBEY, farmer, Sec. 27; P. O. Randolph; born July 28, 1821, in Rodman, Jefferson Co., N. Y.; son of Philo and Polly Tobey; came to Wisconsin in 1849, and settled on the farm he now owns and occupies. Was married, Feb. 4, 1847, in Jefferson Co., N. Y., to Mary Kenfield, who was born June 16, 1821, in Whitingham, Vt.; daughter of Aseph and Susannah (Streeter) Kenfield; have had three children—Carlton D., born Oct. 1, 1851, married Athalia A. Smith Jan. 1, 1871; Louisa Medura, born March 13, 1855, died Sept. 1, 1858, and Milton J., born Sept. 26, 1859, still at home. Mr. Tobey is in his 59th year, and has never been sick a day in his life. Has 130 acres of land, and is Republican in politics; Mrs. Tobey is a member of the M. E. Church. Charles F. Chapman, son of a sister of Mr. Tobey, came to live with him when he was 8 or 9 years old; remained with him till he was 19, and then enlisted.

JOHN TURNER, farmer, Sec. 35; P. O. Fall River; was born Feb. 16, 1848, in Yorkshire, England; his father, William T. Turner, came to America in 1849, and entered land in Fountain Prairie, Columbia Co., Wis.; his family remained in England till the fall of 1852, when they joined him in his Western home; he remained on the same farm, working at mason work part of the time, till 1872, then removed to Columbus, where he now resides; John remained on his father's farm till he was 21 years old; March 16, 1869, he was married to Alice Boxandall, who was born Sept. 12, 1846, in Yorkshire, England; daughter of Phineas Parkinson Boxandall, who came to America in 1860, and is now living in Fountain Prairie; Mr. and Mrs. Turner have three children—William John, born May 30, 1872; Evaline Jennette, Oct. 17, 1874, and Joseph Parkinson, Nov. 8, 1879. In politics, mixed.

GEORGE WILLARD, farmer, Sec. 20; P. O. Cambria; was born Dec. 6, 1811, in Lewis, county of Sussex, England; son of Richard and Sarah Willard; came to America in 1832, and traveled through a part of Canada to Toronto; crossed over to Rochester, N. Y., in July, 1833, and settled in West Sand Lake, Rensselaer Co., N. Y. He lived there until 1846, then went to the town of Schodaek (same county), and followed farming eight years. In the spring of 1854, he came to Wisconsin, lived in the town of Fox Lake, Dodge Co., and in the spring of 1857, came to the town of Courtland, where he has since resided. He learned the tailor's trade in England before he was 20 years old, and worked at it till 1846—when he left Sand Lake, N. Y.—and has followed farming since. In addition to his farming, he is now, and has been for the last twenty-three years, loaning money in Wisconsin for Eastern capitalists. He was married in 1834, to Lydia C. Allendorf, daughter of Henry H. Allendorf, who is still living in Nassau, Rensselaer Co., N. Y., at the age of 95, still strong and in good health; she died, Feb. 24, 1877, aged 68 years 1 month and 24 days, leaving five children—Henry G., lives in Mower Co., Minn.; Cordelia E., now Mrs. Ebenezer Jones, of Dodge Co., Minn.; Sarah Jane; Hiram and George A., living on the homestead (Sarah and George, with their father). Mr. Willard was married the second time, Oct. 12, 1879, to Mary Jane Severance, daughter of Herman and Sabrina (Durkee) Blodgett, of Vermont. He has 218 acres of land, 20 acres of it at the village of Randolph. Is a Republican, and has been Justice of the Peace two terms in the town of Courtland. His son, Hiram Willard, enlisted Aug. 20, 1864, in the 1st W. H. A. Battery M, and served till discharged at the close of the war.

THOMAS WATERWORTH, farmer, Sec. 35; P. O. Randolph; was born in Yorkshire, England, Feb. 2, 1815; son of John Waterworth. He was married, in Keighley Church, in Yorkshire, in 1837, to Sarah Greenwood, who was born in the same county he was; daughter of Wright Greenwood. Mr. Waterworth was a farmer in England; came to America in 1855, and settled on the farm he now owns, in Courtland. He has ten children living—Mary, Grace, Hannah, Wright, Thomas, Sarah, Susannah, John, William and Jane Elizabeth. He has been Treasurer and Director in the school district, and Pathmaster, and is a Democrat. Has only two children living at home. Has 200 acres of land.

DAVID G. WILLIAMS, miller, of the firm of Williams & Jones, Cambria; was born Nov. 25, 1841, in Denbighshire, North Wales; came to America with his parents in the spring of 1850; lived in Delafield, Waukesha Co., till the fall of 1851; then came to Cambria and has resided here since. His father, Gabriel Williams, has retired from business, and is living in Cambria; Mr. Williams enlisted Aug. 13, 1862, in the 32d W. V. I., Co. F., and remained in the service till 1865, participating in all the battles in which his regiment was engaged during that time, and went with Sherman on his famous "march to the sea;" July 8, 1865, he was married, in Dodge Co., Minn., to Emma L. Williams, of Wausbara Co., Wis., who died in 1870, leaving one child—Eliza L.; was again married in 1871, on June 21, in Portland, Dodge Co., Wis., to Sarah Picket, and has four children by the second marriage—Frank G., George David, Jennie and Floyd Evan. Mr. Williams is a Republican.

DANIEL L. WILLIAMS (Glyn), farmer, Sec. 7; P. O. Cambria; born Nov. 29, 1819, in Carnarvonshire, North Wales; son of Daniel Williams; came to America in 1846, and settled in the town of Courtland, on the farm he now owns. Was married in 1849, to Elizabeth Jones, daughter of Owen Jones, a native of Anglesea, Wales; have five children—Eliza Ann, Owen J., Jephthah, Mary A., and Daniel, all living at home. Mr. and Mrs. Williams are members of the Calvinistic Methodist Church. He is a Republican.

ELIAS B. WILLIAMS, deceased, was born in Llangernyn, North Wales, Sept. 26, 1818. His father, John Williams, was a freeholder, and he remained on the farm with his father till he was 28 years old. In the summer of 1845, he came to America in company with seven other Welshmen—most of them with families—who came direct to Wisconsin, left their families in Milwaukee, and came up to Columbia Co. to "spy out the promised land;" they were pleased with the country, selected their land, built their cabins, and returned to Milwaukee for their families. They were the first Welsh that settled in this part of the county, and their names were as follows: David D. Roberts, John R. Rowlands, Robert Closs, Evan Edwards, John Edwards, Elias B. Williams, Wm. R. Williams and Robert Lloyd, and they came Sept. 25, 1845. Some of them are still living in the county. They were Calvinistic Methodists, and, as the Sabbath drew near, before they had any of their cabins built, they improvised a "temple of worship" by putting up four posts, with poles laid across the tops, and covering the building with brushes and marsh grass; on Sabbath morning, they held a "prayer meeting" and "Bible service" in this, the first church edifice in the town of Courtland. June 13, 1848, Mr. Williams was married to Mary A. Jones, daughter of Richard Jones (Tarrycastell), a native of Dolydalen, North Wales. He was one of four brothers who were all noted for their prominence in the Calvinistic Methodist Church; he was a Deacon, and his three brothers were ministers; he came to America in the fall of 1845, and settled in Columbia Co., town of Courtland; he took an active part in organizing and sustaining the church in this county; he bought a section of land and divided it up among his six children; he died in Courtland in 1850, aged 51 years, and his wife died in 1863, aged 59. Mr. and Mrs. Williams were the first Welsh couple married in the town of Courtland, if not in the county; they were married at her father's home, and the parlor in which the ceremony was performed was about half full of wheat, which had been stored there for want of a better place; this important event occurred about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and immediately after the ceremony, she accompanied her husband to his home, and helped about milking the cows and taking care of the stock the first night—plunging at once into the stern realities of married life on a farm in a new country; he owned a farm of 370 acres in the town of Courtland, on Sec. 8, which he occupied until his death, which occurred April 4, 1876, of pneumonia, after an illness of only four days; he was 58 years of age at the time of his death, and left no children. Mr. Williams was a prominent musician, a thorough teacher and leader of the choir in the Calvinistic Methodist Church at Welsh Prairie and in Cambria for years; he was also a composer of considerable note, and published several of his pieces, which were well received by the public; the last two years of his life his leisure time was devoted almost entirely to writing poetry. Mr. and Mrs. Williams spent several years in Europe, being there from 1863 to 1868. Mrs. Williams is now living in Cambria, managing the estate of her late husband, which consists of 800 acres of land divided into five farms.

JOHN LI. WILLIAMS, M. D., Cambria; was born in Carnarvonshire, North Wales, July 15, 1826, son of William S. Williams; his mother's maiden name was Jane Owens. His parents started for America May 24, 1847, and his father died on Lake Michigan, on the way to Wisconsin, July 7, 1847; his mother died about a month after arriving in Springvale. John L. first read medicine in Ilanrwst, North Wales, in the office of Dr. William Hughes; attended one course of lectures in Glasgow, Scotland, and received a license to practice; when he was 20 years of age, he commenced practice, in Cambria, in 1847, when it was called Langdon's Mills, and only three persons in the village; after coming to Wisconsin, he attended lectures in Chicago, and is a graduate of Rush Medical College. Feb 28, 1854, he was married, in Portage City, Wis., to Elizabeth Evans, who was born Jan. 8, 1833, in the same county as her husband, in North Wales, daughter of Robert Evans. Has three children—Jane E., William E. and Mary Ann, all living at home. He was Town Superintendent of Schools several years, under the old system, and Justice of the Peace. After the battle of Pittsburg Landing, the Doctor, with forty-seven others, visited Chicago, to go down and attend the wounded, and in 1864, went to Vicksburg, and had charge of all the hospitals in the post, for four months. He also taught the first school in Springvale, in a "dug-out," three nights in a week, in the fall of 1847.

OWEN WILLIAMS, carpenter, Cambria; was born Dec. 20, 1836, in Carnarvonshire, North Wales, parish of Penmanmawr; son of Owen Williams; his mother's maiden name was Margaret Roberts. Came to America in fall of 1856, and lived in Chicago about six months; then, in May, 1857, went to Portage City and lived there almost five months, then, in La Crosse till the spring of 1859, when he went to St. Louis, Mo.; resided there a little over a year, then back to Wisconsin, and lived in Cambria, four years. He then went on to a farm, near Lake Emily, in the town of Fox Lake, Dodge Co., Wis., where he resided fourteen years, still working at his trade, which he had learned in Wales. In June, 1878, he removed to the village of Cambria, where he still resides. Was first married, May 6, 1864, in Fox Lake, to Mary Morris, daughter of Henry Morris, of that place; she died May 8, 1868, leaving one child, Richard O. Williams, born June 11, 1865, and now living at home. Was married again in Milwaukee, April 3, 1871, to Ellen Thomas, of Milwaukee, daughter of Richard Roberts and widow of Joseph Thomas, who died, in Randolph, of sunstroke. Mr. Williams owns a farm of 240 acres, in the town of Machford, Green Lake Co., Wis.; one of 156 acres, in Fox Lake, Dodge Co., and twenty acres in the town of Courtland, Columbia Co.—416 acres in all. Independent in politics.

MRS. PERRY WILLIAMS (widow); is a native of North Wales; came to America in 1843; lived in New York City till 1865, then came to Cambria, and since 1869, has been carrying on her present business; has a book, stationery and toy store on north side of Main street, in Cambria. Has one daughter, Perrie. Her husband, Morris Williams, died in New York City, in February, 1865. Mrs. Williams and daughter are members of the Calvinistic Methodist Church.

PETER WILLIAMS, Postmaster, Cambria; was born Dec. 17, 1831, in Carnarvonshire, North Wales; he learned the tailor's trade in Wales, and came to America in the spring of 1849; he came to Courtland, where his stepfather, Owen Richards, had located in 1847, and worked two and one-half years on the farm, when they had to haul wheat to Milwaukee with ox teams, taking ten to twelve days to make the round trip, and were only able to haul about thirty bushels to a load; in the fall of 1851, he went to Beaver Dam to get employment, and arrived there with only 25 cents in his pocket, and Saturday night at that; he soon engaged to work for Hiram Booth at his trade for $8 per month; he stayed there about six weeks, then worked in Fox Lake till the next July, at $10 per month; the next move was to Dodgeville, Wis., to drive team in the lead mines, but, failing to get employment, only stayed eight days, and returned home penniless; he then worked for his stepfather through harvest without pay, and soon after started for Beaver Dam again without a cent; he worked on a farm for Judge Green seven weeks at $10 per month, then worked for Booth again till March 25, 1853; he then came back to Columbia

Co., and opened the first tailor-shop in Cambria, and has carried on the business most of the time since, except one year in Beaver Dam and one year in Berlin, clerking for Forbes. He was married in Cambria in 1856, to Ellen Owens; has two children living—Jennie M., now Mrs. R. A. Sanderson, of Columbus, and Owen C., at home; have lost six—Grace Ellen, Clara, Thomas Grant, and three died in infancy. Methodist and Republican; has been Postmaster at Cambria since Jan. 1, 1879; cast his first Presidential vote for John C. Fremont.

WILLIAM AP WILLIAMS, pumpmaker, Cambria Village; was born in November, 1824, in Carnarvonshire, North Wales; son of William Williams, who came to America in 1847, settled in Springvale, Columbia Co., Wis., and died there in 1863, aged 75; Mrs. Williams died in Wales in 1837, aged 55. William ap was married in Wales in 1845, to Margaret Owens, daughter of Owen Pritchard (Beddgelert) of Carnarvonshire; came to America in 1849, two years after his father came, lived in Oneida Co., N. Y., two years, and came to Wisconsin in 1851; settled in Springvale, rented a farm six years, then bought a farm of 240 acres on Sec. 9, and lived there till the summer of 1867, then sold out and removed to Cambria Village, where he has carried on the business of pumpmaking and drilling wells ever since Sept. 3, 1861; his first wife died aged 37, leaving eight children (having previously lost two, one named Gaing and one infant, unnamed); of those living—Ann is now Mrs. John Williams, of Emporia, Kan.; Catharine is Mrs. James Pritchard, of Oakland, Cal.; William lives in Emporia, Kan.; Gaing is the wife of Thomas James, a molder living in Honolulu, Sandwich Islands; Maggie, single, living near Oakland, Cal.; Robert in the Sandwich Islands, on a sugar plantation, and Richard and Rowland at home in Cambria. Mr. Williams was married the second time, June 7, 1867, to Wright, a native of Scotland, who died in 1874; was married the third time, Dec. 25, 1879, to Mrs. Jane James, a native of Wales and widow of E. James, of Columbus. Mr. and Mrs. Williams are members of the Methodist Church, and he is a Republican. When his father, William Williams, arrived in Milwaukee, he was obliged to stop at the hospital at that place, with his son Rowland, who was taken sick on the Lake; another son, Robert, was taken sick on the road after leaving Milwaukee, and died a few days after they arrived in Cambria in July, 1847, aged 25, and was the first one buried in the Cambria cemetery: Mr. Williams is one of the company engaged in mining for silver in the town of Courtland, just south of Cambria.

TOWN OF RANDOLPH.

ADAM BLOCHWITZ, farmer, Sec. 5; P. O. Cambria; was born June 22, 1834, in Bavaria; son of Jacob Blochwitz, who came to America in 1839, or 1840, and settled in Westchester Co., N. Y., near Sing Sing; came to Wisconsin in 1850, and is now living in Green Lake Co., aged 79; Adam remained with his father till 1852, except about six months in Milwaukee, trying to learn the shoemaker's trade, without success, however, as the business did not agree with him; in September, 1852, he went to Portage City and engaged as clerk in the dry-goods and grocery business, at which he continued three years; he then went into partnership with George Rapp in the first bakery established in Portage, but which was run the past year by Rapp, then leased by Hutcher & Ranson for two years, before he bought an interest; they carried on business together one year, when he bought out the whole concern and continued the business alone till 1862, then sold out to A. F. Greene, and July 25, 1862, came to the town of Randolph, where he now resides. Was married, March 28, 1858, to Willhelmiene Burbach, who died May 4, 1871, aged 33 years 10 months and 13 days, leaving five children—Eliza, Phoebe, Jacob, Margaret and Peter, all living at home; was married the second time, March 16, 1872, to Sophia Keller, by whom he has two children—John C. and Henry A.; she was born May 12, 1837, in Prussia, daughter of Conrad Keller, who came to America in 1868, and now lives on Sec. 17 in Randolph; Mr. Blochwitz has been Supervisor and Justice of the Peace, and in politics is conservative; has 147 acres of land. Both members of the Reformed Lutheran Church.

FREDERICK BICKELHAUPT, farmer, Sec. 10; P. O. Randolph Center; born Jan. 21, 1836, in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany; son of Peter Bickelhaupt; came to America in 1842, with his parents, and lived in New York City about twenty years; worked a part of the time in a soda-water factory and some in a window-shade factory; in 1863 came to Wisconsin and lived in Cambria until 1865, then went to Fox Lake and manufactured soda water for two years; then back to Cambria and kept saloon until 1872; he then took a trip through Colorado, Wyoming and New Mexico, and returned to Cambria in 1874; stayed there until the spring of 1879, then came to the town of Randolph, where he now resides.

Was first married in New York City in 1862, to Margaret Shoffer, who died in 1875 aged 37, leaving three children—Fred, Emma and Peter; in October, 1876, he was married to Mrs. John Heidt, whose maiden name was Bernadina Furing, daughter of Conrad Furing, of Courtland. (See his biography.) Mr. Heidt died in 1874, aged 36, leaving four children—Frank, Paulina, Joseph and Henry; had lost three—John M., Mary and Georgie. Mr. Bickelhaupt lost four children by his first wife—William, Charles George and an infant not named; has one child by the second marriage—Matilda. Mrs. Bickelhaupt is a Catholic, and he is a Democrat.

EDWARD J. BREESE, farmer, Sec. 13; P. O. Randolph; was born in Montgomeryshire, North Wales, August, 1831; son of Edward Breese, who came to America in the spring of 1846, and settled in the town of Randolph; he is still living and in good health at the age of 83. Mrs. Breese (mother of Edward J.) died in April, 1872, or 1873, aged 66. Mr. Breese has always followed farming; was married in the fall of 1867, to Sarah Jones, daughter of John W. Jones, of Randolph; she died Oct. 14, 1874, of apoplexy, aged 35 years and 8 months, leaving two children—John, born July 14, 1868, and Edward, born May 19, 1873. Mrs. Breese was a member of the Calvinistic Methodist Church; Mr. Breese is also a member of the same church, and is a Republican. Mr. Breese is a brother of Lt. Breese, of Portage.

DAVID CARSON, farmer, Sec. 27; P. O. Cambria; was born Dec. 9, 1823, near Montreal, Canada; son of George and Mary Carson; when about 11 years old, David was thrown on his own resources, and commenced the battle of life on his own hook Jan. 10, 1843. He was married in Vermont, to Polly Allen, who was born Nov. 29, 1826, in Goshen, Vt., daughter of Reuben and Polly Allen, natives of Vermont, who came to Wisconsin in 1854. Mr. Carson came from Vermont to Wisconsin in September, 1855, and settled in the town of Randolph, where he has since resided; has four children living—James R., lives in Grand Meadow; Julius A., at High Forest, Minn.; George and Bell, at home with parents; lost one child—Polly died April 4, 1872, aged 14 years. Mr. Carson is a member of the M. E. Church. He has 270 acres of land, all improved but 80 acres of timber. He is a Republican.

JAMES P. CHAPMAN, farmer, Sec. 7; P. O. Cambria; born March 9, 1836, in Tioga Co., Penn.; came to Wisconsin in 1853, and settled in Plainfield, Wau-hara Co. Was married in 1856, to Julia Chapman, who died in 1863, leaving three children—John Earl, Melissa and Louisa. Oct. 6, 1865, was married to Mrs. Cornelia Austin, daughter of Stephen A. Cromwell, a native of Montgomery Co., N. Y.; she came to Wisconsin in 1848; have one child by the second marriage—Rose H. Mr. Chapman enlisted in 1862, in the 32d W. V. L. Co. C, and was in the service about three years. He is paying considerable attention to raising small fruits, and was almost the first one in the county to take any interest in raspberry culture. Mr. Chapman has a great variety of floral plants, and they have purchased the material and are about to build a large conservatory. They are members of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church, and he is Republican.

SAMUEL CLARK, farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. Randolph Center; born Aug. 13, 1816, in Goshen, Addison Co., Vt.; son of William and Betsy Clark. Was married in Goshen May 14, 1850, to Julia Hulse, who was born Feb. 7, 1830, in same place; came to Wisconsin in 1856, and has lived in the town of Randolph ever since; lived first summer on Sec. 14, at Allen's Corners, in a room 12x16, over a blacksmith-shop, and used a chest for a table until his goods came; lived six years near Cambria; and in spring of 1861, bought the farm he now owns of William Richardson of New York, (being the only farm left on the prairie not fenced and improved); came on the farm with his family in the summer of 1862. Has five children—Nellie R., Samuel B., Mary J., William T., and Mattie M., all at home except Samuel B. who is married and lives at Randolph Center. (See his biography.) Mr. Clark was Chairman of his town three years, and Side Supervisor one year. Is a Republican, and has 190 acres of land; 160 acres improved and 30 acres timber.

SAMUEL B. CLARK, wagon-maker, Randolph Center; was born July 23, 1854, in Rutland Co., Vt.; son of Sam Clark of Randolph. (See his biography.) Samuel B. lived with his father on the farm till the spring he was 21, then went to learn the wagon-maker's trade of John Chamberlain, of Randolph Center; worked with him till the fall of 1879, then bought the shop where he learned his trade, and is now in partnership with Archibald Murray, who owns a blacksmith shop at the Center. He was married, April 9, 1878, to Mary A. Williams, who was born Dec. 5, 1859, in the town of Randolph, daughter of John Williams, a native of Wales. Mr. and Mrs. Clark are members of the M. E. Church, and he is a Republican.

LEVI DEXTER, farmer, Sec. 32; P. O. Cambria; was born in Massachusetts, town of Stone, May 22, 1809; son of John Dexter, who went to Vermont and died there when Levi was only 10 years old. He was married, Nov. 18, 1833, in Vermont, to Phebe Pratt, who died July 12, 1846, aged 30 years, leaving five children—Alman, lives in Grant Co., Wis.; Levi, in Cerro Gordo Co., Iowa; Joseph and Myron, are in Rockwell, Cerro Gordo, in the dry-goods business together; Freeloze, the oldest child, is now the widow of Jonas Adams, and lives in Minnesota. Mr. Dexter came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1854, and June 8, 1856, was married in the town of Randolph to Susannah Miller, and has since lived on the farm he now occupies; had six children by the second marriage; five of them living—John, Lucy, Phebe, Henry and Annie. Mr. and Mrs. Dexter are Presbyterians and he is a Republican. His son Myron enlisted in the army during the rebellion and served about a year, toward the close of the war was in the 45th W. V. I., Co. B.

LEVI B. EAGER, farmer, Sec. 24; P. O. Randolph; was born April 17, 1821, in Derby, Orleans Co., Vt.; son of Luther Eager. Was married in Burke, Caledonia Co., Vt., in 1850, to Ann Ward, who died Aug. 2, 1862, at Fox Lake, Wis., aged 38, leaving one son, Henry L., now living in Milwaukee, who is a telegraph operator. Mr. Eager came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1851, and settled in the town of Fox Lake; lived there till 1866, then went to Randolph Village, and lived there about five years; in the fall of 1870, he removed to his present location; has 170 acres of land which he purchased in 1866, and rented till 1870. Was married the second time, March 21, 1863, at Fox Lake, to Calista C. Preston, who was born May 28, 1840, in Goshen, Addison Co., Vt., daughter of Charles Preston; has two children by the second marriage—Mabelle, born Feb. 18, 1867, and Carlos, born Feb. 27, 1871; one daughter, Annie, was born Feb. 19, 1865, and died Sept. 1, 1865. Republican.

WILLIAM HARRIS, farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. Randolph Center; was born Feb. 13, 1820, in Monmouthshire, North Wales; son of John Harris. Was married in Wales, Sept. 15, 1839, to Alice Thompson, daughter of William Thompson; she was born March 15, 1820, in same place; he came to America in 1842, and lived one and one-half years in Monongalia Co., Va.; then went to Maryland and lived three and one-half years in Alleghany Co.; came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1847, and settled in the town of Randolph, on Sec. 15, and removed to his present location in 1855; has 320 acres of land with good buildings; Sarah (now Mrs. Hugh Williams, of Chicago), John lives in Dexter, Mower Co., Minn., and Martha, now Mrs. James Carson, of Grand Meadow, Mower Co., Minn., and William T., unmarried and living at home; Mr. Harris worked in a tin factory when a boy, but worked at mining five or six years before he left Wales; also followed mining in Virginia and Maryland; after he came to Wisconsin he followed farming except five winters he worked at mining, two winters in Missouri, two in Illinois and one in Kentucky; on three of his trips to the mines he went on foot to Galena, Ill., his wife remaining at home, with her three children, doing her own work and hauling her wood with an ox team; in the fall of 1861, he made a trip to Wales to visit his parents and was gone about three months; has had two birthdays on the ocean, in 1822 and 1842, both times on his way to America. Himself and son are Republicans.

AMOS A. HARTSON, farmer, Sec. 34; P. O. Randolph; born Dec. 23, 1819, in Mansfield, Conn.; son of Elijah and Sabrina (Utley) Hartson; when 18 years old, his parents removed to Luzerne Co., Penn., town of Scott; he remained with his parents till he was 21 years old; at the age of 22, he bought a piece of timberland and commenced clearing it up for a farm. March 29, 1842, he was married, in Luzerne Co., to Artemissa Fellows, who was born Oct. 31, 1819, in Luzerne Co., Penn.; daughter of Benjamin Fellows; she died June 16, 1867. Mr. Hartson came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1849, and the next winter bought the farm he now owns, and where he has resided since the spring of 1850; has 193 acres of land; his second wife, with whom he is now living, was Mrs. Mary Duley, daughter of Michael Roach, to whom he was married in Portage City, Wis., in the fall of 1871; has three children living—Amos E., lives in Butler Co., Iowa; Martha, now Mrs. Ray Beddow, of Minnesota, and Alfred H., living in Minneapolis, Minn.; lost three—Harriet (Mrs. Frank Gale), Mary and Sarah. Mr. Hartson is a Democrat, but votes for the best man.

HENRY HENSIL, farmer, Sec. 6; P. O. Salemville, Green Lake Co.; was born June 26, 1824, in the city of Marienwerder, West Prussia; son of August Hensil; came to America in the fall of 1848; came direct to Wisconsin and located some land in what is now the town of Randolph; he then went to Portage City (then called Gongeville), and worked three years at carpenter work, then returned to his farm in Randolph, where he has since resided. He was married, Oct. 22, 1855, to Phebe Hedrig, who was born in the city of Braunfels, Prussia, in the Province of Rhine, and came to America with her parents in 1855; daughter of Conrad Hedrig; Mr. Hensil has four children living—Mina, Lottie, Ellie and Sophia, all at home; has lost one—Frances, died in 1863, only a year old. Mr. Hensil learned the millwright's trade in Prussia, but has followed farming since he came to America, except the three years he lived in Portage; has held the office of Constable and several school district offices; in politics a Reformer, and has been a member of the Masonic Fraternity for the last ten years; himself and wife both members of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Hensil and Charles W. Arch were the first German settlers in the town of Randolph, and located their land at the same time; the first night they stayed on their land, they turned a wagon box bottom up, setting a stick under one end to hold it up; they slept on the ground under the box; during the night, Mr. Arch, in turning over, knocked the stick out and let the box down on the ground, catching them in the trap, where they lay till morning. Next day, they built a cabin, by setting sticks on end in a circle and bringing them together at the top, like an Indian wigwam, and covering it with sods; in this they lived about four weeks. The first winter, snow fell about four feet deep.

ELAM D. HEWITT (deceased); was a native of Saratoga Co., N. Y.; son of William Hewitt, and was born March 1, 1813. Was married, March 29, 1840, to Almada B. Holcomb, who was born Jan. 14, 1817, in Vermont; daughter of Isaac and Hannah Holcomb, who removed to Saratoga Co. when she was only 5 or 6 years old. Mr. Hewitt came to Wisconsin with his family in July, 1846, and lived in Cottage Grove, Dane Co., till the next December, then came to Columbia Co. and located in what is now the town of Randolph, when there were but few families in the town; in March, 1847, he entered 160 acres in Sec. 34, and built a cabin 10x14 feet, in which they lived about a year, then drew lumber from Milwaukee with ox teams, and built a home in which he spent the remainder of his days. He worked at carpenter work for fourteen or fifteen years after he came to Wisconsin, hiring the work done on his farm; he died March 21, 1869, after an illness of only three days, leaving a widow and nine children—Mary F. (now Mrs. Henry Bradshaw), of Cookston, Polk Co., Minn.; Jerome B., Hannah A. (Mrs. William H. Hughes), died Dec. 3, 1879, leaving one child (Hughie E.); Albert E., in Black Hills, Dak.; George W., William W. lives in the town of Randolph; Cecil A., Henry S. and Allie L.; Cecil A. and Allie L. are living on the homestead with their mother. P. O. Randolph Center.

ELON HOLCOMB, farmer, Sec. 34; P. O. Cambria; born Feb. 17, 1833, in the State of New York; son of Isaac and Hannah Holcomb, who came to Wisconsin in 1846, and settled in the town of Randolph; his mother died June 23, 1873, aged 85, and his father July 8, 1876, aged 88; both died on the farm which they settled in 1849, where they lived with their son, Elon, who is still unmarried and occupies the homestead. Has 40 acres of land; attends the M. E. Church and is a Republican.

EDWARD J. HUGHES, dentist, Randolph; has been practicing dentistry for the last two years, and still continues to practice in Randolph and vicinity; he was born Feb. 20, 1846, in Carnarvonshire, North Wales; son of Thomas Hughes, who came to America in August, 1846, and settled on the farm now occupied by his widow and two sons; he died June 30, 1879, aged 64, leaving eight children—John, Jane (now Mrs. R. S. Richmond, of Randolph Village), Mary (now Mrs. S. W. Hartwell, of Dexter, Mower Co., Minn.), Edward J. (subject of this sketch), Sarah (now Mrs. J. K. Salisbury, of Renville Co., Minn.), Catharine (now Mrs. A. W. Thornhill, of Mower Co., Minn.), Anna (now Mrs. Crippin, resides in the town of Randolph) and Oswald R., on the homestead with his mother, a native of North Wales, and 65 years old; have 160 acres of land. Edward J. was married, Oct. 23, 1876, to Lettie C. Edwards, who died Oct. 14, 1878, leaving one child—William T., born Oct. 12, 1878; she was a daughter of Daniel Edwards, of Doylestown, Columbia Co., Wis., now of McMinville, Tenn.

JOHN W. HUGHES, farmer, Sec. 3; P. O. Cambria; born in Denbighshire, North Wales, April 28, 1812; son of William Hughes. Was married, in Wales in 1840, to Mary Jones, daughter of John Jones; followed butchering in Wales; came to America in spring of 1857, and lived in Rosendale and Eldorado, Fond du Lac Co., Wis., thirteen years, and, in 1870, came to Columbia Co., to his present location; has eight children—John, Elizabeth, Sarah, William, Robert, Mary, Ann Margaret and Ezra, four of them, Robert, Mary, Margaret and Ezra, at home; both members of the Calvinistic Methodist Church. He is a Republican; has 120 acres of land.

JOHN R. JONES (Penllyn), farmer, Sec. 29; P. O. Cambria; was born in Montgomeryshire, North Wales, parish of Cemaues, June 10, 1822; son of Rowland Jones (Gwalian); came to America in 1848; stopped in Utica, N. Y., about three months, then went to Pittston Ferry, Penn., where he resided till the spring of 1851; he then went to California, and worked at mining till 1854, when he returned East, and was married, in Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., by James Griffith, to Sarah Parry, a native of Merionethshire, North Wales; he then came to Wisconsin, and settled in the town of Randolph, near Cambria, and in the spring of 1867, removed to his present location; has two children—Rowland Henry Jones and David Oliver Jones, both at home. Mr. and Mrs. Jones are members of the Welsh Congregational Church; he has 160 acres of land. Republican.

JOHN R. JONES, farmer, Sec. 4; P. O. Cambria; born Dec. 29, 1825, in Carnarvonshire, North Wales; son of Richard J. Jones, who came to America in the fall of 1845, and entered 240 acres of land in Secs. 4 and 5, in the town of Courtland, Columbia Co., Wis., the same fall; lived in Columbus till the next spring, and then came on his land with his family, and remained on the same farm till his death, in 1850; his mother's name was Ann Owens. Mr. Jones was first married in May, 1853, to Hannah Elias, who died Jan. 29, 1877, leaving six children—Hannah, now Mrs. David Evans, of Minneapolis; Richard, also in Minneapolis; Hugh lives in Eau Claire Co., Wis.; Evan, in Minneapolis; Annie and John, at home. His second wife, to whom he was married April 8, 1879, was Mrs. Mary Hughes, daughter of Hugh R. Hughes, and widow of Benjamin R. Hughes, who died Dec. 9, 1873, in Cambria, leaving two children—Hugh R. and Jennie; both living with parents. Mr. and Mrs. Jones are members of the Welsh Calvinistic Church. He owns 127 acres of land in his farm, and is a Republican.

THOMAS F. JONES, farmer; Sec. 24; P. O. Randolph; was born in Carnarvonshire, North Wales, in 1830; son of John Thomas, who came to America in 1848, and died within a week after reaching New York, and Mrs. Thomas died about two weeks after her husband; Thomas F. stayed a few months with a brother, in the northern part of the State of New York; then lived in Utica about three years; came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1856; lived at Fox Lake five months; then in and around Cambria till 1866; he then bought the farm he now owns, and where he has since resided. Was married in 1865, in Cambria, to Margaret Jones, of Rome, N. Y.; has no children. Owns 160 acres of land, and is a Republican. Both are members of Calvinistic Methodist Church.

ROBERT E. KELLOGG (deceased); was among the first settlers in the town of Randolph; he was born Feb. 2, 1822, in Sheffield, Mass.; he worked on his father's farm till he was 21 years old; then engaged in the mercantile business in the city of Hudson, N. Y., where he remained two years; then came West, and followed the same business in Racine, Wis., about a year and a half; in the spring of 1847, he came to Columbia Co., and took up 120 acres of Government land in the town of Randolph, on Sec. 26, where he resided and followed farming till his death, which occurred Oct. 27, 1864, of consumption. May 2, 1846, he was married, in Racine, to Elizabeth Hoffman, who was born Jan. 11, 1824, in Columbia Co., N. Y., town of Claverick; she was a daughter of Jacob D. and Maria Hoffman, natives of New York, who emigrated to Wisconsin in 1848, and both died in the town of Randolph—Mrs. Hoffman, May 12, 1854, and Mr. Hoffman, May 21, 1878; Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg have had four children, of whom two are living—Alfred, born Nov. 57, 1847, and Anna, born Nov. 5, 1863; both unmarried, and living on the homestead with their mother; Sylvester was born Jan. 9, 1850, and died Oct. 27, 1853, and Charles, born Feb. 24, 1861, died June 10, 1862. Have 120 acres of land on Secs. 26 and 35. P. O. Randolph.

WM. KING, farmer, Sec. 31; P. O. Cambria; was born in Ayrshire, Scotland, about 1820; came to America in 1840, and to Caledonia, Columbia Co., Wis. in 1843; lived there four years; then removed to Portage Prairie, town of Scott, on Sec. 23, and lived there till 1857; then sold out and went to Portage; lived two years near Portage; then came to Cambria, and bought the farm he now owns in Randolph. Was married in 1854, in Marcellon, to Janet Weir, a native of Scotland; have five children—Janet, now Mrs. Matthew Kerr, of the town of Scott; Agnes; Wm.; Robert and George; lost one—Marion, died at the age of 13. In the fall of 1852, Wm. King went to California, via Panama; remained there four years; most of the time in the mines; was successful, and is now enjoying the fruit of his labors.

PHILLIP KUMBA, farmer, Sec. 5; P. O. Salemville, Green Lake Co.; born April 29, 1821, in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany; son of Phillip Kumba; came to America in 1842, and lived in Westchester Co., N. Y., till 1850. Was married in New York City, Nov. 30, 1845, to Phebe Blochwitz, daughter of Jacob Blochwitz; came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1850, and settled in Green Lake Co. (then Marquette), town of Manchester (then called Albany); removed to Columbia Co., town of Randolph, in about 1858, and has since lived on the farm he now occupies; has eight children now living—Magdalena, now Mrs. Ferdinand Heidt, of the town of Randolph; Catharine, now Mrs. Geo. Sackman, also of Randolph; Peter, married to Catharine Blochwitz, and living on the homestead; Jacob, married to Eliza Scharf, and lives in Manchester, Green Lake Co., Wis.; Margaret; Phillip; John and Joseph; last four at home. Mr. Kumba has been Supervisor two years, and Justice of the Peace; is a Democrat, and belongs to the Catholic Church. Has 348 acres of land. Mrs. Kumba was born Nov. 21, 1826, in Bavaria, and is a Presbyterian.

JOHN B. LLOYD, farmer, Sec. 34; P. O. Cambria; born Aug. 11, 1850, in North Wales in the parish of Dolyddelen, Carnarvonshire, son of Bleddyn Lloyd; his mother's maiden name was Ann Owens. His father is a farmer, and is still living in Wales; he also has one sister and four brothers, all living in Wales. John B. came to America in the spring of 1870, coming direct to Wisconsin, and has since made this his home. He attended school in Cambria, the first two winters. Oct. 11, 1879, he was married to Miss Jennie Williams, who was born Sept. 5, 1852, in the village of Cambria, daughter of Owen and Ellen (Jones) Williams, who were the first settlers in the village of Cambria. Mr. Lloyd bought the farm he now owns in the spring of 1874, and came on to it in November, 1879; has 130 acres, worth about $4,500, and has about $1,000 worth of stock. In politics he is Republican, and both members of the Welsh Methodist Church.

GEORGE G. MARVIN, farmer, Sec. 36; P. O. Randolph; was born April 18, 1824, in the town of Lyme, New London Co., Conn.; in the fall of 1846, he left home, taking a trip through Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, North and South Carolina, and back, via Washington, to Philadelphia; then went to Indiana, and spent most of the winter in that State and Michigan; in the latter part of the winter, he came to Wisconsin, and lived about two years in Beaver Dam, and spent some time in Walworth Co. In 1848, he located the land on which he now lives, and came to Randolph, with his family, in the spring of 1851, built a house on his land and moved into it in August of the same year. Was married in Beaver Dam, March 29, 1849, to Harriet J. Stultz, who was born Oct. 26, 1832, in Rockland Co., N. Y., daughter of Henry and Sally Ann Stultz, who emigrated to Wisconsin in 1841; lived at Fox Lake till the spring of 1842, then located in Beaver Dam, when there was only one family there besides his own; he resided there till 1875, then removed to Hastings, Minn., where he still resides. Mr. Marvin held the office of Chairman of his town for four years; was Treasurer, Superintendent of Schools, and Side Supervisor, and Member of the Assembly, in 1871, and is Republican in politics. Mr. and Mrs. Marvin have five children—Sarah S. (now Mrs. W. B. Shepard, of Randolph); Frank S. (lives in Zumbrota, Minn.); Henry S. (lives in Green Bay, Wis.); William D. (in Zumbrota), and Hattie L. (now Mrs. S. S. Lockhart, of Portage City, Wis.). Mrs. Marvin is a member of the M. E. Church. He has 160 acres of land, just outside the village of Randolph.

JUNIUS MARVIN (deceased), was born in the town of Lyme, Conn., Oct. 2, 1820, where he spent the early part of his life. He was a son of William and Sophia (Griffin) Marvin. Was married to Miss Adaline Raymond, of the same place, in the fall of 1849, and soon after removed to Wisconsin; he selected at that time the farm in the town of Randolph which he occupied at the time of his death. His wife died in 1862, leaving four children—Nellie L., James R. and Jennie R. (twins) and Addie, all living on the homestead. He was again married in 1864, to Miss Ellen L. Bennett, who was born July 31, 1832, in Owego, Tioga Co., N. Y., daughter of Isaac and Lucretia Bennett, who came to Wisconsin in 1846. Mr. Bennett died May 27, 1879. Mrs. Bennett is still living, in Eau Claire Co., Wis. By his second wife, Mr. Bennett had one daughter, Clara E., who is also on the homestead with her mother. Mr. Marvin was highly esteemed by his acquaintances; was an earnest, untiring, whole-hearted temperance worker; a charter member of the Temple of Honor of Randolph; had passed the chairs once, been Temple Deputy one year, and held the office of W. C. T. at the time of his death, which occurred Feb. 21, 1879, at his home in Randolph, of a lung difficulty of long standing. He had held the office of Chairman of the town, President of the Farmers' Mutual Insurance Company of Randolph, and was President of the Old Settlers Club of Fox Lake, at the time of his death.

HENRY and WILLIAM MORRIS, farmers, Sec. 21; P. O. Cambria; Henry was born March 28, 1847, in the town of Manchester, Green Lake Co., Wis.; William was born Jan. 12, 1849, in same place; sons of William Morris, a native of Carnarvonshire, North Wales, who came to America in 1846; settled in Manchester, and remained on the same from then till his death, Jan. 5, 1849. He left seven children—Mary (living at Ripon, Wis.), Nellie (now Mrs. John Grant, of Ripon), Jennie (living in Manchester), Libbie (now Mrs. J. Barrett, of Fond du Lac, Wis.), Catharine (now Mrs. Benjamin Evans, of Courtland), Henry and William. About two years after the death of Mr. Morris, the family removed to the town of Randolph, Columbia Co. Mrs. Morris married, for her second husband, Rees D. Price, a native of South Wales, with whom she lived until his death, Sept. 19, 1874, aged 63. Henry and William are unmarried, and came to their present location in the spring of 1877; have 200 acres of land. Their mother is living with them, and has an adopted daughter (Ellen) 15 years old. Mother and sons are members of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church, and the sons are Republicans.

JOHN J. OWENS (Coedmor), farmer, Secs. 28 and 28; P. O. Columbia; was born in Carnarvonshire, North Wales, in November, 1820; was a quarryman in Wales; went to Liverpool, England, and was married there, March 3, 1845, to Jane Roberts, a native of the same place he was from, in Wales. He came to America immediately after marriage; landed in New Orleans in June; came direct to Wisconsin, and lived in the town of Berry, Dane Co., till June, 1855, then came to Columbia Co., and lived eight years in the town of Springvale, and ever since in the town of Randolph. Has seven children—John H. (lives in Mazo Manie, Dane Co.), Thomas J. (lives in Cass Co., Dak.), Maggie A., Sarah E., Willie J., Ira and Clara Jane (last five at home). Both members of the Congregational Church, Republican. Has 200 acres of land.

JOSEPH PARKINSON, farmer and groceryman, Randolph Center; was born Nov. 7, 1826, in Walcott, Schoharie Co., N. Y.; son of Joseph Parkinson, who moved to Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., and died of cholera in Canada when Joseph was about 4 years old; his mother, whose maiden name was Catharine Slaght, was married, about three years after the death of her first husband, to Joseph Marshall, and removed to Greene Co., Penn., soon after. Joseph went to Erie, Penn., and attended school till he was 16 years old, and then worked in a printing office three years; he then came to Wisconsin and located some land in Kingston, Marquette Co.; then returned to Erie and worked another year in a printing office, and, in 1846, again came to Wisconsin and lived in Kingston a few years; then came to Columbia and lived in the town of Scott four years; he then worked at wagon-making in Randolph Center two years; then went to Marquette and worked three years at the same business, and, in the fall of 1869, came again to Randolph Center and has resided there since. He was married, in Kingston in October, 1847, to Elizabeth Squier, who died July 4, 1866, leaving eight children—Elizabeth A. (now Mrs. John Harris, of Randolph), Le Roy (married and living in Columbia), Mary E. (now Mrs. Andrew Sargent, of Marquette, Green Lake Co., Wis.), Jerry E., Effie C. (now Mrs. Charles J. Newsberry, of Erie, Penn.), Squier C., Margaret E. (now Mrs. Richard Jenkins, of Green Lake Co., Wis.), and Susie T., at home. His second wife was Mrs. Almira M. Plank, to whom he was married April 19, 1870, in Marquette; her first husband, George L. Plank, died in the army at Uniontown, Ala., Aug. 22, 1865, of fever, two hours before the arrival of his discharge, having been in the service two years and two months; he left one son, Charles A. Plank, who is living with his stepfather. Mr. Parkinson has two children by his second wife—Harry Oliver and Carrie Maude. Mrs. Parkinson was born Aug. 18, 1842, in the town of Orleans, Jefferson Co., N. Y.; daughter of Zenas and Polly Oliver, who came to Wisconsin in 1849, and settled in Columbia Co.; he died Nov. 17, 1864, aged 54 years. Mrs. Oliver is now living at Randolph Center, aged 65; has had in all thirteen children, and Mrs. Parkinson is the only one now living. Mr. and Mrs. Parkinson are both members of the M. E. Church, and he is a Republican.

EDWARD PUGH, farmer, Sec. 18; P. O. Cambria; born March 22, 1845, near Utica, N. Y.; son of Hugh E. Pugh, who came from Merionethshire, North Wales, in the summer of 1842, and settled in New York; came to Wisconsin in July, 1846, and located in Clyman, Dodge Co., near Watertown, and died March 1, 1858, leaving five children—Hugh (living near Lake Emily, Dodge Co.), Ann (now Mrs. William M. Williams, of the town of Randolph), Mary (now Mrs. Edward Owen, of the town of Scott), and Edward, who is unmarried, and with whom his mother is now living; her maiden name was Jane Peters; she was born in the same place as her husband, and was a daughter of Richard Peters. One daughter, Catharine, died in the fall of 1871, aged 21 years and 8 months. Mr. Pugh and his mother are members of the Calvinistic Methodist Church. He has 200 acres of land, and is a Republican.

FOULK ROBERTS (Blaen-y-C'ae), farmer Sec. 12; P. O. Randolph; was born in February, 1820, in Carnarvonshire, North Wales; son of Robert Roberts; came to America in 1844, and settled on the farm he now owns Oct. 1 of that year. Was married in Wales Aug. 20, 1844, the day before he started for America, to Catharine, daughter of Griffith Owens; his mother and two brothers came at the same time; one brother, David, died in California, and Thomas went to California, but returned and is now living at Lake Emily, Dodge Co., Wis. Mr. Roberts was Supervisor of his town for several years, and helped lay out most of the roads in the town; was the first Welsh settler in Randolph that still lives in the town, and, he thinks, in the county; he started the first Welsh Sabbath-school, and was a member of the first Church Synod in the county; went to Madison with an ox-team for the first barrel of flour he had after settling here, and took a week for the trip. Has five children—Catharine (now Mrs. Wm. Parry, of Milwaukee), Elizabeth F. (also in Milwaukee), Sarah (at home), Ellen (in Milwaukee) and Robert F., at home. Mr. and Mrs. Roberts are members of the Calvinistic Methodist Church; he is a Republican, and has 200 acres of land.

JOHN J. ROBERTS (deceased), was born Feb. 10, 1808, in Carnarvonshire, North Wales; son of John Roberts. Was married in Wales to Catharine Thomas, daughter of David Thomas. Mr. Roberts was a farmer and hotel-keeper in Wales; came to America in 1845, and settled in the town of Randolph, on Sec. 11, where his family has since resided. In 1850, he started for California, and died on the road, at Carson Valley, leaving seven children—Ann (now Mrs. Robert T. Price, of Blue Earth Co., Minn.), David J., John J. (living in Randolph), Robert J. (who died Jan. 30, 1877), Catharine (now Mrs. Albert Stranch, of Chicago), Ellen (also in Chicago), and Jane, who died Jan. 8, 1877; had lost five children before the death of Mr. Roberts; two, named Robert William and an infant not named, died in Wales, and Hugh died in America. David J. went to California in 1859; went on foot and drove an ox-team all the way, being nearly six months on the journey; he worked at mining about five years, and came home via the Isthmus of Panama, making the journey in twenty-eight days; he now owns the homestead, 180 acres, and his mother is living with him, and is able to read without glasses at the age of 71; David J. is unmarried; John is married, and living on his brother's farm. Both of them Republicans.

ROBERT O. ROBERTS, farmer, Secs. 18, 19; P. O. Cambria; was born in Anglesey, North Wales, in the town of Llanddausant; son of Owen E. Roberts; came to America in the spring of 1855, and settled in Columbia Co., Wis.; has lived there ever since, except a short time in Milwaukee. Was married March 17, 1860, to Jane Hughes, daughter of Hugh Hughes, who came from Carnarvonshire, Wales, and was one of the first settlers in the town of Randolph; he died Sept. 29, 1870, at the age of 70, on the farm now occupied by Mr. Roberts. Mrs. Roberts had only two sisters when they came to America (having lost four in Wales); one of them, Margaret, married William Owens, and died in the town of Scott, and Ellen married Hugh J. Hughes, and died in Randolph; after her death, William Hughes went to Patagonia; came home once for a visit, and died at sea on his return trip to Patagonia. Mrs. Roberts' father held meetings in his log house till the church was built on the east line of Scott. Mr. Roberts has six children—Thomas H., Maggie Ann, Samuel H., Mary Ellen, Lizzie and Johnnie H.; lost one, Mary, died Jan. 4, 1870, aged 1 year and 10 months. Both belong to Calvinistic Methodist Church. He has 540 acres of land, and is Republican.

REV. THOMAS H. ROBERTS, farm on Sec. 4, north line of Randolph, 60 acres and 90 acres, with residence opposite, in Manchester, Green Lake Co.; P. O. Cambria; was born May 12, 1825, in Carnarvonshire, North Wales; son of Hugh R. Roberts; his mother's maiden name was Mary Jones. In the spring of 1844 (when 19 years old), he, in company with a sister (Gwen Roberts), came to America and located in Wisconsin; he stayed in Racine about two months, and the next December (1844) came to Columbia Co., and located land in what is now the town of Randolph, on Sec. 4 (160 acres, 40 acres of which he still owns); his uncle, David R. Roberts, located land adjoining his, and they built a home on the line between them, which they occupied together till May, 1845; he then went to Beloit and stayed there till the next fall, when he returned to Randolph and built a log house on his land. His parents came from Wales the same fall (1845), and all lived on the same farm till the death of his father, Feb. 23, 1865, at the age of 78; his mother died in Osbkosh, Wis., at the home of a daughter, in March, 1875, aged 87. Mr. Roberts was first married Jan. 7, 1851, in Marquette, to Mary Parry, daughter of Griffith Parry, a native of Wales; she died May 7, 1856, leaving two children—Robert and Benjamin, the latter only 6 days old at her death; he is now living at home with his father; Robert has been in school for the last eight years; is a graduate of Ripon College, of the Class of 1879; is now at Lane Seminary, Cincinnati, preparing for the ministry; has been licensed to preach about five years, but not yet ordained. Mr. Roberts was married the second time, June 30, 1858, to Jane Hughes, a native of Wales, daughter of John Hughes, who is now living in Blue Earth Co., Minn.; she died Oct. 19, 1869, in her 30th year, leaving three children—Mary Ellen, who died Dec. 22, 1874, aged 13 years; Jennie and Hugh (both at home); had lost three previous to her death—Mary Jane died in Racine at the age of 2 years; Hannah, aged 7 months, and Johnnie, aged 5 months. His third wife was Mrs. Mary Hughes, widow of Thomas Hughes, and daughter of Thomas Rowlands, of Springvale; she died April 3, 1878, aged 47, leaving four children by her first husband, but none by the second. Mr. Roberts was licensed to preach Dec. 25, 1845, by the Calvinistic Methodist or Welsh Presbyterian Church, but not ordained till June, 1850. In the fall of 1853, he went to Lehigh Co., Penn., and taught school about two years, preaching at the same time; he preached in the vicinity of his home, in Dodge and Columbia Cos., several years before there was any church organization there, holding meetings at private houses, his father's home being one of them; Proscairon Church was organized in 1848, and the church building put up in 1851; Berea Church was organized soon after the other, and the house built in 1852; Mr. Roberts has been in charge of both churches ever since their organization, but preached in Racine in 1861 and a part of 1862, still having charge of the home churches.

WILLIAM R. ROBERTS, farmer, Sec. 18; P. O. Cambria; was born in Merionethshire, North Wales, Nov. 13, 1811; son of Robert Richards, whose children all took their father's given name for their surname, and go by the name of Roberts; he came to America in 1840, and lived six years in Utica, N. Y. Was married there in 1846, to Ann Davis, daughter of Hugh Davis; she was born in Merionethshire, Wales, in 1818. Mr. Roberts came to Wisconsin in 1846; lived ten years in Dodge Co., near Watertown, and in March, 1856, came to Columbia Co., and settled in his present location; has four children—Catharine (now Mrs. John Roberts, of Fillmore Co., Minn.), Ann Jane (now Mrs. Joseph Richards, of Courtland), Elizabeth and William H. (both at home); William H. was married in January, 1872, to Mary Morris, daughter of Owen Morris, who lives near Columbus, Wis. Mr. Roberts is a Republican, and himself and wife are members of the Calvinistic Methodist Church; they have an adopted son named Owen.

JOSEPH SANDERSON, farmer, Sec. 29; P. O. Cambria; was born March 11, 1841, in Slaidburn, Yorkshire, England; son of Thomas Sanderson, who came to America in 1851, and settled on the farm now occupied by Joseph; he died Sept. 14, 1878, and Mrs. Sanderson died in 1853. Joseph was married March 3, 1869, in Poynette, Wis., to Jane Stevenson, daughter of James Stevenson, a native of Scotland, who came to America in 1854 or 1855; Mr. Sanderson has five children living, viz.: James B., Frances E., Joseph A., Jennie B. and Thomas. He is now a Justice of the Peace and is a Republican. Mrs. Sanderson is a Presbyterian. The Thomas Sanderson estate, on which Joseph lives, consists of 440 acres.

JACOB SCHARF, farmer, Sec. 7; P. O. Cambria; was born Jan. 24, 1825, in the Province of Rhine, Prussia; son of William Scharf, who came to America in 1851, and settled in the town of Randolph on the farm now owned by his son; he died in September, 1867, aged 75; his wife died in June, 1855, aged 66. Jacob Scharf was married, Feb. 7, 1855, to Eve Bloekwitz, daughter of Jacob Bloekwitz; she was born in Bavaria, and died Jan. 20, 1874, aged 36 years 10 months and 5 days, leaving nine children—Catharine (now Mrs. Edward Walslegel, of the town of Randolph), Henry, Jacob (working at blacksmithing in Cambria), Mina, Charles, William, Phebe, Maggie and Franklin; all at home except Catharine and Jacob. Mr. Scharf learned the blacksmith's trade in Prussia, and has worked at it most of the time since coming to America, in addition to his farming; from 1846 to 1849, he was in the Prussian cavalry service, in the 4th Co., 1st Regiment of Lancers, of the "King's Guard;" the present Emperor, William, was then General of the Guard; Prince Frederick Charles was then a Captain, and the Crown Prince Frederick William a Lieutenant in the 1st Regiment of Infantry. Mr. Scharf is a Director in the town insurance company, of Randolph, and has been in it since it was organized, and is now Side Supervisor of the town. Is a member of the United Reformed and Lutheran Church, and in politics a Democrat, but always votes for the best man, regardless of party. Has 197 acres of land—130 acres improved, 10 acres of marsh and balance timber.

JOHN B. SMITH, farmer, Sec. 21; P. O. Randolph Center; was born in the town of Ogden, Monroe Co., N. Y., July 21, 1830; son of Francis Smith. Was married in Ogden Oct. 23, 1853, to Clarissa Richmond, who was born March 6, 1834, daughter of Joshua Richmond. They came to Wisconsin in November, 1853, and settled in the town of Randolph in which town he has since resided. Has one child, Emma A., born July 12, 1859, now living at home. Mr. Smith has held the office of Supervisor, Town Clerk and Justice of the Peace, and is the present Chairman of the town, although he is a Democrat and the town of Randolph is a Republican town. Has 80 acres of land in Randolph.

THOMAS W. THOMAS, farmer, Sec. 28; P. O. Cambria; born Feb. 23, 1853, in Hollyhead, Anglesea, North Wales; came to America with his parents, William and Elizabeth Thomas, in 1850; they settled in Waukesha; lived there till 1874, and now live in the town of Courtland. Thomas W. was married Feb. 15, 1871, in Waukesha, to Clara Gauthier, who was born in Waukesha Oct. 22, 1848, daughter of Joseph and Mary Gauthier. Mr. Thomas came to Columbia Co. in May, 1875, and lived with his father till October, 1878, in Courtland; then came on the farm where he now resides. Has 160 acres. Has one child, Joseph, born Nov. 9, 1875; lost two, who died in infancy. Republican.

SAMUEL S. TORBERT, farmer, Sec. 15; P. O. Randolph Center; born March 16, 1821, in Williamsport, Lycoming Co., Penn.; son of Isaac K. Torbert, who removed to Ohio in 1838; lived in Pickaway Co. two and one-half years, then went to McHenry Co., Ill., where he died in 1845, and his wife in 1848. Samuel S. was married in Boone Co., Ill., Sept. 23, 1845, to Eliza M. Streeter, who was born Sept. 5, 1821, in Potter Co., Penn., daughter of Truman Streeter, who removed to Ohio, then to Illinois, where the young people became acquainted and concluded to make the balance of the journey of life together. He came to Wisconsin March 16, 1844, and located on the southwest quarter and the southwest quarter of the southeast quarter of Sec. 15 in what is now the town of Randolph, which was the first land located in the town. He lived there two summers, teaching in Illinois during the winters, and, in December, 1845, came on with his wife and has lived on the same place ever since, except one and one-half years in Illinois and two and one-half years in Iowa, having rented his farm. At the time of his settlement in Randolph, there was only one house beside his own between Fox Lake and Ft. Winnebago, and that was a log house called "Powderly's." His first house was of logs, 11x14 feet inside, and, soon after he came, three other families moved into the place, and with true Western hospitality, "he took them in" and entertained them till they could build for themselves. While the four families (seventeen persons) were living together in this house, a daughter was born to one of the families (James Inglehart's), making eighteen persons living in a house 11x14, and all happy. Mr. and Mrs. Torbert have four children living—Isaac

J. (married to Chloe A. Ross, of Randolph, and living in Baraboo, Wis.); Theresa M. (now Mrs. E. A. Price, of Baraboo); Willie E. and Elmer E., both living with their parents. Mr. Torbert has been in office of some kind most of the time since he has lived in Randolph, having held at one time and another all the different town offices. Mr. and Mrs. Torbert are both members of the M. E. Church, and he has been Superintendent of Sabbath school for nearly twenty years, and is a Republican.

DAVID D. WILLIAMS (Tan-y-bwlch), farmer, Sec. 31; P. O. Cambria; was born Dec. 25, 1819, in Carnarvonshire, North Wales, in the parish of Dolyddelen; son of William Davis (of the same place), whose father was David Williams, but himself and brothers all went by the name of Davis. The subject of this sketch chose to take his grandfather's name, and is known as David D. Williams; he came to America in 1856, and settled in Columbia Co., Wis.; lived one year in the town of Springvale, and since that time in Randolph in his present location; was a farmer in Wales, and was married, in November, 1840 (in Wales), to Ann Evans, who was born in Denbighshire, North Wales, May 14, 1818, daughter of Robert Evans and sister of Mrs. Ll. Williams and Mrs. John ap. Jones; have had in all nine children, of whom six are now living—William B. (lives in Berlin, Wis.); Robert E. (at home); David D. (in Fox Lake, Wis.); Mary A. (now Mrs. Thomas Davis, of Minneapolis, Minn.); Griffith D. (lives in Hutchinson Co., Dakota), and Ellen (now Mrs. A. H. Potts, of Fox Lake, Wis.); Anna died in Wales about a year old; Margaret was married to Owen E. Jones, of Cambria, and died Jan. 1, 1876, aged 34 years and 3 months, leaving two children—Charles Lincoln and Frederiek W.; John D. Williams died Feb. 10, 1879, aged 23 years 5 months and 22 days. Mrs. Williams is a member of the Calvinistic Methodist Church. He has 191 acres of land, and is a Republican; has made two trips to Wales since he came to America, and, in 1859, was away nine months, and one in 1867, gone only five weeks.

EDWARD L. WILLIAMS, farmer, Sec. 33; P. O. Cambria; was born in Carnarvonshire, North Wales; son of Thomas Edwards, but takes his grandfather's name, Edward Williams; came to America in 1846 and settled in the town of Courtland, and has resided there and in the town of Randolph ever since. Was married, in 1855, to Mary Jones, daughter of Owen Jones, of Springvale; has seven children—Thomas E., Owen J., John T., Margaret E., Elizabeth J., Edward L. and Mary. His first wife died in 1867, aged 35 years. He was married again, in 1869, to Maria Jones, daughter of David R. Morris, of Utica, Winnebago Co., Wis.; she is the mother of the youngest child (Mary). Has 310 acres of land with good buildings nicely located; has been Treasurer of the town, and was Assessor for about ten years in Courtland and two years in Randolph, and is a Republican; both are members of the Welsh Calvinistic Church.

ELIAS R. WILLIAMS, harness-maker, Cambria; was born in March, 1829, in Merionethshire, North Wales; son of Robert Williams, who came to America in 1845, and lived in Racine till the next spring (1846); he then settled in Courtland (then called Portage Prairie), and died in 1853; Elias R. remained in Racine (where he learned his trade), till 1848; then went to Louisiana and lived in Bayou Sara about six months; then a year and a half in Natchez, Miss., working at his trade; then in 1850, came back to Wisconsin and stayed on his father's farm till the spring of 1854, then went to Waupun and worked at his trade one summer; then went to Watertown, and in 1845, was married to Ann E. Jones, daughter of Nathaniel Jones, a native of Wales; soon after marriage, he went into business for himself, and continued there till 1864; then came to Cambria and still continues the business; was a member of the first Village Board ever elected in Cambria, and has been President of the village; is now leader of the choir of the Calvinistic Methodist Church, and has about thirty singers, had at one time forty, and it had the reputation of being the best choir in the State; he also gives instructions in vocal music; has three children—John E., Laurie Ann and Sarah Jane. Republican.

MORRIS WILLIAMS, farmer, Sec. 19; P. O. Cambria; was born Dec. 2, 1823, in Carnarvonshire, North Wales; son of Wm. Morris, whose father's name was Morris Williams; he came to America in the spring of 1845; lived in Northampton Co., Penn., three and a half years; in the fall of 1848 came to Wisconsin and settled on the farm he now owns. Was married in October, 1845, in Easton, Penn., to Mary Jones, a native of Carnarvonshire, North Wales, daughter of Griffith Jones; she died April 30, 1879, in Randolph, leaving one child, George Washington Williams, born Feb. 22, 1858, now attending school in Milwaukee. Mrs. Williams was a member of the Calvinistic Methodist Church, and Mr. Williams and his son also belong to the same church. Both Republicans. Owners of 240 acres of land.

SAMUEL F. WILLIAMS, farmer, Sec. 21; P. O. Randolph Center; was born in the Lee, Oneida Co., N. Y., Jan. 19, 1818; son of Alexander Williams. Was married in Oneida Co., Jan. 1, 1845, to Mary J. Kingsbury, who was born Oct. 2, 1819, in Hebron Co., Conn.; came to Wisconsin in June, 1849; lived in Kingston, Green Lake Co., till spring of 1850; then removed to Caledonia, Columbia Co. where he lived till January, 1852, and from that time till April, 1854, he lived in Ft. Winnebago, there being no garrison there at the time, and the buildings left in charge of Capt. Wm. Weir when he left the fort; he went on a farm three miles away, and lived there till 1863, then in December of that year came to the town of Randolph on Sec. 24, where he resided till March, 1876, then sold out and removed to his present location. Has 170 acres of land; has four children—Charles S. at home; H. W., who is married and in the hardware business in Waupaca, Wis., a partner of J. E. Wells & Co., of Portage City, Wis.; George H. and Eugenis H. Mr. Williams and sons are Democrats, and Mrs. Williams is a Republican.

WILLIAM M. WILLIAMS, farmer, Sec. 16; P. O. Randolph Center; was born Feb. 27, 1832 or 1833, in Carnarvonshire, North Wales; son of William Morris; Mr. Williams came to America when 16 years old, and lived a couple of years with his brother Morris Williams, and then made his home in the town of Scott till 1876; then removed to his present location. His first wife was Mary Jones, daughter of Robert Jones, of the town of Scott; she lived only about two years after her marriage, and died in 1861, aged 22 years, leaving no children; he remained single till June 20, 1879, when he was married to Ann Pugh, daughter of Henry Pugh; she was born in Utica, N. Y., March 22, 1843. Both are members of the Calvinistic Methodist Church. He has 175 acres of land. Republican.

CHARLES M. WILLIS, M. D., Randolph; is the son of Anthony and Sabrina Willis; born in St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., Dec. 7, 1849; his father was a cabinet-maker of Massena, St. Lawrence Co., whence he removed to Green Lake Co. and settled on a farm near Ripon, Wis., in the fall of 1871; Charles received his early education in the district school of Green Lake Co. after which he attended Ripon College for about four years, teaching part of the time during the winters so as to have money enough to meet his expenses at college through the summer term; in 1874, he began the study of medicine with Dr. Everhard, of Ripon, and attended lectures at Rush Medical College, of Chicago, where he graduated with the Class of 1877; he at once began the practice of medicine at Randolph, Dodge Co., where he has now an extensive practice in this and Columbia Cos.; as a citizen, he is highly respected, and as a physician, he enjoys the confidence of all who know him. In July, 1876, he married Miss Anna L. Harrison, of Ringwood, McHenry Co., Ill.; they have one son, Roy. Mrs. W. is a member of the Congregational Church.

TOWN OF SCOTT.

LORENZO M. ALDRICH, farmer, Secs. 5 and 6; P. O. Bellefountain; born March 4, 1827, Allegany Co., N. Y. Was married, Aug. 28, in same county, to Miami Spees, who died in Columbia Co., Wis., May 14, 1864, leaving six children—Mary Ellen, now Mrs. Edward Lee, of Plainfield, Wis.; Isaac Monroe, lives at Eau Claire, Wis.; Harriet, now Mrs. C. Behm, of the town of Randolph; Alice Jane, now Mrs. Eugene Chapman, also of Randolph; Anna and Ida, at home. Was married the second time, July 3, 1865, to Mary Lee, widow of John Lee, who died in the army; has five children by the second marriage—Carrol, Myron and Myra (twins), Frank and Gertrude. Mr. Aldrich came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1850, and located on the farm he now owns and occupies. Is a Democrat, and has 230 acres of land.

MARCUS BARDEN, farmer, Sec. 17; P. O. Pardeeville; was born Aug. 12, 1822, in Chenango Co., N. Y.; son of Samuel Barden, who removed to Michigan with his family in 1842, and lived in Cass Co., till the fall of 1849; he then came to Wisconsin and settled in Columbia Co., town of Scott, where he died March 23, 1858. Marcus Barden came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1849, and has resided in the town of Scott ever since. He was married first in Michigan, July 5, 1846, to Lora C. Loomis, who died Nov. 5, 1847, aged 18 years and 4 months; was married the second time, in 1854, in the town of Scott, to Miss E. R. Cook, who died April 23, 1858, leaving two children—Virgil (living in Marcellon), and Jacob (living at home). March 23, 1859, he was married to Mrs. Olive Maginnis, who was born Feb. 12, 1832, in Livingston Co., N. Y., daughter of Daniel Jerome, and widow of William Maginnis; has three children by the second marriage—Marcus, Jr., Frank and Clarence, all at home. Mr. Barden was Chairman of his town fifteen years in succession, was also Justice of the Peace and Town Clerk, and Town Superintendent of Schools, and was a member of the Legislature in 1860–61 and 1874–75. He is a Republican, and has 494 acres of land, 240 acres of it in the town of Scott, and 254 acres in Marcellon. Mrs. Barden is a member of the Free-Will Baptist Church.

DAVID CLARK, farmer, Sec. 8; P. O. Pardeeville; born Dec. 29, 1819, in Geauga Co., Ohio; son of Freeman Clark, a native of Massachusetts; David came to Wisconsin in 1841, and lived in Walworth Co. till the fall of 1847; then came to Columbia Co.; located land in the town of Scott, where he now lives, and came with his family in 1848. He was married, June 27, 1844, to Marietta Barber, daughter of Timothy E. Barber; have six children—Martha, now Mrs. S. Dodge, of Scott; James K., lives in Boone Co., Neb.; Mary, now Mrs. Jacob Breneman, of Clark Co., Wis.; Ida A., now Mrs. A. Holloway, of Minnesota, near Rochester; Viola and David Eugene, both at home. Mr. Clark has been Supervisor of his town, and is a Republican. His first wife died June 20, 1874, aged 49, and he was married again Dec. 30, 1874, to Mrs. R. A. Horton, widow of Joseph Horton and daughter of Daniel Smith, of Washington Co., Wis.; has 240 acres of land. Mrs. Clark is a member of the M. E. Church.

JOHN DODGE, farmer, Sec. 35; P. O. Cambria; was born Dec. 16, 1816, in Hillsboro Co., N. H., son of William and Lydia Dodge; came West in 1842; lived six months in Iowa, and three or four months in Rockford, Ill.; then came to Wisconsin and lived in Milwaukee, working in a livery-stable; in October, 1844, he came to Columbia Co., and located on the southeast quarter of Sec. 35, and has resided on it ever since; he thinks this was the first land located in the town of Scott. Was married, in June, 1859, in Fox Lake, to Mary Bliss, who was born Feb. 25, 1841, in New York City, daughter of John Bliss, who now lives in the town of Springvale; has twelve children living—Fannie A. and Lydia J., twins; Lydia, now Mrs. William Andrews, of Cambria; Wm. W., John P., Mary Louisa, Samuel C., Rosella, Jacob B., Cora A., Rachel J. and Willard A.; has lost two—Myron F. died at 6 months old, and one infant unnamed; has 550 acres of land in Springvale and Scott. Democrat.

JOHN D. EVANS, farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. Cambria; was born Aug. 26, 1853, in the town of Courthland; son of Evan J. Evans, who came to America about 1850, and lived in the town of Courthland about six years, then removed to the town of Scott, Sec. 22, where his wife died Oct. 19, 1876, aged 48, leaving three children—John D. (the subject of this sketch), Mary Jane, who was born Feb. 18, 1858, in the town of Scott, and Lizzie M., who was born Oct. 9, 1868, and died Jan. 13, 1879. John D. and Mary Jane are unmarried and living on the homestead (120 acres), and their father is in Wales. All three members of the Calvinistic Methodist Church, and John D. and his father are Republicans. Mrs. Evans' maiden name was Jane Davis, and she was born in Wales.

MELVIN FULLER, farmer, Sec. 17; P. O. Marcellon; born July 22, 1840, in Greene Co., N. Y.; son of Amos Fuller, who was born and raised in Greene Co., in the Catskill Mountains. Mr. Fuller came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1855, and settled in Beaver Dam, lived there one year, then came to Columbia Co., and has resided in this county ever since; came to his present location in the fall of 1879. Was married, Sept. 20, 1864, to Mary Payne, who was born in Dec. 9, 1848, in the town of Scott, daughter of George Payne (see his biography in this work); have five children—Henry, Amos, Alma, George and Frank; one daughter, Ruth, died Feb. 22, 1872, aged 5 years. April 29, 1861, Mr. Fuller enlisted in the 1st Minn. V. L., Co. A. for three years, and served three years and four days; his regiment went out with 1,010 men, and when mustered out had only 104 men left of the original enlistment. Mr. Fuller was in the first battle of Bull Run, and the day after the battle, while "humping it" for Washington, to the best of their ability, it occurred to him that it was his 21st birthday; he said to his comrades in misfortune: "Boys, to-day I am 21 years old. I am a man, and running for dear life." He was never wounded, and never sick a day while in the service. In the fall of 1875, Mr. Fuller went to Nevada and worked in a quartz-mill, near Carson, about twenty months, then returned to Wisconsin on his farm, four miles east of Portage, in the town of Ft. Winnebago, where he lived about ten years before he removed to his present location, and still owns a farm there of 236 acres, on Secs. 1 and 36, and 200 acres in town of Scott. In politics, Democrat.

JOHN HAMILTON, farmer, Sec. 34; P. O. Cambria; was born May 7, 1801, in the parish, of Paisley, Renfrewshire, Scotland; son of John and Margaret (Stewart) Hamilton; learned the weaver's trade when young, and worked at it seventeen years; commenced when not quite 11 years old, and was foreman in a Paisley shawl manufactory for about twenty-two years in the same house. Was married, July 8, 1825, to Ann Polson, daughter of John Polson, of Paisley; came to America in 1849, leaving Glasgow on the 18th of August; came to Milwaukee, where he fell in with Robert McConochie, who induced him to come to Columbia Co.; he then located the land he now owns, and where he has since resided. His first wife died July 8, 1833, in Scotland, leaving one child—Elizabeth, now Mrs. Thomas Baillies, of Scott, Sec. 33. Mr. and Mrs. Baillies have seven children living—Ann P. (now Mrs. Henry Sawyer, of Scott), Jane (now Mrs. J. C. Thomas, of Scott), Thomas (married and living in Scott), John (married and lives in Springvale), Maggie, Polson and Jessie S.—the last three at home. He was married, the second time, April 13, 1842, just before he started for America, to Margaret Rueside, daughter of James Rueside, a native of Ayrshire, but who resided in Paisley at the time she was born; her mother's name was Margaret Andrew, daughter of Robert Andrew, a landlord in Paisley; had no children by the second marriage; lost one child of the first wife—Margaret, died when only 1 year old. Mrs. Hamilton is now in her 84th year. Mr. Hamilton is a Democrat; has held the office of Town Treasurer two years and was Assessor at the same time; has also been Justice of the Peace, and was School Superintendent several years; has 255 acres of land.

JAMES HAMMOND, farmer, Sec. 27; P. O. Cambria; was born Oct. 9, 1820, in Staffordshire, England, son of John Hammond, a potter, who brought up his son to the same business. James was married in October, 1844, to Martha Floyd, daughter of Henry Floyd. In 1843, an emigration society was organized among the potters of Staffordshire, which afterward extended through England and Scotland; Mr. Hammond was one of a committee of three appointed to visit America, and select a location for those of the society who wished to emigrate; the other members of the committee were John Sawyer and Hamlet Copeland; they came to America in the spring of 1846, visited Iowa, and then came to Wisconsin, and decided to locate in Columbia Co.; they purchased about 1,700 acres of land in what is now the town of Scott, and commenced making improvements; each emigrant was to have 20 acres of land, and have a log house built, and 5 acres broken, with the funds of the society; the next summer, about a dozen families came over and others kept coming for a number of years. Mr. Hammond retained his official position in the society till the spring of 1848, and has resided on the land then located ever since. He now owns 40 acres in Sec. 27. Has six children living—John, living in Watonwan Co., Minn.; Rachel, married and living in Minnesota; George, in Leadville, Colo.; Mary, now Mrs. Charles Ratliff, of Minnesota; Henry and Elijah, in Leadville. Has lost four—James, Anna and Elizabeth, and one child in infancy. In politics, a Democrat.

BENJAMIN HOPKINS, farmer, Sec. 27; P. O. Cambria; was born in Staffordshire, England, May 28, 1806, son of Isaac Hopkins, who died from a wound received while at work in a pottery in 1811, and was buried the day that Benjamin was 5 years old; his mother died in November, 1841, in England. He was married June 21, 1828, to Elizabeth Whitmore, daughter of George and Elizabeth (Burrett) Whitmore. Mr. Hopkins served an apprenticeship at glass-blowing, at Long Port, England, and at earthenware printing at Wood & Chalener's, in Staffordshire pottery, and then at pawnbroking in the same place; in 1838, he commenced to do business for himself as a merchant, and failed in 1845, through sickness of himself and family; in 1847, he sold the homestead left him by his father, where he was born, and where his eight children were all born; came to America with the Potter Emigration Society, and settled on the farm where he now resides; when he first came he hoed corn for a neighbor, and was to have 1 acre of the corn for hoeing 11 acres; when he came to harvest and market his corn he found he had earned just 6½ cents a day; being discouraged by his failure in business in England, he commenced drinking, and continued his dissipation till 1865, when one night about midnight he was suddenly aroused to a sense of his degradation by a dream or vision; he arose in his half-intoxicated condition and went into the cellar where he had a whisky jug, which he called "Black Bet;" he picked up the jug, and addressing it said, "Black Bet, thou hast deceived me, and been leading me on to ruin, and now I will banish thee from the face of the earth, and will never again touch, taste, or handle the accursed poison so long as I live, so help me God;" he then dashed the jug on the cellar bottom, shivering it to atoms, and let mother earth drink the contents; he has been a strong temperance man ever since, and was the means of organizing a Good Templars lodge in his neighborhood, called Rosedale Lodge, No. 481, and has been Lodge Deputy, and Representative to the Grand Lodge ever since it was instituted; he is now, at the age of 74, an active temperance worker, and member of the Baptist Church at Wyocena. Mrs. Hopkins died; they have five children living—Isaac (lives in the South), Mary Ann (now the widow of Charles Weyener, living on the homestead), Richard (lives in Leeds, Columbia Co.), Hannah (now Mrs. Samuel Smith, of Scott), and John, living in town; have lost three—Aaron, Benjamin and Elizabeth.

ISAAC HOPKINS, farmer, Sec. 28; P. O. Cambria; was born Jan. 31, 1833, in Staffordshire, England, son of Benjamin Hopkins, who came to America in 1847. (See his biography.) Was married July 19, 1856, to Dorlisa Connor, who was born May 19, 1832, in Ira, Cayuga Co., N. Y., daughter of Josiah and Sally (Fox) Connor, natives of Washington Co., N. Y. Mr. Connor died in Onondaga Co., N. Y., April 17, 1863, aged 68 years 7 months and 12 days; Mrs. Connor died Dec. 6, 1844, aged 45 years 11 months and 24 days. Mr. Hopkins has five children living—Sarah L. (now Mrs. William Ross, of the town of Scott), George Whitmore, Charles Joynson, Hettie Maria and Luelbert; have lost two—Mary Elizabeth died Nov. 19, 1863, aged 6 years 1 month and 16 days, and an infant son, May 5, 1866. Is a Republican, and has been Justice of the Peace and Town Treasurer. He has 80 acres of land.

EVAN JONES, farmer, Sec. 24; P. O. Cambria; was born March 29, 1826, in Merionethshire, Wales, son of John Daniel Jones, who came to America in the spring of 1849; came to Columbia Co., Wis., and located in Scott, where he died in 1858. Evan was married, May 21, 1859, to Eliza Williams, who was born in the same place he was Nov. 13, 1827; they have four children—John D., Susan Jane, Morgan and Jane. Both are members of the Calvinistic Methodist Church; he is a Republican, and has about 300 acres of land.

HUGH R. JONES, farmer, Sec. 36; P. O. Cambria; was born March 14, 1836, in Anglesea, North Wales; son of Richard Jones; came to America in 1857, and settled first in Kane Co., Ill.; lived there three years, then came to Wisconsin, and was married, Dec. 29, 1860, to Laura Williams, who was born Feb. 24, 1840, daughter of William W. Williams, from Carnarvonshire, Wales, where she was born. Mr. Jones lived near Cambria four years, then removed to Colorado and lived in Denver three or four months; then went to Central City and worked at the trade of stonemason, which he had learned of his father in Wales, till the fall of 1869, then returned to Wisconsin and bought the farm he now owns. Has three children—Richard R., Mary Jane and Emma, all at home. Both members of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church; he is a Republican, and has 100 acres of land.

GEORGE C. KEITH, farmer, Sec. 7; P. O. Pardeeville, born April 24, 1830, in Geauga Co., Ohio; his father, Charles Keith, a native of Massachusetts, died in January, 1830, before George was born; his mother married Joseph Hewitt, and came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1841; lived in Walworth Co. till 1847, then came to Columbia Co.; now living in Juneau Co. Mr. Keith was married, Oct. 16, 1852, in Walworth Co., to Ann Turner, who was born May 20, 1832, in New York City; daughter of William Turner, a native of England, who came to America in 1829, and died Oct. 13, 1876, aged 86; he had been a member of the Masonic Fraternity since April 28, 1826, when he joined Philanthropic Lodge, No. 568, at Leeds, and Mrs. Keith now has in her possession his diploma, granted by the Duke of Ulster, Grand Master. Mr. Keith lived in the town of Scott three years after his marriage, then went to Marquette Co. and lived in the town of Buffalo till March, 1868; then bought his present farm, and has resided on it since. Has six children—William and Willard (twins), George E., Henry, Espa and Mary, all at home. Mrs. Keith is a member of the M. E. Church. Mr. Keith was drafted in 1861, and assigned to the 34th W. V. I., Co. A, and was in the service eleven months, and discharged at the expiration of his term; Nov. 18, 1864, he enlisted in the 1st Wis. Heavy Artillery, Co. G, for one year, and was discharged at the close of the war, June 26, 1865; held the office of Corporal. His first child, Marinette, was born Nov. 10, 1863, and died when 10 months old. He is a Republican, and has 177½ acres of land.

GILES LANGDON, farmer, Sec. 19; P. O. Marcellon; born in Geauga Co., Ohio, Feb. 11, 1825; son of Martin Langdon, a native of Massachusetts, who removed to Ohio in 1813 or 1814, and from there to Illinois in 1839; in May, 1844, Giles Langdon came to Wisconsin in company with his uncle, John Langdon, for whom he worked some time, helping to build a house for him, and one for S. S. Torber; the one they built for Mr. Langdon was covered with basswood bark; he took up a claim of 80 acres, where Cambria now stands; he then went to Dodge Co., and worked awhile putting up hay, then came back and made a bargain to sell his claim to his cousin Samuel Langdon; then worked in Walworth Co. two months; then went to Portage and worked for Carpenter and Capt. Low, before there was a house built where Portage now stands; then, for about three years, he worked in the pinery winters and ran on the river summers; in the summer of 1848, he bought a part of the land he now owns, and has added to it till he has now 180 acres; in the spring of 1853, he started across the Plains for California, fell in with several others on the way to St. Louis, who were bound for the same point, and all together fitted out a team, near Leavenworth, Kan., of five yoke of oxen and cows, and arrived in California on the 6th day of September; remained there till 1862; worked at farming and mining alternately with varied success; would lay up money working by the month at farming, then go to mining and lose it. After he returned to Wisconsin, he was married, in October, 1863, to Mary E. Stancer, daughter of Charles Stancer, a native of England, who came from Onondaga Co., N. Y., to Wisconsin in 1848, settled in the town of Scott, and died in May, 1870, aged 56 years. Mr. Langdon has lived on his farm ever since he was married; has seven children—Niley, Jessie, Milo, Frank, Harvey, Dora and Alice, all at home. In politics, Republican.

ROBERT McCONOCHIE, farmer, Sec. 35; P. O. Cambria; was born in Ayrshire, Scotland, March 7, 1821, in the parish of Dalrymple; son of Robert McConochie, who emigrated to Canada in 1831 or 1832; located in the township of Pickering, Canada West, and followed farming till his death. Robert, Jr., remained on his father's farm till April 28, 1847, then came to Wisconsin in company with George Lang and James Allison, young men about his own age, to look at the country and visit his two brothers, Samuel and John, who came to Wisconsin two years before, and located in the town of Scott, Columbia Co., and kept what was known as the "Blue Tavern;" soon after his arrival, he located 80 acres of the farm on which he now lives, and loaned money to Allison to locate another 80 near his; Lang returned to Canada, and never came back; Mr. McConochie broke 10 acres on his 80, and bought another 80 adjoining his, of John Dodge, for which he paid $3 per acre; he also located another 120 near by; he then returned to Canada and worked through harvest, coming back to Wisconsin in September, 1847; he boarded with his brothers about two years and worked his own land; has resided in the town of Scott ever since, but made several visits to Canada during the time. Feb. 8, 1856, he was married in Portage City to Margaret Robinson, a native of Ayrshire, Scotland. She was born March 21, 1832, daughter of Robert Robinson, who now lives in Canada; Mr. McConochie has six children—Elizabeth (now Mrs. Stewart Pasley, of Ontario, Canada), Margaret, John, Marian, William and Hugh; lost one, Robert—was born Oct. 11, 1862, and died when 4 years and 2 weeks old. He has 600 acres of land, in three farms; once sold the home farm for $50 per acre, and traveled through Iowa, Illinois, Kansas and Canada, and, being unable to suit himself, returned to Wisconsin, bought back his old farm at $10 per acre more than he got for it, and since that has been satisfied with his first love; he raises grain principally, but keeps some stock; has been successful in business; is now 59 years old; has never had a lawsuit. Is a Democrat, but not a politician, preferring to devote his time and energies to his own personal affairs, and never accepting office except in the school district, when he considered it his duty; has been Clerk of District No. 3 for the last ten years. Both members of the Presbyterian Church.

JAMES MACKIN, farmer, Sec. 18; P. O. Pardeeville; born Oct. 9, 1827, in Syracuse, N. Y.; son of Eugene Mackin, who died in Syracuse when James was 7 years old; his mother then married John Smith, and they came to Wisconsin in 1855 or 1856, and settled in Columbia Co.; he died in 1879. James was married in 1862 to Rebecca Jerome, daughter of Daniel Jerome, of Marcellon; has two children—Frances Winona and Ella Susan. Republican; and owns 80 acres of land.

V. W. MILLER, farmer, Sec. 4; P. O. Cambria; born March 23, 1831, in Steuben Co., N. Y.; son of Wm. D. Miller; came to Wisconsin in the spring after he was 21 years old, landing in Milwaukee on the 1st day of June, 1852, with two cents in his pocket; he settled at that time in the town of Scott, where he has resided ever since. Was married in Steuben Co., N. Y., when he was 18 years old, to Emaline Egbert, who died Dec. 19, 1874, aged 48, leaving three children—Jainey (now Mrs. George Whitman, of Barron Co., Wis.), born March 19, 1853; Alfred and Elbert (twins), born May 31, 1858, and living at home. Mrs. Miller was a member of the M. E. Church. He has 720 acres of land. In politics, Independent.

C. J. MULLENCUP, farmer, Sec. 29; P. O. Marcellon; he was born in Hohenhaslach, Oheramt Vaibingen Koningreich, Wurttemberg, Germany, Sept. 14, 1829; came to America in 1848, and settled in Huntington Co., Ind.; lived there two years, then went to Ohio and lived in Preble Co. three years, then back to Indiana; went to work in Wabash Co., and, Oct. 25, 1825, was married, in Columbia City, Ind., to Cynthia Ann Wells, who was born March 23, 1836, in Marion Co., Ind.; daughter of Hugh Wells, a native of Ohio. After his marriage, he lived in Whitley Co. eight years, then came to Wisconsin, and located July 17, 1867, on the farm he now occupies. He has ten children living—Emma A., Ellen B. (now Mrs. Margaret Thomas, of Scott), Nancy E., Dillie H., L. V. D. May, Tola and Viola (twins), Alzoa A., Ida L. and Otto W.; lost one child—Hugh W., died Sept. 28, 1864, aged 1 year and 5 months. Both are members of the M. E. Church; he is a Republican, and has a farm of 140 acres.

WILLIAM OWEN, farmer, Sec. 23; P. O. Cambria; he was born June 4, 1822, in Anglesea, Wales; son of Robert Owen; he worked in a slate quarry in Wales; came to America in 1846, and located in the town of Scott, Columbia Co., and has resided in the town ever since. He was married, Sept. 1, 1848, in the town of Scott, to Margaret Hughes, of Randolph; he thinks he was the first one married in the town of Scott, and this was the third marriage recorded in Columbia Co.; Mrs. Owen died Sept. 3, 1866, leaving five children—William (lives in Dakota), Maggie (is now Mrs. Richard Williams, of Dodge Co., Wis.), Ellen (lives in Cambria), Robert and Richard (at home); had lost three—Evan died at the age of 3 months; Mary Ann died in her 17th year, and Hugh in his 12th year, both in February, 1866; was married the second time, June 29, 1859, to Mrs. Hannah Edmunds, of Milwaukee; daughter of John Roberts, from Anglesea, Wales, where she was born in September, 1821. Both are members of the Welsh Presbyterian Church. He has 320 acres of land, and is a Republican.

GEORGE PAYNE, farmer, Sec. 19; P. O. Marcellon; he was born Dec. 4, 1818, in Madison Co., Ill.; son of Christopher Payne, a native of Somerset Co., Penn., born in 1786; he lived in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin while they were Territories; he came to Geneva Lake in February, 1836; had land deeded at the first land sale in Wisconsin; he died Feb. 18, 1872, in his 85th year. George Payne remained at home till he was 22 years old. He was married, at Duck Lake, Walworth

Co., June 2, 1842, to Arvilla Langdon, who was born July 15, 1825, in Tuscarawas Co., Ohio; daughter of Sylvanus Langdon, who came to Wisconsin from Ohio in the fall of 1835, and settled in Walworth Co.; he died May 1, 1863, at about 61. Mr. Payne remained in Walworth Co. about four years after his marriage, and in August, 1846, came to Columbia Co., and located on the farm he now owns and occupies. Has had three children, two of whom are living—Elizabeth (is now Mrs. Stephen Woodard, of the town of Marcellon) and Mary (now Mrs. Melvin Fuller, of Scott); his son William was born May 4, 1845; enlisted Jan. 5, 1864, in the 2d W. V. C., Co. E, and was killed April 21, 1864, in a skirmish with the rebels near Red Bone, Miss. Mr. Payne is a Democrat, and has held the office of Side Supervisor, and is now one of the Directors in the town insurance company of Randolph and Scott. His sister, Mrs. Abigail Utter, was killed by the Indians on her way to Oregon in 1860 or 1861, in what was known as the Salmon Falls massacre. Mr. Payne has 382 acres in his farm. He drove team to break the first furrow ever turned where Rockford and Belvidere now stand in Illinois.

CHAUNCY F. ROBERTS, farmer, Sec. 18; P. O. Bellefountain; was born in the town of Springwater, Livingston Co., N. Y., March 21, 1831; son of William Roberts, who came to Wisconsin in 1845, and settled in Walworth Co.; lived there two years, and then came to Columbia Co. and settled in the town of Scott, on the farm now owned by Chauncy F.; he died about 1863, aged 76. Mr. Roberts was married, April 30, 1853, to Alma S. Barber, who was born June 5, 1836, in Genesee Co., N. Y., town of Byron, daughter of Hugh Barber, who came to Wisconsin in 1844, and settled in Walworth Co., and died in Packwaukee, Marquette Co., about 1860; her mother died Oct. 17, 1854, aged 52. Mr. Roberts' mother died in August, 1864, aged 75. Mr. and Mrs. Roberts have two children—Mary (now Mrs. John Jarvis, living near Portage) and Mark W. (single and living at home, and now holds the office of Town Clerk). Mr. Roberts has been Supervisor and Assessor two or three years each; himself and son are Republicans. Mrs. Roberts and Mark W. are members of the Free-Will Baptist Church. Mr. Roberts has 233½ acres of land in two farms.

FREEMAN M. ROSS, farmer, Sec. 15; P. O. Cambria; was born Aug. 27, 1828, in Yates Co., N. Y.; son of Morris and Mary Ross; came to Wisconsin in 1838, and settled in Walworth Co., at Geneva, and lived there till 1855. He was married, the first time, on Jan. 15, 1850, to Phoebe Herrick, a native of Yates Co., N. Y.; daughter of Jacob Herrick; she died Nov. 6, 1853, aged 23 years, leaving two children—Eunice A., born July 6, 1851, and is now Mrs. J. W. Gorsuch, of the town of Scott; Mary Alice, born July 26, 1853, and died March 2, 1854. He was married the second time Nov. 14, 1854, to Mary Louisa Powell, who was born Feb. 3, 1824, in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., town of Sheridan; have four children by the second marriage—William H., born Feb. 6, 1857, and now lives on Sec. 17 in the town of Scott; George A., was born July 25, 1858; Ella L., born May 21, 1862; the last two are living with their parents. Mr. Ross is a Republican, and held the office of Town Clerk from 1857 to 1868—eleven years; then Chairman two years, and since that has been Town Clerk five years; was a member of the Legislature of 1868-69. Mr. and Mrs. Ross and children all belong to the M. E. Church; has 360 acres of land, 40 acres of it timber, 120 acres under the plow, and the balance meadow and pasture.

JAMES A. STEBBINS, farmer, Sec. 32; P. O. Marcellon; was born Feb. 24, 1823, in Homer, Cortland Co., N. Y.; son of James Stebbins, a native of Massachusetts; his mother's maiden name was Eunice Field. Mr. Stebbins commenced working at the carpenter and joiner's trade when 18 years old, and followed it till he was 25; worked at Cortland Village some time and in Syracuse, N. Y., one year. In the fall of 1845, he started West "to grow up with the country;" worked at Racine, Wis., about three weeks; then went about twenty-five miles west of Racine, and stayed till the spring of 1846, when he came to Columbia Co., and located on Sec. 32, in the town of Scott, where he has since resided. At that time there were only three dwellings between Fox Lake and Portage. He worked at his trade, after locating his land, until the fall of 1849; then went to Massachusetts, and spent the winter, and, March 5, 1850, was married in Massachusetts to Mary B. Sherman, daughter of Benjamin Sherman; she was born Aug. 11, 1823, in Brimfield, Hampden Co., Mass. Soon after marriage, came and settled on his farm, having built a house some time before. Have no children of their own, but adopted two boys and one girl. Both are members of the Presbyterian Church. He is a Republican, and has been Town Clerk and Justice of the Peace. Has 200 acres of land.

WILLIAM STEBBINS, farmer, Sec. 32; P. O. Marcellon; was born Sept. 29, 1826, in Homer, Cortland Co., N. Y.; son of James and Eunice (Field) Stebbins; came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1850, and bought the land he now owns, and has resided on it ever since, except two years in Pardeeville (1870 and 1871). He was married, April 16, 1854, to Sabrina Beach, who was born Oct. 10, 1829, in Luzerne, Warren Co., N. Y., daughter of Nathan Beach, now living in California. They have two children—Joseph Wayland, born Feb. 12, 1855 (married to Katie Elizabeth Bezer, of the town of Scott, and living in Davidson Co., Dakota; P. O. Alexander, Hanson Co.), and Nellie Eunice, born Dec. 3, 1864, and living at home. Mr. Stebbins is a Republican, and has been Supervisor one term. He has 130 acres of land.

HENRY SLINGER, farmer, Sec. 33; P. O. Cambria; was born in Lancashire, Eng., Feb. 14, 1844; son of Andrew Slinger, who came to America in the spring of 1849 and settled in Springvale, Columbia Co., Wis., where he died, Nov. 19, 1849. His mother is still living on Sec. 4 in Springvale, at the age of 67. They came into the county with a family of eight children and lived in a board shanty, 12x16, till fall, when they built a good frame house. They bought a cookstove soon after they came, but not knowing how to use it, set it one side, and did their cooking through the summer in the open air, over a fireplace, made between two stumps. Mr. Slinger was married Oct. 10, 1863, to Rachel Smith, who was born July 2, 1841, in Staffordshire, Eng., daughter of William Smith, who came to America in the fall of 1848, and died March 1, 1851; have two children—Andrew R., born Jan. 8, 1869, and Tempest Hurry, born May 26, 1879. He is a Republican, and has been Assessor two years, and is now elected for the third term. Has 155 acres of land.

THEODORE THOMAS, farmer, Sec. 34; P. O. Cambria; was born in Ottawa, Canada, Dec. 4, 1825, son of Solomon Thomas, a native of Woodstock, Vt., who came from Canada to Wisconsin in 1843, and settled in Walworth Co., and died March 20, 1854; Theodore came to Columbia Co. in the fall of 1845, and bought 120 acres of land, on Sec. 34, in the town of Scott, which was the second piece of land bought on the road between Portage City and two and a half miles this side of Fox Lake. He then returned to Walworth Co. and remained there the spring of 1848, then came back to Scott and broke 10 acres for himself and 87 acres for his neighbors; he then returned to Walworth Co. for the winter, and in the spring of 1849 came up and broke another 10 acres for himself and about 60 or 65 acres for others, running a breaking team with Robert McConochie. In the fall, he went back to Walworth Co., and Sept. 7, 1849, was married to Elizabeth Connor, a native of Cayuga Co., N. Y., town of Ira; she was born June 18, 1827; daughter of Josiah Connor. The following spring he came on his farm (having built a house the fall previous) and has lived on it ever since; has four children living—Maynard (on the homestead); J. C. (on Sec. 35 in Scott); Mary E. (now Mrs. Thomas Baillies of Scott, on south line of Sec. 34); and Lillie (at home); he was four days making the trip from Walworth Co. to Columbia Co., with an ox team, and $5 in his pocket, for a journey of seventy-five miles, got here and paid $1.50 for two bushels of potatoes; 50 cents for three pecks of oats, and had money left. Has been Supervisor two or three terms, and is a Republican with strong Greenback tendencies. He has 151 acres of land.

JONATHAN N. TRIPP (deceased) was born Jan. 17, 1829, in the town of Windsor, Ashtabula Co., Ohio, son of Thomas Tripp, a native of the State of New York. Was married in Bristol, Trumbull Co., Ohio, June 12, 1844, to Mary L. Parish, who was born Feb. 4, 1817, in Orleans Co., Vt.; daughter of John Parish, who removed to Ohio in 1834 and died in 1845. Mr. Tripp lived in Trumbull Co., Ohio, and worked at wagon-making, (to which trade he had been apprenticed when 17 years old) till June, 1853, then came with his family to Wisconsin and located on the farm now occupied by his widow, on Sec. 29, in the town of Scott, where he resided till his death, Dec. 30, 1867, of consumption, with which he had been afflicted for several years; he had been able to work, however, till the last two years of his life. He left four children—Julia, Cornelia E. (now Mrs. Charles Richards of Paekwaukee, Wis.), Charles Parish and Ida Adelle; all at home except the one married; Charles is a carpenter and joiner and follows that business, Julia is a dressmaker, and Ida a teacher. Mr. Tripp was a Republican, and once held the office of Justice of the Peace. He left a farm of 120 acres, which now has good buildings and is occupied by the family; P. O. Marcellon.

JOSEPH W. TURNER, farmer, Sec. 7; P. O. Pardeeville; born May 6, 1849, in Walworth Co., Wis.; son of John Turner (now of Portage City). Joseph W. was married Dec. 31, 1874, to Lida Elwood, who was born Aug. 28, 1854, in Fairwater, Fond du Lac Co., Wis.; daughter of John Elwood, a native of the State of New York, now living in Markesan, Wis. Mr. Turner remained with his father till he was 21 years old, then worked for his father four years, for 40 acres of land, and bought 60 acres more the fall before his marriage; has two children—Edith, born Jan. 3, 1876, and Robert, born April 29, 1877. He is a Republican and has 100 acres of land.

JOSEPH TURNER, farmer, Secs. 4, 5 and 8; P. O. Pardeeville; born March 24, 1819, in Yorkshire, Eng., town of Leeds; son of William Turner, who came to America in 1829, and died Oct. 13, 1876. (See biography of George C. Kieth.) Mr. Turner was married in 1837, to Mary Ann Brier, who died Aug. 20, 1875, leaving five children—Josephine, Henrietta, Frances Amelia, Viola and John Grant; Josephine is now Mrs. C. O. Hubbell, of Lauesboro, Minn.; Henrietta lives with her sister in Minnesota; Frances Amelia is now Mrs. D. J. Albee, of La Crosse; Mr. Albee is a conductor on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad; Viola is Mrs. John Keefe, of Waupun; John G lives at home. Was married the second time, Oct. 1, 1879, to Mrs. Mary Clark, widow of Almon Clark. Her maiden name was Sawyer, and she was a native of England; she had four children by her first husband—Adelbert, Alvah, Nettie and Martha. In the fall of 1878, he went to the southern part of Minnesota and spent the winter there, and again the next fall and spent the winter; he has 940 acres of land; is a Republican.

TOWN OF CALEDONIA.

WILLIAM BLACK, farmer, Sec. 8; P. O. Alloa; born May 9, 1830, in Argyleshire, Scotland; son of James Black, who came to America in 1865 and settled in Caledonia, Sec. 16, and died Nov. 18, 1875, in the 80th year of his age; Mrs. Black, whose maiden name was Janet Cook, is still living in Caledonia at the age of 82. William was married in Scotland, May 4, 1854, to Catharine White, who was born July 15, 1833, in Renfrewsbire, Scotland; daughter of Peter White, who died in Scotland when she was only 5 years old; her mother, whose maiden name was Jessie McNair, died in 1854, also in Scotland. Mr. Black followed the life of a sailor on the "briny deep" from April, 1848, till June, 1856, then came to Wisconsin and settled in Caledonia, where he has since resided, though he has sailed on the lakes several seasons since; has eleven children—James W., Jessie, Sarah Catharine, Minerva, Isabella, Flora, Mary, William C., Maggie, Katie and Violet Ann. Has held the offices of Chairman of the town, Assessor and Town Clerk, and was Justice of the Peace several terms; he is a Democrat; owns 170 acres of land; none of the children are married.

JOHN DOUGLAS, blacksmith, Sec. 3; P. O. Alloa; came to Wisconsin in 1868 from the village of Crosshouse, Ayrshire, Scotland, where he was born Aug. 18, 1846; son of William Douglas, also a blacksmith, of whom John learned the trade; he was born, lived all his life and died in the village of Crosshouse. John was married, July 18, 1869, in Caledonia, to Mary Hoyt, daughter of John Hoyt; she was born in Ochiltree, Ayrshire, Scotland, March 25, 1838. Mr. Douglas has three children—William, born June 5, 1870; John, born March, 1875, and Anne, born Nov. 14, 1878. He is a Republican, and owns his shop and residence with six-tenths of an acre of land. Both are members of the Baptist Church.

JOHN GRAVES, farmer, Sec. 18; P. O. Merrimack, Sauk Co.; born in 1817 in Hunting-toushire, England; son of William Graves; came to America in the fall of 1841 and lived near Rahway, N. J., about three years. He was married there, in 1844, to Margaret Fitzgerald, who was a native of County Waterford, Ireland, daughter of Patrick Fitzgerald. Immediately after his marriage, he went to Canada, and lived in the county of Oxford till the spring of 1856; then came to Wisconsin and settled on the farm he now occupies in Caledonia. Has four children—Thomas, Sarah, William P. and Maggie. Mr. Graves is a Democrat in politics, and all the family are members of the Catholic Church. He owns 226 acres of land.

HENRY HAMILTON, farmer, Sec. 16; P. O. Alloa; was born April 23, 1829, in County Down, Ireland; son of George Hamilton; he came to America in 1851, arriving in New York on the 11th day of June; lived in Dunkirk awhile, then went back to New York City, and from there to Connecticut, where he was married in Stamford, in 1856, to Elizabeth Egan, a native of Kings Co., Ireland. He came to Wisconsin in 1858, and has lived in the town of Caledonia ever since; has eight children—Mary Elizabeth, Margaret, Ellen, Sarah Jane, Isabell, James Henry, Lucy and Theresa, all at home; has been Supervisor three years, and School Director and Treasurer; he is a Democrat, and has 200 acres of land, 160 acres in his farm and 40 acres of timber.

ALLEN JOHNSON, farmer, Secs. 25 and 36; P. O. Portage; came to Wisconsin in July, 1841, from Galena, Ill., and made a claim in Caledonia (same land he now owns) in the spring of 1842; then went into the pinery at Grand Rapids, and remained till the spring of 1843; he then returned to Caledonia, built a cabin on his land, and lived there till the fall of 1853, when he rented his farm, and bought property in Dekorra, where he resided till November, 1860; then returned to his farm, and has lived there since; about the time he went to Dekorra, he purchased a quarter-section of pine land in Juneau Co., and followed lumbering in winters, till he returned to the farm; he was born in Ontario, Canada, Nov. 9, 1820; son of Rufus Johnson; went from there to Illinois in 1837; drove stage about fourteen months from Joliet to Ottawa, Springfield and Chicago; then followed steamboating on the Mississippi about four months. Was married, Nov. 27, 1843, in Dekorra, to Mary Chalfant, and were the first couple married in that town; she was born May 11, 1826, in Highland Co., Ohio; daughter of Aaron and Sarah Chalfant. Mr. Johnson has eight children living—Mary Virginia, Alice, Ann Eliza, Charles, Emma, William, James and Lewis; lost three—Edward, Henry and Edwin. He is a Democrat, and has 240 acres of land. Mrs. Johnson's brother, Ansaem Chalfant, was born in Dekorra, Oct. 26, 1842, and was the first white child born in that town, and was also the first death in the town, being drowned June 11, 1845.

EVAN E. JONES, farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. Portage; born Oct. 17, 1818, in Merionethshire, North Wales; son of Edward Jones, who came to America in 1842, and settled in Oneida Co., N. Y., where he died a few years after, and two years after the death of his wife. Mr. Jones was married in 1847, in Utica, N. Y., to Margaret Roberts, who was born in Montgomeryshire, Wales, May 7, 1818; daughter of Thomas Roberts, who died in Wales. Mr. Jones came to Wisconsin in July, 1849, and has lived in Caledonia ever since; his wife died Jan. 19, 1879, about 60 years of age; she was the mother of seven children, only two of whom were living at the time of her death—Margaret, born June 16, 1850, now Mrs. Richard Owen, of Caledonia, and Thomas E., born Sept. 16, 1858, who is married to Lizzie Jones, daughter of David Jones, and living in the homestead with his father; Catharine was born Aug. 3, 1848, and died Dec. 31, 1869; Mary, born June 25, 1852, died Nov. 18, 1862; Ellen, born June 16, 1854, died Dec. 20, 1862; Edward, born Aug. 30, 1856, died Dec. 13, 1862, and Evan, born Aug. 2, 1864, died Jan. 14, 1866; the last four of diphtheria. Mr. Jones is a Deacon in the Calvinist Church, of which he is a member, and a member of the Bible Society of New York; is a Republican, and has 185 acres of land in his farm. His father was a Deacon in the same church to which he belongs upward of twenty years.

ROBERT H. JONES, farmer, Sec. 16; P. O. Portage; was born Dec. 27, 1830, in Merionethshire, North Wales; son of Hugh Jones; came to America in 1851; lived in Rock Co., near Janesville, two years; then in the village of Union, same county, about two years, and in December, 1855, came to Caledonia, where he has since resided. Was married, Aug. 26, 1860, to Catharine, daughter of Robert Ellis, who came from Wales to New York, and from there to Columbia Co., Wis., where he remained till his death; she was born in July, 1842, near Utica, N. Y. Mr. Jones has nine children—Hugh, David, Mary Jane, John, Robert, Winnie, Maria, Catharine and Ruth; all at home. Is a Republican, and has 378 acres of land in his farm. Both members of the M. E. Church of Portage.

JOHN LOCKHART, farmer, Sec. 9; P. O. Alloa; born June 22, 1828, in Ayrshire, Scotland, parish of Tarbolton; son of Samuel Lockhart. Was married in Scotland in 1850, to Agnes Gray, who was born in the same shire, parish of Kirkeswald, daughter of William Gray; came to America in 1855, landing in New York on the 1st day of June; resided there till September, 1856, then came to Wisconsin, and has since lived in the town of Caledonia. Was two years Supervisor, during the war, in 1863 and 1864, and has held several minor offices. The nine children are as follows: Samuel S., of Portage, William, John, James, Janet, Andrew, Robert, Maggie and Thomas—all unmarried but Samuel S.; have lost but one—Maggie, died March 9, 1862, aged 9 months. Republican and Presbyterian. Has 259 acres of land.

CHARLES McLEISH, farmer, Sec. 20; P. O. Merrimack, Sauk Co., Wis.; was born Dec. 8, 1832, in Perthshire, Scotland; son of William McLeish, who came to America in 1851 and died in 1854, in Wisconsin; Charles arrived in Wisconsin in June, 1851, and stayed till the spring of 1852; then went to New York, and worked in the town of York, Livingston Co., till the fall of 1855; then came back to Wisconsin and bought 160 acres of land in Sec. 21, and has since lived in this town. Was married, March 9, 1859, in Portage, to Margaret Roberts, who was born Dec. 2, 1842, in Lanarkshire, Scotland, daughter of David Roberts, who came to America in 1857, and died Jan. 22, 1876; Mr. McLeish has nine children—Jennie, Maggie, Willie, Mary, David, Charles, Alexander, John and Isabella—all at home. Has been Chairman of the town, and was School Superintendent under the old system. Democrat; and has 595 acres of land all in Secs. 20 and 21, except one 40 of timber in Sauk Co.

DAVID MARSHALL, farmer, Sec. 35; P. O. Alloa; born Dec. 5, 1841, in Lanarkshire, Scotland; son of John Marshall, who came to America in 1850, settled in Caledonia, and died Nov. 2, 1864; the family came over in 1851, and David has lived in Caledonia ever since he was 10 years old. Was married, Nov. 21, 1862, to Isabel Tennant, who was born Aug. 9, 1842, in Canada, daughter of Robert Tennant, a native of Roxburyshire, Scotland. Mr. Marshall has six children living—Mary, John D., Robert, William, David and Janet, all at home. Attends the Presbyterian Church, but is not a member; Republican; has 162 acres of land. Mr. Tennant came to Wisconsin in 1846 or 1847, and settled in Caledonia, on what was known as the "Indian farm;" he died Aug. 22, 1879, in Missouri, where he had removed in 1868 or 1869; Mrs. Tennant is still living in Missouri, and Mrs. Marshall lives in Caledonia.

C. F. MOHR, farmer, Sec. 20; P. O. Portage; born Dec. 31, 1846, near Hesse-Cassel, Germany; son of William Mohr, who came to America in 1853, lived in Buffalo, N. Y., four years, and in 1857 came to Wisconsin, settled in Caledonia, and died July 6, 1874, aged 67; Mrs. Mohr is still living on the homestead. Mr. Mohr was married, June 30, 1873, to Mary Eikey, a native of Sauk Co., born June 11, 1851, daughter of William Eikey, one of the first settlers of Sauk Co. Mr. Mohr has two children—Musa A., born May 22, 1874, and Maud, born Oct. 26, 1876. Was Town Clerk in 1877 and 1878, and is the present Chairman of the town and Justice of the Peace. Is a Republican, and a member of the M. E. Church. Has a 120-acre farm and a store in Portage, which he owns in partnership with his two brothers, Charles and August.

DAVID OWEN, farmer, Sec. 21; P. O. Portage City; born May 13, 1828, in Merionethshire, North Wales; son of John Owen, who came to America in the spring of 1846, settled in Caledonia in September of the same year, and died in 1865, aged 42. David came to Caledonia with his father, and has resided in the town ever since. He was married Dec. 25, 1850, to Jane Roberts, daughter of Hugh Roberts, who came to Caledonia in 1847; she was born in 1832, in Oneida Co., N. Y. Mr. Owen has seven children—John A. (living on Sec. 17, Caledonia), Winnie, Roger, Maggie, Sarah, Owen and Anna; Roger and Winnie live in Howard Co., Iowa, where Mr. Owen has a 240 acre farm; lost three children died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Owens are members of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church; he is a Republican, and has held the offices of Supervisor, Treasurer, Assessor, Justice of the Peace, and several minor offices, and represented his district in the Assembly in 1877; has 480 acres of land in his home farm, and a 240 acre farm in Iowa. When his father came to Caledonia, he moved from Racine with ox teams; had a covered wagon and lived in that till they had time to build a house.

JOHN OWEN, farmer, Sec. 15; P. O. Portage; was born in August, 1836, in Merionethshire, North Wales; son of John Owen (see biography of William Owen, of Caledonia); came to America with his father in 1846, and has lived in the town of Caledonia ever since. He was married, May 29, 1863, in Caledonia, to Ellen Lloyd, who was born in Merionethshire, Wales, May 29, 1836, daughter of John Lloyd, who came to America in 1842, lived in Racine till 1848, then came to Caledonia, where Mrs. Lloyd died a few months after their arrival; Mr. Lloyd is still living in Howard Co., Iowa; Mrs. Owen is a sister of E. W. Lloyd, of Cambria. Mr. Owen has four children—Jennie, Edward C., John L. and Catherine Ellen, all at home. He is a Republican; has 400 acres of land in his farm; has for years been a Deacon and Trustee in the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church, of which himself and families are members.

JOHN A. OWEN, farmer, Sec. 17; P. O. Portage; was born in November, 1852, in the town of Caledonia, on the farm he now owns; son of David Owen of the same town. (See his biography.) He was married, March 22, 1876, to Mary Ann Jones, who was born May 31, 1854, in Sauk Co., Wis., daughter of Thomas and Ann Jones, natives of South Wales, who came to America in 1847, and now live in Sauk Co. They have three children—Ellen Ann., born Dec. 22, 1876; David, born July 26, 1878; Jane, born March 3, 1880. Mr. and Mrs. Owen are members of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church, and he is a Republican; has 167 acres of land.

JOHN T. OWENS, farmer, Sec. 27; P. O. Portage; was born April 30, 1827, in Merionethshire, North Wales; son of Thomas Owens, who came to America when John T. was only 4 or 5 years old; lived in Herkimer Co., N. Y., till 1857; then came to Wisconsin and died in Caledonia in 1863, aged 62. Mr. Owens' first wife was Mary Ann Parish, and his second was Ida R. Cappler, who died Feb. 20, 1878, leaving two children—Friend Augustus, born May 3, 1872; and, Jemima J., born Sept. 1, 1873. Mr. Owen came from Herkimer Co., N. Y., to Caledonia in 1860, and has made his home in that town ever since, except two years that he was railroading in Minnesota; while living in New York State, he followed farming, butchering, and dealing in stock. In politics, he is Republican. Has 160 acres of land.

ROBERT OWEN, farmer, Sec. 23; P. O. Portage; was born in Merionethshire, North Wales, May 13, 1803; came to America in 1841; lived in Racine Co. nine years, and in 1850 removed to Columbia Co., and settled in his present location. He was married in Wales, in 1829, to Jane Evans, who was born in the same shire March 25, 1806, daughter of Rees Evans. They have had nine children, of whom only four are living—Ellen, is the wife of Thomas Jones, of Sauk Co., Wis.; Margaret, is Mrs. Hugh Williams, of Caledonia; Jane, is now Mrs. Thomas Morris, of Caledonia. The only son, Evan R. Owen, was born March 3, 1848, in Racine, Wis., and was married May 4, 1874, to Kate Humphrey, who was born Sept. 16, 1852, in York Co., Penn., daughter of John Humphrey, a native of Merionethshire, Wales, who came to America in 1849, and settled in York Co., Penn., where he is still living; her mother, whose maiden name was Jane Morris, died when Kate was only 3 years old, and when 4 years old she was brought to Caledonia, where she lived with her grandfather, Morgan Morris. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Owen are members of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church, and he and his son Evan R. are Republicans, and have 200 acres of land.

WILLIAM OWEN, farmer, Sec. 7; P. O. Portage; was born in the village of Llanelltyd, Merionethshire, North Wales, Sept. 10, 1825; son of John and Margaret Owen, who came to America in 1846, and settled in Caledonia in September of that year, being the first Welsh settler in the town; he died in 1865, aged 42 years. Wm. Owen made his home with his parents till he was 27 years old, then, Jan. 1, 1853, was married to Margaret, daughter of John and Laura Jones, who came to America in 1851, and settled in Randolph, Columbia Co., Wis.; she was born Feb. 24, 1829, in Bronyfoel, Parish of Llangelynin, Merionethshire, North Wales. Mr. and Mrs. Owen have ten children—John Gwylm, Edwena Esellt and Edwyn Caradoy (twins), Aneurin, Wm. Salsbury, David Garonwy, Owen Jones, Meirion Rhydderch, Laura Maggie and Edward Gremt. Mr. Owen was the first School Superintendent in the town, and has been Justice of the Peace; was elected Register of Deeds in 1852 for 1853 and 1854, and re-elected in 1854 for 1855 and 1856, and was a member of Assembly in the Legislature of 1865; was appointed to take the census in four towns in 1870, and has the appointment again for the same business in 1880. The first six years after his marriage, he lived in Portage, and, in the fall of 1858, removed to Cambria, where he was engaged in buying wheat in company with John ap Jones, also dealing in lumber at the same time, and was depot agent at Cambria about four years. In 1867, he removed to the town of Randolph and went to farming on Sec. 10; sold out in 1873, and removed to his present location. He is a Republican in politics, and has 637 acres of land in his farm. Both are members of the Calvinistic Methodist Church.

JOHN PATE (deceased) was one of the oldest residents of Caledonia, and of the pioneers who buffeted the hardships of a new country, when a man had to sacrifice all the comforts of civilization in order to start a home in the Far West. Mr. Pate was born Feb. 17, 1802, at Brown Castle, Parish of Culbride, Lanarkshire, Scotland. Was married to Agnes Stewart, April 25, 1837, and emigrated to America in the spring of 1842, sailing from Glasgow on the 26th of April in the ship Perthshire, Capt. Simpson, being seven weeks making the voyage across the Atlantic to the United States. He went to Albany by steamboat, thence by canal to Buffalo, then by steamboat again to Chicago, and from there to Columbia Co., Wis., by team; he settled on unsurveyed land in what was then Dekorra, Portage Co., Territory of Wisconsin, now Sec. 30, town of Caledonia, Columbia Co., Wis. Roads and bridges were then unknown in this region; the nearest grist-mill was ten miles west of Madison, and their nearest market was Milwaukee. When the town of Caledonia was organized from Dekorra, Mr. Pate was its first Chairman; was Supervisor in 1852; was afterward Assessor and Town Clerk, and also held several minor offices. On his farm of 200 acres in Secs. 30, 31 and 36, he resided from 1845 till his death, which occurred Dec. 19, 1879, of cancer in the face. He had been a member of the Presbyterian Church from his youth up; was a great lover of music, and composed several pieces, one of which entitled "Caledonia," is frequently sung in the Presbyterian Church in Caledonia. He left five children—John S., Marian, Robert, Samuel J. and William. Samuel J. Pate was born April 22, 1850, in Caledonia, on Sec. 30, and was married, Feb. 8, 1875, to Elizabeth Pearson, who was born Nov. 4, 1856, in Carlisle, England, daughter of George Pearson, who came to America in the spring of 1871, and lives in Caledonia; has two children—Mary Elizabeth, born Nov. 18, 1876, and John George, born Nov. 9, 1878. Mr. Pate is a Republican, and is the present Town Treasurer, which office he has held two years; has been District Treasurer five years; is a Presbyterian, and has 140 acres of land.

MOSES PAQUETTE, farmer, Sec. 27; P. O. Portage; was born March 4, 1828, at the old trading-post, about one-quarter mile from Ft. Winnebago; he is the only surviving son of Pierre, or Peter Paquette, who was employed by the American Fur Company at Ft. Winnebago in trading with the Indians, and also in the transportation of their Mackinaw boats between the Fox and Wisconsin Rivers at the "portage," and who was shot and killed in 1836 by an Indian named Mazomanie, which event has already become a matter of history. After the death of his father, Moses was taken to the Catholic Mission School on the Yellow River, and afterward to the mission on Turkey River, Iowa, where he remained till the fall of 1845, and was then sent to Lebanon, Tenn., where he remained in school two years; he then came back to Wisconsin, was employed in the store of the American Fur Co. at Prairie du Chien about a year, and then returned to Columbia Co., and lived about a year with his mother near Portage; he then worked another year for the American Fur Co., this time at Long Prairie, Minn.; he was then engaged one season in assisting H. M. Rice in removing the Indians from Wisconsin to Long Prairie, Minn., then traded with the Indians till 1857. He then came back to Columbia Co., and, in 1858, was married to Madaline Brisbois, who was born in 1835 in Prairie du Chien. Since his marriage, he has followed farming in Caledonia on the farm he now occupies. His mother died in 1864, aged about 70 years, leaving a quarter-section of land in Secs. 27 and 28, which was divided between him and his only surviving sister, Mrs. Thomas Prescott. Mr. Paquette has seven children—Domitille, St. Clair, Solomon J., Peter, Daniel, Mary Ann and Moses. Has 80 acres of land. Republican in politics, and a member of the Catholic Church.

REV. THOMAS PHILLIPS, deceased; was born in Glamorganshire, South Wales, July 17, 1802; son of William and Joana Phillips. Was married in Wales in 1839, to Miss Gwendolyn Thomas (who was born in the same county as Mr Phillips), daughter of Howells and Margaret Thomas; came to America in 1846; first preached in Danville, Penn., and then in Pottsville; and in 1851, removed to Wisconsin and settled in Caledonia, where he continued in the ministry until his death, Dec. 11, 1871; he was a self-made man, zealous and energetic in his work, and at the time of his death had been in the ministry of Welsh Methodist Church upward of forty years; he had accumulated quite a library, and had some very ancient works; among them, was a large Bible, printed in old English, which was in use in Wales when Bibles were so scarce that only one could be afforded to each parish, and this one was hung by a chain so it could be used by all, but not removed from the church. He left six children—Howell, (living in Lake Crystal, Minn.); David (living in Milwaukee); George (living in Hudson, Wis.); William, Thomas and Mary (living on the homestead with their mother). Have 120 acres of land; P. O. Portage. Mr. and Mrs. Phillips buried five children—Mary in Wales; William and David in Pennsylvania, and Joseph and John in Wisconsin.

THOMAS PRESCOTT, farmer, Sec. 28; P. O. Portage; born in Canada Oct. 13, 1834; came to Marathon Co., Wis., in May, 1856; lived there until January, 1862; then came to Columbia Co., and has lived in Caledonia since. Was married, Nov. 25, 1866, to Mrs. Theresa Brisbois, widow of Mitchell J. Brisbois; she was born May 5, 1826, at the old trading-post, opposite of, and about a quarter of a mile from Ft. Winnebago; she is the only surviving daughter of Peter Pauquette, a native of St. Louis. (see biography of Moses Pauquette, of Caledonia). Mrs. Prescott is a grand-daughter of Joseph Crlee, who died at her house the 1st of February, 1867, supposed to be in 141st year of his age at the time of his death; he had lived in the Pauquette family the last sixty years of his life, and from his statements and the best information they could get, his age as given is supposed to be correct. Mrs. Prescott had six children by the first husband (Mr. Brisbois), four of whom are now living—Peter Pauquette Brisbois, Julia Josephine, Theodore O'Neely Brisbois and Abraham Lincoln Brisbois; Solomon Edwin died in 1851, aged 18 months, and Pauline Theresa died in 1857, aged 8 months; she has three children by the second marriage—Mary L., Lewis Pauquette and Emma Theresa. Mrs. Prescott says her father seemed to have a presentiment that he was not going to die a natural death, and told his family that in case he should be killed (as he expected he should be sooner or later), he wished to have H. L. Dansman appointed as the guardian of his children; this was done in accordance with his wishes; soon after her father's death she was taken by the "Yellow River" Mission School, in Iowa, where she stayed some time; then worked for a family named McDowell in Iowa, about two years, not knowing that she had any property, and supposing herself to be a subject of charity while at the school; she was found in this situation by Henry Rice, of Minnesota, who knew her family and reported; she was then sent to school three years in St. Louis, when she returned to Wisconsin, and has lived in this State since; she says that her father, at his death, left thirteen sections of land, and that the heirs have received but little benefit from it as yet; she was brought up a Catholic, and Mr. Prescott an Episcopalian. He is a Republican, and they have 120 acres of land.

ROBERT PUGH, farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. Portage; born March 28, 1832, in Merionethshire, North Wales; son of Hugh Pugh; came to America in the spring of 1852; lived in Oneida Co., N. Y., about four years; in the spring of 1856, came to Wisconsin; he lived in Cambria two years, and in the spring of 1858, came to the town of Caledonia, where he has since resided; he learned the carpenter trade in Oneida Co., N. Y., and has followed that business since, in addition to his farming. Was married in Utica, N. Y., Feb. 26, 1855, to Mary Lloyd, who was a native of Montgomeryshire, Wales, daughter of Watkin Lloyd; has eight children living—Watkin, Hugh, Ellis, Ann, John, Ida, Ellen and Jane; one son, David died in 1875, 2½ years old. Republican, and has 320 acres of land in his farm. Mrs. Pugh is a member of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church.

REV. THOMAS J. RICE, minister of the First Welsh Church of Caledonia; farm of 80 acres in Sec. 22; P. O. Portage; was born March 4, 1833, in Cardiganshire, South Wales; son of Roderick Rice, who came to America in 1846, and now lives on the farm on which he then settled, seven miles west of Waukesha, Wis.; Mr. Rice was educated at Carroll College in Waukesha, and entered the ministry before he was 20 years old, but was not ordained till 1869; was first stationed at Waukesha, and preached in that vicinity about seven or eight years; in 1859, he went to Milwaukee and engaged in the mercantile business, in which he continued till 1865, preaching every Sabbath during the time; then removed to Portage and carried on the same business, still preaching nearly every Sabbath at that place and vicinity; he left Portage and bought a farm near Bangor, La Crosse Co., on which he lived till July 5 of that year, when his house was struck by lightning and totally destroyed, with all its contents, including his library, clothing, etc., the family barely escaping with their lives; Mr. Rice was struck on the shoulder, burning a place the size of a man's hand; the fluid passed down his right limb clear to his foot; they were carried out of the house in an insensible state, by a friend who happened to be staying with them over night, who was not injured; after being burned out he lived one year with his father, at Waukesha; then returned to Bangor Village, and remained till March, 1873; then removed to Columbia Co., and has been connected with the First Welsh Church of that place ever since. Was married, Feb. 12, 1862, in Caledonia, to Anna Owen, daughter of John Owen (see biography of William Owen); she was born in Merionethshire, North Wales, Sept. 25, 1832; they have five children living, all boys—Edward Owen, Griffith Roderick, John Hugh, George T. and William James; lost one—David, died March 28, 1873, 7 months old. In politics, Mr. Rice acts with the Republican party.

JOHN S. RICHMOND, farmer, Sec. 9; P. O. Alloa; was born June 10, 1813, in Ayrshire, Scotland; son of James Richmond, who died in Scotland; came to Canada in 1830, and was appointed District Judge when only 19 years old; was afterward engaged in the Canada rebellion; was at the battle of Prescott and was taken, and tried several times for treason, but managed to escape the penalty; after the rebellion, he went to the State of New York, and lived two years at Alexander Bay; then in Watertown two years; then traveled five or six years, lecturing on phrenology; in 1842, he returned to Scotland, where he remained till 1844, then came to America again, and lived two years at Eagle Prairie, in Waukesha Co., thirty miles west of Milwaukee; spent the time there hunting, lecturing and working a little, being in poor health; in the summer of 1847, he came to Caledonia, entered a quarter-section of land on Sec. 9, and Dec. 1 of that year moved in with his family; in 1851, while he was at work in the pinery, his house was burned; he rebuilt, and has lived on the same premises ever since. His first wife, to whom he was married in 1829, was Jane Wallace, a descendant of Sir William Wallace; she died in 1839, leaving four children—Sarah, William, Henry and Mary—all living in the State of New York, except William, who lives in Illinois; his second wife was Mary Young, of Paisley, Scotland, to whom he was married in 1843; she died June 11, 1869, in Caledonia, leaving four children—Mary (now Mrs. John Wilson, of Dekorra), Emily (now Mrs. William Muir, living on the Indian farm, in Caledonia), Lucy (now Mrs. Rung, of Chippewa Falls); Lovenie was the first wife of Mr. Rung, and died in 1877; his third wife, to whom he was married May 1, 1872, was Miss Urrle Fuller, of Dekorra, by whom he has three children—John, Nettie and Jessie. He is Republican; has been Chairman of the town several years, and Justice of the Peace. He lost about $10,000 in money and lands by the Canada rebellion; has now 120 acres in his farm.

HUGH ROBERTS, farmer, Sec. 27; P. O. Portage; born Feb. 7, 1838, in Oneida Co., N. Y.; son of Hugh Roberts, who came to America in 1830 and settled in New York; came to Wisconsin June 7, 1847; lived in Caledonia till 1870, then removed to Howard Co., Iowa, and died there in 1869. Mr. Roberts was married, Nov. 10, 1858, to Margaret Jones, daughter of John Jones, who came to America in 1842, lived a few years in New York, two years in Racine, Wis., and came to Columbia Co. in 1848, and settled in Caledonia. Mr. and Mrs. Roberts have six children—John, Winnie, William, Sarah, Edward and David; have lost three—Roger, Hugh and one unnamed. Is a Republican, and has been Supervisor two terms. Has 690 acres of land on his farm. Are both members of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church. His brother, William Roberts, enlisted in August, 1861, in Co. C, 23d W. V. I., and died in May, 1863, near Vicksburg.

THOMAS ROBERTSON, Jr., farmer, Sec. 36; P. O. Alloa; was born in Renfrewshire, Scotland, in 1839; son of Thomas Robertson, Sr.; came to America with the family in 1842, and has resided in Caledonia ever since, except from the fall of 1871 to the fall of 1872 in Faribault Co., Minn. Was married, June 3, 1868, to Janet Dunlop, who was born in Scotland and came to America with her parents while yet a mere child; she was born near Paisley, Aug. 26, 1849. Mr. Robertson has six children—Thomas Davis, William James, Jane Alice, Janet Mary, Robert Dunlop and John McCulloch—all at home. He is a Republican, and has been Town Treasurer one year; was brought up a Presbyterian, but is not a member of the church. Has 447½ acres of land in Caledonia, and a 160-acre farm in Faribault Co., Minn. Thomas Robertson, Sr. (deceased), better known in Columbia Co. as "Daddy Robertson," was born in December, 1800, in Renfrewshire, Scotland, parish of Neilston, and his wife was born in the same parish, in August, 1800; her maiden name was Janet Robertson, daughter of Robert Robertson, and they were married in 1823; he came to America in 1840, and with his son-in-law, Alex. McDonald, now of Portage, were the first settlers in what is now the town of Caledonia; he made a claim on unsurveyed land, in what was then the town of Dekorra, Portage Co., Territory of Wisconsin (now Sec. 32, Caledonia); this was in the summer of 1840; he did some breaking and built a house, and in 1842 his family came from Scotland to join him in his new home; they sailed from Glasgow in the ship Perthshire, Capt. Simpson, April 26, in company with the families of James Wilson and John Pate, being seven weeks on the voyage to New York; Mr. Pate went to Chicago to meet them, and when he returned to Caledonia, found the prairie fire had swept away his home, so his own family, and those of Mr. Wilson and Mr. Pate, making in all twenty-one persons, lived in a "dug-out," which he had made for a sort of home till he could build again; the other families left, and he lived in the "dug-out" all winter, and it was called "the castle;" the next spring he built on Sec. 32, and lived there till 1851, when they were again deprived of a home by the prairie fire, which made a clean sweep of all his buildings; he then built on Sec. 36, where he resided till his death, in November, 1872, his wife having died in April, 1870. He was a leading politician of the Republican faith, and held the office of Justice of the Peace, and was several years Chairman of the town. Himself and wife were life-long members of the Presbyterian Church. He left seven children—James, Robert, Janet, Margaret, Thomas, Elizabeth and George—all born in Scotland, except the last two. He left 500 acres of land.

JOHN ROWLEY, Sr. (deceased): was a native of Connecticut, and his parents removed to Chautauqua Co., N. Y., when he was a boy. He was married, in Chautauqua Co., Oct. 28, 1824, to Sophia Ellithorp, who was born in Onondaga Co., N. Y., Dec. 11, 1807; daughter of Henry Ellithorp. Mr. Rowley followed farming in Chautauqua Co. till 1838, then removed to Caldwell Co., Mo., where he lived one year; then three years in Kane Co., Ill., and five years in Hancock Co., same State; in July, 1847, he came to Wisconsin, and settled in Caledonia, on Sec. 26, where he resided till his death, March 4, 1874, in his 75th year; he left a widow and the following children: Celestina (now Mrs. Harvey Marble), of Arizona; Asa, living in Freeborn Co., Minn.; Sophia (now Mrs. B. Johnson), of Caledonia; John, Emily (now Mrs. Harley T. Hoskin), of Sauk Co.; Henry and George W., living in California. John was married, May 7, 1879, to Martha Farnsworth, and is living on the homestead, as is Mrs. Rowley and Henry, who is unmarried. Have 200 acres of land between them. P. O. Aloa. John and his wife belong to the Free Methodist Church, and he and Henry are Republicans.

WILLIAM M. SHANKS, farmer and Postmaster at Aloa; was born Sept. 17, 1827, in Lanarkshire, Scotland, parish of Shotts; son of David Shanks, who died when William was only 5 years old. Mrs. Shanks then married John Marshall, who came to America in 1850, leaving his family in Scotland till 1851; he settled in Caledonia, and died in November, 1864. Mr. Shanks has lived in Caledonia since 1851, except about six months in Summit Co., Ohio, in 1852. Was married, Nov. 28, 1856, to Agnes Robb, who was born Nov. 16, 1829, in Stirlingshire, Scotland, parish of St. Ninians, daughter of Ralph Robb, who died when she was 3 years old; her mother then married Duncan Stewart, who came to America with his family in 1852; lived awhile in New York, then in Ohio, and came to Caledonia in the spring of 1856; he was the first Postmaster at Aloa, and kept the office till his death, Sept. 15, 1876; Mrs. Stewart died Nov. 30, 1870. Mr. Shanks has eight children—David John, Jessie R., John S., Maggie, Agnes Lincoln, Christianna, Mary and Sarah Maud. He held the office of Supervisor two years, and is the present Postmaster at Aloa, which office he has held since November, 1876; both members of the Presbyterian Church; he is a Republican, and has 240 acres of land.

WILLIAM SHANKS, farmer, Sec. 3; P. O. Aloa; born Oct. 26, 1838, in Renfrewshire, Scotland; son of William Shanks, who came to America in the summer of 1846, settled in Caledonia, on Sec. 3, and died there in December, 1855. William, Jr., was married, Feb. 18, 1873, to Elizabeth Robertson, who was born Aug. 19, 1843, and was the first white child born in the town of Caledonia; daughter of Thomas Robertson, Sr. ("Daddy" Robertson). [See biography of Thomas Robertson, Jr., of Caledonia]. Mr. and Mrs. Shanks have only one child—Jennie Louise, born May 23, 1874. He is a Republican, and has 187½ acres of land. When his father came to Caledonia, he made the trip from Milwaukee with an ox team, taking about three weeks for the journey. Mrs. Shanks walking nearly half the way, and carrying her daughter Isabella, then 2 years old, on her back, being afraid to ride over the rough roads with a heavy load; the first summer they were afflicted with the ague, there being fifteen down with it at one time at the house of James Wilson. They built a log house in the fall, but did not get it finished before winter set in, and lived without windows the first winter; lived on salt beef, corn bread and tea, without any change; the snow fell at one time about three feet deep on a level, and they went six weeks at a time without seeing a person outside their own family ; Mr. Shanks was taken down with rheumatism during the winter, and the first five acres they got cleared Mrs. Shanks did the grubbing and the boy William (then 8 years old), hoed it up with an old Scotch hoe.

JOHN G. STAUDENMAYER, farmer, Sec. 8, 9 and 17 ; P. O. Alloa ; born April 21, 1826, in Wurtemberg, Germany ; son of John Leonard Staudenmayer ; came to America, in the summer of 1853 and located in Caledonia, on Sec. 10, and has resided in that town ever since. Was married May 29, 1855, in Caledonia, to Margaret Naser, from his native place in Germany ; has seven children living—Theresa (now the wife of Jacob Joss, who is manufacturing Swiss cheese at Woodland, Dodge Co., Wis.) ; George, Sophia, John, William, Edward and Mary, all at home, except the oldest ; lost one boy, William, who died at 11 months of age. He held the office of Chairman of his town, five years in succession, Town Clerk, eight years in succession, Supervisor, one year, Justice of the Peace, five years, and is at present holding that office. In politics, Independent, was formerly a Democrat, but for the last five or six years nat acted with the Republican party. Has 350 acres of land in his farm.

JAMES STEWART, farmer, Sec. 1 ; P. O. Alloa ; born May 16, 1822, in Perthshire, Scotland ; son of Alexander Stewart, who came to America in 1852 ; lived in Wyoming Co., N. Y., till the fall of 1856, then came to Wisconsin and settled in Caledonia, where he died in the fall of 1872. Mrs. Stewart died in April, 1863. Mr. Stewart was married Jan. 5, 1871, to Elizabeth King, who was born on the same farm as Mr. Stewart, in 1840. Mr. Stewart has three children—Ellen, James and Margaret. Has been Supervisor one year ; Republican and member of the Presbyterian Church. Has 193½ acres of land.

GEORGE STUEMPFIC, farmer, Sec. 35 ; P. O. Alloa ; was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, March 26, 1817. Was married in Germany, in 1848, to Barbara Naserin ; came to America in 1852 and settled in Caledonia, where he has since resided ; was a farmer in Germany and has followed the same business since coming to America. Has five children living—George, born July 28, 1852 ; Jacob, April 4, 1855 ; Maggie, Nov. 30, 1857 ; John, July 14, 1860, and Mary, born Jan. 21, 1867 ; have lost three, Maggie and Barbara died in Germany, and Jacob in America. Mr. and Mrs. Stuempfic are members of the "Evangelical Association." He is a Democrat and has 177 acres of land.

JOHN TOWERS, farmer, Sec. 19 ; P. O. Merrimack, Sauk Co., Wis. ; born March 17, 1827, in Stirlingshire, Scotland, son of Walter Towers. Was married in Scotland, March 22, 1850, to Marion Shanks, who was born July 1, 1830, in Lanarkshire, Scotland, daughter of David Shanks. (See biography of William M. Shanks.) Mr. Towers came to America in the spring of 1850, his wife remaining in Scotland till 1852. He worked in Columbia Co. till May, 1852, then went to Ohio and remained till the next fall, when he returned to Wisconsin to meet his wife ; he returned to Ohio the same fall, and lived there till the spring of 1855, then came back to Wisconsin and bought land in Caledonia, where he has since resided. Has six children—Walter, James, Sarah, Maggie, John and Robert ; all at home, except the oldest son, Walter, who is married and lives in the same town. Mr. Towers is a Republican and has held the office of Assessor several years, and also that of School Director, which office he now holds. Has 320 acres of land in his farm and 40 acres of timber near it. Mrs. Towers is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

THOMAS WALKER, Sr., farmer, Sec. 20 ; P. O. Portage ; born in London, England, March 27, 1806 ; son of William George and Bennett Walker ; when 13 years old, he apprenticed to learn the making of "britannia metal" goods ; paid 100 guineas, and worked five years to learn the trade ; after that he worked at making tin-foil, five years in London ; in 1836, went to Canada, where he worked at farming three or four years ; then returned to London and worked five years more at tin-foil making ; in 1845, he came again to America ; lived in Boston a few months ; then in Rochester, N. Y., about two years, manufacturing britannia metal goods ; he then went to Cleveland, Ohio, where he got the fever and ague, which he says, "shook all the Johnny Bull out of him and made a Yankee of him ;" from Cleveland he came to Wisconsin and settled in his present location, in May, 1851, where he has since resided and followed farming. Was married in London, in the Parish of St. Mary's, March 14, 1836, to Rebecca Hurley, who was born Dec. 18, 1813, in London, where she lived within a quarter of a mile of her future husband, and never made his acquaintance until she was 20 years old ; have eight children living—Eliza, Ellen, Rebecca, Henry, Richard, Thomas, John and Sarah ; have buried four—Thomas, William, George and Ann. Is a Republican, and has held the office of Supervisor. Has 80 acres of land in his farm.

ROBERT WHITELAW, farmer, Sec. 11 ; P. O. Alloa ; was born March 26, 1819, in Ayrshire, Scotland ; son of James Whitelaw. Was married in Scotland, Feb. 5, 1847, to Isabella Reid, daughter of William Reid ; she was born July 8, 1823, in Lanarkshire, Scotland ; came to America in 1848, and settled in Caledonia, where he has since resided. Has ten children living—Jane, Isabella, James and William (twins), Mary, Susan, Robert, Julia, Agnes and John; Margaret died in 1864, at the age of 16; William is attending college at Ann Arbor, Mich., and James at Beloit College; Jane and Susan are teaching, and Isabella at Ann Arbor, Mich. Mr. Whitelaw has been Chairman of the town the last two years, and President of the Caledonia Farmers' Fire Insurance Company, ever since it was organized, which is about six years. Republican, and has 175 acres of land. Were members of the Congregational Church in Scotland, but have never joined here.

HUGH T. WILLIAMS, farmer, Secs. 18 and 19; P. O. Portage; born in Anglesea, South Wales, in 1840; son of David Williams, who died in Wales in 1863. Mr. Williams came to America in 1858; settled in Caledonia, and has resided in the same town ever since. He enlisted in August, 1862, in the 23d W. V. I., Co. C, and was in the service three years; was wounded May 23, 1863, at the battle of Vicksburg, while on board a monitor boat, by a piece of shell, which disabled him for some time; he was afterward transferred to Veteran Reserve Corps; was stationed in Milwaukee from November, 1864, until March, 1865; from that time until the next July, was at Madison, Wis., and then went to Indiana, where he remained until discharged; was employed a good deal of the time while stationed in Indiana, in escorting prisoners from one point to another. Was married, March 17, 1866, to Margaret Owens, who was born in Wales in 1841; daughter of Robert Owens, who came to America in 1841, and is now living in Caledonia. Mr. Williams has seven children—David, Robert, Sarah, Evan, Ellen, John and Thomas. Republican, and has 135 acres of land.

TOWN OF FOUNTAIN PRAIRIE.

EDWARD BARNETT, farmer, Sec. 18; P. O. Doylestown; 118 acres, 70 acres cultivated; 40 years of age; born in Ireland; son of William and Julia Griffin Barnett; been in America twenty-five years. Married at Elba, Dodge Co., Wis., by Father Edward McGurke, to Bridget Conners, who was born in 1847, daughter of John and Ann Johnson Conners; had six children, first one died very young—William, born May 10, 1868; John, April 13, 1870; Julia Ann, Aug. 7, 1872; Mary, May 24, 1875, died May 24, 1877, of diphtheria; Katie, Jan. 15, 1878. Mr. Barnett is a Democrat and member of Father Murphy's Church; was drafted into the army; paid commutation money and remained at home; parents of Mrs. Barnett are still living at Elba.

WILLIAM BARNETT, farmer, Sec. 19; P. O. Doylestown; 220 acres, 200 cultivated; born in county of Waterford, Ireland; son of William and Julia Griffin Barnett; came to America thirty years ago; about 40 years of age (family record was lost); been in this county twenty-five years. Married, Jan. 10, 1859, at Beaver Dam, to Ann Kane, daughter of Michael and Margaret (Kane) Kane; had no children; has adopted three, one girl and two boys, to whom he is uncle and guardian. Democrat and Catholic; rather liberal; parents still living in this town; parents of wife dead.

SANFORD L. BATCHELDER, farmer, Sec. 34; P. O. Fall River; born Sept. 20, 1822, at Stafford, Genesee Co., N. Y., son of Hillard and Nancy Stiles Batchelder; settled in this town October, 1866. Married, November, 1849, at Stafford, by Elder Weeks, to Dolly, daughter of Elias Watson; had three children—Cara M., wife of Wyman Fisk, has four girls, Maudie, Lottie, Annie and Helen; Edgar Willis, single, at Springfield, Ill., telegraph operator on Wabash R. R.; Frank C., operator in general office of C. M. & St. P. R. R. Democratic in principle; was in Co. B, 7th W. V. I. until March 23, 1862, resigned and came home; was First Lieutenant; then organized Co. K, and in August, 1862, went into 32d W. V. I.; was at Memphis on provost duty a year, then with Sherman to Meridian, February, 1863; thence to Cairo, Paducah, Ky., and Decatur, Ala.; about one year guarding bridges and supplies; then to Chattanooga, Atlanta and Savannah, and to grand review at Washington, May, 1865; was elected Justice of the Peace just as he was starting for United States service.

ELISHA A. DEAN, farmer, Sec. 18; P. O. Doylestown; 80 acres; born March 7, 1835, in town of Vernon, Oneida Co., N. Y.; son of Ezra and Mary A. Yule Dean; his father was from Massachusetts, and his mother from New York; came to Elba, Dodge Co., 1855; farming five years; then to this town. Married Dec. 26, 1859, by Elder F. S. Brown, in this town, to Josephine, daughter of Joseph Millick, of Baden-Baden, where she was born March 18, 1838; has three children—Hattie Viola, born Feb. 11, 1861; Charles Sumner, July 11, 1867; Carrie Josephine, Dec. 27, 1869. Liberal Republican, and attends the Methodist Church; has been five years a magistrate, and was member of Co. B, 7th W. V. I. enlisted June, 1861, in State service, and sworn into United States service, September after; last two years of time served at Fifth Corps headquarters and was present when R. E. Lee sent in flag of truce; discharged July, 1865. Mr. Dean's mother lives at Columbus, and is the wife of A. L. Hathaway; parents of Mrs. Dean are both dead.

WILLIAM J. EVANS, farmer, Secs. 20 and 21; P. O. Fall River; 120 acres, 70 cultivated; born Dec. 15, 1820, at Shropshire, England; son of Jonadab and Margaret (Jones) Evans; came to Waterbury in 1844, and in the fall of 1845, to Fond du Lac, on Sec. 36 in Byron, and to this farm in 1874. Married, April 18, 1852, at Byron, by Elder Benjamin Harrington, to Delia Simons, who was born Sept. 29, 1828, daughter of Orville and Emeline (Welch) Simons; had six children—Margaret Emeline, born March 5, 1853, and wife of Joseph North, in town of Trenton, Dodge Co., and has four children; William Benjamin, born Sept. 24, 1854; John Orville, born March 4, 1858; Robert Deloss, born July 23, 1864; Clara Delia, born Aug. 2, 1866; one son died young, no name; Mr. Evans was several years Director of School District, and two years Magistrate; Republican, and himself and wife members of Methodist Church thirty-five years. Only brother of Mrs. Evans, Delos Simons, was in 1st W. C., and now living in Idaho, as also her father; Mr. Evans' father died in Iowa; his mother in Byron, of cancer; has one brother living in Iowa, one in Fond du Lac; two sisters in Byron and one in Fox Lake.

O. W. FIELD, farmer, Sec. 16; P. O. Fall River; 280 acres, 170 acres cultivated; born in Onondaga Co., N. Y.; son of Stephen and Charlotte (Berry) Fields; went to Michigan, Kalamazoo Co., at the age of 5 years, with parents, remained there sixteen years and then came here. Married in this town, October, 1863, to Maria N. Smith, daughter of Lewis and Sylvina (Webb) Smith; had six children—Mary E., born Sept. 26, 1864; Maud E., born April 6, 1866; George S., born Dec. 8, 1868; Oliver West, born Feb. 20, 1871; Edwin P., born April 25, 1873; Lewis G., born Sept. 10, 1877. Mr. Fields is a Republican; seven years Supervisor, one year Chairman and fourteen years Treasurer of his School District; his father was in Springfield armory during war of 1812.

WILLIAM E. FIELD, farmer by trade and doctor by profession; P. O. Fall River; born March 4, 1825, in town and county of Onondaga, N. Y.; son of Stephen and Charlotte (Berry) Field; immigrated in 1832 to Kalamazoo Co., Mich., where he lived sixteen years; settled here in 1848. Married at Schoolcraft, Kalamazoo Co., Nov. 27, 1841, by Rev. William Taylor (Baptist), to Josephine, daughter of Abram I. and Sarah (Bishop) Shaver, of New York and Pennsylvania; wife born in 1831, June 23, at Prairie Ronde; had five children—Sarah and Eliza, twins, born Jan. 17, 1851 (Eliza wife of John Pearson, a broker and capitalist at Ripon, Wis.); Jerome E., born Feb. 16, 1852; Mary E., born Sept. 5, 1854, died Aug. 2, 1876, of consumption; William H., born March 10, 1857, clerking for Pearson. Republican in politics; Universalist in religion; has held office of Supervisor, Constable and Commissioner of highway; parents of Mr. Field broke the first ground, and sowed the first grain in Kalamazoo Co., Mich. (1828), and a sister of Mr. Field, Celista, now on old homestead, wife of T. B. Hicks, was the first white child born in that county; when a child, she used to play with the Indians, and one day, Samuel Houston, of Texas, saw her and supposed they had stolen her; he went in and told them (Mrs. Field) he saw the prettiest child he ever saw in the Indian camp, and wanted to go and recapture it; they soon brought her home and all had a good laugh at the expense of the old General; in April, after the twins were born, they were living in a shanty about 16x18 feet and had the babies in a box tied to the rafters, so as to make a swing cradle, and during the night a hurricane took the roof, rafters, babies and all 100 feet into a grove; one struck on the ground and the other in a tree, where she was still hanging when found, with a small limb of the tree sticking in her head; a brother of Mr. Field, John S., and two brothers of Mrs. Field, were in the army, one of the latter died of the measles, and the other was wounded in the shoulder; her father was in the Black Hawk war with her uncle, William A. Bishop; the grandmother of Mrs. Field died at Green Lake, Wis., June 11, 1878, aged 99 years 11 months and 15 days, and five years previous to her death, there were at her table at one time, representatives of five generations. Mr. Field is a successful cancer doctor, having practiced a long time and never lost a case; he does not advertise, but has a large number of testimonials as to efficiency; he doctors on the "no cure, no pay" plan, and always gets his pay; he studied under Judge Basil Harrison, a cousin of William Henry Harrison, who was believed to be the most learned and successful doctor (of cancer) in the United States; he died at the age of 103 years and 6 months at Prairie Ronde, Mich., Aug. 30, 1874.

JAMES HATTON, farmer, Sec. 9; P. O. Fall River; 300 acres, all fenced; born at Bradford, England, July 19, 1830; son of Joseph and Mary (Robertshaw) Hatton; settled here in August, thirty years ago. Married, April 3, 1867, at Courtland, by Rev. William Luthrop, to Haunah, daughter of Thomas and Sarah (Greenwood) Waterworth; Mrs. Hatton was born in Yorkshire, England, Oct. 10, 1844; had five children—Mary Jane, born March 9, 1868; Sarah Elizabeth, born March 12, 1870; Joseph, born March 8, 1873; Grace Annise, born April 19, 1875, died March 9, 1879; Nettie Rebecca, born April 1, 1878.

SHELDEN E. HEWINS, farmer, Sec. 29; P. O. Fall River; born in Massachusetts in 1834; son of Elijah and Sabia A. (Wooster) Hewins; went to Lorain Co., Ohio, with parents at 18 months of age, where he lived 10 years; then to Byron, Fond du Lac Co., Wis., and, at 14 years of age, came to this town. Married, Jan. 15, 1856, at Byron, by Elder Harrington, to Adelia A., daughter of Chestes and Olive (Ingals) Thomas; wife born March 13, 1839; had four children—Frank E., born Oct. 6, 1856; Wilbur F., Dec. 21, 1863; Myrtie A., March 4, 1871; Homer E., Dec. 5, 1872. Republican in politics; Baptist in religion. Has a well-cultivated farm of 216 acres. His brother, George W., was in Co. E, 3d W. V. I., and had his arm shot off at the shoulder-joint at the battle of Beverly's Ford; he came home, and, while boarding with Mr. McCoy, in the Lower Town in the city of Fond du Lac, Wis., was accidentally burned to death on the night of Sept. 8, 1878, the house being totally destroyed with its contents; all the inmates escaped except Hewins, and he, being disabled, perished in the flames; strong suspicious of foul play were generally entertained at that time (he having lately drawn his pension), but the case was never fully investigated. His brother, Edwin M., was in the 2d Kan. V. C.; was wounded, now lives in Chautauqua Co., Kan. Edwin M. and Eliza Shepard, now the wife of Mr. Sweet, were, about July, 1847, lost in the woods in Fond du Lac Co., and remained three days with nothing to eat, except the few berries they could find; they were discovered only six miles from home, nearly famished. The father of Mr. Hewins kept the Crescent House at Appleton three years, and went to California April 5, 1853; returned March 11, five years later, and died at Pickett's Station three days after, being unconscious, as reported, from the effect of apoplexy; it was strongly suspected, however, that his death was the result of other causes, as he was in possession of considerable money when he left.

JOHN HICKS, hotel-keeper, Fall River; born Nov. 27, 1817, at Dresden, Seneca Co., N. Y.; son of Asa and Mercy (Robb) Hicks; settled in this town in 1847, and followed farming three years; then came to the village, and, five years ago, purchased the Fall River House, where he devotes his time and talent to the entertaining of his numerous friends and the public; the estimation in which his house is held by the public is ample evidence that he is a square man and knows how to keep a hotel. He was married, March 10, 1840, in Kalamazoo Co., Mich., 1840, by William Taylor, to Eliza Field (see Wm. E. Field); had four children; none now living; has one adopted daughter, 15 years of age. Was in Co. B, 11th W. V. I.; was out from October, 1861, to Feb. 27, 1863; was discharged for disability. He was one of the first Constables in the town, and occupied the position for many years; was Supervisor, etc. He voted for the constitution of Michigan in 1835, and of Wisconsin also. His son, Asa Dallas, enlisted and died at Milwaukee in the United States Hospital.

COL. MARTIN C. HOBART, farmer; P. O. Fall River; was born in Niagara Co., N. Y., in 1835; when about a year old, he, with his parents, John S. and Enice Hobart, removed to Addison Co., Vt., where they resided on a farm till 1852; emigrating thence to Wisconsin, he located on a farm in the town of Fountain Prairie, Columbia Co. Mr. Hobart received a common-school education. He enlisted as private in Company B, 7th W. V. I., at Fall River in 1861, under Col. Van Dore; was elected Orderly Sergeant at the organization of the company; was commissioned First Lieutenant in June, 1862, and, Aug. 28 following, was commissioned Captain of his company; he was taken prisoner at the battle of the Wilderness in May, 1864, and, while he was held as a prisoner, he was commissioned Major and Lieutenant Colonel of his regiment; he was paroled Feb. 22, 1865, exchanged in April following, and rejoined his regiment at Blacks and Whites Station, Va., and remained with it till mustered out at Jeffersonville, Ind., July 2, 1865. Returning then to his home in Fountain Prairie, he has since devoted his time to agriculture and stock-raising; he now owns a farm of 120 acres in Fountain Prairie and 20 acres on Sec. 3, town of Columbus. He was married, in 1866, to Miss Sarah A., daughter of Wayne B. Dyre, of Pepin Co., Wis.; their children are Frances M., Mary V. and Burr E.

JAMES H. HOYT, farmer, Sec. 19; P. O. Fall River; born in Ithaca, N. Y., March 6, 1841; son of Peter B. and Glorane (Mathews) Hoyt; came here at 4 years of age with parents; at Columbus some time; then six years in Hampden; then here. Married, Dec. 22, 1864, by Elder Fish (Baptist), at Fox Lake, to Julia, daughter of John and Clarissa (Lackey) Bliss; Mrs. H. was born at Owego, N. Y., April 23, 1845; had one daughter who died at 3 weeks of age; has two living—Harvey, born Jan. 21, 1869; Myrta Idella, Oct. 2, 1872. Mr. Hoyt's parents were born in New York; wife's father died July 16, 1873, of consumption, aged 71 years; her mother is living with her, at the age of 82 years—a smart, active, pleasant lady (apparently about 65). Mr. Hoyt is Republican; attends Methodist and Baptist Churches (his wife is a Baptist); Clerk of district. His father started the first blacksmith-shop in the township of Columbus; set anvil under a tree and then built a shed over it; when he came here, there were only three log houses and an unfinished grist-mill at the village of Columbus. Owns 80 acres.

AUGUST FERDINAND KIETZKE, farmer, Sec. 17; P. O. Fall River; born Aug. 29, 1846; son of William and Amelia (Konn) Kietzke; came to America in 1874. Married, Nov. 5, 1875, to Albertina Johanna, daughter of Fred and Louisa (Garke) Gann; Mrs. Kietzke was born Nov. 5, 1852; had one child—Louisa, born April 28, 1877. Was member of Co. 8, 21st Regiment, under Frederick William, in Germany. Owns 140 acres.

SAMUEL LASHIER, wagon-maker and mechanic; P. O. Fall River; born at Union, Broome Co., N. Y., April 22, 1810; son of Aaron and Mary (Roe) Lashier (from Germany and Connecticut); settled in town of Columbus June 12, 1846; farming four years; was one of the first Supervisors in the town of Columbus, and has held all the offices in town at different times since; was eight years Treasurer, and several years Supervisor. Married, April 22, forty-eight years ago (then 22 years of age), at Union, N. Y., by Rev. Oliver Hill, to Mary A., daughter of John and Mary (Peck) Durfee; had five children—Harvey F., now in Todd Co., Minn., where he has been County Auditor for eight years (he married a widow (formerly Kate Barry), and has five children—Fred, Ida, Walter, Sam and Clara); Ellen L., wife of Walter Slawson, who owns a job printing office in St. Louis, Mo.; Angelina E., wife of W. H. Proctor, has six children—Nettie, John, Willie, Walter, Clara and Freddie; Nettie, the eldest, died at 17 years of age; Mary S., wife of John E. Stittman, died March 31, 1879, left five children—Eddie, John, Arthur, Mary, Martha (died at Orange City, Fla.); George S., single, in store at Fall River, where he keeps a general stock of groceries, etc.

THEODORE AUGUST CHARLES MILLER, farmer, Sec. 16; P. O. Fall River; born July 25, 1849, in Germany; son of Charles and Rosina (Shultze) Miller; came here eleven years ago. Married, Jan. 16, 1873, to Minnie Hine, daughter of Michael and Anna (Pralap) Hine; three children—Emma Louisa, born Dec. 31, 1876; Theodore William, Feb. 14, 1877; Elizabeth Mary, Oct. 16, 1878. Owns 100 acres.

WILLIAM C. NASHOLD, farmer, Sec. 9; P. O. Fall River; born in Schoharie Co., N. Y., in 1818; son of William and Gertrude Nashold; came to Wisconsin May 3—twenty-three years ago. Was married, Oct. 19, 1846, in Albany Co., N. Y., by Rev. Mr. Leffler, to Eva, daughter of Philip and Mary (Sigsbie) Christler, born Oct. 16, 1822. They have had thirteen children—one, Sarah M., died twenty years ago; Demosthenes D., 37 years of age Feb. 28, 1880, married Sarah Waterworth, living at Otsego, has one child, Myrtle; Jerome R., 35 years of age Feb. 2, 1880, married Clara Tyng, and lives on Sec. 8; Egbert D., 33 years old June 14, 1880, married Malvina Linderman, lives at Solomon City, Idaho, and has two children; Martha E., 31 years of age July 25, 1880, wife of Asbury Kellogg, of Moore Co., Iowa, has one child; William Mason, 29 years of age Dec. 2, 1879; Orpha G., 28 years old July 11, 1879, wife of John J. Keeley, of Columbus; Orsiville H., 26 years old May 15, 1880, wife of John F. Rockwell, of Minnesota, has one child; Emma J., 24 years old July 20, 1880, wife of William J. Doherty, of Rio, has two children; George W., 22 years old May 2, 1880; Charles D., 20 years old May 2, 1880; Ida J., 18 years old Sept. 11, 1879; Homer C., 17 years old Feb. 20, 1880. Egbert was Corporal in Co. D, 53d W. V. I., and is Sheriff in Idaho, where he also has two hundred miles of mail route, by contract; also succeeded in getting a military post established at Fort Lemhi (two companies), after repeated attempts had failed; Keeley (son-in-law) is a teacher; four of the brothers constitute a band, of which George W. is the leader, and they play all over the State. Mr. Nashold was a Lutheran and a Republican, as are the whole family; was a teacher thirty-two terms; he was killed by the accidental discharge of his gun, at Cambria, Sept. 4, 1864, he having taken it along to shoot ducks, on his way to mill with his son, Jerome, holding it with one hand and driving with the other; the dog jumped into the wagon and so discharged it, the charge entering at his throat and lodging in the brain. He owned 40 acres of land.

HENRY NEWNHAM, telegraph, station and express agent; P. O. Fall River; born at Summit, Waukesha Co., Wis., April 25, 1844; son of James and Eliza (Prior) Newnham, of Bexhill, Chatham, Sussex Co., England; came to this town in 1875; was night operator fifteen months at (Lowell) Reesville. Enlisted, Sept. 1, 1864, in Co. C, 43d W. V. I.; was discharged Aug. 5, 1865, on general order, although at the time he was in hospital at Prairie Du Chien, with lung fever. Mr. Newnham's father was ten years a sailor, and five or six years of that time was a signal man in the English navy; he is still living at Oconomowoc, Wis.

GEORGE NOLLER, farmer, Sec. 8; P. O. Doylestown; born in 1821, at Wurtemberg; came here in 1847. Was married at Milwaukee, Wis., to Julia Frey; they have four children—Fred G., born Oct. 1, 1856; Charles, born March 3, 1858; Sophia, born March 3, 1860; Julia Louisa, born Feb. 3, 1864; Fred has been three years in the office of the Columbus Democrat, and has just quit to work on the farm for a holiday. Mr. Noller sent to the Province of Alsace, France, for seed wheat three years ago, and from one quart raised three bushels, the next year forty-five bushels, and last year sold two hundred and fifty bushels at $4 per bushel (a bushel weighed sixty-four pounds). Mr. Noller owns 120 acres of land.

WILLIAM H. PROCTOR, farmer, Sec. 30; P. O. Fall River; was born in Windsor Co., Vt., in 1827; his father, Capt. Asa Proctor, was also a native of Windsor Co., and obtained his title by being Captain of a State militia company there in his younger days; his mother, Lorena Proctor, was born at Mount Holly, Rutland Co., Vt.; Mr. Proctor is the second of a family of five children, one of whom died in Vermont in infancy; two were born in the West; in 1836, his father, with his wife and two children, emigrated to Michigan, and located on a farm in Kalamazoo Co.; eight years later, they removed to the town of Fountain Prairie, Columbia (then Portage) Co., and located on a farm on Sec. 30, where his father died in 1848, his mother in 1855; his father, Col. J. Drake and James C. Carr, were the first inspectors of the first election of the Columbus Precinct of Portage Co., in the fall of 1845; William H., our present subject, made his home with his parents till their death, and now lives on a portion of the homestead; he owns 160 acres in Secs. 19 and 30. He has been a member of the Town Board, and Chairman of the same for four terms. He was married in 1857, to Miss Angeline E., daughter of Samuel and Mary Lashier; a native of Broome Co., N. Y., born in 1838, and emigrated to Columbia Co., Wis., with her parents, in 1846. Mr. and Mrs. Proctor have seven children—Ellen L., John S., Willie R., Mary E., Walter A., Clara M. and Alfred H.

THOMAS M. ROBERTS, miller, Fall River; born May 24, 1858, at Oshkosh, Wis.; son of David A. and Anna (Morgan) Roberts; was clerking three years and milling three years; employed by E. Evans.

FRANKLIN RUSSELL, farmer; P. O. Fall River; was born in the town of Windsor, in Windsor Co., Vt., Aug. 28, 1805; son of John and Elizabeth (Hartwell) Russell, of Massachusetts; settled in Dodge Co. in 1855, made a farm and ran it about thirteen years, then came to Fall River. He was married in the town of Stowe, Washington Co., Vt., by Daniel Moody, Esq., July 6, 1828, to Sylvia, daughter of Samuel and Betsey (Bigford) Parcher; they have had twelve children—two died young, and ten are living, as follows: Cordelia M., wife of F. H. Coon, of Fall River, who has two children—Ada, wife of Charles Taylor, and Nina, wife of Arthur Haughton, of Dodge Co., Wis.; Susan J., wife of David Ash, of Dakota, who has six children—Adelaide, Edward, Clarence, Lily, Burt and Dora (Adelaide is the wife of Charles Wells, of St. Lawrence, N. Y.; Edward's wife was a Martin, and Lily is the wife of W. H. Blanchard); A. H., married Mary A. Brayton, of Portage, and has three children—May, Jay and Inez; R. P., married Delia Gilson, now at Wrightstown, Wis., and has six children—Betsey, Ella, Wilbur and Willard (twins), Minnie and Rena; Z. B., married Nov. 20, 1865, at Fox Lake, to Lizzie Simpson, formerly from Ohio, they have two children, Julia and Mattie (Z. B. is a Republican and a Methodist; was several years Treasurer of the town; lost a leg at South Mountain, and is drawing a pension; runs a cigar factory and restaurant, and also keeps a stock of groceries, flour, etc.; the parents of Mrs. Z. B. Russell were R. C. and Matilda (Culver) Simpson, he being a native of New York and she of Pennsylvania; Mrs. Matilda Simpson died at Wyocena in April, 1873, aged 66 years, and R. C. Simpson is living, at the age of 77, with his daughter, Mrs. Z. B. Russell, at Fall River; Mrs. Z. B. Russell was 37 years old Dec. 25, 1879, and has three brothers and two sisters living; one of them (Henry) was in the army; Mr. Simpson came here in 1849); Betsy A., wife of E. F. Russell, of Dakota, has one child, Sylvia (she (Betsey) was the widow of Gilman Eno, by whom she had two children, Reuel and Derell); Philura, wife of Charles Thompson, of Dakota, she has two children, Jennie and Irving; Franklin, married in Minnesota, and has one girl, Cora; Ezra W., is single, and runs a barber shop and notion store at Ashland, Wis.; Priscilla A., died Sept. 8, 1864, aged 16 years. Mr. Russell has seven great-grandchildren—two in Adelaide's family, in New York, and one in Edward's family, at the same place. Ada Taylor has one; Nina Haughton has one; Betsey has one; R. P.'s daughter, Ella Bradley, has one. Mr. R. had four sons and three sons-in-law in the army; some of his brothers were in the war of 1812; Mrs. R.'s father was a captain in the war of 1812, and her brother a soldier; she had four brothers and five sisters. Mr. Russell was a seventh son, a Republican, a Methodist, and a radical total abstinence man, but never signed a pledge; he used tobacco five years, and then quit both smoking and chewing.

JAMES RANDALL, farmer, Sec. 34; P. O. Fall River; born in Stafford, Genesee Co., N. Y., July 17, 1844. [See Spencer Randall.] Married in Stafford by Rev. Ambrose Burlington, to Mary, daughter of Frank and Lucy (Deming) Cash; had one son, died five years ago at 3 years of age; he came to this place in 1862, and has been farming ever since; he owns 40 acres and works homestead of 200 acres. Is a Republican; Baptist in religion; prominent temperance and Temple of Honor man.

SPENCER RANDALL, farmer, Sec. 33; P. O. Fall River; born in Stafford, Genesee Co., N. Y., March 31, 1837; son of Israel and Celia (Watson) Randall, of Vermont; came to this town Oct. 23, 1860. Married, June 25, 1862, at Stafford by Rev. Aaron Parker, to Jane E. Kellogg, who was born in October, 1836, daughter of Russell and Harriet (Miller) Kellogg; had five children—Fred-die E., died in fall of 1864; Charles, Hobart, Orrin W., all at home. Mr. Randall is a Republican; attends the Baptist Church, and is at present Chairman of the Town Board (brother of James Randall) also a temperance man; owns 80 acres.

BENJAMIN A. SAGE, blacksmith, Fall River; born Jan. 17, 1834, in Rutland, Vt.; son of Benjamin and Margaret (Bassford) Sage; settled at Fall River in spring of 1844; followed farming about twelve years, and then worked at this trade until, nine years ago, he purchased the shop he now owns, where he runs a general wagon and blacksmith repair-shop. Married, Jan. 1, 1859, by Rev. Rosen-eranz, of Columbus, to Mary L., daughter of Jonathan and Sally A. (Gale) Chase, of New Hampshire; had eleven children—Mary, died young; Frances A., born Feb. 4, 1860; Elmer E., born Oct. 29, 1861; Benjamin A., born March 7, 1864; George G., born Dec. 28, 1865; William E., born Nov. 19, 1867; Susan M., born Feb. 4, 1870; Edgar, twin to one that died, born Aug. 20, 1872; Herbert, born Oct. 21, 1873; Mary L., born Oct. 11, 1875; Claude, born Aug. 18, 1879. Mr. Sage is a Democrat; Baptist, and ultra temperance man; was United States blacksmith in the army until he had smallpox and was discharged (he was stationed at Memphis, Tenn.); was several years Town Clerk, and from 1868 to present time Di-strict Clerk, and for nine years a Justice of the Peace, in a Republican town; we are indebted to Mr. Sage for assistance rendered while engaged on this work.

ANTHONY SNOWDEN, farmer, Sec. 17; P. O. Columbus; born in Yorkshire, England, in 1830; son of Anthony and Betsey (Atchison) Snowden; came here in 1847; had three brothers and three sisters, all dead but Thomas, who is now in England, raising cattle, sheep, butter, etc.; lived with Mr. Pearson and Whitfield until he built a house two years later, traded at Columbus where there was a mill, tavern, store and one house; only four of those living at Columbus at that time are now living; never married; 160 acres, 100 cultivated.

WILLIAM SUGDEN, farmer, Sec. 2; P. O. Fall River; born Nov. 28, 1824, at Lidget, Yorkshire, England; son of Abraham and Ann (Riley) Sugden; came from birthplace April 28, 1858, landed May 12, and got to Wisconsin May 19; twenty years on Sec. 36 in Courtland, then here. Married at Yorkshire in 1846, by Rev. Mr. Smith, to Ann Appleyard; had two children, both died in England. Married second time at same place, to Susanna, daughter of Joseph and Sally Bancroft; had five children, all dead but one, John, who is now at Edgar, Clay Co., Neb, and married to Emily Dann, of Courtland. Married third time Jan. 26, 1866, by Rev. J. T. Woodhead at Fond du Lac, to Hannah, daughter of Peter and Henrietta Wright; had one child, which died young. Married fourth time, March 16, 1868, by Elder Brown, of Fountain Prairie, to Ellen Baxendall, daughter of P. P. and Jenny (Thorn-burg) Baxendall; had six children, four of them living—William Robert, born Oct. 27, 1869; Phineas Ralph, born June 11, 1871; Angenette, born Nov. 20, 1872; Hannah Ann Alice, born Nov. 10, 1879. Owns 260 acres, 90 acres of which are cultivated.

JACOB SWARTHOUT, farmer, Sec. 28; P. O. Fall River; born in Chenango Co., N. Y.; son of Thomas and Mary (Schumaker) Swarthout, of Pennsylvania; settled on the farm he now owns in the fall of 1843. Was married at Dundee, Yates Co., N. Y., by Elder Martin to Rachel Smaully, Sept. 20, 1839; had two children—Mary, born, 1840 (now wife of Lewis Birdsey, of Columbus), Josephine, 1850 (now wife of William Conger, an engineer of Brookfield, Mo.); married a second time, Dec. 9, 1852, at home of the bride, by Elder Rosecrans, to Caroline A. daughter of Joseph and Mary (Ward) Matthews; had six children—Andrew H. born Jan. 31, 1855; Ella B., Dec. 11, 1857; Carrie, Feb. 24, 1859; Eddie M., Jan. 1, 1861, died Feb. 20, 1880; John Jacob, born June 30, 1862; Willie, Oct. 11, 1866. Mr. S. is a straight-out temperance man; Republican in politics; Methodist in religion. Was some years Treasurer and Supervisor. His grandfather, John Swarthout, was a New Jersey man, and held a commission as Captain under George Washington in the Revolutionary war; his uncle, Daniel Swarthout, was a non-commissioned officer in the war of 1812; Mr. S. relates that soon after they settled here, a severe wind took the roof off the house, carrying with it his sister Mary (since wife of F. M. Black, of Columbus, and died in August, two years ago), about eighty rods into a grove of small timber; himself and mother and Willard Grant were in the lower part of the house, and were uninjured except a slight bruise on his mother's arm by a falling joist; Mary received no permanent injury; he also states that in July, 1858, a gale of wind completely divested some farms of their crops and fences, and wrecked the dwellings of Mr. Hurd and Morey, and that a stranger stopping at the time with Mr. Morey received injuries from the effect of which he subsequently died. Mr. Conger, the husband of Josephine, was in the 3d W. V. C. about three years.

MARVIN R. THOMAS, farmer, Sec. 20; P. O. Fall River; born Nov. 12, 1823, at Hudson, Summit Co., Ohio, son of B. C. and Abigail (Sanger) Thomas, formerly of Connecticut and later of New York, came to Columbus and commenced blacksmithing in 1846, built the second fire ever started in Columbus, (out of doors and then built a shop over it), settled here in 1857. Married, Dec. 24, 1852, on Sec. 19, by Rev. Mr. Green, Methodist minister, to Lorinda E. M. Tripp, who was born April 6, 1824, at Oswego, N. Y., daughter of Elisha and Polly E. (Beebee) Tripp; have two children—George Clarence, born June 24, 1855; Helen L., Oct. 5, 1857, now at Augusta, Wis., in milliner's trade, formerly a teacher. Mr. Thomas is Liberal in politics and religion, and often splits the tickets in both cases; his son, George C., has been a teacher three years; his wife nine years a teacher in New York and Wisconsin. The father of Mrs. Thomas died Jan. 15, 1856, of heart disease, and it was often said of him that he was never heard to utter an oath. When Mr. Thomas settled here, it was sparsely settled and times hard, and he relates that a Mr. Proctor living near by once invited a neighbor to take supper with him, which they did; they had break and milk, and he afterward discovered that his wife went without, as there was not enough to "go round." Mr. Proctor afterward became somewhat noted for his liberality, and acquired a competency. They had to go to Jefferson Co. for provisions, and Mr. Thomas took his plowshare on his back, and went on foot to that place, over thirty miles, to get it repaired. Mrs. Thomas taught the first school in this part of the town in a board shanty, where the cemetery is now located; her father's father, Calvin Tripp, was a soldier at Valley Forge, and died at the age of 88 years in 1846. Mr. Thomas was the youngest of a family of thirteen children; the mother of Mrs. Thomas—Mrs. Tripp—was the eldest of twelve children, and the only one living; she is now with Mrs. Thomas, 88 years of age, in possession of her faculties, a pleasant, sprightly lady, with good memory, and a "conversationalist" in all that the name implies. Owns 100 acres.

JOHN WATERWORTH, farmer, Sec. 17; P. O. Fall River; born July 10, 1852; son of Thomas and Sarah (Greenwood) Waterworth. Married April 9, 1878, to Christina, daughter of Frederick and Sophia (Baker) Brightendorf; no children. The father of Mrs. Brightendorf came here in 1853 with a capital of $300, and has by industry and judicious investments accumulated a comfortable fortune. Owns 80 acres.

JOSEPH WOODHEAD, farmer, Sec. 10; P. O. Fall River; born Sept. 10, 1818, near Bradford, in Yorkshire, England; son of Benjamin and Elisabeth (Roper) Woodhead, who settled in this town in 1848. Married, Aug. 10, 1846, at Town Church, near Leeds, Sarah Haley, daughter of Thomas and Susan (Taylor) Haley; she was born Dec. 15, 1822, in the same town as her husband; have ten children—Susan, born Dec. 14, 1848; Benjamin F., July 2, 1851, married to Sarah Jane Hardy, Webster Co., Neb.; Emma Jane, Aug. 3, 1853, died at 15 months of age; Ida, born April 10, 1855, wife of Geo. W. Harrison, of Bradford, England—now in Rush Medical College—some time a teacher (has three children—Bruce, David C., and Wallace Earl); Thomas E., May 24, 1857; Salina A., July 17, 1859, wife of Lewis Robinson—one child, Mabel M.; Charles F., Dec. 29, 1861, at home unmarried; Newton H., Nov. 14, 1864; Joseph, Oct. 25, 1866; Herbert H., Dec. 30, 1868. Mr. Woodhead is Democratic and Free Trade; worked in a coal mine from 6½ years of age to 25, then struck for wages with about 300, all went back but three, of whom he was one, the other two went in three months; he then went to shoemaking in Lancaster for his uncle Joseph Woodhead, and for himself there and since coming here, fifteen years at trade at Columbus, most of the time for Thomas Swarthout, then two years at Doylestown, and now at his trade and farming. Owns 129 acres.

TOWN OF WYOCENA.

WILLIAM BRITTON ALLEGAR, farmer, Sec. 33; P. O. Wyocena; born July 5, 1846, in Columbia Co., Penn.; son of Henry Allegar, who removed to Livingston Co., N. Y., when he was 8 years old, and went to Iowa in 1875, and now lives in Clinton Co., that State. William B. came to Wisconsin in 1867, and lived in Leeds, Columbia Co., one year, then in Randolph one year, where he was married, Dec. 4, 1870, to Maritta Bessae, who was born June 30, 1847, in the city of Hudson, N. Y.; daughter of Henri L. and Amanda (Mosier) Bessae, who came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1850 and settled in Randolph, where he died in May, 1853. Mrs. Bessae afterward married Dr. N. D. Satterlee, and died Jan. 30, 1861, in her 36th year. Soon after his marriage, Mr. Allegar went to Iowa; lived in Hardin Co. four years and in Clinton Co. two years; in the fall of 1876, he came back to Wisconsin and bought the farm he now owns. Has three children—Frank, born Nov. 22, 1871; C. L. G. (a girl), Sept. 6, 1873, and Maud, Aug. 28, 1878. Is Treasurer of the School District, and in politics a Greenbacker. Has 160 acres of land. When Mr. Bessac settled in Randolph, he moved into his house before the lower part was finished, and one night, while the family occupied the chamber, a pack of wolves came in and took possession of the lower rooms, where they remained till morning without being disturbed.

YATES ASHLEY, miller, and at present mail agent on the C., M. & St. P. R. R., Pardeeville; was born Sept. 10, 1824, in West Bloomfield, Ontario Co., N. Y.; son of Daniel and Hetty (Cooper) Ashley, who removed to Nunda, Livingston Co., N. Y., when he was 3½ years old; he studied civil engineering and surveying while at school, but spent his early life (after he left school), clerking in the mercantile business; in the spring of 1844, he went to Madison, Ind., and ran a store there nearly a year, then came to Milwaukee, where he followed the same business till April, 1849, then came to Pardeeville to take charge of the business of John S. Pardee, not only selling goods but keeping his books and acting as his agent, having a general oversight of all his business in that place, where he remained till September, 1852, then went to Whitewater, Wis., and stayed one year, still clerking; then spent two years in the engineer corps of the old Milwaukee & La Crosse R. R. Co.; in the spring of 1855, he purchased a quarter-interest in the flouring and grist-mill at Pardeeville, and has resided in that village ever since, though for the last eleven years he has been employed by the Post Office Department, first as route agent five years, then as postal clerk five and a half years, and, for the last six months, route agent again, on the C., M. & St. P. R. R.; was Postmaster two years in Pardeeville, and had charge of the office when first established, though not appointed as Postmaster till some time after. Was married, Oct. 4, 1855, to Virginia M. Pardee, who was born Jan. 25, 1835, in Wadsworth, Medina Co., Ohio; daughter of John and Eunice (Chamberlain) Pardee. (See biography of Charles J. Pardee, of Pardeeville.) Mrs. Ashley's brother, John S. Pardee, in company with W. W. Haskin, made the first improvements in Pardeeville, and the village took its name from him. Mr. and Mrs. Ashley have four children—Jerry Stanley, born Sept. 12, 1856; Ernest P., Feb. 15, 1862; Lewis P., June 15, 1868, and Jessie Helen, Aug. 8, 1870; lost one daughter, Carrie Frances, who died in October, 1863, aged 3½ years. Mr. Ashley was an old-time Whig, and has been a Republican ever since the party was organized; he represented his district in the Assembly two successive terms, to wit, in 1863 and 1864, and was a member of the Board of the Hospital for the Insane, at Madison for eight years; has 50 acres of land connected with his home in Pardeeville, and still owns a half-interest in the flouring-mill at that place.

A. BATES, farmer, Sec. 28; P. O. Wyocena; born Sept. 5, 1822, in Preble Co., Ohio; son of John Bates, a native of Ireland, who removed to Carroll Co., Ind., in 1835, from Ohio. Mr. Bates was married in that county May 15, 1848, to Elizabeth Cline, who was born Jan. 7, 1824, in Muskingum Co., Ohio; daughter of Jacob Cline, a native of Ohio. Mr. Bates came to Wisconsin in 1849; lived in Springvale, Columbia Co., about five years, and in April, 1854, removed to his present location; has eight children—John W., Charles, Thomas, Michael W., Mary E., Amanda M., Robert B., Geo. R. and Sarah Ann. Is Republican; has 147 acres of land, and himself and wife Universalists.

JEREMIAH BLAISDELL, farmer, Sec. 7; P. O. Pardeeville; born Sept. 11, 1798, in Rockingham Co., N. H. Was married, Feb. 7, 1822, to Abigail Brown, who was born March 28, 1803, in Deerfield, Rockingham Co., N. H. Mr. Blaisdell came to Wisconsin in July, 1852, and settled on the farm he now occupies; he learned the carpenter trade when young, commencing at the age of 16; worked in Boston seven years, and followed the business altogether about thirty years. Has five children living—Enoch B., lives in Iowa; Abigail, now Mrs. R. M. Haynes, of the town of Wyocena; Elizabeth, now Mrs. Daniel Marston, of Pacific; Rosetta, now Mrs. A. W. Diefendorf, of Wyocena, and Warren, living on the homestead; lost four—Alpheus J., died Oct. 15, 1834, aged 7 years; Ruth, died Aug. 21, 1831, aged 2 years; John, died Jan. 12, 1835, 6 months old, and Alpheus S., died Jan. 21, 1875, in his 35th year. Mr. and Mrs. Blaisdell are members of the Free-Will Baptist Church; he is a Republican, and has 160 acres of land. Warren Blaisdell was born Aug. 18, 1844, and was married Dec. 5, 1864, to Mrs. Mary Gibbs, daughter of John S. Diefendorf, a native of Montgomery Co., N. Y., who came to Wyocena in 1846; she was the widow of B. F. Gibbs, who died May 19, 1861, aged 30 years; she has two daughters living—Alice M., now Mrs. Albert Phillips, of Portage, and Emma F., now Mrs. O. F. Harter, of Wyocena; has no children by her second marriage.

GEORGE BRIFFETT, hotel-keeper, Pardeeville; born May 31, 1825, in Somersetshire, England; his father died while he was a child, and, in 1839, he, with a brother two years older, came to America, and lived in Onondaga, N. Y., about a year; he then came to Wisconsin, and worked at brick-making about seven years in Kenosha; enlisted in Milwaukee, in the fall of 1847, in the 4th U. S. Infantry, and was in the Mexican war, under Gen. Zach Taylor, about eighteen months; after the close of the war, he went from Vera Cruz to Florida, about the 1st of June, and remained there till the last of August, and was then discharged; he then came back to Wisconsin, and June 26, 1849, was married in Racine Co. (now Kenosha) to Theresa E. Dean, daughter of Jabez Dean, an old soldier of the war of 1812; immediately after marriage, he came to Columbia Co., and put up a frame for a house, where Portage now stands, but failing to get lumber to inclose it, he became discouraged, and left it; he then located on Sec. 12, in what is now the town of Wyocena, and has followed teaming and farming ever since (except when in the army), till November, 1879; then exchanged one of his farms for the hotel in Pardeeville, known as "Diamond Hall," and has kept it since that time; in August, 1864, he enlisted in the 1st Wis. Heavy Artillery, and was in the service about eleven months, most of the time on the Potomac. Has six children—Geo. and Charles, living in Wyocena; Arthur; Sarah, now Mrs. John Brush, of Springvale; Mary, now Mrs. John Hepler, of Pardeeville, and Ella, at home. Has a farm of 160 acres on Sec. 12, in Wyocena.

JAMES BRIFFETT, farmer, Sec. 14; P. O. Wyocena; born July 28, 1820, in Somersetshire, England; came to America in 1856; settled in the town of Wyocena, and has resided there ever since. Was married in England, in 1844, to Mary Ann, daughter of James Davis; has seven children—George, lives in Winona, Minn.; Henry, in Lincoln Co., Minn.; Elizabeth, now Mrs. G. V. Johnson, in Hennepin Co., Minn.; Nathaniel, born in England, now at home; Jane, is now Mrs. Ira Hall, of Poynette, Wis.; Frank, is in Lincoln Co., Minn., and Ellen Mary, at home; has lost four children; three died in infancy in England, and James served three years in the 36th W. V. I., Co. D, and died in Minnesota, in 1877, from disease contracted in the army; George served three years in the 2d W. V. I.; was wounded by a musket-ball through the right shoulder, in the first battle of Bull Run; he was afterward taken prisoner at the battle of Gettysburg, and paroled on the field. Mr. Briffett is a Republican, and has 320 acres of land.

ALANSON A. BULL, farmer, Sec. 19; P. O. Wyocena; was born Feb. 8, 1804, in the town of Wallkill, Orange Co., N. Y. His father, Ebenezer Bull, had a set of blacksmith's tools on his farm to do his own work, and Alanson learned the trade at home before he was 21 years old; when he first went out for himself, he worked at blacksmithing for the Government two and a half years at West Point. He was married, Jan. 27, 1828, to Martha Jane, daughter of John Brooks; she was born in New York City Jan. 21, 1810. After his marriage, he worked at farming two and a half years; then worked at his trade again one winter; then kept a hotel in the town of Mourue, Orange Co., one year; then followed lumbering two years; then sailed a sloop on the Hudson River one season, and then bought a blacksmith's shop at West Point and worked there two years. In the spring of 1840, he went to New York City, and engaged in the milk and butter business; also had a slaughter-house in Hoboken, and a market in New York. He followed business there till the fall of 1848, then came to Wisconsin, and settled in Wyocena Village; he kept a hotel there sixteen months, in a house commenced by Maj. Dickason before his death. In the spring of 1850, he sold his lease and removed to his farm, which he had located in August, 1848, and where he has since resided. He has but two children living—Benjamin Franklin, who lives in the town of Lowville, and John Alanson, who lives in Cleveland, Ohio. Have lost four children—Andrew Jackson, died in New York in 1840, aged 14 years; Mary Ann, died in 1839, at West Point, aged 11 years; Stephen Decatur, died in New York in 1840, aged 4 years; Sarah Elizabeth, married Samuel Barnett, of Cleveland, Ohio, and died in August, 1877, aged 44, leaving a family of eight children. Mr. Bull is a Republican, and has 240 acres of land.

HENRY S. CALVERLEY, farmer, Sec. 7; P. O. Portage City; was born Dec. 7, 1855, in the town of Pacific, Columbia Co., Wis.; son of Stephen Calverley. (See his biography.) He was married, March 6, 1877, to Florence C. Meriton, who was born May 3, 1856, in Portage City, daughter of H. Meriton, a surveyor, and native of England, now living in Portage. Mr. and Mrs. Calverley have but one child—Margaret, born Oct. 12, 1878; have one adopted son—Andrew, about 10 years old. Mr. Calverley is a Republican; has been Treasurer of the School District, and has 122½ acres of land. Mrs. Calverley is a member of the Episcopal Church.

STEPHEN CALVERLEY, Sr., farmer, Sec. 7; P. O. Portage City; was born March 5, 1820, in Yorkshire, England; son of Stephen and Mary (Wilson) Calverley. He was married Nov. 22, 1844, in Slaidburn, England, to Ann Slinger, who was born Aug. 2, 1825, in Slaidburn, daughter of Henry Slinger. Mr. Calverley came to America in 1848, and settled in what is now the town of Pacific, being the first settler in the town except those belonging to the garrison of Fort Winnebago; lived on Sec. 13, in Pacific, till June, 1876; then removed to his present location. He is a Republican, straight, and was either Chairman or Side Supervisor most of the time he lived in Pacific; has also been Town Treasurer, and, when the town was first organized, was Assessor for nine years; has been Chairman of Wyocena two years. He has seven children living—Stephen, Henry, Mary (now Mrs. Orlo Patchen, of Wyocena), Ann (now Mrs. Daniel Smith, of Franklin Co., Neb.), Lucy, Ellen and Elizabeth; his oldest child, Margaret, died Jan. 15, 1874, aged 26 years; Stephen was born May 4, 1850, and was the first white child born in the town of Pacific. Mr. Calverley has divided up 412 acres of land between his two boys and has 93 acres left.

NORMAN COAPMAN (deceased); was born in Hallsville, Montgomery Co., N. Y., July 26, 1830; was married Jan. 13, 1852, in Arcadia, Wayne Co., N. Y., to Kate B. Smith, who was born May 5, 1828, in Ghent, Columbia Co., N. Y., daughter of Jeremiah and Christiana (Van Valkenburg) Smith. Mr. Coapman came to Wisconsin with his family in March, 1855, being on the first passenger train that crossed the suspension bridge at Niagara Falls. They located at that time in the town of Wyocena; lived on the Ellis farm one year, then removed to the village of Wyocena, and resided there till his death, April 6, 1878. He left a widow and four children. The oldest daughter, Alice T., is the wife of Elmer Food, Principal of the high school at Lodi, Wis.; Ida M. is the wife of F. W. Farrington (dentist), of Wyocena; the two sons, W. J. and Lynn N., reside in Wyocena. Mr. Coapman enlisted Oct. 9, 1861, in the 8th W. V. I., but the band, to which he belonged, was mustered out of service by special order, in 1862. After he returned from the army, he went into the grocery business, but sold out when the La Crosse Division of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad was built, and was the first agent appointed by the company at Wyocena, and held the position till his death, except about eight months, while he was learning to telegraph. At his death, his son, W. J., was appointed in his place, and still retains the position. Mr. Coapman was a Republican in politics, and held several town offices during his residence in Wyocena; was Chairman, Supervisor and Town Clerk a number of years. In religious belief, he was a Universalist. His ancestors were among the first settlers of the Mohawk Valley, in New York, and the farm on which he was born and raised was in possession of the Coapman family over one hundred years. His great-grandfather, Abram Coapman, held a major's commission under Gen. Stark, in the Revolutionary war, and his grandfather, Jacob Coapman, held a captain's commission in the war of 1812. His father, John Coapman, was a militia Captain in Montgomery Co., N. Y. Mr. Coapman had three brothers in Wisconsin—Anson lives in the town of Pacific, Columbia Co.; Abram is station agent at Reesville, Dodge Co.; and James W. is District Attorney of Kewaunee Co. Had one sister—Mary E., now Mrs. Charlan Eastman, of Moravia, Cayuga Co., N. Y. Mrs. Coapman and the two sons occupy the homestead, 80 acres with a fine brick residence.

REV. JABEZ B. COLE, Pastor of the Lamartine Methodist Church; was born in Lincolnshire, England, Feb. 12, 1845; he is the son of Rev. Thomas Cole and Elizabeth Brown, and with them, May 4, 1845, set sail from Liverpool for America, and landed in New York City in June following, they came thence to Sheboygan, Wis., where they arrived the 1st day of July; his father purchased a farm in the town of Green Bush, Sheboygan Co., Wis., where he devoted much of his time to farming, and was local minister to the First Methodist Episcopal Church of that town. The subject of this sketch spent the first nineteen years of his life on his father's farm, and attending the district school; he united with the church at the age of 11, and when 19, he entered as a student of the classical course at Lawrence University of Appleton, Wis.; at the end of six years, on account of limited means and ill health, he was forced to leave off his studies at college; he soon joined the conference and was ordained local Deacon; in October, 1871, he joined the conference at Milwaukee, and was assigned to the Clinton Circuit; while there he pursued the course of study prescribed by the canon; in 1872, he was sent to the Wyocena circuit, in Columbia Co., Wis., for two years; here, Oct. 13, 1873, he married Miss Cecelia E., daughter of A. A. and Ruth Cole, early settlers of Welsh Prairie, Columbia Co.; in October, 1874, he was assigned to Shawano, Shawano Co., Wis., where he remained in charge of the church for three years; in 1877, he took charge of the church at Markesan, Green Lake Co., and in 1878, came to the Lamartine charge. They have three children, as follows: Jessie E., born in 1874; Mary R., born in 1876; Charles F., born in April, 1879.

HENRY CONVERSE, retired farmer, Wyocena; born Dec. 28, 1813, in Randolph, Vt., son of Frederick Converse, a native of Connecticut. Mr. Converse left Vermont in March, 1835, stayed one year in New Hampshire, then went to Akron, Ohio, where he lived eleven years, working in a stove and tin shop. In September, 1847, he came to Wisconsin, and lived in Milwaukee till April, 1851; then came to Wyocena, where he has since resided, working at farming and mechanical work. He was married the first time in Vermont, Dec. 39, 1828, to Charlotte Blodgett, who died Jan. 15, 1842, in Akron, Ohio, aged 38, leaving no children. April 23, 1843, at Akron, Ohio, he married Lucy Burnham, who was born July 14, 1814, in South Windsor, Conn. (then called East Windsor). She was a daughter of Elijah Burnham. In politics, Mr. Converse was Republican; held the office of Chairman four terms, in 1853-54

-57-63; was Town Clerk several terms, and was a member of the Assembly in the Legislature of 1857. Mr. and Mrs. Converse both belong to the Universalist Society.

PETER DALTON, farmer, Sec. 25; P. O. Wyoceua; was born in 1824 in County Meath, Ireland; son of Thomas Dalton, who came to America when Peter was a child and settled in St. Lawrence Co., N. Y. Mr. Dalton came to Wisconsin in 1842, lived in Racine about eighteen years, and, in April, 1860, removed to his present location in Wyoceua. Was married in Racine, in 1856, to Elizabeth Mack, who was born Feb. 14, 1840, in Vermont, near Rutland, daughter of Patriek Mack; have had eleven children, nine of whom are living—Jane, Ida, Ellen, Sarah, Charles, Elizabeth, Daniel, Harry and Kate, all at home; one died in infancy, and Frank died Jan. 27, 1880, aged 18 years and 4 months. Mr. Dalton first came to Columbia Co. in 1847, and entered the north half of the southwest quarter of Sec. 25 in Wyoceua, on the 9th day of February of that year, and then returned to Racine and lived there till 1860. He is a Democrat, and has 280 acres of land in his farm; both are members of the Catholic Church.

BENJAMIN DEY, farmer, Secs. 17 and 28; residence Wyoceua; born Feb. 27, 1806, in Seneca Co., N. Y.; son of David Dey, a native of New York City; lived in his native county and followed farming till 24 years old, then went into the mercantile business and followed it six years; then farmed it in Lenawee Co., Mich., two years, and, in the fall of 1844, came to Wisconsin, settled in Wyoceua, and has been engaged in farming and milling ever since, except when in the army. When the war broke out, he went to Missouri as wagonmaster, and, on the 4th of March, 1863, enlisted at St. Louis in the 11th Mo. V. C., Co. D, and remained in the service till the close of the war; was wounded in the thigh by a minie ball in the battle of Jacksonport, Ark., and had his horse shot under him at the same time. Was married, Jan. 15, 1833, in the town of Romulus, Seneca Co., N. Y., to Margaret T., oldest daughter of John Sinclair, a prominent wheat speculator of that county; has five children living—Thompson, lives in the city and State of Oregon, and is a miller by trade; David M. and Robert P., live in Wyoceua Village; Margueretta, is the wife of Judge Harrison Blair, of Union Co., Dakota, and Scott S. attending school and about to enter the law office of Wm. M. Vilas; have lost two children—Catharine S., married Frederick Yale (see his biography), and died Nov. 10, 1878; Benny C., died at the age of 15, in 1866. Mr. Dey is a Democrat, and has a farm of 240 acres. His father, David Dey, was an Orderly under Gen. La Fayette in the Revolutionary war, and his grandfather had a colonel's commission, and furnished supplies for the army. His residence in Bergen Co., N. J., was the headquarters of Washington and La Fayette when they were in that vicinity.

C. S. DOUD, farmer, Sec. 36; P. O. Wyoceua; born May 15, 1824, in Essex Co., N. Y.; son of Samuel Doud, a native of Rutland, Vt. (The name is sometimes incorrectly spelled Dowd.) When 10 years old, his parents removed to Ohio, and lived in Trumbull Co. from 1834 till 1847, then came to Wisconsin and settled in Lowville, and died in 1859, aged 69. Mrs. Doud (whose maiden name was Chloe Leonard) died April 1, 1875, aged 84. Mr. Doud was married in Ohio, Dec. 31, 1846, to Mary Jane Scott, who was born Jan. 10, 1829, in County Tyrone, Ireland, daughter of William Scott, who came to America in 1839 and settled in Ohio. In 1850, he came to Springvale, Columbia Co., Wis., and died in August, 1877, in his 75th year. Mr. Doud first came to Wisconsin in 1844; stayed one year, and then returned to Ohio; he came again in the spring of 1847; lived the first year in Lowville, and, in December, 1848, removed to his present location, which has been his home since. He enlisted, Aug. 30, 1864, in the 1st Wis. Heavy Artillery, Co. M, and remained in the service till the close of the war. Has five children—Helen M., Chloe Jane, Virginia, Wm. James and Augusta; lost one son—Winfield, died Aug. 29, 1848, aged 10 months and 10 days. Mr. Doud built the first lime-kiln in the county on Sec. 6 in Otsego in 1847, and was the first Pathmaster in this precinct before the organization of the county; has since held the office of Supervisor, and is a Republican; has 120 acres of land. Wm. J. (the only son) was married, Jan. 1, 1880, to Corintha Tillotson, who was born Sept. 17, 1860, daughter of Geo. S. Tillotson, of Hampden, Columbia Co., Wis.

JOHN G. DUSENBERY, merchant, Pardeeville; born in the town of Schodack, Rensselaer Co., N. Y., Dec. 24, 1840; son of Morgan H. Dusenbery; came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1860, and settled in the town of Springvale, Columbia Co.; came to Pardeeville in the fall of 1865, and commenced selling goods in November, 1873, which business he still continues. Was married Dec. 13, 1871, to Emily Hepler, daughter of Killian Hepler, an old resident of Pardeeville; has two children—Guy, born Sept. 12, 1872, and Glen, born Aug. 16, 1876. Is Republican in politics.

C. L. FARRINGTON, merchant, Wyoceua; born Sept. 30, 1818, in Onondaga Co., N. Y., town of La Fayette; came to Wisconsin in 1837; lived one year in Milwaukee; then went to Lenawee Co., Mich., and followed farming eleven years; came back to Wisconsin in the fall of 1849, and located on a farm two miles east of Wyocena Village; lived there till the spring of 1851; he then removed to the village, and built a store in company with his brother, E. W. Farrington, now of Portage City, which was the third store in the place; sold goods there four years; then went to Marquette Co., and built a grist mill at Harrisville, where he did business twenty-one years; then sold out, and, in January, 1876, came back to Wyocena, and again went into the mercantile business in company with his son, Willard; firm name, C. L. Farrington & Son, where he still continues to do business. He was married, March 20, 1853, in Wyocena, to Nancy, daughter of Darius and Lucena Lobdell, who came from St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., to Wisconsin in 1849; she was born at Plattsburg, Clinton Co., N. Y., Jan. 17, 1836; have two children—Willard C., born Jan. 26, 1856; married Nov. 19, 1877, to Inez Huyck, and in company with his brother in the dry-goods business; Emerson L., the youngest son, was born Dec. 19, 1869. Mrs. Farrington is a member of the M. E. Church, and Mr. Farrington is a Congregationalist, and Republican in politics.

BRYAN GORMAN, farmer, Sec. 33; P. O. Wyocena; was born in 1826 in County Meath, Ireland; son of Wm. and Catharine Gorman; his mother died when he was about 2 years old, and his father came to this country in 1834; settled in St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., and died there; Mr. Gorman came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1848; lived in Racine one year, and in the fall of 1849, came to Columbia Co., and located in Wyocena, where he has since resided. Was married in Canada, in the summer of 1848, to Mary Williams, who was born in Wales; daughter of Evan Williams; have had eleven children, ten of whom are living—Wm. W., Catharine, Jane, Christopher, John C., Michael W., Mary Ann, Harriet E., Elizabeth A. and Lorena M.; one child died in infancy. All are members of the Catholic Church. He has 180 acres of land, and in politics votes for the best man.

H. GUNDERSON, farmer, Sec. 34; P. O. Wyocena; born Oct. 15, 1830, in Norway; son of Gunder Halverson, who came to America in 1851, and now lives in Dakota; Mr. Gunderson went to sea when about 18 years of age, and followed that business till 1851; in 1850, while making a trip from Liverpool to New Orleans, on board the Leonidas, of Baltimore (which took three months), they were driven from their course by a storm, and before they reached port, lost about one hundred passengers by yellow fever; he was in the hospital at New Orleans about two weeks with the same disease; after his recovery, he made another voyage to Europe, staying some time in France, and finally brought up in New York City in 1851; came to Wisconsin in July, 1852, and lived in Whitewater till the spring of 1869; worked the first five years in a warehouse for Marsh & Putrits; then worked seven years in a paper-mill; dealt in stock, and kept a meat-market one year, and was four years in the Esterly Reaper Works; then, in the spring of 1869, removed to his present location. Was married in Whitewater, in 1855, to Cornelia Targosan, a native of Norway, who came to America with her parents in 1852; has seven children—Carrie A., Annie C., Amelia G., Halbert M., Louisa M., Henry A. and Thomas G. Has 160 acres of land; Lutheran and Republican.

W. W. HASKIN, farmer, Sec. 3; P. O. Pardeeville; born Jan. 8, 1815, in Castleton, Vt.; left there in 1837; went to Rochester, N. Y., and tended bar at the "Eagle Tavern" one year; then went to Lyons, Wayne Co., and went to clerking in a dry-goods store; in 1840, engaged with Gerdon Merrell to come to Wisconsin, and clerked for his brother, Henry Merrell, at Ft. Winnebago, from September, 1840, till January, 1842, and, in the mean time, was appointed Sheriff by Gov. Doty, which office he held two years; after he left the fort, he clerked for Finch & Blanchard, of Madison, about one year and a half, at the same time acting as Deputy Sheriff, under A. A. Bird, two years, being employed as clerk in the store of the "American Fur Co.," at Ft. Winnebago, the last six months of the time. In July, 1845, he returned to New York, and was married in Lyons, Wayne Co., in September, 1845, to Miss Rosette Carpenter, daughter of Samuel Carpenter; he then came back to Wisconsin, tended bar in Milwaukee one winter at the "Cottage Inn;" then went back to Ft. Winnebago, and clerked another year for Mr. Merrill; in May, 1847, he entered 40 acres of land on Sec. 3, where Pardeeville now stands, in company with J. C. Pardee, and afterward bought 160 acres more, and built the first house in Pardeeville, into which he moved in January, 1848, and has resided in the village ever since; has four children living—Julia, now Mrs. A. B. Wheeler, of Pardeeville; Ella, now Mrs. W. K. Rogers, of Leon, Monroe Co., Wis.; Don and Frank, both at home; lost two—Etta died April 15, 1853, aged 11 years, and Lillian died April 13, 1852, aged 2 years and 7 months. Mr. Haskin is a Republican, and held the office of Justice of the Peace one year; has about 100 acres of land, most of it in the village corporation of Pardeeville; his father, T. K. Haskin, came to Wisconsin in 1845; lived at Fox Lake two years; then moved into Ft. Winnebago, and kept a boarding-house there about seven years; then came to Pardeeville, and died in 1852, aged 72 years. Mrs. Haskin, whose maiden name was Fanny Willis, is still living at Pardeeville, keeping house by herself, and doing her own work; when she was a little over 75 years old, she walked from Portage City to Pardeeville, a distance of ten miles, making the trip in about three hours; she takes several newspapers, and spends a good deal of her time in reading, and is very fond of reading history; she was born in Old Deerfield, Mass., and her father, Ebenezer Willis, was an old Revolutionary soldier.

KILIAN HEPLER, hotel-keeper, Pardeeville; born Aug. 14, 1811, in Columbia Co., Penn.; son of George Hepler; went to Medina Co., Ohio, in 1832, and worked at cabinet-making and manufacturing fanning-mills till the spring of 1850, then came to Wisconsin and bought some land, in the town of Wyocena, then returned to Ohio, stayed through the winter and in the spring of 1851 came on with his family and settled in Pardeeville, where he has since resided; he was engaged in manufacturing fanning-mills and dealing in lumber, till the spring of 1863, then went into the "Hepler House" and has kept it ever since. Was married, Nov. 14, 1841, in Ohio, to Elizabeth Renshimer, and has had seventeen children, eight of whom are still living—Margaret, Sarah Ann, Maria, George, John, Emily E., Adam and Catherine; those that died were, Mary, Killian, Charles, Frank, William Henry, Rachel Ann, Daniel, Samuel and Jacob; the first and second died in Ohio. Mr. Hepler is a Democrat and owns 40 acres of land, the "Hepler House," and some other village property in Pardeeville.

WILLIAM JOHNS (deceased) was born Aug. 12, 1802, in Glamorganshire, South Wales. Was married in St. Andrew's Church, Wales, March 8, 1827, to Alice Yorath, who was born about six miles from where her husband was born, in the same shire, March 6, 1806; came to America in 1841, arriving in Boston on the 1st day of July, lived there till the fall of 1852; in the butchering and milk business; came from there to Wisconsin and settled in the town of Springvale, Columbia County; lived there till 1868, then sold his farm and bought a grist-mill in Wyocena, known as the "Bisbee Mill," located on Sec. 23, with 40 acres of land on the same section. Here he remained till his death, May 19, 1875, leaving a widow and six children—David, born June 6, 1828, lives in Tomah, Wis.; Thomas, born Sept. 30, 1830, lives in Mitchell Co., Iowa; Shadrach, born Nov. 12, 1832, is a blacksmith in Waupun; Daniel, born Feb. 11, 1836, lives in Harrison Co., Mo. He was a Lieutenant in Co. H, of the 12th Mo. V. C., and was in the service during the whole of the war of the rebellion except about a year while he was disabled from a gunshot wound in the face, received in action; the first four boys were born in Wales; Meshack was born in Boston, Mass., Nov. 1, 1843, and was married Nov. 18, 1877, to Anna Margaret Farrington, who was born Sept. 12, 1858, in Harrisville, Marquette Co., Wis., daughter of William Albert Farrington, who now lives in Dane Co., Wis.; they have one child, Jessie Alice, born March 16, 1879, in Saline Co., Neb., where he moved in April, 1878, and where he still owns 160 acres of land; he returned to Wisconsin in December, 1879. Is a Republican. The youngest child and only daughter of William Johns, Alice, was married to J. L. Lobdell. (See biography of Darius Lobdell.) Mrs. Johns and her son Meshack occupy the homestead of 40 acres and grist-mill, on Sec. 23, P. O. Wyocena.

DARIUS LOBDELL (deceased) was born Aug. 3, 1808, in Plattsburg, Clinton Co., N. Y. Was married in 1832, to Lucena Moxley, who was born in Eden, Vt., Feb. 20, 1814; came to Wisconsin in November, 1849, and settled on a farm, three miles west of Wyocena, on Sec. 18. He died Aug. 20, 1852, and Mrs. Lobdell died Feb. 17, 1880, leaving eight children—Nauey (now Mrs. C. L. Farrington, of Wyocena); Augustus (living in Benton Co., Minn.); John L., lives in Wyocena; William H., in Pardeeville; Darius, in Wyocena; Ellen, is now Mrs. David B. Johnson, of Richmond, Ind.; Richard, lives in Wyocena, and Emma, is Mrs. Hiram King of Dorchester, Wis. Augustus was in the navy three years during the war of the rebellion; Darius was in the 16th W. V. I. about two years, and William H. was in the 3d Regulars, Co. K, during the whole of the war. John L. was married, Feb. 6, 1878, to Alice C. Johns, daughter of William Johns. (See his biography.) She died July 4, 1879, aged 28 years 6 months and 24 days, leaving no children. He is a Republican and has 160 acres of land, that his father first located, on Sec. 18 P. O. Wyocena.

GEORGE MUGGLETON, farmer, Sec. 27, and steward at the county house, at Wyocena, born Sept. 25, 1826, in Leicestershire, Eng., son of Edward Muggleton. Was married in his native place, Aug. 20, 1855, to Harriet, daughter of Isaac Taylor; she was born March 26, 1827, in the same County; came to America soon after marriage, arriving in New York Oct. 1, 1855; came direct to Columbus Co., Wis., and lived seven years in Lowville; in 1862, returned to England and stayed three and a half years; came back to Wisconsin in June, 1865, and bought a farm in Wyocena, where they resided till April, 1875, when he was appointed to his present position in the county house, and has resided there since; they have three children—Edith A., Ernest E. and Bertha F.; have also one adopted daughter, Maria Jane. He has 140 acres of land; is a Republican, and himself and wife are members of the Baptist Church.

ISAAC OVIATT, farmer, Sec. 30; P. O. Wyocena; born Nov. 27, 1809, in Cambridge, Washington Co., N. Y.; came to Wisconsin in 1855, and settled on the farm he now owns. Was married in Ohio, Sept. 22, 1836, to Elizabeth McNish, who was born Nov. 4, 1810, in Schenectady Co., N. Y.; daughter of James McNish, who went to Ohio in 1832 and settled in Geauga Co. Mr. and Mrs. Oviatt have had eight children, six of whom are living—Mary Ann, is now the wife of Henry O. Tbrall, of Waseca Co., Minn.; Henry M., lives in Wyocena; James C., lives in Beriin, Wis.; Sarah and Isaac, are living at home, and Agnes is the wife of Charles Ellis, of the town of Wyocena; Elizabeth married Theodore Crow, removed to Minnesota and died April 20, 1875; Adaline married Bruce White, and died in Dekorra Sept. 9, 1876. Mr. Oviatt is Republican to the backbone, and has 80 acres of land.

CHARLES J. PARDEE, conveyancer, Pardeeville; born in Wadsworth, Medina Co., Ohio, Sept. 5, 1829; son of John Pardee and brother of John S. Pardee, the founder of Pardeeville; his early life was spent in his father's store, where he learned the dry-goods business, but carried on business for himself about five years in Ohio before coming to Wisconsin; he came to Pardeeville to reside in the spring of 1860, and has made that his home ever since; was Justice of the Peace several years in Ohio and Postmaster three years; in Wisconsin, he has been Justice of the Peace twelve years, Chairman five years, and is the present Town Clerk, although a Democrat in a stroug Republican town; since living in Pardeeville, in addition to his official business, has been engaged in clerking, conveyaneing, etc. Was married July 15, 1851, in Cleveland, Ohio, to Antoinette, daughter of Reuben Stevens, of Connecticut; have three children—Cora E., John Charles and Malcolm Ives, all at home. His brother, John S. Pardee, was born in Skaneateles, Onondaga Co., N. Y., in 1819; when he was 5 years old, his father removed to Medina Co., Ohio, and engaged in the mercantile business; he elerked for his father till 1842, then carried on business for himself in the same place till 1845, then removed to Milwaukee and opened a store, where he continued in business till 1850; from Milwaukee, he went to Pardeeville, where he already owned property and had been carrying on business for some time; in the spring of 1854, he received the appointment of United States Consul to San Juan Del Sur, the Pacific terminus of the Nicaragua route to California, where he died about a month alter his arrival. Mr. Pardee's father, John Pardee, was born in Litchfield Co., Conn., in 1796; removed, with his parents, to Onondaga Co., N. Y., where he remained and followed farming till 1824; then removed to Medina Co., Ohio, and engaged in the mercantile business, in which he continued till 1856, then came to Wisconsin and followed the milling business in Pardeeville till his death, June 26, 1873.

HICKS W. PHELPS, farmer, Sec. 31; P. O. Wyocena; born in Cayuga Co., N. Y., April 14, 1808. Was married in 1830, to Harriet Kellogg, of his native county, who died in November, 1861, aged 52; was again married the same year to Nancy Bloom, whose first husband, Charles P. Bloom, enlisted in the commencement of the war of the rebellion, in the 2d W. V. I., Co. G, and was killed in the second battle of Bull Run; he left one daughter—Hattie H., who is now the wife of George M. Dallas Wright, a hardware merchant of De Kalb Co., Ill. Mr. Phelps came to Wisconsin in 1840, and lived in Racine Co., near where the city of Racine now is, till the fall of 1849; then came to Columbia Co. and has lived in Wyocena ever since; has only two children; his oldest child, Cornelia, was married, first, to Volney Carpenter, who enlisted in the 19th W. V. I., Co. D, and was killed in action on the 27th day of October, 1864; she afterward married a man named McEwen and now lives in Milwaukee; his son, Roldun Phelps, is married and lives in Wyocena. Mr. Phelps has no children by the second marriage; is a Greenbacker, and has 40 acres of land. His father was Samuel Phelps, one of the first settlers in Cayuga Co., N. Y. Mrs. Phelps was a daughter of William Dunham, a native of Vermont, who was in the war of 1812, and died Jan. 24, 1877, aged 88. Although 72 years of age, Mr. Phelps is able to earn $2.50 a day laying stone.

CORNELIUS PHILLIPS, farmer, Sec. 32; P. O. Wyocena; born in County Louth, Province of Leinster, Ireland; son of Patrick and Mary (Skelley) Phillips; came to America in 1843; lived in Kings Co., N. Y., on Long Island, five years, and, in October, 1848, came to Wisconsin; lived in Racine two years, then came to Columbia Co. in September, 1850, and located in Wyocena, where he has since resided. Was married, May 21, 1848, in the State of New York, to Mary Heelley, who died in Wyocena Sept. 15, 1851, leaving no children; was married the second time, Sept. 4, 1853, to Mary Ann Halpin, who was born in County Meath, Ireland; daughter of John Halpin, who came to America and died Jan. 28, 1860, aged 68; Mr. Phillips has eight children—Edward, James, Cornelius, Eleanor, Theresa, Nicholas and Mareella and Mary (twins); the four first mentioned are teachers. Mr. Phillips has held the office of Supervisor several terms and has been Clerk and Collector of the school district for the last eight years. Is a Greenbacker, and all members of the Catholic Chureh. Has 180 acres of land.

GEORGE PURVIS, farmer, Sec. 13; P. O. Wyocena; born April 28, 1826, in Edinburgh, Scotland; son of James I. Purvis. (See his biography.) He remained with his father till 1851, when he was married in Waddington, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., to Margaret Hodg, who died in 1859, leaving one daughter—Jane, now Mrs. William Salisbury, of Olmsted Co., Minn. Was married the second time Dec. 19, 1865, to Rebecca Babcock, who was born July 22, 1845, in New York, daughter of Daniel Babcock, who emigrated to Wisconsin and now lives in Pardeeville; has five children by the second marriage—James, Charles, Thomas, Margaret May and George. He is a Democrat and has been a Supervisor three terms. Has been a member of the Masonic Fraternity about eighteen years; has 240 acres of land in his home farm and 320-acre farm in Olmsted Co., Minn., where he lived about a year and a half, and then returned to his first love in Wyocena.

JAMES I. PURVIS, farmer, Sec. 14; P. O. Wyocena; born June 4, 1801, in Berwickshire, Scotland; son of George and Isabell (Ingalls) Purvis; he was bound out to learn the tailor's trade when 10 years old and served till he was 17; when 20 years of age, he obtained the position of foreman in one of the principal establishments in the city of Edinburgh, where he remained till March 18, 1828. Was married in Edinburgh in 1824 to Rebecca, daughter of Walter Wear, a portrait painter or "limner" (as they are called there); she was born Feb. 16, 1802; they started for America on the 4th of March, 1828, and landed in New York City on the 2d of May; he lived in New York about six months, then went to St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., and went into business for himself in the town of Waddington; three years after, he bought a farm of 70 acres in an adjoining town and carried that on in addition to his other business till the summer of 1844, when he sold out both and started for Wisconsin, arriving at Racine on the 5th of August; he lived in Racine Co. till Nov. 3, 1847, then came with his family to Columbia Co. and settled on the farm he now owns in Wyocena, having purchased about a year previous to that time. Mr. and Mrs. Purvis have had ten children, five of whom are still living; George lives on Sec. 13, Wyocena; Thomas lives in Olmsted Co., Minn.; John lives on the homestead; Elizabeth is now Mrs. B. S. Vradenburg, of Sec. 4, Wyocena, and Jane is the wife of Royal Hawkins, of Olmsted Co., Minn.; three children died in infancy; Rebecca died when 3 years old, and Walter W. died in the army soon after the battle of Pittsburg Landing, in which he was engaged; was in the 18th W. V. I., Co. F. Mr. Purvis is a Republican and has been Town Treasurer three terms and Supervisor several terms; has thirty-four grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Mr. and Mrs. Purvis are members of the First Congregational Church of Wyocena. He has 300 acres of land in company with his son John, who was married in 1866 to Emma Price and has seven children—Rebecca, Frank, Sarah, James, Walter, Olive and Mary, all at home.

HIRAM W. ROBLIER, farmer, Sec. 15; resides at Wyocena; was born May 7, 1824, in Big Flats, Chemung Co., N. Y. Was married at Horseheads, same county, in May, 1855, to Deborah Rowley, daughter of Judah Rowley; she was born in Steuben Co., N. Y., Oct. 7, 1831. Mr. Roblier came to Wisconsin in 1853 and lived in Lowville one year; then removed to Wyocena and has resided there since. In politics, Republican; has held various local offices; was Chairman of the Town Board three years, and, in 1858, was elected Superintendent of the Poor of Columbia Co. and re-elected at each successive election of the Board and still retains the position; was Superintendent of Schools two years in New York, two years in Pennsylvania, one year in Michigan and two years in Wisconsin; taught school twenty-one terms in the four States above mentioned, and represented his Assembly District in the Wisconsin Legislature of 1874, receiving 719 votes, against 367 for J. W. Robinson, and received every vote except two in his own town. Has no children of his own, but has an adopted son (William) about 10 years old; has 235 acres of land.

R. O. SPEAR, merchant, grain and stock dealer, and member of the firm of Falkner & Spear, of Pardeeville; was born March 11, 1841, in the town of Friendship, Allegany Co., N. Y.; son of Charles (see his biography); remained on the farm with his father till he was 21 years old, and, in September, 1864, enlisted in the 1st Wis. Heavy Artillery, Co. F, and remained in the service till the close of the war, as Sergeant of Co. F; after he returned from the army, was engaged in the grain, stock and produce business in Rio, Wis., about four years, in company with O. D. Van Dusen, firm of Van Dusen & Spear. In the summer of 1878, he went to Iowa, and bought 480 acres of land in Lyon Co., which he still owns. The next fall he returned to Wisconsin and bought the warehouse at Pardeeville, and engaged in business there, which he still continues, buying grain, stock and all kinds of produce. March 8, 1880, he bought a one-half interest in the principal dry-goods store of Pardeeville, Mr. Lawton retiring from the firm of Lawton & Falkner, and Mr. Spear taking his place—firm of Falkner & Spear; keep a general assortment of dry goods, groceries, hardware, clothing, boots and shoes, Yankee notions, etc. Was married Sept. 11, 1869, to Sabra B. Rowley, who was born in Chemung Co., N. Y.—daughter of Judah Rowley. Mr. and Mrs. Spear have four children—Hiram E., Alice, Eva May and Edith. Has 480 acres of land in Iowa, and a residence in the village of Wyocena.

CHARLES SPEAR, farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. Wyocena; born in Redding, Windsor Co., Vt., May 31, 1812; son of Elijah Spear, who emigrated to Allegany Co., N. Y., when he was 10 years old. Mr. Spear was married in Cuba, Allegany Co., Nov. 3, 1836, to Electa Talcott, who was born Nov. 4, 1818, in Manchester, Conn., eight miles from Hartford—daughter of Rodolphus and Anna Talcott. Mr. Spear came to Wisconsin in May, 1845, and lived in Racine Co. till the next February; in October, 1845, he came to Columbia Co., and located some land in Wyocena, on Sec. 22, and came up with a part of his goods the next March, and his family came on in June, 1846, and have since made this their home. Has seven children—Priscilla (now Mrs. Jesse Seaver, of Milton, Rock Co., Wis.), R. O. Spear (now resides in Wyocena, and is in the dry-goods business at Pardeeville), Amerett (now Mrs. Hugh Hill, of Saline Co., Neb.), Eliza (now Mrs. James Patchen, of Ohmsted Co., Minn.), M. W. Spear (living on the homestead), Americus (living in Moody Co., Dakota), and F. N. Spear, the youngest son, 17 years old, at home. Mr. Spear is a Republican, and was the first Justice of the Peace in this precinct, before the town was organized. He married the second, third and fourth couples married in the town, but not the first; has 163 acres of land. Mr. Spear is a member of the Baptist Church.

HENRY C. STANLEY, farmer, Sec. 9; P. O. Wyocena; born April 22, 1842, in Randolph, Orange Co., Vt.; son of Theodore S. Stanley, who came to Wisconsin in 1855, and settled in Wyocena, where he still resides. Henry C. was married, Oct. 1, 1867, to Ada E. Twitchell, who was born Sept. 12, 1848, being the third white child born in the town of Wyocena; she was a daughter of Moses W. Twitchell, a native of New Hampshire, who came to Wisconsin about 1846, and is now living in the town of Wyocena. Mr. and Mrs. Stanley have two children—Belle, born May 10, 1870, and Guy, born April 11, 1879. Mrs. Stanley is a member of the Congregational Church; he is a Republican, and has held the offices of Town Treasurer, Town Clerk and Justice of the Peace; has 220 acres of land in his farm. Enlisted in the 23d W. V. I., Co. F, in August, 1862, and was mustered out July 4, 1865; was in sixteen battles, and received a flesh wound in the arm in a skirmish at Carrion Crow Bayou, in Western Louisiana.

JAMES W. STEELE (deceased) was born Oct. 11, 1837, in Oneida Co., N. Y.; his father, James Steele, died when he was 6 years old, and his mother came to Wisconsin in 1845, when he was 8 years old, and lived in Madison a few years; then went to Elkhorn, Walworth Co., and when he was 14 years old came to Wyocena; about two years after she removed to Newark, N. J., where she died when he was about 16 years old; he learned the cabinet-maker's trade in Newark, and worked in that place till he was 20 years old; then came back to Wyocena, and worked at his trade till his marriage, Nov. 8, 1859, to Louisa M., daughter of Linus and Nancy Blair, who came from Erie Co., N. Y., to Wisconsin in 1845, and came to Wyocena in the fall of 1848, and settled on Sec. 34, two miles south of Wyocena Village, where they spent the remainder of their days; he died Dec. 7, 1862, aged 70, and Mrs. Blair died Nov. 28, 1864, aged 62, leaving four children—William M., Eliza J., Louisa M. and Harrison. Mr. Blair was a Deacon in the Congregational Church of Wyocena from its organization till his death. Mr. Steele commenced farming in Lowville the spring after his marriage, and in March, 1864, enlisted in the 36th W. V. I., Co. H, and was in the service fourteen months; soon after returning from the army he sold his farm in Lowville and bought in Sec. 34, in Wyocena, lived there three years, and then removed to the village of Wyocena, and worked at his trade till about two weeks before his death; then returned to the farm and died Nov. 6, 1875, from disease contracted in the army; he left a widow and four children, but was soon followed by his two little daughters, who died of diphtheria—Agnes L., on the 9th of November, 1875, being the day after her father was buried, nearly 12 years old, and Emma E., the 12th of December following, aged 9 years; the oldest son, J. Willie, and the youngest, Charlie H., are living on the homestead with their mother. P. O. Wyocena; have 120 acres of land. Mrs. Steele is a member of the Congregational Church.

W. J. TOWNER, blacksmith, Wyocena; born Dec. 1, 1823, in St. John's, Lower Canada; came to Wisconsin about 1846, and lived in Burlington and Vienna, Walworth Co., till the spring of 1848; then came to the village of Wyocena, and built the second blacksmith-shop in the village; lived there about three years; then went on a farm three miles east of the village, and lived there till 1870, then sold the farm, came to the village, and has worked at his trade ever since; he is now building a hotel which is nearly completed, to be called the "Towner House," a neat two-story frame building, 22x22 feet, well located. Mr. Towner was married in Genesee, Walworth Co., about 1847, to Miss A. C. Wood, of Vienna; has six children living—Thomas, George, Ada, Louisa, Etta and Lotie; have lost two—John and Lovina. He enlisted in October, 1864, in the 1st Wis. Heavy Artillery, Co. F, and was discharged at the close of the war.

M. W. TWITCHELL, farmer, Secs. 14 and 23; P. O. Wyocena; born March 21, 1816, in Sullivan Co., N. H. He was married in Cheshire Co., N. H., Oct. 18, 1842, to Mary M. Mann, who was born May 22, 1819, in that county, on the farm formerly owned by her grandfather; Mr. Twitchell first came to Wisconsin in 1846, located land in Springvale, Columbia Co., and then returned to New Hampshire for his family; he arrived in Springvale in June, 1847, and the next October removed to his present location in the town of Wyocena. Have two children—Ada E., now Mrs. H. C. Stanley, of Wyocena (see his biography), and Mendelson E., who was born Sept. 30, 1850, and married July 27, 1875, to Miss Marauda Salsbury, daughter of S. H. Salsbury, one of the first settlers of Wyocena; they have one child, Jesse, born Oct. 8, 1877. Mr. Twitchell is a Republican, and has held the office of Supervisor one year, Chairman one year, Town Treasurer and Justice of the Peace, which office he now holds; owns land; Mrs. Twitchell is a Congregationalist.

ISAAC VALENTINE, farmer, Sec. 20; P. O. Wyocena; was born Aug. 13, 1818, in Saratoga Co., N. Y., town of Charlton; son of John C. Valentine; learned the miller's trade when young; came West in the fall of 1843, and lived in Lake Co., Ill., till the spring of 1844; then went to Milwaukee, and remained there till the next August; then lived in Beloit a few months, and went from there to Delavan, where he remained three years. He was married while living at Delavan, Jan. 27, 1847, in the town of Libertyville, Lake Co., Ill., to Lucy Ann, daughter of Parker and Emma Pierson, natives of New Hampshire, who came to Illinois in 1839; in the spring of 1847, he went to Waupun, and lived there till February, 1851, then went to De Pere, Brown Co., and from there came in June, 1852, to his present location, and has followed farming since. Enlisted Sept. 1, 1864, in the 1st Wis. Heavy Artillery, Co. M, and was in the service till the close of the war. Has only one child, P. P. Valentine, born Aug. 17, 1851. He is a Republican, and has held the office of Supervisor one year in Wyocena; both are members of the Episcopal Church.

O. D. VAN DUSEN, grain and lumber dealer, Pardeeville; was born March 31, 1832, in Geesee Co., N. Y.; came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1850 and located in the town of Marcellon; lived there till 1858 on Sec. 9; then went to Marcellon Village, and lived there two years, and in the fall of 1860, removed to Pardeeville, where he has been engaged in his present business ever since. Was married, in 1854, to Emeline Ensign, daughter of Wm. J. Ensign; has six children—Leona E., Emily E., Cornelia, Grant Bertha and Floy, all at home. Is a Republican, and has been Supervisor two terms. Mrs. Van Dusen is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

JOHN B. VAN SCHAICK, retired farmer, Pardeeville; born February, 1818, in Schoharie Co., N. Y.; son of Josiah Van Schaick, who removed to Onondaga Co. when he was 7 years old. He was married in that county, in 1847 to Sopronia Adams, who died April 30, 1877; he came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1855 and settled in the town of Springvale, Columbia Co., and lived there till September, 1879, on his farm, which he still owns; has 151 acres on Secs. 8 and 17; has six children—Mary (now Mrs. J. H. Delany, of Minnesota); Harriet Adelia (now Mrs. E. P. Upham, of Springvale); Sarah Louisa (now Mrs. James Cowley, of Springvale); Charles J. (living at Black River Falls); Thomas D. (lives at Eau Claire) and Rose Josephine; they lost three, not married. Was married the second time, Sept. 21, 1878, to Mrs. Susan Falconer, who was born in the city of Norwich, England, Feb. 22, 1826; daughter of Thomas Wieks, who came to New York City in 1830, where she afterward married John W. Falconer and lived in the city till 1855. Mr. Falconer died June 12, 1878, in Columbia Co., Wis., leaving six children—Russell C. (living in Pardeeville); Mary H. (now Mrs. S. W. Briggs, of Dunn Co., Wis.); Elizabeth, John S., Frank and Henry. Mrs. Van Schaick was appointed Postmistress in the fall of 1877, and still holds the office, also keeps a drug-store in connection with it. Mr. V. still owns a farm of 151 acres on Secs. 8 and 17 in Springvale, and is running a meat-market in Pardeeville. He is a Republican, and both are members of the M. E. Church.

JOHN WATERS, farmer, Secs. 24 and 25; P. O. Wyocena; born the 15th day of April, 1823 or 1824, in County Cork, Ireland; son of Daniel Waters, who came to America when he was only 10 years old; stayed in Upper Canada one winter, then went to St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., and died Nov. 8, 1855, aged 62 years. Mrs. Waters died in Portage City about 1872, aged 65. Mr. Waters was married in St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., Feb. 17, 1852, to Margaret Jane Bacon, who died Sept. 24, 1877, in Wyocena, aged 41, leaving seven children—Daniel J. (working on the C. & N.-W. R. R.); William Charles (railroading in Iowa); John J., Michael, Edward, Thomas, George and Mary Agnes (the last five at home). Mr. Waters came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1856, and settled on the farm he now owns, and has occupied it ever since. In politics, Independent, and a member of the Catholic Church. Has 120 acres of land.

FREDERICK YALE, farmer, Sec. 26; P. O. Wyocena; born July 24, 1824, in Augusta, Oneida Co., N. Y.; came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1849, and settled on the farm he now occupies. Was married, July 4, 1855, in Kingston, Green Lake Co., Wis., to Catharine S. Dey, who died Aug. 13, 1879, aged 44, leaving two children—Kent, who lives in Dakota, and Freddie, at home. Was married the second time, Feb. 24, 1880, to Hannah, daughter of Geo. W. Willard, a native of Vermont, who died in Springvale March 23, 1878. Mrs. Yale is a member of the M. E. Church. Mr. Yale started the first lumber-yard in Pardeeville, when the railroad was first completed to that place, and was a member of the first agricultural society in the county. Has a farm of 440 acres; is a Democrat, and one of the heaviest taxpayers in the town of Wyocena. In 1877, he found a piece of native copper on his farm, which weighed 120 pounds.

TOWN OF WINNEBAGO.

GEORGE BAIN, farmer, Sec. 15, P. O. Portage City; born March 9, 1845, at Roslin, Scotland, six miles from Edinburgh; son of George and Margaret (Longmuir) Bain, who came to America in 1850 (with the old Potter Society); settled in Moundville, Marquette Co., Wis.; Mr. Bain died Feb. 3, 1880, aged 77 years; Mrs. Bain is still living, at the age of 70; George spent his early life on his father's farm, and was married, June 25, 1874, to Eliza Ann, daughter of Thomas and Fanny (Bonell) Moss, natives of Crewe, England, who came to America in 1849, and, in the fall of that year, settled in Marquette Co., Wis.; Mr. Moss enlisted, in October, 1864, in the 1st Wis. Heavy Artillery, Co. I, and remained in the service till the close of the war; he died Aug. 5, 1865, of chronic diarrhoea, contracted in the army; Mrs. Moss is still living in Marquette Co., aged 50 years. Mrs. Bain was born Dec. 19, 1851, in Moundville, Marquette Co., Wis.; she is an Episcopalian, and Mr. Bain a Presbyterian; he came to Columbia Co. in 1871, and bought his farm in March of that year; from that time till he was married, he worked on the farm summers ("keeping bach.") and spending his winters in Marquette Co., in his old home. He is a Republican; has been Supervisor of the town, and has 120 acres of land. Mr. and Mrs. Bain have one little daughter—Fannie Margaret, born Sept. 10, 1876, a "Centennial rosebud."

CHARLES BAKER, farmer, Sec. 2; P. O. Portage City; was born June 14, 1823, in Somersetshire, England; when 3 years old, his father, William Baker, died. He remained in England until 1839, then came to America; lived in Canada about six years; then returned to England and lived there about a year, during which time he was married, June 7, 1847, to Priscilla Stubbins, and in August following, came to America; came to Wisconsin April 15, 1848, and lived in Kenosha (then Southport) until the next May; then he came to Columbia Co., located the land he now owns in Fort Winnebago, and then returned for his family; came on the June following, and has resided in the town and on the same farm ever since. His first wife died in September, 1862, aged 55; he was then married the second time, Jan. 21, 1863, to Clarissa Halloway, who was born Feb. 22, 1841, and died Dec. 14, 1867; was married to the third wife March 12, 1868, with whom he is now living; her maiden name was Lura Hall, daughter of Daniel Hall, and a widow of Jessie Howe, who died in August, 1875. Mr. Baker has seven children living, five by the first wife and two by the second—Edmund S., Charles Wm., Priscilla Ruth, George W., Robert Ralph, Andrew Johnson and Joanna Emery; lost three children—Albert J., Henry E. and Caroline E. Mr. Baker joined the Odd Fellows in Canada in 1845, and he is the oldest Odd Fellow and the oldest settler in the town of Fort Winnebago. His oldest son, Edmund S., was born Oct. 27, 1848, and was the first white child born in the town outside of the garrison of the fort. Mr. Baker has been Chairman, Assessor, Treasurer, and Justice of the Peace several terms, and he has 500 acres of land in his farm.

WILLIAM CLARK, retired, farmer, Sec. 13; P. O. Portage City; was born in Saratoga Co., N. Y., at Ballston Spa, June 13, 1797. He learned the tanner's trade when young, and worked at it till 17 years old; then enlisted in the army during the war of 1812, under Col. David Rogers; was in the service about four months; then he returned home, and soon after went to Otsego Co., N. Y., where he was married, Jan. 20, 1820, to Nancy Campbell, who died in 1833, aged 40. He was married again in March, 1835, to Polly Standish, who died in October, 1862, aged 63. He was married the third time, April 5, 1863, in Fort Winnebago, to Damaris Murray, who died Feb. 15, 1873. Soon after his first marriage. Mr. Clark went to Cortland Co., N. Y., and lived in the town of Willett until 1851; then came to Wisconsin, and lived in Marcellon till 1861; then he sold out and removed to his present location. Mr.

Clark has seven children living, the first four by his first wife—Eliza (now Mrs. Henry Mowers, of Big Spring, Adams Co., Wis.), George C., William (also in Big Spring), and Henrietta (now the widow of Rev. Almon Rounds, a Baptist minister, lately deceased); the children of his second wife were John W. and R. D. (who is practicing medicine in Plymouth Co., Iowa), and Catharine Laura (who died when 3 years old). John W. Clark was born July 6, 1838, in Cortland Co., N. Y., town of Willett, and was married, Sept. 1, 1865, to Ella E. Keeder, who was born April 26, 1840; they have five children—Judith A., Wm. Arthur, Wesley Eugene, Laura Evaline and Alfred, all at home. He enlisted Jan. 30, 1862, in the 16th U. S. L., Co. A., 2d Battery, and was in the service three years, participated in eight battles, and skirmishes too numerous to mention. He is a Republican, and lives on the old homestead of 120 acres, and his father lives with him.

JAMES CLITHERO, farmer, Sec. 4; P. O. Portage; was born in July, 1812, in Lancashire, England, son of Henry Clithero. He was married in England in May, 1835, to Mary, daughter of Richard Chiphendle; she was born in Lancashire in 1808; Mr. Clithero came to America in 1849, and settled in Fort Winnebago, on the farm he now occupies, and where he has since resided; has five children living—Jane (now Mrs. John Turner, of Portage City), Henry (lives in Lowville), James (lives in Kansas), Thomas (lives at Geneva Lake, Wis.), and George (lives at De Pere, Wis.); have lost two—Alice married David Wiseman, of Indiana, and died in February, 1876, aged 42, and Elizabeth married William Elliott, of Moundville, Marquette Co., Wis., and died Nov. 9, 1878, aged 40. Mr. Clithero is a Republican in politics, and has been Supervisor, and was School District Treasurer three times in succession; has also been Postmaster most of the time since he lived in the town; both are members of the Episcopal Church, and he has 173 acres of land; he is still carrying on his farm, and Mrs. Clithero, although nearly 72 years of age, does all of her housework, and takes care of the milk of seven cows, and not a gray hair in her head.

JOHN B. COOK, farmer, Sec. 23; P. O. Portage; was born in the town and county of Schoharie, N. Y., son of Richard and Lanina (Butler) Cook, natives of Connecticut. He was first married in Schoharie Co. in 1836 to Anna Maria Zea, a cousin of Gen. Banck of that State; she died in 1839, leaving no children. He was again married in the same county in 1840 to Sarah Ann Anthony, with whom he is still living. Mr. Cook learned the carpenter's trade while a boy, commencing at the age of 16, and worked at it over fifty years; came to Wisconsin in 1841, and lived in Walworth Co. till the fall of 1850, then removed to his present location in Columbia Co.; has five children—Kneeland B., Elbert F., Anna Maria, Seth C. and Clara E., the first three teachers. Kneeland was in the army a few months during the last part of the war in the 52d W. V. I., Co. B. Mr. Cook is a Democrat, and has 100 acres of land, and himself and wife are Universalists.

ABRAM DATES (deceased) was a native of Cayuga Co., N. Y., and was married in that county in 18— to Polly C. Henry, who was born in the same county in 18—, daughter of Levi Henry. Mr. Dates was a miller in his younger days, but after his marriage he went to farming; came to Wisconsin in 1845, landing in Racine on the 18th day of May, lived in that county seven years; came to Columbia Co. in the spring of 1852, and settled in Fort Winnebago on Sec. 1, where he resided till his death Oct. 23, 1875, in the 60th year of his age; in January, 1863, he purchased what was known as French's mill in Sec. 1, and ran that in addition to his farming while he lived. During his residence in Columbia Co., he was called upon to fill many offices of public trust, and always discharged his duties with marked fidelity; in all the relations of life, both public and private, he maintained an unsullied reputation, and his name will be held in cherished remembrance by all old settlers; he left a widow and four children—Levi H., William W. and George D., his only daughter, Mary A., born May 18, 1843, was married Jan. 12, 1868, to Kneeland B. Cook, who was born Oct. 30, 1841, lives on Sec. 24, and has 140 acres of land, and two children—Caroline L., born June 12, 1869, and Jay B., born Nov. 6, 1878. Mr. Cook was the oldest son of John B. Cook, of Fort Winnebago.

MRS. POLLY DATES (widow), Sec. 1; P. O. Portage City; was the wife of Abram Bates, one of the old settlers of Fort Winnebago. [See his biography.] She was born Dec. 17, 1821, in Cayuga Co., N. Y., daughter of Levi and Arela (Bowker) Henry, both natives of Cayuga Co.; Mr. Henry was a farmer and spent his whole life in his native county; he was born March 22, 1800, and died Oct. 11, 1860. Mrs. Henry is still living at the age of 75. Mrs. Dates and her son George, who is unmarried, are living on the homestead, which consists of a 100-acre farm, and the grist-mill known as Dates' Mill; which was built in 1857, by the Chapman brothers, on the site of the old saw-mill known as French's mill, built in 1847; have 3 acres of land with the mill, and also 40 acres in Marcellon.

CALVIN EASTMAN, farmer, Sec. 10; P. O. Portage City; born in Chittenden Co., Vt., Dec. 27, 1827; when he was 5 years old, his father, Calvin Eastman, removed with his family to Cayuga Co., N. Y., town of Brutus; lived there three years; then five years in Jefferson Co., N. Y., and, in 1844, came to Wisconsin and lived in Kenosha Co. till the spring of 1850; then came to Columbia Co. and settled on Sec. 10, in the town of Fort Winnebago, where he resided till his death, May 8, 1871, aged 71. His mother, whose maiden name was Ardela Crain, is still living on the old homestead, at the age of 77, and still able to weave four yards a day, beside doing her housework and taking care of the milk of two cows; she has been a member of the M. E. Church over sixty years, and Mr. Eastman was a member the last forty years of his life, and his house was a "minister's home," without regard to the denomination to which they belonged. Calvin, Jr., was married in November, 1853, to Charlotte V. Baldwin, who was born Sept. 27, 1820, in Genesee Co., N. Y., daughter of Asa Baldwin, who came to Wisconsin in 1847, and to Fort Winnebago in the fall of 1849; she taught the first organized school in what was then District No. 1, in Portage, and taught nine terms in the same school. Mr. and Mrs. Eastman have but one child, Hiram C., Feb. 22, 1858; he had one sister, Laura, who married A. T. Spicer; he died May 14, 1858, and she died April 12, 1874, leaving one daughter, Carrie Ardella, who is living with her grandmother. Mr. Eastman is a Republican, and has 220 acres of land in his farm. May 26, 1850, the first Sabbath after the arrival of his parents in Columbia Co., they held the first religious services, and organized the first Sabbath school in the town at the log house of Avery T. Spicer, their son-in-law.

JAMES M. FORREST, farmer, Sec. 24; P. O. Portage City; born June 13, 1812, in Merrimack Co., N. H. Has been married four times; his first wife was Almira T. Ames, who died in 1847, after a married life of seven years, leaving three children—Adaline E. (now Mrs. Joseph E. Wells, of Portage City) and G. A. Forrest, who is now a lawyer in Manitowoc; Susan was married to James Oviat, and died in March, 1876. His second wife was Laura F. Waters, who died after three years of married life, leaving no children. The third wife was Matilda Abbott, who lived four years after marriage, and died without issue. His fourth wife, with whom he is now living, was Susan H. Sargent, who was born Sept. 24, 1828, in Stratford, Belknap Co., N. H., daughter of Challis Sargent. Mr. Forrest came to Wisconsin in 1850, and settled on the farm he now owns. Has been Chairman of the town and School Superintendent. Is Republican. Has 217 acres of land. Both are members of the M. E. Church.

D. M. GALLOWAY, farmer, Sec. 10; P. O. Port Hope; was born June 28, 1828, in Fifeshire, Scotland; son of George and Jane (Miller) Galloway; came to America in the spring of 1851; came direct to Wisconsin; lived in Waupun the first summer, and the next fall located land in the town of Buffalo, Marquette Co.; remained there three years, and in the fall of 1854 returned to Scotland and remained one year; in the fall of 1855 came again to America, bringing with him his parents and five sisters (he being the only son); his mother died in December, 1876, aged 87 years, and his father is still living in Marquette Co., at the age of 79. Mr. Galloway was married, Dec. 9, 1856, to Sarah Muir, who was born Feb. 19, 1836, in Dunbar, Scotland, in the shire of East Lothian, daughter of Daniel and Anna (Gilrie) Muir, who came to America in 1849 and settled in Buffalo, Marquette Co., Wis., and are living there still. Mr. Galloway has three children living—Anna G., J. Ceelia and S. V. Gracie—all at home; his only son, George E., was accidentally drowned in the Fox River while bathing, June 8, 1879, on his 19th birthday. In politics, Mr. Galloway is Republican, and himself and wife are members of the Baptist Church. He has 173 acres of land.

JAMES GAMBLE, farmer, Sec. 12; P. O. Portage City; born in County Antrim, Ireland, in 1816; son of David and Margaret Gamble, both of whom died in Ireland; they had one son in America at the time of their death, and soon after a daughter, who was married to Isaac Cochran, came over with her husband, bringing James, who was then about 12½ years old, with them; they settled in the State of Maine, where James was married when he was 21, to Margaret Donnel, who died Sept. 29, 1877, in Fort Winnebago, aged about 60; soon after his marriage, he went to Providence, R. I.; lived there twelve and a half years; then, in 1853, came to Wisconsin and located on his present farm. Has eight children living—Mary, David, Eliza, James, John, Robert, William and Nellie; lost two, one died in infancy, and Peter died at the age of 17; his youngest daughter, Nellie, lives at home, and keeps house for her father. He is not a member of any church. Has about 200 acres of land.

JAMES HUME, Sr. (retired); Sec. 3; P. O. Post Hope; born Feb. 17, 1811, in Linlithgowshire, Scotland, Parish of Bathgate; son of James and Janet Hume. Was married the first time in his native place, in February, 1831, to Ann Walker, who died Sept. 14, 1875; he was married again, Sept. 14, 1876, to Alvira Perkins, who was born Oct. 20, 1823, in Newtown, N. H., daughter of Samuel Eastman, and widow of Wyatt Perkins, who died in the army in 1865, was in Co. I, 37th W. V. I.; Mr. Hume has four children living—James, Robert; Janet, now Mrs. Edward Bennett, of Butler Co., Iowa, and Margaret, now Mrs. John Ellis, of Marquette Co., Wis.; Mrs. Hume has three children by the first husband—Charles E., Frank, and Mary, now Mrs. George Cuff of Marcellon. Mr. Hume is a Republican; has been Supervisor three terms, and is a Presbyterian; Mrs. Hume is a Methodist; he has 105-acre farm in Buffalo, Marquette Co., and 2½ acres with his residence on Sec. 31, in Fort Winnebago; Mr. Perkins came to Wisconsin in 1847, and lived in Dane Co. ten years, then in Richland Co., five or six years, then came to Columbia Co., and lived two years in Dekorra, and she lived after that in Marquette Co. till her marriage with Mr. Hume; Mr. Hume came to America in 1850.

A. Z. MALTBY, farmer, Sec. 15; P. O. Portage City; born March 5, 1833, in Cayuga Co., N. Y. Was married in Cortland Co. N. Y., at Cincinnati, in 1852, to Lois Rogers, who died in June, 1857, leaving three children—Herman, Belle and Ada; Herman died in 1872, aged 19; Belle is now Mrs. E. S. Baker, of Portage City, and Ada lives at home and is unmarried. Mr. Maltby was married the second time in Tompkins Co., N. Y., in 1857, to Deborah Bangs, who was born Feb. 27, 1825, in that county; came West in 1867, and settled in his present location; has three children by the second marriage—Elisha, Mary and George; lost one child, Adolphus, died in 1866, at the age of 6 months. In politics, Republican, and is the present Assessor of the town; has 85 acres of land; Mrs. Maltby is member of the M. E. Church; he learned the cabinet-maker's trade when young, commencing it at the age of 14, and followed that business till he came to Wisconsin.

AARON SANDFORD (deceased), was born Aug. 21, 1832, in Oneida Co., N. Y., in the town of Dalton; son of Aaron and Sarah Sandford; came to Wisconsin in 1850 and located in the town of Ft. Winnebago. Was married June 2, 1856, to Sarah L. Eastman, daughter of Calvin Eastman, Sr., whose biography is given in connection with that of his son, Calvin, Jr.; she was born Aug. 11, 1833, in Poultney, Vt. Mr. Sandford enlisted in March, 1863, in the 3d W. V. C., Co. B, and died on the 23d of the next August, at Little Rock, Ark.; he left two children—Calvin Irving, born April 7, 1861, and Charles Gilbert, Sept. 20, 1862. Mrs. Sandford and the two boys are living on the homestead; own 30 acres of land; P. O. Portage City. Mrs. Sandford is guardian for Miss Carrie A. Spicer, daughter of Avery T. and Laura C. (Eastman) Spicer.

RUSSEL SPICER, farmer, Sec. 4; P. O. Portage City; born Nov. 6, 1814, Otsego Co. N., Yo.; son of Shubel and Sally (Coates) Spicer; when 6 years old, his parents removed to Allegany Co. N. Y., where he spent his early life, and was married there, July 12, 1840, to Christiana Wright, who died Dec. 16, 1859, aged 39 years; was married again, Feb. 6, 1861, to Catharine Collins, who was born March 26, 1820, in Tyrone, North of Ireland, and came to America with her parents when 2½ years old. Mr. Spicer came to Wisconsin in September, 1849, and settled on the farm he now owns, and has resided there ever since; has eight children—Amos, lives in Monroe Co., Wis.; Elizabeth, now Mrs. Ross Gamble, of Nebraska; Christiana, now Mrs. John W. Chase, also of Nebraska; Tacey, at home; Wm. S. in Nebraska; Mary A., Joseph R. and Clinton R. at home, the last two by the second wife. He is a Republican, and has 160 acres of land. Both are members of the Baptist Church.

JOHN SWEANEY (deceased), was a native of County Derry, Ireland, and his wife was a native of the same county; came to America in 1842; lived temporarily in Clinton Co., N. Y., near Plattsburg; also in St. John's, Canada East, and New Hampshire, near Concord; came to Wisconsin in June, 1849, and about the 1st of the next September settled on Sec. 26, in the town of Fort Winnebago, where he resided until his death, Dec. 3, 1874, aged 82; leaving eight children—Lawrence (now in Texas); John (in Pittsburgh, Penn.); Charles (in Fort Winnebago); Isabella C., James A. and Michael A., are all living on the homestead, which consists of 600 acres of land; their mother, at the age of 70, is living with them; the youngest daughter, Mary J., is a member of the Dominican Order, and known in the order as "Sister Mary Philip," living in Galena, Ill., at present. Had lost one son before his death—Barnard J., who died May 26, 1865, in his 20th year; Andrew, died March 20, 1873, aged 44. For the last few years of his life, he had been studying with a view of entering the priesthood of the Catholic Church, and had nearly completed his studies, having attended St. Francis' Seminary, in Milwaukee, Wis., Seminary of the Holy Angels, at Niagara Falls, N. Y., and spent some time at East St. Louis, Mo. Are members of Catholic Church, and Democrats. P. O. Portage City.

JONATHAN WHITNEY, farmer, Sec. 3, and Postmaster at Port Hope; was born July 29, 1820, in Windsor Co., Vt.; came to Wisconsin in 1844; taught school two winters, making his home in Milwaukee, and being engaged in buying wheat during the summer and fall of each year. In May, 1846, he bought some land in Machford, Green Lake Co., then went East and stayed till September, when he returned to Wisconsin and settled on his land; lived there two years, and, in September, 1848, came to Columbia Co., and settled in his present location. He was married, May 7, 1848, to Ellen R. Rood, who was born in Cayuga Co., N. Y., March 7, 1829; has seven children—Ellen M., Mary L., Guy, Cooper, Clara L., Hattie E. and George M., all at home except the first two; Ellen is Mrs. F. Bloom, of Fort Winnebago, and Mary L. is Mrs. Charles E. Perkins, of Colby, Marathon Co., Wis.; has lost three children: Almeron W. was in the 37th W. V. I., Co. A, and was killed in the three-days battle before Petersburg, Va., June 18, 1864, aged 16; Culver died in 1854, at the age of 10 months, and one died in infancy.

Mr. Whitney is a surveyor, and was engaged in that business from 1850 till 1863; was afterward County Surveyor two years; was Chairman two terms, 1850 and 1851; was Justice of the Peace two years, and has 96 acres of land; is a Republican, and has been Postmaster ever since 1849, except three years of the time.

ALFRED WILLCOX, farmer, Sec. 12; P. O. Portage City; was born in Somersetshire, England, June 24, 1812. Was married in England, May 23, 1840, to Ann, daughter of William and Sarah A. Savage, born in the same county he was; he was hired as a farmer; came to America in 1855, and settled on the farm he now owns; first bought 120 acres with only 8 acres cleared; had heavy timber, but has kept adding to it till he now owns 532 acres, 150 acres of it under improvement, and has good farm buildings; 160 acres of his land is in Sec. 8, in Marcellon, adjoining the farm of William Goodman, where they are mining for silver; has the west half of the east half of section; has three children—John Alfred, Albert and Sarah Ann, the last two at home. Mr. Willecox is a Republican, and has been Supervisor and Justice of the Peace; both members of the Baptist Church.

J. B. WOOD, farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. Portage City; born Dec. 20, 1831, in Windsor Co., Vt.; came to Wisconsin in 1854, and settled in Marcellon Village, where he followed teaching three years, Was married, June 14, 1855, to Almeda C. Kincaid, who was born in Berks Co., Penn., Feb. 14, 1832; daughter of Usebius Kincaid, who came to Wisconsin in 1851. Mr. Wood was Town Clerk in 1860, and Town Superintendent in 1861, being the last one in the town to hold that office; was also Town Clerk in 1862 and 1865, and has been Justice of the Peace the last two years. Is a Republican; has 120 acres of land; was enrolling and drilling officer in his town from the beginning of the war in 1861, till 1864; his first wife died March 9, 1874, leaving two children—Emma Eugenia, born Nov. 26, 1857, and Edna Lillian, born Aug. 25, 1861. Was married again, March 13, 1878, to Margaret C. Davis, who was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, March 19, 1833, daughter of William Denny, and widow of John N. Davis, of Portage City.

TOWN OF LOWVILLE.

ELBRIDGE CURTIS, farmer, Sec. 18; P. O. Poynette; born Nov. 2, 1826, in the town of Maine, Broome Co., N. Y., son of John C. Curtis; came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1849, and settled in the town of Lowville, the next winter, where he made his home with his brother. Was married, in 1857, to Mary E. Bennett, who was born in 1841, in Chemung Co., N. Y.; has seven children living— Irene (now Mrs. Harrison Cutsworth, of the town of Pacific), Alma, John C., Tinie, Lewis B., Harry and Edgar, all at home except the one married; lost one daughter, Sarah, 15 months old. He is a Republican, and has been Supervisor and Assessor, and has been Pathmaster for the last twenty years; has 180 acres of land.

F. C. CURTIS, farmer; P. O. Rocky Run; was born Sept. 3, 1819, in the town of Stockbridge, Berkshire Co., Mass.; his father's name was Harvey Curtis, who was a descendant of Miles Standish, of the Mayflower Pilgrims, of the seventh remove from that somewhat distinguished personage; his mother's name was Fannie Warner, of Canaan, N. Y. His father removed to Canaan, N. Y., when he was 4 years old. At the age of 7 years, the subject of this sketch went to live with his grandfather, Lupton Warner, who was a farmer, where he remained until he was 15, attending school winters and working upon the farm the rest of the year. He was then apprenticed to F. B. Walbridge, of Pittsfield, Mass., to learn the saddlery and harness trade. At the end of about two years, his employer removed to Ohio, and he was left upon his own resources; he had made such good use of his time that he was master of his trade, or at least a pretty good workman. His compensation was $35 a year and board, with some opportunity for overwork when trade was good. He was very industrious, and, when not otherwise occupied, studied his books. These spare hours and the winter's school were all the opportunity he had for acquiring an education. When his employer left Pittsfield, he gave him his time; he was to have remained with him until he was 21; he then went to Hudson, N. Y., and engaged work with Conklin Terry for six months; this was extended for one year longer, which carried him over the depressed times of 1837. In the spring of 1838, trade was still dull, and he found his old employer, Walbridge, was at Cleveland, Ohio; he went there and worked for him about six months, and should have remained longer, but the fever and ague greatly impaired his health, and he returned to Canaan, where he worked at his trade until the fall of 1839, when he went out to Columbia, S. C., upon a contract with Levi Hanley, in whose employ he remained near eight years. During those eight years, he spent three summers at the North to recuperate his health. Although his business was of a mechanical nature, he never lost sight of the farm, and was known or considered as an agriculturist, and was often consulted by planters. J. S. Preston used often to consult him, and made him a very lucrative offer to go on to his Louisiana sugar plantation as manager, and many other flattering offers were made him to induce him to settle permanently at the South, all of which he declined, mainly for the reasons that he thought the slavery question was bound to make trouble, and he had become tired of the competition in trade. He left South Carolina in the spring of 1847, and Canaan July 3 of that year for Wisconsin, designing to purchase land and improve it with his own labor. He went to Fort Wayne, Ind., where he purchased a horse, which he rode to his present home, arriving here July 28. He was acquainted with Jacob Low, with whom he had had correspondence, and came to his house, where a hearty welcome awaited him. At that time, there were considerable many settlers who had settled upon and claimed the land, but had not purchased it from the Government, holding under a higher law. Mr. C. purchased the land upon which he now resides and has resided since; he erected a house, and expended all the funds he had with him; expecting a remittance from New York to enable him to return East, but, not arriving, he started for Milwaukee, with only 35 cents in his pocket; put up the first night with Mr. Alfred Toploff, of Fountain Prairie, who made him welcome, and walked the balance of the distance in two days. At Milwaukee he shipped for Buffalo as an employe at $14 per month; received $2 and borrowed $5 from an acquaintance, and thus he was supplied with funds for the balance of his journey, and arrived in Columbia Co., N. Y., the latter part of September. He was married at Canaan Four Corners, Columbia Co., N. Y., Oct. 18, 1847, to Miss Elizabeth Lea, daughter of George Lea and Ellen Hallenbeck, of Richmond, Mass., who was born at Athens, Greene Co., N. Y., April 7, 1828; they left for Wisconsin on the same day, and arrived at Milwaukee Nov. 1, after a very boisterous passage around the lakes of eleven days. Their children are Mary Anna, now Mrs. O. D. Orvis, of San Francisco, Cal.; Emma, now Mrs. A. H. Carman, of Morgan Park, Cook Co., Ill.; Ella C. Curtis and Lizzie, residing at home; George L., who died Dec. 20, 1860. Mr. Curtis is a Democrat; has been Chairman of Lowville quite a number of times, and was nominated for the Assembly in 1853; in 1856, he was nominated for State Senator, twice for Sheriff and again for Senator in 1868. He was elected Chairman of the County Board of Supervisors in 1856 and 1857, when the members of the board were strongly in the majority, and were opposed to him politically. Mr. Curtis' business has been mainly farming; has taken an active part in the Columbia County Agricultural Society, and was one of the gentlemen who helped to establish it in 1851; was President of it for four years, and has been one of its Executive Board ever since; has attended every executive meeting and fair of said society, which has been held yearly since its organization. His farm consists of 270 acres; his buildings are mainly of stone, made in a substantial manner, which have the appearance of lasting as long as they are well roofed.

JOHN CURTIS, farmer; P. O. Poynette; born in the town of Canaan, Columbia Co., N. Y., July 19, 1830, son of Harvey Curtis. He was married Sept. 14, 1854, in Berkshire Co., Mass., to Statura Davis, who was born June 26, 1834, in the same county in which she was married; Mr. Curtis resided in his native county till the spring of 1864; then came to Wisconsin and located in the town of Lowville, where he still lives, and has 140 acres of land; has two children—Anna, born Feb. 16, 1855, and Edith, born Sept. 23, 1867. In politics, a Democrat.

PETER DRAKE, farmer, Secs. 8 and 17; P. O. Rocky Run; was born in the town of Roxbury, Morris Co., N. J., July 10, 1818, son of Peter D. and Charity (Wilkerson) Drake; came to Wisconsin in September, 1848, and located on the farm he now owns; he first built a cabin of poles, in which he "kept back" about six years; then built his present residence; his parents afterward came to Wisconsin and resided awhile in the town of Lowville, and his mother died at his home. He was married in the town of Pacific to Martha A. Porter, daughter of Amasa Porter; she was born Nov. 3, 1838, in Cattaraugus Co., N. Y.; they have four children—Earl W., born Sept. 1, 1867; Carl A., born Nov. 10, 1868; Mark L., born Oct. 3, 1870, and Kitty May, born Jan. 14, 1878; lost an infant son Jan. 14, 1875. He has 447 acres of land, and is a Republican every time.

SAMUEL DUNN, farmer, Sec. 8; P. O. Rocky Run; born in 1821 in County Tyrone, Ireland, son of Samuel and Lattia (Campbell) Dunn; came to America in 1840, and in December of that year he settled in Portage, and has lived in Columbia Co. ever since, except about one and a half years he spent in the pinery. He was married Nov. 20, 1856, to Sarah Campbell, daughter of Robert Campbell, who was a native of County Tyrone, Ireland; they have three children—Samuel C., born July 28, 1860; Mary L., born Sept. 25, 1865, and Sarah, born Nov. 25, 1872. He has 480 acres of land. He is a Democrat and has held the office of Chairman about seven years, and Town Clerk eighteen or twenty years. In 1855, he made a visit to the old country, leaving home in November and returning in April, 1856; he visited his parents in Ireland, who were both living at that time. He now holds the office of Town Clerk.

WARREN GILBERT, farmer, residence on Sec. 26; P. O. Rio; was born June 22, 1827, in Herkimer Co., N. Y.; son of Erastus and Nancy Gilbert. When he was only 3 years old, his father was accidentally killed by a fall in his barn. After the death of his father, he went to live with his grandmother, where he lived till he was 14 years old, then went out to work by the month, and continued at that till 1848, making his home with his grandmother during that time, and taking her advice in all his business operations. Having saved up about $500 from his earnings, he concluded (still taking his grandmother's advice), to come West and "grow up with the country." With that end in view, he came to Wisconsin in 1848, bought 60 acres of his present farm, for which he paid $250, then pre-empted 160 acres more, which cost him $200, and settled down to business. In 1849, he married Miss Mary Widrich, of the State of New York, by whom he has five children—George Henry (living in Lowville), Albert (in Minnesota), James W. (at home), Charles L. (in Iowa), and Eugene. Mr. Gilbert is one of the largest farmers in Columbia Co., having in his home farm 2,500 acres of land, all in a body, all improved, and 300 acres more, near enough so he works it all together. He also has about 2,300 acres in Freeborn Co., Minn., with about 1,400 acres under the plow, and 1,200 acres in Martin Co., Minn., 800 acres of which are under the plow. He considers his real estate alone worth upward of $100,000; sold $10,000 worth of produce in one year during the war, from his home farm, his wool amounting to $3,300 of it; sold $3,000 worth of timothy seed in 1839, but which was a part of three years' crops. Keeps twenty-five horses, about sixty head of cattle and 400 head of sheep. He has never followed any other business but farming, and never had a dollar given him by friend or foe. His motto has always been to "never go in debt," and always "live within your means." He gives his personal attention to all the details of his business, and keeps a diary, in which he records all his business transactions. He finds but little time to devote to politics, but is of the Democratic persuasion.

JOHN B. HALPIN, farmer, Sec. 9; P. O. Rocky Run; born May 10, 1832, in County Meath, Ireland; son of Bartholomew and Mary M. Halpin; came to America in 1851; lived about a year in Onondaga Co., N. Y., then came to Wisconsin, and lived in the town of Pacific till 1860, since which time he has been in his present location. He was married in 1857, in Portage, to Marcella Timmons, daughter of Phillip Timmons. Has ten children—Mary, Catherine, Lucy, Marcella, Charlotte, Nellie, Ambrose, Bartholomew, John and Philip, all at home. All members of the Catholic Church. He is a Democrat and has 120 acres of land.

OLIVER CUMMINGS HOWE (deceased) was among the first settlers of the town of Lowville, and one of the most prominent men in the town; he was a native of Attica, Wyoming Co., N. Y., and was born Dec. 18, 1813; his father's name was Jacob Howe, and his mother's maiden name was Azuba Sprout; in early life, he was engaged in the mercantile business in his native town, and afterward carried on the same business in South St. Paul street, Rochester, N. Y.; failing in business there, he concluded to seek his fortune among strangers, in a strange land; he accordingly left that State, and came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1846, landing at Sheboygan, from which place he made his way on foot to Columbia Co., arriving in what is now the town of Lowville, with only $6 in his pocket; he at once located some land on Sec. 36, and commenced breaking; the next fall, he built a cabin in which himself and brother, James N. Howe, who joined him about that time, resided, and kept house by themselves till the death of James, which occurred in July, 1845, being struck by lightning and instantly killed while going from his own home to one of his neighbors; his father (who had been living with them two or three years) died the next April, leaving him entirely alone. His first wife, Lydia Tobias, to whom he was married in 1841, having died about a year after marriage, before he left Attica. March 31, 1857, he was married to his second wife, Juliette Barber, who was born April 6, 1826, in Greene Co., N. Y., town of Durham, daughter of John and Clarrissa (Virgil) Curtis, and widow of Brazilla Barber, who died in New York in 1854; her mother, Mrs. Curtis, is still living with her in Lowville, at the age of 94. Mr. Howe left two daughters—Jeanette C., who is now Mrs. Elliott Scott, of the town of Leeds, and Julia F., who is living on the homestead with her mother. His death occurred April 21, 1879, of apoplexy. In addition to his farming, Mr. Howe practiced law, the last twenty-five years of his life, having been admitted to the bar April 13, 1854; he figured conspicuously in politics in the early history of the State, and represented his district in the Assembly three successive terms, being in the Legislature of 1856-57, during the celebrated "Barstow administration." He made a public profession of religion and joined the Congregational Church of Leeds in 1863, but afterward severed his connection with this church and joined at Rio, where he held at different times the offices of Deacon, Clerk and Trustee, and contributed about $1,100 toward building the Congregational Church at that place; he left an estate of about 1,000 acres improved land, which is occupied by his widow and daughter, Julia F.; P. O. Rio.

JESSIE F. HAND, farmer, Sec. 5; P. O. Rocky Run; was born in New Lebanon, Columbia Co., N. Y., on the 24th day of March, 1816; went to Akron, Summit Co., Ohio, in 1840. Was married to Mary Wheeler on the 8th of November, 1841; removed to Lyons, Walworth Co., Wis., in 1845; thence to Lowville, Columbia Co., on to the quarter section of land he now lives on, purchased from the Government in 1846 in 1849; in politics was a Whig until the organization of the Republican party; since that time has been a Republican; was a member of the Methodist Church about twenty years, and for the last twenty-seven years has been a member of the Episcopal Church; was the first Town Clerk of Lowville; elected a Justice of the Peace at the same time, and now holding that office for the third or fourth time; was three years Town Superintendent of Schools; was Chairman of Supervisors often; two years was Enrolling Officer in 1861; was Postmaster of Rocky Run Post Office nearly twenty-six years; was elected Member of the Assembly in 1864, and voted in favor of the ratification of the Thirteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, abolishing slavery. His oldest son, George, died at Andersonville, Ga., January, 1865; the names of the others are Antoinette, Martha, Willis, Harper, Mary Alice, Isabell and Edwin Wheeler, all living in Wisconsin but Martha.

F. L. HENRY, farmer, Sec. 34; P. O. Lowville; born Sept. 22, 1823, in Lewis Co., N. Y., town of Martinsburg; son of William and Anna Henry, who were among the first settlers in that town; Mr. Henry came to Wisconsin in May, 1846, located a part of his present farm in October of that year, but made his home in La Grange, Walworth Co., for about two years. Was married there, April 2, 1848, to Eliza W., daughter of Elisha Cronk; she was born in Seneca Co., N. Y., July 22, 1825; immediately after marriage he came to live on his farm, and has been there ever since; has three children—Margaret A. (now Mrs. Wm. H. Evarts, of Lowville); Florence Louisa and Frederick William; he lost two at home. Mr. Henry is a Republican, and has been Town Clerk and Town Superintendent several terms; he has a receipt for the tax of 1847, which he thinks was one of the tax receipts issued in the town; himself and wife both belong to the Presbyterian Church, and he has been a member twenty-two years; has 270 acres of land in his farm, with first-class farm buildings; keeps 400 head of sheep and thirty head of cattle.

SILAS W. HERRING, farmer, Sec. 28; P. O. Lowville; born April 23, 1821, in Lowville, Lewis Co., N. Y.; son of Henry and Polly Herring; came to Wisconsin in the spring of 1844; lived in York, Dane Co., till the fall of 1845, then came to Columbia Co. and settled on the farm he now owns; at that time there was only four other settlers in what is now the town of Lowville; he helped to organize the town, was its first Treasurer, and since that has held the office of Chairman and Assessor, two terms each. Was married, Dec. 28, 1855, in Wyocena, to Miss T. M. Webb, daughter of Sylvester P. Webb; she was born in New Lebanon, Columbia Co., N. Y., Dec. 12, 1829; has two children—Hubert C., born Oct. 30, 1859, and Carl E., born Aug. 28, 1863, both at home. When he was 12 years old, his parents removed to Chautauqua Co., N. Y., town of Cherry Creek, where he lived till he came to Wisconsin. Mrs. Herring is a member of the Presbyterian Church. He was an old-time Abolitionist, and has been a Republican ever since the party was organized; has 295 acres of land.

JAMES PRICE, farmer, Sec. 18; P. O. Poynette; born Sept. 12, 1832, in Albany, N. Y. His father, John Price, died when he (James) was an infant; came to Wisconsin in 1851, and settled in Lowville, where he has since resided. Was married in 1855 to Emily S. Mason, who was born Nov. 5, 1838, in Rutland, Vt.; has nine children—James C., living in Montana; Maria E., Ellen A., Sarah, Mary, Frederick C., Charles, Albert and Nettie; all at home, except the oldest; lost one son—Lewis, 2 years old. Mr. Price enlisted, Sept. 9, 1861, in the 2d W. V. C., Co. E, and was discharged Dec. 15, 1865; came on his farm in 1866. Is a Democrat; has held the office of Town Clerk, and is the present Chairman of the town; while in the army, held the office of Corporal, Quartermaster Sergeant, Orderly Sergeant and Second Lieutenant. Has 200 acres of land.

MATHIAS TROUT, farmer, Secs. 10 and 15; P. O. Rio; born Oct. 18, 1818, in Harixhien by Lauden, in Bavaria, Germany; son of Theodore Trout, who died in Germany, when 45 or 46 years old; Mr. Trout came to America in 1850, arriving in New York April 7; came direct to Wisconsin; lived in Ft. Atkinson till the spring of 1851; then came to Lowville, and has lived there ever since. Was married, Feb. 8, 1836, in Germany, to Helena Flick; has nine children—Kate, now Mrs. Wm. Verhalen, of Jefferson, Wis.; John, living in Lowville; Lane, living in Chicago; Valentine; Mary, now Mrs. Justin Clear, of Mazeppa Co., Minn.; Willie, Rosa, Josephine and George, all four at home. Mr. Trout is at present one of the Side Supervisors of the town, and has held the office several terms. Is a Democrat, and member of the Catholic Church; has been School District Treasurer several years, and Treasurer in the church; has 170 acres of land.

GEORGE W. WEBB, farmer, Sec. 20; P. O. Poynette; born May 18, 1827, in Columbia Co., N. Y., town of New Lebanon; son of Sylvester P. and Harriet P. Webb, who came to Wisconsin in 1846, and settled in what is now the town of Lowville, on Sec. 20. Was married, Jan. 30, 1853, to Eliza Blair, daughter of Deacon Linus Blair, of Wyocena (see his biography); has three children—Harry A., Genevieve L. and Albert W. Mrs. Webb is a member of the Presbyterian Church. He has 120 acres of land, and is a Republican.

TOWN OF DEKORRA.

G. ACKERMAN, farmer, Sec. 26; P. O. Poynette; was born in Jefferson Co., N. Y., in 1832; he removed with his parents to Waukesha Co., Wis., June, 1847; in the fall of that year, the family removed to Walworth Co.; they lived in Walworth and Racine Cos. about four years; in 1851, his father removed to Columbia Co., and settled on a part of the farm which his son now owns, where he resided till his death in December, 1877; his mother died in Walworth Co. Mr. Ackerman was married in 1857 to Miss Maria Todd, born in the State of New York. He enlisted Aug. 15, 1862, in the 23d W. V. I.; except while a prisoner of war, he participated in all the battles and campaigns in which the 23d took part; he was taken prisoner at the battle of Sabine Cross Roads, October, 1863, but was exchanged after a few weeks; was again taken prisoner the following spring, at the battle of Mansfield, and kept a prisoner till the close of the war. He has four children—Jennie, Emmett C., Maria and Herman F. His farm contains 200 acres.

JOHN BROWN, farmer and gardener, Sec. 5; P. O. Dekorra; was born in Scotland in 1808; he came to Wisconsin in 1840, and settled at Fort Atkinson, where he lived two years; thence to Cambridge, Dane Co.; he came to the village of Dekorra in 1851, where he kept a store till 1868, when he settled on his present farm, which he had purchased in 1859. He was married in Scotland to Margaret Geddes; she died in 1871. Miss Jenny G. Brown, a niece of Mr. Brown's, born in 1854, has resided with him since her early childhood.

BENJAMIN S. BUCK, farmer, Sec. 36; P. O. Poynette; was born in Troy, N. Y., in 1818, where before removing West, he was engaged in cotton manufacturing for many years. He was married to Hannah Strackan, born in Scotland; her parents removed to Troy, N. Y., when she was a child. Mr. Buck came to Wisconsin and settled on his farm in the fall of 1857, but he had owned the land about fourteen years previous to that time; in 1862, he left his farm and removed to St. Louis, where he was engaged as receiving clerk for the Excelsior Manufacturing Co. for fourteen years, when he returned to his farm. Mr. Buck has had two children, neither of whom are living; the older child, Henry M., was born in Troy, N. Y., Oct. 3, 1843; he enlisted in the 7th W. V. I., in the spring of 1861; at the expiration of his term of service he re-enlisted; after participating in all the battles of the war in which his regiment was engaged, he was mortally wounded at the battle of the Wilderness. His second child, Mary I., was born in Troy, April 22, 1845, and died May 22, 1846. When Mr. Buck took possession of his farm, it was entirely unimproved; he has now 40 acres improved; the farm contains 80 acres. He has been Chairman of the Board of Supervisors one term, also Town Clerk one term.

JOHN BINNIE, M. D., Poynette. Dr. Binnie was born in Stirlingshire, Scotland, Sept. 16, 1844; he came to the United States with his parents in 1851; they settled in McDonough Co., Ill., where they lived ten years; thence to the town of Caledonia, Columbia Co., in 1861; he began the study of medicine in 1866, with Dr. Waterhouse, of Portage; he passed an examination before the State Board of Censors of the Wisconsin State Medical Society, June 17, 1870; attended his first course of lectures at Rush Medical College, Chicago, in the winter of 1868-69, second course in 1869-70, third in 1874-75, graduating Feb. 16, 1875; practiced medicine in Poynette before and since graduating. His first wife was Miss Josephine E. Axon, who died Jan. 9, 1876; his present wife was Miss Bridgetta A. Watters; has one child by his second marriage, Mary J.

SAMUEL CARR, farmer, Sec. 5; P. O. Dekorra; was born in East Virginia in 1808; his parents removed to Western Virginia when he was 12 years of age, and thence to Washington Co., Penn., where the family lived for a number of years, when they went to Morgan Co., Ohio, where Mr. Carr was married to Miss Sarah R. Shannon; he removed to Highland Co., Ohio, in 1846; he came to Columbia Co. in the spring of 1852, and settled where he now lives. Mr. Carr has followed the occupation of farming the greater part of his life; for about sixteen years, he owned the Dekorra Mill, during which time he followed the occupation of milling; was appointed, in 1868, one of seven Farm Mortgage Land Commissioners, whose duty it is to sell certain lands deeded to them by the railroad companies to indemnify, in part, what was lost by farmers in mortgaging their lands; this office, which he received from the Government of the State of Wisconsin, he still holds. His wife died Dec. 7, 1879; he has four children—Ruth A., wife of Rev. Newel Griffith; Joseph S., George and James M.; Temperance, who married Mr. W. C. Allen, died April 7, 1876; two other children died in infancy; Joseph S., lawyer by profession, resides at San Antonio, Tex.; James M., also a lawyer, lives at Chippewa Falls, Wis.

FRANK A. DOLE, proprietor of Lower Mills, Poynette; born in Greenfield, Mass., Nov. 21, 1855; he was the son of Augustus O. Dole, who was born in Franklin Co., Mass., Feb. 11, 1816; he was a miller and millwright by trade; came to Wisconsin in 1856, and settled in the town of Arlington, Columbia Co., whence he removed to Poynette, in 1866. He was married to Sarah E. Bush, of Springfield, Mass., born Oct. 6, 1820; they had three children—Nellie, now Mrs. S. F. Joseph, of Neillsville, and Frank A.; lost second child—Florence E., who died in 1873, in her 22d year. Mr. Dole has been a member of the Legislature and held various town offices; he died Dec. 7, 1876. Frank A. assumed the ownership and control of the mill property on the death of his father.

JESSE FISH, farmer, Sec. 25; P. O. Poynette; was born in Canada in February, 1828. He was married to Mary York, born in the State of New York; he came to Columbia Co. in 1859, and settled where he now lives; his farm contains 160 acres; he has four children—Samuel, Elias, Harry and Deborah.

JOHN FORSYTHE, farmer, Sec. 36; P. O. Poynette; born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, about 1817. He was married to Margaret Simpson; they came to the United States in 1853; lived in Buffalo, N. Y., about two years; then came to Columbia Co., and settled on Sec. 35, Dekorra, where they lived three years; then removed to the town of Arlington, where they lived about three years; then returned to the town of Dekorra and settled on present farm; they have one son—John; farm contains 80 acres.

JOHN FULTON, merchant and farmer, Sec. 5; P. O. Dekorra; was born in Scotland in 1820; he came to the United States in the fall of 1849; has resided in Columbia Co. since that time. He purchased land in what is now the town of Caledonia, soon after he came to the county; he was for twelve years engaged in the mercantile business in Portage City; he now resides in what was once the thriving village of Dekorra, where he is engaged as merchant and farmer, and where he owns considerable property. His first wife was Elizabeth McMillan, a sister of James R. McMillan; his present wife was Mrs. Catherine Church.

THOMAS HAGAN, boot and shoe dealer, Poynette; was born in Canada in February, 1848. He came to Portage with his parents about 1850; his father now resides in the town of Arlington. Mr. Hagan engaged in business in Poynette in 1868. He was married to Bridget O'Shaughnessy, born in Vermont; they have three children—Milo C., Mary C. and Joseph T.

HENRY HALL, farmer, Sec. 15; P. O. Hartman; was born in Canada in 1834. He came to Columbia Co. in 1857; has resided where he now lives since that time. He was married to Mrs. Mary S. Cook; she was born in Attica, N. Y., in 1815; her first husband was Christopher Randall, with whom she came to Columbia Co. in 1842; Mr. Randall died in March, 1856; she afterward married Samuel Cook, who died in 1860; she was married to Mr. Hall in 1862. Mrs. Hall has three children by her first marriage—Margaret, Jane and Susan. Lost two children, the eldest and youngest. Farm contains 175 acres.

JOSEPH HARTMAN, farmer, Sec. 10; P. O. Hartman; was born in West Virginia; his parents removed to Ohio when he was a boy. He was married to Mary Ann Grier, a native of Ireland. He removed to Carroll Co., Ind., in 1838, where he purchased a farm, and worked at his trade, that of a blacksmith; he came to Columbia Co. in the fall of 1849, and settled where he now lives; his farm contains 180 acres. Mr. Hartman has been Postmaster of Hartman Post Office for nine years; has been Justice of the Peace for twenty-six years. He has six children—Alvanus, Melvin W., Zilpha, Anna J., Ella and Evert.

J. R. HASTIE, farmer, Sec. 18; P. O. Dekorra; the son of Mr. Archibald Hastie, of the town of Dekorra; the family came from Vermont in 1856. Mr. J. S. Hastie was born in the town of Barnet, Vt., in 1843. He was married to Miss Sarah Reedal, daughter of Henry Reedal. He has taught thirteen terms of school in Columbia Co.; is Chairman of Board of Supervisors; his farm contains 80 acres; has one child—Grace.

HUGH JAMIESON, capitalist, Poynette; was born in Scotland, May, 1829; he came to Wisconsin from Scotland in the spring of 1848; came to Columbia Co. in the spring of 1849, and, with his brother-in-law, Robert Wilson, purchased one quarter of Sec. 34, Dekorra. He was married to Lucy Thomas, whose parents, Samuel and B. Thomas, came to Columbia Co., from Pennsylvania, in 1848; they have had nine children, seven of whom are living—Hugh P., William W., Addison J., Janet, John, Samuel and Alice. Mr. Jamieson has always been actively and extensively engaged in business; for the first fifteen years of his residence here, he kept hotel in connection with his farming business; he built the Poynette House in 1858, which he conducted for about ten years; he built the elevator in 1871; has been engaged in the grain and lumber trade since 1871. Mr. Jamieson has been very successful in his business relations and the village of Poynette owes much of its growth and prosperity to his energy and ability as a business man.

JAMES LUTHER, farmer, Sec. 14; P. O. Hartman; was born in Otsego Co., N. Y., in 1822; his parents, William and Mary Luther, natives of Rhode Island, removed to the State of New York, and thence to Erie Co., Penn., when he was about 4 years of age; he came to Columbia Co. in 1854, and settled on his present farm in 1855. His first wife was Miss Alfreda Fish, who died March 31, 1861; his present wife was Mrs. Betsey Marsh, a sister of his former wife; he had six children by first marriage, four of whom are now living—Annetta, Lovina, Lester and George P.; the two lost died in infancy; has three children by present marriage—Lovilla, William and Caroline I. Mr. Luther has 185 acres of land; was a member of the Board of Supervisors for five years.

O. C. LUTHER, farmer, P. O. Poynette; was born in Jefferson Co., N. Y., March, 1825; he came to Wisconsin in 1847, but went to Illinois, where he resided five years, when he came to Columbia Co., settled in Sec. 25, town of Dekorra; he resided where he first settled about sixteen years, when he purchased his present farm of 100 acres, adjoining the village of Poynette; he still owns his farm in Sec. 25, which contains 240 acres. Mr. Luther was married to Miss R. Ackerman, born in Jefferson Co., N. Y.; they have seven children—Madora, Oliver C., Loda, Charles, Alida, Clarence and George.

JOHN McCARTAN, farmer and teacher, Sec. 32; P. O. Poynette; is the son of Daniel McCartan, who emigrated from Ireland to Canada about 1834, where he was engaged in teaching; he came to Columbia in 1846, and settled on a part of the farm which his son John now owns; he was accidentally killed in 1863. John was born on the farm where he now lives July 6, 1850. He was married to Harriet Hagan, daughter of John Hagan; has one child—Daniel. Has taught eight winter terms of school in Columbia Co., five in the town of Dekorra; his farm contains about 500 acres.

WILLIAM McDONALD, farmer, Sec. 14; P. O. Poynette. Mr. McDonald has been a resident of Dekorra Township since 1838; he was born in Scotland, in June, 1803; he emigrated to Canada in 1832; went to New York City in 1836, to Detroit the following winter, and to Green Bay in 1837, where he remained till March, 1838, when he came to Columbia Co., and located in the village of Dekorra, where he built a store, the first in the town; he went to Madison in the fall of that year, where he worked at his trade, that of a carpenter; he exchanged his store at Dekorra for 160 acres of land, a part of the farm of 400 acres which he now owns. He was married to Ann Patterson, born in Norway; they have seven children—William, James, Elisabeth, Martha, Hector, John and Ronald.

JOHN McKENZIE, proprietor of Dekorra Mills; was born in Scotland in 1832; he came to New York with his parents, Peter and Christina Burgess McKenzie, in 1844; his father settled in Racine Co., Wis., where he lived five years, then came to Dekorra and entered a farm in Sec. 6, where he now resides. Mr. John McKenzie remained in the city of New York and vicinity till April, 1846, when he came to Dekorra; in 1857, he bought a farm in Sec. 23; purchased a mill of Mr. Samuel Carr in 1868. He was married to Mary Wilson, daughter of James Wilson; have eight children—Mary, Peter, James, William, John, Christina, Kenneth and Janet. Mr. James Wilson, father of Mrs. McKenzie, was among the early prominent settlers of Columbia Co.; he was born in Scotland in 1802. Married to Mary Robertson, sister of Thomas Robertson; they had four sons and six daughters, all of whom are living except one son, William, who died in June, 1866. Mr. McKenzie came from Scotland to Columbia Co. in 1842, and settled there in what is now the town of Caledonia; he settled in the town of Dekorra in 1850, and died Aug. 5, 1878.

JAMES REEDAL, farmer, Sec. 8; P. O. Dekorra; son of Henry and Sarah Reedal. Mr. Reedal owns the homestead left by his father, where, with his family and his mother, he resides. He was married to Elisabeth Buckley; they have two children—Blanche and May. His farm contains 160 acres.

JOHN REEDAL, farmer, Sec. 5; P. O. Dekorra; is a native of Yorkshire, England, born about 1830; his father emigrated to this country about 1831; resided in Michigan about six years; thence to Illinois, where he lived about thirteen years; came to Columbia Co. in June, 1849; in the fall of that year, the family settled in Sec. 17, Dekorra; afterward settled where his son James now lives. Mr. John Reedal was married to Miss Mary McKenzie; has three children—Peter E., George B. and Sarah S. Farm contains 110 acres.

WILLIAM REEDAL, farmer, Sec. 7; P. O. Dekorra; is a son of Henry Reedal; he was born in Illinois in 1838. He was married to Rose B. Hastie, daughter of Archibald Hastie; they have three children—Ellen, Edna and Horace. Farm contains 217 acres, where he settled in November, 1865.

WILLIAM G. ROBINSON, harness-maker, Poynette; was born in Milwaukee in 1845; his father was born in the State of New York; his mother was a native of England; his father died in Milwaukee in 1848; his mother, with her family, removed to Waukesha Co., about 1854; thence to Sauk Co., and to Columbia Co. in 1861. Mr. Robinson began his apprenticeship to the trade of harness-maker, at Pardeeville, with Noah Benedict in 1863, but enlisted February, 1864, in the 36th W. V. I., and served until the close of the war; he participated in the battles of the Wilderness, Cold Harbor, Hatch's Run, and in all the battles which his regiment took part in; after his enlistment at the close of the war, he returned to Pardeeville, and resumed his apprenticeship; he located in Poynette, September, 1867. He was married to Miss W. M. Dusenbury; they have one child—Hattie E., lost one child.

DR. E. FRED RUSSELL, merchant, Poynette; born in 1834, in Eaton, Canada East; his parents removed to Addison, Vt., when he was 4 years of age, where he lived until he was 18 years of age; he was then engaged on the Rutland & Burlington R. R., for about two years; he came to Columbia Co. in 1854, on a visit to his parents, who had preceded him to Wisconsin; he then went to Madison, where he was engaged as book-keeper and ticket agent for one year; in the spring of 1856, he went to McGregor, Iowa, where he was engaged in the commission and forwarding business until August, 1857; he then returned to Columbia Co., and engaged in the study of medicine with Dr. L. A. Squires, of Lodi; attended a course of lectures at Ann Arbor, Mich., in 1859, and graduated at Rush Medical College, Chicago, in 1861; he settled in Poynette in June of that year, and engaged in the practice of medicine, until 1870, when, on account of failing health, he discontinued the practice of his profession. Dr. Russell opened the pioneer drug store in Poynette in 1857; sold his interest therein in 1869, and engaged in the general merchandise business, which he has followed since that time. He was married to Estella L. Waldron, formerly from Vermont; they have one son—Harry L., born March, 1866.

ISAAC C. SARGENT, Postmaster, Poynette; was born in Saratoga, N. Y., in 1821; he came to Dane Co., Wis., in 1851; he removed to the town of Leeds, Columbia Co., in the spring of 1851, and engaged in farming on Sec. 16; he came to Poynette in the fall of 1862, purchased a farm adjoining the village of Poynette, which he sold in 1877; has been Postmaster since 1871; Mr. Sargent is a painter by trade, which business he followed for many years. His first wife was Eliza J. Dodge, born in New Hampshire. His present wife was Mrs. Isabella C. Rice, daughter of Adam Van Slyck, native of New York. Mr. Sargent has four children by first marriage—Abba J. (now Mrs. Joseph Townsend), Julia B. (now Mrs. R. R. Lloyd), Charles W. and Arthur.

MATHIAS SCOFIELD, farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. Poynette; was born in Walworth Co., Wis., in 1847; he is the son of Sands R. Scofield; he located where he now lives in the spring of 1874. He was married to Mary E. Rhoades; they have four children—Joshua B., Mary A. Orpha D. and Eugene R. Mr. Scofield has 60 acres of land. He was elected Town Treasurer in the spring of 1879.

SANDS L. SCOFIELD, farmer, Sec. 23; P. O. Poynette; was born in Westchester Co., N. Y., in 1835. His parents, Sands R. and Mahala Scofield, removed to Racine Co., Wis., in 1844, and to Columbia Co. May, 1850; his parents settled on the farm where he now lives, where his father died, April, 1859; his mother died in 1867. He was married to Vesta L. Packard, whose parents came to Columbia Co. in the fall of 1849; they have five children—Ida, Vesta, Lewis, Sanford J. and Ella L. Mr. Scofield enlisted Sept. 1, 1864, in 42d W. V. I.; served till close of the war. He has been Town Clerk for five years. His farm contains 135 acres.

LUCIUS A. SQUIRE, physician and druggist, Poynette; was born in New Haven, Addison Co., Vt., April 8, 1825; his father was also a physician, and native of Vermont. Dr. Squire was a student of Prof. W. Goldsmith, of Castleton, Vt.; he graduated at Castleton Medical College in the fall of 1851; he practiced medicine at Clarendon Springs, Vt., for two years; in 1854, he came West, and formed a copartnership with Dr. R. K. Bell, of Token Creek, Dane Co., Wis., where he remained one year; he then located at Leeds Center, Columbia Co., where he remained till 1876, when he came to Poynette. He was married in the spring of 1856, to Miss Louisa J. Howard, also born in Addison Co., Vt.; one son, Mally, born June, 1866. Dr. Squire belongs to that class of men generally known as self-made men, and has not only attained to considerable eminence in his profession, but has also been one of the foremost in enterprises of public interest; he was Town Superintendent of Schools for the town of Leeds for several years; was Chairman of the Board of Supervisors for several terms; started the first store in Leeds in 1856; secured the post office at Leeds Center and was the first Postmaster, being appointed in 1857; he bought the farm known as the John C. Baker farm, at Leeds Center, in 1863; this farm contains 160 acres, and is one of the best improved farms in the county.

EDWIN F. TILLOTSON, proprietor of "American House," Poynette; is the son of Stephen Tillotson, of the town of Dekorra. He was born in Erie Co., Ohio, in 1849. His parents came to Columbia Co. in the fall of 1850, and settled in Sec. 13, town of Dekorra, where he now lives. Mr. Tillotson was married to Anna Ellis, born in England in 1854. They have two children—Louis and Sarah; lost their first child—a daughter.

E. B. THOMAS, carpenter and builder, Poynette; was born in Canada East in 1829; his parents were natives of New Hampshire; they removed to the State of New York when he was 7 years of age; he came to Columbia Co. in 1857, and settled in Arlington; Mr. Thomas located in Poynette in 1868. He was married to Miss Jane E. Philips, of New York State; they have five children—Cora, John, Mina, Roy and Ely. Mr. Thomas was engaged in farming while a resident of the town of Arlington, but is by trade a carpenter and builder, and has erected many of the best buildings in Poynette and elsewhere.

JAMES TOMLINSON, farmer, Sec. 36, P. O. Poynette; was born in Yorkshire, England, in May, 1831. His father's family emigrated to this country in the fall of 1842; they lived in Jefferson Co., N. Y., for two years; then removed to Canada, where they lived five years; they came to Columbia Co. in 1849. His father settled where his son James now lives; he afterward removed to Poynette, where he at one time owned most of the land now occupied by that village. He died in August, 1874. Mr. Tomlinson's mother died in February of the same year. He was married to Emma C. Bowles, born in Jefferson Co., N. Y.; has five children—E. K., James S., Arthur B., Minnie and Alberta. Farm contains 110 acres.

JOHN WILSON, farmer and stock-dealer, Poynette; is a son of one of the early settlers of Columbia Co. His father was Mr. Robert Wilson, who came to Columbia Co. from Scotland in 1849, and settled in Sec. 34, town of Dekorra, where he lived about seven years; he then removed to the town of Buffalo, Marquette Co., where he lived about seven years; then returned to Columbia Co. and settled in Arlington Township, where died about 1873. His mother still lives in the town of Arlington. John was born in Scotland in 1845; he has been a resident of Columbia Co. since his parents returned from Marquette Co. He was married to Louisa Calkins, daughter of H. Calkins, of the town of Arlington. Has four children—Nellie, Vine, Edith and Robert. He owns a farm in the town of Leeds, of 133 acres; is engaged in farming and stock-raising.

PARKER YOUNGS, farmer, Sec. 36; P. O. Poynette; was born in the State of New York in 1843; his father removed to Walworth Co., Wis., in the fall of 1845, and to Columbia Co. in the spring of 1846; he now resides in Arlington Township. Mr. Youngs was married to Orvilla Wheeler, whose parents came to Columbia Co. when she was a child; her father died in February, 1871, in the town of Leeds; her mother resides at Poynette. Mr. Youngs has four children—Morris, Davis, Harry and Jennie, his farm contains 80 acres.

TOWN OF PACIFIC.

WILLIAM BATES, farmer, Sec. 36; P. O. Portage City; born July 25, 1820, in Preble Co., Ohio; son of John and Ann Bates, who removed to Rush Co., Ind., when he was about 4 or 5 years old. He was married July 24, 1845, in Carroll Co., Ind., to Elizabeth McKinney, who died Nov. 11, 1859, aged 32 years, leaving four children—Mimerva Jane (now Mrs. Benjamin Fish, of Dekorra); Sarah Emily (now Mrs. Charles Rhodes, of Dekorra); Zachary Taylor, married Miss B. A. Kane (lives in Green Bay); and Charles Sumner (in Minnesota). Mr. Bates was married the second time April 2, 1861, in Caledonia, to Agnes Davidson, who was born in Galloway, Scotland, Oct. 29, 1832, daughter of John Duff, and widow of James Davidson, who died Aug. 17, 1856, on the ocean, off the Cape De Verde Islands, at the age of 24, leaving one son, James, who is now living in Pipestone Co., Minn. Mr. Bates by the second marriage has six children—Jane Ann, Mary Agnes, Ada Elizabeth, Margaret Luella, Rosella May and William Henry, all at home. Mr. Bates is a Republican, and has been Supervisor and Treasurer of the town of Pacific. Both are members of the Universalist Parish of Wyoena. He has 140 acres of land.

MOSES BUMP, farmer, Sec. 35; P. O. Pacific; born Jan. 24, 1811, in Rutland, Vt.; his father, Edward Bump, removed to Western New York, and settled in Cattaraugus Co., where Moses was married, Jan. 1, 1834, in Yorkshire, to Phebe Daggett, who was born in 1814. Mr. Bump came to Wisconsin in August, 1859, and settled in Dodge Co., town of Lowell, and in March, 1852, removed to his present location. Have had eight children, five of them still living—Maria (now Mrs. Erastus Porter, of Pacific), Emeline (now Mrs. George Farbus, of Omro, Wis.); Jerusha (now Mrs. Riley Weeks, of Geneseo, N. Y.); Mianda (now Mrs. O. Dow); Am., lives in Pacific and Lincoln at home; Charles died at 3 years of age, in 1856, and Cyrus enlisted in the 36th W. V. I., Co. I; was taken prisoner at the battle before Petersburg, first confined in Libby prison, then taken to Andersonville, and finally to Salisbury, N. C.; he died on the way home after the war closed, but his place of burial is unknown. Mr.

Bump is a Republican and has been Supervisor several terms; has 160 acres of land. He is a firm believer in what he calls the Spiritual Church of Christ, or what is known as Spiritualism. Claims to be living in the millenium and that the millenium comes to every man whenever his spirit is in harmony with the spirit of Christ.

STEPHEN CALVERLEY, Jr., farmer, Sec. 12; P. O. Portage City; born May 4, 1850, in the town of Pacific, and was the first white child born in the town; son of Stephen Calverley, Sr. (See his biography.) He was married, Nov. 4, 1870, to Maggie Dickinson, who was born Oct. 30, 1850, in the town of Wyocena, daughter of James Dickinson, a native of Dumfrees Co., Scotland, who came to Wyocena in 1848, enlisted in the 10th W. V. I., Co. D, in 1861, and was killed in action, at the battle of Perryville, Ky., Oct. 8, 1861. Mr. and Mrs. Calverley have three children—Ann, born July 31, 1870; Sarah, Aug. 10, 1871, and Stephen, Dec. 16, 1878; lost one daughter, Jennie, born April 11, 1874. He has a farm of 307 acres, and is a Republican.

B. F. FLOWER, farmer, Sec. 22; P. O. Portage City; born Aug. 2, 1819, in Franklin Co., Mass.; his parents removed to Ontario Co., N. Y., in 1835; his father, Phineas Flower, died in that county in the fall of 1856, at the age of 75, and Mrs. Flower in January, 1863, aged 83. B. F. was married in the town of Phelps, Ontario Co., Oct. 12, 1841, to Sarah J. Kanouse, who was born Feb. 1, 1821; daughter of John C. and Sarah Kanouse; her father died in 1849 and her mother in 1862. Mr. Flower came to Wisconsin in October, 1855, settled in the town of Pacific, and has resided in the town ever since; has two children—Winfield Scott, born July 2, 1852, and James Franklin, Feb. 9, 1855. He is married to Adella A. Porter, and lives in the town of Wyocena; has also an adopted daughter, Clara Bell, born April 15, 1866; has lost three children; two died in infancy in New York, and Chester B., who was born July 23, 1842, enlisted in August, 1862, in the 23d W. V. I., Co. C, and died Feb. 16, 1863, at Young's Point, La., soon after the battle of Arkansas Post, in which he was engaged. Mr. Flower is a Republican of the strongest type, and has held the office of Chairman, Supervisor, Treasurer and Assessor. Has 260 acres of land.

HENRY JENNINGS, farmer, Sec. 24; P. O. Wyocena; was born Dec. 1, 1816, in Bradford, Yorkshire, England; youngest son of Caleb and Elizabeth (Mitchell) Jennings; when 8 years of age, he went to work in a worsted factory, in which he continued till he was 25, being an overseer at the time he quit. In 1842, he came to America, landing in New Orleans, in the month of March; came direct to Wisconsin and settled in the town of Raymond (then Yorkville), Racine Co., where he was married, on the 6th day of January, 1846, to Rebecca Bisbee, who was born Jan. 22, 1827, in the village of Perryville, Vermillion Co., Ind.; lived in Racine Co. till November, 1849, then came to Columbia Co. and settled in the town of Pacific, on the farm he now owns, having bought the land in 1848. In politics, a Republican; he has been Chairman, Supervisor and Treasurer, and has been elected to all the other town offices, but never qualified; has a farm of 500 acres; has no children of his own, but has brought up three adopted children—Robert, Edith and Ellen; Robert is married to Miss Ora Calkins, and lives on the home farm; Edith is the wife of Clark Bartholomew, of Lodi, Wis., and Ellen is still at home. Darius E. Bisbee (father of Mrs. Jennings), was a native of Massachusetts; came from Ohio to Racine Co., Wis., in 1843, and from there to Wyocena in 1847; built the Bisbee grist-mill two miles east of Wyocena Village in 1853-54, and died in 1856, aged 57; he left two sons and five daughters—James died in Fillmore Co., Minn., in 1866, and Albert lives in Pueblo, Colo.; two of the daughters, Mary Jane and Margaret, live in Larned, Kan., Elizabeth S. at Colorado Springs; the youngest daughter, Amanda, died in Mareb, 1878, in Pueblo, Colo. Mrs. Bisbee was born in Preble Co., Ohio, and died in Rushford, Minn., in 1873, aged 73 years.

DANIEL MARSTON, farmer, Sec. 13 P. O. Pardeeville; born Feb. 17, 1833, in Rockingham Co., N. H.; son of John H. and Mary (Thompson) Marston; came to Wisconsin in 1852, and stayed in Pardeeville about a year. Was married, Jan. 17, 1854, to Elizabeth, daughter of Jeremiah Blaisdell, who came from New Hampshire in 1852, and still lives in the town of Wyocena; she was born Sept. 26, 1832, in the same county as her husband, in New Hampshire. In 1855, he came on the farm he now occupies, stayed a short time, then spent most of his time away till the last twelve years, which has been spent on the farm by his family, though he has been away some of the time himself. He is a miller by trade, and ran the Wyocena mill three years, Fort Winnebago mill three years, and was in Iowa one year, and has also worked in Beaver Dam, Poynette and Delton, Wis. Has six children—John, Charles Annie, Juniatta and Dwight and May (twins); none of them home but the two youngest. Is a Republican, and has been Town Superintendent, Town Clerk and Assessor. Has 340 acres of land.

J. L. PORTER, farmer, Sec. 26; P. O. Pacific; born Sept. 14, 1828, in Seneca Co., N. Y.; son of Anasa and Eliza Porter, who removed to Erie Co., N. Y., in 1830. Mr. Porter was married, in Erie Co., Nov. 1, 1849, to Artemesha Bates, who died in November, 1850, leaving one son—De Witt D., born July 21, 1850, and now lives in Portage City; May 12, 1854, he married Ann Boies, who was born Oct. 1, 1827, in Erie Co., N. Y., daughter of Warren Boies. Came to Wisconsin in 1856, and settled on the farm he now occupies. Has three children by the second marriage—Arthur A., born July 15, 1857; Leslie L., June 20, 1859, and Frank D., Oct. 31, 1862; the last three are at home. Mr. Porter is a Republican; has held various town offices, and was a member of Assembly in the Legislature of 1873. Has 400 acres of land.

EDWARD SMITH, farmer, Sec. 24; P. O. Portage City; born July 15, 1799, in Otsego Co., N. Y., town of Butternuts; son of Griffin and Sophia Smith; when 22 years of age, he went to Putnam Co., N. Y., and worked three years at farming, then at butchering till 1830, then went to Orange Co., N. Y., and followed the same business (butchering) at West Point till 1864; was under contract for Government supplies most of the time while there; came to Wisconsin in 1864, and settled in the town of Pacific, in his present location. He was married, in 1838, to Rachel Rundell, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., who was born in April, 1810, and died Jan. 23, 1880; has three children—Richard is a railroad engineer, and lives in La Crosse, Wis.; Eliphalet is an express messenger, and lives in Milwaukee, and Lewis lives at home. Mr. Smith is a Democrat, and has been Chairman four terms, Town Clerk, Assessor and Treasurer. Has 160 acres of land.

GRIFFIN SMITH (deceased); was born in Otsego Co., N. Y., Jan. 15, 1808; he went to West Point, Orange Co., N. Y., soon after he attained his majority, and obtained a situation as steward in the cadet mess hall at that place; he afterward went in company with his brother Edward in the butchering business, which he continued about fifteen years. His wife, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Bull, died Oct. 23, 1845, leaving three children. He came to Wisconsin in 1856, and settled on Sec. 27, in the town of Pacific, where he resided till his death, Sept. 14, 1877. His oldest son, Abner G., lives in Schnyler Co., N. Y.; Edward E. and Mary are unmarried, and occupy the homestead of 200 acres; P. O. Portage City. Mr. Smith never remarried, but his sister Sarah kept house for him after his wife's death; she came West with him, and is still living on the homestead with Edward and Mary.

REV. JOSEPH F. WARREN, farmer and M. E. minister, Sec. 15; P. O. Portage City; is a native of Franklin Co., Mass., and was born July 10, 1829; when he was 6 years of age, his parents removed to Allegany Co., N. Y., where he spent his early life on his father's farm till 18 years old, then took charge of a saw-mill his father built just previous to that, and, in addition to his other business, worked at carpenter and millwright work while living in that State. He was married Aug. 26, 1857, in Allegany Co., to Mary Jane, youngest daughter of Rev. Daniel Woods, who was in the ministry in the M. E. Church for over thirty years; she was born July 5, 1833, and was the youngest of eleven children. Mr. Warren came to Wisconsin in 1864, and settled in his present location. He joined the M. E. Church in 1856, and the next year received license as a local preacher; he has sustained that relation to the church ever since, working on his farm during the week and preaching every Sabbath. Has three children—Eva, born Oct. 6, 1862, and Jason and Nathan (twins), Dec. 1, 1865; has also an adopted son, Frank Corwin, born July 25, 1859. Has 260 acres of land, and in politics acts with the Republican party.

PASSENGERS BOUND FOR CALIFORNIA, COLORADO, NEBRASKA,
 DAKOTA, MINNESOTA,
 WISCONSIN, MONTANA, AND THE TERRITORIES,

Should, if they would consult their interest, buy their tickets via the

Chicago & North-Western Railway

This is the LEADING RAILWAY of the WEST AND NORTHWEST.

This important system of Railway Lines is one of the Largest Corporations in the World, owning and operating, under one management,

2,390 MILES OF ROAD.

Its Lines run from Chicago in so many directions that it is necessary to designate its Lines by certain specific names, which will give a correct idea to the passenger of the part of country each Line traverses. These Lines, numbering nine, are as follows:

Chicago, Council Bluffs & California Line.
 Chicago, Sioux City & Yankton Line.
 Chicago, Clinton, Dubuque & La Crosse Line.
 Chicago, Freeport & Dubuque Line.

Chicago, La Crosse & Winona Line.
 Chicago, Minnesota & Dakota Line.
 Chicago, St. Paul & Minneapolis Line.
 Chicago, Milwaukee & Lake Superior Line.
 Chicago, Green Bay & Marquette Line.

These Lines enable the "CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN" to reach all principal points in the WEST, NORTHWEST, and, through its connections, the FAR WEST. It offers every facility for quick, safe and comfortable transit to the traveler who selects this as his route. It stands second to no road in the West, and offers inducements and advantages that are not and cannot be offered by any of its competitors. Its management adopts every improvement known to the modern Railway System, and is determined that the CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY shall remain the LEADING Railway of the GREAT WEST.

Passengers should ask for and be certain their Tickets have a Coupon which reads, over the

"CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN RY."

All Ticket Agents will be glad to sell them via this Line.

REMEMBER!—PULLMAN HOTEL CARS are now running regularly between CHICAGO and COUNCIL BLUFFS on the California Express Trains of the CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY. BEAR IN MIND, no other road runs Pullman Hotel Cars, or any form of Hotel Cars, THROUGH between Chicago and the Missouri River. This is the only Line that has THROUGH EATING CARS of any sort.

NO TRANSFER at ST. PAUL via the CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN RY.

Passengers procuring tickets to points beyond ST. PAUL should use GREAT CARE to see that they read over the

Chicago & North-Western Railway,

— OR THE —

Chicago, St. Paul & Minneapolis Line.

And not over a route having a SIMILAR NAME, as this is

THE ONLY ROUTE YOU CAN TAKE TO AVOID A CHANGE OF DEPOT AT ST. PAUL.

NEW YORK OFFICE—No. 415 Broadway.
 BOSTON OFFICE—No. 5 State Street.
 MILWAUKEE CITY TICKET OFFICE—102 Wisconsin Street.
 ST. PAUL TICKET OFFICE—Cor. Third and Jackson Streets.
 MINNEAPOLIS TICKET OFFICES—13 Nicolllet House, and St. Paul & Pacific Depot.
 CHICAGO TICKET OFFICES—62 Clark Street, under Sherman House; 75 Canal Street; Kinzie Street Depot, corner West Kinzie and Canal Streets; Wells Street Depot, corner Wells and Kinzie Streets.

COUNCIL BLUFFS TICKET OFFICES—Corner Broadway and Pearl Street, Union Pacific Depot; and Chicago & North-Western Railway Depot
 OMAHA TICKET OFFICES—Union Pacific Depot, and 1324 Farman Street, corner 14th.
 SAN FRANCISCO OFFICE—2 New Montgomery Street.
 LONDON, ENGLAND, OFFICES—449 Strand, and 3 Adelaide Street.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

0 014 754 953 2